Police shoot Granger man outside Linebacker

By MONICA YANT
Editor-in-Chief

A Granger man was shot early Sunday outside the Linebacker Lounge, 1631 South Bend Ave., after a confrontation with city police officers. In a separate incident, three area residents were assaulted outside Notre Dame Ave. apartments by a group of black females wielding boards with nails.

Paul Thurston, 28, was wounded in the right arm from shots fired by an off-duty South Bend policeman. The bar was closed at the time and no students were involved, according to Lt. Norval Williams of the South Bend Police Department.

Charges have not been filed against Thurston, whose mother owns the Linebacker. The victim had fought with his estranged wife earlier in the bar, according to the police report.

The incident occurred at 3:35 a.m. Sunday in the Linebacker's parking lot when Thurston refused the officers' repeated requests to surrender a long-barrelled shotgun. South Bend Officer Marion Kasniza fired two shots at Thurston's right arm after he raised the weapon.

The victim was taken to St. Joseph Medical Center for treatment. The case will be reviewed by the internal affairs division and the County prosecutor.

Two males and one female received head and eye lacerations from the Notre Dame Ave. assault, according to the police report. They were taken to St. Joseph Medical Center for treatment.

Clinton pledges to create jobs; Republicans say plan unrealistic

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Democrat Bill Clinton opens the air wars of the fall presidential race with a commercial pledging to create 8 million jobs, but Republicans say the spot lacks "truth in advertising."

Clinton's campaign released a 60-second commercial Sunday that is set to begin airing today in several targeted states. It pushes his achievements as Arkansas governor and says the Democratic nominee's economic strategy would create 8 million new jobs in the first four years.

Clinton was scheduled to work on state business today in Little Rock; running mate Al Gore had campaign stops in vote-rich California. President Bush was staying at the White House to keep abreast of Hurricane Andrew recovery efforts and Vice President Dan Quayle was headed South for a visit to a space facility in Alabama.

■ Election update/ page 5

Campaigning Sunday in Monterrey, Calif., Gore said the White House could not be trusted on the environment because Bush has appointed people willing to "ravage and exploit" natural resources.

In another development, the Bush-Quayle campaign late Sunday charged that under Clinton's leadership, Arkansas for more than six and a half years taxed food stamp purchases. "What made governor 'people first' stop taxing food stamps?" asked deputy campaign manager Mary Matalin. "He didn't want to. The federal government forced him to."

Clinton spokeswoman Avis LaVelle did not dispute the assertion, but charged the Bush campaign was trying to "mislead" voters and cast it as though Clinton had started the tax. All food in Arkansas fell under state taxes long before he took office, she said.

The Bush-Quayle re-election team said the Democrats' jobs pledge in the new broadcast advertisement "flies in the face of reality."

"He has absolutely promised $150 billion in new taxes and $220 billion in additional government spending, which will wipe out jobs, rather than create them," said Torie Clarke, a spokeswoman for President Bush's re-election campaign.

The 8 million jobs promised in the spot is a new figure for the Clinton campaign. In the past, Clinton has said his plan to invest $20 billion in roads, bridges and other projects would create 1 million jobs a year.

Cultural Diversity Force prepares final report

By PANCHO LOZANO
News Writer

With only a month to go before it issues its final report, the Task Force on Cultural Diversity is 80 percent of the way finished and is expected to meet its deadline of October 1, according to Roland Smith, co-chairman of the task force.

After issuing a report on the preliminary findings in April, the group is reviewing the recommendations presented in their report. A subgroup was formed this summer to collect and assess the reactions from each department and committee of the University on the recommendations.

The task force was formed by University President Father Edward Malloy to address the issues raised by the Students United For Respect (SUFR) in spring 1991. The main goal of the task force is to create a total campus environment that is more inclusive and hospitable to various cultures, according to Smith.

Rather than just publish the task force's final report, they would like to "take it one step further and see how those recommendations can be translated into action," said Father Richard Warner, co-chairman of the task force.

"What we are doing is asking them to look at the task force's recommendations and tell us how that recommendation can be carried out and what sort of a time line we can come up with," said Warner.

Another responsibility of the subgroup is to determine who will implement the recommendations.

With a careful screening process, Warner believes that they can designate the people who

Student Government joins in hurricane relief effort

By BECKY BARNES
Assistant News Editor

Student Government will join the Cuban American Union of Student Advocates (CAUSA) in its relief efforts for victims of last week's Hurricane Andrew.

Although CAUSA initiated a relief project last week, Student Government will be complimenting their efforts with manpower and organizational methods, said University Service Commissioner Ryan Trzaskowski.

Collection tables will be set up in the dining halls and LaFortune on Monday, said Trzaskowski, and letters will be sent to all rectors requesting that a collection be taken after Sunday's dorm masses.

The immediate goal of the group is to collect $10,000, or one dollar from every student, and they have set a deadline of Sunday, September 6, to end formal fundraising efforts. When the goal is met, the money will be divided between relief efforts in Florida and Louisiana, Trzaskowski said.

Because many Notre Dame and St. Mary's students live in areas hit by the hurricane, Trzaskowski sees the Student Government effort as a "great way to start the school year on a united front."

Student Body President Greg Butrus said that the project is "of interest to the whole student body," and students "would be let down if we didn't do anything."

Although CAUSA is organizing the relief effort, Butrus said that Student Government could be a great help because it "has the infrastructure built in to quickly get it out to the dorms."

Cable should be available in student rooms

This summer the University had cable installed in every dormitory. Unfortunately, the only person in each dorm that has the privilege of watching it in the comfort of his or her own room is the rector.

Mike Scrudato
Sports Editor

All students must congregate in their dorm's common room to see the latest news on CNN or watch some hoops on ESPN.

Though the fact that students do not have to travel off-campus to see these things any more is an improvement, it is not the best improvement.

According to William Kirk, vice president of Residence Life, the University has "no intentions" to make the best improvement, that is, allow each student to have the option to have cable service in his or her room.

This situation is similar to last year's laundry service fiasco, when the University gave us the option of the service, but upset a lot of people in the process by taking away the laundry room in Washington Hall.

While installing cable in only the selected areas will please some students, it will also create some problems.

It is a lot more enjoyable to watch television on the comfort of your own couch with your roommates, than to sit on the concrete-like furniture with half the dorm.

In addition this, conflicts will arise over what to be watching in the common room. Not everyone is going to want to watch college football all the time.

Among the reasons given was that to do so would be too expensive. This is simply ridiculous.

Everyone who subscribes to cable does so because they want to, and they pay a monthly cable bill. Why should Notre Dame students be any different?

Those students who want cable in their rooms could pay for it out of their own pockets, those which do not can make their way to the common rooms.

If this arrangement was made, the only cost to the University would be wiring the rooms themselves.

If every room can be wired with CTI phone service, why can't every room be wired with the potential to receive Heritage Cablevision?

Even if an agreement could be made with Heritage, in which the rooms could be wired with little or no cost to the University, most likely, it still would not wire each dorm room because Kirk was not sure if doing so "would be a good idea."

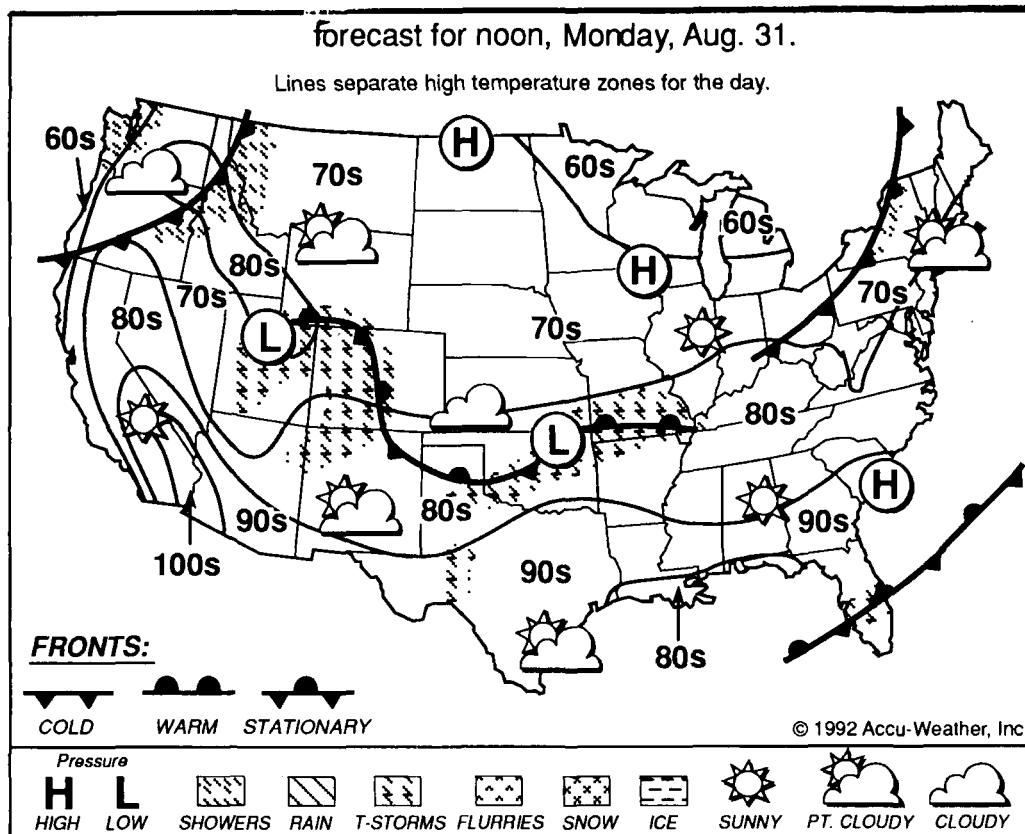

Why not, Mr. Kirk?

Are you and the rest of the administration afraid that if the student body was exposed to an evil like cable in our very own rooms, that we would become a campus full of coach potatoes, who do nothing but watch sit-com reruns all day?

The majority of students had cable in their homes before we came to Notre Dame and did quite well in school. Otherwise we would not be here.

Please give us some credit, and give us our MTV.

Bomb explodes at festival

HANOVER, Germany — A bomb exploded at a crowded fair Saturday, injuring at least eight people, police said. There was no immediate claim of responsibility, officials said. Police said the bomb went off at about 7:20 p.m. when the summer festival in the old town of Hanover was in full swing with up to 200,000 visitors. The explosion sprayed pieces of metal and other debris into the crowd. Hanover police said eight people were injured in the blast, but a Cologne-based radio station, Deutschlandfunk, quoted police sources as saying 16 people were hurt.

Mia Farrow to void adoption

NEW YORK — Mia Farrow plans to ask a court to void former lover Woody Allen's adoption of two of her children on grounds of "fraud and deceit," the Daily News reported Sunday. Farrow, 47, will ask Manhattan's Surrogate Court to revoke the adoptions on the grounds Allen was having an affair with another of Farrow's children at the time, unidentified sources told the News. Allen, 56, admitted two weeks ago he is romantically involved with Soon-Yi Previn, 21, who was adopted by Farrow and her second husband, pianist-conductor Andre Previn.

Fire-ravaged counties designated

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Saturday authorized federal disaster-relief funds for two fire-ravaged counties in California. Bush said federal assistance will be available in Calaveras and Shasta counties, where he said a major disaster exists after fires that began Aug. 16. Federal help can include temporary housing, grants, low-cost loans to cover uninsured property losses and other programs to help individuals and businesses recover. Federal money also is available to local governments on a cost-sharing basis for repair or replacement of public facilities.

The former Mayor, his angry wife

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Let's try to sort this out. Former mayor Bill Boner and fourth wife Traci Peel Boner are suing each other for divorce. The judge in the case used to date Boner. Mrs. Boner claims she photographed her husband's car at dawn outside the condominium of his third wife, to whom he was still married when he announced his engagement to her. But Mrs. Boner admitted in court she recently flew to Chicago and Milwaukee with an old boyfriend. Now the judge says the Boners must share their house until a divorce is granted. Mrs. Boner is a country music singer who learned Thursday that her contract with Liberty Records is being terminated. Her current release is "Almost Single."

INDIANA Homeless center to receive award

SOUTH BEND — The South Bend Center for the Homeless will receive a commendation from the National Coalition for the Homeless at a press conference Tuesday at 10 a.m. Notre Dame President Father Edward Malloy, South Bend Mayor Joseph Kernan and Congressman Tim Roemer will attend the press conference, which will be held at the center. The proclamation recognizes and commends the center for its unique and innovative approach to providing comprehensive services to the area's homeless people. For more information, contact Lou Nanni, executive director of the center, at 282-8700.

Friends, family remember Whitman as quiet and happy

By PAUL PEARSON
Associate News Editor

People who knew Karen Whitman will remember her as a quiet, sensitive and happy student who enjoyed giving to others.

Whitman, a junior from Mishawaka, Ind., who would have transferred from Notre Dame to Saint Mary's this year, died of a heart attack July 23 during an aerobics class.

Whitman's father, Thomas Whitman, a professor in the ND psychology department, described her as having "a serious mind with a good sense of humor."

Whitman's main strength,

Professor Whitman said, was her sensitivity toward other people's needs. "She was a very generous and giving person."

This sensitivity fueled Whitman's desire to pursue a career in sociology, as well as her volunteer work with student tutoring programs and with the Logan Center, Professor Whitman said. "She was a sensitive individual who tried to reach out to other people."

Lyons Hall Rector Sister Kathleen Beatty described Whitman a "quiet and reserved" person with "an excellent sense of humor."

Although Whitman was going to transfer to Saint Mary's to pursue a degree in sociology, she enjoyed the time she spent at ND and at Lyons Hall, Beatty said. "She had a number of close friends in the sophomore class."

Nicole Leising, a junior from Lyons Hall, said that Whitman was quiet and reserved, but she enjoyed talking to other people. "Because she was so quiet, she appreciated when people talked to her."

Natalie Jankowski, a junior from Lyons Hall, will remember Whitman as a friendly and generous person. "It took a while to get to know her, but once you got to know her, she was a very generous person."

Lyons Hall is planning to hold a memorial Mass for all the people who were not able to attend Whitman's funeral this summer. The hall also plans to donate proceeds from its Volleyball Tournament to the American Heart Foundation in Whitman's memory.

Smokers need counseling to quit

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Drug advancements for smokers trying to quit are proving more effective than ever, but tobacco specialists warned Saturday that doctors must guide their patients or cessation will rarely succeed.

"Even a one-pack-a-day smoker is engaging in this behavior 7,000 times a year. They need to learn to become a non-smoker," said Jean Kristeller, a psychology professor at Indiana State University.

"Just removing the nicotine component appears to not be effective in getting them to resist all of the situations effectively that they used to smoke in," Kristeller said.

About two dozen people attended "Treatment Strategies for Nicotine Addiction," a weekend conference aimed at helping physicians better understand the addictive nature of nicotine to the patients they treat.

More than 47 million adults smoke in the United States, while another 3.5 million adolescents light up. But surveys show that nine out of 10 want to quit.

While smokers must change their attitudes toward smoking, the nicotine contained in cigarettes is the driving force behind most people's inability to kick the habit, said Elbert Glover, director of the Tobacco Research Center at West Virginia University's Mary Babb Randolph Cancer Center.

Part of the problem in the past had been an unwillingness to look at the addictive nature of nicotine and try to place all the blame on behavior, Glover said.

Of the 17 million people who try to quit every year, just slightly more than 1 million are successful, he said.

"It begins to attest to the addictiveness of nicotine," Glover said. The latest combatant in the war on smoking is the transdermal patch, a small device placed on the skin that allows nicotine to be absorbed into the bloodstream.

"The advantage of the patch is its ease of use and its demonstrated effectiveness and safety," said Jane Gorsline, a research scientist from Palo Alto, Calif., who helped develop the patch that went on the market last December.

The $4-a-day patch, which is worn on the upper body, gives smokers about half the amount of nicotine they would typically get from 30-plus cigarettes a day but usually enough to handle any withdrawal symptoms from smoking.

After four to six weeks, the amount of nicotine is reduced until the body no longer requires it, provided the patient receives behavioral counseling.

"It's an important component of it and the product is labeled to be used with behavioral support," Gorsline said. "The nicotine patch is an aid to alleviation of withdrawal symptoms for people attempting to stop smoking."

Glover said nicotine gum also proved to be effective in clinical studies but has shown only limited results because more than 50 percent of the people using it do so without doctor consultation.

"I'm afraid the same problem is going to happen with the patch," he said. "The behavioral counseling is still very important and people are ignoring that part of it unfortunately."

Kristeller, who counsels smokers, agreed.

"The gum or the patch takes the edge off the psychological addiction part while you learn to deal with the behavioral addiction," she said.

Kristeller urged physicians at the conference to discuss smoking with their patients, noting that 70 percent of all smokers have contact with doctors each year.

Fugitive keeps authorities at bay

NAPLES, Idaho (AP) — A fugitive white supremacist who has held authorities at bay for eight days is wounded, but not yet ready to leave his log cabin, a former Green Beret officer who spoke with him said Saturday.

Former U.S. Army Special Forces Lt. Col. James "Bo" Gritz said Randy Weaver told him he was wounded in an exchange of gunfire with federal agents Aug. 22 that also killed his wife and wounded a family friend.

Weaver is holed up in the cabin with his three daughters and the friend.

Weaver's teen-age son and a federal agent were killed in a shootout Aug. 21 that led to the siege of Weaver's house by more than 100 federal, state and local police and National Guardsmen.

Gritz, who also is a third-party presidential candidate, said Weaver wants "a day or so" before deciding whether to leave the cabin.

A party of three — Gritz, a local preacher and a Weaver family friend — were able to get near enough to shout messages to the cabin's occupants.

Gritz said Weaver had shouted to him through the walls that he wanted to pray and talk with his family before deciding whether to surrender. Gritz said he thought Weaver "may need a day or so" before making his decision.

"Randy wants to try to talk the situation out," Gritz said. "I think they're still a little bit concerned about their personal safety."

The police and Guardsmen have surrounded the remote cabin on Ruby Ridge, about 10 miles south of Bonners Ferry and 110 miles northeast of Spokane, Wash. They said they hoped to convince Weaver to abandon any thoughts of dying in a final confrontation.

In the cabin with Weaver are his three daughters, ages 16, 10 and 10 months, and Kevin Harris, 24, a friend who lived with the family.

Harris was wounded and Weaver's wife, Vicki, 43, was killed in the Aug. 22 gunfight.

Authorities learned of Vicki Weaver's death after allowing Gritz to speak with Weaver through a bullhorn Friday night.

On Saturday's visit, Gritz said Weaver told him he was wounded in the arm by a bullet and Harris was hit by fragments of either bone or the bullet that struck Weaver's wife in the head. They were shot as Mrs. Weaver closed the cabin door after Weaver and Harris moved the body of Weaver's son to a shed.

Gritz took a bullhorn and a box of food for Weaver's daughters when he went to the cabin area with Chuck Sandelin, described as a local pastor, and Weaver family friend Jackie Brown.

Harris has been charged with first-degree murder in the slaying of Deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan, 42, of Quincy, Mass., during the initial Aug. 21 exchange of gunfire that also killed Weaver's 14-year-old son, Samuel.

Weaver was charged with assault on a federal officer during that shootout.

Marshals had been keeping periodic watch on Weaver since he failed to appear for trial in February 1991 on federal charges of making and selling illegal weapons.

Weaver is a devotee of the Christian Identity Movement that combines Old Testament beliefs with right-wing and white-supremacist politics.

He also is a former Special Forces engineer who served at Fort Bragg, N.C., during the Vietnam War. Gritz has said they shared common experiences and argued he could persuade Weaver to surrender peacefully.

Gritz, the Populist Party's 1992 presidential candidate, commanded unsuccessful commando raids into Laos in 1982 in search of missing U.S. prisoners of war.

He said later he was acting with the U.S. government's approval, but the government denied that.

Chain founder's son charged for murders

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The son of a man who founded a chain of grocery stores surrendered to police Saturday on charges he killed his estranged wife and her boyfriend, a former Iowa legislator.

Russell Lund, whose father founded the Lund grocery chain that serves Minneapolis-St. Paul, is charged with two counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of Barbara Lund and E. Kevin Kelly.

Lund, 59, was jailed pending a bail hearing Monday, said prosecutor Dan Mabley.

The bodies were found in Lund's home in Minnetonka, after his lawyers directed officers to go there Aug. 6.

Mrs. Lund, 55, was shot in the head, chest and shoulder, according to a criminal complaint filed Friday night. Kelly, 49, was shot twice in the head and once each in a shoulder and finger.

The victims' relatives said Kelly, a state representative in 1971-72 and senator from 1973 to 1978, was Mrs. Lund's boyfriend.

A gun police identified as Lund's was given to authorities by a private investigator working for Lund's attorneys. Tests showed blood on the gun was consistent with Kelly's blood type, the complaint said.

Baboon liver recipient develops infection

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 35-year-old man who received a baboon liver transplant has developed an infection, and doctors downgraded his condition to serious, a University of Pittsburgh Medical Center spokeswoman said Saturday.

The man, whose name has been withheld at his request, developed sepsis following an X-ray Friday of his bile duct, said spokeswoman Jane Duffield. He had been in fair condition.

"There continues to be no sign of rejection and doctors are treating the sepsis with antibiotics," Ms. Duffield said.

The X-ray revealed normal results, but sepsis — the presence of pus-forming organisms or toxins in the blood or tissue — resulted from the procedure, she said.

The man received the liver two months ago in a first-of-its-kind operation. He had hepatitis B, which was destroying his liver and prevented the use of a human liver as a transplant organ.

The patient battled a fever last week, prompting doctors to move him into an intensive-care unit.

Clinton rallies Arkansas troops

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Bill Clinton rallied homestate Democratic troops Saturday and appealed for their help in countering Republican criticisms against their small state of Arkansas.

"We've had a plan, not just a bunch of hot air," the Democratic nominee told a convention of his state Democratic Party, citing steps to improve Arkansas' economy, schools and health care system and efforts to move people from welfare to work.

Later, Clinton said the federal response to hurricane damage in Florida and Louisiana should be "looked into" to see how it could be improved, but he declined to criticize President Bush.

"I don't want to get into assessing blame here, because I don't know what the facts were," Clinton said, talking by satellite to a group of Asian-American journalists in Washington D.C.

He said the inquiry should be done "in a non-political way."

Clinton said "managing disasters" was a big part of a president's job and noted he'd had to respond to various natural disasters in Arkansas.

He told state Democrats they'd spent "a dozen years in our state, with our eyes on the future," adding that "bit by bit," the state had moved forward.

"Pretty soon, we looked back and we'd come a long way," Clinton told the roaring, flag-waving group of partisans. "We've got a lot of problems left to go, but we are doing our job."

"We didn't make any miracles," the Arkansas governor said. "But this is about doing better."

Bill Clinton

The Arkansas governor, who has been ridiculed by Republicans as the "failed governor of a small state," asked them to campaign for him in the next 66 days.

Two polls released Saturday showed the gap between Bush and Clinton narrowing in the past week. The margin was 6 percentage points in a Time Magazine-CNN poll that found 46 percent of likely voters saying they would vote for Clinton if the election were held today and 40 percent favoring Bush. In a Gallup-Newsweek survey, Clinton was favored by 49 percent of registered voters and Bush by 39 percent. Both surveys had 3-point margins of error.

Bush was absent from the campaign trail Saturday. He was spending the weekend at Camp David, Md., and returned to the White House for a briefing on relief efforts.

His campaign continued its sparring with Clinton over taxes.

Vice President Dan Quayle, visiting the Little League World Series in Williamsport, Pa., quipped that Clinton probably prefers football over Little League, saying "Every time the quarterback says 'hike,' he thinks about taxes."

Clinton communications director George Stephanopoulos said Bush's proposed across-the-board tax cut was a "fool's promise" that couldn't be kept.

Clinton, back home after two-day bus trip through Texas, stressed economics.

He cited several recent government reports offering gloomy news on the economy in claiming that President Bush takes credit for the end of the Cold War but doesn't accept blame for the sluggish economy.

"They never talk about that, but on my bus trip I could hardly avoid that," Clinton said.

He got some help from Sen. David Pryor, who told his fellow Arkansans they should be offended by the Republican attack on Clinton.

"They're not talking about just Bill Clinton, they're talking about you," Pryor said.

Later, Clinton and running mate Al Gore were headed to a star-studded fund-raiser at a Little Rock hotel expected to raise $1.2 million for the Democratic Party. Entertainers Chevy Chase, Herbie Hancock and Gladys Knight were in town for the gala.

Quayle throws hardball at Clinton's tax record

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle served up some baseball lingo Saturday as he used a visit to the Little League World Series to push family values and criticize Democrat Bill Clinton's tax record.

Quayle quipped that Clinton probably prefers football over Little League because he likes to hear the quarterback say "hike."

"Every time the quarterback says hike, he thinks about taxes," Quayle told about 1,500 supporters at Williamsport-Lycoming County Airport.

Later, Quayle threw what appeared to be a strike for the ceremonial opening pitch of the championship game. He joked that many people probably would have preferred seeing actor Tom Selleck, who also was on hand.

Before the game, Quayle toured the 10-year-old Little League museum and visited the Hall of Excellence, where he was inducted last year.

Little League spokesman Dennis Sullivan said the hall honors former Little Leaguers who have reached the top of their profession "and still conduct their lives in such a way as to provide a positive role model to kids."

Quayle reminisced about his days in Little League, saying he was the youngest and shortest player "and walked 80 percent of the time."

"Little League does teach you values," Quayle said. "Values like loyalty, teamwork, the importance of courage and hard work. And speaking of values, I am not going to back down from talking about the importance of traditional values."

Quayle said President Bush had helped win the Cold War and now voters should elect more Republicans to Congress so "we can win the domestic war and bring more jobs and opportunities to the American people."

Quayle's wife, Marilyn, talked about health care issues and said she was angry Clinton told the Democratic National Convention in New York he was going to put women's health on "the front burner."

Gore defends policies affecting auto industry

DETROIT (AP) — Al Gore said Saturday that the White House has "brought pink slips not paychecks" to thousands of U.S. autoworkers and dismissed GOP claims that the Democratic ticket's policies would hurt the U.S. car industry.

The Tennessee senator, appearing in auto-dependent Michigan on the heels of visits by President Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle, also fended off Republican attacks on his environmental record.

His appearance before a cheering crowd at the state Democratic convention was meant to energize the Democratic base in a Rust Belt state that will be key to wresting control of the White House from the Republicans.

Gore, limping after straining a calf muscle during a morning jog, said he and Clinton were "committed to America's autoworkers and to an industry that ... provides the world with first-class cars."

Gore offered no apologies for his environmental stands, which Vice President Dan Quayle on Friday called "pretty bizarre" while campaigning in Michigan. Quayle claimed the Democrats could cost hundreds of thousands of autoworkers their jobs by pushing for higher auto fuel efficiency standards.

Gore responded that Bush and Quayle "want you to believe that they are good for the automobile industry" but "the only thing they want to talk about" is the fuel-efficiency issue.

He said the Republicans are "attempting to create a diversion to try to get people not to think about what has really happened" with the economy.

"I want to tell you I do favor better fuel efficiency and, yes, I favor 40 miles per gallon and, yes, I believe there is a serious worldwide environmental crisis," Gore said. "I make no apologies for my beliefs."

He said the administration had no right to point fingers on the issue of jobs in the auto industry.

"How dare Bush and Quayle come into Michigan and talk about jobs in the automobile industry when they have presided over the worst destruction of jobs in the auto industry in the entire history of this nation," Gore said.

Last Russians leave war-battered Afghanistan

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The last Russian diplomats pulled out of the war-battered Afghan capital Saturday, closing the books on a decade of bloody involvement by a once-powerful neighbor.

About 50 Russian diplomatic staff and their families slipped out aboard a Soviet-made Antonov transport plane headed toward the northern Afghan city of Mazar-e-Sharif and then on to Moscow.

The departure was kept secret following a rocket attack on Kabul airport on Friday that destroyed one of three Ilyushin-76 military transport planes sent to evacuate the 170 embassy employees and their families.

Many on Saturday's flight said they had wanted to stay, but Moscow ordered them to leave, saying Kabul had become too dangerous.

The Russian mission had become a target of rebels determined to avenge the 1979 invasion and nine-year occupation of Afghanistan by the former Soviet Union.

The Russians' forbidding fortress-like compound is riddled with bullets and shrapnel. The main building has been sealed and the compound emptied but for a few pro-government security guards.

Hijacked Ethiopian plane lands

ROME (AP) — A hijacked Ethiopian jetliner landed in Rome early Sunday after a day-long odyssey around the Middle East and East Africa that included failed negotiations and the reported release of all 79 passengers.

Fourteen people were aboard the Ethiopian Airlines Boeing 727: five hijackers and nine crew members, said police spokesman Nicola Cavaliere.

Cavaliere said there was no information on whether the hijackers were armed, but the Italian news agency ANSA reported the hijackers had automatic rifles and pistols.

The hijackers' plans or demands were not immediately known. An Ethiopian Airlines official began talks with the hijackers shortly after they touched down in Ciampino, about 10 miles south of Rome, at about 2:30 a.m. (8:30 p.m. EDT Saturday). The plane flew from Cairo, Egypt, where it refueled.

Ridwan Abdalla, the Ethiopian charge d'affaires in Cairo, said he believed the hijackers were Ethiopians.

The plane's engines were still running two hours after it landed. The aircraft was illuminated by spotlights.

Ciampino has both military and civilian facilities and handles mainly charter flights. Reporters were kept outside the airport.

Civil aviation sources in Yemen, where the plane made a stop earlier Saturday, said the hijackers claimed to hold a prominent Briton. But Italian police said only crew and hijackers were aboard the plane in Rome.

In Djibouti, a tiny African nation that neighbors Ethiopia, the plane's 79 passengers were released Saturday, Yemeni sources said. There were no immediate details on the passengers' conditions.

The plane was hijacked late Friday after taking off from Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, on a domestic flight.

The crew was ordered to fly to San'a in Yemen, according to Yemen's SABA news agency.

When San'a officials refused to let the jet land, it flew to Djibouti.

In Djibouti, the Yemeni charge d'affaires talked to the hijackers, and they agreed to let the passengers go, said Yemeni sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The plane then flew to the Yemeni city of Aden early Saturday.

In Aden, Yemeni sources said, the hijackers insisted on talking to American and British diplomats and U.N. envoys. The ambassadors, based in San'a, refused to speak to them.

Spectacle of 'The Shirt' symbolizes spirit, support

By PANCHO LOZANO
Business Writer

On Saturday Sept. 12, Notre Dame fans across the country will witness the spectacle which has characterized Notre Dame's home opener the past few years. "The Shirt" has become familiar with the student body, alumni, and subway alumni across the country as a symbol of spirit and support of the football team.

With a quarter of the stadium wearing kelly green in 1990 and royal blue in 1991, organizers of this year's "Shirt" hope to make it the largest spectacle on national television. "This year we wanted to design a shirt that was Bookstore quality, yet still spirit oriented," said Steve Hank, chairman and organizer of "The Shirt" committee for the Student Union Board (SUB).

Originally intended as a symbol of spirit by the student body, this year's project has expanded to include alumni and fans also.

"We wanted to show the whole nation that Notre Dame is not just a school made up of students, but an entire community united behind one cause. We want to include the alumni in order to bring the alumni and students closer as a group," said Hank.

"The Shirt" was originally intended as a fundraiser for SUB with proceeds to be split between the Hall Presidents Council (HPC) and SUB. SUB will be using the proceeds for various projects in programming and capital while HPC will allocate the funds evenly to each residence hall.

The idea of "The Shirt" was originated two years ago by Brennan Harbath, former commissioner of AnTostal, as a symbol of spirit for the football team. According to Matt Bomberger, Director of Programming for SUB, the project has almost doubled in size compared to last year due to an increased effort in marketing.

"The difference between now and then is night and day. We now have shirts in places like the Bookstore, the Varsity Shop, through mailorder, and Blue and Gold Illustrated," said Bomberger.

According to Hank, this year they have already sold an estimated 9,000 shirts out of their total 24,000, which is twice as many as last year.

Another advantage of the increased marketing effort is the availability of "The Shirt." On-campus students can obtain their shirts through their hall representatives at the price of $10. Off-campus students can obtain "The Shirt" at the LaFortune information desk for the same price as long as they present their student identification.

For non-students, "The Shirt" will be available at the Notre Dame Bookstore and the Alumni Association office.

As of Sept. 1, "The Shirt" will go on sale at the Varsity Shop and on the day of the game at the mobile concession stands both in and outside the stadium.

"The Shirt" will also be on sale at the pep rally in the JACC on Sept. 11 the night prior to the game.

"We'd like to grow and expand each year as much as possible in order to get as many people as possible supporting this project," said Bomberger.

"As I said before, we really want this to be the greatest spectacle for everyone to see... all the students with one color behind the team. Once we get the alumni and fans involved, we'd like to make it a stadium wide spectacle."

According to Hank, last year and the year prior went as expected, but this year they hope to do much better. "The more marketing we do, the greater of a chance people have to buy 'The Shirt'," said Hank.

Bomberger believed that the main focus of the project was not for profit, but rather to show the unity of the Notre Dame family. "This is not an issue of money," said Bomberger. "The whole purpose of making it a spectacle on national television is to show how strong the Notre Dame spirit really is."

Bush orders additional troops, money to aid hurricane damage

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush ordered an additional 5,000 military troops to hurricane-battered Florida on Saturday and released $300 million to spend the delivery of emergency services. He said "significant progress" is being made to help the needy.

The Pentagon said planned increases eventually would bring the total of federal military personnel from all services in Florida to 14,500.

Bush was briefed on relief efforts for Hurricane Andrew and announced he was making $300 million available to speed delivery of services by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Small Business Association. He also said he was allocating $127.2 million for emergency food stamps for residents of Dade County.

Further, Bush said he will ask Congress for a supplemental appropriations request for "whatever amount necessary to respond to the human needs on the ground" in Florida, as well as Louisiana and Guam.

Praising the federal response, Bush said, "I am satisfied that everyone is dedicated to pulling out all the stops" to help the hurricane victims. "We intend to respond to this crisis on a human level, block by block, right out there where these people live."

Sixty-six days before the election, Bush angrily rejected any suggestion that his actions were politically motivated.

"This may be hard for you to believe, I am thinking about what's good for the people there. I don't even think about the politics of it," he told reporters during a photo opportunity in the Cabinet Room, where he was surrounded by White House aides and leaders of the federal disaster team.

"I see a bunch of people running around interviewing people who have been thrown out of their homes by a natural disaster saying, 'How does the politics work?' Good heavens, isn't there any honor here? Can't we help people without having somebody try to put a political interpretation on it? I mean, Heaven's sakes."

The president returned to the White House from Camp David for an afternoon update on the storm's damage.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The 'code of life' helps prove pre-born identity

Dear Editor:

Notre Dame Philosophy Professor Edward Manier (The Observer, Aug. 25, 1992) claims that the DNA sequence existing in all human embryos neither constitutes the presence of "a specific and unique being," nor "defines human individuality."

This argument seems to illustrate a general ignorance of the fact which states that a human being, from the point of conception, will never develop into anything other than one individual human child.

This fact exists because DNA, called the 'code of life' by even the most liberal Darwinists, predetermines the baby's eye, hair and skin color, blood type, height, build, intelligence, etc. If these factors do not constitute "specific and unique" characteristics of human individuality, what does?

Genetic determinism coexists very well with the belief in the presence of human life in the womb, and is subsequently reflected in Catholic tradition and Scripture.

Please note that when Mary the mother of God visited Elizabeth, "the babe leapt in her womb." And Elizabeth cried out, "Blessed is the fruit of thy womb, Jesus!" (St. Luke 1:39-45).

At the moment of that visit, commemorated in the second joyful mystery of the holy rosary, the center of the universe focused in Mary's womb.

Because of the devotion of Mary, a single, young, unwed mother, our savior was born into this world.

Today however, over one third of our generation has not been so fortunate. 4,500 children are tortured and sacrificed to the god of pleasure each day.

17,500,000 babies have been exterminated over the eighteen years of my lifetime, and tremendous human potential has been lost.

Of those seventeen and a half million casualties, how many children would have grown to attend the University of Notre Dame, or to become professors in the Philosophy department.

Is Notre Dame losing her roots?

Charles E. Rice
Right or Wrong

allegations months after the matter had been settled between him and the University.

It would compound the tragedy of the Burtchaell matter if it were allowed to discredit the important contribution of his First Things article.

Using Vanderbilt as the model, the Burtchaell article examines the secularization of the Protestant universities in the period, 1870-1910. Fr. Burtchaell then examines, without naming any institutions, the comparable secularization of Catholic universities.

He appears to regard the assertion of institutional autonomy through severance of the legal connection to the Church as a decisive act, leading almost inexorably to a loss of religious identity in the Catholic as well as the Protestant universities.

In 1967, Notre Dame and other Catholic universities changed to secular status. They also declared that year, at Land O'Lakes, Wisconsin, that to "perform its teaching and research functions effectively, the Catholic university must have a true autonomy and academic freedom in the face of authority of whatever kind, lay or clerical, external to the academic community itself."

One consequence of [the Catholic university's essential relationship to the church is that the institutional fidelity of the university to the Christian message includes a recognition of and adherence to the teaching authority of the church in matters of faith and morals."

The official rhetoric claims that Notre Dame is laycontrolled. In his February, 1992, Reflections on University Governance, Fr. Edward Malloy, states that, "In 1967, governance... was transferred from the Congregation of Holy Cross... to a predominantly lay Board of Trustees."

However, the trustees are elected by the Fellows who, among their other powers, also adopt and amend the bylaws and control the transfer of University property. Six of the twelve Fellows are—and must be—Holy Cross priests.

The Holy Cross priests, therefore, have decisive leverage, but the Congregation of Holy Cross has no formal accountability. It is fair to ask whether a university characterized by such ambivalence and pretense can resist the secularizing tendency Fr. Burtchaell describes.

The decision of the Congregation to "give away" Notre Dame was well intended. But, 25 years later, Fr. Burtchaell's analysis fairly raises the question of whether it ought to be reversed, so that the Congregation of Holy Cross will be enabled and required to act with full and formal accountability for the maintenance of the Catholic character of Notre Dame.

Professor Rice is a professor in the Law School. His column appears every other Monday.

A dream come true

*Alex Montoya
overcomes challenges to become a Notre Dame
freshman*

The Observer/John Bingham

Notre Dame freshman Alex Montoya recently fought the Immigration and Naturalization Service to gain United States' residency, enabling him to attend the University this year.

By CHRIS HANIFIN
Accent Writer

Notre Dame freshman Alex Montoya spent the summer fearing deportation by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to his native country Columbia, but now he is a United States' citizen.

Challenged by being born without arms and a right leg, Montoya spent his youth in Columbia, where doctors told his parents he had little chance for survival.

"The doctors had never really seen someone so disabled," said Montoya. "Columbian society was unopen to the disabled, and both the medical and educational facilities were inadequate," he added.

After moving to California, Montoya's aunt and Shriners Hospital in Los Angeles helped Alex to recognize his abilities and to use them to the fullest, he said.

"My Aunt has taught me the lessons of life. She's really been a mother to me. She taught me to accept the difficulties that I face, but to always be determined," said Montoya.

Living in San Diego, Montoya and his aunt pursued legal citizenship, but they were told that the disabled were never granted legal resident status. "We were told the government views the disabled as a liability. We decided I would stay here surreptitiously," Montoya said.

His plans changed when the time came to apply to college, where legal United States' residency is usually required, Montoya said.

With a San Diego journalist championing his cause, Montoya turned himself in to the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and anxiously awaited his hearing. The INS was more of a help than a burden to him in his quest for citizenship by providing a lawyer and suspending his deportation, according to Montoya.

"It was all a big weight over my head, but I prayed and trusted the Lord. My lawyer told me I had the strongest case he had ever seen," Montoya said.

Things went his way, and Montoya expresses a genuine love for both his new country and his new school.

"I hate to hear people put down the U.S. Maybe we are prejudiced or have poor leadership, but we are all still blessed to be in the United States, in general, and at Notre Dame in particular, Montoya said.

According to Montoya, attending Notre Dame had been his dream for years.

"I wanted to attend a school with a family atmosphere—I didn't just want to be a number somewhere. I was also impressed with the CSC (Center for Social Concerns). I felt that here helping was the rule rather than the exception," he said.

'I know people are often not comfortable around me, but I don't want them to look upon me sympathetically. I don't mind talking about things. Please ask questions.'

Montoya feels he has adapted well to college life. Arriving on campus in early July, he took part in the Aetna Program which attempts to orient first-year minority students to the College of Arts and Letters or the College of Business Administration.

"ND has been fantastic with both finances and services. I appreciate their help beyond words," Montoya said.

The University has sought to provide help where it could through measures such as special doorknobs and widened stairs. Montoya has adjusted to dorm life as well. "The guys in St. Ed's have been fantastic, and my dream of a big family atmosphere has come true."

Academics at Notre Dame have impressed Montoya. "Minds are challenged in classes. I have always wanted to be a scholar, learning and not just memorizing facts," he said.

Montoya is currently interested in a career in journalism.

"Journalism can make a difference," he said, recalling the journalist who helped make his dream of citizenship possible by publicizing his case.

In addition, Montoya is an assistant coach with the St. Ed's football team and plans to work with the CSC.

Montoya is extremely comfortable with his disability, and noted that it is more fitting to call him "handicapable" than handicapped.

"I know people are often not comfortable around me, but I don't want them to look upon me sympathetically. I don't mind talking about things. Please ask questions—it is the only way to break through barriers," Montoya said.

Holy Cross Hall gains a new family

By ELIZABETH MARTIN
Accent Writer

There are men living on Saint Mary's campus.

As the new Residence Hall Director in Holy Cross Hall and advisor for the residence hall association, Patty Warfield has brought her husband, Andy, and her three-year-old son, A.J., to live with her among students in the dorm.

Warfield, a Wisconsin native, has a master's degree in science and education with an emphasis in counseling from the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh. Her primary area of interest lies in student development.

For the past four years, Warfield worked as an elementary and high school counselor primarily dealing with substance abuse and eating disorders.

"I thought the move to Saint Mary's would allow me to delve more deeply into the issues of women," Warfield said.

But in addition to her duties in Residence Life,

Warfield is also a wife and mother. Warfield's family lives in an apartment in the basement of Holy Cross Hall and dorm life is quite a change for Warfield's husband, who has never lived on a college campus. Her son, A.J., will be three-years-old in October and Warfield says "he loves being a part of all the action in the hall."

Though their living situation may seem unusual to students at Saint Mary's, Warfield maintains that it is a part of many college campuses today.

Warfield says she has realized that Saint Mary's is not a typical college. Yet, just like in other colleges "the women here at Saint Mary's have high goals and expectations and are willing to go for what they want to achieve."

Warfield's goals include remodeling the Holy Cross parlors and she hopes to "keep Holy Cross running as an active hall and a continued place where women want to live." She would like to see Holy Cross become the home of more service oriented activities this year, as well as a place that promotes "positive social activities for men and women."

Warfield says the continued success of Saint Mary's remains at the top of her list of goals and ideas.

Other Saint Mary's residence life changes include Colleen McKenna as the new Residence Director of McCandless Hall and AnnMarie Jordan, formerly Residence Director of McCandless Hall, will now be the Residence Director in LeMans Hall.

Ejections mar Cub's victory

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Cubs manager Jim Lefebvre and right-hander Frank Castillo had different explanations for a "payback" pitch that led to ejections for both.

"When somebody drills one of our players, you've got to pay them back. It's just baseball," Lefebvre said after the Cubs' 7-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants on Saturday. "I didn't order him to do it. He knew what to do. It's a payback."

After Giants reliever Jeff Brantley hit Steve Buechele with a pitch in the sixth inning, Castillo hit Robby Thompson in the seventh, bringing an automatic ejection for both pitcher and manager.

Castillo, who won his second consecutive start after failing to record a victory in nine starts from June 28 until Aug. 24, denied purposely hitting Thompson.

"I just wanted to throw strikes and be aggressive," Castillo said. "I had gotten him out on an inside pitch the last time he was up."

Both benches cleared when Buechele was hit following back-to-back homers by Mark Grace and Andre Dawson, but umpires kept the two sides apart. Chicago's Rey Sanchez and Ryne Sandberg also hit back-to-back homers in the eighth.

Meanwhile, Giants general manager Al Rosen was holding a closed door meeting in the clubhouse after his team's fifth consecutive loss and ninth in 12 games.

"I talked about playing with pride and ego," Rosen said. "I just feel Giants fans are entitled to more. I don't think I've ever vented my anger so much."

Dawson had four hits and three RBIs to lead Chicago's 13-hit attack.

"The offense is starting to gel, coming up with some big hits," Lefebvre said.

Castillo (8-10) gave up four hits, including homers to Kirt Manwaring and Mark Leonard, walked two and struck out two in six-plus innings. On Monday, he beat San Diego 6-3 after going nearly two months without a victory.

Bob Scanlan got the last four outs for his 12th save in 14 opportunities.

Giants starter Dave Burba (2-7), recalled Wednesday from Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League, lasted only 2 2-3 innings, giving up three runs, six hits and a walk.

Chicago, which has won 10 of its last 14 games, took a 1-0 lead in the first on singles by Sandberg, Dawson and Buechele.

After Sanchez and Sandberg singled in the third, Dawson delivered a two-run double. Sanchez, slow to react to the hit, scored only a few steps ahead of Sandberg.

Manwaring homered to center leading off the fifth for his second of the season. Leonard hit his fourth homer, also to center, in the sixth to cut San Francisco's deficit to 3-2.

Grace hit his eighth homer to right in the sixth and Dawson followed with his 18th to left.

"We took advantage of the winds," Grace said. "The winds were blowing out for a change this year."

Sanchez and Sandberg completed the scoring with back-to-back homers off Francisco Oliveras in the eighth. It was Sanchez's first homer in the majors and Sandberg's 16th of the season.

"Those would have been outs yesterday with the winds blowing in," San Francisco manager Roger Craig said.

Brewers remain 4 1/2 back despite weekend success against Blue Jays

TORONTO (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers got the all-time hit record in the American League and the Toronto Blue Jays got back one of the league's top pitchers.

However, neither team managed to get any closer to their goal than when the four-game series began Thursday.

Following Toronto's 5-3 victory on Sunday, the Blue Jays remained 4 1/2 games in front of Milwaukee in the American League East. The Baltimore Orioles are 1 1/2 games behind Toronto.

Now, with five weeks remaining in the season, Milwaukee won't get another chance to pick up ground on Toronto face-to-face. The Brewers took the season series with the Blue Jays 7-5.

"They played us tough and dumped on us the last two games, but we played well today and showed that we have some character," said Toronto reliever Tom Henke, who got the final three outs Sunday for his 24th save.

"With the split they're going back out the same way they came in here — 4 1/2 games behind us."

It might not have looked that way at several points during the series.

After Toronto took a 5-4 victory on Thursday, the Brewers got a league-record 31 hits for a 22-2 win on Friday. Then on Saturday, Milwaukee pounded Toronto's latest acquisition, pitcher David Cone, for seven runs and seven hits in a 7-2 victory.

However, Toronto came back with a perfect remedy for their ailing pitching staff when Juan Guzman came off the disabled list with four strong innings in his first start since Aug. 3.

"It was great to see Juan come back from the disabled list and pitch like the Juan of old," said Joe Carter, whose two-run homer in the third Sunday gave Toronto a 4-1 lead.

"Juan didn't seem to miss a beat, he was as dominating as he was before he got hurt."

Smooth putting stroke leads Stadler past Pavin, Cook

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — After beating Corey Pavin by one shot and darkness by a smaller margin, Craig Stadler offered a novel idea for pro golf's decision-makers:

Schedule starting times early enough to get the various tournaments finished in daylight.

"It just makes sense to me," Stadler said Sunday after his victory in weather-disrupted World Series of Golf.

Then he shrugged. "But then, what do I know? I'm just a player," he said.

In darkness, Stadler dropped a 12-foot, par-saving putt on the final hole to complete a hard-won round of 70 and a 273 total, one ahead of Pavin who closed with a 65.

"I put as much pressure on him as I could, but he made a great putt on the last hole," Pavin said.

It was even better considering that it rolled into the cup at 8 p.m. (EDT).

"It was so dark I wasn't sure I was reading it right," Stadler said. Had he missed it, a tie with Pavin would have resulted, and a sudden death playoff would have followed.

It would have followed on Monday, because PGA Tour officials already had decided it was too dark to continue.

The round was delayed over two hours because of a storm which set Stadler's tee time back to 4:21 p.m.

"I sat around the locker room reading the paper for four hours. I was down to the classifieds," Stadler said before appealing for an adjustment in the starting times.

Officials usually set times to provide a finish that coincides with the national network telecast of the tournament, usually ending late in the day.

But no leeway is made for weather which, PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman noted, has caused delays "in something like 70 or 80 percent of our tournaments this year."

"With a small field like this (45 title-winners from around the world), they could have started them early in the day, taped it, edited it, had a good package," Stadler said.

"Then, if you get weather — and they had a forecast that said they were going to get weather — you've still got some time to play with."

"In this case, they could have finished on time."

As it was, the cameras ended their coverage with the leaders still on the front nine and the tournament very much unsettled.

Stadler took care of that with a magnificent approach shot on the par-5 16th, using a 3-iron to go under and around trees and back into the fairway.

From there, he hit a sand wedge to tap-in distance for the go-ahead birdie; the third time in the day he'd broken a tie.

Stadler had a chance to go two up on the 17th, but missed a 4-footer, then went to the 18th needing a par in the dark for victory.

He got in trouble off the tee again, found a bunker with his approach and came out to 12 feet, downhill and a right-to-left breaker.

Stadler stroked the putt, then his bulky shoulders slumped.

"I thought I'd missed it," he said.

But the ball caught the lip on the low side, hung for a moment, then dropped, making Stadler the first two-time winner of this title since the tournament went to a 72-hole format 17 years ago.

Fred Couples, who won the Masters and two other titles early this season, got away to a birdie-eagle start and once was tied for the lead.

But he couldn't keep pace with Stadler down the stretch and was third at 275 after a 68.

John Cook, a runner-up in both the British Open and PGA, was the only other man in the field of 45 winners from around the world to finish under par. He had a closing 68 and was two under for the tournament at 278.

Nick Price, making his first start since winning the PGA, shot 72 and tied for fifth at 280 with David Peoples, who had a closing 74.

Toney defeats McCallum, retains middleweight title

RENO, Nev. (AP) — James Toney, who fought Mike McCallum to a classic draw the last time they met, escaped with his middleweight title again Saturday night with a majority decision win in a lackluster 12-round bout.

Toney fought an uninspired fight but it was enough to beat the aging McCallum, who tired in the later rounds to lose for only the second time in his pro career.

Unlike their first fight in December, when they fought toe to toe in a thrilling 12-round draw, the rematch was so dull that the crowd was booing both fighters.

Judge Phil Newman had the fight 114-114, but judge Doug Tucker had Toney winning 117-110 and Tom McDonough had him ahead 118-110. The Associated Press had Toney winning 114-113.

It was Toney's sixth defense of the International Boxing Federation 160-pound title he won in May 1991 from Michael Nunn, while McCallum lost for only the second time in 14 title fights.

"A win is a win," Toney said. "I wanted to take it easy and be smooth about it."

Take it easy Toney did, almost to the point in the early rounds where he appeared to be sleepwalking.

McCallum did his share to make it a long night also, adopting a strategy of throwing left jabs and then trying to fight inside while launching very few right hands.

"You give it your best, but 116-110, that's ridiculous," McCallum said. "I feel I won."

The 35-year-old McCallum, who was stripped of his World Boxing Association title when he fought Toney the first time for refusing to pay a sanction fee, actually landed more punches than Toney, according to stats computed by Compubox.

McCallum landed 332 of 849 punches, or 39 percent, to 232 of 714, or 32 percent, for Toney.

Toney's punches were the harder ones, although neither fighter was ever in trouble and there were no knockdowns.

Toney, who improved to 32-0-2, was paid $750,000 for the title defense, while McCallum, who fell to 43-2-1, received $525,000.

Both fighters weighed 158 for the bout at the Reno Convention Center.

In another title fight, Tracy Spann knocked down and bloodied Fred Pendleton, but left the ring without the IBF lightweight title for which the two were fighting.

Pendleton didn't win it either after the 135-pound fight was ruled a technical draw when a clash of heads in the second round opened a cut that spurting blood into Pendleton's right eye.

Ring doctor James McClennan recommended the fight be stopped at 2:05 of the round as blood gushed from a deep cut over Pendleton's eye.

Spann, thinking he had won the bout, celebrated by jumping on the ring ropes and raising his arms in triumph. Then he watched in disbelief as the fight for the vacant title was ruled a technical draw.

Under IBF rules, if an accidental foul forces a fight to be stopped, the fight is ruled a technical draw if the injury occurs in the first six rounds.

"We'll settle it again," said Pendleton, who got into a shouting match with Spann's relatives after the fight was stopped.

The cut may have been the best thing to happen to Pendleton, the IBF No. 1 contender. He was knocked down by a Spann left hand midway through the first round and lost the round 10-8 on the scorecards of all three ringside judges.

Pendleton, an 11-5 favorite to win the title vacated by Pernell Whitaker, recovered to last the round and fought better in the second round when the two boxers accidentally clashed heads while fighting on the ropes.

Blood immediately started flowing from the cut and referee Richard Steele called halt to the action so McClennan could look at the injury. The ring doctor recommended Steele stop the fight, much to the chagrin of Pendleton.

"I had him out in the first round," said Spann, the second-ranked lightweight. "But he's a tough guy."

Pendleton, of Philadelphia, said the head butt that opened the cut was one of many he received during the short fight.

"He had his head up like a peacock," Pendleton said. "I was trying to protect myself from the head and the punches."

NC State tops Iowa in Classic

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Steve Videtich kicked a tie-breaking 46-yard field goal with 6:50 remaining and Terry Jordan added a clinching 5-yard touchdown pass as North Carolina State beat No. 16 Iowa 24-14 Saturday night in the Kickoff Classic.

Videtich, a sophomore, gave N.C. State a 17-14 lead by connecting on his first collegiate field goal attempt. The Wolfpack regained possession on an interception by Mike Reid and drove 34 yards for the clinching score — a 5-yard pass from Jordan to Eddie Goines with 1:53 remaining.

Jordan, who missed seven games last season with a broken left arm, completed 15 of 24 passes for 160 yards and one touchdown. The senior also rushed 13 times for 71 yards in the season opener for both teams.

It was the second Kickoff Classic defeat for Iowa, which lost the 1987 game to Tennessee 23-22. N.C. State was playing in its first Kickoff Classic.

After a wide-open first half

that ended in a 14-14 tie, the game turned into a defensive struggle for most of the second half.

N.C. State scored in the opening half on a 2-yard run by Gary Downs and a 49-yard dash by Anthony Barbour — the longest run in the 10-year history of the Kickoff Classic.

Both of Iowa's touchdowns came on second-quarter passes from Jim Hartlieb to Danan Hughes, who set a school record for career TD receptions with 17. Hughes, who comes from nearby Bayonne, N.J., had scoring catches of 23 and 9 yards.

Hartlieb, whose brother, Chuck, quarterbacked Iowa in the 1987 Kickoff Classic, completed 22 of 34 passes for 212 yards with two interceptions.

N.C. State scored on its first possession of the game when Downs capped an 8-play, 81-yard march with his short TD run. The key play in the drive was a 33-yard run by Jordan that brought the ball to the Iowa 17.

Iowa tied it midway through the second period on the 23-yard toss from Hartlieb to Hughes, who caught a crossing pass on the State 11 and outraced several defenders to the end zone.

State came back and took a 14-7 lead on the next series when Barbour took a pitch from Jordan, split two tacklers and raced down the right sideline for a touchdown.

Hughes' second TD catch, with 4:47 left in the half, tied it at 14. The senior, who had seven catches for 87 yards, ran a slant pattern and made a diving catch in the end zone.

Raiders, Steelers win as NFL preseason concludes

(AP) - Not since last Dec. 1 had the Los Angeles Raiders won a football game. That changed on Saturday when, thanks to the Nick Bell's 2-yard touchdown run with 2:05 to play, Los Angeles beat the Houston Oilers 30-26.

The Raiders lost their final three games of the 1991 season, the AFC wild-card game and their first three exhibition games before finally getting into the win column.

"This win came at a real good time for us," said Raiders quarterback Jay Schroeder, who completed seven of 10 passes for 92 yards and one touchdown without being intercepted while playing the first half against the Oilers. "I think we looked a lot crisper today. Next week, we start shooting live bullets."

In another Saturday game on the last weekend of exhibition play, the Pittsburgh Steelers beat the New York Giants 24-3, and Minnesota trounced Washington 30-0.

The weekend began Thursday with the New York Jets beating Philadelphia 22-13, New Orleans beating Miami 17-3 and San Diego beating the Los Angeles Rams 30-19.

On Friday, it was Cleveland 24, Tampa Bay 3; Cincinnati 34, Detroit 17; Buffalo 27, Atlanta 21; Chicago 20, Dallas 13; Indianapolis 21, Kansas City 10; San Francisco 24, Seattle 17, and Phoenix 21, Denver 17.

The Raiders moved 82 yards in 12 plays for the winning TD after Cody Carlson's 12-yard scoring pass to Corey Harris had put the Oilers (4-1) ahead 26-23.

Carlson's pass to Harris came two plays after Darryl Lewis intercepted Todd Marinovich's pass and returned it 16 yards to the Los Angeles 16, but Marinovich bounced back to guide the Raiders to the winning touchdown.

"It was a good effort," Raiders coach Art Shell said. "They've got a football team that has been knocking people around. We did a pretty good job, especially our first-line guys."

Bell rushed for 102 yards on 13 carries and Marinovich, playing the second half, completed 10 of 18 passes for 177 yards with two interceptions.

Ernest Givins caught two touchdown passes in the third quarter to put the Oilers ahead before Marinovich's long pass to Brown.

"There are a lot of things we did real well, and there were a lot of things we were pretty bad at," Oilers coach Jack Pardee said. "As poorly as we looked that first half, we still could have come out of that thing ahead. About the season, I'm ready to get started."

Neil O'Donnell made a claim for the starting quarterback job, capping two 11-play drives in the first half with touchdown passes of 2 and 7 yards to Eric Green.

Former Steeler Matt Bahr's 28-yard field goal gave New York a 3-0 lead in the first quarter, but O'Donnell hit Jeff Graham for 27 yards and Dwight Stone for 19 on a 92-yard drive that ended with Green's first scoring catch at 2:48 of the period.

Pittsburgh, winless until beating Chicago 28-17 last Sunday, then drove 64 yards on its next possession, with Barry Foster's six carries for 43 yards setting up O'Donnell's second scoring pass to Green.

O'Donnell completed 11 of 15 passes for 150 yards without an interception. With Jeff Hostetler still injured, Phil Simms played the first 3 1/2 quarters for New York, completing eight of 11 for 124 yards and an interception.

Scrimmage benefits Belles

VanMeter optimistic despite lopsided score

by MOYA SOMERSET
Sports Writer

The women's soccer teams from Saint Mary's and Notre Dame gathered in front of a large crowd at Alumni Field to compete in their annual scrimmage.

The general consensus between the two teams was a good-natured scrimmage, which the Irish captured 7-1.

"This does not really matter, it's just a scrimmage, but we get up for the game and I know that they do too. There will always be that rivalry," stated Notre Dame tri-captain Denise Chabot.

The Belles echoed the same feeling.

"It is fun. There is a good, big rivalry between the two schools. Division One versus Division Three. Everyone is always up," said returning senior Kristin Crowley.

Jody Hartwig scored the first goal for Notre Dame in the first of the three sets and was followed by a host of others in the Irish scoring column. The lone Belles goal came from freshman Kim Rivers, in the second set.

An injury to Saint Mary's senior Cindy Jordan marred the solid performance by the Belles. Jordan went down in the third period with what first reports called a hyper-extended knee.

Belles coach Tom VanMeter is optimistic about this season after seeing his team perform.

"Playing Notre Dame is a great opportunity. They are a division one team, and they play very faster. This is a learning process. The score was lopsided, but we have to adjust," stated a pleased VanMeter. "We have only had seven practices, only had since Monday. Four of our starters graduated, and everyone is playing in different positions."

Saint Mary's next game will be a scrimmage at Valparaiso University.

Bengals sign top draft pick Klingler to multi-year deal

CINCINNATI (AP) — David Klingler, the Cincinnati Bengals' top draft pick, said Saturday he has agreed to contract terms with the team.

The former University of Houston quarterback told a Houston television station that he has agreed to a four-year deal with the Bengals.

"We've agreed to terms and I'm heading up there tomorrow (Sunday) ... That's a good contract, a good length and I'm pleased with it," Klingler told KRIV-TV.

"It's been rough," Klingler said.

"For the past 19 years I've been playing football this time of year and this is the first time I haven't, so it kind of felt like going through a mini-retirement. But everything is back to normal."

Klingler could not be reached independently for comment. His home telephone number is unpublished.

Bengals general manager Mike Brown told The Cincinnati Enquirer in an interview published Sunday that he planned to meet with Klingler's agent Sunday night.

Asked if he hoped to complete the deal at the meeting, Brown said, "Yes."

Leigh Steinberg, Klingler's agent, issued a statement Saturday that he was "upbeat" over the progress of negotiations and that he is "hopeful of a signing within the next several days."

The Enquirer said terms of the contract likely will be in neighborhood of $1.75 million

Injuries

captains play on the team. The three have been supportive of the younger players, but their inability to give the on the field leadership any team needs has been frustrating.

"We go to all the practices, and participate as much as we can, but we want to be able to lead the team on the field," commented Lodyga. "It's frustrating to be injured to start our senior year, but we can't think of ourselves we have to be supportive of the players who can play."

The title of captain, and on-field leader has been given to Andrea Kurek. The junior defender will serve as captain until the trio is healthy.

Their health is an unsettled issue, as dates with doctors this week will determine the fate of the three captains. Chabot may be back as soon as a week, but Lodyga and Jarc's recover will require a bit longer.

"I don't think that I will return for at least two weeks," continued Lodyga.

Porter status remains a mystery as she is in the fifth month of rehabilitation from reconstructive knee surgery. The process usual takes six months before a player is in as position to play Extensively. That figure is tentative, due to the delicacy of a surgery of that nature.

The most effected by the in-

juries has been Petrucelli, who begins his fifth year as coach. After coming close to an NCAA tournament bid last season, this year held promise as a year to put the Irish program in the national spotlight for good.

Despite the setback brought by the injuries Petrucelli feels this still could be the season his teams makes a permanent mark on the national scene.

"The beginning of this year will be a real challenge, with the loss of the leadership the captains brought. But if anything this time will give the younger players experience," said Petrucelli. "I don't think that this can't be the season we expected it to be."

"When October roles around we are going to be a deep, seasoned team, really ready to play."

The seasoning of the younger players has fell into Petrucelli's arms, and what at first seemed to be a challenging task, has become easy, and also a great deal of fun.

"You would think that I would have to do a lot more hands on coaching, but it really hasn't been that way," said a pleased Petrucelli. "With the talent level we have overall, I really haven't had to. Talent replaces experience, you can't teach big game experience but you can hope that talent will replace it."

"Anytime you deal with freshmen, things are going to be exciting, and you get the satisfaction of seeing a lot more learning."

Big game experience for the younger players will begin Saturday when the Irish travel to North Carolina State, which is considered to be among the nation's top teams.

Chalk Talk

Baseball must do a lot more than turn back the clock

Fellow sports fans, familiarize yourself with channel 24; that's ESPN on your beloved Heritage Cablevision system.

You will likely be tuned in way past your normal bedtime watching an historic tractor pull competition. You may even find yourself getting up early to watch a rerun of the international judo championships.

If you are at least semi-junkie, you will definitely be glued to the set for the tri-daily Sports Center, weekly NFL PrimeTime and Sunday Night Football, the daily half-hour show Baseball Tonight, and about 150 baseball games a season.

Last night after Sports Center, I caught some of ESPN's Sunday Night Baseball, an epic battle between the Mets and Reds. I was quick to notice the neat old-fashioned uniforms. It was "Turn Back the Clock" night.

I can't help but see the irony here.

First of all, the past means day baseball. To bypass a sunny Sunday in New York to play a night game would be considered sacrilege.

Second of all, following baseball in its glory days meant gathering around the family radio for the night.

ESPN spoils its viewers with a myriad of figures and graphics.

I didn't get to see the game in its entirety, but I bet Mets manager Jeff Torborg appeared in a little box in the right-hand corner of the screen fielding questions about his team's chemistry problems.

Why did the Mets unload David Cone, one of the National League's top pitchers, for an unproven third-baseman, Jeff Kent?

I'll give you a hint. It starts with a dollar sign. Baseball, like its commissioner Fay Vincent, is in deep trouble.

Owners are mad at Vincent for not putting in a salary cap to protect teams from bankruptcy.

Headlines for an edition of ESPN's Baseball Today should be saying something like this:

*a team can no longer survive financially in a city like San Francisco;

*the Mets can no longer afford to pay a great free-agent pitcher his dues;

*star players like Canseco, Henderson, Strawberry, etc. keep worrying more about numbers in their contracts than their team's numbers in the standings;

The bottom line is simple: Teams simply can't keep up with rising costs.

Something must be done to bring back the Glory Days of baseball. And for right now, marketers' "Turn Back the Clock" nights just aren't working.

Women top SMC despite injuries

By GEORGE DOHRMANN
Sports Writer

Coach Chris Petrucelli and the Notre Dame women's soccer team got a look at the future Sunday night as they cruised past Saint Mary's College in an exhibition game 7-1.

■ SMC perspective/ page 14

Injuries to four key players, including captains Michelle Lodyga, Margaret Jarc and Denise Chabot, forced Petrucelli to start nine underclassmen, including five freshmen. The fourth injured player is midfielder Stephanie Porter, last year's Midwestern Collegiate Conference Most Valuable Player.

The lineup will remain that way for a considerable amount of time, as the status of the injured players remains uncertain.

A separated shoulder has troubled Lodyga, who was expected to anchor the Irish defense from goal this season. Replacing her will be sophomore Kim Gold, who started two games last season.

Filling Jarc's sweeper position will be freshmen Ashley Scharff, and her performance there could be the key to the Irish's season. Despite her lack of experience, Scharff's teammates feel that she can handle the responsibility, especially if her performance against St. Mary's is an indication of things to come.

"Ashley played really well, and the experience is going to make her a great player," commented Jarc. "She understands the position and sees the field real well."

Although not a starter, Chabot's loss is of equal importance due to the leadership role her and the other

Men's soccer falls to Indiana in Boot, 2-0

By JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Emotions were high on Saturday as the 20th-ranked Notre Dame men's soccer team battled number-five Indiana at the Golden Boot Classic.

Although it was just an exhibition game, both teams played with an intensity often reserved for the post-season.

When the dust settled, the Hoosiers came away with a 2-0 win, but they didn't escape without a battle.

"Indiana didn't dominate us by any stretch of the imagination," said Irish coach Mike Berticelli. "I think we exposed them as much as they exposed us."

It didn't take Indiana very long to expose some inexperience in Notre Dame's defense. Junior Mike Palmer, a converted midfielder playing his first game as a defender, missed a coverage, which led to a goal by Indiana's Wane Lobring less than six minutes into the game.

"The first goal was caused by some confusion and inexperience," Berticelli explained, "but I see that as a positive because it will be a learning experience."

Saturday's game was all about learning.

Because it was just an exhibition, the Irish used various combinations and several untested players saw some quality minutes.

The Hoosiers capitalized on that inexperience again at the 30:17 mark. Sophomore goalkeeper Bert Bader made an impressive diving save, but the ball slipped out of his grasp and Indiana's Brandon Ward dumped the garbage into the empty net.

In the second half, emotions reached a peak and Irish sophomore Chris Dean was in the middle of the action.

Early in the final period, it looked like Dean would be finished for the night after Indiana's Jeff Bannister sent him tumbling to the turf. He was able to continue, but he probably wishes he wasn't. Minutes later, Dean tripped up the Hoosiers' Joel Shanker, who showed his displeasure with a punch to Dean's stomach.

With a one-man advantage for the final 25 minutes, the Irish offense put together their best scoring opportunities of the night.

An off-sides penalty wiped out sophomore Tim Oates' goal with about 20 minutes left, and Tont Richardson rolled a shot off the left bar in the final minute.

"It could have just as easily been a 2-2 game," Berticelli said. "If that shot goes in at the end and we don't have the off-sides call, it's a different game."

In exhibition games, however, the final score is meaningless. A loss is as good as a win if the team learns to play together and gets quality experience in game situations.

"Because we're so young, we needed this time together on the field," Berticelli added. "This game gave us some direction as we prepare for the regular season, and I think we'll be a really good team by the end of the year."
