Women's forum to be held tonight

By JULIE BARRETT
Associate News Editor

Providing an open forum for women as well as men to speak out about women-related issues and experiences at Notre Dame, and discussing ongoing efforts and new ideas to tackle some of these issues is the goal of "ND Women Speak Out," a project cosponsored by Graduate and Undergraduate Student Governments tonight at 7:30 in 101 DeBartolo Hall.

The first part of the forum will feature speakers from different groups on campus, including representatives from Campus Alliance for Rape Elimination (C.A.R.E.) and Sex Offense Services (S.O.S.), to present their own experiences and efforts concerning women's issues at Notre Dame.

Then the floor will be opened to anyone who wants to share their own experiences or concerns.

"We hope to find out what women are concerned about on campus by providing an open space for them to talk about these issues affecting them here at Notre Dame," said junior Katie Glynn, Student Government Women's Resource Committee commissioner. "And we hope to raise awareness about these issues and possibly get their support for things such as the Women's Resource Center."

She added, "We encourage men to come as well, because many of these issues don't just affect women, and resolving these issues will benefit everyone."

Ruling clears the way for Demjanjuk to leave Israel

By ALLYN FISHER
Associated Press

JERUSALEM
Israel's Supreme Court cleared the way Sunday for the release of John Demjanjuk, setting aside appeals for a new Nazi war crimes trial after delaying his departure five times.

The ruling was expected to conclude a long saga involving the retired Ohio auto worker. He was acquitted July 29 of being "Ivan the Terrible," a Nazi guard who operated gas chambers at Poland's Treblinka Death Camp during World War II.

Demjanjuk was free to leave Israel immediately, officials said. But his attorney and family were working out details of his departure and asked that he be kept in protective custody. Demjanjuk's son-in-law and a U.S. Rep., James Traficant, D-Ohio, planned to leave Monday to escort Demjanjuk.

Traficant said he expected Demjanjuk to be back in the United States before Friday.

The ruling by Justice Theodore Orr was the sixth time the court has dealt with Demjanjuk's case since his acquittal, when a five-member panel said there was reasonable doubt about his identity as Ivan the Terrible but found that he had been present at other Nazi camps.

Orr rejected appeals by Holocaust survivors and Nazi hunters who sought to have Demjanjuk retried on charges that he was at the Sobibor death camp as well as concentration camps. They had mounted an international search for Sobibor survivors who could identify Demjanjuk.

Orr's ruling refused requests for a broader panel of justices to review evidence to see if a new trial could be justified.

Israel's Attorney General

Yosef Harish already had decided not to prosecute Demjanjuk further, saying the evidence was too weak and there was risk of double jeopardy, or trying him twice on the same charges. The Supreme Court needed exceptional circumstances to overturn the attorney general's decision. Orr's ruling meant those circumstances did not exist in Demjanjuk's case.

Justice Ministry spokesman Etty Eshed said Orr also canceled a restraining order that had kept the 73-year-old Demjanjuk in an isolation cell at Ayalon prison near Tel Aviv.

Israel, Egypt to sign peace declaration within months

By NEJLA SAMMAKIA
Associated Press

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt
Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak met Sunday with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and said "most, maybe all" Arab nations are ready to follow Israel and the PLO toward peace.

Speaking to reporters after a two-hour summit with Rabin, Mubarak said he expects Israel and Syria would sign a declaration of peace within months. Mubarak said he'll try to speed their negotiations.

"Every country in the area wants peace," Mubarak said with Rabin at his side. "Enough hatred and bloodshed and killing, and using our revenues for war. I can tell you most, maybe all the Arab world supports the step forward for peace."

Syrian President Hafez Assad, in an interview with an Egyptian newspaper, said he was angry that Arafat negotiated an accord with Israel secretly, but said Syria would continue peace talks with Israel.

Rabin hastily arranged Sunday's summit at the Mediterranean resort to win support from friendly Arabs for the peace pact the Jewish state signed with the Palestine Liberation Organization in Washington a week ago. It calls for limited Palestinian self-rule in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho.

The one-day visit was Rabin's third summit with Mubarak since the Israeli leader took office in July 1992. Egypt, the only Arab country that has a peace treaty with Israel, has been instrumental in mediating between Israel and other Arab states.

Rabin returned to Israel later in the day.

After their meeting, Mubarak noted Syria's desire for peace with Israel.

But he would not specify what he and the Syrian president will discuss when Assad visits Egypt later this week.

Minister shot during church service

Associated Press

NORTH SALEM, Ind.
A Methodist minister was finishing his sermon Sunday when a woman shot him to death in front of his horrified congregation and 13-year-old daughter, police said. A woman he once dated was arrested.

The Rev. Roland Phillips, 36, of North Salem, was concluding the sermon before about 25 people at the United Methodist Church when he was shot three times in the chest, said Lt. Terry Brinker, a Hendricks County Sheriff's spokesman. He died on the way to a hospital.

Brinker said Elizabeth Mayberry of Bloomington approached Phillips during the sermon and asked to speak with him, but the minister asked her to wait until he was finished.

Mayberry then stood next to Phillips until he was concluding the sermon, when she pulled out a gun and shot him three times in the chest, Brinker said.

Authorities said a member of the congregation wrestled Mayberry to the ground while another parishioner took away the gun. A fourth shot was fired during the struggle, but it harmlessly hit a railing in front of the congregation.

Mayberry, 36, was held at the Hendricks County Jail. She was expected to make a court appearance Monday, Brinker said.

Phillips, who was divorced, once dated Mayberry, Brinker said. But he added that police had no idea what prompted the killing.

The minister's 13-year-old daughter, Rachel, was in church when her father was killed, Brinker said.

Student contracts hepatitis

Special to The Observer

A freshman student residing in Dillon Hall has been admitted to the University Health Center with hepatitis A, a viral infection of the liver.

The student, whose home is in Ecuador, evidently contracted the disease some weeks ago, before coming to Notre Dame. Hepatitis A is spread through contact with the feces of infected persons and requires prolonged, close personal contact for transmission. The disease is not spread through normal, occasional contact in classrooms, dining halls, residence halls or other common areas of campus.

Those students at risk of infection as the result of close and prolonged exposure to the patient already are being notified by University Health Services and treated with gamma globulin. Other than to these students, this infection should pose no risk to the campus community.

Students and others interested in further information concerning hepatitis A may contact the University Health Center at 631-7497.

INSIDE COLUMN

Do S.U.D.S. officers serve and protect?

Two Saturdays ago, I was at a small party at my friend's house on Navarre Street. There were around 30 people there. No one milled around outside. The music was not heard by the surrounding neighbors. Everything was under control, and no problems were being caused.

Then, before we knew it, four S.U.D.S. (Stop Underage Drinking and Sales) officers were knocking on the door, telling us that everyone had to leave, and had to show identification before leaving. Two more policemen were stationed at the back door to prevent anyone's escape.

Sixteen students received citations that night for underage drinking, while the residents of the house were found in violation of a South Bend noise ordinance.

This was a small party, with everyone knowing almost everyone else at the party. The music was not loud enough to be disturbing; designated drivers were designated and staying sober. Who were we harming? What problems were we causing?

The officers were upset because there was underage drinking going on inside the premises. This indeed occurred, but was it so bad that it warranted the Saint Joseph County Police to send two female officers into the party as plants, and then to have an additional six officers outside?

Were we so harmful that the officers had to seek out crime, going into a house party that was disturbing no one? After the bust, one of the residents went around to his neighbors that night to see if the music had been too loud; every neighbor replied that they had heard nothing, and had in fact been woken up by the flashing lights of the police cars.

Were there were no other more serious crimes occurring on a Saturday night than some kids drinking in a house, crimes which might have been prevented had eight additional officers been on the lookout?

Actually, there were. Not three blocks from Navarre St. is the Lafayette Square apartment complex, a complex where one fifth (6 out of 30) of the student apartments have been burglarized. This same night, while eight officers were otherwise occupied with some underage drinkers, an apartment at Lafayette Square was broken into.

Which is worse, having people afraid to go down into their own basements in the middle of the day, to leave their homes for a half hour, or to have some friends drinking responsibly together?

The situation at Lafayette Square has gotten so bad that a friend of mine has moved out of her apartment because she is too frightened to sleep in her basement bedroom. Yet rather than deal with this more serious problem, the police instead seek out harmless college drinkers who are relatively easier to apprehend.

The South Bend police force doesn't have to go into our houses to find something to do.

There's already more than enough crime for them to handle.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

Cable television takes most Emmys in 45th awards program

PASADENA, Calif. Cable television, long seen as a stepchild to the broadcast networks, passed into a new era Sunday as one of its own dominated the 45th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards.

"We broke the barrier," Home Box Office Chairman Michael Fuchs said backstage Sunday at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium after the cable channel won 17 Emmys, including 11 creative arts awards given in a Saturday ceremony.

HBO's victory came on the strength of three TV movies: "Stalin," "Barbarians at the Gate" and "The Positively True Adventures of the Alleged Texas Cheerleader-Murdering Mom."

NBC came in second in the Emmy tally with 16 awards, followed by CBS with 14 and ABC with 12. Broadcast networks have traditionally been the Emmy powerhouses, even since cable was first recognized by the awards starting in 1987.

"Seinfeld," the NBC series that celebrates cheeky humor amid the mundane aspects of everyday life, and the CBS drama "Picket Fences" won the top two series categories.

Co-star Michael Richards was named best supporting actor in a comedy for his role as eccentric neighbor Kramer. Writer Larry David took home an Emmy for a notorious "Seinfeld" episode about masturbation.

"Picket Fences," a drama chronicling small-town life, also received three Emmys. It was named best dramatic series, and stars Tom Skerritt and Kathy Baker were honored as best actor and actress in a drama.

Roseanne Arnold skipped the ceremony in the year in which she finally won an Emmy as outstanding lead actress in a comedy series.

Arnold had been vocal in the past about the few nominations her popular series had won.

Her co-star, Laurie Metcalf, won her second consecutive Emmy for supporting actress in a comedy, giving the show a total of three awards in its five-year history.

Ted Danson claimed the Emmy for best actor in a comedy series for "Cheers," the long-running NBC program which concluded this year.

CBS' "Northern Exposure" — with a leading 16 nominations — also was shut out.

In the category that pitted talk show competitors David Letterman, on the old "Late Night" NBC program, and Jay Leno of NBC's "Tonight Show" against each other, NBC's "Saturday Night Live" instead snuck away with the trophy for outstanding variety, music or comedy series.

New Miss America will help homeless

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.

It may be pursuing a new image, but the Miss America pageant hasn't left all of its beauty contest traditions behind.

Newly crowned Miss America Kimberly Clarice Aiken took a customary seaside frolic in front of a pack of photographers on Sunday. And, unlike her predecessor, Leanza Cornett, the 18-year-old Aiken said she likes to wear the rhinestone crown.

One of the youngest women to hold the title, Aiken — Miss South Carolina — bested 49 women to win the 1994 title Saturday night.

"This has all been very overwhelming for me," she told reporters Sunday. "I am willing to accept the responsibilities."

Looking composed despite little sleep and a bad cold, Aiken said she wants to spend the next year working to help the homeless.

"My main goal is to get homeless people off the streets and get people who may become homeless not to be in that situation," she said. "I'd like to make the greatest difference."

Aiken is founder and president of the Homeless Education and Resource Organization in her hometown of Columbia, S.C. She said she has worked with children who live in homeless shelters and transitional housing.

As part of a new format for the 73-year-old pageant, contestants had to do their own hair and make-up and the dress code for the evening wear competition was relaxed.

Miss Georgia, Kara Kim Martin, 23, of Statesboro was first runnerup; Miss Ohio, Titilayo Adegokun, 20, of Cincinnati, second runnerup; Miss Oregon, Elizabeth Jeanne Simmons, 23, of Bandon, third runnerup; and Miss Virginia, Nancy Glisson, 22, of Williamsburg, fourth runnerup.

Veterans must change views of Vietnam

KOKOMO, Ind.

The men and women who served in Vietnam have been unfairly portrayed as everything from murderers and dope addicts, and it is up to veterans to set the record straight, Air Force disc jockey Adrian Cronauer said.

"I never met a single murderer. I never met a single rapist. I never met a single dope addict. I never met a single baby killer. I never met a single closet peacenik or any ne'er-do-wells," Cronauer said in a speech to veterans Saturday in Kokomo.

"What I did meet were a lot of honorable men and women who may not have been too happy about where they found themselves, but who were bound and determined to do their duty as well and as professionally as they could," he added.

Cronauer, a communications lawyer, was the model for Robin Williams' break-the-mold disc jockey in Vietnam in the movie "Good Morning, Vietnam."

The movie based on him was half true and half "Hollywood exaggeration," Cronauer said. Though he did teach English while he was off-duty, Cronauer said he never taught the Vietnamese in his class to swear.

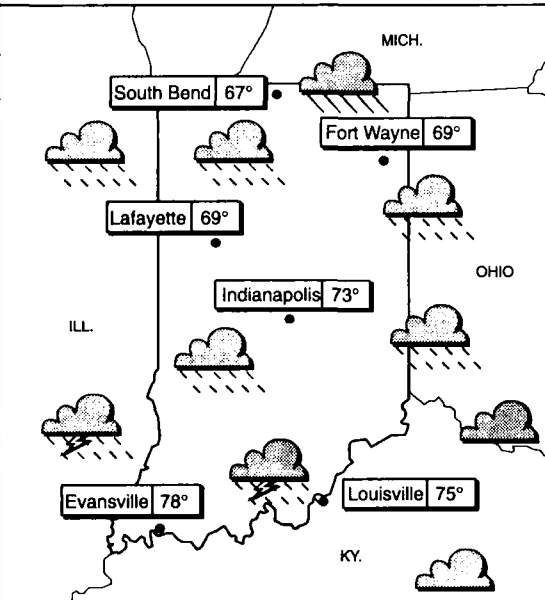

And he said there never were the bags of fan mail and hundreds of phone calls for him that the movie depicted.

"I mean think about it. There aren't any phone booths out in the rice paddies — where are you gonna call from?" Cronauer said.

Clinton tries to better communicate with public

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

President Clinton says he has learned to be more precise, in words and deeds, in setting forth a vision for America.

"I think what I have to do as president is try to somehow call forth very simple but powerful feelings from the American people as we face each of these challenges," Clinton told Time magazine for its Sept. 27 issue.

The president, who faces debates on health care, a proposed three-nation free trade agreement and a plan to "reinvent government," admitted past failures in communicating his message to the public and focusing his attention on issues.

"I hope maybe I can do a better job as we go along now of letting people know what the big motivating factors behind these decisions are.

And I think that's really what a president's job is," Clinton said.

"A president is not America's chief mechanic. You know I didn't get hired to fix everything in that sense. I got hired to do what I'm now trying to do, to set forth a vision," he said.

"I think I've learned to focus not only my energies but my words," the president said.

In an interview for the Sept. 27 Newsweek magazine, the president said working with first lady Hillary Clinton on health care has "been a joy," but so far he has had the last word.

"There will doubtless be some things we will disagree on, but so far all the major decisions where the health-care task force itself had been divided, or where the task force and the administration were divided, I made the call," he said.

Clinton also told Time magazine that Israel Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and PLO chairman Yasser Arafat had agreed before last week's peace-agreement signing to shake hands.

AIDS marriage law overturned

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY
A Utah law that invalidated the marriages of people with AIDS was voided by a federal judge at the request of two families and the state itself.

U.S. District Judge Aldon Anderson ruled that the law violated the federal Americans With Disabilities Act and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

The disabilities act says a public entity may not discriminate against a person with a physical or mental impairment limiting major life activities.

"AIDS is such a physical impairment," Anderson wrote in Friday's ruling.

Attorney Brian Barnard sued in July on behalf of two married couples and their children, who would be considered illegitimate if the parents' unions were voided. The women had contracted the virus before their marriages.

Gov. Mike Leavitt and Attorney General Jan Graham agreed the law was probably invalid, but they didn't want to make the admission in court. They did agree to block enforcement of the law until the next legislative session, but Barnard said that wasn't enough.

"These are sick people," he said. "They might die at any time. ... We said we would vigorously pursue the suit."

The women had feared that an insurance company would take advantage of the statute and refuse to pay health benefits in the event of their deaths

Police shoot teenage thief

Associated Press

EAST ORANGE, N.J.

A 15-year-old boy driving a stolen car was fatally shot by police officers who tried to arrest him and a passenger following a brief chase, authorities said Sunday.

Alquan Brown of Irvington was killed just before midnight Saturday after the 1989 Oldsmobile he was driving struck a metal post at a service station.

The Essex County Prosecutor's office said Brown tried to flee as officers struggled to gain control of the car, and that three officers opened fire when he drove directly at one of them. The three were treated at a hospital for minor injuries.

A 16-year-old Newark boy who was riding in the backseat was arrested, and authorities said he would be charged with being in possession of a stolen automobile and assaulting police officers.

A third person who jumped from the car as police followed it was being sought, said Ray Weiss, a spokesman for the Essex County prosecutor's office.

The shooting was under investigation and the case will be reviewed by a grand jury, said First Assistant Essex County Prosecutor Peter Francese.

Arrest made in campus slaying

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla.

A 27-year-old man whose bloody palm print was found at an apartment where a college student was stabbed to death and her roommate gravely wounded was arrested Sunday on a murder charge, police said.

Richard Anthony Meissner was charged with the slaying of Gina Marie Langevin and the attempted murder of her roommate, Jena Hull, the Alachua County Sheriff's office reported.

Deputies responding to a report of screams at the Garden Apartments on Saturday night found Hull, 24, cut and bloody and clinging to a second-story railing. Langevin, 26, was found dead of multiple stab wounds inside the apartment.

Hull, who suffered multiple stab wounds to her head and body, was listed in critical condition Sunday at North Florida Regional Medical Center.

Meissner's bloody palm print was found on a wall in the apartment, said Lt. Emery Gainey, a sheriff's spokesman.

Another roommate, Eden Mathews, also picked Meissner from a photo lineup as the man who came to the apartment door and asked to see Langevin, Gainey said.

Neither woman was sexually assaulted, Gainey said, and there were no signs of forced entry to the apartment or that a robbery had taken place.

Canadian autoworkers approve Chrysler contract

Associated Press

TORONTO Chrysler Corp.'s Canadian employees overwhelmingly approved a contract Sunday that creates new jobs, expands holidays and raises wages 4.5 percent over three years.

The results affect 10,500 workers at Chrysler's six Canadian plants.

The three-year deal was hammered out last Tuesday just minutes before a midnight strike deadline. It marked the first time in six rounds of contract talks that Canadian autoworkers have reached a tentative accord without going on strike.

The deal calls for increases of two percent this year, 1.5 percent next year and one percent in the final year of the contract. Assembly workers earn an average of about $15 an hour.

The Canadian union will use its agreement with Chrysler as a blueprint in talks with Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp., which employ more than 40,000 in Ontario and Quebec.

The union was expected to announce today which of the remaining two automakers will be its next target.

The Chrysler deal provides for the creation of more than 600 jobs early next year by the addition of a third shift at the Windsor plant which makes the popular minivan and at a busy LH sedan factory in Brampton.

The agreement gives employees an extra three days off with pay, which combined with two existing floating days, gives them an additional week's vacation. That provision alone will create 250 jobs.

Chrysler's six plants are located in Ontario. Two are in Windsor where its headquarters are located, one is in Toronto, two are in Brampton and one is in Ajax, just east of Toronto.

Time announces major reorganization

By DAVID KALISH
Associated Press

NEW YORK

Time Inc. announced a sweeping reorganization Sunday aimed at cutting costs while positioning the company for future growth.

The reshuffling includes management changes at Time Inc.'s core New York-based magazines, some staff reductions, and the creation of a new business to market company products across a range of media.

"These latest moves will enable Time Inc. to expand its magazine, book and multimedia businesses while continuing to enjoy healthy earnings," said Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Reginald Brack Jr.

The changes affect Time, Life, Fortune, Sports Illustrated, Money, People and Entertainment Weekly magazines.

Time Inc. said it would give each magazine more responsibility for financial performance while trying to improve the quality of each.

Under the reorganization, new division presidents who oversee publishers will head Time and People magazines. Sports Illustrated already has a president. Fortune and Money magazines will share a group publisher.

Staff reductions will come mostly through attrition, the company said. There were no estimates of total job reductions, but cuts will be minimal, Time spokesman Peter Costiglio said.

The moves come as the magazines struggle to recover from the industry's recent recession. In the first eight months of 1993, ad pages at Time magazine dropped 11.8 percent from the same period during the year before, according to Publishers Information Bureau. That compared with a 2.5 percent increase at U.S. News and World Report and a 2.8 percent decline at Newsweek.

Ad pages at Sports Illustrated dropped 16.6 percent, Money fell 7.2 percent and Fortune fell three percent, PIB reported.

Time Inc. also said it would develop and acquire businesses that fit into its strategy of marketing its products and services across a range of media outlets.

Other plans include creating a national sales force to serve advertisers who want to place ads in more than one magazine.

The management changes, which take effect Monday, include:

•David Long, Sports Illustrated's regional ad sales vice president, becomes publisher. Donald Elliman Jr. continues as president.

Alcohol lobbyists battle over tax

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Tensions in the alcoholic beverage industry have erupted into open warfare over which sectors of the business — beer, wine, or hard liquor — should be taxed to help pay for President Clinton's health reforms.

The president of the National Beer Wholesalers Association last week wrote a letter accusing his counterpart in the liquor industry of mounting "an all-out attack" on beer that "has placed the common interests of the licensed beverage industries in great jeopardy."

NBWA President Ronald Sarasin told Fred Meister, president of the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States (DISCUS), that Meister "has done more to damage the licensed beverage industries than all the activities of our most avowed critics."

The White House still had not reached final decisions Sunday on the precise mix of new taxes it would seek to finance the health care plan. A late draft called for $105 billion through the year 2000, and there were clear indications that a major part would come from a hike of roughly 75 cents a pack in cigarette taxes. Other revenue could come from a hit on alcoholic beverages.

Clinton is due to unveil the plan in a speech to Congress on Wednesday night.

Sarasin's Sept. 15 letter, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, was written in response to an appeal by Meister to Clinton not to focus any new taxes on hard liquor.

In a letter to Clinton on Sept. 3, Meister told the president that "beer, not liquor, is the beverage of choice of the young and drivers." And he said a rumored proposal to single out distilled spirits for new taxation "would perpetuate a 'beer subsidy' that is not rational and that sends the wrong message to young people."

Meister's letter was followed by a blitzkrieg advertising campaign calling a liquor tax unfair and pointing out that 42 percent of the price of a typical bottle of liquor now goes for taxes.

The beer, wine and liquor industries, like many relatively narrow special interests, have banded together over the years with cigarette makers to lobby against new excise levies — so-called "sin taxes" — on their products.

But such groups also live in constant fear and suspicion that their goals will be sold out when the time comes for the coalition to cut final deals.

The alcohol-tobacco alliance, the Coalition Against Regressive Taxation, already had been fractured this year by Clinton's signal that cigarettes would bear the brunt of new taxes to pay for health care reform.

Meister's letter to Clinton struck the most sensitive nerve of the beer industry. He pointed to the disparity between the taxes on an ounce of alcohol in the form of beer or wine, and in the form of distilled liquor. By that measure, liquor taxes already are far higher.

"The long-held goal of the spirits industry to force up the taxes on beer and wine is now clearly exposed, and DISCUS has stooped to astonishingly low levels to accomplish its purpose," Sarasin wrote to Meister. Copies of his letter also were distributed to the NBWA's board of directors and its state executives.

"Why DISCUS thought it was necessary to dump on beer and wine is beyond me," Sarasin said. "Why should the beer and wine industries continue to work with DISCUS on any issue when it has clearly indicated it intends to destroy us by dramatically raising our taxes?"

German treasure returned

By BIRGITT POETZSCH
Associated Press

QUEDLINBURG, Germany
A set of priceless treasures stolen by an American soldier after World War II has finally come home.

The items, dating from the eighth century, went on display Sunday at the Lutheran church in Quedlinburg nearly half a century after they were taken from the east German town.

About 800 guests, including federal parliament President Rita Suessmuth, attended a solemn ecumenical service celebrating the official opening of the display at the St. Servatii church.

The treasures include a rock-crystal reliquary shaped like a fish that some historians claim holds a lock of hair from the Virgin Mary. They also include a ninth or tenth century chest made of gold, ivory and precious jewels with the image of Germany's first elected king, Henry I of Saxony.

Other items in the collection include Henry I's jeweled comb, believed to have been used to comb out sins during religious ceremonies, and two jewel-inlaid manuscripts.

The items date from between the eighth to 16th centuries, with some crafted during the rules of Charlemagne (764-814) and Otto I (936-973).

They had been stored at the Lutheran Church in Quedlinburg for centuries, but were hidden in a mine shaft and disappeared in April 1945 after U.S. forces occupied the city.

Australia to be a republic

Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ireland
Australian Prime Minister Paul Keating told Britain's Queen Elizabeth II that he hopes to declare his country a republic by 2001.

Keating took the unusual step Sunday of issuing a statement about his formal audience with the queen on Saturday at Balmoral Castle.

"I explained to Her Majesty that, notwithstanding the deep respect and warm affection felt towards her by the Australian people, there was a growing feeling that Australia should make the necessary constitutional changes to allow the appointment of an Australian head of state," he said.

The changes are needed to clarify Australia's identity as an independent nation, Keating's statement said, adding a referendum would be needed to approve the constitutional amendments.

Australia has been an independent nation since 1901, but the British monarch has remained its titular head of state as in other former colonies, such as Canada and New Zealand.

The queen is represented in Australia by a governor-general appointed by the government, but many Australians believe the country should have a resident, elected head of state.

Keating said it would be appropriate for Australia to become a republic by 2001, the centenary of the federation of its individual states.

Australia would remain a member of the Commonwealth, a 50-nation association of Britain and her former colonies, and would welcome visits from the monarch "as head of the Commonwealth and the Queen of the United Kingdom," Keating said.

Main parties hurt in German election

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press

HAMBURG, Germany — Voters rebuffed mainstream parties Sunday in Hamburg state elections, and a far-right party was close to entering the legislature, according to preliminary results.

Official results will be announced later this week after a recount. But the procedure is largely a formality and not expected to alter the results.

The left-leaning Social Democrats, who have ruled Hamburg all but four years since World War II, lost their majority but remained the largest party.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Union lost almost a third of its support from the previous election in 1991, according to results from all 1,679 precincts.

"It's a heavy loss for us and also for the Social Democrats," said Peter Hintze, secretary-general of the Christian Democrats.

The main parties "will have to work against the anger of the little people," said the Social Democrats' incumbent mayor, Henning Voscherau.

The vote kicked off a year of elections in Germany, including national parliamentary elections in the autumn of 1994.

The Hamburg election has been closely watched to see the strength of the far right, which has had a resurgence in Germany since the country reunified in 1990. Radical rightists have won seats in recent years in three of Germany's 16 state parliaments.

Neither of the two rightist parties running in the election had enough to enter the legislature. But their combined percentage of 7.6 percent was sure to worry the major parties.

The radical rightist Republicans got 4.8 percent of the vote, just shy of the five percent minimum needed to enter the state legislature. In 1991 they scored 1.2 percent. The extreme rightist German People's Union, which did not run the last time, got 2.8 percent of the vote.

Both right-wing parties campaigned on anti-foreigner themes, blaming refugees for the country's rising unemployment.

The Social Democrats were at 40.4 percent, down from 48 percent in 1991. The Christian Democrats were at 25.1 percent, down from 35.1 percent, and the centrist Free Democrats were at 4.2 percent, down from their previous 5.4 percent.

Losing its seat in the Hamburg legislature is a blow to the prestige of the Free Democrats, the junior partner in Kohl's national coalition.

"The voters have given the people's parties a thundering slap in the face," said Werner Hoyer, secretary-general of the Free Democrats.

Rivalry deepens in Russian power struggle

Associated Press

MOSCOW — A spokesman for Boris Yeltsin hurled thinly veiled ethnic slurs Sunday against the president's chief rival, as the country's leaders intensified their bickering.

The remarks about parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov came a day after Yeltsin proposed early elections to settle Russia's bitter power struggle.

In a written statement from the Kremlin, Yeltsin's press secretary, Vyacheslav Kostikov, clearly alluded to Khasbulatov's ethnic background.

Khasbulatov is not an ethnic

Russian but a Chechen, a dark-skinned, mostly Muslim minority group from the Caucasus Mountains. There is widespread prejudice in Russia against Chechens, who are often called gangsters.

Kostikov accused Khasbulatov of placing "clan interests" above Russia's national interests and said the speaker displayed "the opposite of Russia's national character."

Russians "will not yield to the false slogans and promises of a stranger. The destiny of Russia must be, and will be, decided by Russians themselves," Kostikov added.

On Saturday, Khasbulatov told legislators that Yeltsin was trying to create "a new dictatorship." He said Yeltsin was "waging war against the state" and following orders from the West.

Yeltsin offered a compromise in the struggle Saturday, however, saying he would agree to early presidential elections if the parliament would agree to new legislative elections.

Neither Khasbulatov nor Yeltsin's rebellious vice president, Alexander Rutskoi, responded directly to the compromise offer.

Hard-line lawmakers have resisted previous calls for early elections because it likely would cost many their jobs.

Rutskoi called Saturday for restoration of the Soviet Union, saying Yeltsin was turning Russia into an economic basket case.

He suggested the president should be prosecuted for "all that has happened to the nation," the Interfax news agency reported.

Polls show former Communists ahead

By FRANK BAJAK
Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland — Former Communists and other leftists who advocate restoring parts of the socialist security blanket appeared the big winners Sunday in parliamentary elections.

Unofficial early results showed the largely former Communist Democratic Left Alliance and the leftist Polish Peasant's Party winning a third of the vote. A splintered result was putting seven parties or alliances into Parliament.

Hit by voter dissatisfaction with the painful transition to a free market, Prime Minister Hanna Suchocka's Democratic Union party finished third with 10.8 percent, according to the INFAS polling service. She currently governs through a centrist coalition.

As the top vote-getter with 19.4 percent, the Alliance would have first shot at putting together a new governing coalition, although there was no guarantee it could succeed.

The Democratic Union's parliamentary leader, Bronislaw Geremek, said his party would not join a government led by the former Communists.

It also was not clear to what extent, if any, reforms might be rolled back under a new government. The former Communists have said they want Poland to have a Western-style market economy — with some alterations.

The Alliances' leader, former Communist sports minister Aleksander Kwasniewski, said Sunday night his party would continue Suchocka's conservative economic policies, with adjustments. He was not specific.

"We will continue the reforms because Poland needs reforms," said Kwasniewski. "But Poland needs social peace as well."

Suchocka's government, the fourth and most durable since Solidarity ushered in democracy in 1989, has won wide international praise for helping make Poland eastern Europe's biggest economic success story. More than half the population now works in the private sector.

But the dismantling of the socialist state has caused painful dislocation, hitting farmers, the elderly and workers in failing state-owned industries the hardest.

Allied with the Alliance, were the Polish Peasant's Party and the Union of Labor, which unlike the other two has roots in Solidarity.

The Peasant's Party, a former ally of the Communists in the rubber-stamp Cold War days, finished second with an estimated 16 percent of the vote, INFAS said. It advocates cheap credit and minimum prices for farmers.

Union of Labor, the most ideologically leftist of the major contenders, got 6.6 percent of the vote and could play a major role in deciding the make-up of the next government.

After voting for Union of Labor, Anna Chodak, 43, complained of "wild capitalism which does not care about one's undeserved misfortunes."

President Lech Walesa, now far less popular than when he was elected in 1990, reiterated after voting in his hometown of Gdansk on Sunday that he would nominate the Democratic Left Alliance's candidate for prime minister if that party prevailed.

"I have no choice. Democracy is not a joke," he said. "If the nation wants it then it has to be so."

Walesa's own political bloc, which was running at 5.8 percent, could end up being a potential coalition partner.

Appearing to move to the margins — perhaps not even getting the minimum percentages needed to sit in Parliament — were rightist parties advocating the purging of former Communists and parties allied with the Roman Catholic Church. The church is losing influence after pushing hard for passage this year of one of Europe's strictest anti-abortion laws.

About 35 parties and alliances vied for the 460 seats in Parliament's lower house. However, only 15 were running nationwide and only five or six were expected to exceed the margins required to gain seats.

Only parties gaining at least five percent of all votes and coalitions getting eight percent will win seats in the lower house, or Sejm. Voters were also choosing a new 100-member Senate.

Analysis of homosexuality vague

Dear Editor:

In his column (The Observer, Sept. 16), Josh Ozersky, though certainly well-meaning in a vague, muddled sort of way, gives a complete misanalysis of homosexuality, both as a moral and social phenomena. He himself admits this, "I am as baffled as the next man", and his column proves this conclusively. However, Ozersky's reasoning, if it can be called so, reveals that he is solidly in liberalism's fold. Indeed, he is but another aspect of liberalism's Promethean nature.

Ozersky claims that Doonesbury is part "of a well-meaning trend in recent years to minimize homosexuality" by incorporating it into popular media. This is wrong. It is a belligerent assault of our senses, and moral dignity, by the media in an effort to ram their "alternative lifestyles" down our throats wanted or not. The fact that Ozersky perceives it to be an attempt at minimization rather than legitimization and protest against traditional morality is a direct result of his misunderstanding of the nature of homosexuality as well as evidence of the hidden success of their propaganda on the mental softness of Americans in general.

The premise that homosexuality as an innate characteristic, like that of gender or race entails the conclusion that homosexuality is not a moral characteristic, assuming free-will is a necessary condition of moral acts. Ozersky buys this premise, even if he does not understand the conclusion it brings. "For people born gay..." One can imagine Ted Bundy following Ozersky's general assumption: "I'm sorry your honor, but I was born a serial murderer. As a result, I have had to live a life in secrecy, fear, and fugitive desire. If only Hollywood would minimize my genetic characteristic in comics and sitcoms, people could understand that serial killing is not a moral abomination, but something as natural as being a man having sex with another man. I can't darn well help that can I?"

Natural law is the basis for both the Catholic teaching on abstinence, birth control, and homosexuality. Ozersky's complete lack of understanding of natural law, and reason in general, allows him to call this reasoning "pretty thin soup." Is no surprise then, that two paragraphs later we find Ozersky cheerleading for "moral assimilation". He does not condemn homosexuality for being intrinsically unnatural and disgusting, but because it is "more or less shameful to sleep with dozens of people", something which also applies to heterosexuals. Thus, his reasoning culminates in the assertion that "Few decent people, I think, really have anything against real love, whatever its mode..." His assertion is as confused as his thinking. A natural sense of "decency" implies a "good" which implies moral standards grounded in nature. Ozersky must assert if he is to hold his argument, that there is no such thing as natural decency — all decency, and morality must be "value judgments" based on an amoral "love". We can see that love, in this context, is convertible with the will, unrestrained by either nature or reason.

I have, I trust, exposed the liberal basis of Ozersky's "thinking". Like all good liberals, Ozersky holds onto a "morality", but that morality always, at bottom, presupposes that the human will triumphs over nature. The same nature which condemns homosexuality, also affirms, the belief that "all men are created equal". I wonder if Ozersky knows that the great Nazi propaganda movie was titled, "The Triumph of the Will." It also, like Doonesbury, was an attempt to "minimize" nature by ignoring natural differences (liberalism), and similarities (Nazism) for the love of will, and hatred of "the Law's of Nature and Nature's God."

'Well-meaning' views toward gays questioned

Dear Editor:

Three thoughts in response to Josh Ozersky's comments on homosexuality (The Observer, Sept. 16):

Ozersky speaks of a "well-meaning trend to minimize homosexuality by blending it into comics (Doonesbury), thrillers (The Crying Game), sitcoms (the Seinfeld "outing" episode), and so on." Minimize homosexuality? Minimize the importance of the issue of homosexuality in our culture, or homosexuals themselves? Minimize is a confusing word to use; as he uses it, it means to cease to draw distinctions between (which apparently frightens him — it would no longer be so easy to ostracize homosexuals), but its most common use is for debasement. (Possibly this was a subconscious word choice which belies his true feelings toward homosexuals, or homosexual males, to be more precise.) Is it minimizing the issue to accept homosexuals as part of our culture? And what is "well-meaning" about this "minimization?" If minimization is used in the sense of integration, then well-meaning is well-meaning, except that his use of it sounds suspiciously pejorative.

Ozersky considers himself to be "an ordinary heterosexual male" — and says from this perspective, male homosexuality is the "worst thing in the world." However, regarding lesbianism, "neither are men any too revolted by lesbianism: far from it, if the truth be known." Now, isn't there something strange that lesbianism appeals to him while gay sex is the ultimate evil? This doesn't sound in keeping with the Church's dictates. Could the discrepancy lie in the fact that traditionally it has been easy for men to objectify women, and that, in his fantasies of two lesbians making love, he imagines himself making a trio of it? That he would receive double pleasure? Or is that women's actions, because they are less significant, aren't threatening in the same sense as a man's actions would be? Could it be that there is something particularly threatening to him as a man because he conceivably could become the object of a homosexual's gaze? And does this explain why women, in his view, don't seem to have a problem with lesbianism, because we're all so used to being objectified that it doesn't matter if it's a man or a woman doing the objectifying?

There's something deeply disturbing about this whole process, about his ability to speak for the ordinary heterosexual male (the power of definition is incredibly strong and not something to be overlooked), about his view towards women, about his view towards gay men, about us/them, subject/object ways of relating. And that he thinks he's being "decent" — and reasonable, as a "more or less" seriously committed Catholic.

RIGHT OR WRONG?

Church's authority on natural law not limited

The subject of natural law comes up frequently in The Observer as well as in classrooms. It may be helpful at the start of the year to try to get the concept straight. "A just law," wrote Martin Luther King in his Letter from Birmingham Jail, "is a manmade code that squares with the moral law or the law of God.... An unjust law is a code that is out of harmony with the moral law."

To put it in the terms of St. Thomas Aquinas: "An unjust law is a human law that is not rooted in eternal law and natural law." So, when Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat on the bus in Montgomery, Alabama, on Dec. 11, 1955, she made a natural law statement. Legally enforced racial segregation is unjust in light of the natural law and a civil law that mandates it is void.

The idea of natural law is neither a merely sectarian Catholic teaching nor even a Christian invention. Aristotle and Cicero affirmed it. Everything is governed by a natural law according to its own nature. Thus a rock will sink and grass will grow. The natural moral law, which governs human conduct, can be known certainly by reason. The first principle of the practical reason is self-evident, that, in Thomas Aquinas' words, "good is to be done and promoted, and evil is to be avoided." The good is that which is in accord with the nature of the subject, whether a car or a man. It is good to feed gasoline to a car and not good to feed it to a man. It is not good, i.e., it is evil, for a man to steal since theft is contrary to the natural human inclination to live in community.

However, to declare that theft, abortion, etc., is objec-tively wrong is not to judge the subjective culpability of the person who does it. To be morally culpable, one must know it is wrong and yet choose to do it. We generally have neither the right nor the capacity to judge the subjective culpability of anyone. Nevertheless, as Pope John Paul II said in Denver: "Moral truth is objective, and a properly formed conscience can perceive it." St. Thomas described the function of the natural law as the "light of natural reason, whereby we discern what is good and what is evil." The natural law is a rule of reason, promulgated by God in man's nature, whereby man can discern how he should act so as to achieve his end of salvation.

But whose natural law are you going to apply? As Supreme Court Justice James Iredell said in 1798, "The ideas of natural justice are regulated by no fixed standard: the ablest and the purest men have differed upon the subject." If Iredell is right, the natural law is indeterminate and relatively useless as a higher standard for law and a guide for human conduct. Suppose you think abortion, or military service, or whatever, is wrong. But who are you to say? Even if we recognize that there is a natural law, how do we know for sure what it means?

Reason can attain to the truth in moral matters. But if reason were our only guide we would find ourselves in confusion. Our intellects are weakened by original sin and sincere advocates can be found on both sides of most moral issues. Aristotle, who was a fair student himself, sanctioned infanticide. Some Christians in the last century upheld the morality of slavery. Today, people differ on the morality of abortion. They can't both be right. As St. Thomas tells us, "If... we consider one action in the moral order, it is impossible for it to be morally both good and evil."

"It was fitting," wrote St. Thomas, "that the Divine Law should come to man's assistance not only in those things for which reason is insufficient, but also in those things in which human reason may happen to be impeded.... Hence there was need for the authority of the Divine Law to rescue man from both these defects."

Everyone has a pope, in the sense that everyone recognizes an ultimate arbiter on moral questions. If that arbiter is not the real Pope, it will be a pope of the individual's own selection: Ann Landers, CBS News, the Supreme Court, or the individual himself. On the other hand, Christ is God, the Church is his and the Pope is his Vicar on earth. The institution of the papacy is a gift of God, permitting us to be certain that the teachings we follow are God's own truth.

"Everyone can see" said Pope Pius XII in his 1931 encyclical on Christian marriage, "to how many fallacies an avenue would be opened up and how many errors would become mixed with the truth, if it were left solely to the light of reason of each to find it out, or if it were to be discovered by the private interpretation of the truth which is revealed. And if this is applicable to many other truths of the moral order, we must pay attention all the more to those things which appertain to marriage where the inordinate desire for pleasure can attack frail human nature and easily deceive it and lead it astray."

The guidance of the teaching Church is essential if men are to achieve a consistently correct observance of the law written in their nature. The Church, however, is not an academic "superteacher" of natural law. Rather, she incorporates the natural law and especially the teachings of St. Thomas, into her teaching of the truth, who is a person, Christ. And she teaches that truth by the direct authority of that divine person.

In giving this direction, the Church is not merely seeking to persuade. Rather, although she desires that we be convinced of the reasonableness of her position, she is expounding the law. For this reason, when the authentic teaching voice of the Church, whether the Pope or the bishops in union with him, pronounces authoritatively on a matter of natural moral law, the pronouncement's binding force is not limited by the persuasiveness of the arguments advanced.

Professor Rice is on the Law School faculty. His column appears every other Monday.

Columnist finds 'Tarnished Dome' a convenient pretext to grind axe

Dear Editor:

In his column of Sept. 13, Kurt Mills appears to be trying — rather desperately — to reconcile his own deeply seated conflicts about the character of the school whose name will one day appear on his own diploma.

His effort takes the form of rhetorical saturation bombing that indiscriminately targets big-time collegiate football, the press, the Notre Dame student body, football fans and all others who, in his estimation, are not prone to endorse his unstated but sufficiently perceptible conviction that the Looney and Yaeger book, Under the Tarnished Dome, is proper in spirit, if not provable in fact.

Mr. Mills clearly has an axe to grind, and I suspect that this book business represents a convenient and timely pretext to grind away. And grind away he does — in a piece notable mainly for the sluggishness of its argumentation and the lustiness of its barely disguised biases. Typical of the tendentiousness that informs his piece is Mills' bent for suggesting that anyone who reacts negatively to the Yaeger/Looney book has already been infected by the moral virus that, to his way of thinking, must necessarily attend major sports programs. Mr. Mills is resolute in his conviction that "such programs, by their very nature, corrupt the educational mission of the university."

Readers who may have only skimmed Mills' column might want to re-read it and to pay particular attention to the pattern of vocabulary he deploys. There is much to be inferred about him and his position from the semantic choices he makes.

I offer a few especially pertinent and, I think, enlightening instances: 1) his use of the broadest collective modifiers and substantives ("the entire Notre Dame community"; "everybody here"; "critical thinking seems to be sorely lacking among [all] football fans"); 2) his recourse to terms that pulsate with moral and psychic outrage ("recoiled with horror"; "students are aghast"; "disgusting display"; "persecution complex"; "arrogance of the reaction was astounding"; "lily-white"; "blind and unthinking attitude by many fans [fanatics]"; 3) limping attempts at irony ("Lou Holtz — AKA god"); and 4) a tendency to extrapolate in the most outlandish ways (case in point: his assessment of the supposedly deeper signification of the expression "We are ND").

The point is that Mills protesteth too much, and his rare homages to less strident modes of argumentation (end of paragraph five and the "may or may not turn out to be valid" with which he closes), do very little to reconcile the mean-spiritedness that subtends the main of his outburst. What is more, his determination to distance himself from what he perceives to be the dim-witted hoards of sports fans at Notre Dame, gets in the way of the analytical acumen he prizes, promotes, and which he sees as so severely wanting in the institutions (press, University administration, student body, Notre Dame/South Bend community) that he is so quick to indict.

Not once does he entertain the thought that the book itself may be severely flawed — in intent, interview technique and editorial manipulation; nor does he consider that Under the Tarnished Dome was a project designed for one basic purpose: to make money for Messrs. Yaeger, Looney, Simon and Schuster, in which regard the University of Notre Dame is the only viable prey.

Have some, even many, Notre Dame supporters instinctively reacted against criticism of "their" school and team. Doubtless. For them, Notre Dame football has become an ideology and as with virtually all ideologies, there is ample room for misdirected ardor. I believe Mr. Mills has shown that he is no more immune to that brand of ardor than those he so soundly wants to spank.

Chile program promotes service with studies

By ANALISE TAYLOR
Accent Writer

On the west coast of South America lies a newly developed and invigorating academic experience for Notre Dame and Saint Mary's undergraduates: a semester abroad in Santiago, Chile.

The Chile program was added to the foreign study sites offered by the Office of International Studies in March, 1993. This program is similar to those at other cities, yet it also has some significant, intriguing differences.

One of these differences is that students participating in the program will live with Chilean families in Santiago, as opposed to living in a dorm with only other Notre Dame or Saint Mary's students.

Also, students will attend the Catholic University in Santiago, which is also attended by Chilean students.

The net effect of these aspects is that it ensures that a student will become immersed in the culture and society of Chile, according to Father Don McNeill, CSC, director of Latin American Studies.

McNeill was also involved in another special aspect of the program, helping to develop a course entitled, "Approaches to Poverty and Development."

For five credits, students in this optional experiential learning course work with impoverished youth in Santiago, attend seminars to get an understanding of the realities of poverty and development, and take classes about how religion, government and other groups have dealt with poverty and development.

All participants take part in an orientation course of three weeks which includes intensive courses in Spanish conversation, perspectives on Chile and Santiago, and the history, culture, art, and politics of Chile.

"I think the program offers a unique opportunity for students to enroll in courses with Chilean students at one of the best universities in South America [the Catholic University of Chile]," said Claudia Kselman, associate director of the International Study Programs.

The program "also gives our students the opportunity to get involved in social service through our connections with the Holy Cross Fathers in Santiago," added Kselman.

Zahm Hall senior Tomas Fernandez agrees about the merits of the university. "I think the Chile program is the most rigorous and most fruitful because of the Catholic University of Chile," said Fernandez, one of the first participants in the program. "It's one of the top schools in Latin America."

Fernandez also described one of the unique aspects of his learning during his time in the Chile program.

"Chile is in transition from a military government to democracy, so participants will live the transition politically and culturally," he said. "It makes you struggle with the issues yourself."

Going abroad may even answer students' questions about the Catholic faith, added Fernandez. "Chile is explicitly Catholic, and the experience could enrich the students' faith," he said.

The first semester at the Catholic University in Santiago begins in early March and runs to July, with the second semester beginning in early August and ending in December.

The orientation program takes place in the three weeks prior to the first day of classes.

The cost of the program is undetermined, but has been a little less than a semester at Notre Dame, Kselman said, because of its connection with a program offered by the University of Wisconsin and the University of Michigan.

An informational meeting is planned for Sept. 21, at 6:30 p.m. in room 125 of DeBartolo. Deadline for applications is Oct. 15.

Interested students should contact Claudia Kselman at 631-5882, or Father Tim Scully at 631-7052 or 631-6580.

Kinder and (not so) gentler Irish romp

Trio of backs do most of damage in second half

Freshman Randy Kinder seemed to hug every person outside Notre Dame Stadium.

"This was a special game for me," said the East Lansing native, as relatives and friends engulfed him as he exited the locker room.

It was a special game for all the Irish running backs, as they combined for 283 yards rushing leading Notre Dame to a 36-14 win over Michigan State Saturday. Kinder shined the brightest, finishing with 94 yards on 12 carries.

Kinder, Willie Clark and Lee Becton supplied the rushing offense the Irish lacked in its previous two games, allowing Kevin McDougal to become even more effective through the air. The senior quarterback finished 17-23 passing for 185 yards and threw his first touchdown pass of the season.

"We were much better offensively this week," said Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz. "Backs gave us a boost and I thought

Paul Failla is a short yardage quarterback, not to mention a short tempered one.

With just seconds remaining in Notre Dame's 36-14 rout of Michigan State, a flustered Failla called a useless timeout, bringing a chorus of boos from the crowd.

After receiving some animated advice from Irish coach Lou Holtz, Failla returned to the field for the last play.

He knelt down, let time expire and angrily pretended to throw the ball into the crowd.

Calling the timeout was a bad mental lapse, but a forgivable one. What isn't quite so forgivable was Failla's remarkable lack of poise in the face of adversity.

Tight ends finally able to display receiving skills

By JENNY MARTEN
Senior Sports Writer

Irish opponents saw another aspect of the Notre Dame offense on Saturday when Lou Holtz unveiled the tight end pass for the first time.

With a group of three of the more talented tight ends in the country, it had been a mystery to many observers why Notre Dame had yet to utilize one of the more effective weapons from last year.

In 1992, the former starting tight end, Irv Smith, averaged 13.1 yards per catch with 20 receptions for 262 yards while then-junior Oscar McBride had 5 receptions for 29 yards.

While apparently waiting for the quarterbacks to mature on the field, the Irish used senior McBride, sophomore Leon Wallace and sophomore Pete Chryplewicz in purely blocking roles against Northwestern and Michigan, but against Michigan State their responsibilities were increased.

When asked why he finally decided to throw to the tight ends, Holtz quipped, "I got tired of answering the question at the Quarterback Club every week."

He went on to explain that it is never a conscious decision to throw to the tight ends.

"The read takes you where you have to go. There was nothing said that we were going to go to the tight end. We've run the same patterns from all formations and, basically, whoever happens to be in the right place is the guy that is going to get the ball," said Holtz.

After the game, Chryplewicz admitted that it had been a long time since the tight ends have been used as receivers, but was quick to hope for the trend to continue.

"They threw to us five times and none of us dropped it. Hopefully, that's a start," said Chryplewicz.

Irish senior quarterback Kevin McDougal was duly impressed with his tight ends. He threw five passes to them and all five were caught for significant gains prompting McDougal to promise after the game, "If they keep doing that, I'll keep throwing to them."

The first tight end pass of 1993 came on a third down and six situation in the first quarter. McDougal dropped a floater over the line to Wallace who ran to make it an eight yard gain and a first down keeping alive a drive which eventually resulted in a touchdown.

The play was equally effective with 1:04 remaining in the first half when McDougal used Chryplewicz three times en route to a quick Irish touchdown.

During the 49-yard march, Chryplewicz picked up six, 18 and 10-yard gains. On the two long gains, the sophomore from Sterling Heights, Michigan displayed his bulldozer-like rushing style which sent defenders reeling.

Holtz was pleased with his young tight ends.

"Chryplewicz and Leon Wallace have been playing a lot of tight end because Oscar McBride had a bad ankle," said Holtz. "I thought Chryplewicz played well. From what I saw I thought he caught the ball well."

McBride got his slice of the tight end pass pie in the fourth quarter when junior quarterback Paul Failla found him open in the middle for a nine yard gain.

Because of the injury hampering McBride, the entire tight end corps has seen significant time on the field. Although Holtz is quick to praise the group, he is not ready to make any special changes in the depth chart or in the play calling.

"They performed very well against Michigan. We played all three of them today. We'll have to look at the film and see where we go from there," concluded Holtz.

Kevin McDougal performed well."

For the second week in a row the turning point in the game came on Notre Dame's final drive of the first half. Taking over near midfield with 1:04 left in the period, McDougal hit tight end Peter Chryplewicz with passes of six and 18 yards.

After an 11 yard completion to Mike Miller, McDougal hit Chryplewicz for ten more yards to the four-yard line. On the next play, fullback Ray Zellars found a seam across the middle and McDougal hit him for the first passing touchdown of the season for the Irish, and boosted Notre Dame's lead to 16-7.

"Those drives right before half, we just have a way of getting it in there," said Holtz. "We don't do anything special or different. We just walk and sloop around and end up there."

Notre Dame owned the second half.

All-Big Ten tailback Craig Thomas was held to only four yards in the second half after gaining 56 in the first thirty-minutes of play.

The Irish offense scored on two Kevin Pendergast field goals and on a one-yard run by freshman fullback Marc Edwards. A twelve yard touchdown pass from McDougal to tailback Lee Becton in the fourth quarter concluded the scoring.

Notre Dame's defense looked impressive against the run and pass, lapsing only on the opening drive and the final series of the game.

The Spartans were able to march 74 yards on 14 plays on their first possession, taking a 7-0 lead on Thomas' one-yard plunge. Their offense fell silent from there, until Mill Coleman caught a 5-yard pass from Jim Miller with 14 seconds left.

"I thought after the first drive and the last drive, we played good on defense," said Holtz. "We couldn't have communicated better."

The Irish defense also adjusted to a confusing tight end motion that the Spartans were using, one they hadn't shown this season but used against Notre Dame last year.

"It took us a drive or two to realize what they were doing, but after that we were able to adjust," said linebacker Pete Bercich.

The convincing win went against the prediction that Notre Dame would suffer a letdown after last Saturday's upset win over Michigan.

"We've been through that kind of thing before, and we wouldn't let it (a letdown) happen," said Bercich.

pant to display a tremendous amount of composure.

Failla doesn't appear to have it.

When the fans expressed their displeasure with him Saturday, his classless postgame display made him look more like a whiner than a winner.

Yet somehow he remains a part of the offensive game plan.

"I felt Paul was our short yardage quarterback this week," Holtz said, explaining why he twice inserted Failla after starting quarterback Kevin McDougal had led the Irish inside the Michigan State ten yard-line.

"I didn't mind as long as we got in," McDougal said.

It is really nothing more than a slap in the face to take a quarterback out after he has directed a long drive and give his backup the opportunity to score.

"You're good enough to get us this far," Holtz seemed to be saying, "but you're not good enough to take us all the way."

With Failla nursing a sore thumb, McDougal was good enough to take Notre Dame all the way to one of its biggest upsets in years last week against Michigan.

It wasn't enough.

Against Michigan State, McDougal completed 17 of 23 passes for 185 yards and two touchdowns.

It wasn't enough.

He is securely rooted in the starting position, but Failla's shadow still hounds him, adding extra pressure to every play.

The battle for the starting job began in the spring, when Holtz named McDougal his No. 1 quarterback and Failla No. 1-A.

Both were overshadowed by Freshman Messiah Ron Powlus when fall practice began, but his broken collarbone thrust the co-quarterback back into the spotlight.

Through it all, McDougal has been the ultimate team player, saying over and over again that the quarterback who gives the team the best chance to win should be on the field.

That's McDougal.

Holtz asks for depth and he gets it

By GEORGE DOHRMANN
Sports Editor

Ask and you shall receive.
Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz has been desperately searching for depth at the running back spots. After Saturday's win, he got what he was looking for.

Eight different backs carried the ball, and the result was the best rushing performance of the season. Freshman Randy Kinder and former free safety Willie Clark turned in stellar performances in a rotation with starting tailback Lee Becton.

The trio finished 1-2-3 in rushing, Kinder leading the way with 94 yards and Becton ripping off a 40-yard streak for the game's longest play from scrimmage.

"They are all different kinds of runners," said Holtz. "They all bring something to the offense."

Saturday each runner showed they can add more to the offense than just depth.

Clark, who has flip-flopped between free safety and tailback since arriving in South Bend, may be the quickest and most elusive of the Irish but has failed to earn substantial time at tailback during his career.

Saturday he finished with 37 yards on seven carries, caught an eight yard pass and also had a 30-yard scamper called back after a holding penalty.

"It was good to get out there and get some carries," said Clark. "I see myself as both a tailback and a safety, and today I was a tailback. Whatever the team needs me to do."

Kinder didn't find his way into the endzone, but set up three of Notre Dame's scores with his breakaway speed. He hits the hole faster than the other two backs and is more of a powerful runner.

It was the first game that the freshman back showed the fluid running style that made him one of the nation's top high school players in 1992.

"The coaches stressed protecting the ball and I think I was worried so much about that I didn't just run naturally," said Kinder. "I gained my confidence as the game went on and I felt like I made some steps today towards becoming a good back."

Kinder also had the motivation. Michigan State was his hometown team and he was ridiculed for not staying close to him after graduating from high school.

"This was a very special game for me," he said. "It was me against those green and white jerseys."

Becton remained steady, casually waiting for the blocks to form and taking what the defense gave him, which amounted to 76 yards on only ten carries. He is still the starter, but for now the three man rotation seems to be the way the Irish will lean in the remaining games.

"The competition is good, it makes all of us work harder," said Becton. "It keeps the backs fresh. That type of rotation is really effective."

Lost among the performance of the three tailbacks was a solid performance by fullback Ray Zellars and the first career touchdowns by freshman Robert Farmer and Marc Edwards.

Farmer, who along with Kinder was slated as the Irish tailback of the future, carried only four times but amassed 16 yards. Edwards only got two carries, one being his one-yard touchdown.

Zellars and Farmer combined with the top three tailbacks to give Notre Dame its best yards per carry average of the season. None of the five averaged less than four yards per carry. Becton and Zellars also had a hand in the passing game, with Zellars adding a touchdown grab and Becton in on three pass receptions.

"Coach Holtz told all the backs that we were going to get a lot of work," said Kinder. "We all seemed to do well and the line did a tremendous job blocking."

The success of the younger backs may come at the expense of playing time for Zellars and Becton but neither seems to mind.

"It is our job to inform them of what they are going to face each week," said Zellars. "Things happen as the season goes on which the younger players are not used too. It is our job to make sure the understand what they are going to face."

Appalachia offers "experiential learning"

By MATT CARBONE
Accent Writer

For thousands of miles along the Eastern seaboard, the Appalachian Mountains stretch majestically, an enduring testament to the beauty of the United States.

Nearby, in the strikingly impoverished rural towns lying within the shadows of these breathtaking peaks, there is another, more disturbing testament being made about our country, a testament to the disparities between the rich and the poor, between the beauty and the ugliness of the United States.

The Appalachia Seminar, run annually by the Center for Social Concerns every fall and spring break, tries to teach Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students about these disparities.

It does this by sending approximately 120 students each break to various states within the Appalachia region, where they participate in various activities within the community, including home repair, clothing and food distribution, farming and children's day care.

According to the Seminar Learning Agreement which accompanies the application form, the goal of the Appalachia Seminar is "to introduce the student to the culture and social issues of the Appalachia region through experiential learning."

This "experiential learning" comes in the form of students performing physical labor for the community, and in discussions with members of the community and others working at the site.

With 127 spots available and around 180 applications received each year, some students must be turned away each year due to space constraints, according to graduate student Ilene Stanford, Appalachia Seminar coordinator.

But, she added, if a student was turned down once due to a lack of positions, it is almost certain that that student will be accepted for a future seminar.

Upon acceptance into the seminar, students will attend

—Ilene Stanford

two two-hour orientation seminars at the CSC, where students will be given background information about "what issues they will face and the culture they're going into," said Stanford.

This October break, the 127 accepted students will travel to 11 different sites in Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee and Mississippi.

Among the sites is a four-acre farm in Peace Place, KY. The farm is run by two Franciscan sisters, and aims to care for abused children who have been taken from their families; two to eight children live at the farm throughout the year.

Students at this site will help in the maintenance of the farm and its buildings, as well as with a clothing distribution center run by the Sisters.

Tara Hardin, a senior living in Siegfried Hall, became interested in the seminar after a friend of hers participated during one break and had a "terrific time."

Hardin applied to participate in the seminar during the upcoming break, and chose Peace Place as one of her preferred sites.

"I thought it would be a good chance to help people," said Hardin. "I wanted something that involved kids, because I work with children in Head Start now, and I really enjoy that."

A pre-med major, Tomsik chose this site because "I decided that public medicine and public health was something I was interested in. I had thought about working in a rural area [after graduation], and I really learned a lot about rural medicine."

De Porres Delta Ministries, located in Mississippi, is a first-time seminar site where students will look critically at racism while simultaneously working on housing repair projects.

Students at this site will be working in a town where train tracks separate the black and white sections of town, and will, according to the Seminar Learning Agreement, be able to view the "long term effects of systematic racism in housing, economic, and religious arenas."

Along with witnessing such eye-opening facts about the U.S., students will also receive one credit in theology upon completion of the Seminar.

For each student, completion entails the writing of a short reflection paper about their experiences, and the attendance of a two-hour follow-up class.

"The purpose of this class is to give students an opportunity to talk about the things in the culture which they learned about, didn't know about, or were surprised about," said

Stanford, "and to help the student get as much out of the seminar as possible."

To participate in the seminar, students must fill out a form (available at the CSC) where they list their prior social concerns/service experiences, what they want to contribute to the seminar and what they hope to learn from the seminar.

Applications for the seminar are due at the CSC on Tuesday, September 21, and are available at the CSC. Saint Mary's students have to pre-register at the SMC Registrar's Office prior to turning in the application form.

The seminar costs $90, with all money going toward transportation to the site, housing and materials at the site, and other operating costs of the seminar.

There is a $40 registration fee (refunded to those not accepted) due with the application, with scholarships available to those who cannot afford the seminar fee. Ilene Stanford can be contacted at 631-9473 for any questions.

CSC helps seniors reflect on four years

By BEVIN KOVALIK
Accent Writer

These are the best four years of our lives. However, most of us won't appreciate a good thing until it's gone, and senior year is so chaotic most students don't have the chance to reflect on life and discuss their fear of the future.

The Center For Social Concerns (CSC), however, realizes the hectic pace of senior year.

Through its Senior Rap-up program, nostalgic seniors have the opportunity to discuss their Notre Dame experience with a small group of fellow Domers and ponder the post-graduation challenges which lie ahead.

Mary Ann Roemer, coordinator of Senior Volunteer Programs for the CSC, began the Senior Rap-up groups nine years ago after she encountered seniors during her post-graduate volunteer work who seemed sad to be ending their college years and entering the "real" world.

"I saw many seniors near graduation and have lots of nostalgia about leaving Notre Dame and their friends," Roemer said.

What began as a small discussion over a meal in her house blossomed into the current Senior Rap-up sessions, where seniors discuss such issues as career anxiety, politics and religion.

Last year, approximately 160 seniors participated in the Rap-ups, which met in groups comprised of six men and six women; the groups gathered together six times during their senior year at the home of a staff or faculty host.

The role of the students is to plan the entire meeting, including preparing the meal and leading the discussion. "The students own the group," said Roemer.

The primary responsibility of the faculty hosts is "to try to keep the night interesting and provide the seniors with a relaxed atmosphere which allows students to get out of the classroom," she explained.

Some former participants in the Senior Rap-up highly recommend the experience. "The friendship aspect is really rewarding, but these groups are something deeper than simply meeting on a friendship level," said Chris Ford, a 1993 graduate and participant.

"I got to see the direction other people were going and I could talk with my peers and see if other people felt like I felt," Ford added.

Some suggested topics for this year include: Would you come to Notre Dame or Saint Mary's if you could do it all over again? Do you perceive your family life differently since you came to college?; How has your religious life changed?; and What are your future plans and what about marriage?

Senior Rap-ups also give seniors a chance to relax from their hectic life as they tie up loose ends and apply for jobs.

These groups are great because sometimes we don't have the opportunity to talk as much about how to live life and generally be good people," Roemer said.

All seniors, no matter how confident they may seem on the outside, have fears of getting out into the world on their own and finding a job.

"It was comforting to see everyone moving in different directions," Ford said. "I realized that we all need to find our own niche and not just follow what everyone else is doing."

With commitment and genuine enthusiasm, "these discussion groups are mutually good for both the hosts and the students," Roemer added.

Saint Mary's soccer outlasts Rockford, 3-1

By CHERYL GILLILAND
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's soccer team captured a 3-1 victory at Rockford College on Thursday, overcoming a tiring bus ride and slow field conditions to post their second win in their first three games.

"It was a tough game after the long bus ride," said Senior captain Mandy Eiler. "The field had high grass so the game was a lot slower than usual." Tom Van Meter

Senior Megan Dalsaso knocked in the Belles' first goal twenty minutes into the game with an assist from Maura Sullivan.

Rockford scored unexpectedly on the Belles six minutes later, tying the game at one.

"We were pretty lethargic at the beginning of the game," commented Coach Tom Van Meter. "We know we didn't play as well as we could have."

The Belles came back with full force the second half. Dalsaso scored again to begin the half with an unassisted goal.

"We really dominated the second half," said Van Meter. "Rockford wasn't able to get a shot off on us."

"Rockford's goal was really unexpected, but we were able to pull out of it during the second half," added Eiler.

With four minutes left in the game, freshman Brigid Keyes scored with an assist from freshman Lisa Nichols.

"We played well once we got ourselves together after the long bus ride," said Nichols. "I feel that we've worked well together as a team given that we've only been working together for the three weeks that we've been here."

Eiler also feels that the team has come together well. "We played well despite a rough start. Our defense was better, but we're still working on it."

Braves pound lowly Mets to stay in control of West

Associated Press

ATLANTA Tom Glavine became the first National League pitcher in more than 20 years to win 20 games in three consecutive seasons and the Atlanta Braves battered the New York Mets 11-2 to maintain their NL West lead at three games over the San Francisco Giants.

The Braves, winners of five of six games on this home stand, are 31-7 since Aug. 8, when they were 8 1/2 games behind the Giants.

Glavine (20-5), the NL's first 20-game winner this season, went six innings, allowing nine hits, two runs, walking one and striking out four. Ferguson Jenkins was the last NL pitcher to win 20 games at least three years in a row, doing it six straight (1967-72).

Expos 6, Phillies 5

MONTREAL

The Montreal Expos, down to their last at-bat against Philadelphia, got a two-out, two-run single from Wil Cordero in the ninth inning to rally past the Phillies Sunday and keep the NL East race close.

Cordero's bases-loaded hit off Mitch Williams (3-6) moved Montreal back within four games of the first-place Phillies.

A loss would've dropped the Expos six games back with only 13 left in the season, but they were helped by a key error in the ninth. Montreal has won 22 of its last 26 games.

Giants 7, Reds 3

CINCINNATI

Matt Williams hit two more homers, giving him 10 in his last 15 games, and drove in five runs as the San Francisco Giants completed a sweep of Cincinnati. The Reds lost their ninth in a row.

San Francisco arrived at Riverfront Stadium with an eight-game losing streak that ended its 123-day stay in first place and let Atlanta take a four-game lead. The Giants outscored the Reds 26-4 to end the slide and start making up ground.

Marlins 2, Cubs 1

CHICAGO

Chris Hammond allowed four hits in 7 2-3 innings and drove in a run with a squeeze bunt, leading the Florida Marlins over Chicago.

Hammond (11-11), who had lost seven straight decisions since July 2, struck out four and walked three. Bryan Harvey struck out the side in the ninth for his 45th save in 48 chances.

Steve Trachsel lost in his major league debut, allowing two runs and four hits in seven innings with five strikeouts and one walk. Jeff Conine hit his 11th homer in the first inning for the Marlins.

Blue Jays 10, Twins 0

MINNEAPOLIS

Toronto won its eighth consecutive game and opened a four-game lead in the AL East as Juan Guzman scattered eight hits over eight innings

Sunday, leading the Blue Jays over the Minnesota Twins.

Toronto, which had a team-record nine doubles by eight players, has its largest lead this season and a five-game advantage in the loss column with 13 games to go.

The winning streak is the longest of the season for the Blue Jays.

Red Sox 8, Yankees 3

NEW YORK

Frank Tanana, 7-16 overall this season, allowed eight hits and four runs in seven innings but New York made three errors and dropped four games behind division-leading Toronto with 12 games to go.

Danny Darwin (15-11) gave up three hits and one run in six innings. John Valentin had three hits and drove in four runs for Boston with an RBI double in the second, a two-run homer in the fifth that put the Red Sox ahead 4-1, and a run-scoring single in a four-run eighth.

White Sox 3, Athletics 1

OAKLAND, Calif.

Robin Ventura's two-run homer off Dennis Eckersley in the ninth gave the AL West leaders their 14th victory in 21 games.

Frank Thomas opened the ninth with a single off Eckersley (2-4) and Ventura followed with his 22nd home run.

Scott Radinsky (7-2) won in relief of Tim Belcher, and Roberto Hernandez got three outs for his 35th save.

Tom Glavine won his 20th game of the year last night for the NL West-leading Atlanta Braves.

WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 20, 1993

WOMEN'S RESOURCE CENTER PROPOSED

The Women's Resource Committee has joined forces with Student Government to support and supervise the establishment of a Women's Resource Center on campus. While awaiting administrative approval of the Center, the Committee will conduct its activities out of the Student Government conference room.

With the increasing representation of women on campus, student interest in issues such as rape, harassment, male/female communication, safety, eating disorders, and career guidance has grown rapidly. A Women's Resource Center would provide a place for all members of the ND community to find information related to these issues.

The Center would include a library of information on various gender-related issues, meeting rooms for women's groups and a support center for victims of rape, sexual harassment, and eating disorders. It would promote and encourage research related to gender issues, and, most importantly, the Center would provide much-needed space for women and concerned others to find support and understanding.

JOIN "FLOOD RELIEF '93"

Student Government, in cooperation with several other campus organizations, is offering ND students an opportunity to lend a hand to flood victims in the Midwest. Applications are now being accepted for a fall break trip to St. Louis, where students will help local residents clean up from the results of this summer's devastating floods.

ND HELPS CHARITY

In an effort to show ND's support for social concerns, Student Government and Rev. William Beauchamp have organized a campus-wide collection for United Way. Money was collected at the MSU game this past weekend, and donations will be accepted at dorm masses. The mission of United Way mirrors ND's commitment to others, so please be generous.

Applications are available in the Student Government Office. Completed applications must be returned by 5 p.m. on Sept. 20. The trip should provide a terrific opportunity for service to a community in need.

The trip is co-sponsored by Student Government, C.I.L.A., The CSC, the Alumni Association, and Campus Ministry.

STICKERS PROVIDE PHONE INFO

Student Government will soon be distributing stickers to Notre Dame students which list crucial security phone numbers on campus.

The stickers will be placed on each campus phone, and will provide students with quick access to such numbers as campus security, the Notre Dame Fire Department, and Safewalk. In the event of an emergency, the numbers will be easy to locate, and precious time will be saved.

The stickers will be available through each hall president and in the Student Government Office.

Browns' comeback victory highlight of NFL action

By BARRY WILNER
Associated Press

Yo, Vinny, way to go. You too, Eric.

The Cleveland Browns, stymied most of the game, turned to backup quarterback Vinny Testaverde on Sunday. Testaverde turned their game around, replacing Bernie Kosar and leading the Browns from a 13-0 hole to a 19-16 victory over the Los Angeles Raiders.

"Bernie is our starting quarterback," Browns coach Bill Belichick said. "He had a little problem with protection. Vinny, on the other hand, scrambles around a little bit. That's what we brought him here for. He stepped up and did a great job for us today."

Testaverde got plenty of help from Eric Metcalf, who returned a free kick 37 yards, then scored on a 1-yard run with 2 seconds remaining. The Browns had no timeouts when they called for the run, and Metcalf swept in untouched.

"I felt good about it when they called the last play. I was a little surprised that no one touched me," Metcalf said. "This was a confidence-builder. We know now we are never out, we can come back."

Kosar was lifted after struggling to an 8-for-17 performance for 71 yards. Testaverde finished 10-for-22 for 159 yards and guided the Browns on a 90-yard drive to make it 16-10.

Raiders punter Jeff Goosett took an intentional safety, then Metcalf had his big return to the Los Angeles 45. Eight plays later, Cleveland won it.

Eight teams had byes this week — Miami, Buffalo, the New York Jets, Indianapolis, Chicago, Tampa Bay, Green Bay and Minnesota.

Seahawks 17, Patriots 14

At Foxboro, Mass., the Seahawks prevailed in a game between the top two picks in the NFL draft — Rick Mirer of Seattle and Drew Bledsoe of New England.

Mirer, the No. 2 choice, was 12-for-16 for 117 yards and one touchdown before leaving with blurred vision in the third quarter. Bledsoe, the no. 1 choice, was 20-for-44 for 240 yards and a score, but was intercepted twice.

"It's not fair to call it (a personal duel) because everyone out there played hard," Mirer said. "I thought Drew played fine. I played all right, but the game is not just two guys."

The Seahawks, up 17-0 early in the fourth quarter, received 174 yards rushing and one touchdown from Chris Warren. Seattle won when rookie Scott Scisson's 54-yard field goal attempt bounced off the crossbar with 30 seconds left.

Cowboys 17, Cardinals 10

At Phoenix, Emmitt Smith came back from his long contract holdout and helped the champions to their first victory after two defeats. But it was Smith's replacement, rookie Derrick Lassic, who scored both touchdowns.

Smith finished with 45 yards on eight carries in less than one half of action. Lassic had 60 in 14 carries and Troy Aikman was 21-for-27 for 281 yards. His favorite target was Alvin Harper with six receptions for 136 yards.

The Cardinals (1-2) were held to 68 yards rushing.

Chargers 18, Oilers 17

At San Diego, John Carney set the NFL record for consecutive field goals at 29 with six against Houston, the final one for 27 yards with three seconds remaining. The Chargers are 2-1 and Carney scored all the points in both victories.

The Chargers intercepted Warren Moon four times, with Junior Seau getting two. Moon was lifted late in the game, as was San Diego's starting QB, Stan Humphries.

After Houston backup Cody Carlson directed the Oilers on a 53-yard drive to Al Del Greco's 27-yard field goal for a 17-15 lead, San Diego backup John Friesz moved the Chargers 75 yards before Carney's winning kick.

"I was hoping we'd score a touchdown and I'd only have to kick the extra point," Carney said. "But we moved it down and got it close. That made it nice for me."

49ers 37, Falcons 30

At San Francisco, Steve Young caught his own deflected pass to set up Ricky Watters' 2-yard TD run, and the 49ers (2-1) handed the Falcons their third straight defeat.

Young threw for three TDs, Jerry Rice ran 43 yards on a reverse for a score and Watters rushed for 112 yards.

The 49ers withstood 192 yards rushing by Erric Pegram, starting for the injured Eric Dickerson. No one has ever rushed for more yards against the 49ers. Bobby Hebert added three scoring passes to Andre Rison for Atlanta.

Eagles 34, Redskins 31

At Philadelphia, Randall Cunningham threw his third touchdown pass with four seconds left as the Eagles rallied from a 21-10 deficit. All three TD tosses were to Calvin Williams, who caught eight passes for 181 yards. His leaping 10-yard reception lifted the Eagles to their third straight victory.

"I just saw the two safeties, caught Randall's eye and he picked me up," Williams said of his winning catch. "We've been doing this for four years now and we're really relaxed in this situation."

Washington's Cary Conklin, filling in for injured Mark Rypien, also threw for three touchdowns. Washington (1-2) got 154 yards rushing from rookie Reggie Brooks, including an 85-yard TD run.

Saints 14, Lions 3

At New Orleans, the defense is no longer resting for the Saints. New Orleans (3-0) ranked an unusually low 26th on defense heading into the game. But Renaldo Turnbull had three sacks, Rickey Jackson recovered two fumbles and the Saints held Detroit (2-1) to 165 yards. Saints rookie Derek Brown rushed for 121 yards on 25 carries.

Former Saints linebacker Pat Swilling, traded to the Lions last April, played despite the death of his father Saturday. Swilling had only two tackles and jumped offside three times.

Courtesy of Notre Dame Sports Information

Former Irish star Reggie Brooks had an 85-yard run in the Washington Redskins' 37-34 loss to the Philadelphia Eagles yesterday.

Steelers 34, Bengals 7

At Pittsburgh, Neil O'Donnell threw for three touchdowns despite a sore arm and Barry Foster rushed for 103 yards. O'Donnell found Ernie Mills, Yancey Thigpen and Dwight Stone for TDs and was 21-for-25 for 189 yards and no interceptions. The Steelers (1-2) had just one touchdown in their first two games.

Cincinnati (0-3) lost its fifth in a row to Pittsburgh. After going 11-for-12 for 98 yards and a touchdown, David Klingler could not get the Bengals moving in the second half.

FOR EACH DAY FROM 8/30/93 THROUGH 9/28/93 (30 DAYS), 1-800-COLLECT WILL GIVE AWAY A GRAND PRIZE OF $5,000.1. TO ENTER BY MAKING A 1-800-COLLECT CALL: Each time you make a 1-800-COLLECT domestic telephone call (within the U.S. and Puerto Rico) during the promotion period indicated, and the collect calling charges are accepted, you and the individual or company whose name appears on the telephone bill for the number called (hereinafter referred to as Call Recipient) are eligible to be randomly selected as potential winners to share a daily prize of $5,000. Calling day is 12:00 midnight EDT up to the following 12:00 midnight EDT. 2. NO PURCHASE OR TELEPHONE CALL NECESSARY. TO ENTER BY MAIL, hand print your name, address, zip code and daytime telephone number on a plain piece of 3" x 5" paper and mail in a hand-addressed 4 1/8" x 9 1/2" (#10) envelope, with first class postage affixed, to: 1-800-COLLECT Giveaway, P.O. Box 4396, Blair, NE 68009. IMPORTANT: ON LOWER LEFT HAND CORNER OF MAILING ENVELOPE, YOU MUST PRINT THE SPECIFIC DATE OF THE PRIZE GIVEAWAY (FROM 8/30 THROUGH 9/28/93) FOR WHICH YOUR ENTRY IS DESIGNATED. Enter as many times as you wish for as many days as you wish, but each entry must be mailed separately. No mechanically reproduced entries permitted. Entries must be received by 5 business days after prize giveaway date indicated on your mailing envelope to be eligible for that daily prize. 3. SELECTION OF WINNERS: Each daily winner will be randomly selected from among all eligible 1-800-COLLECT telephone call entries and all eligible mail-in entries received for that day's giveaway. Random selection will take place 6 days after the specific prize giveaway date. Odds of winning a prize will depend on the number of eligible 1-800-COLLECT telephone calls completed each day and the time of day the call was made, and on the number of mail-in entries designated for each day's prize award. Odds will vary each day of the promotion based on the above factors. Odds of winning via mail-in entry will be as good as odds of winning via telephone entry. 4. PRIZES: 1 Grand Prize per day of $5,000, divided equally between Caller and Call Recipient. Call Recipient portion of the prize will be awarded to the individual or company whose name appears on the telephone bill for the telephone number called. If potential winner has entered via mail, he/she subsequently will be required to give name, address and telephone number of individual with whom he/she wishes to share prize equally. 5. GENERAL RULES: To be eligible, callers/mail-in entrants must be 16 years or older as of 8/30/93. Sponsor's employees directly involved in the planning and implementation of this promotion and employees of its advertising and promotion agencies, and their immediate family members and/or those living in same household of each are not eligible for any prize, either as an entrant or designated recipient. If either potential winner of a daily prize is not eligible, per the above, that entire $5,000 prize will not be awarded. Void where prohibited by law. No substitution or transfer of prize permitted. All federal, state and local taxes are the sole responsibility of winner. All federal, state and local laws and regulations apply. Not responsible for malfunctioning or breakdown of telephone systems, for faulty telephone transmission or for lost, late or mis-directed entries. In the event that technical difficulties prevent selection of a winner for any daily prize of the promotion, that prize will be awarded on the following day. Random selection of winners will be under the supervision of D.L. Blair, Inc., an independent judging organization whose decisions are final. By participating in this promotion, entrants agree to be bound by the Official Rules and decisions of the judges. COMPLETE rules are subject to any requirements or limitations that may be imposed by the Federal Communications Commission.

son and ended a two-game win streak.

Prado, who had just been inserted into the lineup, scored the only goal of the second half off a Chris Mathis pass to provide the winning goal for the Irish.

Michigan State came out with a lot of enthusiasm in the first half, shocking the Irish at the 6:26 mark when midfielder Andrew Roff drilled a 20-yard shot into the right corner of the net past a diving Bert Bader. Notre Dame tied the game at one off a penalty kick from Bill Lanza at the 22:44 mark in the first half.

The tie did not last for long, however. The Spartans responded at the 30:27 mark, when Sean Nemnich scored off a Jon Petoskey cross pass, making the score 2-1.

"We we're attacking well in the first half, but we left ourselves vulnerable to their counter-attack," said Berticelli Friday night. The Irish found themselves facing many three-on-two disadvantages in their own zone following stifled scoring attacks in the first half.

The Spartans could not hold the lead until halftime, however, as Notre Dame scored with 1:34 remaining. Junior Tim Oates capitalized on a dropped ball by Michigan State goalie Curtis Payment, scoring on an open net to even the score at 2-2.

Despite their offensive display in the first half, the Spartans could not muster up any other scoring chances throughout the rest of the game, as they were completely dominated by the Irish in the second half.

"It was the same game in the second half," continued Berticelli. "But the adjustments we made defensively in the second half is what gave us the edge."

The Irish held Michigan State to only four shots in the second half, while gathering thirteen shots on goal offensively.

Notre Dame's next game will be Friday night at Alumni Field, when they host rival and top-20 power Indiana.

Yankees' fans impact game in an altogether new way

By JIM DONAGHY

Associated Press

NEW YORK

The Yankees called it destiny. The Red Sox said it was a darned shame. What it was, was one of the most incredible finishes to a baseball game ever.

Players, fans and security guards were still buzzing about it Sunday, one day after a 13-year-old boy ran onto the field and saved the Yankees' pennant hopes.

Pinch-hitter Mike Stanley had just hit what appeared to be an easy, game-ending fly ball to left field, giving Boston a 3-1 victory.

But third base umpire Tim Welke was waving his arms wildly, indicating a timeout just as pitcher Greg Harris was making his delivery. After a brief argument by manager Butch Hobson, the game resumed, and the Yankees scored three runs for a 4-3 victory, keeping them three games back of Toronto on the AL East.

"A lot has happened this year to make me feel we might win it all," Stanley said. "It seems to be some sort of destiny that we win this division."

Police wouldn't identify the fan because of his age, but they said he was was part of a church group from upstate New York and that he cried before he was released.

The boy jumped over a short fence on the third-base side and started running toward second base where he was tackled by security guards.

"He was frightened," said one police officer. "I don't think he even noticed the Yankees won."

In the first three games of the four-game series, 13 people ran on the field. The stadium security force, one of the largest in baseball, said it was considering deploying more guards around the first row of box seats, but officials said Sunday it's virtually impossible to stop a rowdy fan who wants a moment of glory.

It was the second time this season that the Yankees have won at home because of fan interference. On Aug. 15, a 16-year-old boy reached over the right-field fence to catch a ball hit by Don Mattingly for a game-winning home run.

its side.

"This was our first challenge," Guerrero added. "I think this means we are capable of beating above average teams as well as average teams. We just have to keep playing hard and working as a team."

"The defense did a great job," said freshman goalkeeper Jen Renola, who made several outstanding saves in the second half and finished her second complete shutout. "I really didn't do too much."

The victory was important to the Irish not only due to who they beat but also because it was the culmination of the first weekend in which they played to their full potential.

The team has coasted past its opponents this season without encountering any serious road blocks, yet every game it played seemed to be marred by occasional lapses in intensity.

Irish head coach Chris Petrucelli became so incensed by this fact at practice last Thursday night that he disbanded the team an hour early. He told his players not to return unless they were ready to play with the desire and the drive that were missing.

The squad responded to the charge by trouncing rival Michigan State Friday night, 6-0.

The Irish exploded in the first half with five goals, four which came in the first twenty minutes. Daws led Notre Dame with an amazing two goal and three assist performance.

"We played with our hearts, and with one hundred percent intensity," said Daws, who leads the team in scoring with 17 points. "I think every body just played to the fullest and gave everything they had."

Guerrero played phenomenally as well, scoring two goals

Ohio State rips Pittsburgh for third win

By ALAN ROBINSON

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH

John Cooper returned to the scene of one of his worst losses at Ohio State and was welcomed by ... one of the worst teams in Pitt history.

At least he wasn't greeted by hostile fans, like he was in 1988 when the Buckeyes were embarrassed 42-10 by Pitt in his second game as Ohio State's coach. Some of the Buckeye fans who watched that rout yelled obscenities and pounded angrily on his locker room door, suggesting Cooper was no Woody Hayes or Earle Bruce.

Funny how times, and teams, have changed.

Now, No. 7 Ohio State is a big-time power again, a legitimate Top 10 team with speed — and talent and depth — to burn. And Pitt is a punching-bag shell of its former Top 10 self, a defensive doormat that other teams use to pad their statistics and their egos.

"We don't have any players left from that team, so we didn't talk about that game," Cooper said after the Buckeyes' 63-28 romp Saturday. "What's the difference between now and 1988? We were inept that day as (Pitt) was today. It was the exact opposite of 1988."

And for Pitt coach Johnny Majors, it's almost an exact duplicate of the full-scale rebuilding job he mounted upon inheriting a 1-10 Pitt team in 1973.

The only difference is that liberal recruiting rules then allowed him to bring in dozens of new players immediately. Now, he must play mostly with the talent — or lack thereof — he inherited from former coach Paul Hackett.

Hackett certainly didn't do him any favors, and neither did former athletic director Ed Bozik, who left behind a Top 10-loaded schedule that makes it almost impossible for a talent-thin team to win. Or even compete.

"I want to be here when Pitt football comes back," linebacker Tom Tumulty said after Pitt allowed 63 points for the second straight week. "I can't wait to be a Top 10 team again."

Volleyball coasts through Shamrock Invitational

By TIMOTHY SEYMOUR
Sports Writer

Domination is an overused modifier most times, but there are those instances when it becomes unavoidable.

This weekend's Shamrock Invitational volleyball tournament was a classic example, as the 16th ranked Notre Dame squad took it to each of its opponents, dropping only one game en route to the championship.

Behind a Janelle Karlan blistering attack that racked up 96 kills, the Irish breezed past Cal State Northridge 15-4, 15-9, 15-10, and then rocked William and Mary 15-6, 15-5, 15-12. After a brief lapse in the opening game, the Irish regained their composure and dropped 23rd ranked New Mexico 11-15, 15-2, 15-7, 16-14, in the finale.

"Overall, I feel that we played fairly consistently throughout the weekend. We were able to play everyone on the roster, and we showed great perseverance in the match against New Mexico," remarked Irish head coach Debbie Brown, whose team improved to 8-2 after the tournament.

The New Mexico match was the one Notre Dame was most concerned with entering the tournament, and for awhile their fears seemed to be warranted. The Lobos confidently came out and took the first game, confounding the Irish with a series of difficult short serves and finesse tips over the net.

"Their short serves really got us out of our rhythm, and we didn't respond well to the soft shots," noted Brown. "However, we made a good adjustment to that, and tried not to give them the chance to string points together."

The effect of the adjustment was immediate, as the scrambling Irish defense seemed to be everywhere on the floor in game two, closing down on the openings that had been so prevalent in the first game. Spectacular digs by Nicole Coates and Janelle Karlan, as well as the blocking of Julie Harris and Molly Stark, set the tone as Notre Dame's athleticism started to take control.

"We started off back on our heels," stated Brown. "But our defense really got better. To play that kind of defense, you have to practice that kind of defense, and we work very hard on that. It takes all-out effort, and I think we gave that."

As the defense turned around, the offense took command, embodied in the spectacular outside hitting of Coates and Christy Peters. In a display of sheer power volleyball, these two took over the match, hitting Karlan's sets through blockers and down the lines, completely turning the tempo of the match.

Peters, who was deservedly selected the tournament's most valuable player, time and again went up against two Lobo blockers and drilled home a kill, providing the spark the team needed.

"We tried to focus on getting into the game. After we turned up the intensity, everyone got more involved," stated Peters, whose offensive dominance was a gateway to her teammates involvement.

As she and Coates were pounding home kills on the outside, Molly Stark established the inside game with a number of kills off the quickset, and Jenny Birkner got into the act, scoring off backsets from Karlan.

However, in the tense fourth game, it was Peters who came to the forefront. New Mexico, led by all-tournament performers Alicia Bergman and Laurel Luman, mounted a gritty comeback, but Peters answered every rally with a definitive kill from the side.

"Christy had a good weekend all around," commented Brown. "When it's crunch time, we're going to her."

This weekend, she had all the answers, and accompanied by all-tournament teammates Karlan and Stark, the Irish closed out their third ranked opponent of the year in convincing style, further showing they are ready to take the national spotlight sooner than later.

Junior Christy Peters kills home a point during the Irish's upset of Illinois last weekend. Peters captured the MVP award at the Shamrock Invitational this weekend, won by the Irish.

The Observer/David Hungeling

Irish post record eleventh-straight win

By BRYAN CONNOLLY
Assistant Sports Editor

The confident cheers of the Notre Dame women's soccer team filled the air yesterday afternoon after the Irish scalped the Tribe of William & Mary in what was perhaps the biggest victory in the history of the program.

The 6-0 Irish squad handed fifth-ranked William & Mary a 1-0 loss and proved that it is a legitimate member of the nation's elite soccer teams.

The seventh-ranked Irish won by playing with a level of intensity and determination that was unparalleled by the Tribe. They clearly proved they were a better team.

"We showed that we can play with any team in the country, and not only play with them, but beat them," said Notre Dame head coach Chris Petrucelli.

"It gives us confidence," noted Irish tri-captain Alison Lester, "because we weren't intimidated by them. We treated them like just any other team."

Sophomore attacker Rosella Guerrero scored the lone goal for Notre Dame off a corner kick at the 49:11 mark in the second half with freshman midfielder Cindy Daws and junior midfielder Jodi Hartwig assisting.

Junior Tiffany Thompson's corner kick was first headed by Daws into the crossbar. Hartwig then booted the rebound off Tribe goalie Maren Rojas and the deflection headed right to Guerrero, who headed it into the right side of the net.

"It was every body's goal," said Guerrero. "I just happened to be the one who put it in."

Although the Irish only scored one goal, they dominated William & Mary in terms of scoring opportunities and time of possession. Notre Dame outshot the Tribe 18-8 and easily could have scored two or three more goals had luck been on Star freshmen recruit Cindy Daws scored two goals and notched four assists in the Irish's two wins this weekend.

Men's soccer beats Michigan St., Evansville

By MIKE NORBUT
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's soccer team made a twin killing this weekend, downing rivals Michigan State and Evansville to improve their season record to 4-2.

In the Irish's 1-0 victory over Evansville yesterday, a goal from junior midfielder Tont Richardson with 6:52 to play in the first half proved to be the game winner.

"In our game against Evansville last year, Tont left with a broken leg," said Irish coach Mike Berticelli. "It's a tremendous thing for him to come back and play as well as he did."

Richardson's goal came during an Irish offensive flurry late in the first half. A corner kick by captain Mike Palmer had been booted away towards midfield following a scramble in front of the net. Defenseman Chris Dean drove the ball back into Evansville territory, where Richardson broke open and blasted a 25-yard shot past Purple Ace goalie Steve Hoogerwerf.

Defense was the story of the contest, as the Irish were led by goalie Bert Bader, who collected nine saves for his second shutout of the season, and defensemen Brian Engesser and Dane Whitley. The addition of Kevin Adkisson, who had missed the first four games of the season, also helped Notre Dame to put the clamps on the Evansville offensive surge.

"When we play Evansville, we expect a physical game," continued Berticelli. "Sometimes it's as much a war as it is a game."

The physical nature of the game was evident in the number of fouls committed. The Irish tallied 23 fouls, while the Purple Aces finished with 29. The Purple Aces were led by Brian Loftin and Marty Schroering, who each had three shots on goal.

Evansville dropped to 2-4 on the season, including a 1-2 conference record with its loss yesterday. The Irish are now 2-1 in Midwestern Collegiate Conference action.

On Friday, the Irish fought off a tenacious Michigan State squad to capture a 3-2 win on a Ray Prado goal at the 32:44 mark in the second half. The loss dropped the Spartans to 3-3 on the sea-
