Williams emphasizes need to protect youth

By Brian Posnanski
News Writer

Addressing the turmoil in Northern Ireland, Burma, South Africa and China, Betty Williams, co-recipient of the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize, stressed the need for people to protect the welfare of children in a speech last night in the Hesburgh Library Auditorium entitled "Peace is a Question of Justice."

Williams, the director of the Global Children's Resource Center at Sam Houston State University in Texas, is active worldwide in advancing the cause of human rights in general and children in particular.

In 1976, after seeing three children killed in the streets of Belfast, Williams, a Catholic, organized marches and rallies with Mairead Corrigan, a Protestant, to end the violence in Northern Ireland. Her work to further the cause of justice and peace, which earned her and Corrigan the 1977 Nobel peace prize, never stopped.

Williams, whose father is Protestant and mother is Catholic, said her household was free from the religious friction common to her region. "For me, working for peace is just the right thing to do," she said. "It's amazing what the work of peace does. I stood up because I saw three children killed in a Belfast street." Williams later added: "I'm still learning to try and live with that. It just doesn't go away."

Betty Williams, winner of the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize for her work in promoting peace in Northern Ireland, spoke on campus yesterday.

But Williams was quick to point out that violence is a poor answer to oppression, particularly in Northern Ireland. "Before you talk about justice," she said, "you've got to hand some out. To take my land from saints and scholars...to gunfire was terrible."

Stopping violence is hard, according to Williams, because people do not do anything to prevent it. "We always take action after the fact," she said. Williams' speech focused on the plight of children everywhere, not just in Northern Ireland. In her eyes, the proper support for children's welfare is lacking throughout the world.

"We teach [children] hatred," Williams said. "We teach them misunderstanding. And then we kill them by sending them off to war. . . We have to learn in Northern Ireland the value of the child. Why do you have to fight for the right of a child Betty Williams' illustrious history as a fighter for peace and justice made her a natural choice as a speaker for Notre Dame, according to Jay Brandenberger, director of Notre Dame's Center for Social Concerns.

"We like the Center to have something at the beginning of the year to prompt us to think how our work at the University should contribute in some way to justice and peace," Brandenberger said. "I couldn't think of a better speaker."

Williams was a Belfast homemaker when, on August 10, 1976, she saw a car careen into three children, killing all of them. English soldiers had shot and killed its driver, a member of the IRA. Shocked by what she saw, Betty Williams organized a march four days later involving 10,000 women.

The next year, along with co-recipient Mairead Corrigan, she was awarded the Nobel Prize for peace.

Safety takes forefront in hall issues

By KATE CRISHAM

Finding ways to improve and enhance campus security was one of the many topics discussed at last night's Hall Presidents' Council meeting.

HPC

Assistant Director of Security Phil Johnson answered questions from the council regarding such topics as Safewalk, campus escorts, and cars on campus.

"We are trying to keep Notre Dame primarily pedestrian, which is why we discourage driving on campus," explained Johnson. "Keeping the campus safe for students is our first priority."

Still, he noted, "It is not what security does that keeps Notre Dame safe, but the lifestyle choices that students themselves make."

The possibility of increasing the patrolling of campus parking lots was also discussed. Johnson said that security does "random but regular" patrolling, with each lot patrolled approximately every two hours. Some students, however, expressed concern that this amount of patrolling was insufficient.

"A lot can happen in two hours," said Pasquerilla West President Angie Kerrigan. "The student lots should be patrolled, at the very least, every fifteen minutes. The student lots are where the majority of incidents occur, and that is where security should focus the majority of their attention."

In other matters, Pangborn President Laura Schnorenberg and Stanford President Brett Boessen made a motion to form a committee to study the Weekend Wheels program. Weekend Wheels will be temporarily reinstated while the council investigates the possibility of a taxi voucher system.

"Establishing a taxi voucher system will take time," explained Walsh President Maria Capua. "Yet, we feel that HPC has a responsibility to provide weekend off-campus transportation for students. Weekend Wheels will serve our purposes until then."

Sorin Hall Co-Presidents Charlie Eppinger and Deitz Lefort outlined their plans to have a head shaving contest to raise money for a Sorin service project to Appalachia.

"Charlie and I will be in competition," explained Lefort. "Whoever raises the most money will shave his head at the Sorin Talent Show. If we raise more than $3000, we will both shave our heads."

The Talent Show will take place on Friday, October 8 after the pep rally.

In other matters, Student Body Vice President Nikki Wellman announced that sign-ups for Fall Festival '93 will take place October 5, 6, and 7.

Vatican stands firm: opinions will not sway morality

By DANIEL WAKIN

VATICAN CITY

Pope John Paul II's encyclical proclaiming that morality is not a matter of opinion has prompted dissent from church liberals even before its publication.

Reports say the document, despite some liberals' hopes for changes, does not deviate from the church's longtime bans on contraception, birth control, divorce, abortion, premarital sex and homosexuality.

The encyclical will be released Oct. 5. The reported text reflects John Paul's long-stated theme that the church is not a democracy.

According to several news reports, the pope writes:

"Opposition to the teachings of the pastors of the church cannot be seen as a legitimate expression of Christian liberty or of a diversity in the gifts of the Spirit."

"Dissent, in the form of well-orchestrated protests and polemics conducted in the mass media, is in opposition to ecclesiastic communion."

Reports say the encyclical calls on bishops to be "vigilant" against those who part from the Church's doctrine, and that those who violate Church teaching should be removed from their positions.

The encyclical, titled "Veritatis Splendor" — Latin for "The Splendor of Truth" — has been six years in the making and will likely be considered one of John Paul's most important achievements.

As its publication neared, numerous leaks have emerged in the press. Papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro has discounted the reports as based on unofficial texts.

Nevertheless, liberal voices in the church have been quick to react.

The document is appropriately addressed to bishops because "lay Catholics would simply stamp it 'Return to Sender,'" said Frances Kissling, president of the Catholics for a Free Choice, an abortion rights group based in Washington, DC.

Saint Mary's freshman ballot secured for election

By NICOLE MCGRATH
Saint Mary's News Editor

Saint Mary's freshman class has narrowed their choices to three presidential/vice-presidential tickets after yesterday's class elections, according to Elections Commissioner, Elizabeth Broghammer.

The three tickets in Thursday's runoff are: Anna Rafaj/Emily Ruffner, Beth Ann Miller/Becky Kellogg and Leslie Field/Jennifer Augustine.

Rafaj and Ruffner gained 24 percent of the votes, said Broghammer. "I think it's neat," said Rafaj. "It'll give us an opportunity to meet more people and have more people ask us questions about our campaign."

"I was excited for today to come," said Miller. "We really need to make sure that those who voted for us, tell their friends." Miller and Kellogg got 19.5 percent of the vote.

Field and Augustine received 19 percent of the vote. "We are very excited," said Field. "We are going to go door-to-door to talk to people about the specifics of our campaign."

Two percent of the freshman class abstained from the presidential/vice-presidential vote while 11 percent of the class abstained from the freshman board vote, said Broghammer.

All eight candidates who ran for freshman board secured a spot on it, according to Broghammer. The freshman board are Laura Bossardt, Kelly Cook, Kristen DiNovo, Cate Freiesleben, Courtney Laden, Jennifer Ligda, Laura Loh and Kathleen Zimmer.

According to Broghammer, 64 percent of the freshman class turned out for the elections.

"I think it was a really good turnout and hopefully more will turn out for the runoff on Thursday," said Broghammer. Thursday's elections will be held during all meals at the dining hall.

INSIDE COLUMN

Believe me: Telemarketers are people, too

The City News telemarketers called me again today. I had tried to be patient with these people before, but this time I had to hang up. Trust me. Hanging up is more merciful than listening and refusing.

Yes, I used to be one of those dreaded people who called you right in the middle of everything remotely important this summer and tried to sell you something. I was poor and the allure of $9.00 an hour was simply too great—I quickly joined the well-respected and admired (sure) ranks of telemarketers. I figured I could at least try it once. Twenty-two hours a week couldn't be that terrible...could it? I was sure I could handle it. My friends warned me, but did I listen? Of course not. Mistake of mistakes.

I was assigned to sell long distance phone service. Training was fairly frightening—we watched endless Candice Bergen commercials and I began to spend all of my waking hours studying the millions of calling plans offered by the Big Three of long distance service. I started to dream about the "first minute, each additional minute," "20% discounts to the person you call the most" and "itemized billing."

By the end of the week, I was definitely going downhill. I thought about phone service all the time. When phone commercials came on TV, I found myself straining to read the fine print at the bottom of the screen so I could refute any customer's objection to my pitch—although usually I just agreed that "yes ma'am, you do indeed have a far superior calling plan than we could ever create and I don't think you should buy my product either."

Unfortunately, my way of dealing with customers did not win the admiration of my superiors. I was told I was not aggressive enough and I should never let the customer go until the third "no." I was assured that I would soon find that people responded more positively to me (somehow this strategy didn't sound right).

Need I say that I failed miserably? If I happened to make a sale, it was because I happened to add on a tremendous bonus ("Sir, you will receive $100 in free calls each month for enrolling in this plan...really") or because I was talking to someone's children (once I mentioned the 24-hour cartoons and free calls to Santa; they were hooked). Supervisors began to hate me and quickly discovered that it was safer to leave me alone and pretend they had no idea what I was doing.

As the days wore on, I wanted to quit more and more. Unfortunately, my parents weren't quite ready to have me around any more, and I was not-so-subtly told that quitting was out of the question. I had to be a bit creative... Monday morning, "Ellin Murphy" called in for her "seriously ill" daughter, Katie, and I was off the hook for that night—but only with work. My parents still thought I was working.

From that night on, I made it a habit to leave for work as usual (of course after finding some strange, contagious disease to contract), and go everywhere my parents couldn't find me. It really wasn't easy. Eventually I was fired, and I could finally come home. Believe me, it was a relief!

Palestinians: Between the Israeli rock and the Arab hard place

BEIT JALLA
The Palestinian owners of the OBG Textile Factory like to show off their latest product: a T-shirt with a portrait of Yasser Arafat. However, about 80 percent of their $300,000 a month in sales is not to Arabs but to Israel: shorts for kibbutz farmers, underwear and socks for department stores, dresses and track suits for boutiques.

Economic ties between Israel and the occupied lands are well established and may be strengthened by the PLO-Israel accord. But relations are complex and both Israelis and Palestinians worry about the economic impact of peace. They can agree on the need to erase the poverty and the 40 percent unemployment that is a source of Palestinian violence and terrorism. "A good peace depends on good commerce. Both Arabs and Jews have an interest in a prosperous economy," said Jiris Al-Arja, deputy mayor and main owner of OBG — Oriental Beit Jalla Garments — one of the town's five textile factories. Yet Israel fears competition from OBG's textiles as well as from citrus and other agricultural goods grown by low-wage Palestinian workers. Jordan worries that Palestinian workers who make up 75 percent of the business community in the kingdom will shift their wealth to the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Palestinians fear being caught in the middle. Dan Propper, head of the Israeli Manufacturers' Association, noted Israel's 11 percent unemployment rate and said the country would have to protect some industries such as textiles, at least initially. But he envisions Tel Aviv as a vibrant economic hub. "I believe the autonomy could serve as a bridge for export into Arab countries. Israeli technology can be used to produce products in the autonomous areas for consumption in the Arab world," he said. Propper said plastic dishes, toys, furniture, paper products, gold jewelry and other goods could be jointly made for sale in neighboring Arab states. Samir Huleileh, who administers European Community aid for the occupied lands, said there is a perception in the Arab world "that we Palestinians will be a trojan horse for Israel because we know the Hebrew language and the people and have a relationship already."

Problems in case of corrupt NYC officer

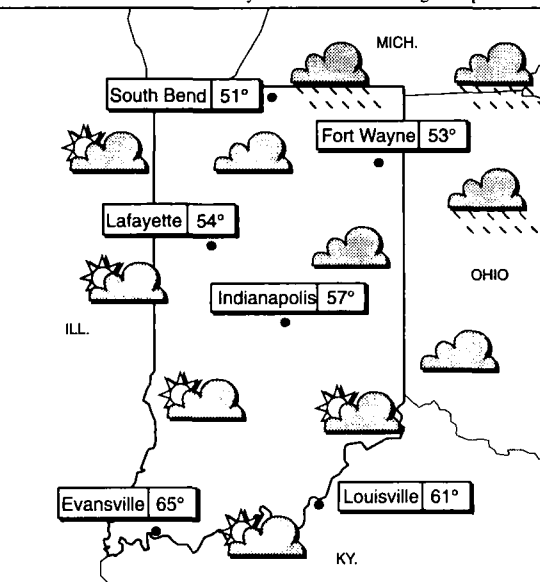

NEW YORK
The police Internal Affairs Division obstructed its own investigator's probe into crooked officers at a Brooklyn precinct, the investigator testified today. Sgt. Joseph Trimboli said that his attempts to get his superiors interested in the 75th Precinct scandal were rebuffed from 1987 to 1989. Even leverage from a borough commander didn't help, he said. Trimboli said he had stumbled across allegations against a ringleader, Officer Michael Dowd, and investigated them on his own. The case widened to include 20 to 25 officers before the division declared the investigation closed. In January 1989, a month after the investigation was closed, Dowd stayed in a $500 per-person, per-night resort in the Dominican Republic. He went there with a former officer who had been arrested earlier for armed robbery. The arrest of Dowd, 32, last year on a raft of federal corruption charges prompted the creation of a mayoral commission to investigate the nation's largest police department.

Hungry? Try a cricket cookie

AMES, Iowa
Pass the salt. And the rootworm beetle dip. The Iowa State University Entomology Club is concocting some unorthodox fare for its annual Insect Horror Film Festival. The dishes will feature recipes with insects as main ingredients. Fairgoers can sample banana worm bread or chocolate cricket chip cookies. The worm bread is described as a traditional banana bread with dry-roasted army worms substituted for the nuts. Roasted crickets are added to the chirpie cookies instead of chocolate chips. The Entomology Club predicts bug blox — crickets or meal worms suspended in "colorful fingers of gelatin" — will be the most popular item. For the faint of stomach, there will be other bug-related activities at the festival, which runs from Oct. 6-9. The 1958 and 1986 movie versions of "The Fly" will be shown. Before each film, visitors can stop to stroke some creepy crawlies at the insect petting zoo, which boasts a giant water beetle.

Saint Mary's will host myriad of fall activities

By PATTI CARSON
News Writer

Troop ND, a hip-hop dance organization that features a performance group as well as instructional classes, was approved as a club by the Saint Mary's Board of Governance (BOG) at last night's meeting, according to Student Body

BOARD OF GOVERNANCE

President Mary Beth Wilkinson.

The club was approved with the stipulation that "sponsored by Saint Mary's" will appear on all literature distributed by the club and announced at all Troop ND performances.

Troop ND club activities include performances at half-time during Notre Dame basketball games and at events like the St. Edward Hall's Carnival during An Tostal.

Troop ND is also planning a road trip to a high school in LaPorte, Ind. on October 7. A representative from the club discussed the possibility of a talent show for both the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame campuses.

In other business:

•BOG discussed whether they should sponsor the Women's Care Center as a service project. The center, which recently contacted Saint Mary's to increase its volunteer pool, is a crisis pregnancy service that provide care and counseling.

The service project would be more personal if they left it in the hands of residence halls, according to Wilkinson. The center hopes that Saint Mary's residence halls will adopt them as a philanthropy for the semester.

•Saint Mary's Senior Dad's Weekend begins Friday. Volunteers are needed to work as casino dealers from 7 to noon in Angela Athletic Facility. Volunteers should contact Director of Student Activities Georgeanna Rosenbush for more information.

•Multicultural Week will be Oct. 4 to 8. The week will be sponsored by the Office of Multicultural Affairs. It includes an International Food Night on Oct. 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the Haggard College Center. The food will be provided by campus clubs and by Hacienda restaurant. There will also be a band performance and a cultural fashion show.

•Midwest flood relief packing was successful, according to Spiritual Life Commissioner Jen Moore. Volunteers are still needed over October break. For more information, contact Campus Ministry. There will be no 4:30 Mass this week in Le Mans Hall due to Fall Day on campus, Moore added.

Cold War days are over for CIA

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The details of 11 covert operations conducted by the CIA during the Cold War may soon be made public as part of the spy agency's effort to widen access to U.S. intelligence.

CIA Director James Woolsey told the House Intelligence Committee on Tuesday that he had ordered the declassification review of several covert operations that were undertaken by the CIA 30 years ago or more.

These included U.S. activities to block communism in France and Italy; support for Indonesian rebels in 1958; support to Tibetan guerrillas in the 1950s and early 60s; operations against North Korea during the Korean war; and operations in Laos in the 1960s.

Woolsey said the intelligence-sharing effort includes such projects as providing spy satellite data for Midwest flood relief efforts.

The CIA gave the U.S. Geological Survey computerized drawings, based on satellite imagery, showing the areas affected by the recent flooding. Last year the CIA shared its highly sensitive satellite information with disaster relief operations after Hurricane Andrew.

The agency doesn't provide raw footage in order to protect the exact capability of its satellites, and also because the images are harder to interpret, said an agency official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Still, the spy satellites provide far sharper imagery than that available to the government from commercial or weather satellites.

The voluminous satellite archives could soon have another civilian use.

A joint commission of scientists, CIA and Pentagon officials is about to complete a report recommending ways in which spy satellite data can be made available for environmental research. The report is due in a few weeks.

But most of the CIA's planned secrets sharing relates to the past. Still, several lawmakers expressed concern that releasing records of 30-year-old covert operations could strain relations with foreign nations.

But Woolsey assured the committee that the administration would take foreign-policy implications into consideration before releasing such records.

David Gries, the director of the review process, told the panel that the operations have all been written about, sometimes by former agency officials.

The governments involved as well as the State Department knew the documents were planned for release, he said.

The review is likely to take at least two years, said an agency official, because of a backlog of other historical documents slated for declassification.

Work was only recently started on the declassification ordered by Woolsey's predecessor, Robert Gates, of records pertaining to CIA support for coups in Guatemala and Iran in the 1950s, as well as on the Bay of Pigs and other agency operations in the Dominican Republic and the Congo.

LA riots: Denny case nears end

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES

Jurors can see for themselves that two men charged with beating Reginald Denny are the same ones in the videotape that has come to symbolize the 1992 riots, a prosecutor said in closing arguments Tuesday.

"We have seen that videotape. It is burned in our brains. We all know what happened to Reginald Denny," Deputy District Attorney Janet Moore told the jury.

"You saw Henry Watson put his foot on (Denny's) neck and hold him to the ground, and Damian Williams threw the brick," Moore said.

The two black men are charged with attempted murder and other felonies in the attack on Denny, a white truck driver, at a South Central Los Angeles intersection where the riots began on April 29, 1992.

The attack was videotaped from a news helicopter, and the tape came to symbolize the riots, much as the videotape of black motorist Rodney King's beating by white policemen became an earlier symbol of police brutality.

Defense attorneys maintain Williams and Watson are the victims of mistaken identity.

But Moore said Watson was the one in a T-shirt reading "Hooker's Bar and Grill" that stood out like a "neon sign on his back."

The closing arguments came a day after jurors in a separate trial convicted a 19-year-old of first-degree murder in the riot-related beating death of a San Fernando Valley man.

Traville James Craig, 19, of North Hollywood, faces a sentence of life in prison without parole in the death of Elias Garcia, 32, who was beaten with a board during an attempted robbery on April 30, 1992.

54 people died during rioting in Los Angeles following the acquittals of four white police officers on state charges in the King beating. Two of the policemen were later convicted in federal court and sentenced to 30 months in prison.

Moore made a point of mentioning to the racially mixed jury that black residents of South Central Los Angeles risked their lives to save Denny and others, and that in some cases the rescuers themselves came under attack.

"Without the heroics and bravery of these people, Reginald Denny would have died," Moore said.

Tourist violence: possible federal offence Judge bars Navy from discharging gay officer

By PETE YOST
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
Violence against foreign tourists should be designated a federal crime, congressmen said Tuesday as they urged quick action to stem attacks like the murders of German and British travelers in Florida.

"We're all in this together. We've got to take decisive action," Florida's commerce secretary, Greg Farmer, told Reps. Jim Bacchus and Neil Abercrombie and two dozen businessmen on an International Marketing Study Group set up by Congress.

President Clinton is expected to nominate Farmer next month as undersecretary of commerce for the U.S. Travel and Tourism Administration.

The study group, chaired by Bacchus, agreed to promote the idea of federal assistance through a Traveler Protection Act.

Such a law would be an "added deterrent" to the violence against travelers from overseas, enabling the federal government to help state and local authorities wage successful prosecutions, said Bacchus, D-Fla., and Abercrombie, D-Hawaii.

Abercrombie's office circulated a tentative draft of legislation to make anyone engaging in a state crime of violence against a foreign visitor "guilty of a like offense against the United States."

Under such a law, the federal government could pay expenses so that foreign travelers could be brought back to the United States to testify about violent crimes against family members or travel companions, said Abercrombie.

Rep. George Gekas, R-Pa., would go even further. He introduced legislation Tuesday to establish a federal death penalty for killing a foreign tourist.

The study group embraced a package of deterrents — Clinton's crime proposals with 50,000 additional police officers, a White House conference on tourism, and legislation to get guns out of the hands of juveniles "who are at the heart of so much of this problem," said Bacchus.

has also recorded testimony from Burmese children about the abuses of the military regime and related her records to President Clinton.

When Williams described the plight of some Burmese children she interviewed, she asked, "Would you like to scream for that child? I do. That's what I have to tell you, because that would help you help them."

Williams also pointed out that the abuse of children is not confined to distant countries: of 30-million hungry people in this country, 12-million are children.

"Waving a flag is not nationalism," Williams said. "Nationalism belongs in your heart, not in a flag. Show democracy not in your flag-waving, but by caring whether the fellow next door has a loaf of bread on his table."

"But above all," Williams concluded, "look at what you can do to help the children, because they desperately, desperately need you."

WASHINGTON
A federal judge barred the Navy from discharging a homosexual submarine officer on Tuesday, saying that the man admitted he was gay only after President Clinton indicated the military's rules would be changed.

Lt. (j.g.) Richard Selland "made the statement about his homosexuality, not for broadcasting on television but in the company of his chaplain to his commanding officer," U.S. District Judge Louis Oberdorfer ruled.

The judge said Selland was seeking to have his commander do something about the taunts he was receiving from his shipmates and "in part because of public statements by the president of the United States."

Selland was stationed aboard the USS Hammerhead at the Navy base in Norfolk, Va. when he talked to his commander on Jan. 21, the day after Clinton's inauguration.

The judge likened him to "a sparrow caught in a badminton game" because he was performing his duties well despite the jibes from his shipmates.

Selland was ordered off the ship by his commander, Karl Hasslinger, and he has been on shore duty ever since.

The Navy notified Selland he would be transferred on Sept. 30 to the inactive reserve, an action that would end the young officer's pay and allowances. On Oct. 1, a new "don't ask, don't tell" policy goes into effect for homosexuals in the military.

Barring the transfer to the inactive reserve, Oberdorfer said it is likely that on that date or soon after "the other shoe will automatically drop" and Selland would be finally discharged.

"Nothing but a few hours stands in the way of his final discharge from the Navy, complete with the unhelpful and, to many, ignominious notation on an otherwise honorable discharge: GRB (homosexuality admission,)" the judge wrote.

In the years following her award, Williams met with Queen Elizabeth about the behavior of British troops in Ireland and also talked with House Speaker Tip O'Neill and Senator Edward Kennedy. Williams' meetings with the two American politicians changed U.S. policy towards Ireland drastically.

In 1979, the Republic of Ireland named Williams Woman of the Year "for her tireless effort to bring peace to Ireland's shores."

to live? Wouldn't you think it's an inalienable right?"

Williams also drew attention to the need for governments to change their policies, particularly toward China and Burma. "Try working with governments," Williams said sarcastically. "They've got a reason for everything. Right now, when the Chinese government says 'jump,' the world governments say, 'how high?' and 'how long do you want us to stay up?'" China, which still conducts mass public executions and secret trials, currently enjoys "Most Favored Nation" economic status with America.

Burma is a much worse human rights offender, said Williams. In the past few years she has worked for the release of Nobel Peace Laureate Aung San Suu Kyi, who defeated Burma's 40-year-old military regime in free elections. She

Gas explosion kills more than 50 in Venezuela

By VIVIAN SEQUERA
Associated Press

TEJERIAS, Venezuela
A natural gas pipeline exploded beneath a busy highway during rush hour Tuesday, engulfing a passenger bus and cars in flames and killing at least 50 people.

The pipeline apparently was ruptured by a state telephone company crew laying fiber optic cables, officials said.

"It was like a stream of fire that leapt to the sky," said Alberto Jose Galeno, a passenger in a truck on the other side of the highway. He spoke from his hospital bed.

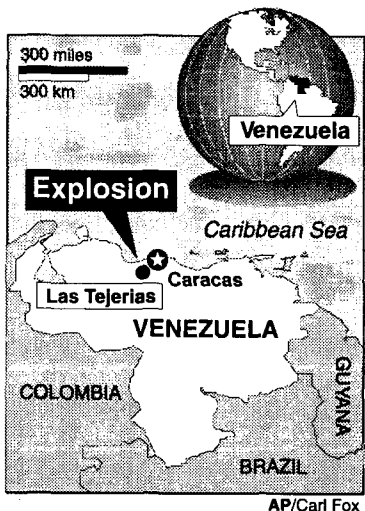

The state news agency Venpres said 50 people died and 40 were injured in the explosion, which occurred shortly before 8 a.m. (EDT) on the Central Regional Highway in this town 30 miles southwest of the capital Caracas.

Firefighter Rodolfo Guilarte, citing interviews with rescue workers at the scene, said at least 51 people died.

Thirty-eight bodies were recovered, according to Capt. Egui Martinez of the Aragua state fire department. The actual toll may be higher, he said, because some bodies may have burned completely.

"The people were destroyed.... They are putting the remains in bags with numbers, and will try to identify them at the morgue. Everybody was completely burned," said AP photographer Diego Giudice.

The heat from the explosion was so intense that Jesus Hernandez, a truck driver, suffered first degree burns on his face and hands even though he was 200 yards away from the blast.

"There was a big flash. The windshield broke. I ran," Hernandez said.

A phone company truck was flipped over by the explosion, but the driver survived. The telephone company declined to comment on the accident.

1,500 Cubans incur deportation

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

An estimated 1,500 Cuban inmates in federal prisons will be repatriated, Justice Department officials said Tuesday, adding they had taken steps to guard against rioting by prisoners angered by the move.

All 4,500 Cuban inmates being held in federal prison were briefly segregated from the general prison population Tuesday while those who would be sent back to Cuba were told of plans to repatriate them, officials said.

The only inmates to be sent home under the U.S.-Cuba agreement would be those who arrived on the 1980 Mariel boatlift and later committed serious crimes in America, said Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern.

The estimated 1,500 prisoners who will be returned to Cuba will remain in segregation while the rest will be returned to their cells, officials said.

The special precautions were taken to prevent uprisings that have occurred in the past among Cubans opposed to returning to their homeland run by Fidel Castro, according to Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern.

"We didn't want them reacting to prison gossip," Stern said in explanation of the pre-dawn action taken at 37 institutions nationwide.

The prisoners were taken from their cells and told what would happen, after which those who are not to be repatriated to Cuba were sent back to their cells, Stern said.

The largest single gathering of Cuban inmates are the 200 at Leavenworth, Kan., followed by 100 at Lompoc, Calif., Stern said.

The Cubans to be sent home are those who have completed their U.S. prison sentences. They are still incarcerated because they have been declared deportable, he said.

The security arrangements Tuesday morning were discussed by Bureau of Prisons and Immigration and Naturalization Service representatives, along with Associate Attorney General Webster Hubbell, Stern said.

The repatriation program began in 1984 through an agreement between the U.S. and Cuban governments.

"We have an understanding with the Cuban government to continue that effort," Stern said, adding that he did not know exactly when that understanding was reached.

After the 1984 agreement, a list of 2,746 potential repatriation candidates was drawn up, but only 1,116 were eventually returned to Cuba following appeals to the Cuban Review Panel made up of BOP and INS representatives, he said.

Hard-liners succumb to violence

By DEBORAH SEWARD
Associated Press

MOSCOW

President Boris Yeltsin tried to break the nerve of defiant hard-line lawmakers Tuesday, surrounding the Russian parliament with thousands of riot police and troops in his biggest show of force yet.

Trucks and barbed wire blocked roads leading to the parliament building. Senior Interior Ministry officials barked through loudspeakers, ordering the lawmakers and their supporters to surrender their weapons and leave the building by Wednesday.

But top presidential aides later backed off the 24-hour deadline and said Boris Yeltsin had no intention of using force.

The ultimatum triggered a protest by about 3,000 hard-line demonstrators, some of whom tried to break through police lines and then march near parliament, beating on cars, throwing rocks at riot police and building a barricade across a main street.

Shouting "Shame!" and "Death to Yeltsin!" the protesters marched past the U.S. Embassy, stopping at an underpass where three young men died during the August 1991 hard-line coup attempt. Hundreds of police in full riot gear and armed with shields dispersed the crowd, which threw rocks at the troops.

At least two people were arrested and several people had minor injuries.

Yeltsin has ruled out compromise with his opponents, and the deployment of more troops stepped up the war of nerves with the increasingly demoralized and isolated lawmakers who have been holed up in the parliament building — the Russian White House — since Yeltsin dissolved parliament a week ago, on Sept. 21.

Many lawmakers were deserting the hard-line cause to work in Yeltsin's administration. More than 200 deputies are negotiating job offers with the government, which set up an employment office for lawmakers and their staff.

Warmly outfitted in rain gear, police ignored appeals by the less-well equipped defenders to come over to their side. Both sides stood watching each other in a drenching rain.

Yeltsin ordered December elections for a new parliament in an attempt to end a bitter power struggle with parliamentary hard-liners over his political and free-market reforms. He has called for presidential elections in June.

The standoff appeared to be taking its toll on the nerves of police as well.

"It's about time we start shooting," one officer said, as the police force withdrew into a large courtyard.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Beeli owes apology for 'inaccurate view'

Dear Editor:

I feel compelled to rebut Pieder Beeli's letter (The Observer, Sept. 27) as it implicitly labels me as a racist. If evolution is truly a racist theory, then those who subscribe to it must surely be racists.

What most frightens me about Mr. Beeli's letter is the use of emotionally charged issues such as racism to yet again play on peoples fears while making a pitch for a young earth and the error of modern science concerning this and associated issues.

This ploy is strikingly similar to that used by the Institute for Creation Research. They prey upon people's scientific illiteracy and use this to convince them of what they want to believe in—an Earth less than 10,000 years old, without evolution.

These people completely bastardize the scientific process as they claim to know the answer before they fairly evaluate the data. They then distort and convolute the data in such a way as to make it fit the young earth model in which they believe.

A classic case of this is Akridge: his assertion of a shrinking sun in 1980, and his subsequent attempt to use this assertion as proof for a young earth. Akridge unprofessionally seized on a small, unexamined observation by others and used it to suit his purpose.

Likewise Mr. Beeli has used an erroneous interpretation of evolution to suit his purpose.

His presumption that species which evolve from others are "better" than their predecessors could indeed be construed as evidence that evolution is a racist theory.

Unfortunately this is an assertion not made by evolution. Evolution is not a linear progression of species. Moreover different is not the same as better. If you are not equipped to distinguish these differences, it is easy to be swayed.

So using the banner cry of racism, Mr. Beeli tells us all to throw out evolution. He also claims Peter Herra and himself have discovered the truth, and it shouldn't be open to debate. Further, he asserts that Notre Dame has strayed wildly from this truth and is in dire need of reexamining its stance.

These are pretty bold statements and chillingly reminiscent of other figures from history who also claimed to be tuned into the truth; one of the more recent ones perishing on a ranch in Waco, Texas and a more distant one responsible for the Holocaust.

Granted such an analogy may be extreme, but these tragic events resulted from claims of knowing the truth and closing the matter to debate as Mr. Beeli suggest Notre Dame does.

Indeed, there are apologies in order. Mr. Beeli should apologize to all proponents of evolution for labelling them as racists.

He should apologize to Notre Dame's African-American community for using them as pawns in his ceaseless tirade against evolution. Both Mr. Beeli and I are white, and to profess that we know anything about racism and then use it to our advantage is inexcusable.

Mr. Beeli should apologize to the readers of this paper for attempting to mislead them by presenting an inaccurate view of evolution. Mr Beeli owes the Notre Dame administration an apology for accusing them of pursuing a Godless, scripturally unsound agenda.

Mr. Beeli owes the Notre Dame student body an apology for asserting that they can't discover a personal sense of truth through meaningful teaching and dialogue but rather they should be subject to what Notre Dame (or Mr. Beeli) believes to be the truth, this idiosyncratic truth not open for debate.

Ultimately the biggest apology is the one Mr. Beeli owes himself, for his belief that his sense of the truth is the only correct one as this greatly hinders his ability to explore God's universe with the sense of wonderment and awe it deserves.

Because everything he examines must fit his predetermined conclusions he is incapable of meaningful dialogue concerning this wonderful earth God has given us.

O'Hara's remarks in Scholastic interview prove rather 'banal'

Dear Editor:

Having occasionally had reason to wonder where and why Notre Dame locates some of its administrators, I was struck by the remarks attributed to the vice-president for student affairs, Patricia O'Hara, in a recent issue of Scholastic (Sept. 23, 1993).

While I want to take Prof. O'Hara's abilities vis-à-vis student affairs on trust, I am astonished by the string of ungrammatical constructions, errors in diction, and jargonized redundancies attributed to her.

Among them: "Teaching and research is what the university is all about" (emphasis added). (No comment needed, I hope.) "Residence life is a panoply of student life issues." (A 'panoply' is a full suit of armor or, by extension, any gorgeous array; "panorama," perhaps?) And, worst of all, "My door is always open to any student who has a need to communicate, or who just wants to talk." What, one wonders, differentiates a "communication" from a "talk," and when did a talk become "just [a] talk," as opposed to "communication," which apparently is something more august and profound.

Of the essential banality of almost everything asserted in this interview I make no mention beyond contending the remarks are banal.

If we who presume to teach others casually utter in such a fashion as this, what dare we expect of our students, regardless of our "faith" or our "senses of humor?"

STRAIGHT OUTTA 'WAKA

Drugs, rock -n- roll, and giant soft tacos

There comes a time in every person's life when they must embark on a spiritual journey. On June 23, 1993, I took off the sackcloth, loaded up the mule, and made the trek to Shoreline Amphitheater in Mountain View, California to feel the healing power of Lollapalooza. If by chance you should ever go, you will see that it is a joyous place- a cultural utopia where people join hands, chanting "Legalize!" and "Save the Humpback Whales!" For you skeptics, allow me to recount the experience that has left me with a perpetual warm fuzzy.

Kris Kazlauskas
Accent columnist

The journey there required that I pick up an old friend. Ayman (pronounced Eye-Man), the crazy Egyptian, was my companion for this event, along with my brother and his girlfriend who were making peculiar slurping noises in the back seat. Ayman journeyed down from Berkeley via BART (Bay Area Rapid Transit). Arriving at the station, I was just in time to rescue him from the tag team assault of two Mormon missionaries. With his Islamic faith intact, he thanked me, and we made tracks for that Special Place.

At first glance, Lollapalooza appeared like a dream world. Where else could I invest in a five-dollar "Giant Soft Taco," buy aura-reading crystals, and take a simulated acid trip? While I found the pamphlets on "The Many Uses of Hemp" to be intellectually stimulating, I had to admit that my reason for going was the music. With the concert about to start, Ayman and I headed for the lawn.

Rage Against the Machine started things off with their song, "Bombtrack." Rage is definitely not what I would call a "happy" band, and the anger in Zack de la Rocha's voice had me raising my fist in a display of youthful rebellion while I sang the lyrics and banged my head. Babes in Toyland followed with a conglomeration of noise that only a die-hard girl grunge-metal group junkie could love.

Not too impressed with the Babes, I decided to wander around. Working my way to the end of the lawn, I was repeatedly asked if I had any illegal substances that I was willing to sell. Well, I was flattered that these people thought I was a dope fiend, but I had to apologize and tell them that I was just a simple Catholic kid who had always lived by the motto, "Hugs- Not Drugs."

As I reached the end of the lawn, I saw someone performing on the side stage. The closer I got, the more this singer looked like MeatLoaf. He was moaning more than singing, but behind him I saw the true expression of freedom in America. There was a ghostly pale woman who was butt-naked with bits of Saran Wrap attached to her body. She danced around the stage like a belly dancer, and all I could think of was how proud her parents must have been, and whether or not she had remembered to put on sunscreen.

I returned in time to see Arrested Development, and was thoroughly enchanted with their musical abilities. Fishbone was their usual happy self, and their lead singer did the naked bit too. One moment he had his clothes on, the next moment he was naked. It was truly a day of breaking free from the chains of cotton. I went as far as taking off my shirt to catch some rays, but just didn't have the courage to lose those embarrassing tan lines. Alice in Chains kicked some serious butt, and Primus finished off the show with a spunky performance.

By the end of the day, I was exhausted, hungry, and nauseous from the hanging stench of sweat-drenched mosh pit monsters who had left their Speed Stick at home. Yet, that is part of the experience, and if Lollapalooza comes around next year, you can bet that I'll be there- Saran Wrap and all.

A DINING TRADITION

The Observer/Dave Hungeling

The university cafeterias have instituted many improvements as a result of student surveys. One of the new features is the grab-n-go meal, here served by Kay Blasko.

New variety spices up dining hall meals

By KATIE MURPHY
Accent Writer

The "Year of the Customer" at North and South Dining Halls is just one step closer to changing the whole format of the facilities. Eventually, the dining halls may be organized in a way similar to mall foodcourts.

"The long term goal is to add more choices and to get away from the day to day rotation," said Jill Riggs, manager of North dining hall.

Notre Dame Food Services worked with a student advisory group and survey results to modify the dining hall menu and format to its current status. Improvements include a daily grill line which offers hamburgers, chicken patties, and french fries, as well as a spice rack featuring ten spices. Orange juice was added to lunch and dinner and fruit carts and frozen yogurt toppings were also introduced.

South and North, however, do offer several different features. South has a daily hot food bar, which features corn, rice, egg rolls, pasta, chili, and the soup of the day. The salad bar and fruit selection is also more extensive.

North features "Pastaria", a self-serve bar with a number of different sauces, pastas, and desserts. According to Riggs, students can choose from meat, marinara, fettuccine, and spaghetti sauce to put on either shells, linguini, mostaccioli, or spaghetti. Lasagne is available as well. A special Italian dish is also offered each week. This week, North is featuring spicy Italian spaghetti. The new Italian recipes were chosen from a group of restaurant dishes and various cookbooks.

"We offer fresh grated Parmesan cheese at the Pastaria, and special desserts. We have crusty Italian bread and garlic bread. The salad bar is more of an antipasto bar, with romaine lettuce for a Caesar salad and some homemade salad dressings," said Riggs.

North has recently extended the self-serve format to all of its bars, as a result of the pasta bar's success.

"It went over so well, so now we are doing it on all the bars. It has saved us on food waste also," said Riggs.

The recent additions and changes at the dining halls appear to have been well received by students, according to Riggs. Although some of the lines are longer than last year, students seem to be handling the wait.

"The biggest problem is the long lines in certain areas, but I have not heard very many complaints" said Riggs.

The new "grab-n-go" feature often gets backed up at rush times. This improvement allows students to pick up a box lunch between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. when they do not have time eat at the dining hall.

"It's convenient and the selection is good. The people will give you the food you want," said Jeanne Navagh, a Pangborn freshman.

The pasta bar is also popular with students.

"It's probably the best thing they have on a regular basis, but somehow the lines are getting longer" said Cavanaugh sophomore Raf Gonzalez.

Kara Courtois, a junior in Lewis, agrees. "The pasta bar is great except the lines are really long," said Courtois.

While Courtois likes North for the Italian menu, she goes to South for the salad bar.

Food Services conducts surveys twice a year, in order to gauge student opinion of the food selection, atmosphere, and service. The first survey will come out right before fall break, according to Riggs.

Huddle improvements meet students' demands

By GERALDINE HAMILTON
Assistant Accent Editor

The Huddle, under the supervision of Jim Labella, Senior Manager of the Huddle, has also introduced improvements to meet the demands of the student body.

The value of the pricing is the main concern of Labella and he has taken strides to make sure that student are receiving more for their money. The Bullpit area where the burger grill is located offers three different Value Menu items. For $2.99 one can get a medium fries, medium drink and a choice of either a double cheeseburger, quarter pound hamburger or a chicken sandwich.

The Oriental section of the Huddle also features two daily Value Menu specials. And new this year is self serve nachos and taco salads which are priced by the ounce. It works out so that the price of a taco salad is either the same or less than the old price, said Labella.

The improvements in FastBreak, the Huddle mini-market, include redesigned aisles, self-serve popcorn and self-serve baked goods.

The Pizza section and the Bullpit customer lines have been arranged by Labella to facilitate the flow of traffic more quickly so that customers do not spend as much time waiting to be served.

Labella hopes to increase students awareness of the Huddle free delivery service by a direct mail campaign. The first coupon mailing is this week and will offer with any pizza delivery a free 2 liter soft drink. Anything in the Huddle can be delivered anywhere on campus at no extra cost.

The hours of the Huddle are: 7:30 a.m. to 1 a.m. for FastBreak and Allegro, 10 a.m. to 1 a.m. for the Bullpit and the Pizza section and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. for the Oriental section.

Notre Dame vs. Stanford

Holtz respects Walsh, Stanford despite 2-2 record

By JASON KELLY
Associate Sports Editor

Respect oozes from the pores of everyone involved when Notre Dame and Stanford prepare to play a football game.

Lou Holtz and Bill Walsh took turns gushing on Tuesday.

"Notre Dame stands for the very best in college athletics," Walsh said. "We have to play our very best to hold our own, and on a rare occasion, win."

Those occasions haven't been so rare over the last three seasons. Stanford has won two of the last three matchups, both times eliminating Notre Dame from the national championship hunt.

Memories still linger from the losses, but Holtz won't allow himself or his players to let those memories alter their mission.

"If what you did last year is more important than what you did today, you should get out of the game," he said.

Notre Dame enters Saturday's game with some key injuries and some unanswered questions.

Linebacker Pete Bercich will definitely miss the game due to a shoulder injury, although it is unclear if junior Jeremy Sample or senior Anthony Peterson will be his replacement.

Peterson returned to practice Monday after missing three weeks with a knee injury.

Freshman Kinnon Tatum, sophomore Brian McGee and senior LeShane Saddler will also have to fill in a defensive end.

Kevin McDougal will start again at quarterback and his level of play will determine whether or not Paul Failla sees more action. Holtz has yet to name a starting tailback.

"McDougal will start [at quarterback] but what happens in the game will determine who will play. It's kind of a gut feeling," Holtz said. "I have no idea who the tailback will be. It's not that they're not playing well, but we're looking for some consistency."

Walsh's second Cardinal team is also looking for consistency after stumbling already to UCLA and Washington.

"It has been a tough season, but we're 2-2 so its not as though its been disastrous," Walsh said. "We've managed to win our share. And by rights, last week's game [a 28-25 loss to UCLA] should have gone the other way."

A narrow win over San Jose State and a controversial decision over then-No. 7 Colorado haven't exactly put fear into the hearts of Cardinal opponents. But Notre Dame appeared equally vulnerable in last week's 17-0 escape at Purdue.

"We are going to have to play the best game of the year to beat Stanford," Holtz said.

FIGHTING THE FIGHTS: Three brawls last Saturday turned both coaches' attention to the state of discipline on the gridiron.

"I don't know what they're doing [during the fights], but they're not representing a university," Walsh said. "The college presidents should meet with their team at the beginning of every season and tell them that if they do something like that they'll be suspended. Period."

Holtz also had some thoughts about the incidents.

"I just hate to see what happened last week. I believe you should always have respect for your opponent and the price he has to pay," he said. "Football is a vicious game played by gentlemen."

Division I player-of-the-week after her MVP performance in the Golden Dome Invitational, especially because of her key role in the upset of then No. 3 Nebraska.

"I'm very honored to receive the award, but I think more significantly, it shows the team is playing really well right now," said Peters, who had 61 kills in this weekend's tournament. She also had 11 kills and 11 digs in last night's victory.

"It's really a huge honor for both Christy and the team," noted Brown, as the award is one of the first times an Irish player has achieved such national recognition.

Saint Mary's disappointed in tough 2-0 loss to Kalamazoo

By JENNIFER GUSTAFSON
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's soccer team has learned the hard way that domination doesn't necessarily mean victory. Once again the Belles outplayed their opponent yet came up short by losing to the Kalamazoo Hornets yesterday, 2-0.

"They scored their first goal because we didn't communicate," he said. "We also had opportunities to score, but couldn't do it."

Junior Jennifer Ferry expressed concern going into the game about the team's tendency to tire in the second half.

"In our previous games, we have dominated the first half," she said. "We just can't seem to play well in the second half."

Despite the loss, Van Meter did note that the effort was much stronger than in their loss last weekend.

"Of course I'm disappointed with the outcome, but I'm pleased with the effort. Everyone contributed," he said. "On Saturday we played like the weather."

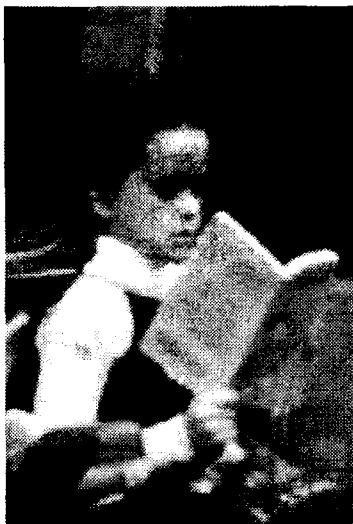

"Kalamazoo is a fine team and have always been a fine team," he explained. "They've always gone into the tournament and that has given them invaluable experience."

to help his team hold the White Sox at bay. At Notre Dame, Peltier holds the record for the highest batting average of any player after hitting .446 in 1989.

Although the most recent, Peltier is not the only Domer to make an impact in the "show." It is a little known fact that the Boston Red Sox snatched up Hall of Famer Carl Yastrzemski before he could play for the Irish.

Because freshmen were not eligible for varsity athletics then, Yastrzemski attended Notre Dame for three semesters and was ready to join the baseball team in the spring of his sophomore year when the Red Sox offered him a six-figure pro contract.

Actually, in addition to Peltier, Yastrzemski and Hall of Famer Cap Anson, over 80 Notre Dame players have gone on to careers in major league baseball. With others not too far behind, Notre Dame baseball players will continue to make an impact in the big leagues.

Rugby drops another; rowing, polo prepare

By JENNY MARTEN
Senior Sports Writer

The Notre Dame Rugby Club fell victim to the rainy weather and Purdue this weekend in a 25-3 loss.

In addition to the downpour, the Irish were hampered by injuries, position changes and mental mistakes. Down only 3-5 at halftime, the Irish allowed the Boilermakers three quick scores after the break and were never able to recover.

The team may have been looking past the Purdue match to this weekend's Chicago Area Rugby Football Union (CARFU) Tournament. As the top seed in the seven-team event, the Irish are looking to advance to the Midwest finals.

Last year, the team came a game away from the final four and this year they are determined to get there, but they have to perform at the Union Tournament.

One positive sign for the Irish last weekend was that the B-side beat the Boilermakers, 14-0.

ROWING

The Notre Dame Rowing Club is headed to its first regatta of the year this weekend as both the varsity men and women compete in the Head of the Ohio.

At the Pittsburgh event last year, the Irish had a men's lightweight 4 boat finish second and a men's lightweight 8 finish third. On the women's side, the Irish placed second in the lightweight 4 and lightweight 8 divisions.

This year, the Rowing Club will send nine boats to the 2.5 mile course on the Ohio River including a men's heavyweight 8, two men's lightweight 8s, a women's heavyweight 8, a women's lightweight 8, a men's lightweight 4, a men's lightweight 4, a women's lightweight 4 and a women's heavyweight 4.

WATER POLO

The Notre Dame Water Polo Club gets its first ever taste of conference action this weekend as the Irish play host to the Great Lakes Water Polo Conference North Division Tournament.

Competing at Rolf's Aquatic Center this weekend will be Notre Dame, Eastern Michigan, Bowling Green, and Findlay, OH. The team is a young one with only one senior, Ed Padinske, and three juniors, Brian Coughlin, Donald Balhoff and Eric Schultz, leading the underclassmen.

The Irish defeated Bowling Green twice last year and Eastern Michigan once while losing to Findlay by only a point.

Last spring and over the summer, the Irish worked closely with nine other teams in the Midwest to create the Great Lakes Conference. The conference should make things easier for the Irish in terms of scheduling, but several of the teams have women's squads as well. The Irish are looking for

Women's soccer shoots for 9-0

By BRYAN CONNOLLY
Assistant Sports Writer

Unbeaten and untied, the 8-0 Notre Dame women's soccer team will put its thirteen game winning streak on the line this afternoon when it faces off with the Raiders of Wright State at Alumni Field.

The Raiders (2-6) have had a very unfortunate year, losing several games by one-goal margins, as well as losing their top player for the season. Sophomore forward Angie Poppaw, who scored eleven goals last year, is out with a chronic knee injury.

"Obviously, with Notre Dame being unbeaten, it is going to be a very difficult test for us," said WSU head coach Hynton Dayes. "We just want to have a good showing."

The third ranked Irish last met Wright State in their final game of the 1992 season and claimed a 2-1 victory in what was perhaps the most thrilling match of the year.

Although the Irish had already outshot the Raiders 14-1 with only five minutes left in the contest, the score was locked at zero. Wright State's Christy Peters snapped the tie at the 85:39 mark and suddenly the sixteenth ranked Irish were on the verge of ending their season by snapping their four game winning streak and falling out of the rankings.

One minute and seven seconds later, however, defender Gennifer Kwiatkowski evened the score and midfielder Ragen Coyne followed by winning the game for the Irish with 36 seconds remaining.

"We dominated the game," said Notre Dame head coach Chris Petrucelli. "We just didn't score."

This year's edition of the Raiders is a very physical and well-coached one, according to Petrucelli. What they lack in scoring ability they make up for with aggressiveness.

"We have to move the ball quickly," he said. "We want to avoid getting into a physical battle."

"We have to concentrate on playing this game and not looking ahead to this weekend," said tri-captain Alison Lester, referring to the up-coming match with ninth ranked Stanford. "We have to make sure that we don't let them take us out of our game."

the Irish midfielders, who displayed superior speed and ball control. Lanza added another goal at the 53:26 mark off a Mathis pass, booting the ball from ten yards out to give Notre Dame a 6-0 lead.

The sophomore concluded the evening's scoring with 14:25 left to play in the contest with a 15-yard shot past Matt McGraw, DePaul's reserve goalie, to give the Irish a 7-0 victory. Freshman Konstantin Koloskov was credited the assist.

"I was happy that the team played really well," said Lanza, who now has eight goals and 17 points on the season. "There was no way I would have scored if my teammates didn't put the ball right on my foot."

With the win, the Irish raise their record to 5-3 on the season, while DePaul drops to 2-7-1. Notre Dame will be in action again this weekend, as they will host the Notre Dame Classic at Alumni Field. The tournament field will include Indiana, Penn State, and South Carolina, teams that all hold a top-25 ranking.

A forest fire could hit you right where you live.

Living near a forest means you have to be extra cautious about forest fires. Firesafe your area by clearing brush around your home and planting fire retardant vegetation. Use spark arrester screens on chimneys and vents. Install fire retardant material on roof and exposed understructure. And don't burn trash or leaves. These simple precautions could save your home and more importantly, your life. Remember, only you can prevent forest fires.

TWO QUICK QUESTIONS

1. If someone were to ask you if you drank responsibly this past weekend, what would you say?
2. What is responsible drinking?

Here is how many health professionals define responsible drinking:

Zero = Zero Alcohol. Especially if you're under 21, driving, chemically dependent, on certain medications, or pregnant.

One = One drink per hour, which sets the pace for moderate drinking.

AND

Three = No more than three drinks per day, and never daily.

If you have any questions, please call the Office of Alcohol and Drug Education at 631-7970.

Lanza scores 5 goals as Irish dump Blue Demons

Bill Lanza set a team record with five goals in last night's 7-0 win over DePaul.

By MIKE NORBUT
Sports Writer

"We dominated the game," was all head coach Mike Berticelli needed to say, as the Notre Dame men's soccer team bullied DePaul all over Alumni Field last night en route to a 7-0 rout.

The Irish were led by sophomore forward Bill Lanza, who notched five goals on the night, breaking the single game scoring record of four, a mark previously held by four former domers. The feat was last accomplished by Richard Herdegen in 1983.

"Bill Lanza had a great game," continued Berticelli. "You also have to look at the players around him. They deserve a lot of credit as well."

Notre Dame's offense, which struggled against a tenacious Indiana defense in last week's 3-0 loss, found no difficulties getting on track last night. The barrage started when Tim Oates scored from ten yards out off a Mike Palmer assist only 4:55 into the game to put the Irish up 1-0.

And then the Bill Lanza show got underway.

At the 13:30 mark, Lanza dribbled through the Blue Demon defense off a Kevin Adkisson throw-in and drilled a 15-yard shot into the upper right corner past goalie Michael Magno to put the score at 2-0.

Lanza's scoring spree was interrupted by Chris Mathis with 25:22 left to play in the first half. The freshman forward scored on a 15-yard blast into the lower left corner to give the Irish a 3-0 advantage. Palmer and defenseman Brian Engesser were credited the assists on the play.

Mathis was credited the assist on Lanza's next goal at the 27:49 mark, as he drilled a shot into the right side of the net from 12 yards out to make the score 4-0.

During this Irish display of offensive prowess, DePaul could not put together a single organized counter-attack, mustering just two shots on goal per half, while Notre Dame tallied 27 total shots, including 18 by halftime. Irish goalies Bert Bader and David Smith combined for the team's third shutout victory of the season. They were aided defensively by Dane Whitley and Chris Dean, who physically dominated the Blue Demon forwards.

"This is the kind of game we need to play," continued Berticelli. "We didn't let up, and we kept that killer instinct. To be a better team, you have to have a killer instinct."

Notre Dame's final goal of the first half came with 14:49 left to play. The ball was booted deep into DePaul territory off a direct kick, bouncing off Jason Fox and Tont Richardson before Lanza headed it in to give the Irish a 5-0 lead.

The Blue Demons opened the second half with a rejuvenated attack, only to be outplayed by

Notre Dame pros not just NFL, NBA

It is still the American pastime even though basketball and football are making strong cases for the title. Baseball, this week especially with pennant races coming to a close, gives the country a reason to smile and a reason to follow the magic numbers as they tick away.

On Sunday, the Chicago White Sox faced the second-place Texas Rangers in a doubleheader with elimination at stake for the Rangers. As most know by now, the two teams split the twin-bill to set up the Chicago's title-clinching win over the Mariners on Monday night.

In the midst of the hysteria on Sunday, it was easy to overlook one of the players in the second game who might interest the Notre Dame community.

While the achievements of former Notre Dame football players in the National Football League such as Joe Montana, Joe Theisman, Ricky Watters and Reggie Brooks and former Irish basketball players such as Adrian Dantley, John Paxson and Bill Laimbeer in their respective professional sports are well known in South Bend, many Irish fans and alumni do not realize that major league baseball has a few former Notre Dame players of its own.

In Sunday's second game between the White Sox and the Rangers, one of the more recent Notre Dame graduates earned a starting nod. 1989 Irish All-American Dan Peltier batted seventh in the Texas lineup.

Although he went 0-for 3 at the plate, Peltier made several catches in right field

Irish volleyball gets job done, wins 3-0

Following last night's 15-12, 15-11, 15-9 lackluster victory over a mediocre DePaul squad, "A win is a win" seemed to be the most commonly heard phrase among the members of the Notre Dame volleyball team.

"Tonight we let down a lot," commented senior co-captain Julie Harris, one of the few Irish players that did have an above average performance. "It's great that we were able to beat them in three, but being ranked the No. 1 team in our region, we have to be more consistent."

The Irish came out with confidence, jumping to a 6-1 lead behind four kills from senior middle-blocker Molly Stark and an ace from Nicole Coates. However, DePaul's Sheila Carroll served five straight points to even the game.

After a time out, Notre Dame came back with a more effective block, as Harris controlled the net with four kills of her own. After another Blue Demon rally, Coates ended the game with a solo block.

"Neither our serving nor passing was very good tonight," said Irish head coach Debbie Brown, whose team improved to 11-3. "We'll definitely have to work on those this week, because we made this match a lot tighter than it should have been."

The second game was very much in the same vein, as the Irish transition offense failed to create many easy scoring opportunities. The difference in this game was Harris, whose presence at the net caused problems for the Blue Demon attackers.

Harris, who finished with six kills and a team high five blocks, was able to put away the game with a final flurry of a block and two kills. The Irish also got a lift from three service aces, one each by Stark, sophomore Brett Hensel, and senior Janelle Karlan.

"Our blocking was pretty active tonight, but the middle person can't do it alone, there has to be help on the outside," explained Harris.

The Irish looked to break out of their lethargy in game three, as they ran to a quick 7-0 lead behind kills by Stark, freshman Jenny Birkner, and junior Christy Peters. Once again, though, the Blue Demons would not go away, as Wendy Fahlstrom and Jen Skarp brought them back to 7-5.

After the Irish net play increased the lead, Peters added an ace for a 13-9 lead. At this point new faces in the Irish lineup proved to be the difference. Using sets by reserve setter Shannon Tuttle, freshmen Kristina Ervin and Laura Reckmeyer each added kills. Ervin then ended the match with an ace.

"It was good to see both Kristina and Laura come in and get to touch the ball," stated Brown. "Also, I felt it was important to get Shannon the experience of setting a complete game, and she came in and played well."

Another positive note for the Irish came in news received earlier in the day that Peters had been named NCAA
