Observer apologizes

DAVID KINNEY
Editor-in-Chief

Running a college newspaper is no easy task. With over 200 paid employees and several hundred reporters, room for error is often great. Sometimes, we drop the ball. Sometimes it is an editor, sometimes a reporter, sometimes a manager.

There are times at any newspaper that the proper channels fall apart, and a decision is made at a lower level when it should go across the desk of the editor-in-chief.

Yesterday was one of those times. The Observer ran an advertisement from a group calling itself the Committee for Open Debate on the Holocaust. On its face, the advertisement argued that there is no proof that Jews were gassed by Germans in the Holocaust. But the underlying premise of the advertisement was that the Holocaust never actually happened.

Proper channels at The Observer were ignored in this case, and the advertisement was published without the knowledge or approval of the General Board. The Observer regrets this oversight and apologizes for running the advertisement.

In fact, the advertisement has a long history. For two years, this group has submitted similar advertisements to college and high school newspapers around the country. Some have decided to run it, including The Ohio State University, the University of Michigan and Duke University. Certainly, it is within their rights legally.

Others, including Columbia University, UCLA and the University of Virginia, have exercised their right to reject it.

While the advertisement ran because of a failure in our review process, a majority of The Observer's General

Board decided last night that it was not appropriate to publish it.

Our decision was not based on whether it was hateful or harmful to members of the community. Other advertisements, stories or letters to the editor could be considered in the same light.

We decided it was irresponsible to run the advertisement only because the facts about the Holocaust are not in dispute. The event is considered by virtually everyone to be an historical fact, not a subject of debate.

We believed the author's real premise - that the Holocaust never happened - was thinly veiled by a discussion of evidence.

But like the debate on other campuses, the board's discussion was vigorous. One faction of the board believed it would have been proper to run the advertisement with an editorial explaining our decision. The reasoning was that whether or not the facts about proof of the Holocaust are in question, the advertiser has a right to express those views.

To ensure that in the future controversial advertisements are not published before they are reviewed, The Observer has examined and strengthened our guidelines for screening advertisements. Ultimately, the advertising manager will be responsible for monitoring content.

Future decisions about whether to run an advertisement deemed controversial will be made by the General Board on a case-by-case basis. Yesterday's decision is not an indication that we will begin censoring those advertisements with which we disagree or those we deem hateful. It is only a statement that we will not publish information - either in a story or in an advertisement - that we know to be untrue.

Again, we regret the oversight.

Cavanaugh's conversion discussed

By JOHN LUCAS
Associate News Editor

A mixture of muted anger and concern for the future marked last night's closed meeting between residents of Cavanaugh Hall and representatives of the Office of Student Affairs.

Residents of the hall were informed on Wednesday evening that Cavanaugh would be converted to a female residence effective in the fall of 1994.

Patricia O'Hara, vice-president for Student Affairs and William Kirk, assistant vice-president for Student Affairs, came to Cavanaugh hoping to answer questions about both the reasons for conversion as well as plans for an efficient relocation.

During the emotional two hour meeting, O'Hara and Kirk answered a wide variety of student concerns ranging from the motives of the University to the retirement of the Cavanaugh name.

Although many different factors were taken into account, the final decision to convert Cavanaugh came down to beds, O'Hara said. The dorm was chosen to be converted because it has the 242 beds that will be needed for females next fall.

Freshman John Bishop questioned the choice of Cavanaugh over Zahm, wondering if the hall was chosen because residents would make "less of a fuss" over conversion.

"How could you not choose Zahm?" he asked O'Hara. "I know how you're going to answer, but try to be honest."

"I've been called a lot of things here at Notre Dame - most of them unprintable," O'Hara replied. "But I have never been called scared. I wasn't scared to take Zahm."

While Cavanaugh and Zahm are of virtually equal size, O'Hara cited staff considerations as one of the deciding factors. The University can easily relocate Cavanaugh rector Father Merwyn Thomas, while it would be a larger displacement for Zahm rector Father Thomas King.

Although the decision to convert the dorm is final, both stressed that the cooperation of residents is crucial to making relocation efficient.

"We will try our best to get you where you want to be," Kirk said. "We were very successful two years ago, and we would like to be able to do it again."

In order to begin the relocation process, Kirk explained that students will soon be asked for their preference for a new dorm. Cavanaugh residents will be placed in new dorms with groups of their friends as space allows, he said.

Several students expressed concern that by being put onto room pick lists by class, it will be difficult to end up in the same sections and on the same floors as their friends.

"We understand that it is in the best interest of the University for everyone to sacrifice a little bit," one resident said. "But by going onto room pick lists like everyone else, what kind of sacrifice are they (other students) making?"

Other than a promise that the Office of Student Affairs would try its hardest to accommodate all students, O'Hara said that special room pick concessions would not be made.

"A year or two from now downstream, we hope that you end up living with a circle of your friends from Cavanaugh,

INSIDE COLUMN

Family, Tradition, Cavanaugh

To the men of Cavanaugh:

After two and a half years of living in the 'Naugh, I feel that I can say with confidence that the three words of this headline belong together.

To me the "Notre Dame family" begins in the dorm and the traditions and legacy of the men who have lived in Cavanaugh Hall typify all that Notre Dame stands for. As I looked around at our meeting tonight, I saw the faces of men I was proud to say I lived with.

I saw freshmen who were upset that they had to start over again. Most of them had made the adjustment to college life, but now they are once again uncertain about their lives at Notre Dame. Sophomores who have a solid base of friends in the dorm and now are forced to decide which are the five to ten guys they most want to live with in their new dorms. There were juniors who wanted to be R.A.'s and seniors who won't be able to come back and wander the halls to see people they remember.

These are the unfortunate realities when the administration converts a dorm. The factors which they look at are dollars and cents but that doesn't make it any easier for us and the thousands of past Cavanaugh residents who now must deal with the end of a tradition.

The building will remain but the people will never be the same.

The continuity of experiences and traditions served to bond Cavanaugh alumni to the present. It was this continuous transfer from one group of guys to the next that kept the spirit of the dorm alive.

Now, that tradition will come to an end. Rich in history and full of the intangible which we call "dorm spirit", we will always remember the Cavanaugh where we've lived for the past few years as truly a special place.

I remember arriving freshman year and immediately realizing why I was at Notre Dame. Time progressed and I began to take part in the many traditions which I had heard about during freshman orientation. I'll never forget the first time I played section football or yelled at Zahm or went to mass in the Cavanaugh chapel.

Sophomore year, we got some new faces and some good friends left, but the tradition of Cavanaugh continued. We still had "section dances" and late-night talks in the hall ways.

This year, I crossed the hump and was halfway done with my Notre Dame experience. The new freshmen came in and picked up the tradition where the departed seniors had left off. Old friends came back to crash on my couch for a here or just to visit.

The point here is that the faces changed but the traditions continued.

Our society is defined by our history, our traditions. The tradition of excellence will be maintained in Cavanaugh until the end.

You come to Notre Dame and fate puts you in a dorm. Random chance may place you in a building, but the people within those walls make you love it. People return to a room, and they immediately begin to reminisce about the people they spent time with within those four walls. Remember that the four walls may now house women but the memories still remain.

Remember that Cavanaugh Hall is still The Pride of North Quad.

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Interactivity: Hype or television for the 90's?

NEW YORK
Three nights a week at 7 p.m., Manhattan cable channel 37 cuts from the chat show "Realty Views" to a spinning green orb with a message: "Fly the Electronic Neighborhood." For the next hour, about a dozen home viewers use their telephone keypads to navigate a 3-D world stuffed with graphic icons — a bicycle, a tree, a paint brush, a Zen temple — that contain multimedia fare. They tour a Russian palace, peruse a cable TV guide, hear full-motion sound bites of New York Gov. Mario Cuomo nominating Bill Clinton for president. They draw multicolored lines, watch a guy describe his bike route in Queens, read pro-feminist, anti-homeless, happy birthday and get-well messages, view an animated film about civil rights. It may not seem like much, but participants in this New York University experiment are pioneers in interactive television — a field larded with hype but also the potential to change America's couch culture in the 21st century.

More marital mutilation in America

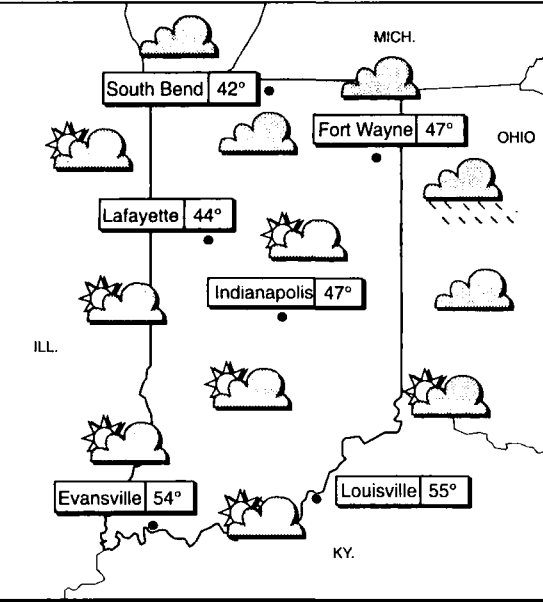

LOS ANGELES
A woman accused of cutting off her sleeping husband's testicles with a pair of 5-inch scissors will be allowed to spend the holidays with him, a judge ruled Thursday. Aurelia Macias, 35, is charged with spousal battery and mayhem in the attack on her 39-year-old husband, James, who she claimed was abusive and had extramarital affairs. She has pleaded innocent to both counts, which carry a maximum 12 years in prison upon conviction, said district attorney's spokeswoman Sandi Gibbons. Trial was set for Jan. 6. Both Macias and her husband had asked Superior Court Judge Marsha Revel to lift a restraining order against her so the couple could spend Thanksgiving and Christmas with their three children, ages 18 months to 17 years. Macias told authorities he fell asleep on Sept. 20, 1992, then felt a sharp pain in his groin.

Donahue implicated in lawsuit

AUSTIN, Texas
The Texas Supreme Court rejected a woman's claim that she suffered emotional damage when her mother revealed on the "Donahue" show that the woman was raped by her stepfather as a child. After the show was broadcast on Jan. 5, 1989, Nancy Anonsen filed a lawsuit against her mother, Miriam Booher; Phil Donahue; "Donahue" producer Jose Pretlow; and a Houston television affiliate that showed the broadcast. Without comment, the state Supreme Court on Wednesday upheld lower court rulings rejecting the lawsuit. Anonsen's attorney, David Berg, said he will appeal. "This is a case we anticipated taking to the Supreme Court of the United States and that is the next stop," Berg said. Supreme Court Supreme Court."

Budgetary restraints, changing needs thwart campaign promises

By LYNN BAUWENS
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

Problems with budgetary restraints and the changing needs of students have made it difficult for Student Body President MaryBeth Wilkinson and Vice-President for Academic Affairs Lynn O'Donnell to fulfill all of their campaign promises.

Wilkinson and O'Donnell captured 75.5% of the vote in last January's Board of Governance (BOG) election and began implementing their goals in March when they officially took office.

"We aim to begin a comprehensive recycling program, 24-hour access to the computer lab laser printers, continued development of Dalloway's, new equipment, specifically Stairmasters in Angela Athletic Facility, and easier CO-EX systems for meals between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's," they told The Observer during last year's campaign.

The equipment was purchased for Angela after BOG submitted a proposal for the Stairmasters to the administration and coordinated efforts with last year's Athletic Director, Jo-ann Nester.

"We got four of them," said Wilkinson. The Stairmasters were installed over the summer and were ready for student use at the beginning of the semester.

"One of our primary goals was recycling," said Wilkinson. However, she added, the comprehensive plan has been dropped in light of a cost-benefit analysis. "It would be more expensive (for the college) to recycle," she said.

Creating a student space in Dalloway's Coffeehouse was also a high priority for BOG. While money has been given to the renovated clubhouse to continue evening hours, the new hours in the dining hall prevent the need to keep Dalloway's open during the day.

Although disappointed that the clubhouse has not become more of a space for students and faculty, Wilkinson said that she thinks it is a success.

To increase student and alumnae connections, Vice-President for Academic Affairs Lynn O'Donnell has initiated an "Eye on Alumnae" series. It sponsored three Saint Mary's graduates as speakers this semester and plans to add to the program next semester.

O'Donnell is also drafting a proposal concerning the senior comprehensives, working towards equalizing requirements between departments. "It is an ongoing project," said Wilkinson.

After research, Wilkinson discovered that 24-hour access to laser printers in campus computer labs is not possible at this time. One of the obstacles is that student workers would have to work through the night to maintain access. However, the regular hours have been extended and there are plans for additional extensions the week before finals.

Problems with CO-EX, the cooperative system between Saint Mary's and Notre Dame's dining halls, was also discussed. One of the major problems was limitations on the availability of the exchange tickets.

"The problem with the CO-EX system was not being able to get lunch," said Wilkinson.

After conferring with students, Wilkinson said that this did not seem like a high priority, and plans to improve the current system have been dropped.

The increased activity fee for this year enabled BOG and the Student Activities Board to sponsor more events on campus.

According to Wilkinson, BOG has not spent more money than any other semester. "The money has been sunk into student activities for students," she said.

This year was the first year that BOG appointed the coordinator of SAB from a pool of applicants. In the past, the coordinator was an elected position but the appointment ensured a qualified and experienced leader, according to Wilkinson.

Regarding the benefits of the increased activity fee, Jill Hotek, coordinator of the SAB said, "My goals were to include more events so there were events for everyone," she added, "We've been able to not only have more programs, but to increase the quality. We've come pretty far."

Since classes began in August, there have been 16 SAB-sponsored programs. In the same three-month last year, there were only seven, according to Marlene Johnson, Assistant Director of Student Activities.

These events included the free outdoor concert by Oliver Syndrome in September that drew a crowd of 350. However, the average attendance for all the events including the movie series was only 124 students out of a student body of 1500, said Johnson.

Not all of the students on campus have seen the benefits of the increased activity fee.

"I don't really see the funds as helping," said Saint Mary's junior Kathleen Petit, regarding the allocation of the increased activity fee.

"A lot of the effort that goes into student government never shows. That's part of the job," said Wilkinson regarding this year's accomplishments. "It's been a challenge."

Looking towards BOG's plan for next year, Wilkinson said that she is not making any predictions.

"The system depends upon itself. This is the first time that a younger student hasn't been groomed for the position. So it will be interesting to see who is elected."

Meanwhile, BOG will be addressing issues surrounding the upcoming Keenan Revue and continuing work on coordinating equal comprehensive requirements between departments.

Morris: J. F. Kennedy shooting part of joint conspiracy to insure Vietnam War

By W. HUDSON GILES
News Writer

John F. Kennedy was the victim of a conspiracy initiated by Lyndon Johnson, J. Edgar Hoover and a mercenary division of the CIA to insure the enactment of the Vietnam war, according to Bob Morris in his lecture last night, "Who Shot J.F.K.?"

The actual events that transpired on November 22, 1963 in Dealey Plaza may never be recovered, but Morris supported that it was part of a conspiracy.

Morris examined different angles of the conspiracy against Kennedy, ranging from right and left extremist groups to a private detachment ordered by Khrushchev in collaboration with the KGB.

He said that the many theories that have circulated are to some degree justifiable.

The suggestion that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone is as absurd today as it was in 1964 when the Warren Report was released, he said.

"There is too much evidence that contradicts the lone gunman theory," he went on to say.

The possibility of a militant Cuban group acting in retaliation to the attempts made on Fidel Castro's life is reasonable to some extent, he said, but far more simplistic than the experts could agree to.

He added that the Mafia, who had financed JFK's campaign almost entirely, might have taken the drastic measures in order to spite Bobby Kennedy, who was focused on dismantling America's organized crime. Even that theory is widely disputed, he said.

"Kennedy was no dove either, he wanted covert operations," Morris said.

Most hard evidence blames ENSAM 273, the document that would deliver all troops in Southeast Asia home by Christmas of 1965, for Kennedy's murder, according to Morris.

There was discontent on the part of the CIA because JFK had plans to reorganize the CIA's structure, he said.

"He intended to take away the CIA's active ability and give it to the Joint Chiefs of Staff," according to Morris.

Unfortunately, said Morris, there are flaws with every one of these assumptions. He added that, "It is also hard to accept that like Oswald, Ruby was a crazed lunatic acting on his own principles."

Morris suggested the possibility of secret meetings in the basement of the White House with the National Security Council and radical fascist organizations as the hosts of the evenings agenda.

He noted that the National Archives, in conjunction with the CIA, FBI, and Pentagon released some 800,000 pages of classified documents recently due to a direct order from Congress. He noted, however, that many of the documents have been heavily blacked out or replaced by pink slips stamped "Restricted."

Morris expanded on specific names in order to prove his point. The Warren Commission, composed by Johnson, is said to have been nothing but a group of disinterested politicians whom Johnson knew would take no action towards an in-depth investigation.

Their purpose, he said, was only to appease a confused America who turned towards their new president for answers.

He said that contradictions to the lone gunman theory make the fourth bullet and grassy knoll possibilities all the more conceivable.

While no one can point the finger at a specific individual or group, Morris indicated there is much more to be learned about the conspiracy plot.

Van Bergen addresses ND gender bias

By KATIE O'CONNOR
News Writer

Though the Notre Dame community accepts women as students, faculty and for administrative positions, many of these women are victims of discrimination, according to Marilyn Van Bergen, who spoke on "Overcoming the Stigma of Being Difficult: Networking at Notre Dame" yesterday.

"The University culture may be open to women but closed to our values- the value of openness, the value of difference and the value of community," she said.

The lecture, sponsored by the Gender Studies Forum, focused on the gender bias, prejudice and discrimination of women at Notre Dame. Van Bergen, the Project Coordinator for the Office of the Assistant Provost, addressed the question of how women should learn and develop leadership.

She also discussed how organizational culture and values change over time in relation to women's development.

She defined "networking deals with developing strategies and sharing to inform to work towards promoting positive change."

Positive changes may be possible at this University, if the talent here acts as a powerful force, she said. The outside world will continue to change, which will influence the treatment of women at Notre Dame eventually, but Van Bergen said that change is needed now.

Discrimination on this campus has been described as "subtle and not so subtle," according to Van Bergen. Legal action is not addressed in each case, but the end result of discrimination "usually involves the victim leaving the community."

The feelings of several members of the audience involved the frustration experienced by women who attempt to demonstrate a leadership position. These women become victims of stereotypic attitudes, such as, 'not a team player', 'having a chip on her shoulder', and anger expressed in any form indicated a short temperament.

Van Bergen quoted Maya Angelou, "to cross a chasm you have to take a leap."

Leatherman seeks solution to global ethnic conflicts

By SUNNY BYERS
News Writer

A hopeful solution is needed to resolve ethnic conflicts in rising independent countries, according to Janie Leatherman at yesterday's lecture, "Preventing Conflict in the Post Cold World."

Janie Leatherman

"Minorities suffer from discrimination where special needs aren't met," said Leatherman, visiting assistant professor of government from the Kroc Institute.

Maintaining ethnic identity is important in order for groups to draw on certain markers to distinguish who they are and what they stand for, according to Leatherman, and there is a lot of stress on these groups, especially in the form of political manipulation.

"In order to have a resolution, there must be a transformation between two conflicting parties, and it starts by trying to identify with one another," she said. "It is not often possible to come up with a solution."

"Certain ethnic parties are denied access to the government which makes it hard for the party to come forward with a legitimate voice." Often parties use violence, which is effective, but brings no solution, she added.

"The CSCE (Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe) has four multi-level responses for the ethnic conflict," said Leatherman. These four points are: early warning and early action, political management of crises, search for solution, and peace keeping.

The main problem with these responses is that the parties are reluctant to cooperate, she said, and they are underfunded and understaffed to help effectively.

Leatherman gave the example of ethnic conflict in Russia recently.

The Chechenya and Ingushetia have separated and seek greater autonomy, and the Ingushetia are fighting with Northern Ossetia over territory.

By the end of 1992, some 60,000 Ingush had fled the Prigorodny district, leading to Ingush accusations of deliberate "ethnic cleansing" in favor of the Ossetians.

"The future of resolving challenges for the International Governance, lies in what can be accomplished through successful effectiveness," said Leatherman. The countries will still strive for continuing challenges of minority rights protection and self-determination."

Amanda Weppler always knew she would go to college. The Saint Mary's sophomore had the support she needed from her friends and family, but being the first member of her family to attend college could have been enough to make her think twice before continuing her education.

"A lot of people asked me how and why I decided to go, but it had always been understood in my family...that I was well educated...and would go on to college," said Weppler.

She was recently recognized for her decision to come to Saint Mary's by Indiana's "Realizing the Dream" program. Funded by a Lilly Endowment grant to the Independent Colleges and Universities of Indiana, "Realizing the Dream" honors both first-generation college students and the teachers who inspired them.

Weppler named Marilyn Malone of Marian Heights Academy in Ferdinand, IN, as being the teacher most influential in helping her make her educational plans.

"(Malone) was a teacher at my boarding school and she was very concerned with her students. She went the extra mile to make sure students were adapting well," Weppler explained.

Weppler had transferred to the private boarding school in her junior year in high school because she "really wasn't happy with the education" she was receiving at a public school, and admitted that she "didn't feel that it was challenging enough" there.

Nominated by Saint Mary's for her academic record and leadership qualities, Weppler only found out about being honored by the program a week before the Oct. 30 awards banquet in Indianapolis.

In the name of Weppler and the "Realizing the Dream" program a $500 contribution was made to Marian Heights for the general scholarship fund, and to Malone for use in the classroom.

Clinton to host Pacific forum

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press

SEATTLE

President Clinton, claiming a strengthened hand from his congressional victory on trade, vowed Thurs. to work to "drive down trade barriers" around the world as the host of a conference of Asian and Pacific leaders.

Likening himself to a "rug merchant" hawking U.S. goods overseas, Clinton told an airport rally that if the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference is successful, "we can create jobs here and jobs across the Pacific."

Participants in the conference predicted House approval of free-trade legislation would help move forward stalled global trade talks.

Standing inside an airfield hangar operated by The Boeing Co., the nation's largest exporter and the manufacturer of his presidential jumbo jet, Clinton said: "I thought I ought to bring Air Force One home." Buoyed by Wed. night's hard-fought House victory on the North American Free Trade Agreement, Clinton said: "We come here today hoping to drive down trade barriers" as well as promoting new trade opportunities and economic growth.

Security was tight and traffic slowed as Seattle welcomed one of the nation's largest gatherings of heads of state outside the United Nations.

Protesters demonstrated for everything from Tibetan independence to more public toilets as multiple motorcades snaked through town.

"No great nation can succeed without trade. Every economy here is proof of the importance of trade," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said as he opened the 15-member conference. "All of us here are committed to an open global trading system that will spur economic growth."

as well as new friends in your new dorm," O'Hara said. "But starting off with preferential treatment runs counter to that idea."

The closing of a male residence hall was necessary to accommodate a decision made by the officers of the University, O'Hara said. During their Nov. 1 meeting, the Board of Trustees decided to stay with a 45/55 percent ratio of men to women. The Cavanaugh decision was required to keep that ratio, she said.

Among the other alternatives that Student Affairs considered was the reconfiguration of study lounges in female dorms and the possibility of what O'Hara termed a "flip-flop," which involved a larger male dorm trading with a smaller female dorm.

Although all alternatives were considered, the conversion of a male dorm was the most painful, but also the most practical, according to Kirk and O'Hara.

"I'm not here to say that this is not a big deal- that's not true here," Kirk said. "Everything about the residence hall system is designed to make you feel strongly about where you live."

"We have a challenge- a situation to cope with and deal with and go on with our lives," said Thomas.

Changes may be rough in Mexico

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY

Everybody here agrees that a free trade treaty with the United States is a historic change for Mexico. The country's monuments to martyrs of U.S. invasion testify to that.

But most don't believe major changes will come quickly. And increased U.S. interest may be uncomfortable for a country that has made independence from the United States a watchword for generations.

The North American Free Trade Agreement, which passed its major hurdle Wednesday night with passage by the U.S. House of Representatives, will mean a greater U.S. economic role in Mexico and by Mexico in the United States.

It will mean greater U.S. scrutiny and criticism of Mexico's oft-criticized version of democracy. No Mexican government has given up power after an election in more than 120 years.

Mexico has spent much of that time trying to keep the United States from meddling in its affairs.

The loss of what is now the western United States still rangles in Mexico. A holiday honors the cadets who jumped to their death rather than surrender to U.S. invaders at Chapultepec castle in 1847.

Mexicans blame a U.S. ambassador for encouraging the 1913 assassination of their first elected president of this century, Francisco Madero. Coins and bills commemorate the nationalization of U.S. oil holdings in 1938.

"The national interests of Mexico have been defined (until now) ... as a distance from the United States. And now they are defined as a union," said political historian Lorenzo Meyer.

"That union requires a price and that price is that the Mexican elite cannot have the independence it had before."

Mexico has already abandoned its former protectionism. Under President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, the country has thrown open its doors to imports and investments, sold off most state companies and slashed the fat at others.

NAFTA helps cement that path. It should also help knock down Mexico's high interest rates. But it will take 15 years to push down the remaining barriers to U.S. and Canadian goods.

"A lot of people are going to look at it next week saying, 'Where are all these things starting to happen?' They're not going to see those kind of changes happening," said Roderic Camp, a noted Mexico specialist from Tulane University in New Orleans. "It's going to be a slow, gradual change."

Most experts say NAFTA also probably won't do much to cut illegal immigration anytime soon. It will take many years to create the jobs here that Mexicans need for a rapidly growing population.

And few expect it to have much impact on the 1994 election, when Salinas is expected to hand over power to a ruling party candidate he selects.

But American politicians ranging from Vice President Al Gore to former President Jimmy Carter argue that NAFTA would give the United States influence to prod Mexico toward democracy.

NAFTA "is going to permit a kind of supervision ... for example in the environment but also in politics, a greater U.S. presence," said political journalist Miguel Angel Granados Chapa.

Bustamante: NAFTA good for business

By SARAH DORAN
Assistant News Editor

By serving as a catalyst for economic integration, the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) approved by the House of Representatives Wednesday will sustain and improve the profitability of American businesses, according to Jorge Bustamante, the Eugene Connelly professor of sociology who is also a member of the advisory committee for NAFTA Mexican negotiations.

Jorge Bustamante

"By moving part of their production to Mexico, American companies will be able to maintain their jobs in the U.S. because the overall production costs will decrease," said Bustamante.

"That NAFTA represents a loss of jobs in the U.S. and a win for Mexico is simply false," he said.

In fact, the trade methods that NAFTA will usher in are not a radical change from those put into practice when Mexico entered the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs (GATT) in 1986, Bustamante said.

"NAFTA is not going to create anything new—it will only accelerate a process of integration begun with GATT," he said. That process of integration has already led to an additional 350,000 U.S. jobs because exports from America to Mexico have increased six fold since 1986, at a value of 30 billion dollars to the U.S. economy, said Bustamante.

Opponents of NAFTA, however, have grossly exaggerated the impact the trade agreement will have on the American economy, he said, and have overlooked the many benefits that it will bring.

One inherent benefit of the agreement lies within its regional economic strategy, which is designed to produce effects on a medium and long term basis, said Bustamante.

"The main objective is to make the economies of three countries more competitive as a Japan, particularly vis a vis Japan and Europe," he said.

As a member of the advisory committee for NAFTA Mexican negotiation, Bustamante, who is a citizen of Mexico, is in a unique position to analyze the ramifications of the trade agreement. The advisory committee was appointed by President Carlos Salinas to advise Mexican negotiators on the agreement's legislation.

Bustamante was appointed to the committee due to his position as president of The Institute of the Northern Border, a group that researches economics, the environment, and urban growth in the Mexican-American border.

Thousands demand peace Aidid emerges from hiding as hero in Northern Ireland

By SHAWN POGATCHNIK
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland
Tens of thousands of people stood silently in the classrooms and town squares of Northern Ireland on Thursday, praying for the peace their land hasn't known in a generation.

The crowds — believed the largest one-day turnout for peace ever in Northern Ireland — showed a community tired of nearly a quarter century of political and sectarian violence over British rule of the province.

More than 50,000 people in 16 cities and towns braved icy winds to rally at midday, according to the Irish Congress of Trade Unions. The group organized rallies in response to the past month's killings of 27 people.

In London, Prime Minister John Major repeated his commitment to allow Sinn Fein, the Irish Republican Army's political allies, to join talks if the outlawed IRA stops its 23-year campaign against British rule.

Major told lawmakers in the House of Commons the violence was kept going by "a feeling that the dead must be endlessly avenged and that any accommodation with the opposing viewpoint would betray those who have died."

"The right memorial to the dead is, surely, to make sure no one else is killed," he said.

A phone-in "vote for peace" project set up by Belfast's two morning newspapers attracted more than 120,000 calls in Northern Ireland by late Thursday, British Telecom said.

Students in hundreds of Roman Catholic and Protestant schools also stood for a minute's silence in prayer for the 3,100 people slain in the conflict since 1969 by all sides.

The violence comes from the IRA, which draws support from the province's minority Catholic community, and pro-British paramilitaries based in Protestant areas. Police and soldiers also have killed about 350 people.

"People like me, we've never known anything but the troubles," said Connor McKee, a Catholic high school student who joined the rally in Omagh, 65 miles west of Belfast. He said the demonstrations showed the politicians and gunmen "the ordinary people of Northern Ireland are sick of violence."

By far, the largest rally was outside Belfast's ornate city hall. More than 20,000 people filled the square and surrounding streets.

"This is the first time that industry, both unions and employers, local government, the churches and people themselves have spoken with one voice," said Tom Gillen, secretary of the Irish Congress of Trade Unions.

"I hope our politicians have been watching this," Gillen said, "and will get into a room and get a solution for all of us."

Thursday's scenes contrasted sharply with the hatred Wednesday night in Belfast's Windsor Park stadium, where about 10,000 Protestants watched their Northern Ireland soccer team tie 1-1 with the Republic of Ireland.

A few hundred Irish fans were protected by flak-jacketed police, but locals screamed insults at them throughout the match. Some chanted "trick or treat" — a reference to the words Protestant gunmen used before riddling a crowded pub with bullets on the night before Halloween, killing seven.

"It bordered on savagery the way they directed their taunts at us," said one of the Irish fans, Dublin businessman Eoin Dawson. "When Ireland scored we were hesitant to stand up and cheer, the intimidation was that severe. ... Those people just hated us for being Irish Catholics."

MOGADISHU, Somalia
Fresh from forcing a U.N. retreat on an order for his arrest, Gen. Mohamed Aidid emerged from hiding Thursday for a jubilant greeting from 4,000 shouting, dancing and drumming supporters.

Militiamen with rocket-propelled grenades and automatic rifles guarded him when his van drove into a marketplace for his faction's weekly "peace" rally. Crowds pressed around the van, women danced to the sound of drums and people beat the sand with their hands.

The celebration came two days after the U.N. Security Council lifted an arrest warrant for Aidid that had put a $25,000 reward on his head. It was issued in June after militiamen of his clan faction were blamed for attacks that killed 24 Pakistani soldiers.

The search for Aidid in his southern Mogadishu stronghold had effectively stopped after a fierce battle in early October killed 18 American soldiers and more than 300 Somalis.

In ordering a new inquiry into attacks on U.N. peacekeepers, the Security Council also suggested Tuesday that 35 of Aidid's men would be released soon. The vote recognized that a political solution required the participation of Aidid and his Somali National Alliance along with other factions.

"He obviously has a lot of power in Mogadishu," U.S. special envoy Robert Oakley told reporters after meeting with Aidid before the rally. "The United States realized we made a mistake getting involved. ... I'm glad to see the U.N. Security Council changed course."

Aidid, who leads one of the country's 15 major factions, is a powerful force mainly in southern Mogadishu and parts of central Somalia.

At the rally, three men played electric drums and guitars as Aidid addressed the crowd in his first public appearance in more than five months.

"All Somalis must understand wartime is over. Without outside interference, all Somali factions can solve their problems among themselves," he said.

A pop singer, Halima Khalif, led chants of "Aidid, Aidid!" and "Gul, gul!" (victory, victory).

In a sign of growing U.S. popularity, Oakley's convoy was cheered when Aidid militiamen escorted it through the crowd a few minutes before the clan leader arrived.

Panel discusses implications of NAFTA, pros and cons

By MICHAEL MARTIN
Business Writer

While many doubts and concerns were voiced as to its possible adverse, social and ecological effects, the economic setup of the North American Free Trade Agreement was hailed as a step into the future of world trade by Jeffrey Bergstrand, associate professor of finance, at last night's panel discussion on NAFTA.

Foreseeing large scale expansion of regionalized trade markets, Bergstrand characterized NAFTA as "a short-term substitute for continued trade liberalization."

As tariff barriers drop, the movement of capital and labor across borders will allow for efficient production and improved living standards for all, he said. He pointed out that a number of nations, such as Chile and Pacific Basin countries, were "waiting on our doorstep" for entrance into a NAFTA-type accord.

Even the most dire predictions of increased joblessness represent only fractions of percentage points in terms of total United States unemployment, said Bergstrand.

Adjustment to a free trade system may not be as abrupt as many think, said Kwan Kim, professor of economics. Mexico, Kim pointed out, has been moving towards liberalizing their trade relations for approximately 10 years now. By cutting tariffs and establishing free enterprise zones close to the border, the Mexican trade balance has gone from a $5 billion surplus in 1986 to a $5 billion deficit in 1992, he said.

This pact would simply move further along a path that we are already taking, said Kim. Because Mexico's economy, as measured by GDP, is very small compared to that of the United States the adverse impact of the new agreement would be mitigated, he said.

However, reviews were mixed as to the specific effects of the plan. Kim observed that there was a certain amount of "fast-tracking" the debate through Congress, ignoring more particular concerns not associated with larger measures of economic well-being.

Charles Craypo, professor of economics, placed emphasis on the impact on the laborers in each nation. Citing past efforts to liberalize trade, Craypo pointed out that theoretically expected increases in standards of living proceeding from growth in production do not always translate in practice.

"There is a need for a complex, comprehensive strategy for a high-wage, high-growth economy," said Craypo.

Asserting that the real question was not the number of jobs gained and lost but exactly who loses the jobs, Kim delved further into the worker dilemma. In Mexico, small businesses and farmers will be overrun by the large scale American enterprises, driving many into an already fiercely competitive domestic job market, he said.

In the United States, many unskilled laborers will lose their jobs to the low-wage competition across the border, said Kim, talking of the both the political and social ramifications of the lack of an "effective social safety net."

Concerns more environmental in nature were voiced by Roger Volker, a representative from the Citizens Action Committee. The flip side to increased efficiency in terms of specialization is the possible depletion of natural resources and a decrease in the quality of goods produced, he said.

The agreement stipulates that no nation can place barriers on trade, which precludes the United States' imposing its own quality standards on imports, said Volker.

Most important to Volker is the environmental dispute resolution process. Commissions of appointed members, enclosed in a cloak of secrecy that would only be removed with the agreement of all three nations from each of the signatories, would be allowed to adjudicate differences that arise, he said.

Volker cautioned that these groups could fall under the influence of large business coalitions and "take the power away from the community."

American Airlines strike delays flights, cancels many others

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
Associated Press

Thousands of American Airlines passengers were shuffled to other carriers or later flights Thursday when flight attendants began the biggest airline strike in nearly five years. Many were bitter about delayed vacations and missed appointments.

American wouldn't say how many flights it was able to operate, but sources at another major carrier familiar with American's operation estimated 30 to 50 percent of American's flights were disrupted.

The union, which struck at 7 a.m. EST over wage and other contract issues, claimed the walkout was 90 percent effective.

Meanwhile, the more powerful Allied Pilots Association was voting whether to join the flight attendants, a move that would likely ground the airline.

The flight attendants strike was the largest against an airline since Machinists struck the now-defunct Eastern Airlines in 1989.

Thousands of passengers at Chicago's main hubs in American and Dallas-Fort Worth were shuffled to other airlines, particularly United and Delta, or put on later American flights.

The company said it had started recruiting replacements who could be trained under government supervision in 10 days.

The Association of Professional Flight Attendants said its strike would last 11 days, a period chosen so any replacements would not start working before the strike ends.

However, American said flight attendants who strike likely would not have jobs to return to.

Jets at some airports left with no passengers but with their luggage aboard. The airline flew many planes empty in hopes of matching the jets with available flight attendants.

Some delays and empty flights were reported at Denver, Boston, Oklahoma City, Phoenix, Fargo, N.D., and New York City. However, passengers generally remained calm.

Cable companies under investigation

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
Attorneys general in 23 states have banded together to investigate whether recent cable TV price increases are legal.

"We had hoped the congressional cable act would cure a lot of the problems, but the cable industry is very creative," Florida Assistant Attorney General Jack Norris said today. "They are very confident and they will push this to the edge of the envelope."

Under the new law, basic cable television rates are regulated by the local communities and expanded service is regulated by the Federal Communications Commission.

But the law also gives state authorities the power to intervene.

Norris said a steering committee comprising Wisconsin, Florida, Arkansas, Pennsylvania and Oregon is moving quickly to determine courses of action in the states.

He said he couldn't release the names of the other 18 states without permission, but The Washington Post reported today that California and Virginia and New York also were among those involved in the investigation.

The attorneys general will be working with the FCC to strengthen regulations, but will file suits against specific cable companies if necessary.

Proposed national tobacco tax could lead to job loss

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press

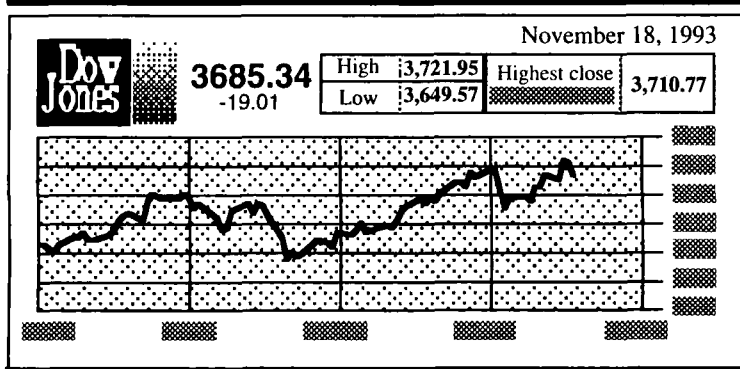

WASHINGTON
President Clinton's proposed quadrupling of the cigarette tax to pay for health care would destroy 81,000 jobs, union officials representing tobacco workers said today.

"Asking one group of workers, one industry and one region of the country — the South — to foot the bill for a national program is simply not fair," Robert Curtis, president of the Kentucky AFL-CIO, told a news conference in the Capitol.

Clinton has asked Congress to raise the 24-cent-a-pack federal tax on cigarettes to 99 cents to provide a share of the new money needed to finance an overhaul of the health-care system. Taxes on cigars, snuff and other tobacco products would be raised similarly.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bigotry and hate are still anathema to the University

Dear Editor:

Exactly a year ago this month, a letter from me in this space expressed my outrage, and that of all of the officers of the University, with a mass-mailed anti-Semitic tract published in these pages as an opinion column. Ironically, in that letter I listed examples of other commonly circulated hate tracts, including, as I wrote then, "the cruel delusion that the Holocaust... never happened." On Thursday a version of this delusion was the subject of an advertisement run in these pages.

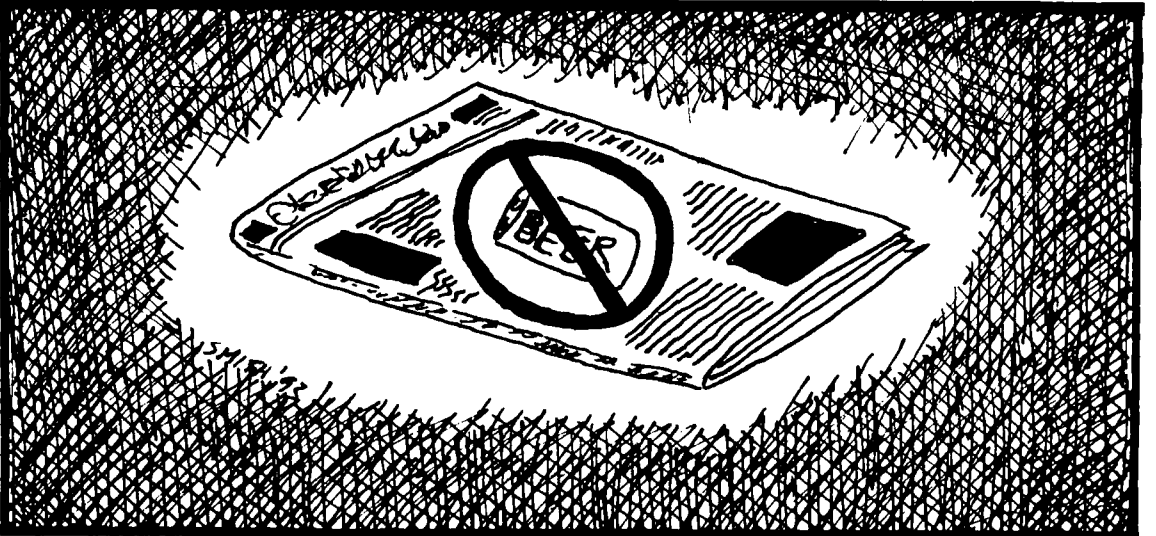

I have been told that an error in oversight by The Observer's top editors led to the publication of this advertisement. I have been told further that the editors intend to apologize for the error and to provide other means for readers to be part of a full airing of this incident. I believe that David Kinney's regret over this incident is genuine and that he is fully aware of the seriousness of the error.

At the same time, it is imperative that material such as was published Thursday not again appear in these pages. The Observer already has in place a policy regarding what is and what is not acceptable advertising. I ask that the editors amend this policy to make it clear to all who work on the paper that hate messages such as the one published Thursday will not be accepted for publication.

I say again what I said here a year ago: "Bigotry and hate, whether expressed in print or in deed, whether from inside or outside this community, are anathema to everything this University stand for and will not be tolerated here."

Debauchery doesn't prove we're #1

Dear Editor:

Where has David Hungeling ("Champs? We're not worthy," The Observer, Nov. 18) been the past week?

Is he still too intoxicated from the last football weekend that he can't read the half-page note submitted by the women of Lyons Hall thanking us for our prayers and support, which was placed in the same edition as his absurd column?

Does he not realize that the "enthusiastic" behavior which he criticizes Notre Dame students for not displaying—"huge parties, over-consumption of alcohol and other drugs, nakedness and mass fornication"—is the type of behavior which causes fatal accidents like the recent death of Mara Fox to occur? Not only am I amazed by his extreme naiveté, but also his complete lack of sensitivity for encouraging that which has destroyed one life and shattered many others in our own community.

It seems as though he has severely missed the boat on defining school spirit. On how many other college campuses do you find as many students adorning themselves with their college emblem? Students, alumni and other fans lined up an hour before the pep rally to squeeze into the JACC.

People came from all over the country by busloads in plaid pants and green sweaters—many without tickets or even places to stay—to catch some of the spirit found here and to be a part of it. The entire stadium during the game squelched the Seminole chant with fingers in the "L" formation, yelling Lou's name. And after the game, three thousand students along with the band and cheerleaders stood outside of Grace Hall to commemorate our recent victory by witnessing the lighting of the #1. If you don't consider that school spirit, I don't know what else is.

Hungeling suggests school spirit was exemplified by the Georgia Tech students who removed a goal post and set it on fire, practically burning the whole city with it. All I can see in that is destructive stupidity. I think that if he took the time, Hungeling would find that most students here are not "jealous of schools which lack massive intellectual capacity and otherwise aim at underachievement," nor do we "wish we were more like them," at least by the time we become seniors. And most, he may also realize, would not agree that "week-long displays of debauchery" are necessary to prove that we are number one. By using the strong senses of good judgement, responsibility and balanced lifestyle that got us in to this University, Notre Dame students are showing what it really means to be national champions.

Maybe we do "place too high a priority on insignificant things like grades and future employment opportunities," but I don't think that placing a high priority on community is insignificant at all. I feel sorry that he does.

Someone has to 'El Kabong' this Geary's temperance ploy

I read Sean Geary's anti-alcohol piece (The Observer, Nov. 16) with interest. Like everybody else, I was inclined to hoot at him, and, what with my deadline coming up and little in the way of inspiration, it occurred to me that hectoring him in print might not be a bad idea.

On the other hand, I hate the idea of pleasing the anonymous toughs who left messages on my machine after my pious article on Haiti two weeks ago. Notre Dame, like all American colleges, has an army of rockers—defining as "rockers" those vegetables who buy beer mirrors, posters of beer cans of many nations, who join inter-dorm basketball teams named "brew crew," who boast of having a "body by Bud," and so on. To be honest with you, I could never stand these guys. They've been causing me trouble since eighth grade. They can't hold their liquor, they have no manners, and they're dangerous in packs. They're fake Deadheads, too.

So it's a hard call for me to take a populist stance in favor of alcohol. It's perfectly okay with me if the rockers suffer, as long as I have access to the golden cup. Still, someone has to El Kabong this Geary's temperance ploy. "Raise your soda cans and drink to another week of sobriety!" he says. He goes further: "I challenge [anyone in favor of responsible drinking] to not drink until the end of the semester."

Until the end of the semester! Judas Priest! We'd have half a dozen would-be Charles Whitmans sniping from the top of Hesburgh alone. Is there anyone more priggish and depressing than an recovering alcoholic? These people are even bigger buzzkills than the rockers. "I became a royal pain in the ass when I was drunk," Geary writes, implying a change in the morning.

And yet, I feel bad for this Geary. He is bound to be harassed by rockers for his ingenuous editorial. His avowed "wish that there was a group of people who wanted to humiliate me" is bound to come true. It turns out that the campus is much worse than anyone is thought. Rockers hide everywhere. This creep who ran over Mara Fox was a law student, of all things! Here I thought law students sat around in soft gray suits reading Blackstone's "Commentaries," and it turns out that they are the same beer-swilling louts as elsewhere, or worse. It's almost enough to turn your sympathies to the SUDS types.

Almost. My own attitude, however, is what I would consider the sane and democratic one. What harm can there be, after a long afternoon of reading "Major Problems in the Early Republic," of having a cold beer?

Or even two? This "semester sobriety challenge" just doesn't jibe with a mature lifestyle. It's in the gregarious, keg-founding atmosphere of the fraternity that alcohol is most dangerous. Drunk in the quiet and solitude of one's own home, however, it presents no social problems at all. The good citizen-drinker is a peaceful sort, who only wants to make a pan of dehydrated hash browns before falling asleep fully clothed on an unmade bed.

There, his open-mouthed snore bothers no one, and the ever-present temptation to operate heavy machinery is nowhere at hand. Let us have a nation of solitary drinkers, lumbering moodily home from Martin's with a sack of frozen veal patties and a case of Hamm's. There, unlike Geary, we are unlikely to offend friends; or, unlike so many burly rockers, are we likely to attempt date-rape on a vulnerable co-ed, since none are present to inflame our appetites.

This is responsible drinking at its best. It could teach these rockers a thing or two about inner resources also, and so could be considered a spiritual aid, of sorts. With no one to boast to or high-five, the rocker would find himself reduced to the American male's essential Roy Orbison/John Hinckley nature. There he would learn humility, and the deep reverence for womankind that only prolonged exposure from them can achieve. Is a slight metabolic change really such a terrible price to pay for this? We would be better scholars, and better men, if we adopted the creed of the solitary drinker.

I think even Sean Geary would raise a toast.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

This letter goes out to those thieves who stole my sign

Dear Thieves (via Editor):

On the occasion of the opening night of the recent production of Hamlet, you came to Washington Hall in the dark of night and stole the hand-painted sign which we use as a marquee. You climbed out onto the ledge and cut the canvas sign off of the metal frame with a knife and then retreated to your lair. (It could almost be a romantic were it any more than the boring work of common thieves and vandals.)

I've only told you what you already know, so far. Here is some information about which you are no doubt ignorant. Students, faculty, and staff spent many hours building, painting, and installing that sign. The materials were purchased and the labor paid for out of the same budget that funds theatre productions and student projects. Now we'll have to spend similar hours rebuilding and repainting a new sign with newly purchased materials and additional paid labor. What you vandalized in minutes was the product of considerable care and effort.

It's possible that we in the theatre should be flattered that our artwork is in such demand. Usually it's our plays bring people to the theatre. Perhaps you were disappointed that you were unable to get tickets to the sold-out production of Hamlet. In the future, consider buying season tickets instead.

If you find that you grow weary of your trophy you may return it to my office (101 Washington Hall) without fear of retribution or even questions. If you are not quite finished with the sign, perhaps you will consider displaying it at the Boston College game and draw national attention to Shakespeare as well as to the Department of Communication and Theatre.

Censoring Revue would be in bad taste

Dear Editor:

I am writing concerning the topics of the content and the location of the Keenan Revue, which were discussed at the BOG meeting this past Monday evening. Although I was unable to attend the meeting because of the amount of studying I had to do, I hope my opinion will be considered as part of the open forum.

I think all of this contempt towards the Revue is petty and, if censored or moved off of the Saint Mary's campus, will do more harm than good. One of the reasons for showing it at Saint Mary's is to create more unification between the campuses and attract those Notre Dame students who otherwise might never cross the street.

The Revue has been held here for over ten years signifying one of the only upheld traditions incorporating both campuses. After all of this time, kicking the Revue out of O'Laughlin will only alienate us the more and create a rift between the Saint Mary's students and Keenan Hall.

Student Body President Mary Beth Wilkinson is quoted in the Observer as being offended by the stereotypes of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame women portrayed in the Revue and that we, as women, need to have a say about our appearance in a production that is so popular.

First of all, upon entering the theatre at each of the performances, members of the audience are presented with a program including letters from residents of Keenan Hall and its Rector, Brother Bonaventure Scully. All of these letters say the same thing: have an open mind. Have a sense of humor.

Laugh at yourself. The Revue is not meant to sustain the stereotypes but exaggerate them and make fun of them, so if you're easily offended, don't attend the show. And the skits don't just poke fun at the stereotypes placed on the women on both campuses, but the ones placed on men's dorms, the administration, even the residents of Keenan themselves.

And over the years, people have found it to be a great dose of humor that is rarely seen within the rigid Catholic walls of both schools. It is not meant to be taken seriously; that's the whole point of its taking place.

Maybe each Keenan resident needs to take a vote on whether they feel they're being negatively portrayed as well. I wonder if Patty O'Hara would like to set aside a couple of days to oversee the auditions for the skits herself.

What's left?

If everybody took part in judging what should and shouldn't be included in the Keenan Revue, it wouldn't be Keenan anymore, there would be no humor about the campuses whatsoever to lift the burden off the day to day drudgery we all feel after awhile, and the production will have completely lost sight of its purpose.

The content hasn't gotten more offensive over the years, only the audacity of some of the people who have chosen to be members of the audience.

People love it and they look forward to it every year. Keenan looks forward to performing it at Saint Mary's every year. Saint Mary's should not be just a women's college concerned about presenting the values of women but also presenting the humor of women.

The stereotypes are just as ridiculous for us as they are for the women of Badin, Breen-Phillips and all the women's dorms of Notre Dame, and yet Mary Beth Wilkinson, Melissa Whelan and Heidi Deckelmann seem to be the only ones lacking the ability to laugh at themselves and the inane stereotypes that circulate throughout the campuses.

The Board of Governance is only one group of women on this campus, and I hope that before they vote on something so detrimental to the community that they will consider the opinions of all the students first. I think that a vote should be taken within all the dorms on campus like the ones for the campus smoking policy or cable TV in hall lounges.

I feel that it is BOG's responsibility to be fair in this decision by including a formal vote rather than just an open forum. Otherwise a small population will have control over censoring or even discontinuing the Keenan Revue on the Saint Mary's campus, which is not reflective of what the community wants as a whole.

Glee Club fills Stepan Center with harmony

BY ELISABETH HEARD
 Assistant Accent Editor

This year, one of the top all male choruses in the country will lift their voices in "Seventy-eight Years of Harmony."

The Notre Dame Glee Club, consisting of around 60 members, will give their first performance of the year on Friday in Stepan Center. "Every 2 years, the Glee Club has a concert involving Glee Club alumni," said John Sebastian, senior and member of the Glee Club for 4 years. "This year we will have 200 former members."

The concert is divided up into several parts, the last section consisting of songs performed by current members and alumni. The event starts off with foreign pieces from a number of varying styles. The audience can look forward to hearing "Cantate Domino" by Hans Leo Hassler, and "Demon of the Gibbet" by Paul Hindemith. The theme then changes as the Glee Club performs Negro spirituals like "Ain' -A That Good News!" and "Swing Low Sweet Chariot." The concert then concludes with a culmination of Glee Club favorites and traditional Notre Dame songs. For this part the alumni will join the current members for a total of almost 300 people on stage.

"There's a quite varied selection of music," said Sebastian. "There's something for everybody."

In preparation for this event, practice has been held everyday from 4:45 p.m. - 6:00 p.m. "It's pretty intense and serious," said Sebastian. "There's a real commitment to keeping up our reputation."

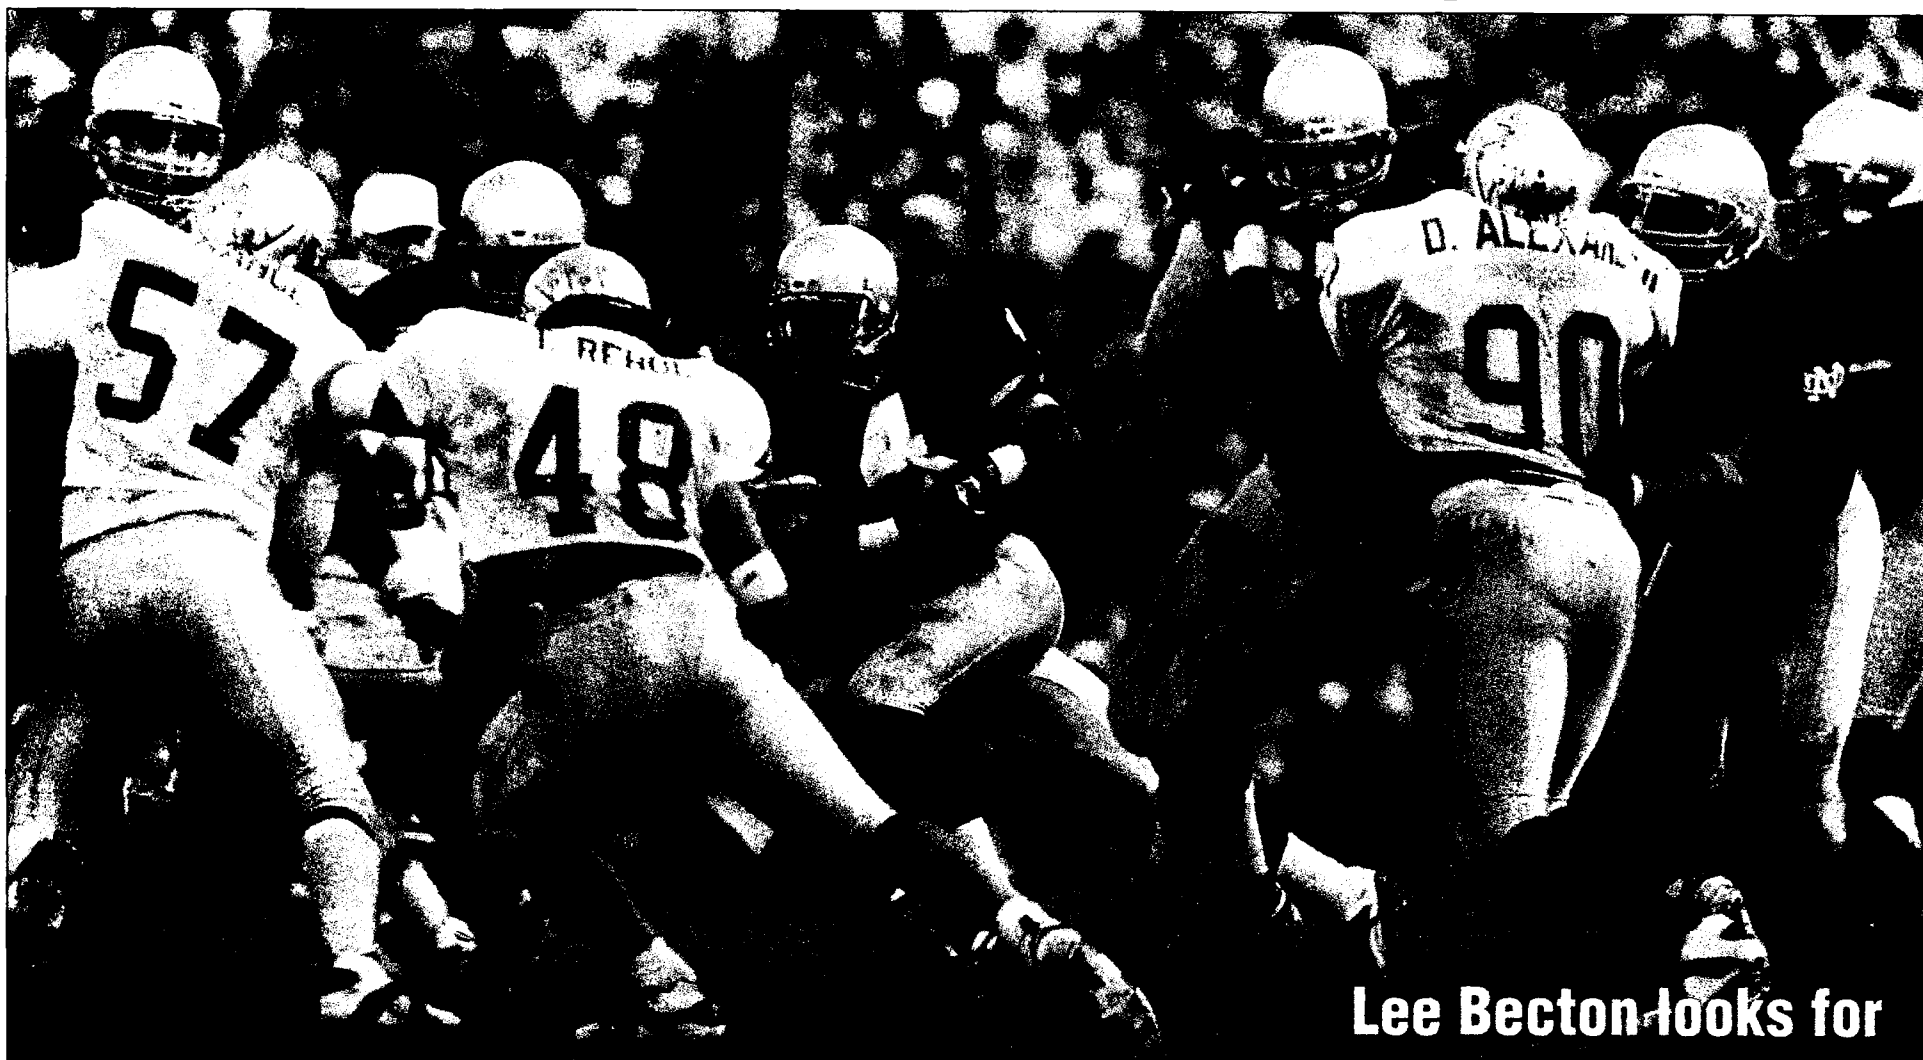

Tryouts for the Glee Club are strenuous, consisting of both a vocal selection and an interview. The interview section is vital to the audition because according to Sebastian, "its important to not only be a good, talented individual, but he must also be compatible with the personality of the Glee Club."

Besides the concert, the Notre Dame Glee Club will be releasing a new Christmas CD titled, "On Christmas Night." It was recorded last year in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart Parish and contains modern and traditional style Christmas favorites. The CD will be available at the Bookstore and the concert.

"Seventy-eight Years of Harmony" will be held at Stepan Center, Friday, November 19 at 8:30. Tickets, $3 for general admittance and $2 for students, are available at the LaFortune information desk.

It doesn't so much bother him anymore. In the beginning, the doubters would wear on him constantly.

They lined up to take shots at the heir to the prestigious title of the starting tailback at Notre Dame.

"He's too slow to be a Notre Dame tailback," they said.

"He'll never start there," they scoffed.

Lee Becton now has no reason to think about the many doubts that once circulated through the air around him, hanging on like a would-be tackler.

"I feel like I may not be as fast as a lot of other people, but I get the job done. I think that's more important than speed."

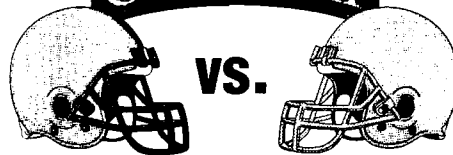

Most Irish fans will remember what one of his doubters joked when he was held out of a game last year with a hamstring injury.

Passing attack could give Irish trouble

By MIKE NORBUT
Sports Writer

If history repeats itself, then No. 17 Boston College's offense could be in deep trouble.

Last year, the Eagles, ranked ninth in the country, walked into Notre Dame stadium last year with a 7-0-1 record and one of the most explosive offenses in the nation. They walked out with 54-7 loss.

The Irish defense took over from the outset, holding Boston College to only 11 first half yards. Quarterback Glenn Foley was sacked four times and intercepted once.

This year, after a shaky 0-2 start, the Eagles have churned out seven straight decisive wins and have once again proved themselves as an offensive threat. Over the last four games, they have outscored their opponents by 102 points, and average 512.4 yards of offense a game.

"Last year Boston College came in nationally ranked and we were focused," said Irish head coach Lou Holtz. "This year's Boston College team I think is better than last year's. There are many teams capable of beating us and one is Boston College on

Overachieving Eagles no match for Irish

By MIKE NORBUT
Sports Writer

Don't look for any surprises tomorrow when watching Notre Dame's offense in action. Just look for Boston College players to be scattered all over the field after every play.

"I think we realize that to be successful, we have to have a good offensive line," said Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz.

The Irish big men have dominated up front all year, with their latest display of prowess coming last week against Florida State. Notre Dame ran for 239 yards and scored four touchdowns on the ground against the Seminoles.

This week, look for more of the same, with tackles Aaron Taylor and Todd Norman leading the way. One setback for the Irish is a hip injury to center Tim Ruddy, who will not be in perfect condition for tomorrow's contest.

"They are extremely effective offensively," said Eagle head coach Tom Coughlin. "They pound, pound, pound the ball at you."

Saturday."

The Eagle offense is centered around Foley, who will be making his 43rd start of his career. A Davey O'Brien Award candidate, the Boston College quarterback has thrown for 2,224 yards and 19 touchdowns as opposed to only three interceptions on the year.

He will once again test the pass defense of Notre Dame, who last week handled Florida State's "fast break offense" without a problem.

will probably be at the top of Holtz's game plan tomorrow, as they easily outman the Eagle defensive linemen.

What Boston College does not have in terms of size and strength on the line, however, they make up for with the play of their linebackers.

The Eagles are led defensively by inside linebackers Stephen Boyd and Brian Howlett, who lead the team with 134 and 78 total tackles. The defense still gives up 161.7 yards rushing per game, however, and may have trouble meeting a lead blocker at the point of attack.

Juniors Lee Becton and Ray Zellars will be busy in the Irish backfield. The starting tandem will be shuffling in and out with freshmen Randy Kinder, Marc Edwards, and Robert Farmer.

"When I look at our football team, we're very young at the running back position," said Holtz. "We lack breakaway speed and strength at fullback."

Notre Dame has enough of both to get by, however. Becton has had five straight 100-yard rushing games, and needs just 78

Boston College will give a three tight end look on Saturday, a formation that the Eagles surprisingly throw out of most of the time. Eagle tight end Pete Mitchell, a junior All-America hopeful, is Foley's favorite target with 50 catches on the season.

Tackles Bryant Young and Jim Flanigan had Charlie Ward running for his life last week, and will need to do so again to take some of the pressure off of Bobby Taylor, Jeff Burris, and the rest of the Notre Dame secondary.

"Defensively, all we can remember is the pass rush of a year ago, and it looks to be exactly the same," said Eagle head coach Tom Coughlin.

The Irish may find their best success in blitzing Foley, forcing him to make a bad decision and throw bad passes.

The Irish defensive line will also be responsible for stopping the Boston College running backs, led by fullback Darnell Campbell, who averages five yards a carry and has scored a NCAA-leading 17 touchdowns on the year.

After the loss of superstar Chuckie Dukes last year, the Eagles have seemed to slip into the rut of being a one-dimensional passing team, though Campbell has made the most of his opportunities. It's a given that he'll get the ball in short yardage and goal line situations.

Notre Dame linebackers Pete Bercich and Justin Goheen will have to fill the holes in the line and stop Campbell and the other Eagle backs, Anthony Comer and David Green, before they get started. Allowing these large backs to get into the secondary may make for a long day for the Irish.

If things go according to Holtz's plan, though, the only thing that will be long for Notre Dame's defense will be the time spent watching the Irish offense yards tomorrow to reach the 1000-yard mark. And Zellars had no trouble running over the supposedly dominating linebacking core of Florida State.

Quarterback Kevin McDougal has executed the Notre Dame offense to perfection, making the right decisions and the passes in crucial situations.

Last week, McDougal completed 9 of 18 passes for 108 yards and had several fine passes dropped as the Irish scored at will in the first half and on crucial drives in the second half.

His targets, receivers Lake Dawson, Clint

Johnson, and Mike Miller, will have to contend with a secondary of overachievers, led by safety Terence Wiggins, who has two interceptions and 62 tackles on the year.

Pressure on McDougal may be the key for the Eagles to stop the Irish passing game. Outside linebacker Mike Mamula leads Boston College with seven sacks, mainly off blitzes. The Irish backs will have to pick up these blitzes before releasing in pass routes.

The only real way for the Eagles to stop the Irish offense, however, is to depend on the Boston

Foley's explosion keys Eagles' attack

By ED McLAUGHLIN
The Heights Staff

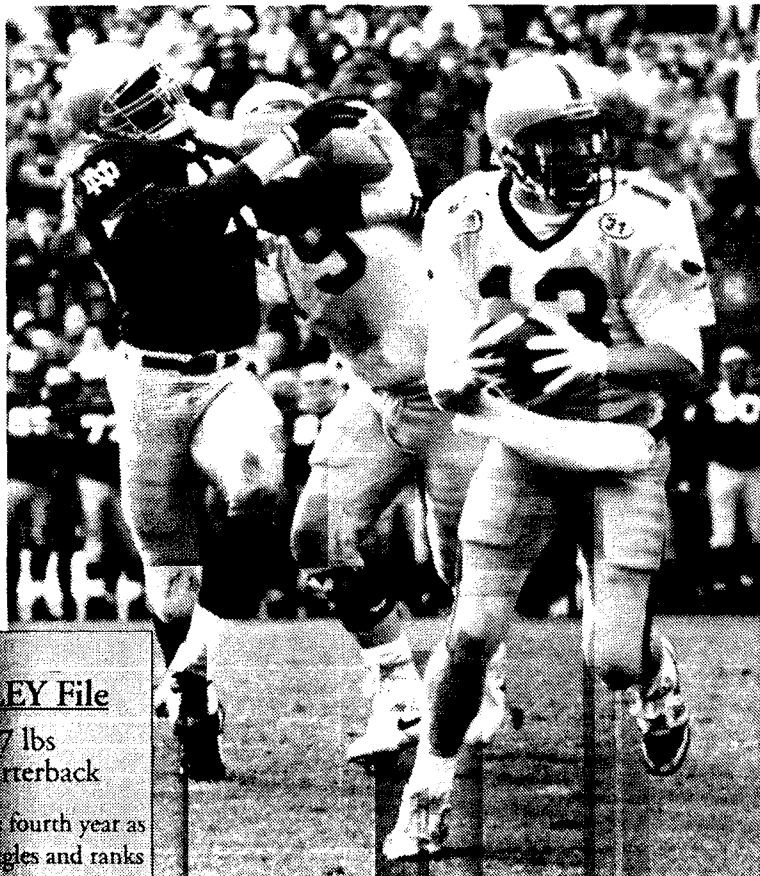

On September 4, he stood alone after the 23-7 loss to Miami and pointed the finger of blame at himself. When asked what the problem was with the Eagles offense, he replied, "Today it was the quarterback position. Period."

He did not blame an inconsistent offensive line or the paltry running attack.

Quarterback Glenn Foley blamed himself for the loss, wanting more than anything to make up the loss to his teammates.

Foley has made up for the loss in the past five games, averaging 42 points per contest in high scoring victories. Over that span, Foley has thrown for 1,460 yards and 13 TD's.

The offensive line has stepped up and given Foley the time to throw from the pocket. The running game, led by FB Darnell Campbell (14 TDs) and Anthony Comer, has allowed Boston College to throw at will, not in dire straights. Make no mistake, the offense's success starts with the quarterback, the leader of the offense.

Foley began the game against Pittsburgh by entering the BC record book. He threw for 360 yards and three touchdowns, equaling Doug Flutie's all-time

BC record for touchdown passes with 67.

Foley's five-game explosion becomes more impressive with the distribution of the ball. Clarence Cannon leads the team with four TD catches, with Pete Mitchell and Keith Miller each recording three.

Foley played only a half against Tulane and made the Green Wave see red. Foley threw for 327 yards and two touchdowns while having four balls dropped. Coughlin commended Foley after the game for his short afternoon of work.

"Execution was the key," Coughlin said. "Glenn did a good job of recognizing coverage. He made some big plays and had a very solid game. Glenn moved the ball around the field today."

"We have some real good skill people," Foley said. "They catch the balls and they made some great runs today. When you have guys doing that the games get a lot easier."

The question remains whether or not Foley can continue to light up opposing defensive backs as the season takes a turn down a difficult road. However, Foley knows that the team will need to avoid a dive like the team suffered last season.

"We have to keep rolling when we're playing well," he said. "We still need to iron things out but know we have so many weapons on offense that teams will have to worry about."

The most lethal weapon on the field wears number 13 and plays the quarterback position.

The History of the Series

The Last Time:

Notre Dame 54, Boston College 7

Last year Boston College came into Notre Dame Stadium undefeated and the Irish scored touchdowns the first five times they had the ball, roaring to a 37-0 halftime lead.

Reggie Brooks ran for 174 yards and two TD's while Rick Mirer completed 13 of 18 passes for 180 yards and a career-high three TD's. The Irish compiled 576 total yards against an Eagle defense that had been permitting only 11.9 points and 264.8 yards a game.

The Irish defense sacked Glenn Foley four times, forcing him to throw an interception and fumble once.

COVER STORY

Lou Holtz.

Becton will agree he may not have the breakaway speed of a Reggie Brooks or Ricky Watters, but his long strides, shifty style, and tremendous heart have convinced all the doubters who said he didn't have what it takes to be Notre Dame's starting tailback.

"Things like that tend to make you want to work harder and establish yourself as a starter, which I took this spring to do that," says Becton of the challenge that awaited him before the season. "I went out and I practiced hard everyday to establish myself.

"I really don't think about them. People can say what ever they want to say. I'm gonna just go out and play and not let what they say affect my play."

However, not only has Lee Becton silenced the critics with his emergence this season, he has gone beyond nearly all of the goals set by even his most fervent supporters. Becton is now starting to carve a place for himself in the hallowed Notre Dame record books.

Becton has put together a string of five consecutive games with at least 100 yards rushing—a string equaled only by former Irish All-American Allen Pinkett.

Not Jerome Heavens, not Vagas Ferguson, not even Brooks was able to accomplish such a feat.

Furthermore, Becton's 922 yards heading into this weekend's matchup against Boston College gives him an excellent chance at becoming just the fifth Notre Dame running back to rush for 1,000 yards in one season. Only Brooks, Ferguson, Pinkett, and Al Hunter can claim that distinction.

"It really feels good to have my name up there with Allen Pinkett, who was a great running back here," says the unassuming Ernul, N.C. native. "I feel that it's a great honor to just have my name mentioned at the same time as him."

Becton's name is being mentioned a lot lately. It has been said that statistics don't lie, and what Becton has done this season has been just short of amazing.

Another hamstring injury sidelined Becton for the Irish's week-four victory over Purdue, and he could manage 25 yards on just six carries while still hampered by the injury the next week at Stanford.

Since those two games Becton has rattled of the improbable string, which includes a 16-carry, 142-yard game against Pittsburgh, a 20-carry, 177-yard performance against USC, and last week's 122-yard effort against then top-ranked Florida State.

Becton's 122-yard performance is even more amazing considering that Florida State was leading the nation in rushing defense before the show-down.

The dominating Seminole defense was starting to make a habit of shutting down the opposing team's top running backs. That was until Becton came along.

Becton says he approached that game just like any other, and that allowed him to perform the way he did.

"I always want to do well, but I pretty much think that I can always improve on the things that I do," says Becton. "I'm always striving to do better."

Becton says he formed that attitude through his mother, who has always told him to never be satisfied with being average.

"My mother had a great influence on me," remarks Becton. "She always told me that I am doing good, but that I can't be satisfied, and to always do better."

"I always told him to always do the best he could and to go the whole 100 percent," says Mrs. Becton. "And that's what he's believed in. I told him not to go in half-stepping—he knows what he's capable of so he just has to do all he can."

"But I didn't even think he'd do this much," she adds. "I thought he might carry the ball every so often or maybe move to another position—he can play just about any position you know. He just always strives to do his best."

That philosophy has not only carried Becton to greater heights as a runner, but has helped him to improve in all facets of the game.

"I think there's more to being a running back than just running the ball. There are other things as far as receiving, blocking," notes Becton.

"I just feel like throughout the years I've worked on those things to where I feel like not that I can't get better, but I think I'm on the right track to being a complete running back.

"It's just nice to know that your team can count on you. And not just running but catching or making a block."

To say that Becton has been counted on this season is a major understatement. His running has been a major factor in the Irish achieving their first No. 1 ranking since 1990. If Notre Dame is ultimately successful in its quest for yet another national championship, Becton will undoubtedly be tagged as one of the heroes.

His success on the ground this year seems to be paralleling the Irish's surprising success on the gridiron, and he's loving every minute of it.

"I never really thought about it happening," says Becton of achieving the No. 1 ranking. "I always dreamed that it would be great to happen, but I never actually thought that it could or that it would."

"It's a great feeling, especially getting close to a thousand yards and the team's success being as it is. I mean we're number-one. It really feels good."

No single football team in America has so dominated collegiate sports as Notre Dame has. And no other team has commanded a more loyal following or drawn such consistently large audiences for its nationally broadcast games. Now, for the millions of Fighting Irish fans from coast to coast, here is a unique opportunity to share the excitement through a celebration of its four great coaches: Knute Rockne, Frank Leahy, Ara Parseghian and Lou Holtz.

This is a story only Ed "Moose" Krause could tell. Associated with Notre Dame for over sixty years as a player, a coach, and the school's Athletic Director through three decades, he knew and admired each of these four men; he knew first-hand their values, their techniques, their ability to inspire. And Krause's memories—rich, colorful, anecdotal—come to life in the pages of this extraordinary book. Here is the fiery rhetoric, and the inspired leadership; here are the intensity, commitment and pride that have driven the coaches and have turned their teams into perennial contenders for the national championship and ten-time winners. This is a memoir written in the enduring spirit of Notre Dame itself.

MOOSE KRAUSE is Notre Dame's only dual Hall of Famer, in football and basketball. STEPHEN SINGULAR is a New York Times bestselling author whose previous books include Talked to Death, which was the basis of Oliver Stone's Talk Radio.

Allen Pinkett is Notre Dame's career rushing leader.

Reggie Brooks' one-season wonder vaulted him to legendary status.

Who is the Best Running Back to Wear a Notre Dame uniform?

by
Jason Kelly

Lee Becton's name is seldom mentioned in the same breath as Notre Dame's great running backs of the past.

That may change Saturday. He could become Notre Dame's all-time leader in consecutive 100 yard games with six if he passes the century mark against Boston College.

Becton is currently tied with Allen Pinkett with five straight games of 100 yards or more.

He needs just 78 yards to join Pinkett, Reggie Brooks, Vagas Ferguson and Al Hunter as the only Irish backs to gain 1,000 yards or more in a single season.

Lee Becton? Believe it or not, Becton will likely join some prestigious company in the Notre Dame record books this week.

Has he now carved a position for himself among the greatest backs in Notre Dame history?

You be the judge.

ALLEN PINKETT

In the "Pinkett-Pinkett-Pinkett-Punt" era of the mid-80s, records were broken like the hearts of Irish fans.

Pinkett owns virtually every Notre Dame rushing record, due in large part to an offense that revolved almost entirely around him.

In four years as the starting tailback, Pinkett carried the ball 889 times for 4,131 yards, both career records.

Pinkett's five straight 100-yard rushing games came in the middle of the 1983 season against Colorado, South Carolina, Army, USC and Navy.

He rushed for 100 yards a record 21 times in his career.

VAGAS FERGUSON

Notre Dame's all-time leading rusher until Pinkett came along, Ferguson was the featured running back from 1976-79.

He still stands second on the all-time list with 3,472 career yards.

His single-game and single-season rushing records still stand. He ran for 255 yards against Georgia Tech in 1978 and collected 1,437 yards during the 1979 season.

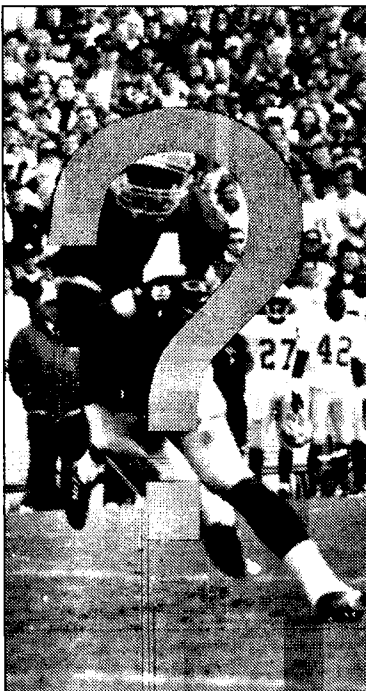

He also joins Reggie Brooks and Jim Stone as the only Irish runners to have two 200-yard games in their careers.

PHIL CARTER

Carter bridged the gap between the Ferguson and Pinkett eras.

He rushed for 117.4 yards per game in 1980.

Carter remains fourth on the all-time rushing list with 2,409

Is Lee Becton one of Notre Dame's best running backs ever?

yards in just three seasons of extended action.

JEROME HEAVENS

Heavens set the career rushing mark in 1978, a record the legendary George Gipp owned for more than 50 seasons.

He finished his career with 2,682 and remains third on the all-time list.

Heavens still holds freshman records for yards in game (148) and yards in a season (756) set in 1975.

In 1977 he finished just six yards short of 1,000 and he is tied with Gipp for third on the all-time list with 10 career 100 yard games.

REGGIE BROOKS

Lost in the shadow of his older brother Tony, Reggie Brooks broke out of it in a big way in 1992.

It began in the second game of the season against Michigan with his breath-taking touchdown run.

It continued throughout the season as he became the first back in the Holtz era to rush for more than 1,000 yards in a season.

He finished with an 8.04 yards per carry average, less than one tenth behind Gipp on the all-time list.

Brooks was a punishing runner, breaking more tackles than he avoided.

Twice he ran for more than 200 yards in a game, against Purdue and USC.

Virtually unknown before the season began, Brooks' success helped him finish fifth in the Heisman Trophy balloting.

JEROME BETTIS

Bettis generally hit defensive players harder than they hit him.

Fourth and two. Give it to Jerome, no problem.

He played only two full seasons, leaving after his junior year and leaving quite an impression.

Bettis had Notre Dame's 19th and 20th all-time rushing games, collecting 179 yards against Stanford in 1991 and 178 against USC the same year.

He is 13th on the career-rushing chart with 1,912 yards.

Had he stayed for his senior season, he probably would have moved up to at least No. 3 on the all-time list.

LEE BECTON?

It is unclear where Becton fits into this group.

His numbers will never compare to Pinkett's or Ferguson's because the Irish have too much depth at his position.

He is not fast or flashy. And he isn't as dominating a runner as Brooks or Bettis.

But he has been as consistent as an Irish tailback in recent years.

Five, going on six, 100 yard games and potentially only the second 1,000 rusher in the Holtz era.

Does Becton belong among the best running backs in Notre Dame history?

You be the judge.

A Forgotten Star

Vagas Ferguson was the great back few people remember

Few running backs in Notre Dame history have made as big an impact as Vagas Ferguson.

He was a member of the 1977 national championship team. He is the No. 2 all-time leading rusher in school history, behind only Allen Pinkett. He holds Notre Dame records for yards in a game (255 against Georgia Tech in 1978) and yards in a season (1,437 in 1979).

Yet few people seem to think of Ferguson when they think of Notre Dame's past greats.

Everyone knows the legendary figures like George Gipp and the Four Horsemen. And more recent greats like Allen Pinkett, Reggie Brooks and Jerome Bettis are fresh in everyone's mind.

Ferguson seems to get lost in the shuffle, but he doesn't mind the lack of attention.

What he remembers most about his career at Notre Dame isn't the big games or the records.

It's the friends he made along the way.

"The accomplishments are nice and it's great that you're name still gets mentioned after all these years," he said. "but your best memories are of the friends and the camaraderie on the team."

Ferguson is currently the athletic director at his alma mater, Richmond (Ind.) High School.

He played for Dan Devine at Notre Dame from 1976-79, collecting a total of 3,472 yards.

Irish running back Lee Becton probably will never approach Ferguson's rushing totals, but he is on a quest for a record of his own today—six consecutive 100-yard games.

No other Irish running back has ever accomplished that feat. In fact, Pinkett is the only back ever to have five consecutive 100-yard games.

"It's a great accomplishment and I wish him good luck," Ferguson said of Becton's quest for the record, but he is reluctant to compare himself to the running backs of today.

"This is a different era and each person is different. Lee has been playing very well and I hope he continues to play and help the team win the national title."

Games of Interest

Notre Dame is special for Eagle fans

When Boston College came to town last year, hundreds of well-imbibed Eagle fans flooded Notre Dame's Friday night pep rally and claimed an entire section behind the Irish football team and band.

Bryan Connolly

They vigorously chanted their Eagle cheers throughout the proceedings, disrespectfully interrupting players, coaches, and guest speakers alike.

Dan Wagner, last year's leprechaun, silenced the Eagle contingency at the rally's closing when he noted that Boston College and Notre Dame have a lot in common—they're both excellent academic institutions with outstanding athletic programs and Catholic traditions. "However, if there's one thing that distinguishes Notre Dame from Boston College," he said, "it's that Notre Dame has class."

It wasn't that they hated Notre Dame or felt that disrupting the rally would prove to be a strategic advantage. They simply acted true to their nature—overconfident and outrageous.

The B.C. weekend usually proves to be a unique experience for Notre Dame students. Eagle fans start arriving in their Winnebagos on Wednesday and Thursday and take both the campus and South Bend by storm.

They charge to the local pubs and watering holes in order to adequately experience "the Irish tradition." Strangers clad in maroon and gold march proudly around the quads.

There's just something intangible about Notre Dame that captivates BC fans.

You see, Boston College does not have the tradition of success of Notre Dame.

Notre Dame was the team most Bostonians followed when the Eagles were struggling. The Irish stood for the same ideals and held many of the same traditions as Boston College.

It also didn't hurt that Boston has one of the largest Irish communities in the country. You would find more people in Boston wearing Notre Dame's clothing than that of any other college.

For many Boston College fans, the trek to South Bend is more than just a road trip—it's a pilgrimage.

So when the Eagles came out to South Bend last year as an undefeated team, they really didn't know how to act. It was almost like they had a conflict of interest.

It's time for me to come clean. For 51 weeks a year I am a Boston College fan. I warp facts and disregard reason with the sole objective of convincing myself that "this is the year" for the BC. This is, in fact, my favorite weekend of the year.

And in all objectivity, Irish fans should be much more concerned about this game than they currently are. Since falling in its first two games of the season to No. 4 Miami and to an upstart Northwestern squad which also gave the Irish a challenge, Boston College has won seven consecutive games.

Anyone expecting a repeat of last year's 54-7 shellacking of the Eagles is in need of a wake up call.

Odds are that you'll be caught off guard at that point this weekend by something said or done by an Eagle fan.

"Notre Dame is a wicked good team and they ah numbah one for a reason," your typical Boston College fan will say. "Howevah, if we play hahd we may just suprise'em!"

Don't let comments like this disturb you, because all Catholics deserve to dream the impossible.

Miami tries to stay in the national title hunt as it heads into what will be a frenzied Morgantown as the undefeated Mountaineers play their biggest game since they played for the national title against the Irish in 1988.

Last week West Virginia rolled over pitiful Temple 49-7, as backup quarterback Darren Studstill threw for 274 yards and completed 17 of his 28 passes. Mountaineer tailback Robert Walker continues to impress, as he ran for 130 yards on 14 carries. Notre Dame shaker off his injury and be back in the saddle next weekend.

Miami, on the other hand, struggled to defeat a poor Rutgers squad in the Orange Bowl. The Scarlet Knights pulled to within 24-17 with 13:41 left in the game, but the Hurricanes went on to win 31-17. Ryan Collins ended up throwing for 291 yards and two scores.

Look for the Mountaineers to go ahead early on the strength of their crowd, but Miami's strength and big game experience should triumph in the end.

Alabama at Auburn

The undefeated Tigers have been instilled as a one-point favorite in this year's Iron Bowl over the once-beaten and once-tied Roll Tide, and they will be playing at home in Jordan-Hare Stadium for a change.

Auburn rolled at Georgia 42-28 last week to preserve their 10-0 record, as electrifying running back James Bostic ran for 183 yards and three touchdowns.

Meanwhile, the Tide continued to struggle, squeaking past the 2-6-2 Mississippi State Bulldogs 36-25 on the strength of a Lemanski Hall runback of a blocked field goal. The field goal would have tied the game at 20 near the end of the third quarter.

With the way the Tide has played as of late, it would not be surprising to see them get beaten by an inspired Auburn Tiger/War Eagle squad.

Ohio State at Michigan

Wouldn't it be nice to see the Wolverines end up 6-5? This could happen if they lose to the 9-0-1 Buckeyes in Ann Arbor.

If Michigan does pull off the upset, the Buckeyes may see their Rose Bowl hopes go down the drain. They will have to sit back and watch Wisconsin and Michigan State tangle in Tokyo in December. If the Badgers win, they will go to their first Rose Bowl since the '60s.

Imagine, the Big Ten title being one on the other side of the globe. It could happen.

UCLA at USC

The Rose Bowl will be decided the old fashioned way: in the Coliseum between the traditional Pac-Ten powers. However, this year something is different.

The Trojans are an uninspiring 7-4, as they gained a chance at the crown after beating No. 25 Washington 22-17 last week. Arizona had crushed USC 38-7 earlier in the year, but the Wildcats were eliminated from the race with last week's 24-20 loss to Cal.

On the other side of town, UCLA lost to an inspired Arizona State squad 9-3 after it looked like they had the title all but wrapped up.

ASU linebacker Dan Lucas returned an interception 31 yards in the fourth quarter to win the game for the Sun Devils.

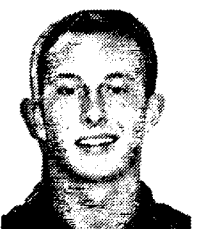

However, it looks like UCLA quarterback Wayne Cook will return after missing the ASU game with an injury, and the Trojans may get burned by the nation's top receiver, UCLA's J.J. Stokes.

Glee Club memories: candlelight, castles, and wine

In 1969, when I started going on extended bus trips as the Glee Club chaplain, I was twice the size physically, though only half the man spiritually, that I am now. This meant that when I got up from my seat, two Clubbers could be made comfortable in the space I left behind me.

Thanks to the peregrinations of the Club, I've seen most of the landmarks featured on the videotape called, "This Is My Country," shown nightly on a local channel just before the station signs off with the National Anthem. I've seen the alabaster cities from sea to shining sea, and viewed the purple mountain majesties/Above the fruited plains, many times in the past quarter-century.

And maybe before I die with my boots on as chaplain of the Club, I'll get to Alaska and Hawaii. As a boy growing up in Maine, I never traveled further away from home than New Hampshire, until I was nine-teen. Until I made my debut as guru to the Club, I'd never been west of the Mississippis, or closer to those cotton fields down South than the Arlington National Cemetery.

I'm grateful for the way the lads have educated me, since everything I've seen, I've seen through their eyes, as well as my own: Disneyland and Disney World; the launch sites at Canaveral and Mission Control in Houston; the city by the Bay and "the great mother of big apples" on the Hudson; Pat O'Brien's in New Orleans and the Hofbrau

Haus in Munich. Chaps my age who have seen Berlin, saw

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

it buried in rubble as G.I. Joes. I saw it with Clubbers, who went through Checkpoint Charlie as guests of what once had been the Army of Occupation.

Riding shotgun on a Greyhound with the Glee Club, you can become bus-wise from the noise that stays in your head. I traveled once on a bus with the football team as their game chaplain. They don't sing loud songs, or horse around, or yell at each other. They wear neckties, look out the window, chew gum a lot, and mentally review their game plan. They don't tend to leave sweethearts in every port, since they're under no pressure to treat their fans charismatically.

A spirited Glee Clubber, suited up or wearing his grubbies, awake or asleep, on stage or off, starts wearing his heart on his sleeve the minute he's off the bus. For me, being with them in the heartland, away from this campus, is like being an extra in a Hollywood musical made in the Forties.

The script is light comedy: Boy meets Girl. Boy wins Girl, wooing her with music as a member of the ratpack he travels with, all of whom resemble each other like clones of Elvis. Boy leaves Girl, to the tune of the Victory March. Boy, back on bus, writes Girl a "Dear Jane" letter, which he mails at the next overnight stop, where he will look for another heart to break.

Boy explains to Girl that though he will always respect and care for her, there could never be more between them than a one-night stand, since he has a campus sweetheart, or a home-town-honey, whom he doesn't want to hurt. The End.

This is a typical scenario, though there are alternate versions. At the end of the trip, awards, seldom flattering, are passed out to Glee Club chaps who have been the most visible as philanderers.

American college students abroad are easily identifiable, since they tend to be better-looking and better-fed than their European counterparts.

Arriving in typically overcast London, already sun-tanned in early June, demi-godly creatures from the brave, new world showing off their perfect teeth they seem a breed apart from their pasty-faced English cousins, though the English complexion can be full of roses.

Walking through Victoria Station, I can tell who the Americans are, when those youths from all nations descend from their buses, by their unconscious grace as heirs of the Dream; by their blue-eyed charm as innocents abroad; by their good-nature as Happy Warriors backpacking electronic toys from Sony.

The Glee Clubbers I go to Europe with are just as good as all this says. I want them to see Europe, because I want Europe to see them. As good will ambassadors, they bring with them neither tanks, bombs, nor napalm. In WW II, Yankee Doodle went to London, just to meet the ladies. He kissed the girls and made them cry, when he them all behind him.

The London Times told the story of of Yankee Doodle Dandy, who stuck his face in every pub, and with the girls was handy. "Overpaid! Over-sexed! And Over Here" the headlines complained.

When the Gentleman song-sters are not on a spree, they'd willingly die, if they could, for the sins of Yankee Doodle Dandy as the ugly American, perfidious in Albion. Clubbers are some of the dearest fellows alive. They keep the rest of us from leading lives of quiet desperation, and we've grown accustomed to their grace. I could tell you where the bodies are buried, if there were any bodies in Clubbers' lives.

Their press notices are like an absolution. In Switzerland, Clubbers left the Alps just where they found them; and when they left Austria, the hills were alive with the sound of music, the same as always. In Germany, it was those other Yanks who hung out the washing on the Siegfried Line.

In France, they left Mademoiselle from Armentieres who hasn't been kissed in forty years-just as unfulfilled as when they found her; and in Ireland, they wore condoms when they kissed the Blarney Stone.

So, lads, thanks for the memories of candlelight and wine, and castles on the Rhine. The candlelight I always see in my mind's eye is from the altars where we shared Mass at St. Mark's in Venice, at Notre Dame in Paris, and in the Catholic chapel at Dachau, one of the sites of the Holocaust.

The wine which I will not forget was the new wine we were served in Vienna in 1971, in shops which sported young trees over the door, as a sign that the spring wine, which went down like water and came up like thunder, was on sale there.

I remember the deaths, including Dean's, and transfigurations which took place whenever lads, drunk with weariness and the ordeals of travel, switched from their bus togethery, into sweat-stained tails, and shirts that looked gray from lack of laundering.

And going on stage, they turned out a performance that shook down the thunder from the skies, and maybe drew down the cherubim who were awed by the sound from the heaven's above the thunder. This kind of a transfiguration is the meat and potatoes of a Glee Clubber's life.

Everything else is a fringe benefit. As the chaplain, I'm there as a cheerleader, who must remain an outsider, who never stands on risers and sings. I get a lion's share of the fringe benefits, but the transfigurations are perquisites to which only Clubbers are entitled, together with the Director who delivers the miracle coming from God.

Reggie Miller's streak comes to an end

INDIANAPOLIS
Otis Thorpe scored 16 of his season-high 24 points in the third quarter and grabbed 11 rebounds to power the unbeaten Houston Rockets to their eighth win, a 99-83 win over the Indiana Pacers Thursday night.

Houston's 8-0 start matches its franchise record, set in the 1984-85 season. The NBA's leading defensive team, the Rockets have yet to allow 200 points in a game.

Akeem Olajuwon added 19 points, 10 rebounds and five blocked shots, and he moved into third place in blocks with 2,476 on the all-time list.

Pacers guard Reggie Miller did not dress because of a sprained left ankle. Although his streak of 345 straight starts ended, he still figured in the box score. He got a technical foul with 1:05 to play and was ejected.

His ejection came one minute after Pacers coach Larry Brown got two technicals and an ejection.

The Pacers also were without forward Derrick McKey, who went on the injured list Thursday with a strained right hamstring.

The Rockets, owners of the NBA's best record, looked like they would blow the Pacers off the floor. They raced to a 14-0 lead in the opening 4:45, while the Pacers were missing their first 11 shots from the field. Indiana didn't get its first score until the 6:57 mark, when Dale Davis, who had 16 points and 10 rebounds, scored on a short jumper.

But the Pacers got back into the game by hitting six straight shots and running off 10 points in a row and trailed by just nine at the quarter, 27-1.

They cut further into the lead in the second period as the Rockets bench came up empty on offense. The Rockets' reserves managed just one point in the second quarter, and that came on a free throw by Scott Brooks when Indiana was whistled for illegal defense and a technical foul.

The Pacers held the Rockets to 17 points in the quarter, their best defensive quarter of the season.

The Pacers actually regained the lead on three occasions in the third quarter, leading for the last time at 60-59 with 5:20 left when Pooh Richardson, their top scorer with 18, hit a jumper.

But Thorpe put Houston in front with a three-point play and later broke a 64-64 tie with a transition score at the 3:30 mark, igniting an 8-0 run. The Pacers never led again as the Rockets pulled away.

Cedric Maxwell added 18 points for Houston, including four of seven on 3-pointers.

The Pacers shot just 39 percent from the floor and 40.9 percent — 9 of 22 — from the free throw line, and scored only 14 points in the final quarter, a season low. Houston shot 50 percent from the field.

Trail Blazers 120 Bulls 98

Rod Strickland had nine points and six assists during a second-quarter offensive explosion, and the Portland Trail Blazers went on to rout Chicago 120-98 Thursday night, their most one-sided victory ever over the Bulls.

The Blazers shot 68 percent from the field and outscored the Bulls 35-15 in the second quarter to take a 64-36 halftime lead. Portland led by as many as 37 points in the third quarter and 36 in the fourth.

Clifford Robinson, starting in place of Harvey Grant, who was

Reggie Miller's consecutive games started streak came to an end Thursday, but he still managed to get a technical foul.

ill, led the Blazers with 21 points in less than three quarters before sitting down for the rest of the night. Clyde Drexler added 19 points and Strickland had 14 points and nine assists for Portland, which outbounded Chicago 59-38.

Steve Kerr scored 16 points and Horace Grant 14 for the Bulls, whose previous biggest loss to Portland was by 16 points on Feb. 8, 1983.

Chicago committed 10 turnovers in the second period and 14 in the first half, when Portland outscored the Bulls on fastbreak points 28-2. The Blazers scored 16 points off Chicago turnovers in the first two quarters, compared with two for the Bulls.

Portland used a 21-3 run to take a 56-29 lead on Robinson's inside basket with 4:08 left in the half.

Four Portland players were in double figures by halftime, led by Robinson's 15 points. Strickland added 12 on 5-for-6 shooting, mostly from long range, while Drexler and Porter had 10 apiece.

The Bulls, who made 31 percent of their shots in their disastrous second quarter, were playing the second of seven games on the road in 10 days.

The defending NBA champions are not only without the retired Michael Jordan. Scottie Pippen, John Paxson and Scott Williams also are sidelined with injuries.

Buffalo hopes to rebound from Monday night massacre

Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. Wakeup call is the commonly used term. Buffalo Bills center Kent Hull had a less gentle description.

"It's a head-slapper," said Hull, referring to Buffalo's 23-0 mauling at the hands of the Pittsburgh Steelers last Monday night.

The Bills (7-2) have to hope the cobwebs have cleared — literally and figuratively — from the Pittsburgh beating as they play host to the Indianapolis Colts (3-6) Sunday.

The Steelers punished Buffalo, giving Jim Kelly and Don Beebe concussions and breaking a bone in Andre Reed's wrist. All three are expected to play against the Colts.

The knockout-shutout got the Bills' attention, Hull said.

"It's not that you get overconfident," he said. "It's just that sometimes I think you get lazy mentally about what it took to get where you are. Every once in a while, you get one of those slapped on you and you realize what you have to do to get better."

The first priority Bills coach Marv Levy has to deal with is Buffalo's abysmal third-down record on offense and defense.

Offensively, Buffalo went 2-for-11 on third down against the Steelers. "Third downs killed us," Kelly said. "We were pitiful and we have to get better in that phase of the game."

The news is worse on defense. The Bills did a good job checking the Steelers — until third down. Pittsburgh converted 10 of 18 attempts, an impressive 56 percent. For the season, Buffalo's defense is allowing third-down conversions at a league-leading 48.2 percent.

The Bills still lead the league with 29 takeaways, but their last two opponents, the Steelers and the Patriots, have averaged 200 rushing yards against Buffalo.

That means rookie Roosevelt Potts, beginning to emerge as Indianapolis' go-to runner, should get the ball a lot.

"I would venture to say that the Indianapolis Colts will run Potts left, run Potts right and run Potts until we can prove we can stop him," Buffalo defensive end Phil Hansen said. "That's what I'd do."

Indianapolis hasn't had much success running. In fact, the Colts haven't had much sustained success doing anything this season, according to tackle Will Wolford.

"It's been a major disappointment," said Wolford, a fix-ture on Buffalo's offensive line before the Colts lured him away with a rich free agent contract in the offseason.

"I was really thinking we'd be 6-3 at this point instead of 3-6," he said. "It's frustrating and there's not a lot of happy people around here."

BEARS VS. CHIEFS

KANSAS CITY, Mo.

Earlier in the season, Kansas City's offense had a magical quality. Then it disappeared.

It has reappeared enough for the Chiefs (7-2) to enjoy a two-game lead in the AFC West and feel much better about Dave Krieg's ability to keep everything afloat while Joe Montana's irksome hamstring heals.

Last week in Los Angeles, the Raiders took a 17-7 halftime lead before Krieg's three touchdown passes led a 24-3 second-half blitz giving the Chiefs a season sweep of their AFC West rivals.

It was a similar second-half surge that carried the Chiefs to a 23-16 victory over Green Bay the week before in Krieg's first start since Montana reinjured his hamstring.

But with the Chicago Bears' powerful defense coming to town Sunday, ditching the late-arriving offense would be wise.

"We've been coming out and missing third downs by a matter of a foot," said coach Marty Schottenheimer. "You have to convert those."

Schottenheimer and offensive coordinator Paul Hackett obviously have been doing lots of game plan rearranging during hurried halftime talks.

"It's to determine what exactly has taken place in the first half and then communicating those ideas to the players," Schottenheimer said. "But it really boils down in the final analysis to players wanting to go out and do the job, executing and relying on fundamentals. I have always felt it is very important to coach throughout the ballgame. Anybody can sit down on Monday and look at the video."

Struggling the first two quarters to find their offensive rhythm could happen because the Chiefs still are learning their new 49ers-style offense.

Finding that rhythm in the second half is a good sign the lessons are being learned.

Wide receiver Willie Davis believes Krieg is especially getting more comfortable.

"The important person is getting a feel for it," said Davis, who hauled in Krieg's 66-yard scoring pass at Los Angeles. "That's Dave. I know how hard it is for the quarterback to get into this offense, because this offense is very difficult for a quarterback."

"You have four or five receivers going out, you have to know where each one is going," he said.

"It was tough for a while. Now it's finally coming to him where everybody's going to be. The public's going to see that he's going to be great now."

"I'm encouraged the offense is starting to come together," Schottenheimer said.

ity. Senior captain Matt Osiecki, who scored a point in every Irish goal this past weekend, and fellow blue-liners must keep LSSU's offense in check to give Notre Dame a legitimate chance of stealing some points on the road this weekend.

Even with a reliable defense, the offense must start to produce against the Lakers. Someone must step up to take some of the burden from sophomore center Jamie Ling, the team's scoring leader. Last weekend, Osiecki did the job, now it's someone else's turn. Schafer is confident someone will emerge.

"We need to play really well this weekend," said Schafer. "We'll concentrate on playing well, then we'll look at the scoreboard. We're planning to take a game or two."

MacLeod received a technical foul for his efforts, but said that he felt the officials called a better game after his outburst.

"We saw (Samara throw elbows) on film and we warned our players about it," MacLeod said. "Somebody had to step up and protect our players."

Williams strapped the Irish on his back early in the second half, converting a three-point play with 12 minutes remaining to give the Irish their first lead of the half.

He scored just four more points in the game, turning the reins over to his supporting cast that iced the win with solid play down the stretch.

Dmitry Donskov scored 15 of his 17 points in the second half to keep Samara close, including some clutch free throws in the final minutes.

Igor Grachev led Samara with 19 points.

"We've got a game under our belt and that's good," MacLeod said. "There were some bright spots."

St. John's

By JIM O'CONNELL

NEW YORK

Despite scoring just one point over the final 2:44, Towson State hung on for a shocking 66-65 victory over St. John's on Thursday night in the opening round of the Preseason NIT.

Towson State led 50-42 with 12:39 to play, but St. John's tied it in 2:11 and the sellout crowd of 6,008 was on its feet and seemed assured of another home victory.

The Tigers of the Big South Conference wouldn't hear of it. They took the lead at 57-56 with 6:31 to play on a layup by Stevie Thomas and led 65-60 with 2:44 left after another layup by Thomas.

St. John's stole the ball on Towson State's next three possessions and tied it 65-65 with 45 seconds left when Derrick Brown made one of two free throws.

Ten seconds later, Matt Campbell made one of two free throws for Towson State's only point of the last 2:44, but it was the game-winner.

Islanders' scoring spree continues against Canadiens

Associated Press

HAMILTON, Ontario Pierre Turgeon led the New York Islanders on a scoring spree for the second straight day, getting two goals and setting up another Thursday night in a 5-1 win over the Montreal Canadiens.

Turgeon had three goals and an assist in Wednesday's 8-1 rout in Ottawa. Playing in Hamilton, Turgeon and the Islanders again broke loose.

Keith Acton, Steve Thomas and Benoit Hogue also scored for the Islanders. Gary Leeman was the only Montreal player to put the puck past Ron Hextall.

Turgeon scored the only goal of the first period, connecting at 1:49. Leeman tied it at 1 at 6:24 of the second period. It was only the second goal of the season for a former 50-goal scorer who has been relegated to fringe duty.

Turgeon made it 2-1 at 17:33 of the second period with his 10th goal of the season. He scored on a power play after Montreal was caught with too many men on the ice.

New York moved ahead 3-1 on Acton's first goal of the season 2:49 into the third period. Power-play goals by Thomas at 9:15 and Hogue at 10:41 capped the scoring. Thomas got his 11th goal on a tap-in of a superb cross-crease pass from Turgeon and Hogue cut around the net behind defenseman Peter Popovic.

Devils 5, Senators 2

OTTAWA Stephane Richer, Tom Chorske and Alexander Semak scored goals in the third period and the New Jersey Devils beat Ottawa.

The Devils tied a franchise record with their fourth straight road win. New Jersey has won six of seven overall.

Richer put the Devils ahead 3-2 at 4:11 of the third period after a defensive breakdown behind the Ottawa net. Richer emerged with the puck and slipped it between the pads of goaltender Craig Billington for his sixth goal of the season.

Bruins 3, Sharks 1

BOSTON Glen Murray scored his first two goals of the season and the Boston Bruins won their fifth straight game, beating San Jose.

Sergei Zholtok added his first NHL goal for the Bruins, who are undefeated in their last seven games. Pat Falloon scored for San Jose, which had been trying to tie a team record by extending its undefeated streak to four games.

John Blue, starting for the first time since Nov. 2, stopped 27 shots for the Bruins. Boston has held 11 of its last 12 opponents to three goals or less.

Penguins 3, Capitals 2

PITTSBURGH Goalie Tom Barrasso recorded his 250th NHL victory in leading the Pittsburgh Penguins past the Washington Capitals.

Barrasso is 250-185-58 and ranks third in wins among active goaltenders. He has 126 wins with Pittsburgh, a club record. He made 32 saves against Washington.

Kjell Samuelsson put the Penguins ahead 2-1 with a goal late in the second period. The Capitals lost their third in a row following a six-game winning streak.

Blackhawks 3, Panthers 2

MIAMI Michel Goulet scored the go-ahead goal with 7:56 left in the third period as the Chicago Blackhawks beat Florida for their sixth straight victory.

Chicago, which started an eight-game road trip, hasn't lost since Oct. 31, when Philadelphia beat the Blackhawks 9-6. The game, again involving replacement referees, had two fights, one that led to the ejection of two players.

Flyers 6, Whalers 3

PHILADELPHIA Mark Recchi scored two goals and assisted on another in a game prolonged by 35 penalties.

Philadelphia, the NHL's top-scoring team, stopped a three-game losing streak with just its second victory in seven game (2-5). Hartford has lost six straight on the road.

Recchi collected his own rebound and knocked the puck by goaltender Mario Gosselin at 16:17 of the second period to put Philadelphia ahead 5-3. He scored his second goal at 2:22 of the third, taking a pass across the slot from Josef Beranek that put backup Mike Lenarduzzi out of position.

Maple Leafs 3, Kings 2 league-leading 19th goal as the Toronto Maple Leafs rallied to beat the Los Angeles Kings 3-2 on Wednesday night to regain the overall lead in the NHL with 32 points.

Mike Krushelnyski scored his third goal of the season on a power-play at 2:42 of the third period to tie the game 2-2 and set up John Cullen's game-winner with 10:24 left with a soft centering pass.

John Druce scored on Los Angeles' first shot on goal at 2:07 of the first period and Jari Kurri made it 2-0 at 3:58 of the second with a 50-foot slap shot. Wayne Gretzky was credited with an assist on Kurri's goal.

Depth a key to Belles' swimming hopes

By ELIZABETH REGAN
Saint Mary's News Editor

The Saint Mary's swim team will splash into action this weekend in Indianapolis at the Indiana University/Purdue University of Indiana Invitational.

The Belles will compete against several small colleges including DePauw, Ashland, Transylvania, Wabash and Wheaton.

"I'm excited that we are finally going to get in the water," said coach Greg Janson. "Six weeks is a long time to practice without a meet."

Although set back by October break, the Belles are prepared for the invitational, Janson said.

"A lot of people didn't have access to a pool and didn't work as hard as they should have over break," said co-captain Jennifer Gustafson. "But everyone has been giving 100 percent since break, and we are more than ready."

The Belles have a lot of depth in both breast stroke and freestyle, but are lacking in the individual Bmedley, according to Janson. They also have a strong backstroker but are lacking depth in that area.

"I think that we will swim better this year than ever," Gustafson said. "We have so much depth. Not a lot of numbers, but so much depth."

The Belles swam well at the invitational last year, according to Janson.

"They did not place well overall," he said, "but there were some good individual swims."

"This competition is good for our level," Gustafson said. "There is nobody that we blow out of the water, but nobody blows us out either."

"We're all excited to see how we'll perform," said co-captain Ellen Kramer.

"The team has really come together both mentally and physically in the last couple of weeks," said Janson.

tion from an ankle injury. Stark, who has been the team's emotional catalyst for much of the season, leads the MCC in individual block average with 1.27 per game and is third in hitting percentage at .278. She is expected to be 100% for the tournament.

Stark's recovery comes as a mixed blessing for the Irish, as her return is coupled with the loss of another senior middle blocker, co-captain Julie Harris. Harris who leads the MCC in hitting percentage at .317 and is second to Stark in block average with 1.17 per game, broke a finger in last weekend's matches and will miss the MCC competition. She is expected back later in the season.

Notre Dame has numerous players up for conference awards this weekend. Junior outside hitter Christy Peters is almost a lock for MCC player of the year, ranking second in average digs and third in kill average while thoroughly dominating conference play. Stark, Harris, and senior setter and co-captain Janelle Karlan look to join Peters for conference, regional, and potentially all-American honors. Freshman Jenny Birkner has the inside track for newcomer of the year, while classmate Kristina Ervin is bidding to join her on the all-newcomer team.

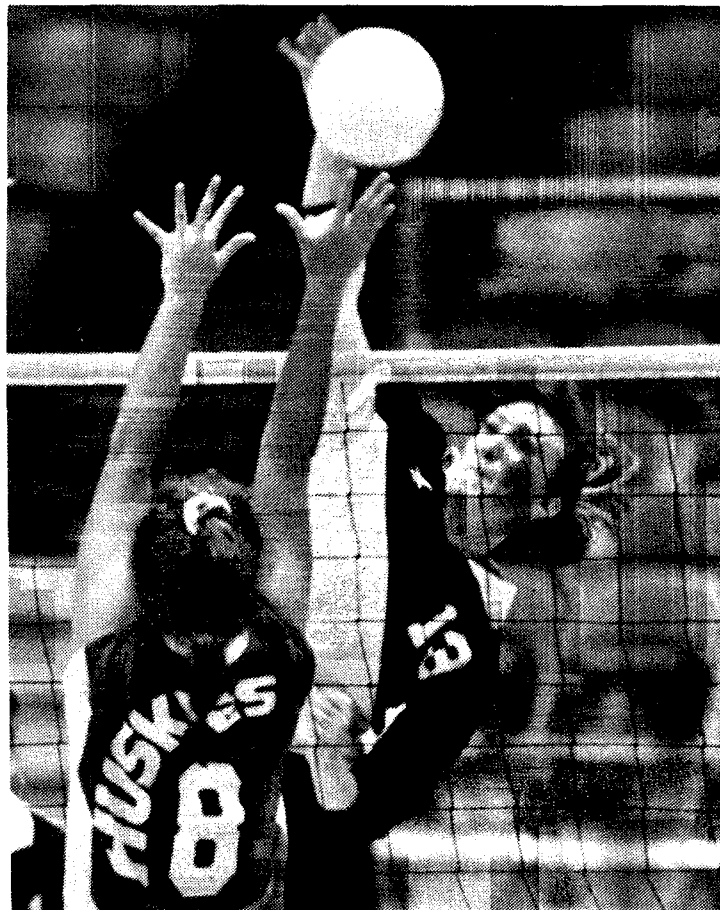

With so many awards and seedings at stake, the Irish must not overlook the opponents this weekend. Butler took the Irish to four games in their match earlier this year and stayed close throughout, falling 17-15, 15-13, 9-15, 15-1. The Irish were also challenged by a spirited Loyola squad before dismissing the Ramblers 16-14, 15-5, 15-4.

However, barring a major collapse, the Irish should easily take the conference championship, as the team has remained too focused on the goal of hosting an NCAA game to ruin that chance at this point in the year. The Irish must also be encouraged that their hitting duo of Peters and Stark have stepped up their play against MCC opponents, routinely leading the team in both kills and digs.

Following this weekend's tournament, the Irish will have a week to prepare for their stiffest competition of the season, as they will travel to Stockton, Ca. to play No. 10 Pacific on their home court in the Banker's Classic. The Irish will then play either No. 1 UCLA or No. 5 BYU. The NCAA tournament will announce its pairings November 28.

regarding a more aggressive start," said men's coach Joe Piane. "I felt that this strategy worked out well for us, and we certainly don't need to head out any stronger at the National Championships."

"The key to success at the NCAA tournament is for us to stay relaxed," said women's coach Tim Connelly.

"Our team is capable of placing high - a top 10 finish for our team is not an unrealistic goal. A lot of great teams out there will fold under pressure, so if we can stay relaxed and run our best we should meet with success."

SMC hoops opens at Kalamazoo Invite

By ANNE HERRMAN
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's basketball team tips off their season this weekend at the Kalamazoo College Invitational.

The Belles face Indiana Wesleyan for the first time ever in game one of the tournament.

Indiana Wesleyan is a "nice size team both in size and experience," said Belles' coach Marvin Wood.

With a clean record, the Belles don't know what to expect.

"We will find out a little about the areas we need to work on," said Wood, "like our strengths and our key players."

In this weekend's tournament Wood hopes to see the team come together and demonstrate quickness and an effective defense.

"Every practice we are learning to flow with our offense," stated senior Mollie Wheeler. "It's difficult to take individuals of multiple backgrounds and get them to play as one team in just two weeks time."

With only twelve women on the team, each will contribute this weekend. "Returning sophomore Jennie Taubbenheim will no doubt be a key individual," commented Wood, "And several others could blossom."

This weekend's tournament will be several freshmen players' first collegiate tournament.

"Freshmen Katie Lalli, Sara Kopperud, and Cate Kozacik sparked at a few practices," said Wood.

Along with Indiana Wesleyan, the Belles' schedule consists of several other first-time opponents including Adrian College, Carthage College, and Franklin College.

Kalamazoo College, the host of the tournament and possible second-round opponent, was upset by the Belles last season.

"We're taking one game at a time," Wood said. "In the scrimmage against Bethel earlier this week, the team demonstrated surprising quickness and aggressiveness. We hope to continue an effective defense."

Volleyball favored in MCCs

By TIMOTHY SEYMOUR
Assistant Sports Editor

Although the tournament is two weeks away, the road to the NCAA's starts this weekend for the No. 18 Notre Dame volleyball team, when it looks to secure an automatic bid by winning the Midwestern Collegiate Conference tournament in Evansville.

The Irish enter the tournament as the number one seed and are heavy favorites to sweep for the third consecutive year. Under head coach Debbie Brown, the Irish have never lost to an MCC foe.

Notre Dame takes to the road on a six match winning streak during which the Irish have dropped only one game. However, the Irish will be without Brown for the trip, as she and her husband Dennis are expecting their first child in two weeks. Assistant coach Steve Schlick, who has coached with Brown for five years and recently led the Irish to victories over LaSalle and Pittsburgh, will take over the helm.

Having earned a first round bye, Notre Dame will play its first match Saturday night at 8 pm against the winner of the Xavier-Evansville quarterfinal. The finals will be held on Sunday at 2 pm, with the Irish likely to face Butler, should they advance.

The Irish romped through the regular season with a 5-0 record and were never seriously challenged. However, Schlick warned that his squad could not afford to be overconfident.

"Xavier, Loyola, and Butler are all fairly evenly matched, and all three are capable of giving us a competitive match," he explained. "Still, we don't look on (the tournament) as pressure but as an opportunity to qualify for the NCAA's."

The Irish have more at stake than just qualifying, however. The MCC tournament will be the last time the Irish face regional rivals, and will therefore be the last chance they have to relinquish their No. 1 regional ranking. This ranking could have important implications when the NCAA announces first round byes and site locations.

"If we were to lose a match, it would hurt our ranking," commented Schlick. "However, if we win I would expect to maintain the seeding."

The Irish will get a lift towards the goal of hosting a home match in the NCAA's as senior middle blocker Molly Stark continues her rehabilita-

Notre Dame overcomes sloppy first half for exhibition victory

By JASON KELLY
Associate Sports Editor

Welcome to the second season of the Monty Williams Show.

There are a few more guests this time, but it is questionable if it can be more successful than the first.

Tuesday's 85-78 exhibition win over Samara Russia in front of 9,515 fans at the Joyce Center provided few answers.

It wasn't until decided until Ryan Hoover hit four consecutive free throws in the final 30 seconds to secure a shaky Irish win.

"It was a typical first game," Notre Dame coach John MacLeod said. "We threw it away and banged into each other too much, but we got contributions from a lot of different people at key times."

Williams made the biggest contribution, scoring 19 of his game-high 30 points in the second half to help the Irish overcome a 35-28 halftime deficit.

But he had a little more help than he was used to a year ago.

Freshmen centers Marcus Hughes and Matt Gotsch were a presence in the middle that was missing last season.

Hughes collected 14 points and six rebounds and Gotsch added four points and four rebounds before fouling out after playing just nine minutes.

"I thought Hughes played an outstanding game," MacLeod said. "Gotsch also came in and did some good things. We got a lot of people involved and that's very encouraging."

Notre Dame jumped out to a 6-2 lead after a crowd-pleasing alley-oop pass from freshman point guard Admore White to Williams.

Then the first-game jitters took over. Samara scored 13 straight points to take the lead, which it held for much of the first half.

Turnovers and quick shots kept the Irish from generating much offense in the first 20 minutes.

White finished his first college game with two assists and four turnovers, numbers indicative of the entire Irish team.

"We were like a truck going downhill out of control (in the first half)," MacLeod said. "We had eight assists and 15 turnovers. Those columns have to be reversed before we can make strides toward being a good team."

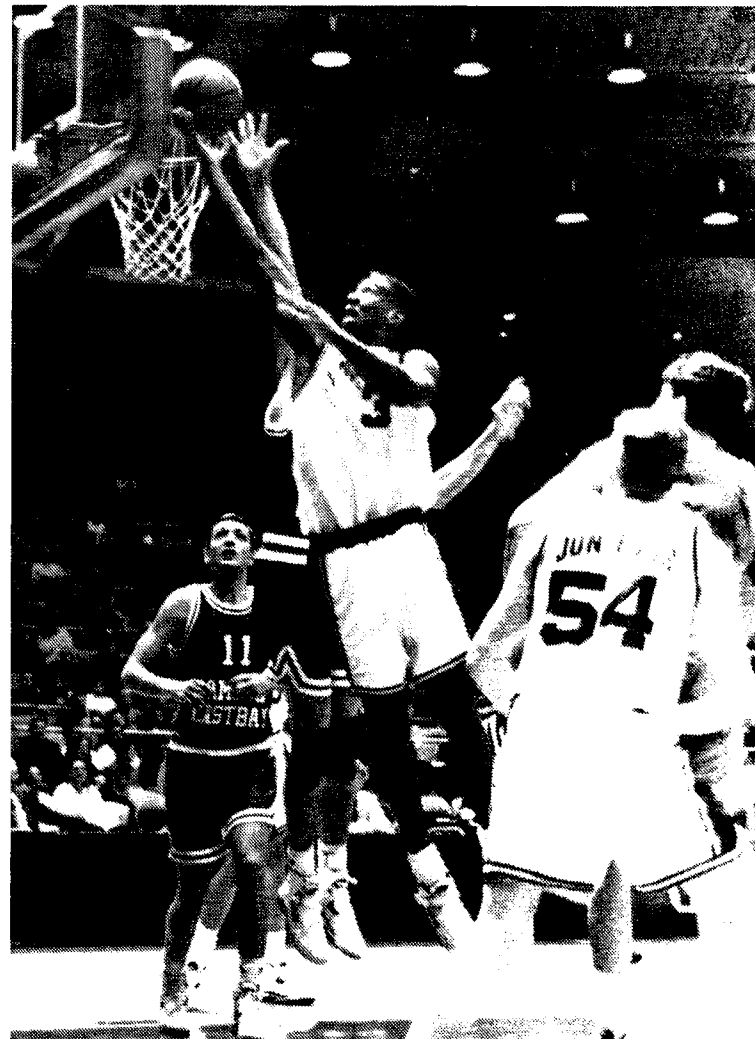

White struggled at times offensively, but his tenacious defensive pressure kept the much bigger Samara offense out of sync. That pressure helped force Samara into 26 turnovers and forced White to leave the game with eight minutes remaining after collecting his fifth foul.

"It was a strange feeling playing my first game at the college level," White said. "I have to work on slowing down and running the offense, but if I keep listening to Coach MacLeod I'll be alright."

The officials seemed to listen to MacLeod, who stormed on to the court after what he thought was a flagrant elbow thrown at senior Brooks Boyer.

He fumed at the officials who called a foul on Boyer.

Irish hockey looks to ice Lakers

By TIM SHERMAN
Sports Writer

This is what the CCHA is all about. This weekend, the improving Notre Dame hockey team travels to northern Michigan to play two games against perennial powerhouse Lake Superior State. These games should serve to give the Irish an opportunity to see just how much progress they have made this season.

Coach Ric Schaefer's Irish have been playing solid hockey lately, maintaining their respectable fifth place standing in the highly-competitive CCHA. They own a 3-3-1 overall mark, 2-3-1 in conference games.

A major reason for Notre Dame's success has been the outstanding play of senior goaltender Greg Louder. In his first four starts, Louder has allowed only five goals. His save percentage in that span is an impressive .946. In addition, Louder has tallied two assists thus far to help the offense.

Louder and his teammates will have to be at their best this weekend against LSSU. The Lakers, national runners-up last season and national champions in 1991-92, are in sole possession of first place in the CCHA.

"No doubt, they're a powerhouse team," said Schaefer. "They're very, very good."

In addition to being talented, the Lakers are deep. Last weekend, the Lakers played two games without their top netminder. This posed no problem, though, as freshman Sean Kulich stepped between the pipes to win both games. In the process, he was named CCHA defensive player of the week for his .980 save percentage.

Offensively, LSSU is just as talented and deep. Three State skaters are among the top ten scorers in the league. Senior center Clayton Beddoes, a pre-season candidate for the Hobey Baker Award (college hockey's version of the Heisman Trophy), is leading his team in scoring with 12 points. Right behind him is junior Wayne Strachan. The center has notched 11 points thus far. Rounding out the threesome is sophomore winger Steve Talliare. In his young career, Talliare has already amassed 61 points, including nine this year.

Notre Dame, however, should have a good chance at shutting down the potent Laker snipers. Irish defenders continue to keep the team in every game with their hustle, effort, and abil-

Cross Country prepares for NCAA Championships

By DYLAN BARMMER

The Notre Dame men's and women's cross country teams will leave today for the NCAA Cross Country Championships, which will be held Monday, November 22, at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

Both teams are coming off impressive performances at the District IV Meet last Saturday, and are looking to turn in strong performances at the NCAAs.

The men's team, which is now ranked fifth nationally, will be looking to improve on last year's sixth place finish.

The Irish men have not won the NCAA title since 1957, and they last finished in the top three in 1990, when they finished third.

This year's team is extremely talented, and will be led by three time All-American Mike McWilliams, who finished third overall at Saturday's meet, and 24th overall at the NCAAs last season.

The women's team, currently ranked 14th in the nation, will become the first Irish women's team to compete at the NCAAs.

The team's second place finish Saturday marked the highest an Irish women's team has ever placed in the District IV Meet.

The women will be led by junior Sarah Riley, who finished fourth overall at Saturday's meet.

Coaches of both teams look forward to the NCAAs with optimism.
