THE INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER SERVING NOTRE DAME AND SAINT MARY'S

Dining hall changes include menu, layout

By JOSE BLANCO
News Writer

The beginning of the school year has brought changes to the Notre Dame Food Services, as both the South and North Dining Halls have undergone significant renovations and menu modifications.

At South Dining Hall (SDH), major improvements have resulted in making a wider variety of foods available to students. In addition to the traditional menu, specialty foods have been included, allowing students to enjoy several kinds of pastas, Mexican dishes, and homestyle cheese, pepperoni and vegetable pizza. A breakfast waffle bar and a gourmet coffee stand have also been added.

In addition to an extended menu, North Dining Hall (NDH) has also experienced a series of renovations, including changing the layout of the dining hall to improve efficiency. A food court system has been adopted so that students can help themselves to their favorite foods daily. NDH offers Mexican food at "Fiesta Grande" and Chinese food at the "Shanghai Trading Company." For those who are partial to Italian food, the Pastaria and the Pizzeria have been continued.

The "Grab n' Go" counters have also been expanded to offer a greater variety of foods in less time. Salads and an assortment of fruit juices are now available at each entrance to the SDH, and in a room set apart exclusively for Grab n' Go in NDH.

The improvements at the dining halls have become a major topic of conversation among students, and while most students have responded favorably to the modifications, some have expressed their concern over lunchtime congestion.

"Everytime I see the lines in North, I lose my appetite," said St. Edward's Hall junior Rafael Gonzalez. "It's really a hassle because so many people are so rushed for time during lunch."

However, other students praised the wide variety of culinary options afforded by the renovations.

"I really like the fact that they are offering healthier types of food," said Lewis Hall junior Laura Tuchsherer. "Still, I really miss the weekend brunches."

The workability of the new system will take a few weeks to determine, said David Prentkowski, director of Notre Dame Foodservices.

Prentkowski said that employees seem pleased with the restructuring of the dining halls. He added that meetings were held in the spring and summer with the purpose of giving the employees the opportunity to express their own ideas in regards to the proposed plans.

However, several employees expressed dissatisfaction with the efficiency of the new system. "The longer lines and fewer exits are leading to a lot of congestion," said Cavanaugh Hall sophomore Amy Cassidy. "The middle and Pastaria sections are very crowded, while the Chinese and Mexican sections are much emptier."

Prentkowski noted that major physical renovations are planned in the future for SDH. These renovations will enable it to accommodate both a food court system and the two planned dormitories on South Quad.

Graduate student discovered

By LIZ FORAN
Assistant News Editor

The body of a Notre Dame graduate student was discovered Saturday evening by a hiker, according to St. Joseph County Police.

The body of Alexandru

Bumbacea, 29, a graduate student in mathematics, was identified by police after being found in a wooded area around McErlain and George Avenue.

Police said the body was discovered approximately 150 yards from McErlain and George Avenue by a 15-year-old boy who was walking through the woods on his way home.

According to an investigation by the St. Joseph County Special Crimes Unit and county police, the body had been in the woods for approximately seven to 10 days. A Notre Dame Credit Union card issued to Bumbacea and a key to the Notre Dame math department were found on his body, police said.

Police concluded through their investigation that Bumbacea had died of self-inflicted injuries. Police said Bumbacea, who was from Romania, left a note written in Romanian indicating his intentions over a week ago and had been depressed recently.

Notre Dame Professor Frederico Xavier of the mathematics department described Bumbacea as a "very fine gentleman and an outstanding student."

Xavier said that Bumbacea did very well on his graduate courses and had recently completed a set of math exams. "He was a very good student. This is a sad thing," said Professor Julia Knight, director of graduate in mathematics.

Bumbacea had only been at Notre Dame since September of 1993 and was studying differential geometry, Xavier said.

"This is a great loss, not only for me personally because I knew him, but because he was such a talented person," Xavier said.

Library responds to needs

By EDWARD IMBUS
News Writer

The Hesburgh Memorial Library implemented several significant changes in their services and collections this summer.

One of the more notable changes is that security guards will no longer examine backpacks when students exit the library.

However, students must still hand over any library materials to the library monitors for inspection prior to leaving.

Other visible changes include the remodeling of the second floor, where the northeast corner was made into a "quiet study area" for individual study in carrels. Over 150 of the individual study desks were moved into the section for student use.

Another major change was the relocation of the graduate student study section from the seventh to the tenth floor. According to Miller, detex locks were installed to ensure privacy and quiet. Study tables were also moved into the areas near the computer laboratory so students would be able to study while waiting for a computer to become available.

According to Miller, however, many other serious changes may be on the way. An ad hoc committee on University libraries recommended that the formal University Committee on Libraries should add an undergraduate and graduate representative to its membership of senior University officers and library administrators.

The committee was formed under the direction of the Colloquy for the Year 2000, the report was written by University President Fr. Edward Malloy in 1993 to the Board of Trustees. The board soon after adopted Fr. Malloy's recommendations.

The ad hoc committee also urged that major funding increases be sought from all sources in order to increase the number of qualified library staff who help users find material. Miller said that other funding would be requested "to fill gaps in our collection right now."

Miller also said that the ad hoc committee directed the library administration to investigate a complete renovation of the Hesburgh Library. A separate task force created solely to analyze this issue submitted a report to the administration last summer, suggesting that an independent consultant be hired to determine the feasibility of such a large project and draft plans for the renovation.

Responding to the new direction, the library administration intends to continue adapting and improving its collections and services to enhance Notre Dame overall.

A stroll down Labor Day lane

Back in the days of my public school career, the Labor Day weekend was the traditional end of summer. This long three day weekend stood as the last bastion of freedom until parent-teacher conferences and in-service days, which were deep into dark October.

Eric Ruethling
Photographer

Since the end of summer was marked as such, it is only fitting that such a time brings back memories of grade school, hot lunch programs, and long, dazed hours in ancient school buildings.

One memory involves the very first day of school. Upon returning to school for the fourth grade, I was amazed that I couldn't find my name on the fourth grade teacher's list. With terror in my heart I quickly scanned the third grade lists—in case I was held back—but I was not there either. All other alternatives were impossible, I happened upon the only other conclusion. Todd School didn't want me anymore.

I began to wonder what my parents would say; their only son kicked out of grade school. I began to wonder what the life of a garbage man would be like—the only job I could think of that would only require a third grade education. Sniffing and sputtering, I was spotted by Ms. Markem, who determined that I was to be in her class until everything was settled. It turned out that she forgot to put my name on her list for fourth-graders.

What about all of those mandatory classes that persons of no talent had to attend—such as music class? Although I have as much singing talent as Rosanne Barr, and a voice that crackled way before any of us even heard of puberty, it seemed that I was always nominated to step forward and sing louder. Those who say public performance kills stage fright never had to give public renditions of a studdery "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" in front of fifteen giggling fourth grade girls.

Art class, although a break from math and reading, never won me awards. I have enough trouble with normal handwriting, that I don't need the additional trials of trying to draw straight lines, much less calligraphy. So bad was my penmanship that in fifth grade my teacher tried convincing me that I was left handed and had been writing with the wrong hand all the time.

Despite hardships, school back then also promised recess. Precious time of freedom, far away from teachers, checks on the board, and multiplication tables—perfect for Watterson-esque kids such as I.

Over a span of several recesses, a friend of mine and I won the Todd Elementary School Super Bowl, with a schedule consisting of four teams. In the final game, we, the Rams, defeated the Eagles with Timmy running around the chin-up bars and me blocking Brad Serdan just seconds before the bell rang.

The memories go on and on. All the little taunts, jeers, and cooties. From Shane getting smacked in the face, and us thinking that he was going to bleed to death, to the presence of snow days every year. With all the hectic lives we have now, sometimes you just have to stop and smell the scented markers.

Marketplace bomb kills ten, injures 26 in Armenia

ARMENIA
A bomb exploded Sunday in a market near Armenia's border with Georgia, killing 10 people and injuring 26, officials said. Two of the dead were citizens of nearby Azerbaijan, Armenia's rival, suggesting a political motive for the bombing, the ITAR-Tass news agency said. Officials said the bomb exploded at about 1 p.m. in the village of Bagratashen, about 60 miles north of the Armenian capital, Yerevan. The region is plagued by violence linked to a six-year-old war between Armenia and Azerbaijan over the disputed enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh. The explosion occurred within 30 miles of Azerbaijan. Last April, a bomb killed three people and injured more than two dozen aboard a passenger train heading from Tbilisi, the Georgian capital, to Yerevan. Georgian officials suspected the train bombing was retribution for a subway bombing in the Azerbaijani capital the previous month. Azerbaijan blamed that bombing, which killed 14 people, on Armenia.

The most recent casualties of a six-year-old war between Armenia and Azerbaijan occurred in a marketplace near Armenia's border.

WASHINGTON
Loss of power and prestige are not the only adjustments to life after the White House. There's also remembering how to grocery shop and cook, and those are the kind of everyday moments that fill Barbara Bush's memoirs. The book was scheduled for release Sept. 15 but already has appeared in some bookstores. It's stuffed with anecdotes and sprinkled with Mrs. Bush's diary entries that record her take on George Bush's campaigns, his 12 years as president and vice president, and the couple's efforts to return to a more ordinary life in Houston after leaving the White House. In "Barbara Bush: A Memoir," Bush defends her husband at every turn and writes bitterly about those who criticized him, but she acknowledges that she disagreed with him on two issues: she supports legal abortion and opposes sale of assault weapons. Bush said she did her best to keep her opinions from the public while her husband was in office. "I honestly felt, and still feel the elected person's opinion is the one the public has the right to know," Bush wrote. But Bush predicts for Hillary Clinton the types of problems that she was careful to sidestep herself. Of Hillary and Bill Clinton, Mrs. Clinton seems "much the stronger of the two," Bush wrote. "I am afraid that when problems or controversy occur, and they will, the finger will be pointed at Hillary. I am not saying this is right or wrong. It just occurs to me that the American people also are going through an adjustment," she said.

Sailor acquitted of charges

SAN DIEGO
A military court acquitted a sailor of charges for asking a shipmate to break his leg so he could escape sexual harassment aboard the USS Constellation. Garrett Trance, a petty officer 3rd class, admitted persuading Airman Wesley Newell to hit his leg with a steel pipe on Feb. 19. Trance's leg broke on the third blow. Trance was a victim of sexual harassment because shipmates mistakenly believed he was homosexual, said Charles T. Bumer, his lead attorney. The court martial panel acquitted Trance on Friday on charges of conspiracy, missing the movement of a ship and malingering. Newell, 21, was sentenced to three months' confinement, a bad-conduct discharge and fined for the Trance case and another incident. On the same day he broke Trance's leg, Newell shot Airman James Kinsey in the shoulder. Kinsey, 23, testified he asked Newell to shoot him after being refused medical treatment for more than a year for a painful ear problem.

For Clinton, vacation proves relaxing

EDGARTOWN, Mass.
The wind was chilly, the hour early and the first shot not a pretty sight. "Oh, I tore it left," President Clinton said as he drove his golf ball astray. He winced and said: Come rescue us, will you? We barely know what we're doing." But less than two hours later, Clinton was leaping from his golf cart and trading high fives with partner Vernon Jordan, a lobbyist and longtime Clinton friend. Clinton played nine holes and scored a 39—encouraging for a guy who wants to break 80 on 18 holes before he turns 50, two years from now. From there, Clinton went to Union Chapel, an interdenominational meeting place built in Oak Bluffs in 1870, especially for the island's summer visitors. The Rev. Alden Besse, pastoral assistant at Grace Episcopal Church in nearby Vineyard Haven, delivered the guest sermon, stressing the theme of hope, as it is the name of Clinton's birthplace. He opened with a prayer for the country, the president and Congress "to lead us to the paths of justice and peace." After church, the Clinton caravan rolled into Vineyard Haven, where the president and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton went to lunch at the Black Dog Tavern. Other folks with reservations found themselves facing a police barricade and a shut door. But Secret Service agents politely helped to sort matters out, and soon the flow of diners was almost normal. The Clinton vacation still has a few days to run. Clinton plans to interrupt it Monday to fly to the Bath Iron Works in Bath, Maine, to mark Labor Day by celebrating a new contract under which labor will participate with management in company decisions.

Unser wins despite stomach pains

VANCOUVER
Not even a severe bout of food poisoning could stop Al Unser Jr., who raced off to his third straight victory Sunday in the Vancouver Molson-Indy. The victory in the chaotic 102-lap race on the 1.653-mile, 10-turn temporary circuit was the eighth of the season for Unser, who missed Friday's practice and qualifying after stomach distress. The 32-year-old drove a great strategic race, using an early pit stop and an unusually high six full-course caution flags, to wind up dominating the late stages of the event on the way to his eighth victory of the season. "We're pretty sore inside, but winning makes you feel a lot better," Unser said after his 27th career victory. "We were just hanging in there and (team owner) Roger (Penske) sure did call the race perfect. We made an early stop and then the other stop came at just the right time." His Ilmor-powered Penske car crossed the finish line 2.24 seconds ahead of 25-year-old pole-winner Robby Gordon.

U.S., Cuba continue talks

By LOUIS MEIXLER
Associated Press

NEW YORK
The United States and Cuba began a third day of talks Sunday on ways to halt the flood of Cuban refugees, but prospects for a quick accord appeared slim.

Cuba has been holding out for talks on easing the crippling U.S. economic embargo against the communist island, which it says causes widespread hardship and is the fundamental cause of the exodus.

The United States insists migration is a separate issue and refuses to discuss lifting the 32-year-old embargo. It says Cuba must implement democratic reforms before the embargo can be eased.

After a one-day break, the two sides met again at the U.S. mission Sunday. U.S. delegation spokesman David Johnson said the Americans were awaiting a Cuban response to written proposals delivered Friday.

Cuban diplomats did not comment before the session.

About 75 anti-Castro demonstrators gathered outside the mission, across the street from the United Nations. They chanted "Freedom for Cuba" and held signs urging President Clinton to take a hard line against Cuban President Fidel Castro. Security was tight and the crowd was peaceful.

The United States wants to expand legal Cuban immigration, perhaps to around 20,000, in exchange for Castro's promise to end the refugee exodus. Only about 2,700 Cubans are expected to get visas to immigrate to the United States this year — compared to the more than 30,000 who have taken to the sea in rickety rafts and boats, most in the past month.

Reversing longstanding U.S. policy, Clinton last month stopped letting the Cubans into the United States. Instead, the Coast Guard is taking them to the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Panama agreed officially Sunday to accept as many as 10,000 Cuban migrants to relieve overcrowding at Guantanamo. The refugees will be housed at a U.S. military camp outside Panama City.

U.S.-sponsored Radio Marti stepped up warnings to Cuba in shortwave broadcasts Sunday of the high risk of drowning in the Straits of Florida, the 90-mile passage between Cuba and the Florida coast.

"So many people have lost their lives at sea, drowning in the treacherous currents, risking attack by sharks," the broadcast said. "It is a death sentence."

The repeated messages also warned Cubans not to try to enter the Guantanamo base through Cuban-sown minefields, saying all efforts were being sought in the negotiations in New York to allow legal emigration.

NAACP demands rebel flag removal

By ROBERT TANNER
Associated Press

HILTON HEAD ISLAND
Hundreds of Confederate battle flags snapped in the breeze of this coastal resort Sunday, a fierce answer to an NAACP demand that the rebel banner be removed from the state Capitol.

The flags of all sizes adorned cars and were waved by children and adults at a rally that drew about 400 people.

"We've given them everything they wanted. Now they want our flag," William Carter, president of the state chapter of the Council of Conservative Citizens, told the cheering, all-white crowd.

"If we can have a Martin Luther King Day, a black history month, why can't we have the Confederate battle flag fly above the Statehouse?" Carter asked.

Carter was the state campaign manager of former Ku Klux Klan member and presidential candidate David Duke.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said Saturday it would hold off imposing an economic boycott on the state to force the flag's removal, at least until the state Supreme Court rules on the issue.

South Carolina is the only state to fly the rebel banner — a blue X with white stars on a red background — above its Capitol. Georgia and Mississippi include the flag's design on their state flags.

Defenders honor the flag as a tribute to Southern culture and history. Opponents say it is a blatant symbol of slavery and bigotry.

"Every time I see that flag, it is an attack on my dignity," NAACP national Chairman William Gibson said Saturday at a Hilton Head march attended by about 1,000 people, mostly blacks.

More demonstrations are planned for other South Carolina cities.

Pope blasts United Nations conference

By EDITH LEDERER
Associated Press

CAIRO

On the eve of the opening of the U.N. population conference, a U.S. official said Sunday that a compromise on the sensitive issues of abortion and birth control was "very close."

Pope John Paul II

Pope John Paul II, meanwhile, capping one of the most heated campaigns of his 16-year leadership, blasted the gathering anew with an attack on the "dangerous shortcut" of reducing birth rates by any means.

The pope's diplomatic and religious crusade against abortion and contraceptives, which has allied the Vatican with fundamentalist Muslim states, has captured headlines. But supporters of a tough plan for slowing the world's population boom are fighting back.

The world's current population of 5.7 billion people is growing by more than 90 million a year.

Timothy Wirth, a U.S. under-secretary of state and Washington's top official on population issues, told reporters that a "very promising" compromise was being worked out on the thorniest issues in the conference's final document.

Vice President Al Gore, arriving in Cairo, said the Clinton administration opposes language suggesting there is an international right to abortion.

"We have continuously made it clear that we will insist on language that the subject of abortion is one that each individual nation should deal with," he said.

During three preparatory conferences, delegates from 170 countries agreed on more than 90 percent of the plan for controlling population, including empowering women and ensuring that girls get equal access to education.

Contentious issues still to be resolved include abortion, sex education, women's access to family planning advice, and their right to choose the size of their families. But Wirth said the European Union has come up with compromise language that should ease opposition.

"I think we're very close to having language arrived at that will move us from the 92 percent threshold to close to a 100 percent threshold," he told a briefing.

The head of the conference, Dr. Nafis Sadik, said she was confident the controversy would be overcome. "In my mind I have no doubt there will be agreement on these outstanding issues," she told a news conference.

The 113-page draft plan of action led four Muslim-majority nations — Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Lebanon and Iraq — to pull out of the meeting, claiming it would encourage promiscuity and the breakdown of the family. But other Muslim nations are attending.

Islamic lawyers in Egypt filed suit to stop the conference, arguing it runs counter to Islamic principles. But an Egyptian appeals court Sunday upheld the government's right to stage the meeting.

Sunday's arrivals included a 10-member Iranian delegation that includes four women, and Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. Two other Muslim women leaders, Tansu Ciller of Turkey and Khalida Zia of Bangladesh, backed out of the conference.

Hojatolislam Mohamed Ali Taskhiri, the Iranian delegation leader, urged Muslim nations to participate in order to defend Islamic values and oppose attempts to impose Western ideas "and export the problems of the material world to the Islamic world."

Mrs. Bhutto also plans to act as an "assertive" spokesman for the Muslim world, according to special assistant Shahnaz Wasir Ali.

The Vatican, for its part, insists population problems can be alleviated by better distribution of global resources.

"In the moment in which one moves courageously in that direction, it is necessary to resist the temptation to take a dangerous shortcut, the pointing of every effort toward the reduction, obtained in any which way, of the birth rate," the pope said in a televised speech from his summer palace in Castel Gandolfo, Italy.

Wirth and other officials would not disclose details of the European Union's compromise, but Wirth said it would put abortion in the framework of national laws.

On other controversial issues, Wirth said the EU's compromise altered some language to deal with complaints that the wording "families and other unions" referred to homosexual marriages.

Hartley: Cease-fire to continue

By SHAWN POGATCHNIK
Associated Press

BELFAST

A car bomb blew up outside the offices of the IRA's Sinn Fein political allies on Sunday, shattering glass, but failing to shake their resolve to keep peace moves alive.

"This was an attack on the peace process, but we will not be intimidated by the loyalist death squads, nor will we be deflected from the peace process," said Sinn Fein city councilor Tom Hartley, on the fourth day of the IRA's cease-fire.

"This office will be open tomorrow morning," said Belfast Sinn Fein councilor Fra McCann.

The blast, which destroyed ceilings in the empty headquarters, caused no injuries but several people were treated for shock.

No one immediately claimed responsibility.

McCann said a car drove up to the building and two men were seen running away.

Earlier Sunday, Sinn Fein indicated it would accept a peace settlement that stops short of its traditional goal of a united Ireland.

Martin McGuinness, a senior Sinn Fein member and former Irish Republican Army chief of staff, said that unification of the independent south and British-ruled north was the best solution.

He added: "But if the Irish people decided on something else then we, as democrats, would have to accept that."

Sinn Fein had given such assurances before. But the comments of McGuinness, a former Irish Republican Army chief of staff, had added significance as the British government weighs the soundness of the cease-fire.

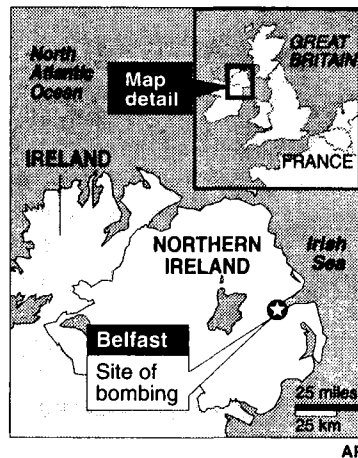

But Sinn Fein remains adamant that any Northern Ireland settlement must include a British commitment to withdraw its forces — a point underscored by demonstrations Sunday outside army bases in Catholic west Belfast and on border roads closed by British army engineers. Protesters painted IRA slogans on the bases and reopened one of the roads with bulldozers.

Catholics and Protestants in congregations all over Northern Ireland included special prayers of peace in their Sunday services.

In middle-class south Belfast, worshippers from both sides of the religious divide gathered for joint peace services.

But the Rev. Ian Paisley, leader of his own anti-Catholic evangelical church, warned his supporters that the IRA cease-fire and a British desire to woo Sinn Fein could mean "the destruction of our faith and of our freedom."

"We are told to accept this green olive branch," Paisley, a member of the British and European parliaments, preached from the pulpit of his Martyrs' Memorial Free Presbyterian Church. "Then we are told they (the IRA) have no regrets for what they have done. Oh God, it is indeed an evil day."

The Irish government is pushing ahead with plans to bring Sinn Fein into open debate quickly. Albert Reynolds, the Irish premier, confirmed he expects to have face-to-face talks with Gerry Adams, the Sinn Fein leader, in Dublin this week.

It would be the first such meeting between Irish and Sinn Fein heads since "the troubles" began 25 years ago, when Britain deployed troops to quell street violence between Catholics and Protestants.

"Wednesday's cease-fire decision makes it clear they (Sinn Fein leaders) are totally in the constitutional process, that they want to find solutions by inclusive negotiations," Reynolds said.

But British Prime Minister John Major emphasized Sunday that his government needed firmer assurance from Adams that the cease-fire was permanent.

"We have not had an absolutely unambiguous signal that this is for good," Major said in a BBC television interview.

Commanders of the two main Protestant-based paramilitary groups, meanwhile, met in secret this weekend to consider calling their own truce.

In the 1990s the Ulster Defense Association and Ulster Volunteer Force, called loyalist groups for their determination to maintain the British link, have killed more people than has the IRA.

Nigerian unions suspend strike

By FRANK AIGBOGUN
Associated Press

LAGOS, Nigeria — With hundreds of frustrated oil workers already back at work, leaders of Nigeria's petroleum unions said Sunday they were ready to suspend their 2-month-old strike for democracy because of a lack of public support.

"We have done our best," Arthur Onoviran, spokesman for one of the striking unions, told The Associated Press. "We knew when it started that it was up to all Nigerians to save the country and not the oil workers alone."

Workers in the oil industry, which drives Nigeria's economy, went on strike July 4, crippling this nation of 90 million people with fuel shortages.

They demanded Gen. Sani Abacha's regime surrender power to Moshood K.O. Abiola, the man widely believed to have won the annulled 1993 presidential election that was to end a decade of military rule.

Strikes, protests and riots have buffeted the nation since then, but none hit as hard as the oil workers.

The suspension, to be discussed by union leaders on Monday, looked to be a face-saving move. Hundreds of strikers, frustrated by lack of support from other Nigerians, returned to work in the past week.

"The military has been using a combination of bribery and intimidation to get our men back to work," Onoviran said, acknowledging the strike has virtually collapsed already.

Abiola was arrested June 23 after he declared himself president to mark the anniversary of the election and is awaiting trial on treason charges.

The respected Nigerian Medical Association said Abiola is critically ill in jail, suffering severe high blood pressure.

Abacha's government has said only the courts can free Abiola. But officials have been unable to persuade a judge to hear his case.

Abacha has taken an equally hard line with strikers and pro-democracy activists, banning the leadership of the oil unions and arresting dozens of critics and labor leaders.

Former Stasi chief to go to trial

By GEORGE BOEHMER
Associated Press

FRANKFURT

Once the second-most powerful official in East Germany, the notorious chief of the former Stasi secret police goes on trial Monday for the shooting deaths of fellow countrymen attempting to flee to the West.

Erich Mielke, 86, is the last of East Germany's top communist officials to face trial for the shoot-to-kill orders that prosecutors said claimed more than 300 East German lives during the Cold War.

The indictment facing Mielke, however, was trimmed to six manslaughter counts to speed up the trial in Berlin state court.

Mielke already is serving a six-year term in Berlin's Moabit prison for murdering two policemen in Berlin in 1931. He was convicted in that case on Oct. 26, 1993.

Mielke originally went on trial in November 1992 for the border deaths, along with former East German leader Erich Honecker and four other communist officials.

But Mielke, Honecker and former East German Premier Willi Stoph were dropped from the trial on grounds of poor health. Mielke, on trial in the policemen's murder case, was considered unable to face two trials at once.

Honecker died in exile in Chile on May 29. Stoph, 80, is not expected to be recharged for health reasons.

The other three defendants — former Defense Minister Heinz Kessler; his deputy, Fritz Strelitz; and the communist party chairman of East Germany's Suhl district, Hans Albrecht, were convicted of manslaughter and received prison sentences of 4 1/2 to 7 1/2 years.

All were members of East Germany's National Defense Council, which issued the shoot-to-kill orders to border troops to stop the flight of refugees to the West.

Mielke's career as a hard-core communist began at the age of 23 when he shot two Berlin policemen and wounded a third outside the party's headquarters in August 1931.

He fled to the Soviet Union to escape murder charges brought against him by Hitler's Nazi regime, which took power in 1933.

MAKING Chicago Tribune

■ RIGHT OR WRONG?

Murder is murder, regardless of who and why

A year ago, in the wake of the killing of abortionist David Gunn by Michael Griffin, this column presented reasons why such violence is unjustified in law and morality. Regrettably, the issue is with us again. We can maintain a proper perspective on it if we keep some basic principles in mind.

In Roe v. Wade and later cases, the Supreme Court defined the unborn child as a nonperson who may be killed at the discretion of others. The Court prevents people from interfering with the killing of the unborn child and even makes that killing a specially protected constitutional right. If American law regarded the unborn child as a person, as it should, there would be no legalized abortuaries; that child would be defended by public authorities rather than by private individuals acting on their own.

The law recognizes a privilege of private persons to use reasonable, and sometimes even lethal, force to defend others in some situations. However, even if that legal privilege were applied to the defense of the unborn child, it would not authorize the killings of abortionists in Pensacola. To shoot an abortionist in the parking lot is not an imminently necessary defense of his intended victim against actual attack. It is a privately decreed execution for the purpose of preventing the abortionist from later attacking the unborn child. The killing would also involve excessive force since it would not have been necessary to kill him to prevent him from performing the abortion.

In moral terms, the new Catechism of the Catholic Church states: "The fifth commandment forbids direct and intentional killing as gravely sinful. The murderer and those who cooperate voluntarily in murder commit a sin that cries out to heaven for vengeance." (No. 2268.) The Catechism does affirm a right of individuals to defend themselves and others: "The legitimate defense of persons and societies is not an exception to the prohibition against the murder of the innocent that constitutes intentional killing. 'The act of self-defense can have a double effect: the preservation of one's own life; and the killing of the aggressor.... The one is intended, the other is not.'" Quoting St. Thomas Aquinas, Summa Theologica, II, II, 64, 7. (No. 2263.)

Note that the right to defend does not authorize the intentional killing of the aggressor. The intent must be to defend, rather than to kill. The principle of the double effect governs here, as quoted above in No. 2263 of the Catechism. A familiar application of that principle is with respect to operations to remove the cancerous womb of a pregnant woman. Such operations can be justified because the death of the child is an unintended effect of an operation independently justified by the necessity of saving the mother's life. They do not involve the intentional killing of the child for the purpose of achieving another good—for example, the preservation of the mother's life.

The only situations in which anyone ever has the right intentionally to kill anyone are the just war, capital punishment, and a justified rebellion (or what the Catechism calls "armed resistance to oppression by political authority." No. 2243. The just war and capital punishment are decreed by the state, which derives its authority from God. See Catechism, Nos. 2266-67, 2307-17. Armed rebellion involves an assumption by private persons of that authority of the state. No one can reasonably conclude that such rebellion is justified in the United States today; therefore, the recent killings of abortionists cannot be justified on that or any other ground.

Consider two cases. In the first, Able, an abortionist's assistant in the killing room suddenly has a change of heart moments before the abortion begins. He has a moral right, and probably even a duty, to use reasonable force to defend the child. It is unlikely, however, that lethal force could be justified there. In the second case, Baker, an opponent of abortion, shoots the abortionist in the parking lot as he is approaching the building to perform abortions a few minutes later.

One difference between the two cases is imminence. Able engages himself in the immediate defense of the child; he has no intent but to defend that child; he has no separate intent to harm or kill the abortionist. Baker, by contrast, is not in the heat of a physical struggle to save the child. He thinks, "I can get no closer than this. If I do not stop him he will go in there and murder babies. So I will shoot him in the head." His purpose or motive is to save children. But his intent in the act he performs that moment is to blow the abortionist's head killer in the parking lot is defense of the child because that is as close as Baker could get. But if Baker may kill the abortionist when he is not actually performing an abortion, why does he have to limit himself to the parking lot? Why can he not conclude that the only way he can get a clear shot at him is to shoot him on the golf course? Or at the video store? St Thomas speaks of the justified defender as one who "repels force." See Catechism, Para. 2264. The moral right to defend the child must be restricted to the immediate performance of the abortion. Even then it is practically inconceivable that lethal force would have to be used.

The use of violence, whether lethal or non-lethal, against abortuaries and abortionists is unjustified also on several prudential grounds. It is not the most effective way to save the lives of unborn children threatened by abortion. It is counterproductive in that it distracts attention from the real, and spiritual, nature of the problem, and it diverts pro-life efforts away from more useful approaches. Moreover, it accelerates the disintegration of the civil order with predictably harmful impact on the common good. Violence should be utterly rejected as a pro-life tactic.

The recent attacks on abortionists are a symptom of an unraveling of the civil order which is directly traceable to Roe v. Wade and its sanction of the execution of the innocent. In her address on February 3, 1994, to the National Prayer Breakfast in Washington, Mother Teresa said that "the greatest destroyer of peace today is abortion, because it is a war against the child, a direct killing of the innocent child, murder by the mother herself. And if we accept that a mother can kill even her own child, how can we tell other people not to kill one another?"

The recent attacks on abortionists are a symptom of an unraveling of the civil order...

off to achieve that purpose. Baker is performing an intrinsically evil act to achieve a good end. He assumes the authority of God, to decide when that person will face the final judgment of God. St. Thomas, quoting St. Augustine, said that "A man who, without exercising public authority, kills an evildoer, shall be judged guilty of murder, and all the more, since he has dared to usurp a power which God has not given him." Summa Theologica, II, II, Q.64, art.3.

Ron Powlus' first pass was a wobbling spiral, a tad underthrown, but for Notre Dame's intentions, right on target. It went 29-yards to flanker Mike Miller—not a touchdown, but not incomplete.

At the moment, it was glorious gratification for Irish fans who had waited long, too long, for the heralded quarterback's debut.

But after the game, that first toss looked more like a mediocre opening act. Like Spinal Tap opening for the Rolling Stones. But, wow, what an encore.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz showcased his new toy on the Irish's first offensive play of the game, wasting no time showing the 66,946 fans at Soldier Field that Powlus' debut would break the mold, and with it Northwestern, in the form of a 42-15 win for Notre Dame.

Powlus' first pass was emblematic of his first game at the helm of the Irish offense. Not perfect but close, and if your a Notre Dame fan, so promising that a dismal performance by the running game reads as only a minor inconvenience.

To offer him the Heisman Trophy today would be a bit of hyperbole.

He's at least six days from securing college football's most prestigious prize.

Notre Dame quarterback Ron Powlus revealed his rumored skills to rave reviews Saturday against Northwestern.

All the expectations? Exceeded.

All the questions? Answered.

An encore this week against Michigan would thrust him into Heisman contention.

Familiar territory for Irish quarterbacks, but not normal for a neophyte.

In fact, there seems to be nothing normal about Powlus.

Normal is not 18-of-24 passing for 291 yards and a school record-tying four touchdown strikes.

Where, oh where did the running game go?

Running backs, offensive linemen in need of an overhaul

By JASON KELLY

CHICAGO

Lee Becton lamented the woes of Notre Dame's running game, normally dominant, but little more than a distraction in Saturday's season opener against Northwestern.

The featured Irish back last season, Becton began the 1994 campaign with an anemic 16 yard performance on 10 carries, snapping his seven game streak of rushing for 100 yards or more.

"I can't do everything," he said. "It takes ten other guys for me to be successful. But it doesn't matter. As long as the team wins, that's what's important."

Sophomore fullback Marc Edwards led the Irish with 52 yards on six carries, but the 161 yard team total had head coach Lou Holtz running scared.

"My worst fears were realized," he said. "We can't run the ball. We can't run the ball at all."

The problems began up front, with an inexperienced offensive line.

The green group kept the Wildcats' pass rushers away from quarterback Ron Powlus, but they couldn't open holes for the running backs.

"Credit Northwestern. They won the battle up front on both sides of the ball," Holtz said. "I didn't think they could shut down our running game as well as they did last year, but they did. That's very, very disappointing."

Northwestern stacked the lineat times to stifle the Irish on the ground.

That cleared the air for Notre Dame, and Powlus took advantage, turning in one of the best Irish passing performances in recent years.

"They played us with eight and nine men up front, make no mistake about it. They jammed it up there," Holtz said. "But we've been able to run the football in the past even when they do that, but we could not do it."

A one-dimensional offense won't be as successful against Michigan as it was against the much-weaker Wildcats.

The Irish need a potent ground game to keep the Wolverines off-balance.

But Holtz, ever the lamenter, doesn't know if the Irish can resurrect the rush.

"I don't know if we can get the running game going," he said. "I know the type of team we'd like to be and we aren't that type. We've just got to be able to run the football."

It may simply boil down to desire.

"When you can pass block but not block for the run, it just means you have to be tougher," center Mark Zataveski said. "We have to get tougher fast."

Or Notre Dame may become, much to Holtz's dismay, a team that relies on the pass. Though he gushes about Powlus' skill, he wants his team to live and die on the ground.

"We cannot be a good football team if we don't get more physical," Holtz said. "We couldn't even make a half-yard when we needed it. That's just unlike Notre Dame."

Irish

The much anticipated debut of the sophomore quarterback, which came a year late due to a twice broken collarbone, went as only Powlus, Lou Holtz and a man named Heisman could have designed.

Powlus now has this on his resume: 18-24, 291 yards, four touchdowns. They are numbers that would not only leave a Big Six firm drooling, but as it was on this day, the Big Ten as well.

"He's already won the Heisman," Northwestern coach Gary Barnett said with a high degree of sarcasm. "It's just a matter of how many more he's going to get."

It began with Miller's tidy grab on a slightly underthrown toss in the first quarter, and then flourished during a ten minute stretch near the end of the half, when Powlus collected the first three touchdown passes of his career—a number that 1993 starter Kevin McDougal didn't reach until his fifth game.

"(Powlus) missed a few checks, but his decision process was very, very good," Holtz said. "You can't beat a team just throwing, but if you were to try, Ron Powlus would be the one you would want to try with."

Powlus' first scoring pass was arguably his finest. A nine yard strike to Derrick Mayes, put where only the Notre Dame split end could get it and thrown in the face of a charging Northwestern linebacker.

Two plays earlier, Powlus connected on a 42-yard completion to Miller, a pass he shook his head at because it was slightly underthrown.

Northwestern responded with a 22-yard field goal by Sam Valenzisi, following a trend of anticlimactic Wildcat drives. Despite holding the ball for nearly 21 minutes in the first half, 116 yards from running back Dennis Lundy and domination by the Wildcat offensive front, Valenzisi's boot was the only Northwestern score in the opening two quarters.

The 6-foot-4, 218-pound Powlus had no trouble finding the endzone. The sophomore hadn't thrown a pass in live competition since leading Berwick (Pa.) High to the Pennsylvania state championship in 1992. But somewhere along the line he learned the two minute offense.

In the final 1:30 of the half he hit Miller with a 46-yard touchdown bomb (no headshaking on this one), and then fullback Ray Zellars from the two-yard line with :09 showing on the clock, a drive set up by Shawn Wooden's interception.

Powlus finished the half 10-13 for 186 yards. They were numbers few could have expected, particularly with Holtz's emphasis on the running game and a stable of talented backs which including preseason All-American Lee Becton.

But it was the running attack's ineffectiveness which may have forced Powlus' arm. Notre Dame rushed for only 59 yards in the first half and only 161 for the game. Becton failed to gain 100 yards, ending a seven game streak of hitting the century mark, dating back to the Pitt game last season.

"We have a lot of work to do before next week against Michigan," Becton said. "It is nothing in particular just working harder in all areas."

Notre Dame's offensive line never gave the running game a chance, but seemed to play inspired when Powlus dropped back to pass. He was sacked once late in the second half, but took only a pair of shots that would constitute a rush by Northwestern.

With Powlus hurling, Notre Dame upped the lead to 28-3 on a two-yard jaunt by Becton. The key play of the drive was a shoestring catch by Zellars which resulted in a 21-yard gain to the Wildcat seven.

Powlus put an exclamation on the day with a 36-yard strike to Mayes that put the score at 35-3. It was a circus catch by the Irish wideout, who mugged Wildcat defender Rodney Ray but saw nothing but armpits from the officials. "Not everything was perfect," Powlus said, "but years from now I'll feel good about my first start."

He can also look back and say he has a slice of history. Powlus' four touchdown passes tied a Notre Dame record for most in a game, shared with Angelo Bertelli, Steve Beuerlein and Daryle Lamonica.

Despite the catches and the touchdowns Holtz saw room for improvement and also heeded a bit of a warning: "One game doesn't make a career."

No, but this is a good start.

GRADED POSITION ANALYSIS

Quarterbacks—A
A legendary first performance turned in by Ron Powlus, who threw four touchdowns and no interceptions. Tom Krug led an efficient scoring drive at the end of the game.

Running Backs—C
Notre Dame could muster up only 161 rushing yards on Saturday, including a measly 16 yards from senior captain Lee Becton. Sophomore Marc Edwards was the team rushing leader with 52 yards, which is not even close to the production the running backs had last year.

Receivers—A
Derrick Mayes and Mike Miller combined for three touchdowns, while Charlie Stafford added a fourth late in the game. Spectacular catches helped make Ron Powlus' first appearance a memorable one.

Offensive Line—C
Though Powlus was only sacked one time, the line could not open holes to get the running game going. The Northwestern defense controlled the line of scrimmage and made many plays in the Irish backfield.

Defensive Line—C
Only one tackle for a loss and no sacks were recorded by the defensive line. Northwestern's Dennis Lundy carried the ball 27 times for 138 yards, much of which came right up the middle. Offsides penalties made the front line look foolish and confused.

Linebackers—B-
A pretty non-descript performance from Goheen, Sample, and Wynn. The evening was full of mistackles and blitzes that were stifled by the Northwestern offensive line.

Secondary—B+
The Wildcats had some big pass plays, but the play of the secondary was solid on the whole. Bobby Taylor played a magnificent game, recording an interception and another pick on a two-point conversion play.

Special Teams—C
Kickoffs were short, coverage was poor, and penalties hurt the flow of the game for the Irish. The only bright spot was Stefan Schrockner's extra point attempts—all good.

Coaching—B
Mostly out of necessity because of the struggling running game, Holtz loosened his normally conservative game plan, allowing Powlus to shine in his collegiate debut.

Overall G.P.A.—2.67
Not a terrible showing for the opening game, as it was enough to beat the lowly Wildcats. However, drastic improvements will have to be made on both the offensive and defensive lines in order to give the Irish a fighting chance against Michigan.

No domination for Davie's new-look defense

Penalties and poor run defense diminish individual performances

By MIKE NORBUT
Associate Sports Editor

He came in to Notre Dame this past spring planning to put his stamp of aggression on the defense, but all defensive coordinator Bob Davie could do was stamp his foot in frustration.

Frustration for the mistackles, frustration for the penalties, frustration for the mental mistakes.

Granted, the Irish allowed only 15 Northwestern points, twelve of which came in the final quarter, but the scoreboard cannot clearly justify how well the Wildcat offense handled the aggressive Notre Dame defense.

"Northwestern won the battle up front," Irish head coach Lou Holtz said. "They controlled the line of scrimmage and were able to run the football."

The Wildcats ran right through the Notre Dame front seven, piling up 166 yards on the ground, compared to 161 for the Irish.

"I was happy with the way we were able to run the ball," Northwestern head coach Gary Barnett said. "We wanted to establish the run this year, and it looks like we're moving in that direction."

Dennis Lundy carried much of the load for the Wildcats, piling up 138 yards on 27 attempts and scoring a touchdown. Much of his success was due to mistackling and over-aggressive pursuit on the part of the Irish, which set up cutbacks for the senior tailback.

"I felt like I could run all night," Lundy said. "I credit the line, though. They did a great job run blocking."

Northwestern's offensive line pushed the Irish defensive front around all night, and quarterbacks Tim Hughes and Steve Schnur kept them off balance with a tricky cadence, causing four off-side penalties in the first half.

"They knew we'd be blitzing and that we'd be aggressive, so they took advantage of that with the cadence," cornerback Bobby Taylor said. "But then we started watching the ball and stopped listening to the quarterback."

Taylor was a bright spot in an otherwise lackluster Irish defensive performance. The junior recorded three tackles and recorded one official interception, which he ran back 38 yards to kill a Wildcat drive. He also had another interception on a Northwestern two-point conversion play, which he almost converted into two points the other way.

"My play in the games is much like practice," he continued. "I work against players like Derrick Mayes and Mike Miller every day, which helps me a lot."

Shawn Wooden and Travis Davis also recorded interceptions, and defensive end Brian Hamilton recovered a fumble. The four turnovers were a key to keeping Northwestern out of the end zone for three quarters.

Regardless of the turnovers or the low point total allowed, Davie or the Notre Dame defense cannot be pleased with the total defensive performance, especially in preparation for Michigan.

"Northwestern gave us a lot of problems," Taylor said. "We need to come out on a higher level next time."

If they don't, the Wolverine offense may stamp them—into the ground.

Lamonica and Notre Dame's first Heisman Trophy winner, Angelo Bertelli. It's a record that none of the trio accomplished in their first season, let alone their first game.

"I wasn't aware (of the record)," Powlus said, almost yawning at his own accomplishment. "That's nice."

And definitely not normal.

When Lou Holtz allows a quarterback to throw on two consecutive plays from the two-yard line, it's a special spectacle.

Kevin McDougal threw just eight passes in the entire game against Northwestern in 1993. It wasn't until the seventh game of the season that he threw his fourth touchdown pass.

And he led the Irish to the brink of a national championship.

One Chicago scribe summarized Powlus' immaculate inauguration while the media masses awaited the quarterback's words of wisdom.

"Powlus won't be coming in for interviews," the writer said. "He's out on Lake Michigan taking a walk."

That's what Saturday's game was all about—getting his feet wet. But he dove in head first on his initial play, a 29-yard toss to Mike Miller through the syrupy sky at Soldier Field that immediately solidified his superstar status.

Powlus spread the praise. He realized that—though his numbers were remarkable—he was also the beneficiary of several sterling snares by Miller and Derrick Mayes.

He even credited the Irish defense "for giving (the offense) the opportunity to be on the field."

But it was Powlus who commanded the most attention. And the most appreciation.

With unusual composure, he surveyed Northwestern's defense, deftly directing passes to where only his receivers could reach them.

He dodged pass rushers and threaded needles like Betsy Ross.

The heir to Notre Dame's legacy assumed his throne in majestic fashion.

"He's everything he's cracked up to be," Wildcat coach Gary Barnett said, adding with a twinge of sarcasm, "He's already won the Heisman."

Not yet.

Land of Milk, Honey, and Chiclets

In the spirit of Star Wars, this too is a trilogy.

Memorial Day, 1994— school is out. The sun is beating down on my furrowed brow. In the distance, a meadowlark feeds her chicks. On my porch, my cat, Pig, playfully nibbles the remains of a dead cricket. I stand with cruise orders in hand, looking to the sea— NROTC calls me. The wind blows gently, and I think I hear a voice— YES! It is Enya. She is singing my name. Kriiisss, yooohhh musst go onnnnn krrooooozzzz (spelled phonetically). And so I go.

I boarded the plane for San Diego, knowing that due to the nature of NROTC activities, some of us would not be returning home. I wished my mother well, wrote a will on a cocktail napkin, and never looked back.

With the exception of extraordinarily good peanuts, the flight was uneventful. As I waited for my ride to my ship at a Navy abode by the airport, I spied a scrumptious banana nut roll, threw caution to the wind, and indulged. The excitement of getting to the ship, which was destined for Hong Kong, was reaching meltdown proportions. I would have exploded had it not been for a friendly person who let me listen to "Neutron Dance" on his walkman. The van finally came to get me, and I was given a sedative.

I reached my ship, and stared at her in bewilderment. She was gorgeous. An amphibious vessel by trade, she housed a working crew of about 400, and her name was USS Cleveland. I called her mother, and she rocked me to sleep at night.

Since it was only May 30th, and the "Steamin' Cleve" didn't leave until June 9th, the natural alternative was to mingle with the natives. I had met up with several other midshipmen on this seaworthy vessel, including a jaunty, little monkey named Scott from Miami of Ohio. Traveling in a pack, our first field trip was to a fast food restaurant called Del Taco. Now, I'm no marketing major, but a monstrous sign that reads, "Get Your Food in 60 Seconds or it's Free!" is typically not a selling point. Despite the warning, I ventured in, and was bold enough to try the Del Taco sauce, known simply as "Del Scorcho." The employees were amazed as I made a mockery of this sauce, described as "BEYOND HOT!" Yet, this was a mere prelude to our journey south.

I had been there once before, but my return to the waste land of septic systems and ceramic Spuds Mackenzies was truly remarkable. Every city is famous for something, and Tijuana is no exception. To my surprise, I quickly learned that T.J. is the Chiclet capital of the world. Yes, those little squares of candy-coated gum that I enjoyed as a child came from this place. Like little pixies, children flitted about, tugging at my shirt, shouting, "Chick-lay, chick-lay!" Before I knew it, I had spent $20 on this chewy ambrosia. Yet, while I was happily munching gum, a few others had decided to try some authentic tacos. Much to their dismay, these kids had no clue that they were eating Mexico's answer to Metamucil. Alas, live and learn.

The rest of the week was spent at Mission Beach. I boogie boarded like a mad man, riding the smaller waves with the ten-year-olds, and acting like a local. Taking the bus back to the ship, I met a lady who had just got out of prison after serving a sentence for narcotics trafficking and possession of a sawed-off shotgun. I quickly added her to my Christmas card list, and thanked the world of public transportation for a new friend. That night, I slept well, and by morning, we were steamin' towards Hong Kong. Stay tuned for part 2.

ND/SMC students prepare for Godot

By PATTI CARSON
Saint Mary's Accent Editor

"This particular play has not been produced at Notre Dame or Saint Mary's in a very long time," according to Rev. David Garrick, CSC, Assistant Professor, Communication and Theater. Father Garrick is directing Waiting for Godot, Samuel Beckett's 1953 production.

"It is one of the key plays of the twentieth century. One cannot fully understand modern theater without seeing this production," he said. Beckett's play is a mix of existentialism, Freudian psychology, Christian myth, and French classical comedy. It ponders the meaning of life through puns and linguistic tricks.

Auditions proper were Wednesday and Thursday. Only five roles were open to the 32 men who auditioned for them. These students read from scripts and they were invited to do some improvising with movement and facial gestures, said Garrick.

The director is responsible for assigning parts, according to Garrick. After making and studying brief notes during auditions, 18 men were called back to auditions on Friday.

"I'm expecting that this will be an enjoyable production. This is not going to be a 'heavy' play. Our production is a tragic comedy, not just a tragedy. Our aim is to maintain a balance between the tragedy and the comedy. The performance will not be a tearful one, but it will have humorous aspects," said Garrick.

Since the five roles were designed specifically for men, many of the technical jobs involved in the production are being done by women, according to Garrick. A number of students, both men and women, will help construct the set. The set for this play was designed by senior Rachel Prouty and the lighting was designed by senior Michael Kersey.

Cavanaugh Hall senior Stacey Stewart is the stage manager for the production. She is assisted by Badin Hall junior Kay Zolkowski and Sue Mignanelli.

"As stage manager, it is my responsibility to run production meetings with designers, directors, and producers. We must also keep track of stage movements. It's an all encompassing job that involves a lot of running around,"

Stewart said.

Stage managers devote at least five hours per day to the production, including rehearsal time, she said.

Rehearsals usually run from 7 p.m.-11 p.m.. The closer we get to the actual production, the longer we spend practicing, said Stewart.

"The excitement lies not only in the final production, but in the whole journey involved in making that production," said Carroll Hall senior Francis Kelly.

The most rewarding part of being in a production is meeting new people. It is interesting to work with my peers during rehearsal sessions, Kelly said.

Kelly, who previously had a role in You Can't Take It With You and Macbeth, spends much of his time in Washington Hall. "As a theater major, the production in which I am taking part is my work. I consider the time commitment worthwhile and enjoyable."

Kelly plays the role of Estragon in this production. Other cast members of Waiting for Godot include: Josh Hartman as Vladimir, Jerry Lavin as Pozzo, Scott Paradine as Lucky, and Chris Dobranski as Boy.

Lions clip Falcon's wings

By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press

Battling a leg cramp, Jason Hanson kicked a 37-yard field goal in overtime to beat the Falcons in June Jones' coaching debut for Atlanta.

Lions tied it 28-28 on a 15-yard pass from Mitchell to Anthony Carter with 30 seconds left. Hanson's kickoff dribbled to Alton Montgomery, who scooped it up and rambled 37 yards to the Atlanta 44. Norm Johnson's try on a 52-yard field goal sailed wide right as time expired.

Detroit's new quarterback, Scott Mitchell, was 15 of 30 for 173 yards with three touchdowns. Jeff George, the new guy for Atlanta, completed 29 of 37 passes for 281 yards and three touchdowns.

Andre Rison had personal bests with 14 catches of George's bullets for 193 yards.

Browns 28, Bengals 20

The Browns became the first team since Detroit in 1977 to return a kickoff and a punt for touchdowns in the same game.

Randy Baldwin ran a kickoff back 85 yards, and Eric Metcalf went a club-record 92 yards with a punt within a three-minute span in the second quarter.

The Bengals made it close in the final quarter, when David Klingler lofted a 24-yard touchdown pass to rookie Darnay Scott with nine minutes left.

Seahawks 28, Redskins 7

Rick Mirer led three scoring drives to give Seahawks coach Tom Flores his 100th pro victory and spoil Norv Turner's debut with the Redskins. Mirer completed 17 of 28 passes for 183 yards and one touchdown, and Chris Warren rushed for 100 yards and scored two touchdowns.

Washington rookie quarterback Heath Shuler played for two possessions late in the second quarter after a drive led by starter John Friesz sputtered. But Shuler was sacked twice.

Chiefs 30, Saints 17

Joe Montana improved to 10-0 in the Superdome, throwing two touchdowns and completing 24 of 33 for 315 yards.

New Orleans' defense gave the Chiefs quarterback 40 different looks, but nothing bothered him.

Kansas City totally dominated the first half, with two touchdowns and a field goal on its first three possessions. The Chiefs had the ball for 18:16 and outrushed New Orleans 86 yards to 16.

Jim Everett, making his first regular-season start with the Saints, completed 26 of 37 passes for 325 yards, two touchdowns and two interceptions.

Packers 16, Vikings 10

One day after threatening a walkout, Sterling Sharpe was back at work, catching a 14-yard touchdown pass for the Packers, who agreed to adjust his contract.

Sharpe caught seven passes for a game-high 53 yards, including the toss from Brett Favre that gave Green Bay a 10-0 lead in the second quarter.

Packers safety George Teague intercepted two of Moon's passes, spoiling his debut with the Vikings at Lambeau Field.

Moon completed 20 of 37 passes for 166 yards with three interceptions and no touchdowns. He was sacked three times.

Kramer shines as Bears beat Bucs

By RICK GANO
Associated Press

CHICAGO

Erik Kramer, who usually begins a season on the bench, made his first opening-game start a winning one and Chris Gedney caught two touchdown passes Sunday as the Chicago Bears beat the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 21-9.

Kramer, signed away from Detroit as a free agent, led the Lions to the NFC Central title two of the last three years. But he was a third-stringer at the start of both of those seasons.

The Bears offered him $8.1 million for three years to be their No. 1 quarterback. On Sunday, he began earning the money by completing 18 of 25 passes for 212 yards.

Two of those completions went to Gedney for the tight end's first touchdowns in the NFL.

The Buccaneers, with an effective ball-control offense, had pulled to 14-9 on a pair of third-quarter field goals by Michael Husted.

But after Husted missed from 54 yards in the fourth period, the Bears needed just six plays to gain control as Gedney slipped behind the defense and grabbed a 37-yard scoring pass from Kramer with 5:35 left.

The Bears were aided by key penalties in both of their scoring drives in the first half, when they took a 14-3 lead.

Kramer's 40-yard pass to Jeff Graham put the ball on the Bucs' 1-yard line. Tampa Bay's Hardy Nickerson intercepted on the next play, but the Bucs' Jeff Brady was offside. Lewis Tillman then ran in for a touchdown with 57 seconds remaining in the half.

Chicago, with the benefit of a 37-yard pass interference call on Tampa's Martin Mayhew, had gone 68 yards for a touchdown on its opening drive. Kramer hit Gedney for a 10-yard score less than four minutes into the game.

Colts, Faulk run over error-plagued Oilers

By STEVE HERMAN
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS

The new-look Indianapolis Colts made quick work of the Houston Oilers' 11-game regular-season winning streak Sunday.

Marshall Faulk, one of 13 new starters, rushed for 143 yards and three touchdowns in his NFL debut as the Colts shocked the error-plagued Houston Oilers 45-14.

Indianapolis played nothing like the team that was 4-12 a year ago. The Colts scored after each of three Houston turnovers and set a team record for most points in a season-opening game.

All six Indianapolis touchdowns were scored by players who had joined the team since the end of last season.

Faulk, the second overall pick in the draft, ran for touchdowns of 1, 2 and 11 yards. Linebacker Tony Bennett, a free agent from Green Bay, returned a fumble a Colts-record 75 yards for another touchdown, and Bears castoff Jim Harbaugh passed for two touchdowns to Floyd Turner, a free agent from New Orleans.

Houston, suffering its worst loss since a 61-7 defeat to Cincinnati in 1989, got its only touchdowns on fourth-quarter passes of 2 yards to Pat Carter and 16 yards to Haywood Jeffries from Bucky Richardson, who replaced starter Cody Carlson in the third period.

Carlson left the game with an injured left shoulder, but X-rays were negative.

The Oilers, starting their first game in the post-Warren Moon era, fell apart early in the second quarter after failing to score from the Colts 5.

Carlson, the full-time starter since Moon's trade to Minnesota in the offseason, was sacked by Tony McCoy for a 20-yard loss and a fumble, and Bennett scooped up the ball on the run and raced 75 yards for his second career touchdown and a 14-0 Indianapolis lead. It broke the former Colts record for a fumble return of 64 yards by Stan White against Buffalo in 1976.

Indianapolis drove 56 yards on its next possession, including a 31-yard reception by Faulk, accompanied by a personal foul on the Oilers' Cris Dishman that took the Colts to the Houston 15. Three plays later, Harbaugh passed 12 yards to Sean Dawkins at the 4, then Harbaugh faked a handoff to Faulk and flipped the ball to Turner for the touchdown.

The Colts' defense and special teams set up the next two scores.

Ashley Ambrose forced a fumble by Travis Hannah on the kickoff after Turner's first touchdown, then it took four plays for the Colts to score again, on a 9-yard pass to Turner with 3:16 left in the half.

On the next Houston possession, Ray Buchanan intercepted Carlson on the first play and returned the ball 22 yards to the Oilers 20. After three runs by Faulk and a pass interference call against Dishman at the 2, Faulk ran in for his second TD and a 35-0 Indianapolis lead.

The 28 points in the second quarter tied a Colts record for points in one period set most recently against Kansas City in 1980.

New Formation begins season

By THOMAS SCHLIDT
Sports Writer

In the preseason, the Notre Dame men's soccer team made an important change from a 4-4-2 formation to a 3-5-2 in hopes to take advantage of their abundance of excellent midfielders and to increase their offensive pressure.

In making this change the Irish eliminated their stopper position and moved last year's stopper, senior Kevin Adkisson, to sweeper.

Yet, while these changes proved to be tremendously successful, the No. 16 Irish lost to No. 15 Penn State 1-0 when Travis Berger punched in the winning goal in the 83rd minute.

This disappointing loss was no reflection of Adkisson's first collegiate game at sweeper.

"Kevin Adkisson played his first game at sweeper, and had an excellent game," said Irish coach Mike Berticelli. "He was, in my mind, the best player on the field."

While he had not played sweeper since high school, he feels very comfortable with the position and likes the prospects of having five midfielders in front of him. Yet, most of all, he is just happy to have the opportunity to play and contribute to the team.

"We have a lot of great midfielders," said Adkisson. "So, I think this (elimination of the stopper for an extra midfielder) is going to benefit us greatly. As, for the move to sweeper, I like it a lot. It is more of a mental position, and I am very comfortable with that. But, more importantly, it's great to have a chance to play."

Yet, even with Adkisson's great play and the domination of the game from good midfield work, the Irish could not pull out a victory.

"This was a disappointing loss, we didn't deserve to lose," said Berticelli. "We outplayed them for the whole second half and had great chances, but it didn't happen. It was very frustrating."

The Nittany Lions only penetrated the Irish defense three times, but they got a break and made the most of it.

The Irish had great play from freshman forward Ryan Turner and sophomore forward Chris Mathis, who replaced starter Tim Oates at the end of the first half because of problems with Oates' knee brace.

the result," said Petrucelli. "We felt all along that we have a strong attacking team and to post six goals against a strong defensive team like Rutgers is an accomplishment."

While the Rutgers match may have been an indication of future Irish successes, Sunday's match versus LaSalle displayed Notre Dame's continued domination of the MCC.

Although the ball rarely left Irish territory, LaSalle, playing with nine players back in order to limit the effectiveness of the Irish team speed, managed to hold Notre Dame scoreless until freshman Holly Manthei put away an Irish shot deflected by Explorer goalie Chris Raub at the 36:30 mark.

Solid goaltending by Raub and missed conversions by the Irish left the score 1-0 at the half, a moral victory for a LaSalle squad that was beaten 12-0 by Notre Dame last year.

"I was very satisfied with the first half," said Explorer coach Craig Dorman. "The players did everything that I asked them to do. Chris [Raub] and the players in the backfield played very well."

But LaSalle could not overcome the relentless pressure from the Irish, giving up four goals in the second half including two by sophomore Stacia Masters.

Despite the 5-0 victory, Irish assistant coach Carla Chin was concerned with the impact of LaSalle's defensive play on the Irish backfield's concentration.

"We were a little relaxed in the back," said Chin. "Our passes weren't always as crisp as they should have been. That's a result of the ball being on our end of the field for so long, and that's something we'll need to work on."

Overall, however, Chin was satisfied with the Irish performance.

"One of the things we've wanted to work on is how we could adjust to that type of defense, and we were able to do that today."

Tourney

mented Brown. "I'm thrilled for her because not only did she break the record, now she'll shatter it."

Another thrilling aspect to come out of the tournament was the emergence of Notre Dame's stellar recruiting class. Freshman Angie Harris showcased her ability with 17 kills against the Spartans, while freshman middle blocker Jamie Lee stepped up with eight kills and four blocks. Along with Harris and Lee, junior Shannon Tuttle rounded out the Irish players on the All-Tournament team.

In the first match on Saturday, the Irish dropped their only game of the invitational to Illinois-Chicago, but managed to down the Flames 15-3, 15-8, 13-15, 15-6. Sophomore outside hitter Jenny Birkner collected 17 digs to lead the Irish along with 12 kills from Harris.

The Irish also beat Western Michigan in three games.

Irish shoot down Rutgers in opener

By RIAN AKEY
Associate Sports Editor

Notre Dame fans were looking to see a promising opening game performance by a Fighting Irish team this weekend.

While many supporters thought this required a trip to Chicago, other Irish fans watched a dazzling debut without battling traffic on the Kennedy Expressway or forking out $4 for a Soldier Field beer as the Notre Dame women's soccer team posted shut-outs over Rutgers and LaSalle to open their 1994 campaign.

If Saturday's match against Rutgers was any indication of how Notre Dame will handle future Big East opponents, leaving the Midwestern Collegiate Conference will do little to hurt the Irish won-loss percentage.

The Scarlet Knights allowed three goals in each half, including two by junior Rosella Guer-

The result was a pleasant surprise to Irish coach Chris Petrucelli, who anticipated a much closer contest.

Birkner (right) helps Irish win Shamrock Invite

By JOE VILLINSKI

There's no better way to start off a season than by capturing a tournament right in your own backyard.

That's exactly what the 13th-ranked Irish volleyball team did this weekend as they romped to two impressive wins on Saturday en route to the Notre Dame Shamrock Invitational title.

The title was sewn up with a 15-8, 15-3, 15-7 win over Michigan State. The Spartans were able to stay competitive early on, but Notre Dame's outside hitting combination proved to be too much.

"Michigan State is the best team we have played so far, and we controlled them pretty well," said head coach Debbie Brown.

Tournament MVP Christy Peters also had things under control as she racked up 11 kills in the finale along with 20 digs in the tournament. The last one moved her into first place on the all-time dig list with 1325.
