Crow: Quilting opens doors to art and life

By LESLIE FIELD
News Writer

Each piece of artwork is a door to be opened and is something filled with strength and purpose, according to contemporary quiltmaker Nancy Crow in a lecture at O'Laughlin Auditorium last night.

"Doors represent a risk. You are always shaping a positive form against a negative background." The world of art has opened many doors for Crow. After obtaining her MFA and BFA degrees from Ohio State University, Crow went on to produce two fabric collections, and countless works of art ranging from baskets and pottery to leather goods and quilts.

While living in Brazil, Crow began weaving. Weaving was filled with emotion, she said. Crow even began dying her own yarn to obtain the colors she wanted to work with. The passion she put into her weaving can be seen in the vibrant colors and patterns of her work.

During her two years in Brazil, Crow had her first son. Though she was extremely busy with him, she continued to work diligently on her weaving. "I never used my children as an excuse not to do my art work," Crow said.

Crow later moved to Cambridge, Ohio with her son and husband. It was there that she began to think about making an income from her art work. With a new Singer sewing machine, she began to produce leather goods. They brought in $10,000 to $12,000 a year. She did this for several years until she discovered what would become her greatest passion: quilt making.

At age 29, Crow decided to join several women at a Senior Citizen's quilt making group. She watched the ladies work and decided to try it. With only a few old books and several pieces of fabric, Crow began to create quilts as large as 100 inches by 100 inches. Her designs became increasingly intricate with time. Crow derived her patterns from nature. She took countless amounts of pictures. She used these to find interesting patterns that would eventually be filled with great symbolism. The quilt patterns ranged from images stemming from the cactus flowers to crosses.

In 1979, Crow launched her career with a single quilt hanging displayed in an art museum as other museums all across the mid-west began recognizing her work as well. It was at this time that Crow and her family moved to a farm in Ohio.

For the first few months Crow turned to photography to ease the transition into country life and get inspiration for future quilts. From these photos stemmed a number of quilt series, including The Bitter Sweet series. One piece in this series sold for $12,000.

Crow says her career has been one of great personal success. Through her work as a mother, wife and artist, Crow is certainly following in the Saint Mary's sesquicentennial theme of "honoring tradition while pioneering change."

ND Senate aims for year of fun

By GWENDOLYN NORGLE
News Writer

This year, the Notre Dame Student Senate aims to be both fun and efficient, according to Student Body President Dave Hungeling.

At the first meeting of the Student Senate last night, Hungeling said they are attempting to "to try and run Student Senate as efficiently as possible." He said the key to a successful year is for members of the Senate to put forth "serious effort" but to "bring a sense of humor" to meetings.

Hungeling also said the Campus Life Council, which is comprised of hall rectors, faculty, administrators, and students, will be "the most influential body on campus" this year.

The Senate hopes to "use this organization" to get its proposals passed, said Hungeling.

Hungeling commented about the Grateful Dead concert that was mentioned during his campaign with Matt Orsagh for Student Body President and Vice President. He spoke to the publicist of the band, who had him get in touch with the promoter, the person in charge of networking, programming, and advertising.

According to Hungeling, the promoter questioned him about the size of the facility in which the band would be playing, the layout of the town, and the distances of Notre Dame to Chicago and Indianapolis.

"The promoter did not say 'no'," according to Hungeling. "He said they (the Grateful Dead) play nowhere there's not a five-star hotel. He said there was a 'slim to no chance'," referring to the possibility of the Grateful Dead playing at Notre Dame.

Hungeling said that the Student Senate is "pursuing a more realistic avenue," which would be a benefit concert sponsored by a joint committee of the Student Senate, Student Union Board, Hall Presidents Council, and Student Activities. These groups, with the help of graduate student Katie Pamenter, have begun the initial groundwork for the event although no performer has been named at this time, according to Hungeling.

Other business discussed at the Student Senate meeting concerned the acquisition of "official corporate sponsors for Student Government," according to Tyler Farmer. Royal Crown Cola, Ford Motor Company Trucks, and Orvis Fishing Outfitters were the sponsors mentioned by Farmer, who said "we find them the only concrete existence of God on this planet." Farmer also said they hoped for "free stuff" from these corporations.

The Student Senate will meet every other Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. in the Notre Dame Room at LaFortune Student Center.

U.N. abortion compromise troubled

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt

A group of countries joined the Vatican today in opposing a section on abortion in the U.N. population conference's 20-year plan for reining in world population growth.

The announcement upset a compromise reached late Tuesday that would retain a section recommending government policies on abortion but declare that it shouldn't be promoted as family planning.

Iran, Pakistan and Benin, previously Vatican allies, agreed to support the compromise. And the European Union, Norway and Sweden accepted the changes in the conference's central document as their "rock bottom" position.

But when talks resumed this morning, delegates said seven countries and one U.S. territory — all with Roman Catholic majorities — announced support for the Vatican position: Malta, Argentina, Honduras, Guatemala, Slovakia, Uruguay, Ecuador and Guam, a U.S. territory that has observer status at the United Nations and a separate delegation at the conference.

The conference's plan of action does not require the blanket approval of all participants, and the Vatican did not approve documents that came out of the two previous U.N. conferences in 1974 and 1984.

But great effort is being made to reach compromise because the United Nations likes consensus when issuing long-term goals.

The section under debate — one paragraph in a 113-page plan — deals with abortion and motherhood. The compromise would have retained sections urging governments to treat unsafe abortion as a major public health concern.

It would acknowledge the legality of abortion in some countries and say women who have abortions should have access to treatment for medical complications, counseling and family planning to avoid repeat abortions.

Namibian delegate Henning Melber said today as many as 20 countries now oppose that language.

"There is absolutely no progress on the matter," he said. "For those who came to a consensus, this is very frustrating."

Unable to reach consensus, the negotiators broke up into informal groups to discuss the next step.

Mary Ellen Glynn, spokeswoman for the U.S. delegation, said 95 percent of those at the conference support the compromise and it was unfortunate that a few were delaying progress on more important population issues.

"We don't want this conference to be on abortion and stringing it out does just that," she said.

Melber also said Namibia and many other countries were losing patience with the upending of a compromise that had been very difficult to reach.

"How long will they be able to compromise, compromise, compromise?" he asked.

The Vatican and Muslim nations have objected to parts of the plan on abortion or sex education. Other nations have complained that arguments over morality were taking attention from the real purpose of the conference — slowing the population explosion by giving power to women.

In a key concession to the Vatican, the compromise on the abortion provision restored language from the 1984 population conference that abortion should never "be promoted as a method of family planning."

The Holy See was the only delegation that spoke out against the language at Tuesday night's closed-door session. A Vatican official, speaking on condition of anonymity, opposed a line that said that abortions should be safe in cases where they are legal.

But the Vatican official left open the possibility that it might accept the document once language on abortion in other sections are dealt with.

The Vatican's stance has created such tension in the committee session that on Tuesday, when the chairman asked for consensus and the delegate from the Holy See got up to refuse, groans and some boos broke out in the committee room, delegates said.

After Monday morning's negotiating session, Melber, the Namibian delegate, said Guatemala opposed the reference to legal abortion, saying it was a contradiction because there was no such thing as "legal robbery."

Marta Casco, a delegate from Honduras, said her country would not accept the word "unsafe" but would like to keep the word abortion.

The compromise eliminates a reference to "sexual health education," a plea to governments to review their laws and policies on abortion, and a call to decriminalize abortion.

Ladies and gentlemen, this is...

The first home football weekend of the year is nearly upon us (at last). The numerous traditions that make Notre Dame football what it is are about to be renewed. Another class is about to be indoctrinated to these traditions and to why "We are ND."

Tim Sherman
Assistant Sports Editor

Many are well-known to any Saturday afternoon NBC viewer. The painting of the helmets, the Irish Guard, the 'Play Like a Champion Today' sign - these have become synonymous with Irish football.

However, there is at least one tradition that NBC has yet to capture and commercialize. Therefore, many freshman may not be aware of it, but it is a ritual that is very much ingrained into the fabric of Notre Dame home games.

It is the fourth quarter, public service announcement of Sgt. Tim McCarthy of the Indiana State Police.

For the 35th straight year, Sgt. McCarthy will provide the 59,075 fans with a brief reminder as to the dangers of drunk driving. To any newcomer to Notre Dame Stadium the question seems obvious. Why has something as simple as a little warning become such a big deal.

I think one reason the announcements, or as I like to call them, McCarthyisms, are so popular is that they are just so creative and corny that you just have to take notice.

Here's a sampling.

"Remember, twenty four cans of beer doesn't make a case in court."

"Drive like a musician...C Sharp or B Flat."

"Those who have one for the road may have a policeman as a chaser."

Second, one can only wonder how many more plays on words, puns, and blatantly bad jokes McCarthy can come up with. Each game the anticipation grows. Amazingly, Sgt. Tim never fails to disappoint.

A third, and what I think the biggest factor in the immense popularity of McCarthyisms is the ritual the crowd goes through when the PA comes on.

Be it an epic such as Miami or Florida St. or a yawner against Pitt or Purdue, when "Ladies and gentlemen, can I have your attention. This is Sergeant Tim McCarthy of the Indiana State Police" is heard, the stadium becomes abuzz with anticipation for a brief moment. Then, as if commanded by God, the entire stadium becomes deathly silent. No one really knows why, but no one has the courage to break the silence.

I remember my first game last year. As a naive freshman, I didn't know any better so I continued to carry on a conversation as McCarthy spoke. Upon receiving the icy glares of the sophomores, I soon realized my error. I quickly shut up and listened.

Immediately after the punchline comes the groan, and maybe a few genuine laughs.

So freshman, if you happen to be down at the concession stand purchasing your souvenir Notre Dame sport mug in the fourth quarter, and you hear a massive groan from above, don't assume Michigan found the endzone, simply realize that Tim McCarthy has struck again.

Operation Safe Haven moving Cuban refugees to Panama

PANAMA CITY

Weary Cuban refugees settled into a tent camp beside the Panama Canal today after a U.S. airlift of thousands of rafters got under way. "Down with Fidel Castro!" young men in blue T-shirts and plastic sandals chanted late Tuesday as they got off a C-130 military transport plane. They were among the first 93 refugees to make the three-hour flight from the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Panama is letting 10,000 refugees stay temporarily as a "humanitarian gesture." It told the United States the Cubans must be relocated within six months. The Cubans will be flown in on U.S. military planes and chartered jetliners in the coming weeks to help ease crowding at the fast-filling camp set up at Guantanamo, the American outpost on Cuba's remote southeastern tip. More than 23,000 Cuban rafters picked up by the U.S. Coast Guard have been detained at Guantanamo Bay. They were among the more than 30,000 Cubans picked up since early August. The base also houses about 14,000 Haitian refugees. U.S. and Cuban diplomats are negotiating in New York over halting the flow of Cubans attempting risky raft trips to Florida. Washington has offered to boost legal immigration in return for Cuba stopping the exodus, but has rejected Cuba's demand to tie a deal to the easing of the U.S. trade embargo. The first arrivals in Panama included a shoe repairman, a civil engineer, and a mother, Jacqueline Ochoa de La Rosa, who hugged her 9-year-old daughter, Maria Cecilia. "I am free of Cuba. I feel great!" Ochoa de La Rosa said after getting off the first of two C-130 flights late Tuesday at Howard Air Force Base near Panama City, the capital. A handful of U.S. servicemen looked on. One soldier watching the scene told another, "Who knows: If life had turned out different, that could be us." The Cubans will sleep on aluminum cots inside olive-green tents, set behind eight-foot-high cyclone fencing in a clearing surrounded by jungle-covered hills overlooking the Panama Canal. The first arrivals said they were volunteers for the airlift, glad to be anywhere but Cuba. "Even in Cuba, anyone can get at least a little to eat. But I'm not leaving because of the economic conditions. I'm leaving because I want my freedom," said Raul Reyes Bravo. He said he was thankful he and nine others survived three perilous days at sea, paddling a car rooftop that had been turned upside down and lashed to inner-tubes. The arrival of the refugees has angered some Panamanian lawmakers, who say they were not consulted during new President Ernesto Perez Balladares' negotiations with Washington. "We were informed about this decision by the media," said Alberto Cigarruista, a deputy in the National Assembly. "This is a bad start on a new government."

Man makes plane landing on highway

PERU, Ind.

A Peru man made an emergency landing on U.S. 24 on Wednesday when the airplane he was flying ran out of gas. Beveridge Shinn, 73, was returning to the private airstrip on his farm when his single-engine plane ran out of gas, forcing him to land on the highway. No one was injured. "I thought I could make it back, but apparently I couldn't," Shinn said. "I made sure the highway was clear and then landed on the pavement." Shinn's said his landing gear lowered just before he touched down. The right side of the landing gear folded under, sending the plane into a ditch on the side of the road. There was minor damage to the landing gear, the front of the plane and the propeller. Shinn said he designed and built the plane about six years ago. He owns two other planes and has had a pilot's license since 1945. "I'll keep flying," he said. "Maybe not this plane for a while, but I'll keep flying."

Victims record their own murders on film

MACHIAS, Maine

A man who gunned down his neighbors while they unwittingly videotaped their own deaths was ordered Wednesday to pay $513,000 in civil penalties. Richard Uffelman of Machiasport is serving a life prison sentence for the double slayings of Michael and Florence Phillips, who were killed while taking an after-dinner walk on Aug. 29, 1989. The slayings, which culminated a long-running feud, were recorded on a video camera the Phillipses had set up in their kitchen to document alleged harassment by Uffelman. The videotape showed puffs of smoke coming from Uffelman's home as the Phillipses walked past. Later, Uffelman left his house with a gun and walked off-camera to an area where the bodies lay. Three more shots were heard. Uffelman left the house a second time with his son, then another shot was heard.

Golfing prosecutor catches car thief

MERRILLVILLE, Ind.

Lake County Deputy Prosecutor Phillip Benson knows what it means to go above and beyond the call of duty. Benson was playing a relaxing game of golf on Labor Day when he spotted a teen-ager running from a man yelling, "Stop, thief!" Benson took off after the 14-year-old while his brother and a friend followed in their golf cart, chasing the youth about 1 1/2 miles. "We were going through the lawns of the apartment complexes. People were giving us funny looks," said golfing partner James Daubenheyer. "We wound up chasing the guy around one of the buildings a couple of times. We got within 20 feet of him and Phil jumped off the cart and brought him down. The guy was no match for Phil," Daubenheyer said. Police said the youth had tried to steal a 1991 Buick near the Broadmoor Country Club before the chase began. Benson said it was just part of the job. "And after I caught him, I still shot the best game of my life," he said, smiling.

Busy bumblebees nearly burn home down

PORTAGE, Ind.

This time, bees did more than just ruin a nice picnic. Fire officials say a large hive of bees started a fire at the home of James and Cindy Jones. Family members noticed a burning smell about midnight Saturday, and while investigating, James Jones noticed the wall around the fuse box was warm. He called Northern Indiana Public Service Co., but by the time an employee arrived, the wall around the fuse box was smoking. The fire department was called just before 2:20 a.m. When firefighters arrived, they found a hive with about 300 bees between the drywall and brick near a fuse box. Damage from the fire was estimated at $500. Assistant Fire Chief Jeff Scheub said the bees' activity had worn down insulation on the electric wiring, causing a short in the wires. Repairs are pending. "I'm glad it happened when someone was home to take care of it," said Cindy Jones. "It could have been worse."

Black soldiers to be honored

By HARRY ROSENTHAL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

In this city of monuments, 360 commemorate episodes in American history, a quarter of those honoring events and participants in the Civil War. But not one honors the 178,000 "colored" soldiers who fought in that war.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt pointed that out on Wednesday as he took part in the groundbreaking of an African American Civil War Memorial in one of Washington's oldest black neighborhoods.

Not one, Babbitt said, "makes even a passing reference to the heroism and the role ... of former slaves, the victims of centuries of oppression and injustice."

The memorial will be on a plaza created by construction of an underground subway stop in the Shaw neighborhood, at 10th and U Street, N.W. The area is named after Col. Robert Gould Shaw, commander of the 54th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, which figured in the movie "Glory."

"It marks the beginning of a new thrust of tourism beyond the monuments and memorials on the Mall," said Frank Smith Jr., a member of the District of Columbia city council who was the driving force behind the memorial project.

The memorial will be a semi-circular three foot-high curved stone inner wall holding stainless steel plaques with the names of the black Union soldiers and the 7,000 white officers who led them. It was designed by architects Paul Devroux Jr. and Edward Dunson Jr.

It was a collaborative effort between the District of Columbia, the National Park Service and the Metro transportation system.

This monument will be primarily a tourist attraction, Smith told about 400 people assembled under a tent at the site.

A Family Heritage Center, at a middle school across the street, will be established to educate the public about blacks' role in the Civil War. It will house a library and a computerized database that will make it possible to trace some of the 3 million descendants of the servicemen.

...CONSIDERATIONS

THE CAIRO CONFERENCE AND MATTERS OF LIFE AND DEATH

A conference sponsored by the United Nations is taking place these days in Cairo, Egypt. The two general topics for discussion are population control and economic development. The position which our government takes on policy issues related to these themes will be very influential.

No one can deny the essential importance some of the topics that will be discussed in Cairo have, including the promotion of the rights of women and the need to secure a minimally decent standard of living for all people.

So it is disconcerting to see the United States and the Vatican appear to be sparring over a single if central consideration, namely, abortion and its use in particular as a means of birth control through "pregnancy termination."

Because it is easy for the media to portray the Church as anachronistic and even anti-woman, the Church seems to be faring poorly. And some media and groups are making every effort to insure that this will be the case.

It is often insinuated and sometimes stated clearly that the Church is allying itself with radical Arab governments in order to achieve its outmoded will and way. Islam is presented as a radical political terrorist option rather than a religion that shares some values with Christianity as religions of the Book.

Fourteen years ago, Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, the Archbishop of Chicago, stated that the right to life is the most basic right, and hence the Church's unchangeable position on abortion. But, he said and wrote, when any part of the seamless garment of life issues is weakened, the whole garment begins to unravel.

Everyone knows that the Catholic Church opposes abortion because it considers the act the taking of innocent life.

But there are as many abortions in our country today as there were in 1980. Other countries around the world are discussing or approving new laws concerning abortion, and where the size of the family is limited, abortion can be the solution when ultrasound indicates that the sex of the fetus is female rather than male.

Our country is one of only a handful of nations where people are executed, and the recently approved crime bill made fifty federal crimes capital offenses. We have seen disgusting scenes of people cheering as a hearse bearing the body of an executed person passes by.

Who knows that the Church acknowledges the right of the state to execute criminals but strongly and consistently opposes the application of the death penalty in this country? The bishops of the states where people are executed — usually poor people and usually members of minority groups and far too often people with limited mental ability — speak out against its use every time it takes place.

The Catholic bishops of those states where assisted suicide has appeared on ballots as a referendum, such as Archbishop Thomas Murphy of Seattle, Washington, have spoken out strongly against this new life issue. So did the bishops of Michigan, during the assisted suicide debate which took place in the home state of Dr. Kevorkian.

Who knows that the Church strongly and consistently opposes euthanasia?

Human rights still play second fiddle to business opportunities. And in our world today, hundreds of homeless street children are killed each year in Brazil by squads hired by people who believe their presence on the streets is bad for business. Human rights violations — torture, extrajudicial executions, disappearances — are growing in Guatemala and El Salvador, after diminishing during the past five years when our government's policy which aided authoritarian regimes changed because of changing world circumstances. And in many other countries, including China, there has been negligible if any modification in policy or practice.

Who knows that many local Churches, such as those in Chile and Poland, valiantly defended victims of human rights, often at great personal cost?

People rightly claim that it is more difficult to oppose abortion if we are unwilling as a nation to provide for children who are born, but who enjoy very few opportunities to live a decent life.

Have you read some of the beautiful and challenging documents of the Church that deal with the major social justice issues we face as a nation? Economic Justice for All, a 1976 pastoral letter on the economy was produced, in part, with the assistance of Notre Dame faculty. It addresses concerns dealing with quality of life for all people, especially the poor. And the most recent statement from the United States Catholic Conference, issued on the occasion of Labor Day 1994, urges us to pursue welfare reform as a way of promoting economic justice rather than as a punishment for poor people whom we often seem to think live illegitimately from tax monies because they are lazy. Too many people on the welfare roles are single mothers who cannot care for their children and work full time at the same time.

And, before current undergraduate students at Notre Dame reach thirty, it is likely that the moment of natural death will more and more be determined by some physicians and by individuals rather than by God.

Who knows that the Church strongly and consistently promotes the right to life from the moment of conception until the moment of natural death?

Fifteen years ago, the compelling consistent ethic of life approach with its seamless garment image, was presented as a moral framework which most accurately and faithfully captures a truly Catholic position. Unfortunately, this framework remains just that. It has fallen upon deaf ears, even among Catholics.

We see the seamless garment of life unraveling before our eyes at an alarming rate.

Personally, I find it offensive when the Catholic Church is excoriated by persons who refuse to acknowledge our attempts to live as consistently as we can according to the urging and example of the God of the Living and the Lord of Life.

But the situation which I have outlined above is not a problem which has come about because of the party which is currently in power in Washington, even though some would proffer such a simple explanation. Rather, I believe this situation is the unfortunate and completely predictable continuation of changes in our society which have been underway for quite some time now.

There are uses of mortal force which the Church holds as legitimate. But we are urged to respect every human life, including the lives of fetuses, criminals, homeless children, and sick and old people.

I hope and pray that our younger generations, and especially the generation of those who are undergraduates today, will be more honest and consistent in defending the basic consequences that flow from respect for the God of life and from the simple commandment "Thou shalt not kill."

agency, Carlsgaard said.

WASHINGTON

A key allegation in a female CIA officer's sex discrimination suit — that the spy agency improperly investigated and reprimanded her for misconduct — was reviewed and rejected by two female Senate Intelligence Committee auditors last year, a congressional official said Wednesday.

The conclusion reached by the committee's auditors undercuts one of the central accusations in the lawsuit, details of which were declassified Tuesday.

The suit, filed under seal July 14 in federal court in Alexandria, Va., claims the CIA inspector general used intimidation and other improper tactics in investigating the female officer. The charges against her included drunken behavior, excessive overtime claims and misuse of a government helicopter.

She in turn claims the charges were made in retaliation for her exposing the misdeeds of a male deputy and others on her staff. This happened while she was the chief of a CIA station in Latin America. She asserts that the reprimand effectively ended her chances for advancement in the clandestine service, which is responsible for recruiting and handling agents abroad.

Tim Carlsgaard, deputy staff director for the Senate Intelligence Committee, said the panel's two female auditors examined the methods used by the CIA inspector general and found that "fitting" action was taken against the officer. The auditors did not interview witnesses nor attempt to reach a judgment on the broader question of sexism within the

The female officer — designated in her complaint by the pseudonym "Jane Doe Thompson" — claims her career was ruined by the CIA reprimand issued in February 1993. In 1989 she had become the first CIA chief of station in Latin America.

At the request of the intelligence committee, CIA Director R. James Woolsey last year reviewed the 1992 investigation by the agency's inspector general and reaffirmed its conclusion that the woman should be reprimanded, Carlsgaard said.

The CIA has declined to comment publicly on the suit.

The complaint, which was heavily censored by the CIA before its release Tuesday, paints a picture of an agency in which sexism is deeply ingrained and senior male officers get away with alcohol-impaired work and sexual promiscuity.

The accusations come at a difficult moment for the CIA, which is trying to strengthen its hiring and promotion of minorities and women at the same time it is managing a substantial overall cut in total employment and in its budget. Woolsey has publicly acknowledged the CIA culture is too male-dominated.

Separate from the Thompson case, a large group of about 100 other female CIA case officers is alleging the agency's clandestine service has discriminated against women in promotions, country assignments and tasks. These women are threatening, but have not filed, a class-action suit.

Thompson is seeking damages against the CIA for sex discrimination and other violations of her civil rights, as well as defamation of character and emotional distress.

Young gang member buried

PAUL A. DRISCOLL
Associated Press

CHICAGO

Robert Sandifer should have been starting sixth grade Wednesday, scampering across the schoolyard with other 11-year-olds, lugging a backpack or chafing in a new shirt.

Instead he was buried, a murder suspect who himself was shot to death when fellow gang members got to him before police could.

Nicknamed "Yummy" because he loved cookies, Robert was hunted by police for three days last week for allegedly firing a pistol into a cluster of people on Aug. 28. The shots killed a 14-year-old girl, Shavon Dean, 10 yards from the front door of her South Side home.

Robert's body was found in a dank railroad underpass. He was killed with two bullets to the head. Two brothers, ages 14 and 16, are charged with his killing, allegedly planned to curtail the police attention Robert drew.

Four hundred people crowded into the Youth Center Church of God in Christ, a converted movie theater, to say goodbye. Across town, on the playground of the school Robert attended, classmates reflected on his death.

"The only way to get out," 11-year-old Eric Norah said sadly, "is to die."

Short of 5 feet tall, not quite 70 pounds, Robert had 12 felony arrests and was prosecuted at least eight times in the past two years on charges including robbery, car theft, arson and burglary. Twice convicted, he received probation.

In the church, Robert's body lay in a small coffin, clothed in a tan suit and brown tie, a stuffed toy pig and teddy bear beside him.

As mourners streamed by, his grandmother, Jannie Fields, let out a piercing scream.

"It's nothing but the devil who make people do evil," rasped Lorina Holman, introduced as Robert's great-grandmother, in a rambling, Bible-quoting oration that brought cries of "Praise God" and "Amen" from the 150 mourners who remained in the frayed theater seats after viewing the body.

The Rev. Willie James Campbell led mourners in the spiritual "By and By" as the coffin lid was slowly closed.

Robert's mother, Lorina Sandifer, an admitted former drug addict in whose custody authorities say the boy suffered cigarette burns and other abuse, sat quietly through most of the service, her emotions masked behind dark glasses.

There were no uniformed police on hand, no sign of the gang members who became Robert's companions as his life descended into violence.

At Peter Van Vlissingen Elementary School, where Robert would have been a sixth grader, many of the children carrying book bags across the playground knew "Yummy." They said he craved attention and often got into fights.

"He looked nervous, like somebody was chasing him," Norah said. "He was the kind of kid who didn't have love at home. If he did, he wouldn't have joined a gang."

Robert's schoolmates said they know the fear he felt.

"I feel scared, scared to go outside at night, sometimes scared to go to school," said Lawrence Brooks, 12, a seventh grader.

Eleven-year-old Marcus Harris proclaimed defiantly that he's not worried he'll meet the same fate, "Cause I ain't in no gang and I don't want to be in no gang."

THE CASE OF LITTLE SWIFTY.

[ A.K.A. THE BJ-200e ]

I had just polished off a crumbcake doughnut and a steamin' cup of Joe when the phone rang.

A woman's voice spoke, "Is this Nick Canon, Print Detective?" I answered in the affirmative.

She told me she had a lot on her mind and even more on her desktop. A phone, a computer, a keyboard, a monitor, a mouse pad, a scanner, and a personal printer that in her words, "was as big and slow as a dinosaur."

"Not good," I said. Then she got real serious, "I run a fast-paced small business. I'm looking for a printer that matches that description and I don't

"You know 'Little Swifty' (A.K.A. The Canon® BJ®200e)?" She laughed, and said, "Maybe if you hum a few bars."

I like a lady with a sense of humor, so I told her I'd meet her at her favorite computer store in 20 minutes. I arrived, and immediately spotted her in the printer section. She looked the part. Successful. Business-like. Except her eyes were a little glazed.

"There are hundreds of printers in the naked city," I said. She turned around, "Nick?" I nodded and said, "Let me introduce you to a friend of mine, Little Swifty." Her eyes lit up as we walked over to the BJ-200e.

"It's so sleek, so compact", she whispered. I hit the print sample button. Her eyes lit up again, and she continued to whisper, "It's so fast, and the output so crisp and clean." I didn't want to name drop, but I told her a couple of pros competitor, and offering the best quality."*The only thing left was the price, and before she could even ask I told her, "It's a steal."

Yep. She was happy all right. Come to think of it, so was I. As we parted I wrote down a number she could call if she had more questions, 1-800-848-4123. And then, I looked in her big beautiful eyes and told her what I tell everyone, "Before you buy a printer, investigate."

Irish unified, British edgy

BELFAST

Officials said today security measures have been scaled down in Northern Ireland following the IRA's cease-fire, but the British government remains skeptical the truce is permanent.

Meanwhile, unabashed after being thrown out of a meeting by British Prime Minister John Major, a hardline Protestant leader called Major a dictator and signaled he doubted Major's pledge that no secret deals were made with the IRA.

"This is what Hitler said, 'You are to believe me or you go to the gas chamber,'" the Rev. Ian Paisley boomed at a news conference. "I will continue to expose his lying on TV. Who does he think he is? He is trying to be a dictator."

On Tuesday, Major ordered Paisley, leader of the small Democratic Unionist Party, out of his Downing Street office after Paisley refused three times to say he believed Major's pledges of no secret deals with the IRA.

The tension underlined feuding and fears among pro-British unionists about the new situation, in contrast to burgeoning unity among Irish nationalists.

On Tuesday, while Paisley and Major confronted one another, Ireland's prime minister met Gerry Adams, leader of the Sinn Fein party.

Britain's top official in Northern Ireland, Sir Patrick Mayhew, announced the security cutback but gave no specifics.

"Certain things are not in place that were," he told reporters. "The (military) commanders and the chief constable in particular, who is in the lead here, believe it is right to make a reduction in proportion to what is seen as a reduced threat."

I, FARRINGTON

A mad scientist lurks within

He writes, Ozersky does, with a swaggering volubility; I bear the brunt of his offensiveness. Is the daily life of any writer much different? The path of a graduate student, a dotted line between buxom undergrads and indifferent buildings, does not seem to intersect in the normal order of things with such a creature as Ozersky. "Here I thought you were solemn and nondescript," a student told me in the class that I T.A. (or words to that effect). Good news! I had thought I was creepy and immobile, like the old man in the Werther's Original commercial. "Now I'm the grandfather," I murmur to myself, lumbering silently from lunch to library; but Ozersky writes on in his confident way. He really is a better man than I.

It occurs to me that this creation, Frankensteinian though it is, was made possible by my going to college. Some smart and honest students in one of my classes were expressing a sense of futility about the future recently. I know the feeling well; I spent no less than three years in Hoboken trying to convince an overworked Chinaman to overcook my french fries. Wasted time, wasted breath — the years were without profit, and my fries were always dry, white, and cadaverous. But in those years, I spent my college education creating this monstrous puppet, and I have no intention of whittling him down now.

Reader, consider! The years of your immediate future will wash away what you are as surely as acid rain on a statue.

What will you become? As a Notre Dame student, chances are that you will not waste away in poverty or squalor, but that isn't enough. Will your life be worn out in petty arguments and stifled lusts? Will your well-paying job in an urban center animate your dormant appetites, or drag you into Amishlike routine, and drown your youthful fire in a sand-pit of mutual funds and car payments, polyester tapestries and overpriced, overcooked spaghetti? Love is the morning and the evening star, but providence hasn't necessarily made with the goods just yet, and you will be in need.

Josh Ozersky

I sympathize with you. My shifty eyes fix on you as I hurry past, caught up in the snares of my own fortunes. But what can I do about it? I have done all I could, in creating Ozersky, a stuffed figure filled up with style and testosterone, and meticulously crafted sentences. That was the advantage of my studying the liberal arts, and I can only recommend it to you. My mind shrinks daily, imploding with stupidity; but only that part of me stretched, half-against my will, by the easy yoke of a college education allows me to create the better man I want to be.

Franklin, in his Autobiography, wrote that it was not enough to be industrious; that one had to be seen to be industrious. This is a cynical enough piece of advice, but it seems to be worth taking, in modified form. Nobody I know has much use for an industrious person, other than an object of resentment; but to make of the raw materials of your person something better or at least bigger, and to feed this creature as it grows, is something better than hypocrisy, though it is (perhaps) something less than virtue.

Meanwhile, Ozersky grows and breathes, his existence overshadowing mine at every turn. He is fully developed, complete, and commanding; I am weak and partial, an unformed object, an unfilled vessel with murky prospects and an unquiet psyche. I have at least made him, however: I preside at each of his appearances like the parent of any healthy, deformed child. He protects me with his verve, and I him with my anonymity. Between the two of us, we may make a complete human being yet.

Go and do likewise, I suggest, humbly. Your natural personality will suffocate you with its appetites and its hopeless desires, its indolence and its proud self-satisfaction. Put on the new man, as St. Paul says. If you can't write him, imagine him. You may not get the chance afterward; it's later than you think.

How presumptuous of me, to say all this! I guess Ozersky had a hand in writing this page, after all.

Sophomore efforts thwarted by du Lac

Dear Editor:

While we were campaigning last spring for Sophomore Class Office, we tried to find out what the students wanted most to enhance their school year. For some reason sex, alcohol, coed dorms, and the banishment of parietals topped everyone's list. We, as the elected Sophomore Class Officers, can give them, well... none of the above. But, we have tried to start the year off right by planning a "Tailgate" intended to kick-off the year with fun. Unfortunately, we have already run into problems.

As many know, the University of Notre Dame has a reputation for being conservative. While we, the Sophomore Class Officers, understand the need for a conservative administration, we also believe that there is a line between reasonable policy and closed-minded administration.

A recent example of the University's extreme cautiousness revolves around the issue of a Class of '97 "Tailgate" (officially referred to as a "Class Picnic"). To fulfill our election platform, we started out the year planning a class function to be held prior to the Michigan game. As preparations grew, we followed the normal procedures for setting up a class activity.

This includes requesting and receiving permission from an adviser in the Student Activities Office, ordering $500 worth of food, tables, and non-alcoholic beverages, locating a place to hold the event, designing posters, and creating a banner. As of Monday, Sept. 7, 1994, everything was underway except for final approval on our publicity poster. Instead of receiving the approval of our poster, we were told that the entire event had to be canceled.

As of press time, we are not aware of the reasons why we are not allowed to have our "Tailgate." Baffled, we went so far as to read du Lac:

No student, student organization, or University housing facility may organize or sponsor "tailgaters" on campus or on any adjacent fields or parking lots at any time for the purpose of serving alcoholic beverages (page 22).

Alcoholic beverages were not to be served! Thus, according to du Lac, our "tailgate" would be permissible.

It is our goal to make this an enjoyable year for the Sophomore Class, and we fear that future efforts to plan fun class activities might be thwarted by the extreme cautiousness of the administration. We apologize to the sophomores looking forward to this weekend's "tailgate" and promise to try to open the administration's mind to some fun events for the rest of the year.

Edie Brickell's picture perfect pop

By ROB ADAMS
Music Critic

During her four-year hiatus, Edie Brickell dropped the New Bohemians, moved to New York, and married Paul Simon. Since then, she has changed from the brash, young hipster we philosophized with in 1988 and danced around in her bra in 1990 into that eccentric English teacher that we had during our freshman year in high school.

With Picture Perfect Morning, Brickell has created a myriad of bluesy, cajun-influenced vignettes, expressed through language that is concise yet still descriptive.

Although the music stores should file this one under "Adult Contemporary," Brickell has not fallen into the trap of bland Nutrasweet that plagues so many other artists during their "maturation" stage. Ironically enough, this occurrence is most common when a lead singer leaves the band and pursues a solo project.

Beneath the free-flowing, slow-groove oriented music (Picture Perfect Morning should be a prescription cure for sufferers of insomnia), Brickell radiates a simple brilliance, giving off a vibe of hazy content.

The spicy flavor of Picture Perfect Morning no doubt reflects the fact that the album was recorded in New Orleans. A host of guest musicians show up on each song, many of them well-distinguished, giving the album a polished effect that a stable band cannot easily muster.

"Tomorrow Comes," the album's first track, epitomizes Brickell's new sound in the first 30 seconds. With soulful background vocals supporting every sound she makes, Brickell hits high and sharp notes quickly, staking her own claim as a truly unique vocalist. Art Neville appears and does a fantastic job with the organ.

With an attitude of cackling flippancy, Brickell dismisses all her worries during "In the Bath." Better than any other song on Picture Perfect Morning, "In the Bath" captures her careless and oblivious ideals. A light, folksy tone transforms the spotless lyrics ("In a wash of memory/Everything is coming clean") to a raw, earthy feeling.

A tale of wanting the grass on the other side, "Green," utilizes an echo chamber to add drama, as well as both Brickell and Simon, on acoustic guitar to heighten the chords.

Meanwhile, Brickell murmurs about how badly she wants to be like her neighbors. The song's turtle pace and dreamy violins combine to evoke an almost eerie feel of unintended obsession.

The strongest track on the album is the Bonnie Raitt-influenced "Another Woman's Dream." Old-fashioned rock-n-roll hooks are present throughout the strut-ridden song, while Brickell's vocals fit snugly in between jangling percussion and an upbeat rhythm section.

An early Motown style is adopted on the doo-wop infested "Good Times." While Brickell's songs throughout her career have focused on life, love, and the pursuit of happiness. Mostly on life and the pursuit of happiness, this short story is a quirky love song by Edie, that shy girl in the corner.

After a resounding performance during which she adapts nicely to the new format, she is completely upstaged by someone a bit more experienced in this department, Barry White. He makes a 20-second cameo and his low baritone takes over.

Other high points of Picture Perfect Morning include: "Stay Awhile," a quasi-instrumental featuring New Orleans staple Dr. John on piano; "Hard Times" is Brickell's funkiest song on the album; and the title track showcases Brickell's voice better than any other song on Picture Perfect Morning.

Although the album was released a bit too late to highlight the messy, caramel-coated picnics and warm, sweaty naps of this summer, Picture Perfect Morning will undoubtedly become a compilation of soothing anthems for laziness in the seasons to come.

Local artist captures Notre Dame legacy

By MATT FOLEY
Accent Writer

In 1967, Notre Dame's sports information director, Roger Valdiserri, commissioned Jim Wainwright, a local artist, to design a football program cover for the Michigan State and Notre Dame game.

The cover featured Rocky Bleier, Ara Parseghian, and Duffy Daugherty, along with faces from the artist's own bridge club as members of the crowd. Thus began a wonderful relationship between the University and an extremely talented artist.

Since that first program cover in 1967, Wainwright has done more than 80 program covers, media guide covers, and special works depicting various aspects of the Notre Dame tradition.

Left in the wake of his efforts is a huge body of exceptional work, not to mention the massive amount of care and dedication that went into its production, according to Wainwright.

The paintings themselves speak volumes about Notre Dame's tradition on the football field and Wainwright's dedication to quality. Included in his work are some very, very famous pictures like "100 years of Notre Dame Football," "A Portrait of Courage" depicting the life journey of former Irish star Rocky Bleier, and the "Tradition of Excellence" poster which is the biggest selling Notre Dame poster of all time.

Behind the posters, according to Wainwright, lie the stories of long hours and hard work that produced them. Amazingly, all of Wainwright's work for Notre Dame has been done after hours in the midst of his successful advertising art business.

The "100 Years" poster took six hundred hours to complete, and in the process it had to be repainted to include Heisman Trophy winner Tim Brown and correct a misspelling of "Consensus" in the upper left hand corner of the painting.

An average program cover takes approximately forty to sixty hours to complete, and the special works take even longer than that, the artist explained.

According to Jim Wainwright, all of this is a product of his "love for Notre Dame". Since he started in the late 60's, Wainwright has become caught up in the tradition of Notre Dame's football program, and has grown to know many of the people he has immortalized in art, including Gerry Faust, Dan Devine, and Lou Holtz.

"There's no tradition like Notre Dame," Wainwright added.

His current project for Notre Dame is painting the Irish All-Americans in a series of seven posters. The first two, quarterbacks and linebackers, have already been released, and upcoming posters will feature the Irish running backs, the offensive line, the defensive line, the defensive backs, and the kickers.

Wainwright plans to be fully retired from his business by the end of October. He is not slowing down, though. He will now devote his full time efforts to Notre Dame.

For the first time in several years, he will paint all of the program covers for the home games and he will continue his streak of media guide covers, along with other special projects that are certain to crop up.

"I'll be going from vocation to avocation," Wainwright said.

If you would like to see some of Wainwright's exceptional work, or even meet the artist, the time for action is now.

In 1988 due to a move to a new office, Wainwright sold most of his original color proofs to Coach's Sports Bar. In the intervening 6 years, the collection has grown to include some of Wainwright's later works. All in all, the collection now numbers around fifty works of art.

To meet the man who produced those works, simply head to The Bookstore around lunch time on Friday. He will be there signing his posters and meeting some of the people who have been touched by his work.

sophomore midfielder Konstantin Koloskov, who scored on an empty net.

Along with Turner and Savarino, fellow freshmen Joe Gallo, Scott Wells and Matthew Zimmer helped lead the Irish to victory.

"The Freshman made the difference," Berticelli said. "We wanted to give them some time, but we didn't know that they would have the tremendous impact that they did. They changed the tempo of the game. They are a great group with good game sense. We have to keep them contributing."

With the injection of the freshmen and other reserves such as Chris Mathis, Dane Whitley, Peter Gansler, Rick Christofer and Tony Capasso, the Irish increased their already high pressure and eliminated any chance the Wildcats had at getting back into the game.

"We were happy with the way the reserves played," Berticelli added.

"It's good to have 11 strong starters, but you need another five or six players in reserve so you can be 16 to 18 deep through the season. I think we have that."

Along with the chance to examine their depth, the Irish also got a much deserved win.

"This was a good start. It's good to win the opener at home."

A start is just what it is. The Irish have a long season in front of them, continuing this Friday at Alumni Field against Ohio State.

ANNOUNCING TWO NEW CREF ACCOUNTS

YOU'RE LOOKING AT TWO COMPLETELY OPPOSITE, FUNDAMENTALLY DIFFERENT WAYS TO INVEST IN STOCKS. WE RECOMMEND BOTH.

Introducing the CREF Growth Account and the CREF Equity Index Account.

Whether you want a fund that selects specific stocks or one that covers the market, we're on the same page. Our new CREF Growth and CREF Equity Index Accounts use two distinct strategies for investing in the stock market, but both aim to provide what every smart investor looks for: long-term growth that outpaces inflation.*

The CREF Growth Account searches for individual companies that are poised for superior growth. In contrast, the Equity Index Account looks for more diversification, with a portfolio encompassing almost the entire range of U.S. stock investments. It will invest in stocks in the Russell 3000**, a broad index of U.S. stocks.

Like our CREF Stock Account, which combines active, indexed, and foreign investing, and our Global Equities Account, which actively seeks opportunities worldwide, the new funds are managed by experienced investment professionals. They're the same experts who have helped make TIAA-CREF the largest pension system in the U.S., managing over $130 billion in assets.

To find out more about our new stock funds, and building your portfolio with TIAA-CREF, just call 1 800-842-2776. And take your pick.

personal for Becton, who admits he was embarrassed by last week's totals.

"I wasn't mad. I was frustrated at myself. It really didn't matter whether or not I got 100 yards. I was just upset with the runs and decisions I made. That upset me more than anything else."

The blame for last week's 161 total rushing yards was not solely Becton's to bare. The offensive line was suspect and is certainly one of the greatest concerns going into the Michigan game.

"I am definitely adjusting a little more to this line. They are a little different, they block a little different than last year's team, but I think they will be just as effective," Becton said.

Even more effective, Becton believes, if he forgets the individual honors and the hype which got to him last week.

"I am just going to go out and play on Saturday and let the individual honors take care of themselves after the season."

Goheen

punt kept us on the field a long time. A lot of guys got tired out there, which made it difficult to play hard," Goheen said.

The comparisons have come from all sides after the mediocre play against the Wildcats. Last year's defense versus the 1994 unit. Some say this year's group can't stand up against a unit that had six players now in the NFL.

"There isn't one guy I would trade on this year's defense for someone on last year's unit," Goheen said.

The comparisons won't stop unless the defense performs against Michigan. Against the Wolverines last year, the defense established itself as the team's strength. Saturday's contest is also do or die for defensive coordinator Bob Davie's attacking scheme, a stark contrast to Holtz's traditional style.

"Like any coach, coach Holtz doesn't want to give up the big play," Goheen said. "From the players' perspective, we need to step up our play to the best of our ability. We need to do well so coach Holtz will have confidence in the scheme and in us."

Belles ready for season to start

By JENNIFER LEWIS

Saint Mary's Sports Editor

A young Saint Mary's volleyball team faces its first challenge this evening at Manchester College. The Belles consist of nine freshmen, one junior transfer student, and two returning juniors.

The final cuts for the Belles took place last Thursday giving the new team only a week's preparation for Manchester.

"Since last Thursday, God has really blessed us," said coach Schroeder-Biek. "We have worked extremely well together and I cannot foresee any attitude problems in the future."

Manchester is also experiencing some change under a new coaching system. "With a year of experience under their belt," said Schroeder-Biek. "Manchester will be a difficult team to beat."

Sara Stronczek, who stands at 5'10 was the Belles leading hitter last year. High expectations for leadership qualities rest on her and Ann Lawrence's shoulders this season, said Schroeder-Biek.

"With two years of playing experience with South Western Michigan, junior transfer, Kelley Prosser is one of the exceptional additions to the Belles. Prosser is scheduled to start.

One of the Belles weaknesses is finding a setter to replace the graduated Michelle Martino. Martino, last year's captain, set for four years for the Belles. Saint Mary's is having Stronczek, Kelly Meyer, and Stephanie Bonk try out for the setting position.

"Stronczek is such a good athlete," said Schroeder-Biek, "that she could step into any position and do a good job."

Last year, the Belles (22-9) tied the best record in Saint Mary's history. This year they hope to be regionally ranked, according to Lawrence.

strong hitting and blocking team. They manipulated the Irish weaknesses by finding the holes in the Irish defense and sending many "tips" over the net for kills.

"They found some weaknesses in our game, and we had to adjust," said Brown.

And that is exactly what the Irish did, as they slammed a total of 58 kills and 11 services aces at the Yellow Jackets.

Once again senior Christy Peters led the team at the net with 17 kills, but the Irish received strong performances from sophomore outside hitter Jenny Birkner with 14 kills and freshman Jamie Lee who added 10 kills to the list. Freshman sensation Angie Harris rounded out the Irish hitting effort with 12 kills.

Junior setter Shannon Tuttle also impressed the crowd with 46 assists and 9 digs in the back court.

Overall, it was a very impressive victory for the Irish, as they remain undefeated at 6-0.

■ FOOTBALL

I just need to take my level of play up and make better decisions.
—Lee Becton

Becton (top) says key to running attack is patience

By GEORGE DOHRMANN
Sports Editor

Lee Becton will admit it. Last Saturday against Northwestern he was thinking large. The senior tailback was looking for the big play, something for ESPN and the highlight reel — a performance that had Heisman written all over it.

"I tried to do too much," Becton said. "All the talk about the Heisman and the hype wasn't really a distraction, but you know, it got me away from my style of play."

That style being Becton's smooth gait, letting the blocks form, the defenders miss, and the yards come. It is all about patience.

"I didn't have a very good performance Saturday," Becton said. "There were times when I think I made bad decisions on runs. But I mean, that just goes with the game. I just need to take my level of play up a bit and try and make better decisions."

As Notre Dame prepares for Saturday's matchup with fifth-ranked Michigan, Becton tries to come to terms with his performance last week (16 yards on ten carries) and the expectations his coach and teammates have heaped upon his shoulders. Quarterback Ron Powlus is the talent, but Becton is the key. A sterile running attack almost certainly spells doom against the Wolverines.

"Last week the running game didn't fare well," Becton said. "But we just decided to work hard, practice, and try and get the running game going again. I think it will be fine. There were just some things we needed to work on and tune up a bit."

The run through Jiffy Lube is also very

We need to come out and play with a little more emotion...
—Justin Goheen

Goheen believes defense needs more emotion

By GEORGE DOHRMANN
Sports Editor

Justin Goheen is old hand at this big game stuff. He talks calmly about the Michigan matchup as if it was a sandlot game back in his Philadelphia suburb.

"Sure, it's a big game, everyone realizes a loss could knock us out of the national championship picture, but the same is on the line for Michigan," the senior line-backer said. "That is what makes big games big."

Although it doesn't appear to phase him, Goheen knows this game will say a lot about the Irish defense, of which he is the leader.

"I think we need to improve from last week, but the improvement needs to come mentally," Goheen said. "I think we need to come out and play with a little more emotion, style and personality."

All which needs to translate into a strong run defense for the Irish. Although Michigan will be without running back Tyrone Wheatley, their strength remains in the rush.

"I can't believe he is not playing," Goheen said. "But it doesn't really matter because they have a number of good backs. Either way, the job of the defense is still the same."

The defense didn't do its job last week, allowing Northwestern's Dennis Lundy to run for 138 yards. Although the Wildcats' line is formidable, it can't compare to Michigan's front. And Lundy is far from being as talented as Ed Davis or Tim Biakabutuka, Wheatley's replacements at tailback.

"Last week the penalties and the fake

■ MEN'S SOCCER

Freshmen star in victory

By THOMAS SCHLIDT
Sports Writer

Maybe Notre Dame's football team should take lessons on how to fully dominate Northwestern, as the Irish men's soccer team crushed the Wildcats 5-1 last night at Alumni Field.

The Irish pressured the Wildcats from the start and took the lead on a goal from senior forward Tim Oates, which was setup by freshman sensation Ryan Turner. Oates finished the game with two goals, while Turner added an insurance goal in the second half when he beat the defense to a Bert Bader goalkick and proceeded to punch it past the Wildcat goalkeeper.

"Turner played great," coach Bert Berticelli said. "People think that when (Bill) Lanza comes back that he (Turner) will sit. That's not true. He will start every game for four years. . . somewhere."

Along with Turner, freshman substitute midfielder Bill Savarino also made tremendous contributions. He scored the winning goal for the Irish off an assist from Turner, and also recorded an assist of his own. Early in the second half, after beating the goalkeeper, he made a spectacular crossing pass to

Irish top Yellow Jackets

By BETSY BAKER
Sports Writer

Notre Dame's victory over Georgia Tech last night was not as easy as the scores made it look. Although the Irish swept the Yellow Jackets in three games, with scores of 15-4, 15-9, and 15-12, the victory was an exhausting one.

As Coach Debbie Brown predicted, Georgia Tech gave the Irish a great match.

"They are a well-coached team and they gave us a good match, as I expected," Brown said.

"But we responded well by our skills and by executing our game plan," she added.

The Yellow Jackets were a very smart and powerful team, similar to the Irish, but unlike anything they had seen in their first five games. In previous games, the Irish have struck early and worn down opponents to the point where they could not get back in the game. The Yellow Jackets did not fold.

Georgia Tech was very impressive at the net. Even though the Irish had four players in double digits in the kill category, the Yellow Jackets were also a
