Red tags mark abandoned cars near campus

By LIZ FORAN
Associate News Editor

What do you do when that bucket of rust that sits out by the curb just won't start? Would you rather walk to school from your off-campus location than risk driving?

Most college students may not have nice cars, and the ones they do have may be temperamental in bad weather. But whatever the make and model, if you leave your car parked on the street for more than three consecutive days, it just might not be there when you get back.

South Bend wants to inform Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students who reside off-campus that any vehicle parked on the street is required to be moved every 72 hours, or it is considered abandoned by Indiana state law and city ordinances.

If an officer on patrol observes a vehicle that appears to be inoperable or a "snow bird," officers will issue an abandoned vehicle red tag, according to Captain Larry Blume, commander of the traffic bureau.

The red tag will require the car to be moved within three days of issuance, or the car will be towed, Blume added. This will allow officers to determine whether the car is being driven or is an abandoned vehicle.

It will also allow snow plows to plow to the curbs when the cars are removed, he added.

"We wanted to make sure that students know about the ordinance, since most are not from the area," Blume said. "The last thing we want to do is tow anyone's car."

Blume said that students who have been issued red tags whose cars will not start might want to leave a note on the car about the problem, so that the officer assigned to the area will know that the car is not abandoned.

Blume said that it is still up to the discretion of the officer whether or not the car will be towed.

Archives flourish at Saint Mary's

By JESSICA ZIGMOND
News Writer

While the Sesquicentennial celebration at Saint Mary's ended in last December, the work of Archives director, Sister Rosaleen Dunleavy is never finished.

The Saint Mary's Archives Department stores college records that reveal factors that have helped to mold Saint Mary's and make it a unique institution. Today, everything from ledgers to photographs fill a corner room on the lower-level of the Cushwa-Leighton Library.

"Most of the students here don't even know the archives exist. I think all freshmen should take a class to learn about the library and also about the archives," said Dunleavy.

Since 1984, Dunleavy has worked to give students a place where they can go to learn about the history of the College.

Dunleavy, who came to Saint Mary's as a biology professor in 1957 left two years later to work on her master's degree in microbiology at Johns Hopkins University. She returned to the biology department in 1962 and taught up until her two-year leave of absence in 1977.

From 1979 until 1984, Dunleavy continued to teach and also served as the Midwest Regional Representative for the Associates of the Sisters of the Holy Cross. It was in December, 1984 that she was asked to create the Archives Department at Saint Mary's.

Student's play explores racism

By PEGGY LENCZEWSKI
News Writer

Saint Mary's junior Alia Paige's play "Awakenings" fostered an awareness of racism and spawned a discussion on the issue following its performance last night on Saint Mary's campus.

Paige wrote the play for an assignment last year in Professor Linnea Vacca's American Women of Color class. Vacca asked the class to write from personal experience, so Paige wrote about her experiences as an African American attending a College where only one percent of the student body shares her culture.

The play, performed as part of this week celebration of "The Spirit of Blackness" at Saint Mary's, is the first of a week long series of programs put together by the Sisters of Nefertiti organization. The purpose of the program is to raise awareness of different cultures, specifically the African American culture.

Paige was aware that her play presented potential controversy through its honest portrayal of incidents of racism that actually occurred at Saint Mary's.

"We [the Sisters of Nefertiti] knew we were taking a risk with the play, but we wanted to present it and we wanted to present it right," said Paige.

Paige hopes that "people will leave the week with a new understanding and an open mind, not only aware of a new culture, but a new understanding of a new culture."

'Most girls, through no fault of their own, come from very conservative families and do not know how to interact with people of other cultures."

Paige's play presents a day in the life of a black woman at Saint Mary's. In it, the main character experiences three incidents of subliminal racism from people who "are supposed to be educated." One of these incidents involves a member of the Saint Mary's administration.

The play led to a consequent discussion of racial attitudes and lack of awareness at Saint Mary's.

"A discussion would force people to look into themselves to examine their beliefs and their attitudes," according to Paige.

According to Paige, this willingness to discuss attitudes was the "first step towards improving the relationship between African-American students and white students."

Several key issues were brought up during the discussion.

Paige responded to the issue of "all the African-American students eating at the same table."

Many Saint Mary's students view this as a sign of exclusivity. Karen Mendlik, a Saint Mary's student, expressed the sentiment that many feel this seating arrangement can portray the African-American students as unapproachable.

"There are 15 African-American women out of approximately seventeen-hundred on campus. When you see someone who looks like you, there is a certain amount of comfort in

HALL PRESIDENTS' COUNCIL

Council looks to allocate funds before year's end

By BRAD PRENDERGAST
Assistant News Editor

The decision of the Hall Presidents' Council to allocate $500 to each residence hall was approved by the Student Senate, according to Rich Palermo, co-chairman of the council, who made the announcement at HPC's meeting last night.

However, Student Senate did not approve the possibility of placing the council's remaining money in a contingency account, with which the council could have retained its claim to that money for next year.

As a result, the council is looking for ways to spend its funding by the end of the school year. "If we don't use it, we'll lose it," Palermo said.

All money not spent by HPC and other student organizations by May will be placed in a general account to be redistributed in the fall.

A possible use of the funds includes helping WVFI make the conversion to an FM station. Besides gaining approval from the Federal Communications Commission to make the switch, WVFI must also purchase the equipment necessary to upgrade to the quality of an FM station.

HPC currently has about $15,000 available to designate.

In other HPC news:

— Council members agreed to sponsor a house again for Christmas in April.

Sign-ups for the April 22 project will be held February 27-28 in the Hesburgh Library. All are encouraged to participate in this annual service project.

— Tickets for Troop ND's second annual talent show contest for Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students will go on sale next week in the dining halls for $3. The show will be held February 24 in Washington Hall at 7 p.m.

Tickets will also be available at the door on the night of the event for $4.

The top individuals in the contest will win gift certificates from local businesses, and the top dorm will receive a traveling trophy recognizing its victory. The trophy is currently held by Regina Hall.

Part of the proceeds will go to an as-yet undetermined charity.

Noticing a lack of diversity

I believe that people of all races and ethnic groups are equal intellectually and socially.

This belief is easily reconciled with campus life. Obviously, no one is getting any advantage or pity here based on their race. I thought I could reduce the difference between the races to merely one of skin color. Personality was an entirely separate thing from the superficiality of our race. Now, though, I'm plagued by the question. If the only difference between races is the color of one's skin, then the number of minority students that attends Notre Dame should not affect our experiences here. Then why do we notice?

I feel the lack of minority students everyday. To be blunt, I miss the company of black peers. I thought I was just missing specific friends who happened to be black. But as my number of friends on campus and my intimacy with those friends has grown, I know that isn't the case.

I'm from Memphis originally. So again, being frank, I've probably always taken the presence and influence of African Americans for granted, and now, with this whole "white shock" as an Hispanic friend calls it, I've discovered how important that association has become to me.

There are more serious and far reaching effects this lack of strong minority representation has caused.

When I returned to Humanities class, I was shocked to learn my professor had explored the extent to which having a black student amongst us would have limited our discussion of the Autobiography of Malcolm X and in general altered the experience for the worse. It was like we were supposed to fear a black student misunderstanding us and thereby hindering our stumbling toward personal enlightenment.

The minute a class can breathe a sigh of relief over the absence of another race in its midst, something needs to be done. We must combat the stereotypes that are keeping students, albeit of their own choosing, from joining the Notre Dame family. Reach out to those students who don't have the cultural background that automatically makes Notre Dame an educational choice; to students that aren't called by the same Irish Catholic gene that infected my decision; to those whose parents aren't alumni. Show minorities that there is a place for them here. We can't wait any longer, either.

Think of the countless graduates that we are sending off to the "real world" having been virtually isolated for the past four years from contact with minorities.

To live isolated from perspectives that are not our own; to forgo discovering the person shaped and forever touched by the singular obstacles and insights accompanying each race; to never seek out this precious source of human experiences and allow it to seep into our consciousness. That is not living. That is not obtaining an education worthy of a catholic university.

"Forrest Gump" sweeps Academy Award nominations

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. Warner Bros. didn't want it. Paramount Pictures spent more than three years twiddling its thumbs. Oscar voters showed no hesitancy, though. "Forrest Gump" was it. Tom Hanks' improbable march through history collected 13 Academy Award nominations Tuesday — the most for a single film since 1966's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and one shy of "All About Eve's" record 14 in 1950. Voters also embraced independent Miramax Films, giving it a leading 22 nominations — as much as major studios Disney, Columbia and Universal combined. "The studio movies are formulaic," said Harvey Weinstein, Miramax's co-chairman. "It's really, really exciting. The revolution has begun." In another surprising decision, "Hoop Dreams" wasn't nominated in the documentary feature category, despite some of the year's best reviews. "Forrest Gump" earned nominations for best picture, best actor for Hanks, best director for Robert Zemeckis and best supporting actor for Gary Sinise — after gathering dust for more than 5 years at Warner Bros. and spinning in movie purgatory for 3 1/2 years at Paramount. But it came up blank in the best supporting actress category, where co-stars Sally Field and Robin Wright were contenders. The next-closest films — "Pulp Fiction," "Bullets Over Broadway" and "The Shawshank Redemption" — had seven nominations apiece.

President's putter gone AWOL

SAN FRANCISCO

President Clinton is going into probably the biggest golf game of his life without his favorite putter. Clinton, scheduled to tee off in the Bob Hope Classic on Wednesday, said he discovered his 35-year-old Bullseye putter was missing Tuesday morning and speculated he must have inadvertently stuck it in the bag of one of his golfing partners. "I've got a gazillion (putters), but that's the one I play with," Clinton lamented. "It looks like something you'd find at an aging miniature golf course." That's not the only reason Clinton is a little anxious about the game at Indian Wells Country Club near Palm Springs. He's playing in a pretty high-powered fivesome and he says he hasn't had much practice lately. Clinton's partners will be Bob Hope, former Presidents Ford and Bush, and defending tournament champion Scott Hoch.

Public prayer remains an issue

MIAMI

The nation's largest group of lawyers voted today to oppose a Republican-backed proposal in Congress for a constitutional amendment allowing officially sanctioned prayers in public schools. The American Bar Association's policy-making House of Delegates, in a nearly unanimous voice vote, went on record as saying the proposed amendment is a dangerous idea. "Children (already) can pray in school, they can say grace at lunch, can pray in groups ... as long as they do so in a way that does not interfere with the educational process," New York City lawyer Peter Zimroth told the 538 voting delegates. "Politicizing religion is a prescription for disaster," he said. "This is simply not the business of government." Albuquerque, N.M., lawyer Roberta Ramo, who in August will become the 370,000-lawyer group's first women president, called the proposed amendment "the first and terrifying step" toward government interference with religious faith. No one spoke in favor of the proposed amendment, but a future ABA president strongly endorsed school prayer.

Stepmother charged with murder

RUSSELLVILLE, Ala.

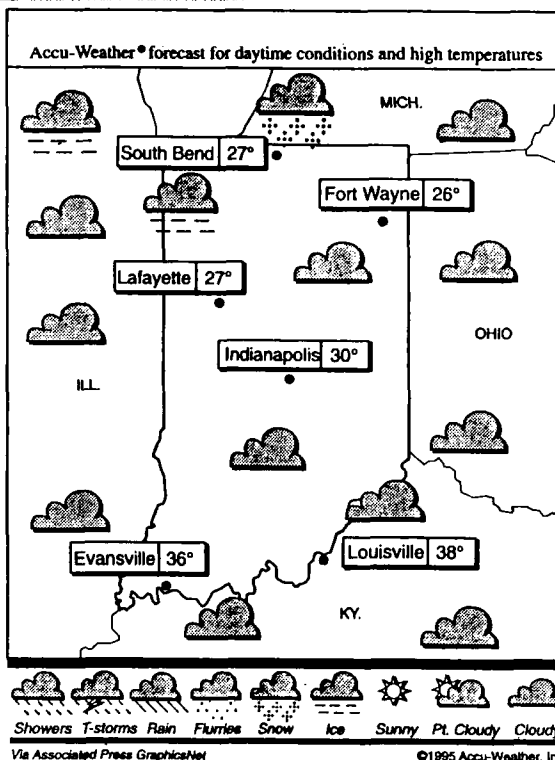

The stepmother of a 5-year-old girl who disappeared more than a year ago, setting off a two-day search by hundreds of volunteers, has been charged with the child's murder. Authorities said divers would try to recover the body from a lake today. Kim Gonzalez, 23, was arrested Monday and charged with murdering Andrea Gonzalez, who disappeared from the family trailer Nov. 20, 1993, Franklin County Sheriff Larry Plott said today. Mrs. Gonzalez, held on $20,000 bond, told authorities the girl's death was accidental and no one else was involved, Plott said. When Andrea disappeared, the stepmother said the girl had either wandered off into woods during the night or had been abducted.

Swedes try to sell stolen Picasso

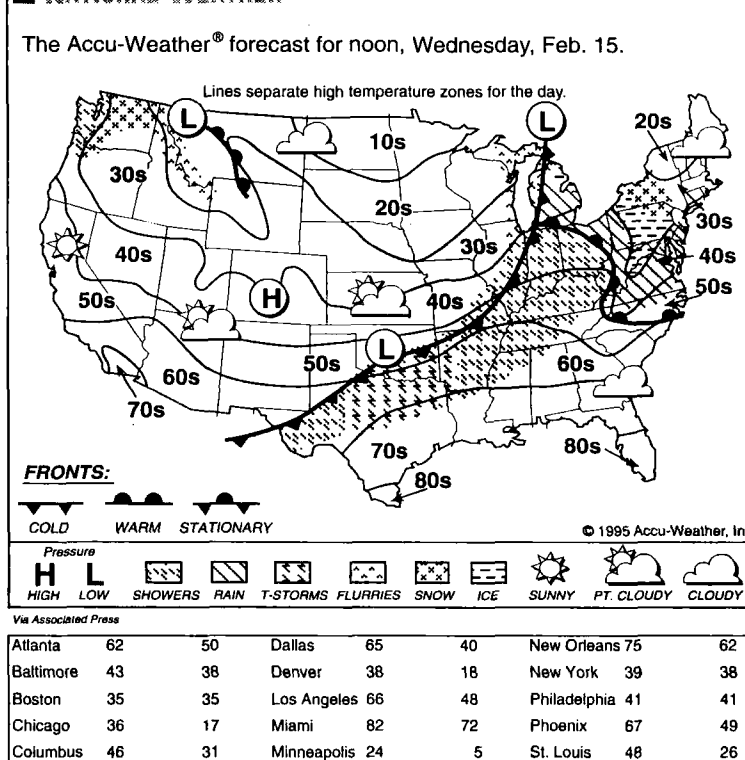

STOCKHOLM, Sweden

Three Swedes were sentenced to prison Tuesday for trying to sell a stolen Picasso painting last year. "Woman with Black Eyes" was among eight works stolen in November 1993 from the Museum of Modern Art in Stockholm. The men, all from western Sweden, were arrested in Belgium when they tried to sell the painting valued at $6.4 million, according to Swedish media. Uwe Willi Danlen, 43, was sentenced to five years in prison. Mats Kare Svirins, 40, received 2 1/2 years and his brother, Patrik Svirins, 31, was given two years in prison. Five paintings and a sculpture by Pablo Picasso, plus one painting by Georges Braque, have been retrieved. Braques's painting, "Still Life," is still missing.

House GOP progresses on 'Contract'

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The House passed the centerpiece of the Republican anti-crime package Tuesday, voting to create block grants for local governments while eliminating President Clinton's program to hire more police.

But the latest milestone in the House GOP's "Contract with America" agenda faces a far less certain future in the Senate. And Clinton, who has demanded that his police program remain untouched, has threatened to veto it if it reaches his desk.

"I'm not going to let them wreck our crime bill, which is putting 100,000 new cops on the street," Clinton said Tuesday in an interview with Huntington, W.Va., television station WSAZ-TV.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said the Judiciary Committee he chairs will have to rewrite the House package to secure Senate passage and come up with a bill that Clinton will be compelled to sign.

The sixth and final bill in the crime package, passed by a 238-192 largely party-line vote, replaces crime-prevention programs and a commitment to help put 100,000 new cops on the streets — two cornerstones of the 1994 anti-crime law — with a $10 billion block grant that local governments can use as they see fit to fight crime.

The vote was immediately criticized by police groups.

Passage gave the new Republican majority their fifth major legislative triumph less than halfway through the 100 days in which their "Contract With America" promised votes on a number of issues. The House GOP previously won passage of a balanced-budget amendment, a measure giving the president a line-item veto on spending bills, a bill to end unfunded mandates on state and local governments and a bill, already signed into law, making lawmakers abide by the same employment laws private employers must obey.

Elsewhere in Congress on Tuesday:

—The Senate rejected a Democratic bid to exempt Social Security from a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said that in spite of the mostly party-line 57-41 vote, "For the moment, everybody is willing to protect Social Security."

—A House Ways and Means subcommittee drafted welfare-reform legislation giving states almost complete control over their troubled foster care programs. It rejected Democratic efforts to strengthen federal oversight of those programs and increase funding for homes for the growing numbers of abused and neglected children.

—Republican and Democratic senators eager to end the baseball strike introduced legislation that would partially repeal professional baseball's antitrust exemption. House Speaker Newt Gingrich said he does not support it because he doesn't want Congress involved in the labor-management dispute.

The crime package faces a precarious future. "We can't do it in six parts" because of Senate filibuster rules that could draw out debate indefinitely, Hatch said. "We're going to have to come up with our own Senate bill," he said, predicting it would take at least a month before it emerges from his committee.

Senate Republican Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., said non-controversial items in the package might be combined and separated from the measure concerning 100,000 new police. "I'm not interested in trying to give the president a challenge to veto a bill. It's more important that we get major crime revision passed," he said.

White House chief of staff Leon Panetta said the administration believed it had enough votes to sustain a veto of a crime bill that gutted the cops-on-the-beat program. "We would not be disappointed if that was one of the first vetoes we cast."

Health Fair at Saint Mary's this afternoon

By CHRISTINA TECSON
News Writer

Twenty-three booths from local businesses, hospitals, and organizations will take part in a Women's Health Fair designed to provide information on the physical, social, and emotional aspects of women's health in the LeMans Lobby today from 3-5 pm.

Representatives from the various organizations will be answering questions and distributing brochures, coupons, and free samples to those who attend.

Members of the Student League for Women's Colleges (SLWC) contacted various groups to include a variety of organizations that would interest women. The Bath & Body Works company will be giving out free massages and samples of their products. RJ's Espresso Shoppe will be serving coffee. Mary Kay Cosmetics will also be in attendance.

"It's a great opportunity for women to understand women's health issues," said SLWC President Katie Clancy.

Self-defense and breast cancer are among the subjects that will be discussed to promote a total well-being of women.

Clancy and senior Cassandra Courtney of the SLWC are co-directors of the fair. They are enthusiastic, and hope that students will take enough interest in the information so that it might continue in following years, according to Courtney.

"We hope that women will come to gather pertinent information to help them become advocates of their own well-being," said Clancy.

"The Student League for Women's Colleges is holding this in order to show that women's colleges have a role in responding to women and health," said Dr. Patrick White, advisor of Student League for Women's Colleges. "What the group is trying to do is show the breadth of issues and concerns, and attitudes for thinking about health in the '90's."

The health fair is open to everyone in the community. All women from Saint Mary's, Notre Dame, and Holy Cross, are urged to attend, according to Clancy. The event is being sponsored by SLWC, the Wellness Center, and Board of Governance at Saint Mary's.

pronged," she explains. "First, we collect and systemize all material that relates to the College. Then, we make that information available to students, faculty and alumnae for research purposes."

Dunleavy mentioned that last year was an unusually busy year for the Department because of the College's Sesquicentennial celebration. Also, the Department constantly receives phone calls from people who are interested in family members who attended Saint Mary's, as well as those interested in what College life was like in past years.

"The materials here include written histories of College events, posters, photographs, audio tapes, video tapes and slides. The Department has the first College ledger, a handwritten book which dates back to 1847 and consists of the accounts for every student who attended Saint Mary's during that term," Dunleavy said.

The ledger also includes the price that a student was required to pay for a semester's tuition, including laundry and meals: $30.

The Archives Department also has the first College Bulletin (1860), which lists all graduation events, as well as the receipts of "premiums," or awards given to deserving seniors.

In addition, students can also find the first edition of "Chimes," the College literary magazine, dating back to 1892; the first volume of the College yearbook published in 1926; and the first Saint Mary's Courier, the College Alumnae magazine, written in 1927.

Each piece of Saint Mary's history not only offers insight to the events of the College, but reminds researchers of the changes in American history as well.

"Several yearbooks were not printed during the Second World War because students were encouraged to conserve paper for the war effort," Dunleavy said.

But it is the history of Saint Mary's that Sister Rosaleen focuses on in the Archives Department. The pieces of memorabilia that are intricately studied, sorted and filed by Sister Rosaleen and her student aides compile a college history that is steeped in both history and change.

Perhaps the best example of the detailed organization of records is the Saint Mary's Narrative which is compiled and written by Sister Rosaleen herself. All articles or press releases concerning Saint Mary's are inserted in this book that is similar to a college diary.

"The past year at Saint Mary's has allowed students, faculty and alumnae to better understand and appreciate the meaning of 'honoring tradition and pioneering change' at a women's college in the 1990's," Dunleavy said.

"Although the Sesquicentennial year has passed, the Archives Department will remain a place where people can go to learn about the past, present and future of Saint Mary's College," she continued.

that. We have all become friends," Paige said. "But that doesn't mean we're not going to talk to any one else based on their skin color."

Paige further emphasized that it is very difficult to be a minority in a situation in which most of her peers cannot relate to her culture. "A big source of support does lie within being with other African-Americans who do share your culture."

This need for a support group, however, stems from the absence of awareness about African-American culture on campus; this lack of awareness has led to an unintentional but prevalent form of racism.

"Most girls, through no fault of their own, come from very conservative families and do not know how to interact with people of other cultures," Paige said.

Several white members of the audience related their initial experiences in which they realized that there were fundamental similarities between themselves and African-American women. Differences were also recognized.

One member of the audience told about the first time she had touched an African-American woman's hair. "I realized that her hair was different from mine, that she had a different texture than me, and I had simply never thought about it before," she said.

Another member of the audience commented that the production of the play "was the first time I've felt that I'm actually in a diverse college atmosphere. I mean, you come to Saint Mary's and you meet yourself all over again."

Paige was pleased with the enthusiastic reaction of the audience following the play because it seemed to indicate that at least a sizable portion of the Saint Mary's student body is willing to address the issue of racial relations. Paige sees this as a step to eliminating the ignorance that often leads to inadvertent incidents which are, in effect, a form of racism.

Plane crash deadly for Canyon tourists

Company has fatal track record since 1980

By EUN-KYUNG KIM
Associated Press

TUSAYAN, Ariz. — The company whose plane crashed south of the Grand Canyon, killing eight, has had four fatal crashes and 23 deaths since 1980, a federal official said Tuesday.

A twin-engine plane operated by Las Vegas Airlines plunged into the pine woods 2 1/2 miles northeast of here Monday, killing seven Taiwanese nationals and the pilot. The only survivors, a woman and a teenage girl, were in critical condition.

A half-dozen deputies picked through mud, snow and scraps of metal in and around the broken fuselage Tuesday to prepare the dead for autopsies, lying bodies on black tarps in the drizzling rain and snow. The bodies were taken to the Coconino County morgue.

"I'm really surprised that people made it out alive," county Sheriff's Sgt. Kathy Paleski said from the scene Tuesday.

The mud was so deep and flying weather so bad that the only way for rescuers and reporters to reach the scene was in "snow cats," huge tracked vehicles that carry a dozen people in their cabs. The midday temperature was around 40 degrees; the wind chill dropped it to 18.

A team of investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board was assembling in the tourist town 175 miles north of Phoenix and 8 miles south of the main visitor area at Grand Canyon National Park.

The Piper Navajo brought the tourists from Las Vegas for a ground tour of Grand Canyon National Park. It had just taken off on the return flight when the pilot radioed that one of the two engines had failed, according to Fred O'Donnell, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman in Los Angeles.

Officials at the airline's Las Vegas offices refused several requests for comment. The company issued a statement listing the names of the passengers and saying it was assisting in the investigation.

O'Donnell called the airline's safety record "not particularly commendable." Comparable statistics about the safety records of other tour airlines weren't immediately available from the NTSB.

It was the fourth fatal crash of a Las Vegas Airlines flight since the company was founded in 1980, O'Donnell said. The worst was in 1983, when a plane crashed into a wall of the Grand Canyon, killing nine people. The three earlier crashes involved pilot error, and investigators didn't find a pattern of problems at the airline, he said.

The NTSB called for a full investigation of the airline following an accident Dec. 10, 1991, in which a Las Vegas Airlines plane crashed into a mountain on the Arizona-Nevada state line, killing the pilot and four French tourists.

The NTSB also criticized the FAA for what it called a "marked absence of oversight" of tour operations in Las Vegas following that crash. An investigation by the FAA's national office found the office was performing up to standards, O'Donnell said.

The crash was at least the 12th fatal aircraft accident at or around the park since 1980, and brought the death toll to 95 for that period.

The airspace over the canyon is tightly regulated because of concerns about safety and about noise disturbing tourists, hikers and whitewater rafters, said Dan Anderson of the National Air Access Council in Washington, D.C.

Anderson, formerly head of a local air tour industry group, acknowledged there is a public perception of a safety problem at the canyon, but said the accident rate is actually low considering 800,000 people a year are flown over the canyon.

"It only stands to reason that compared to some airport out in South Dakota you're going to have more accidents," Anderson said.

Wall Street security increased

By TOM HAYS
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Security is tight on Wall Street in response to what law enforcement sources on Tuesday called terrorist threats against "symbols of American capitalism."

The crackdown comes as the anniversary of the Feb. 26, 1993, World Trade Center bombing nears and in the midst of the trial of 11 Muslim extremists accused of plotting to wage a war of urban terrorism in the New York.

Meanwhile, the federal government listed 172 people "who may be alleged as co-conspirators" in the trial of Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman and his followers. The list includes the Sudanese Mission to the United Nations.

Not far from the federal courthouse where the trial is underway, a small army of plainclothes officers started patrolling Wall Street in recent days, law enforcement sources said. Uniformed officers have been posted around-the-clock at the New York and American stock exchanges.

"What you're seeing is the protection of places that, based on our intelligence, are known targets, places certain groups consider symbols of American capitalism," said one source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Said Mayor Rudolph Giuliani: "Every single precaution is being taken." The sources refused to say who made the threats, but Wall Street workers said security mushroomed Feb. 2 as the alleged mastermind behind the planned bombings and assassinations issued cryptic warnings while negotiating a plea bargain.

Siddig Ibrahim Siddig Ali pleaded guilty, telling the he wanted to tell prosecutors about "a few things that are happening out there that I don't want to be part of."

Siddig Ali's remark coincided with a Police Department memo to private security forces urging a "heightened sense of awareness" at the approach of the second anniversary of the World Trade Center bombing.

As a result, "The financial district is probably the most secure part of the city right now," said Michael O'Connor, head of security for a downtown business improvement district.

On Wall Street Tuesday, police stopped delivery trucks to check papers before letting them through to the back of the New York Stock Exchange, not a usual practice.

Barricades had been placed to prevent vehicles from parking in front of the exchange. Exchange workers said all of their bags are being checked, and visitors were being restricted.

"People are scared," said Milton Torres, who works in the NYSE building.

He spoke with John DiTringo, who was ordered to move his Italian food stand away from the front of the building on Feb. 3.

Tuesday's session of the trial of Abdel-Rahman and his co-defendants was canceled because one defendant was ill.

Grozny residents cower in shadow of fighting

By JULIA RUBIN
Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia
For six weeks she huddled in her basement with the corpses of an elderly couple who died after taking shelter with her. She was too afraid to come out.

This week, 61-year-old Valya Udobakhiyeva finally emerged, blinking, her hands and feet covered with grime and sores.

"What's the date today?" she asked as she was lifted into a truck bound for a Russian army hospital Monday. "Is the shooting over for good?"

"Nobody knows, granny dear," said rescue worker Grisha Chukov, a member of the 40-man rescue unit in Russia's Emergency Situations Ministry. The rescue workers have begun trying to pick up the pieces in Russian-controlled north Grozny after weeks of bombing, artillery attacks and gun battles.

Chukov evacuates the sick and wounded, delivers water and medical kits, picks up mail and performs countless other functions in a city that has ceased to function at all.

"Look at it, it's Stalingrad," he said as the truck lurched past block after block of ruins, down cratered streets lined with bricks and rotting bodies.

Gunfire sounded from southern parts of the city, where Chechen separatists continue to battle the Russian troops sent in to snuff out the southern republic's three-year bid for independence from Moscow. Despite a limited cease-fire signed Monday, nobody in Grozny expects peace anytime soon.

While some Grozny residents are slowly venturing out, many still cower in basements. Udobakhiyeva, who lived on preserved fruits and vegetables stored in her basement, said she hoped to join relatives elsewhere in southern Russia.

On the same truck that rescued her was another elderly woman who had trouble walking. She said her son, a high school English teacher, was shot to death while on his way home one day.

The two women were taken to the Russian military base at Mozdok for medical treatment before being handed over to refugee officials.

Russian troops blanket central and northern Grozny, but are jumpy.

The troops roar around the dusty streets in tanks and armored personnel carriers, and patrol quiet lanes of broken-down houses on foot. They visibly outnumber civilians, who usually are elderly people dragging food, water or building materials in wheelbarrows and handcarts.

Many civilians accuse the troops of attacking and stealing from them.

"There they go, the marauders," said a Chechen woman who asked not to be identified, as an armored vehicle raced past piled high with mattresses and furniture. She said the troops were always drunk and shoot out the locks on apartment doors so they can come in and loot.

Other troops, however, seemed to have won the trust and gratitude of civilians. Some were fixing power lines, others sawing wood.

The troops, for their part, say Chechen fighters have mined Russian corpses. They say the fighters are hiding in the sewer system, popping up just long enough to shoot at them.

Chechnya's cease-fire

Russian helicopter gunships continued to fly over the region following Tuesday's cease-fire between Russia and Chechen rebels.

Cease-fire in question

By JULIA RUBIN
Associated Press

NAZRAN, Russia
The percussion from artillery fire rippled across the Chechen capital of Grozny early Tuesday, the day a limited cease-fire between Russia and Chechnya was to take effect.

Chechen missiles were reportedly fired at Russian tanks southwest of Grozny.

Despite an uncertain start to the cease-fire, peace talks were to resume Wednesday in Sleptovsk, in the neighboring republic of Ingushetia, officials said.

The limited pact to stop the use of heavy artillery was reached Monday in talks between Col. Gen. Anatoly Kulikov, commander of Russian troops in Chechnya, and the chief of separatist Chechen forces, Aslan Maskhadov. Both sides also agreed in principle to work out an exchange of prisoners and the dead.

Previous agreements have failed to end the battles in this mountainous region 1,000 miles south of Moscow, and many on both sides were skeptical about this one.

"It is impossible to reach agreement with them because their hands are stained with blood," a top Russian commander said.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Changing opinions, tradition

Dear Editor:

Under normal circumstances, after a person graduates, his or her modes of thinking are set and he or she will in general be less receptive to opinions or beliefs previously unencountered. In the case of Notre Dame, most students who graduate will have next to no exposure to the wide variety of belief systems that differ from those of white middle-class Catholic America.

From time to time, students have expressed concern about this lack of diversity in thought, belief, and action, yet none of them proposed or pursued a solution to the crisis. In light of the rapidly diversifying world, it is likely that few of our graduates will function well in the social environment into which they are about to enter.

We are not about to preach to the university about this problem, but rather we propose solution, namely, to sponsor an open forum which will allow those who recognize the need for diversity and freedom of thought to openly express their differences without fear of incrimination.

Our fundamental goals for this forum are to preserve and encourage freedom of speech, freedom of thought, and tolerance for the benefit of the Notre Dame community and our generation as a whole. We hope to increase exposure and sensitivity to beliefs which are not predominant at the university.

Everyone who is interested is invited to call either of us at any time at 4-2047 or e-mail us at alaser@bach.helios.nd.edu or fcloran@helios.nd.edu for further information.

Moral elite imposes its sacred opinions

Dear Editor:

As usual, the pro-life contingent has backpedaled from the transgressions of its comrades and has ascended the moral plateau from which it now stands. Unable to justify the radical actions of their peers, they shout out righteously that we have sinned. They ask us if we think abortion is wrong, yet they answer the question for us, labeling us as "pro-abortion." After all, the morally elite are entitled to do this, regardless of whether or not we think it is wrong.

It's all about imposing your sacred views on others, exemplified in full by the aforementioned "sidewalk counseling." Oftentimes, this "counseling" entails no more than threats of bodily harm and picturesque descriptions of hell. Numerous women have been followed and stalked after coming home from clinics, and teenagers' parents are often called to alert them of their daughters' sins. Obviously, they feel they must do all they can to save lives.

So, I answer your question. Yes, I think abortion is wrong; however, it is not my choice to make nor is it my duty to persecute others for that choice. It is a decision that must be weighed with every ounce of one's soul. Choice is not a word dreamed up in the last year to justify abortion, it is the essence of one of our nation's laws.

'St. Ed's Six' save day from disaster

Dear Editor:

On Wednesday, February 8, I arrived on campus at 6:30 am and returned to my car at 6:30 pm to find it had been buried past the wheelwells in snow packed tight from the snowplows.

Luckily, I had parked facing the fence in lot D2, or all four sides of the car would have been buried. As I walked around the car in amazement, six great guys from St. Ed's offered their help.

Without aid of a shovel, and some using their bare hands, they dug the snow and pushed the car out of the mess. It sounds easier than it was, and it took all six of them working minutes before the car was able to be driven. I didn't get all their names, but they were led by a Pre-Med/Theology major named Ben; to all of you, thanks. I wouldn't have been able to manage it on my own. You've renewed my faith in the kindness of strangers and deserve kudos from your Rector and whoever else hears of this. Once again, thanks to the "St. Ed's Six!"

Sexuality: Collegiate community speaks out

ND policies suppress freedom

Dear Editor:

The policies of this University with regard to the recognition of student organizations is unjust and discriminatory and it should be abolished.

Recent developments in the twenty-year struggle of gay and lesbian students to organize and meet on campus do not suggest that University officials should "bow down" to public pressure to "recognize" such a group. Rather, University officials should "bow out." Student organizations should be registered and funded by students.

As I have spoken with various alumni of the University and others who have examined the history of student regulations at this University, it is apparent that the process of "recognition" itself was devised precisely to exclude groups such as "Gays and Lesbians at Notre Dame" from the use of campus facilities. Yet, it has come to be used by campus officials to conveniently suppress the 1st and 5th amendment rights of students to free-expression and free-assembly for peaceable ends. At few other Universities have students so sheepishly ceded those rights to bureaucrats as they have here.

Student organizations should not need and should not request the official stamp of approval from University officials. Student funds should not be disbursed by University accountants. These are the proper roles of our student government agencies: the Student Government and the Graduate Student Union.

A safe, clean and orderly campus is an interest that students, faculty and staff share. That interest demands that student organizations be run above ground, using acceptable accounting practices, with decent regard for the security and cleanliness of University facilities. This legitimate interest of the University community does not demand that unpopular views or styles of life-even non-Catholic views-be systematically oppressed.

Nothing prevents University officials from turning current policies against any other student organization they may not like. This campus witnessed similar events in 1991 when a group of minority students organized and occupied the Registrar's office to speed along the recognition of their organization, Students United for Respect (SUFR).

This spring I encourage Student Government and the Graduate Student Union to develop and implement their own procedures for the registration and funding of student organizations. And I encourage every other student organization to stand in solidarity with GLND/SMC this spring and to refuse the University's "official recognition." You have nothing to lose except their chains.

Deny support, deny education

Dear Editor:

I am a student at Bucknell University in Lewisburg, PA and I just received a message from activists here at the university that campus space at your university has been denied to the Gay/Lesbian/Bisexual support organization at Notre Dame. I am writing to show the support of students around the country for such organizations.

I find it unbelievable that something like this can happen in 1995. Then again, maybe it isn't so unbelievable. I find such action reprehensible. How can an institution dedicated to education deny its students space to pursue activities that are fully in line with that goal?

Further, as an institution that is supposed to be involved in Christian faith development, a faith that challenges its believers to love others, such action is absolutely contradictory. What have these members of your community done to deserve this banishment?

Liberal education is based on the premise that diversity is essential to a true understanding of humanity. The denial of a space at your university for this group can only have a deteriorating effect on this premise. And yes, quite frankly, it is institutionalized discrimination.

I hope your publication serves as a voice in this debate. This is definitely a disturbing development. I plan on forwarding this letter and the information I have to the administration at your university and to friends and family with ties to Notre Dame. I also hope to get this into the campus news section of our university publication.

Exclusion refutes University mission

Acceptance based on behavior

Dear Editor:

GLND/SMC's courageous struggle for recognition by the University has inspired me to begin a similar crusade. I am starting the PSPND/SMC (Premarital Sex Practitioners of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's).

Of course, the Catholic Church considers sex outside of marriage to be a grievous sin, and since Notre Dame purports to be a Catholic university, premarital sex is a violation of University policy. Nevertheless, there are plenty of Notre Dame students who engage in such behavior who undoubtedly feel stigmatized by the University's proscriptive stance. They would benefit from a support group on campus.

As GLND/SMC has so eloquently pointed out, the University's mission is to accept and support its students whatever their lifestyles may be, not trumpet the dogmas of a morally-backward Church.

Therefore, I call on the University to recognize PSPND/SMC as an integral part of the Notre Dame community deserving of all rights and privileges afforded other campus groups. I also call on those who support GLND/SMC's efforts to join my campaign as a logical extension of their concerns, and together we can make Notre Dame a truly inclusive community.

Action 'appalling'

Dear Editor:

As Community Service Coordinator and openly gay member of the Department of Student Affairs at the University of Vermont, I am appalled at the blatantly discriminatory decision on the part of University of Notre Dame against its own lesbian/gay/bisexual students (regarding the use of school facilities for the bisexual/gay/lesbian student group.) Information of this unjust action is public, and I stand in solidarity with the gay/lesbian/bisexual community at the homophobic institution of Notre Dame. What a disgrace university officials have brought upon their name.

TIMOTHY V. KANE

Homophobia creates tarnished reputation

Dear Editor:

As a straight man working on the UW-Madison campus and in the Madison community to end violence, I abhor the nearsightedness with which the administration of a university of such high standing and strong reputation should choose to so blatantly discriminate. Students pay tuition; in doing so they are providing a university with its very lifeblood-the funds with which to maintain proper facilities in which an atmosphere of honest, fearless examination of human conditions can be pursued.

Notre Dame has denied its students of both; the members of the LGB organization are denied access to the very facilities they are paying and the campus as a whole is sent running for the shadows, shrouded in denial and shame. How can a faculty that turns its back to a portion of the student body because of their own sexism and homophobia ever be expected to promote an atmosphere where learning can truly take place.

Education is the opening of the mind to other possibilities, the releasing of the soul from concerns of its own, limited ego, to accepting the variety of all things. Notre Dame has a shroud over it, and only a reversal of the ban against LGB will lift it.

Synchronized Swimming makes a splash

By BEVIN KOVALIK
Accent Writer

Have you seen the "Saturday Night Live" skit where Martin Short sports a swimming cap and nose plugs and competes as an Olympic synchronized swimming star?

"This is the question people most frequently ask when they discover I am a member of the synchronized swimming club," laughs Jenny Szarek, a Howard Hall junior.

So what exactly is synchronized swimming anyway?

"It is a very artistic combination of ballet and gymnastics in the water," said Megan Keenan, president of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Synchronized Swimming Club.

"Synchronized swimming requires the same endurance and stamina of any other athlete such as a runner or a swimmer," Keenan added.

Although synchronized swimming is a recognized club team of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, the twelve members of the team have been petitioning to turn their club into a fully recognized varsity sport.

Synchronized swimming is presently competing with other club sports like field hockey and lacrosse for varsity status, according to Keenan.

Synchronized swimmers skillfully combine ballet and gymnastics in attempt to qualify for upcoming nationals.

Synchronized swimming is the ideal low-budget sport because the club already has the necessary equipment and resources: Rolfs Pool and interested team members.

"I would really love to see synchronized swimming become a varsity sport here, but I guess it will depend on the priorities of the Athletic Department," Keenan said.

There are approximately seven schools in the nation that offer synchronized swimming at the varsity level, according to Keenan.

"It would be nice to add another big-name school to the list, which already includes schools like Ohio State University and Stanford University," Keenan said.

"Notre Dame and Saint Mary's could add a whole new dimension to the varsity sport programs and really recruit some good athletes, especially from the mid-west," Szarek added.

The club members will most likely qualify at the zones competition at OSU for the national competition to be held at Stanford University at the end of March. Unfortunately, because of a lack of club funds and sponsors, the team will not be able to participate, according to Keenan.

"Notre Dame should be represented at such a prestigious event, so we are all pretty disappointed," Szarek said.

The synchronized swimming club will soon sponsor a free water show at Rolfs Pool to reveal the abundance of talent and give people a taste of synchronized swimming, a sport which a lot of people do not even know exists here.

"After many practices and lots of hard work, this will be a great way to publicize a growing sport and really make an impression on people," Szarek said. "It is beautiful and fun to watch."

"Anyone who has perseverance and determination can do it!" Szarek added.

Sharon Olds: Frank and Intimate

Acclaimed poet to share her voice at Sophomore
Literary Festival

By SCOTT EDEN
Accent Writer

Hailing from San Francisco, California—that perpetual hotbed of avant garde literary production—Sharon Olds will offer her personal, erotic, shockingly honest brand of poetry to the campus of Notre Dame at the Sophomore Literary Festival.

Often mentioned in the same breath as such seminal female writers as Adrienne Rich, Denise Levertov, Anne Sexton, and Sylvia Plath, Olds' work yields less hostility and sarcasm than much of today's women's poetry, but never fails to provide intimate, frank, sexual imagery, casting a Whitmanian light on everything from childbirth, virginity, and motherhood, to Marilyn Monroe and politics.

Sharon Olds, make no mistake about it, is a woman poet, writing from a woman's perspective, confronting experiences distinctly female, yet also possessing an ability to universally define human reality. By celebrating childbirth, menstruation, pregnancy and sex, she creates a world of shocking images and extraordinary intimacy, harking back to Whitman's notion of American literary vigor. This keen and courageous use of feminine physicality has placed Olds at the peak of contemporary women's poetry, penetrating, as Alicia Ostriker states in an article for the New York Times Book Review, "not only what it means to be a woman but what it means to be human."

The author of such critically acclaimed compilations as Sa- tan Says, The Dead and the Living, The Gold Cell, The Matter of This World, The Sign of Saturn, and her latest work, The Father, Sharon Olds, who received her education from Stanford University and Columbia University, now shares with the younger generation her wealth of poetic knowledge as Associate Professor of N.Y.U.'s Creative Writing Program and instructor at Goldwater Hospital for the physically disabled.

Her poetry has won numerous awards, including the 1984 Lamont Poetry Selection of the Academy of American Poets and the 1985 National Book Critics Circle Award, both for her 1984 collection The Dead and the Living. Not only has Ms. Olds seen tremendous notoriety in this country, but, because her verse has been translated into a variety of foreign languages including Italian, Chinese, French, Russian, and Estonian, she has received considerable exposure outside the United States.

'Sharon Olds, make no mistake about it, is a woman poet, writing from a woman's perspective, confronting experiences distinctly female...

Tackling the experiences of adolescence, childbirth, and early motherhood, Olds, according to Joyce Peseroff of the American Book Review, "uses language [that] often does 'turn neatly about.'" Using verbs which might seem at first almost grotesque, she manages to describe a violent, changing universe.

In poems such as "Prayer," and "The Language of the Brag," Ms. Olds addresses the experience of childbirth on many levels, from parallels with her earliest sexual encounters to comparisons with established poetic personae:

I have done what you wanted to do, Walt Whitman, Allen Ginsberg, I have done this thing, I and the other women this exceptional act with the exceptional heroic body, this giving of birth, this glistening verb, and I am putting my proud American boast right here with the others.

As fresh and vigorous as was Satan Says, Olds' second book, The Dead and the Living, achieves a level of refinement that is much more profound. Divided into two sections, this collection contains poems of decidedly political orientation and deals with death from several different perspectives. However, it does not refrain from pursuing human compassion and sympathy in such subjects as love, marriage, and children. Richard Tillinghast, in a review for Nation, proclaims, "while Satan Says was impossible to ignore because of its raw power, The Dead and the Living is a considerable step forward... Olds is a keen and accurate observer of people."

Ms. Olds' most recent work, The Father, is a collection of poems about a woman's confrontation with the death of her father. Directed toward death and its subsequent grief, The Father is extremely focused, describing the dying man's phlegm-filled coughs and decrepit body, as well as the daughter's anguish at his inevitable death. "Pointedly, there is no grand moment of release," states Lisa Zeidner in The New York Times Book Review. "Rather, we see the painstaking process of letting go... as the narrator confronts the impossibility of understanding her father's fate—any man's fate—in any definitive way."

Although distinctive in both content and form, Olds is not without her predecessors. Among "the generation just ahead of mine whose work I've especially learned from and loved," she lists Galway Kinnel, distinguished poet, novelist, another guest speaker at the Sophomore Literary Festival.

For Sharon Olds, poetry is an experimentation, a dynamic medium used to explore the whole of human reality as well as her own life, emotions, and perceptions. "Questions that interest me include: Is there anything that shouldn't or can't be written in a poem? What has never been written in a poem? What is the use, function, service of poetry in a society? For whom are you writing? (The dead, the unborn, the woman in front of you in the check-out line at Shop-Rite?)" Sharon Olds has encountered these and many other questions in her direct, turbulent, often shocking poetry, and through her writings has reached a vast number of individuals.

Sharon Olds will be giving a reading tonight at 8PM in the Hesburgh Library Auditorium.

Huskies handle Hoyas, 91-85

By JIM O'CONNELL

LANDOVER, Md.

Connecticut won its first game as a No. 1 team and also ended the Washington area's recent jinx over top-ranked schools with a 91-85 victory over Georgetown on Tuesday night.

The Huskies (20-1, 13-0 Big East) took over the top spot in the country on Monday and their first game was in the same area where Massachusetts and North Carolina had lost as No. 1 teams within the last 10 days, to George Washington and Maryland, respectively.

Georgetown (14-7, 7-6) gave quite an effort in trying to stretch the streak, but Connecticut's pressure defense and versatile offense proved too much for the Hoyas, who lost their fourth straight game.

The win was the 18th consecutive Big East regular season victory for the Huskies, who have five games left in an attempt to become the first league team to go unbeaten. It was also Connecticut's ninth straight conference road victory and the first time Georgetown had ever lost two straight league games at USAir Arena where it has been playing since the 1981-82 season.

The Hoyas started the second half with a 17-5 run for a 50-42 lead with 16:17 to play. They kept the lead behind an acrobatic performance from freshman guard Allen Iverson and a solid career-high effort from freshman forward Boubacar

Aw.

The Huskies, however, turned up the pressure near midcourt and the plan to have the big men bring the ball upcourt against it started to unravel.

It also helped Connecticut that Ray Allen, the conference's leading scorer, started to get going.

Disgruntled Drexler traded to Rockets

Associated Press

DALLAS

Clyde Drexler, who played 11 1/2 seasons with the Portland Trail Blazers, got the trade he had requested Tuesday, going to the Houston Rockets with forward Tracy Murray for forward Otis Thorpe.

The NBA champions will also give Portland the rights to 1993 second-round draft pick Marcelo Nicola.

Drexler, 32, a teammate of Rockets center Hakeem Olajuwon at the University of Houston, is Portland's all-time leader in scoring, assists, steals and rebounds.

Drexler asked for a trade before the season and made his request public in January, saying he was unhappy with the direction of the franchise. He had already left for Houston on Tuesday night as the Blazers were preparing to play the Mavericks.

"It's something that Clyde wanted and he got what he wanted," Portland point guard Rod Strickland said. "What more could he ask for? He wasn't happy with what was going on here and he's going

Minutemen picked off by Colonials, 80-78

By JIMMY GOLEN
Associated Press

AMHERST, Mass.

Alexander Koul and Nimbo Hammons combined for 34 points before fouling out and leaving their George Washington teammates to protect an 80-78 victory over No. 5 Massachusetts.

The Colonials also beat UMass on Feb. 4 to end the Minutemen's 16-game winning streak and knock them out of the No. 1 ranking. But instead of revenge, UMass got its first loss on campus in 42 games — dating back to a Jan. 8, 1992 loss to West Virginia — and its first loss ever at the Mullins Center.

Koul

Kwame Evans scored 20 points, Koul had 18 and Hammons had 16 for George Washington (16-9, 9-4 Atlantic 10). Lou Roe had 22 points and 12 rebounds and Michael Williams had 19 points for the Minutemen (18-3, 9-2).

George Washington led almost the entire game and opened a 14-point lead in the second half before UMass began chipping away.

The Colonials had a 77-67 lead with 49 seconds to go before Tyrone Weeks' put-back cut the deficit to single digits. Antoine Hart hit one of two free throws for George Washington, then Williams' basket made it 78-71.

Edgar Padilla and Hart each hit two free throws before Padilla hit a 3-pointer with 9.4 seconds left to make it 80-76. UMass fouled Hart again, and he missed both shots.

Weeks' tip-in made it 80-78, but with only 0.1 seconds left on the clock, and the Colonials only had to inbound the ball to become the first Atlantic 10 team to sweep UMass since 1992.

Koul fouled out after 18 points with 2:20 left and the Colonials leading 71-63.

Dana Dingle hit both free throws to cut the lead to six, but the Minutemen couldn't get any closer until the final seconds.

A brief shoving match interrupted the game with 10:57 to go and Roe on the floor with what appeared to be leg cramps. The officials cleared up the fracas and assessed Donta Bright and Evans technical fouls.

Roe left the court but returned a minute later to key a 10-0 Massachusetts run that cut the lead from 14 points to four, 57-53 with 7:23 left. He scored his first time down, then threw a baseball pass to set up Padilla's dunk that made it 57-47.

Williams hit two free throws to cut it to eight and added a 3-pointer that brought UMass within 57-52 with 8:52 left. Roe made one of two free throws before Koul got a tip-in for the Colonials' first basket in more than three minutes.

UK stumbles at home, 76-71

By MIKE EMBRY
Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Mississippi State finally beat the Wildcats of Kentucky in raucous Rupp Arena.

Marcus Grant scored a career-high 23 points as the No. 23 Bulldogs scored a 76-71 upset Tuesday night, defeating No. 4 Kentucky for the first time in 17 games in the building.

"This is the biggest win of my career," said Grant, a senior forward who made 6 of 8 3-pointers and had seven assists. "I've beaten Arkansas three times. It doesn't compare."

Mississippi State (16-5, 8-3 Southeastern Conference) also registered its first victory over Kentucky in Lexington since a 77-72 overtime win in 1967. Kentucky (17-4, 9-2) had won 12 straight in Rupp Arena, including 10 this season.

"This is very special," Mississippi State coach Richard Williams said. "I think after we have had some time to think about this, we'll really understand what a great win it was."

Mississippi State beat Kentucky at its own game — a tenacious defense that forced the Wildcats to shoot 36 percent from the field, including 26 percent (9 of 34) from 3-point range.

"We played the zone because we had to attack their pressure with a small lineup," Williams said. "You take a gamble with the zone."

Knight reaches a milestone, IU wins

By RUSTY MILLER
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio

Alan Henderson scored 28 points and had 11 rebounds as Indiana beat Ohio State 69-52 Tuesday night for coach Bob Knight's 300th career Big Ten victory.

Brian Evans added 14 points and Michael Hermon 10 for the Hoosiers, 15-9 overall and 7-5 in the Big Ten.

Indiana won its second game in a row for the first time in over a month. The Hoosiers had alternated wins and losses in their nine previous games.

In his 24th season at Indiana, Knight improved to 300-114 in Big Ten games.

Tony Watson scored 19 points and Rickey Dudley had 12 points and 10 rebounds for Ohio State, 5-17 overall and 1-11 in the conference. The Buckeyes have lost 10 of its last 11 and 14 of the last 17.

The Hoosiers, who matched their total of last year with just their third road win, stretched a two-point margin at the half with a 10-2 run at the outset of the second half.

The first two trips down, Indiana posted up guards Hermon and Steve Hart and each hit baskets inside. Then Charlie Miller scored his first points of the game on a 3-pointer.

After Ohio State broke through at the 16:57 mark on a baseline jumper by Watson, Hermon hit a 3-pointer to push the lead to 37-27.

The Buckeyes scored the next three points before Watson picked up his fourth foul. Indiana then reeled off seven of the next nine points — Hermon,

Henderson and Miller each hitting baskets and Henderson adding a free throw — for a 44-32 advantage.

The lead never dipped below seven again.

Miller, Hart and Hermon had combined for two points in the first half, but picked up 14 in the first 7 1/2 minutes of the second half.

Indiana led 27-25 through an ugly first half, which had the teams combining to go 1-for-8 from 3-point range, 11-of-19 at the line and total one blocked shot and nine assists.

About the only signs of life for either team were IU's Henderson.

'Nova knocks off the 'Cuse, 89-87

By WAYNE WOOLLEY
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA
Villanova's Chuck Kornegay scored six of his 14 points in overtime, including a reverse layup with 8.7 seconds left that gave No. 15 Villanova an 89-87 Big East victory over No. 11 Syracuse Tuesday evening.

Kornegay missed a foul shot and Syracuse's Michael Lloyd drove the length of the floor as the final seconds ticked off, but his shot was blocked by Jason Lawson as time expired.

Kornegay got the rebound after Lawrence Moten's missed shot and then scored on a tip-in at the other end of the floor to give the Wildcats an 87-85 lead with 1:17 remaining in overtime.

Moten tried another 3-pointer and missed, but came up with the rebound and drove the lane for a basket to tie it with 34.9 seconds left.

Moten finished with a career-high 36 points for the Orangemen and became the school's career scoring leader with 2,177 points, 34 more than Derrick Coleman.

The Wildcats scored 10 points in the final 2:52 of regulation to tie the game at 80.

Lloyd missed a driving layup as regulation ended.

Kerry Kittles, the Big East's

No. 3 scorer, and Jason Lawson each had 20 points for Villanova and Eric Eberz had 17.

Villanova (18-5, 11-2) is undefeated since losing to Syracuse (17-5, 10-3) on Jan. 9 in the Carrier Dome.

Syracuse took its first lead at 61-60 after Todd Burgan's steal and pass to Moten for a layup. Moten's free throw with 5:32 left capped a 16-6 run that vaulted Syracuse into a 73-66 lead.

The Wildcats closed to 78-74 on Alvin Williams' steal and a layup with 2:29 left, and cut it to two on Lawson's two free throws with 1:22 to play.

with more sensational saves every game."

Eisler is not the lone reason for Notre Dame's current two game conference winning streak. In the span of three months, Lorenz has made the transition from inconsistent front liner to up and coming superstar.

"Terry Lorenz has worked hard from day one," said Schafer. "He finally seems to be getting rewarded for his hard work and strong effort."

Indeed, he has been rewarded. The sophomore left wing has 10 points in his last four games, including a span of six goals in three games. He has set career highs with 11 goals and 12 assists and currently ranks third on the team in points (behind Jamie Ling and Tim Harberts) and tied for second in goals.

"Defensively, I've been doing the same things all year, and I've gotten some lucky breaks on the offensive end," said Lorenz. "But our recent success has been a total team effort."

Lorenz seems to be well on his way to being mentioned in the same breath as Michigan State's Anson Carter and Michigan's Brendan Morrison. At this point, the only hole in his game may be his often times incredible intensity. He sat out Saturday's game after receiving a one game suspension for his role in Friday night's bench clearing brawl.

"I appreciate that he is willing to protect his teammates, but he is a player that we can't afford to lose," said Schafer. "He is becoming a team leader, and I think he will have an even bigger impact in the future."

Despite the great improvement that each player has made over the course of the season, both Eisler and Lorenz have set lofty goals for their hockey careers at Notre Dame.

"Individually, I'd like to be a little more consistent offensively and remain steady at the defensive end," said Lorenz. "As a team, we hope to make the top six (in the CCHA) next year."

Eisler adds, "I look forward to upsetting one of the top teams, like Michigan or Michigan State. I would also love the opportunity to play in the NCAA tournament."

Eisler and Lorenz are quickly becoming the foundation of a bright future for Notre Dame hockey. Indeed, the sky is the limit.

Irish

bounding margin, averaging more than nine boards per game more than their opponents.

Notre Dame will be without starting guard Ryan Hoover, who sprained his ankle Sunday against Kentucky. Pete Miller is expected to make his first career start in his place.

Miller may be the spark MacLeod is looking for. Another possible change the Irish could make to shake things would be to give more playing time, perhaps even a starting assignment, to Matt Gotsch.

Freshman Pat Garrity leads the Irish in scoring with 13 points per game and seniors Lamarr Justice and Jason Williams average about eight each.

Keith Kurowski averaged about 10 points per game before a heart problem sidelined him for more than two weeks. He saw limited action Sunday against Kentucky and his minutes will likely continue to mount in future games as his conditioning returns to normal.

Notre Dame still appears destined for an NIT bid, though it likely will have to win at least two of its remaining four games to secure that spot. Fordham in New York and Marquette and Loyola at home will complete the Irish schedule.

Irish seek revenge on bedeviling Bulldogs

Admore White and his Irish teammates will need to put pressure on Butler's Travis Trice (3). He averages nearly twelve points a game for the Bulldogs.

By JASON KELLY

Butler has bedeviled Notre Dame more than any other opponent during coach John MacLeod's tenure.

In the last four years, the Irish have beaten UCLA twice, North Carolina, Missouri and Indiana among other highly-regarded opponents.

But, in that same span, they have never beaten Butler.

Last season, Notre Dame lost to Butler 67-57 at home after winning back-to-back games against UCLA and Georgia.

It is a drastically different scenario this season with the Irish reeling from two of the worst defeats in their history in their last three games.

But there will be a few familiar faces.

Like Travis Trice, Butler's leading eligible scorer who averages 11.7 points per game. The Irish will have no trouble recognizing Trice, who victimized them last year with 16 points off the bench in the Bulldog's victory.

Junior Chris Miskel (14.9 ppg) is the team's leading scorer, but he will miss the game against Notre Dame as he completes a three-game suspension for violating team rules.

But with or without Miskel, Butler's biggest advantage will be its size. With 6-5 guard Jason McKenzie and 7-2 center Rolf van Rijn, the Bulldogs boast one of the nation's most potent rebounding teams.

OUTLOOK

Historic Hinkle Fieldhouse will be the sight of Notre Dame's latest attempt to regroup from a demoralizing defeat. After Sunday's 39-point loss to Kentucky, the Irish (14-9) find themselves facing a team they have not beaten in four years. Butler's leading scorer Travis Trice (11.2 ppg) came off the bench to score 16 in a 67-57 Bulldog win at the Joyce Center last year. Butler (14-8) will have a size advantage over the Irish at almost every position, which could spell trouble for the Irish on the boards. The Bulldogs lead the Midwestern Collegiate Conference in rebounding margin, averaging more than nine boards per game more than their opponents. Ryan Hoover will not play for the Irish after suffering a sprained ankle.

Irish experience a bit of winter solace

Hope shines through for Notre Dame hockey

By MICHAEL DAY

Somewhere behind the shadows, beyond the eye of the storm, beneath the wreckage of a losing season, have emerged a pair of Notre Dame hockey stars.

The duo is the future of Irish hockey. They are the little solace one gets in a 9-21-1 season.

Both players are currently at the top of their games. Eisler is coming off his most remarkable performance of the season. The freshman goaltender saved 47 of 51 shots against Ohio State to earn Defensive Player of the Week honors in the CCHA. Despite the recent accolades, there was a time when the freshman goaltender struggled to make a name for himself.

"I just couldn't get into a groove in the early part of the season," said Eisler. "It was partly because of injuries (bad ankle, pulled groin) and partly to the adjustment of college life."

But once he got used to life and hockey at Notre Dame, there was nothing stopping him. Eisler and the Irish defense have allowed an average of just 2.17 goals a game over their last four contests. He is a major reason why the team has catapulted to fifth in the CCHA in power play efficiency and penalty killings.

"The team has a lot of confidence in him and has really responded well around him," said head coach Rick Schafer. "Matt seems to be coming up

Notre Dame sophomore Terry Lorenz has picked up the scoring pace as of late for the Irish. He is one of many key sophomores for the forward-looking Irish.
