Under cloud, Bolduc steps back from Sorin duties

By DAVE TYLER
News Editor

J.P. Bolduc, former president and chief executive officer of W.R. Grace and Company will not be serving as chairman of The Sorin Society for the time being, according to Dennis Moore, University Director Public Relations and Information.

In October, Bolduc was named chairman of the society, a group comprised of benefactors who each give at least $1,000 annually to Notre Dame in unrestricted gifts.

Moore said Bolduc and the University have mutually agreed that he not act as Sorin Society chairman for an unspecified period of time. Bolduc will not officially step down from his Sorin Society appointment and no one has taken his place in the interim.

Bolduc resigned from his position at W.R. Grace on March 2 of this year, citing differences in management style and philosophy as reasons for his departure.

W.R. Grace issued a press release at the end of March saying that Bolduc was asked to leave by the company's board of directors after allegations that Bolduc had sexually harassed a number of employees surfaced. Time magazine reported that five women accused Bolduc of harassing them, and that Grace had hired a law firm to conduct an investigation. No formal charges have been filed against Bolduc.

Bolduc has vehemently denied the allegations. Gerald Walpin, attorney for Bolduc, told the South Bend Tribune that the reports are unfounded.

"Mr. Bolduc denies fully any allegations of sexual harassment. And any things such as putting arms around people, which he with both men and women, was part of a warm, gregarious, fun, atmosphere which he believed was beneficial to any workplace."

According to Walpin, Bolduc was not dismissed because of the sexual harassment allegations. "Our position is that Mr. Bolduc resigned because of policy and philosophical differences in the management of the company, with these hearsay accusations of sexual harassment merely being a ploy by those who disagree with Mr. Bolduc's management style to attack him," said Walpin.

W.R. Grace is a Boca Raton, Florida-based company that makes specialty chemicals and deals in the health service field as well. Bolduc had been credited by many Wall Street analysts with returning the company to profitability. Grace also may have paid Bolduc up to $43 million in severance pay, which led to two lawsuits by shareholders.

Bolduc was named CEO of W.R. Grace in January 1993, succeeding Notre Dame

A Notre Dame golf cart mysteriously exploded early Saturday morning outside of Flanner Hall.

Notre Dame Fire Department was called to the scene at 3:59 a.m. Saturday after a student reported the explosion and fire.

According to Robert Rogers,

Rogers said that the origin of the fire was "suspicious, but all that was left was a few pounds of carbon and four smoking tires," making further investigation difficult.

He added that the cart was not supposed to be outside Flanner at the time.

Clinton prays with anguished nation, urges anti-terrorism

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY President Clinton led an anguished nation in prayer Sunday for victims of the federal office building bombing as his administration proposed a series of broad steps to give the government new powers to fight terrorism.

"We have got to take steps aggressively to shut it down," Clinton said in an interview with CBS' "60 Minutes." "I'm going to do everything in my power to do just that."

Clinton directed his administration to replace the office building devastated by last Wednesday's blast and appointed Attorney Gen. Janet Reno to oversee a 60-day high-level review of the vulnerability of federal buildings. There are more than 8,000 such structures in the country.

On a day he designated a national day of mourning, a solemn Clinton told a nationally televised memorial service: "Those who are lost now belong to God. Someday we will be with them. But until that happens, their legacy must be our lives."

"In the face of death, let us honor life," he told Oklahoma City mourners, sharing a platform at the Oklahoma State Fairgrounds with Billy Graham, the evangelist.

"Wounds take a long time to heal, but we must begin," Clinton said.

After the prayer service, the Clintons met privately with relatives of about two dozen victims, including the mother of a 1-year-old girl who was photographed as a firefighter carried her limp body from the building.

"I'm sorry. I'm so sorry."

Clinton, his eyes brimming with tears, told Aren Almon as he hugged her.

Clinton signed the paw of Almon's Teddy bear, "God Bless You."

Mrs. Clinton wept as she hugged three children whose father died in the explosion.

"You're so courageous," she told some of the relatives.

Among the steps announced on Sunday by the White House:

—Legislation to establish a Domestic Counterterrorism

Center to be headed by the FBI; creation of a special fund to be used for infiltrating suspected terrorist organizations and other means of combating terrorism.

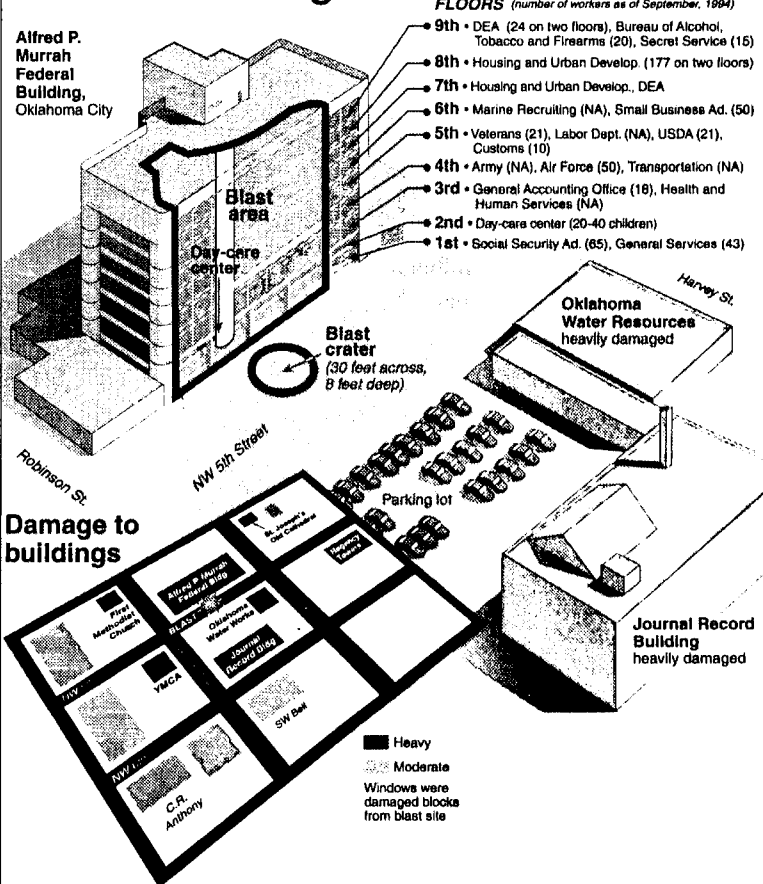

—Legislation to give the FBI increased authority to comb through hotel and motel registers and to search phone logs, greater access to credit card records.

—Pressing for passage of the administration's Omnibus Counterterrorism Act, which would give the government more power to fight terrorism greater authority to protect the confidentiality of sources in official proceedings. This provision has been criticized by civil liberties groups.

"I don't think we have to give up our liberties, but I do think we have to have more discipline and we have to be willing to see serious threats to our liberties properly investigated," Clinton told "60 Minutes."

He repeated his belief that the bombers should be brought to justice and executed. "If this is not a crime for which capital punishment is called, I don't

Destruction that may not fully heal

On April 19, 1995 the world changed. A car bomb exploded in Oklahoma city destroying the Alfred P. Murrah federal building.

Those are the facts. Most people are familiar with them. But the building was not the only thing destroyed in the bombing. America's feeling of security was shaken, probably even more than when the World Trade Center bombing occurred.

However, where this bombing differs from the World Trade Center is that the apparent perpetrators were not Muslims, as many thought, but they were Americans. This fact alone raises many important issues which should be addressed.

First, these men that are believed to be the perpetrators are somehow linked to a paramilitary group. The issue behind these groups is twofold. Personally I am opposed to revoking anyone's rights to assemble. The First Amendment is designed to ensure this right. The wording of the Amendment is clear: "Congress shall make no law...abridging...the right of people to peaceably assemble." These militia groups would be the last to tell you that they are organized against peace, but their apparent intent against the federal government and their stockpiling of weapons seems to point of intent which is counter with any peaceable goals.

Yet this stockpiling of weapons points to a different Constitutional aspect: that of the right to bear arms as enumerated in the Second Amendment. The Bill of Rights was written to prevent a repeat of the British tyranny which led to the American Revolution. However, in regards to the Second Amendment, all the forefathers knew of firearms was muskets. In an age of semi-automatic handguns and rifles, some form of regulation would seem necessary. If hunters need such weapons of destruction to hunt, they are losing the spirit behind hunting.

There is a deeper problem associated with this bombing that won't go away very easily. With a bombing such as this, the nation instantly looked for someone to blame, and the Muslim community was immediately indicted. The fact that Muslim groups across the nation denounced the bombing had little effect on the national psyche. Muslims bombed the World Trade Center, therefore they must be responsible in Oklahoma City.

What do these accusations, which appear unfounded, do for the U.S.? Nothing beneficial can come from this. Race relations will only worsen. The only way to understand people of different backgrounds is to keep an open mind and not jump to stereotypical conclusions. But this has occurred.

As in the Susan Smith case when it was instantly assumed that an African-American was responsible, the finger-pointing at the Muslim community is detrimental to relations. How can we expect to promote peace in the Middle East if we can't keep an open mind about Muslims living in the U.S.?

The bombing in Oklahoma City was indeed a tragedy and the healing will take some time. But healing from the other issues may take even longer, if it happens at all.

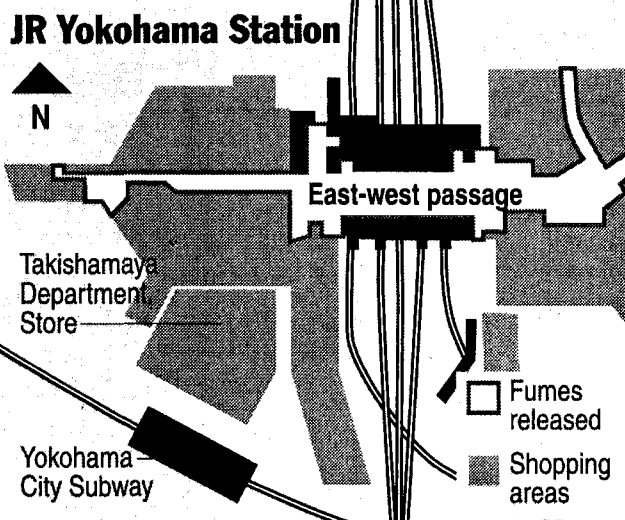

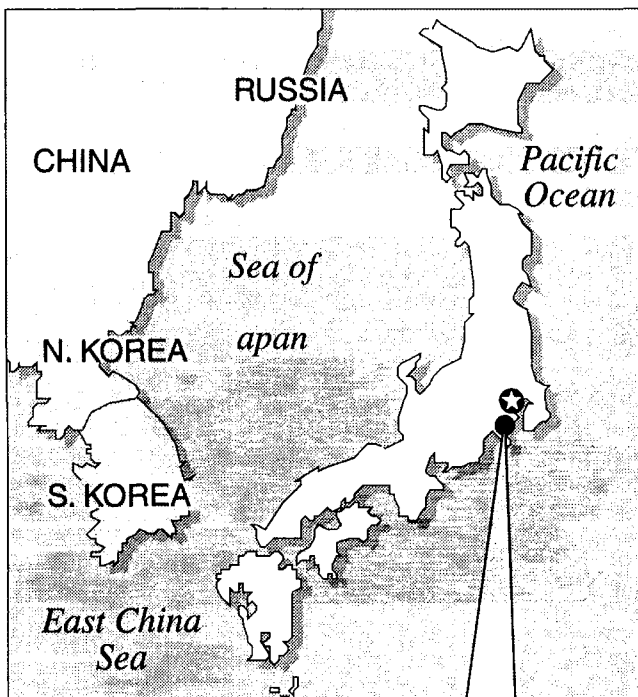

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Freakniks finally disperse

ATLANTA

After a second night of looting and traffic jams, the huge Freaknik street party slowly dispersed Sunday as revelers made one last cruise around the rainy city before heading home. Freaknik was expected to draw more than 200,000 black college students and other youths to downtown Atlanta, but students who attended said about half that number came this year. City officials refused to estimate the crowd size. Corey Griffin, 25, of Dalton said Freaknik '95 didn't measure up to last year's festivities. "They tried to stop it before it got started," he said. "I think it's nice to come down here and spend some money, but I felt I was unwanted."

The large crowds, traffic jams and unruly behavior in past years led officials to close off 200 blocks and crack down on lawbreakers. But police efforts didn't prevent trouble over the weekend. Revelers Friday night ransacked 11 stores near Underground Atlanta, a downtown shopping and entertainment complex. Rain chased the street party indoors Saturday, and Underground and two north Atlanta shopping malls closed early to head off problems. After the party shifted to southwest Atlanta, about 100 looters smashed their way into a mall department store as hundreds of onlookers cheered.

Atlanta Mayor Bill Campbell visited the mall Sunday to assess damage, condemning it as "shameful, lawless behavior that cannot be condoned under any circumstances." He blamed a mix of locals and party-goers. Police Chief Beverly Harvard, who earlier said she saw little violence or lewdness in the Freaknik crowds, said the revelers' ribald behavior Saturday night changed her opinion. "I am very, very much disappointed in what we have seen this weekend — the kinds of acts I myself have seen walking through the crowds," she said.

Harvard said she was appalled by the allegations of rapes, sexual harassment and assaults over the weekend, as well as the behavior of some party-goers, including women allowing men to grope them and videotape their bare breasts. By early Sunday, Harvard said police had made 324 arrests on 1,376 charges that also included traffic violations, disorderly conduct, theft, possession of drugs and concealing weapons. In addition, 223 juveniles were held for disorderly conduct. All but 15 were released, Harvard said. One woman sustained a separated shoulder Saturday night when crowds that gathered at the Underground stampeded several times for no apparent reason, police said.

Four Weddings' sweeps film awards

LONDON

"Four Weddings and a Funeral," the romantic comedy that has become the highest-grossing British film ever, won five prizes Sunday at the 1995 BAFTA awards, including best film. "They said my lucky underpants wouldn't work, but they did," said writer Richard Curtis, who joined director Mike Newell and producer Duncan Kenworthy to accept the top prize from the British Academy of Film and Television Arts. In addition to best picture, the movie won awards for best director (Newell), best actor (Hugh Grant), best supporting actress (Kristen Scott Thomas) and most popular film — an award voted by the public. Accepting his prize, Grant apologized to fellow nominee John Travolta ("Pulp Fiction") for what he called "a little bit of flag waving" by voters who favored the British-made film. "Had 'Pulp Fiction' been set in the heart of the Sussex countryside, things would be different now," he said. "Pulp Fiction," also hugely popular in Britain, won two awards — best supporting actor (Samuel L. Jackson) and best original screenplay (Quentin Tarantino and Roger Avary). The best actress prize went to Susan Sarandon for her performance as a Southern lawyer in "The Client."

Youths attack Big Bird at party

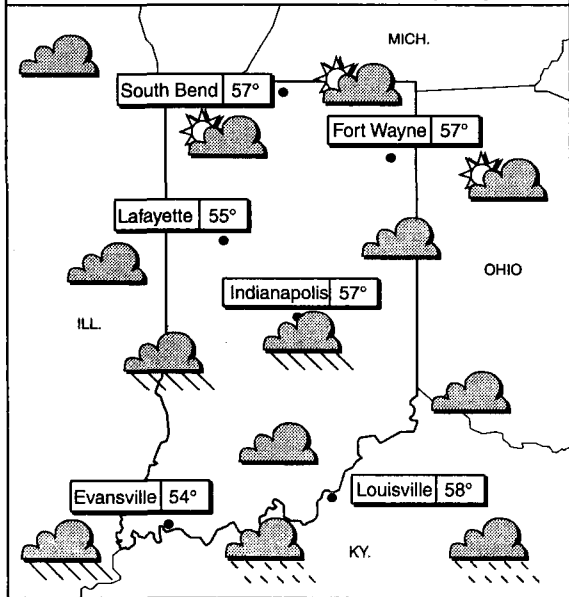

BRAINTREE, Mass.

A man who dressed as Big Bird for a 4-year-old's birthday party was beaten by six youths with a bat just after he left, an attack videotaped by the child's family, police said Sunday. Wayne Quinn, 26, was taken to the hospital with badly bruised ribs and large bruises on his head and arms. The youths, ages 16 to 20, had yelled obscenities at Quinn as he arrived dressed as the "Sesame Street" character at a house in this Boston suburb, Sgt. Karen MacAleese said. When Quinn left, he changed out of the suit in a van and approached the youths, who were hanging out across the street from the house. "I went over to ... ask them to knock it off with the language because of the kids," said Quinn, who was hired for the party. "They were looking for a fight." He was punched, kicked and hit with a baseball bat. The youths, who ran away when people came to Quinn's aid, said Quinn started the fight Saturday afternoon. But MacAleese said the videotape told a different story. "The video clearly showed the attack was unprovoked," MacAleese said. The youths were to be arraigned Monday on charges ranging from assault and battery with a dangerous weapon to simple assault.

Edwards: Forfeiture law reform necessary in U.S.

By TIM GREEN
News Writer

Federal asset forfeiture law, a topic currently being debated in the U.S. Congress, was discussed at a symposium sponsored by the Journal of Legislation last Saturday at the Law School.

Forfeiture law regulates the government's ability to take away private property as punishment for a criminal offense. The law allows the government to confiscate any property used in the commission of a crime from the convicted person, as part of his or her sentencing.

Stefan Cassella, the deputy director for asset forfeiture for the department of justice in Washington, D.C., is responsible for enforcement in many federal seizures of forfeited property. Cassella spoke in favor of continued strong forfeiture laws as a necessary power of the government.

Other speakers criticized Casella and current forfeiture law, including Nashville lawyer Elbert Edwards, co-chair of the forfeiture abuse task force. Edwards gave perhaps the strongest condemnation of federal forfeiture.

"Through modern forfeiture laws," he said, "the government is directly attacking the concepts of freedom and private property that this country has held dear for over 200 years."

Edwards went on to relate specific examples of innocent people whose property had been wrongfully seized by the government through forfeiture laws.

"The laws are designed with procedural stumbling blocks so the government can always win," he said. "Obviously, substantial reform is necessary."

Notre Dame Law Professor G. Robert Blakey offered his views on the debate. Blakey has served on Congressional and Executive committees, and was instrumental in authoring the 1970 Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO).

Blakey told of scenario in which local police will discover a center of drug-dealing operations. However, many times they will wait until the drugs themselves have been distributed out to the dealers and the money comes in before they move in and bust the operation. The police know that they will be able to keep that money, due to federal forfeiture laws, and therefore let the drugs be sold and later collect the drug money for themselves.

"The goal of any 'drug enforcement' should be to stop the drugs from getting to the streets," he said. "Clearly, that is not what is happening here."

As an author of RICO, however, Blakey has been instrumental in increasing the power of government to seize and keep forfeited property. "On this issue there are many arguments for both sides," he said. "I suspect that the truth lies somewhere in between."

FBI: 'John Doe 2' still at large

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY

An Army deserter was questioned Sunday in connection with the bombing of the federal building, but the Justice Department denied he was the heavy-browed "John Doe 2" pictured in an FBI sketch.

As the investigation widened, some 20,000 people overflowed the state fairgrounds, where President Clinton and the Rev. Billy Graham were to lead a memorial service on what the president declared a national day of mourning.

Hours before the ceremony, spectators lined up for a mile. Attorney General Janet Reno got a standing ovation as she entered.

"I think we all feel paralyzed," said Tamara Meadows, of suburban Edmond.

The bombing site, where workers have toiled for days in heat, dust, rain and cold, was a scene of growing misery. Fears that the structure would crumble stopped searchers again and again from reaching the area where a day-care center and Social Security office were.

The death toll in the worst terrorist bombing in U.S. history stood at 78, with 150 people unaccounted for. More than 400 were injured in Wednesday's blast, caused by thousands of pounds of homemade explosives packed into a Ryder rental truck.

David Iniguez was picked up by military authorities in San Bernardino, Calif., on charges unrelated to the attack and was questioned in connection with the bombing, Justice Department spokesman John Russell said.

Air Force Lt. Col. Joan Ferguson, a Pentagon spokeswoman, said Iniguez went AWOL from Fort Riley, Kan., on Aug. 23, and was declared a deserter a month later.

On Friday, the FBI arrested what it said was the first of the two "John Does" in the agency's sketches: Timothy McVeigh, a 27-year-old former GI with far-right political views. He was charged with taking part in the attack.

A senior law enforcement official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said someone had recognized Iniguez from the "John Doe 2" sketch of a dark-haired, square-jawed man with a heavy brow. But Russell said Iniguez was not the second John Doe and was not a suspect. McVeigh served at Fort Riley, as did Terry Nichols, one of two brothers being held as material witnesses in the attack.

The FBI said McVeigh had been infuriated at the government over the cult disaster at Waco, Texas, which occurred two years before the bombing. At the bombing site, sharp gusts dropped wind chills to the low 20s early Sunday and shifted some slabs of concrete on ledges on the building's upper floors. Sparks flew as firefighters cut away some dangling rooftop chunks.

Searchers waited to resume work in the day-care center and Social Security area, which were thought to contain many of the missing. Assistant Fire Chief Jon Hansen said it would be a miracle if anyone were found alive.

Ray Blakeney of the medical examiner's office said of the mood: "It's getting a lot worse. We know the work is going to have to be done, but it's frustrating not to be able to get on with it."

Across the nation, churchgoers remembered the victims and workers in prayers Sunday. At Oklahoma City's Cathedral of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, the Rev. Peter Ashurst said the devastation had left Americans "confronted by the unanswerable." He urged them to seek answers in faith.

One congregation member, Don Gillispie, wearing a uniform identifying him as an agent of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, left a few minutes early to return to the investigation.

Parishioners at St. Eugene Church, where one member was among the missing, lined up to donate to a fund for her family. "The power of God will always exceed the power of evil," the Rev. Bill Pruett said.

McVeigh, who turned 27 on Sunday, was being held in the El Reno Federal Correctional Center on a bombing charge. Other charges were expected to follow. The government has said it will seek the death penalty. Brothers Terry Lynn Nichols, 40, and James Douglas Nichols, 41, were ordered held as material witnesses.

CBS Radio reported that authorities focused on Terry Nichols as a possible suspect and were looking for as many as three others. No sources were cited for that information. The FBI acknowledged there could be other suspects.

know what is," Clinton said.

Clinton also denounced paramilitary groups and those who glorified the Branch Davidian cult members who died in a bloody standoff with federal agents two years ago.

"Those people murdered a bunch of innocent law enforcement officials who worked for the federal government," Clinton said.

At the prayer service, Clinton and others wore multicolored ribbons made up of white, yellow, purple and blue strands. The white stood for the dead, the yellow for the missing, the purple for children and the blue for the state of Oklahoma.

Scattered through the crowd were relatives of the dead and missing, hugging teddy bears and holding single stem flowers. Many clutched photos of their loved ones.

"Today, our nation joins with you in grief. We mourn with you. We share your hope against hope that some may still survive," Clinton said at the memorial service. He shared a platform at the Oklahoma State Fairgrounds with the Rev. Billy Graham, the evangelist.

"We pledge to do all we can to help you heal the injured, to rebuild this city, and to bring to justice those who did this evil," Clinton said.

Graham told the worship service the blast was "a violent explosion, ripping at the very heart of America." Long after the dead are buried and the building is rebuilt, Graham said, "the scars of this senseless and evil outrage will remain."

But, he asserted: "We stand together today to say: Let the healing begin."

The Oklahoma City Philharmonic Orchestra played slow, mournful anthems in the memorial service. And, at one point, the entire audience stood and, a cappella, sang "Amazing Grace."

Clinton did not visit the explosion site, although his motorcade traveled close enough to downtown that cranes at the site could be seen. Aides said the president did not want to disrupt the cleanup and rescue missions.

Before the service, Clinton was briefed while Air Force One remained on the tarmac by James Lee Witt, director of the Federal Emergency Management Administration.

Witt showed Clinton large blow up photographs of the building and the rescue operation, pointing out how the bomb had ripped the face off the nine-story building.

Witt told Clinton that members of the search and rescue mission were going through the ghastly rubble "piece by piece."

Before leaving the White House, Clinton and his wife planted a dogwood tree on the South Lawn of the White House in memory of the dead, the injured and the missing. The idea was suggested to him the day before by six-year-old Allyson Mawn, one of the participants in his radio address.

Peace talks recess until May

By JOSEPH FRAZIER

Associated Press

SAN ANDRES LARRAINZAR

After two days of talks delayed by two days of squabbling, rebel and government negotiators recessed Sunday until May 12 to consider proposals to reduce tensions while they try to make peace.

The weekend talks were intended only to set the framework for further negotiations — indicating that substantive talks on social reforms, the key issue in the rebellion that erupted Jan. 1, 1994, could be very far off.

According to statements read by spokesmen, the government proposed pulling its soldiers back from rebel areas and having Zapatista forces gather in three areas, where the government would house them during the talks.

The rebels countered with a proposal to have the Mexican army withdraw to the positions it held before a Feb. 8 offensive and promise freedom of movement and safety for refugees during the talks. In exchange, the rebels offered to stop military activities and to keep their forces out of towns.

The spokesmen, chairman

Samuel Ruiz of a church-backed mediating commission and Sen. Oscar Lopez Velarde, said one side wanted more time to examine the proposals. They wouldn't say which side or give any other details.

Suspicion and mistrust characterized the opening of peace talks. Squabbling and mutual accusations of bad faith delayed the start of the talks by two days and when they finally began on Saturday, there was little progress.

At a news conference late Sunday on the San Andres plaza, a ski-masked rebel negotiator known as Comandante Tacho read a statement criticizing the government's position.

"The government doesn't want to talk of peace, only of surrender," he said, surrounded by army guards and hundreds of cheering villagers. "We did not come to surrender. We came for dialogue."

He said the peace process wasn't in danger.

The rebels stunned Mexico and devastated confidence in its economic future with their surprise uprising demanding better treatment for the impoverished villagers of Chiapas state. Some 145 people were killed in 12 days of fighting before the two sides agreed on a cease-fire.

Since then, the rebels have threatened to end the truce if their demands are not addressed.

Some close to the talks say privately that future rounds of negotiations could stretch through the end of the year.

The Zapatistas accused the government of bad faith for not coming to talks, scheduled to have opened Thursday, when more than 1,000 of their supporters crowded around the talks site, trying to form an additional security cordon.

The Zapatista supporters, moved by a pounding rain and requests from the rebel leadership, left Friday night.

San Andres Larrainzar, a town of about 3,000 people in the mountains 20 miles north of the rebels' former stronghold of San Cristobal de las Casas, is to be the permanent site for future peace talks.

This is the second round of peace talks since the uprising. The first round in February 1994 ended with agreements on many key issues. But when the rebels took the proposals back to remote villages, they said they were rejected for a number of reasons — especially mistrust in the government.

Chechnya's veterans suffer again

By JULIA RUBIN

GROZNY, Russia

In Chechnya, the war heroes of 1945 have been hit hard by the horrors of 1995.

Said Ali, who helped defend Leningrad during the 900-day Nazi siege, refused to flee Grozny in January when Russia's army bombarded secessionist forces in Chechnya's capital. He sat in his apartment, recording each explosion on a piece of paper, while half the building was blown to bits around him.

Magomet Inderbiyev, a veteran of the Soviet march, has nothing left of his apartment but rubble. Marauding soldiers stole his medals off a suit jacket and slashed a 1946 portrait of him in uniform.

Zakar Akhmatkhanov, who was at the Elbe River in Germany in 1945 when Soviet and American soldiers met, lived in a cellar for 2 1/2 months this year after a rocket hit his apartment. Akhmatkhanov recounted how one cold day, he put on his medals and went out to some Russian soldiers he had seen looting. "What mother raised you? How could you bring shame on the Russian army?" he recalled asking.

Gasoline prices rise due to crude oil hike

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES
Motorists paid an average of 3.2 cents more per gallon of gasoline over the past two weeks, an increase caused by rising crude oil prices and heavier demand, an industry analyst said Sunday.

"This is significant, a wallop of an increase. Prices have gone up nearly 11 cents per gallon over a year ago," said Trilby Lundberg, publisher of the twice-monthly Lundberg Survey of 10,000 gas stations.

The average price of gasoline was 122.21 cents per gallon, according to the Lundberg Survey completed Friday. That compares to the average 118.98 cents on April 7.

"Prices started going up a month ago because crude oil prices are up an average $2 a barrel. It has a lot to do with nervousness in the Middle East over supply, plus we are coming into a higher demand season," Lundberg said.

The average price of gasoline at self-serve pumps was 115.76 cents for unleaded regular, 125.88 cents for unleaded mid-grade, 134.26 cents for unleaded supreme and 118.95 cents for leaded regular.

Former Senator Stennis dead at 93

By STEPHEN HAWKINS
Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss.

Former Sen. John C. Stennis, a courtly Mississippi Democrat who exercised vast influence over America's military during his four decades in the Senate, died Sunday. He was 93.

Stennis died about 3:30 p.m. at St. Dominic Hospital, where he had been taken several days ago for pneumonia, said his son John Hampton Stennis.

Stennis earned a reputation in Washington for fairness and finesse that landed him delicate committee assignments and close association with eight U.S. presidents. But his opposition to integration blotted his record.

Stennis joined the Senate in 1947. At the time of his retirement in 1988, he was its oldest member.

"He was a great senator in every way. He was effective, respected and deeply appreciated by the people in Mississippi," said U.S. Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss. "He was truly a man of great stature. We have suffered a great loss."

Stennis, nicknamed the "conscience of the Senate" for his work on the Senate's code of ethics and strict religious convictions, overcame personal tragedy to continue public service.

He was wounded by robbers and left bleeding on the sidewalk near his northwest Washington home in 1973. Then-President Nixon, emerging from Stennis' hospital room, said the senator would survive because, "He's got the will to live in spades."

Coy Hines Stennis, his wife of 52 years, died in 1983. And in 1984, he lost his left leg to cancer, and had to use a wheelchair.

"Discouraged? I suppose everybody's had his ups and downs. But I've never surrendered," Stennis said then.

Stennis, serving as chairman of both the Armed Services Committee and the defense subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee during the 1970s, wielded more clout over military matters than perhaps any civilian except the president. He was a consistent advocate of the need for a strong military.

"If there is one thing I'm unyielding and unbending on, it is that we must have the very best weapons," he once said.

After militants in Iran seized the American Embassy and held its employees hostage in late 1979, Stennis suggested a fleet of small aircraft carriers be built to counter such crises around the world.

"Trouble can come from anywhere now," he said. "We've got to be ready for instant action."

Soon after, the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan and Stennis called for U.S. military support bases near Mideast oil fields.

Though he stood for a tough military, Stennis did not always back presidential military policy.

He was a leading backer of the Vietnam War. However, in the war's waning days, he co-sponsored legislation to set limits on a president's power to commit American forces to combat without congressional consent.

A decade later, Stennis opposed that law — the War Powers Act of 1973 — to permit President Reagan to keep Marine peacekeeping troops in Lebanon.

He condemned the Supreme Court's 1954 school desegregation decision, but in 1983 he switched and voted for an extension of the Voting Rights Act.

He later said he always supported the advancement of all races.

Stennis was born Aug. 3, 1901, in Dekalb and graduated from Mississippi State University in 1923 before attending the University of Virginia Law School.

He began his public service in 1928 in the Mississippi Legislature, then served as a district attorney and circuit judge before joining the U.S. Senate.

After his retirement, Stennis moved to the Mississippi State University campus in Starkville, which also is the home of the John C. Stennis Institute of Government and the Stennis Center for Public Service, created by Congress.

"I do believe the most important thing I can do now is to help young people understand the past and prepare for the future," Stennis said in 1990 while serving as executive in residence at the university. "As long as I have energy left, I want to use it to the benefit of students."

Also named for the senator is NASA's National Space Technology Laboratory in southern Mississippi. The John C. Stennis Space Center tests rocket motors.

"How would I like to be remembered? I haven't thought about that a whole lot," Stennis said in a 1985 interview. "You couldn't give me a finer compliment than just to say, 'He did his best.'"

The senator's body will lie in state Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Old Capitol Museum in Jackson and from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the DeKalb Presbyterian Church in DeKalb. Grave-side services will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday at Pinecrest Cemetery in DeKalb.

Survivors include his son, a Jackson lawyer, and his daughter, Margaret Womble.

Hypertension drugs costly, unproven

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press

CHICAGO
Americans spend billions of dollars a year on costly new blood pressure drugs that are not proven superior to cheaper medications, a study says.

"The last 10 to 12 years have shown some remarkable changes in the proportion of different types of hypertension drugs used," said Dr. Jeffrey A. Cutler, a federal researcher and the study's co-author.

"These trends have occurred in the absence of any large-scale clinical comparisons of what the various drugs might do to prevent heart disease, strokes and other complications of high blood pressure," he said.

The older drugs (diuretics and beta blockers) have fallen from favor as rapidly as the newer drugs (calcium antagonists and ACE inhibitors) have gained popularity, the researchers reported in Monday's issue of the Archives of Internal Medicine, published by the Chicago-based American Medical Association.

Some doctors are quick to defend the newer drugs, which they said cause far fewer side effects than the older ones and offer other medical advantages as well.

"The newer drugs are terrific, particularly ACE inhibitors, for healing the heart," said Dr. Louis Tobian, head of the hypertension unit at the University of Minnesota School of Medicine.

The study found that between 1982 and 1993, diuretics dropped from 53 percent of all blood pressure drugs used to 27 percent. Use of beta blockers fell from about 20 percent to about 13 percent.

Meanwhile, calcium antagonists soared from 0.3 percent to 27 percent, and ACE inhibitors zoomed from 0.8 percent to 24 percent.

The difference in the cost of the drugs is striking. In 1992, a month of diuretic treatment averaged $8.25 wholesale, compared with $23.77 for beta blockers, $36.14 for ACE inhibitors and $47.63 for calcium antagonists, the researchers said.

Zulu nationalist calls for Mandela resistance

By ANN EVELETH
Associated Press

UMLAZI, South Africa
Zulu nationalist Mangosuthu Buthelezi on Sunday urged his followers to "rise and resist" Nelson Mandela's government, which he painted as the enemy of Zulu sovereignty and tradition.

Buthelezi's speech to about 5,000 people in a soccer stadium near Durban could unleash a new wave of hostility between his Inkatha Freedom Party and Mandela's African National Congress.

Thousands of people have died in fighting between Zulu supporters of the ANC and those supporting Inkatha in the eastern province of KwaZulu-Natal.

"KwaZulu-Natal must rise and resist the central government," Buthelezi said. "We must resist the central government, which has given a clear indication of pursuing plans from which great evil will arise."

Buthelezi expressed fears that a strong central government would strip provinces of their power and sideline traditional leaders, such as the Zulu king.

Inkatha wants international mediation to settle demands for more autonomy for KwaZulu-Natal, Buthelezi's stronghold and home to most of the 8 million Zulus who make up South Africa's largest ethnic group.

On Saturday, Inkatha confirmed its decision to boycott the assembly writing South Africa's new constitution until international mediation begins.

Kibeho becomes massacre site

By PAULINE JELINEK
Associated Press

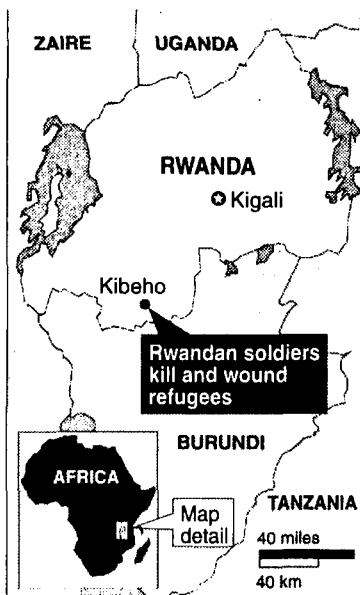

GIKONGORO, Rwanda
Tens of thousands of people, most wounded or sick, fled along muddy roads Sunday from the refugee camp where at least 2,000 people were killed by Rwandan soldiers or trampled in stampedes a day earlier.

Soldiers buried the bodies in shallow graves and pit latrines at the Kibeho camp, about 12 miles south of Gikongoro and 55 miles southwest of the capital, Kigali. Hillsides that had been strewn with corpses were cleared by the end of the day, aid workers said.

A 10-mile line of panicked refugees streamed out of Kibeho toward the provincial capital of Butare, 20 miles east, or the border with Burundi, which lies beyond.

Most were sick or wounded, according to a team from the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees that visited the camp. A U.N. relief agency set up medical treatment centers along the way.

"They have thrown away all of their belongings, sacks of maize, plastic sheeting, personal effects," the team said in a report. "The road was piled high with these abandoned goods."

Rain turned the road into a nearly impassable quagmire. Trucks and buses sent to help evacuate the refugees were stuck 10 miles away.

Rain also apparently touched off Saturday's massacre.

Most of the refugees are ethnic Hutus who fear Tutsi reprisals for the slayings of about 500,000 people — mostly Tutsis — that occurred a year ago. The refugees fled last July when Tutsi-led rebels overthrew the Hutu-dominated government.

Kibeho, with about 120,000 refugees, was the largest of the camps initially set up by the French in the area for some 250,000 displaced people.

The French withdrew last year and the new government sent soldiers to begin closing camps on Tuesday, claiming they sheltered militias loyal to the former government.

On Saturday, camp residents, apparently seeking cover from the rain, tried to run through a cordon of soldiers surrounding it.

"This spooked the soldiers, and they started firing into the crowd," said Ray Wilkinson, UNHCR spokesman in Nairobi, Kenya.

When Hutu militiamen in the camp apparently returned fire, the soldiers responded with heavy mortars, the United Nations said. Other U.N. reports said people were killed by machetes, bayonets and rocket-propelled grenades.

"As confusion then became total chaos and panic, a large number of people, mostly women and children, were trampled to death," Wilkinson said.

Doomsday cult leader stabbed by extremist

By ERIC TALMADGE
Associated Press

TOKYO
As police and dozens of reporters looked on, a right-wing extremist on Sunday ambushed and fatally stabbed the top scientist in the doomsday cult suspected in the lethal nerve gas attack on Tokyo's subways.

The stabbing was the latest chapter in a wave of violence that has deeply shaken the Japanese, who have long taken the safety of their streets as a matter of national pride.

The vigilante-style attack occurred as Hideo Murai, 36, head of the Aum Shinri Kyo (Supreme Truth) cult's "Science and Technology Ministry," was returning to the cult's Tokyo headquarters Sunday night. Murai was one of the five top leaders of the cult.

Murai underwent surgery, but died of blood loss and internal injuries several hours later. He was pronounced dead early Monday morning, police said. Television networks broke into regular programming to broadcast the attack nationwide, some repeatedly showing a knife plunging into Murai's side in slow motion.

Aum believers were shown crying hysterically as Murai was taken away semiconscious. Dozens gathered at the hospital to donate blood for transfusions.

"Why didn't the police protect him?" Yoshinobu Aoyama, the cult's lawyer, demanded after the attack. "They could have predicted this kind of thing."

Murai, 36, was believed to be a focus of the investigation into whether the cult was involved in the March 20 subway attack, which killed 12 people and sickened 5,500.

An attacker who called himself a right-wing extremist got to him first, however, pushing his way through a throng of media people staking out the cult's Tokyo headquarters and slashing repeatedly at Murai with a kitchen knife.

After Murai collapsed into the door of the Aum office in a pool of blood, the attacker dropped his bloodstained weapon and was arrested by police at the scene.

Police identified him as Hiroyuki Jo, 29, and said he claimed to be a member of a rightist organization.

Japan's state-run television network, NHK, said Jo told police he wanted to punish Murai because of trouble caused by the cult.

The cult has denied any connection with the Tokyo attack.

Yet the cult has been the focus of an intense police investigation since the March 20 subway killings. Police have conducted daily searches of cult compounds over the past month and discovered tons of chemicals and equipment that could have been used to produce sarin, the kind of nerve gas used in the subway attack.

Reports quoting anonymous police sources said that officials have also uncovered evidence of facilities to make rifles, biological warfare labs and even plans to purchase nuclear weapons from Russia.

The subway killings inaugurated a series of crimes that have deeply rattled the Japanese sense of security.

Ten days after the subway attack, Japan's top police official, who was responsible for the investigation, was shot and nearly killed as he left home for work.

And, as Parliament passed a law banning the possession of sarin last week, hundreds of people were sickened by toxic fumes released at a major train station just south of Tokyo. Nearly two dozen more were hospitalized in a similar incident at a shopping center near the same station Friday.

Police have not made any arrests in any of those cases, and have not officially identified any suspects.

Jospin wins first-round vote

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press

PARIS
In a startling upset, Socialist Lionel Jospin finished first Sunday in the opening round of France's presidential election. The favorite, conservative Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac, took the second runoff spot.

Jospin, a former education minister, benefited from infighting that divided the more powerful right. But he faces an uphill battle in the final round of voting May 7, since French voters have tended to lean right in recent elections.

Conservative Premier Edouard Balladur conceded he was eliminated from the race and urged conservatives to back Chirac.

For the 40.1 million registered voters, the election was the first step in choosing their first new president in 14 years. The 78-year-old incumbent, Socialist Francois Mitterrand, had given only lukewarm backing to Jospin, but this may have helped the candidate avoid being seen as a continuation of a now-uninspired administration.

"You have created conditions for hope," Jospin told cheering supporters at Socialist Party headquarters.

With nearly 90 percent of the votes counted, Jospin had 23 percent, Chirac about 20 percent, and Balladur 19 percent.

Far-right voters showed their strength, giving Jean-Marie Le Pen of anti-immigrant National Front, his best-ever showing of more than 15 percent, according to the projections.

France's presidency is among the most powerful in the West. The president controls foreign and defense policy, appoints the prime minister, presides over Cabinet meetings, influences judicial appointments and can dissolve Parliament.

Chirac and Jospin have few significant differences in foreign policy. Both also have promised to make unemployment their No. 1 target, but any overtly leftist remedies espoused by Jospin would be unlikely to clear the conservative-dominated Parliament.

Jospin, waging his first national campaign, had to scramble to ensure the Socialist Party was included in the second round.

Only once since the current electoral system was implemented 30 years ago — in 1969 — was the left excluded from a presidential runoff, and Jospin's lead was the smallest ever of a first-round winner.

The last polls published before the voting showed Chirac with a solid lead over Jospin and Balladur, who were locked in a close race for second.

Either conservative — Chirac or Balladur — would have been favored in a runoff with Jospin because of a recent conservative swing among French voters.

Turnout in French presidential elections is usually above 80 percent, but estimates by major polling firms predicted Sunday's election could fall just under that mark.

The election was filled with suspense because polls found more than a third of voters were undecided a week ago. Those voters appeared to have spared France an all-conservative runoff.

If Balladur, 65, had faced Chirac, 62, in the second round, it would have deeply divided the governing conservative majority and humiliate Mitterrand's once-powerful party, which controlled Parliament as recently as March 1993.

Instead, a Jospin-Chirac runoff means an abrupt end to the political career of the patrician Balladur, who was the heavy favorite until February.

Berlusconi takes lead in regional elections

By VICTOR SIMPSON
Associated Press

ROME
Silvio Berlusconi's center-right coalition took a slight lead in regional elections Sunday, falling short of a resounding victory in the media magnate's campaign to return to power, exit polls suggested.

The local races were seen as a prelude to national elections: They offered the first direct test of the two big alliances formed after Berlusconi's government collapsed in December.

Berlusconi said the outcome showed that voters wanted what he wants — general elections "as soon as possible."

His Forza Italia party emerged as the No. 1 party, as much as 2.5 percentage points ahead of the former Communists, exit polls showed. The votes are to be counted officially on Monday.

RAI state television gave six regions to Berlusconi's conservative alliance and five to a coalition dominated by the ex-Communists. It said four were too close to call.

The exit polls gave 45 percent of the vote to the conservative alliance, around 44 percent to the leftist-dominated coalition and other parties on the left and the rest to the regional Northern League and fringe parties.

Neither Berlusconi nor the leader of the leftist alliance, Romano Prodi, a former state industrialist, ran Sunday.

Some 43 million voters were eligible to take part in the voting for the legislatures of 15 of the country's 20 regions, 76 provinces and 5,135 towns and cities, Florence and Bologna the biggest among them.

The conservatives captured, according to the exit polls, the northern economic powerhouses Lombardy and Piedmont, as well as the Veneto, and the poorer southern regions Calabria and Puglia.

"The moderate electorate has prevailed," said Antonio Tajani, the Forza Italia spokesman.

The left won in traditional Communist strongholds Tuscany, Umbria and Emilia-Romagna, as well as the Marche on the Adriatic coast.

"The right is not growing stronger, but has stopped moving ahead," said the leftist leader, Massimo D'Alema. He called the projections "a good result."

Rome's region of Lazio, where the conservatives had been favored, was considered too close to call.

Parliament now is about equally divided between the two blocs. Forza Italia (Let's Go, Italy) is allied with the right-wing National Alliance, successor to the neo-fascist party.

A win for the center-right will likely bolster Berlusconi's call for a June vote. Since he was forced to resign when an ally broke with his coalition, Berlusconi has been demanding national elections as soon as possible, hoping to capitalize on his popularity. D'Alema wants to hold them in October.

■ RIGHT OR WRONG?

Award recipient should be judged on all issues

The 1995 Notre Dame Award was conferred on Helen Suzman, who led the fight against apartheid as a member of the South African Parliament from 1953 to 1989. Established in 1992, the Award honors those "whose deeds give witness to God's kingdom among us."

Mrs. Suzman's opposition to apartheid was laudable. In a 1968 speech, she denounced the view that the source of violence was in the black community and not in the racist state: "I say that uprooting people at dawn or on a wintry evening in a shanty town, and bundling 1972," Feb. 10, 1975, p. 491.

In 1972, Mrs. Suzman said, "abortion should be legalized in cases where the mother's life is in danger or her physical or mental health will be affected by the continuation of the pregnancy [and] where there is a considerable danger that the unborn child, when born, will be seriously retarded mentally, or physically deformed [and] where pregnancy is a result of rape." Feb. 18, 1972, p. 1429.

In 1982, Mrs. Suzman said: "If a woman is mentally defective...she should be able to have the pregnancy terminated." March 2, 1982, p. 1991. She insisted that abortion should be allowed for "any woman who is mentally defective and not only those who are permanently defective." p. 1992. She moved to change "permanent" damage to mental health, in the Act, to "serious". pp1991-94. Mrs. Suzman also argued strongly that abortion should be allowed in any case of "failed sterilization," where "a woman had fallen pregnant despite having had a sterilization." p. 1989.

Mrs. Suzman said, "I would like to see abortion on request, though not on demand." The Citizen, Mar. 9, 1982. As she stated in Parliament, "we should not talk about 'abortion on demand' because the right terminology is 'abortion on request' when one discusses the whole idea of liberalizing abortion laws." May 20, 1985, p.5811.

To Mrs. Suzman, abortion is a back-up family planning technique. She said that "most contraceptive methods fall short of providing complete protection against unwanted pregnancy... [O]ne is not asking for legalized abortion, instead of family planning. It is in addition to family planning, because family planning often fails...The male chauvinists...are going to be thwarted in so far as they insist that children under the age of 16- I think that this is incredible—should be forced to have illegitimate children and that middle-aged women over the age of 40, who already have large families and do not want any more children because the family is large and the income small, should keep unwanted offspring." March 2, 1982, pp. 1992-93.

Mrs. Suzman supported abortion as a population control device. "I believe," she said, "that there is no way in which we are going to achieve the ideal 2.1-child family...unless [we] liberalize our abortion laws." May 20, 1985, p. 5814. She emphasized that "legalizing abortions for girls under the age of 16...would be a vital step in reducing population growth...since postponement of the first pregnancy is an essential factor in achieving this objective," May 20, 1985, pp. 5812-13.

Abortion, of course, is not "postponement" of a pregnancy. It is the termination of that pregnancy by the murder of the unborn child. As Pope John Paul II said in his new encyclical, Evangelium Vitae, "The moral gravity of procured abortion is apparent in all its truth if we recognize that we are dealing with murder." No. 58. Mrs. Suzman, by contrast, said in 1992: "I have strong views on abortion laws and would have them liberalized so as to put them in line with the pro-choice supporters. In other words, I would allow a woman to have an abortion without penalty of the law and would not make this dependent on the ...provisos...in the ...Act of 1975," The Star, Aug. 16, 1992.

'Abstion, of course, in not "postponement" of pregnancy. It is the termination of that pregnancy by the murder of the unborn child.'

Notre Dame president Father Edward A. Malloy, C.S.C., called Mrs. Suzman a "freedom fighter," and said her "political career has been driven by the hunger and thirst for justice which the Beatitudes celebrate." However, Mrs. Suzman fought not only for freedom from the violence of apartheid but also for the freedom to inflict the ultimate violence on the most innocent and helpless victims of all. Perhaps only in today's Notre Dame could such a record be honored as exemplifying the hunger and thirst for justice commended by Christ in the Beatitudes.

The Award to Mrs. Suzman confirms that the operative official religion of this "Catholic" university is political correctness. On apartheid, the moral imperatives and political correctness coincide. But it is difficult to imagine any position more politically incorrect than uncompromising opposition to abortion. If our striving-to-be-accepted leaders refused to honor as a humanitarian anyone who advocates the legalized execution of the pre-born, it would cost them political correctness points among the movers and shakers in academia, the media, foundations and government. Or maybe our leaders just don't see the pro-life issue as a big deal. The Vicar of Christ, of course, sees it differently: "[W]e are facing an enormous and dramatic clash between good and evil, death and life, the 'culture of death' and the 'culture of life.' We find ourselves not only 'faced with' but necessarily 'in the midst of this conflict: we are all involved and we all share in it with the responsibility of choosing to be unconditionally pro-life." Evangelium Vitae, (No. 28) (Emphasis in original).

On a final note, we should keep this Award in context. Since the bestowal of the 1992 Laetare Medal on the egregiously pro-abortion Senator Daniel P. Moynihan, Notre Dame honors don't mean that much anyway. And maybe we should be relieved that the Award went to Mrs. Suzman. Given the evident mindset of our leaders it could have been Teddy Kennedy. Or Hillary.

Professor Rice is on the Law School Faculty. His column appears every other Monday.

women and children into police vans is a violence...[A]ll the powers that circumvent the normal civil liberties are a violence. Banning, house arrests, detention without trial, banishment are all a violence." Very true. But wait a minute. So is execution of the innocent pre-born, "a violence."

The parliamentary record, which I have read, confirms that Mrs. Suzman, over more than two decades, was a relentless advocate of permissive abortion. Incidentally, as of this writing, neither the Catholic Bishops Conference of South Africa, nor any individual bishop or cleric in authority, has publicly commented on the Award to Mrs. Suzman.

The Abortion and Sterilization Act of 1975 first permitted abortion in South Africa. Mrs. Suzman attacked it as too restrictive and repeatedly sought to liberalize it. In the debate on the 1975 Act, she said, "I was the first member to raise the whole question of the need for abortion reform in this House. I did so by way of questions I put in 1968 and 1969. I also raised it...in 1971 [and in]

Jimmy Kilmartin (David Caruso) has abandoned a life of car thievery for a traditional life with his wife and young daughter. His cousin and ex-buddy in crime, Ronnie, storms into his house one night pleading for help: if Jimmy doesn't help him with job right now he'll suffer severe injury at the hands of the nefarious and redundant Little Junior (Nicolas Cage). The job gets busted, a cop gets shot, and Jimmy lands in jail. From the cooler, he learns that Ronnie has betrayed him and he sets out to get his revenge and obtain freedom by cooperating with the authorities and hatching a plan that will eliminate Ronnie and indict Little Junior.

Daddy: It's that time again. Time for those at home to buckle down and soak in the wit and the wisdom that gives them what they need to keep on keeping on. As in the past, Daddy serves as the medium for this chivalrous exchange, time after time pouring pure edification through an Observer funnel directly into your minds and your consciousness. Today we examine "Kiss of Death," a pleasant waste of time that combines the elements of humor and violence that are sure to please one and all.

"Kiss of Death" begins its cinematic journey where so many other movies have left off. The reformed crook is sucked right back into the fetid cesspool of organized crime by his longstanding attachments and perceived responsibilities. The foolproof plan inevitably and predictably fails; and the sentimental hero is left responsible for the actions of which he is essentially innocent. The poor sap (David Caruso) goes to jail and is forced to work undercover for the legal powers that be. This situation once again places the quintessential mob movie Christ figure (insert pertinent character name here) in a dilemma that risks his safety as well as that of his family. The hard luck kid eventually outsmarts everybody and the movie ends with blase reunions and sickening Disney-esque overtures. Daddy's Hollywood Tip of the Day: Writers, for the love of all things sacred, come up with a new plot!

Those at home might be wondering why I said that I liked this movie. The answer is simple: Daddy can't get enough of Nicolas Cage! Czar Nicolas is undeniably one of Hollywood's best young actors; a theatrical monolith whose skills far supersede the paltry and meager talents of hacks like Cruise and Reeves. The performances of Cage and Samuel Jackson (Calvin) make "Kiss of Death" a film worth seeing because of their screen presence alone. My only casting complaint is the selection of Helen Hunt to play Caruso's wife. If all of Paul Reiser's co-stars are to eventually rise up to play with the big dogs I'd suggest we all get ready to skip town when the cast of "My Two Dads" get their breaks.

From a stylistic standpoint, "Kiss of Death" is certainly an aesthetic pleasure. Subtle angles and clever framing bring the final print to life when it is witnessed through the modicum of the big screen. The audience members at times feel as though they are actually walking along the same putrid and festering Bronx streets (as if there is any other kind of street in the "Big Crapple") pounded by David Caruso. Jackson and Cage deftly fill up the remaining space vacated by what is, at times, inspiring scenery and thus make this movie worth your greenbacks.

Fatman: Aaaaaahhhh, the classic New York underworld film. Seedy gangsters, sleazy hang out joints, and scheming plans to make a quick buck are usually accompanied by stylish camera work and snappy dialogue in this near genre of films. "Kiss of Death" strives to bring about yet another crime film in the spirit of Martin Scorsese and Abel Ferrara. With a strong cast that includes David Caruso, Samuel L. Jackson, and one of Fatman's favorite actors, Nicolas Cage, the film strives to overcome a rather unoriginal story comprised of slacking dialogue through the strong presence of its cast.

The plot line of "Kiss of Death" slags with unoriginality. The sleazy D.A., a slick, expensively clad bastard who prostitutes himself for whatever can advance his career, is hardly a new invention. One need only watch F. Lee Bailey and company on CNN to catch the essence of this sort of man. The crazy/quirky villain, Little Junior, runs guns, steals cars, and dabbles in drugs. All of this has been done before in better scripted films, but the actors in "Kiss of Death" don't allow this familiarity to choke their roles. Nothing excellent comes of the film, but an enjoyable revisitation of the New York underworld through a slightly different angle is a lot better than most things in life. Really, the only thing the Fatman would rather do than watch a gangster film would be to challenge literary and physical big boy J. Ozersky to an all out, all you can eat, pig fest. I do this not for the fame, fortune, and cosmic laudations that I would receive when I vanquished my foe, but rather I know that he would be unable to talk during the contest and for a few brief, glorious hours, the world could be at peace.

The Fatman must express his pleasure with David Caruso. Not expecting a strong performance from this somewhat portly man, I was surprised by his demeanor on stage. Nicolas Cage, as always, provided a good dose of his idiosyncratic style. He still has the charisma he had when he donned panty hose over his face and robbed a convenience store of its cash and diapers in "Raising Arizona". In "Kiss of Death", he looks a lot larger than he used to be. Maybe he has been partaking of the muscle wine that his uncle Francis Ford Coppola has been fermenting and selling across America.

Generally, "Kiss of Death" is a good movie; it's nothing spectacular and it sags in many places. But the movie can be pretty exciting, especially two scenes where Caruso's cousin Ronnie is literally beaten to death by Nicolas Cage or when Caruso races to remove a wire placed on him. Its no "Pulp Fiction" or "Goodfellas", but it certainly is not as bad as "Billy Bathgate" or, the salty dog of all gangster films, "Mobsters."

Fat Man and Daddy are John Zack and Scott Bozik. Their movie reviews appear every Monday.

"Kiss of Death" is David Caruso's (right) first film since leaving the cop show "NYPD Blue."

■ SAINT MARY'S TENNIS

Persistence paces victory

By CAROLINE BLUM
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

Through a faithful attitude and the refusal to give up, the Saint Mary's tennis team continues to remain dominant in their matches. The team has had to make several adjustments in their lineup thus far, but has yet to show signs of surrender. Thursday the team was victorious against Saint Joseph's (5-4) in an unexpected win.

Saint Joseph's is a Division II team, with a fifth-ranked number one singles player, making the match a big win for the Belles.

"Saint Joseph's was a huge win for us. They killed us in the fall, and we've lost a lot of players since then. Luckily, everyone gave 100% and we forgot about the fall," said senior and #1 doubles player Robin Hrycko.

The team's coach Katie Cromer attributed the team's success especially to the performances of sophomore Anne Underwood and freshman Jen Brahler.

On Saturday, the Belles played an effort-driven match against Weaton. Although the team fell to Weaton 6-3, the match was extremely close with several three setters. Coach Kromer expressed the reason for the team's loss not as caused by faults of the players, but rather the team's fatigue.

"Almost every match went in three sets- singles and doubles. Anne Underwood won her doubles match in three sets, and then began her singles match," said Kromer. "By the time she got to the third set in singles, she must have been incredibly tired."

The team won two of their three-setters, but lost three as well. Sophomore Kate Kozacik beat a highly ranked player in the Midwest in a three-setter, with scores of 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

"The match could have gone either way. Unfortunately, it didn't go ours," said Kromer.

On Tuesday, the Belles will battle Kalamazoo.

"Kalamazoo has always been strong," said Hrycko. "This year their team is young, but they take their tennis very seriously. Tuesday will be a tough match for us, but I don't think that a victory is out of our reach if we go in there with a positive attitude."

Knicks hands Magic seventh straight loss

By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press

NEW YORK

New York hit 12 3-pointers, including four in a row by Hubert Davis in the fourth quarter, as the Knicks beat Orlando 113-99 Sunday, sending the Magic into the playoffs with a seven-game road losing streak.

With starters Patrick Ewing and Derek Harper sitting out a second straight game for New York, the Knicks turned to their outside game, stretching a six-point lead to 98-85 with 8:06 left when Davis hit four treys in a 2:15 span.

John Starks had five 3-pointers and 26 points, and Charles Smith scored a season-high 29 as the Knicks stayed in command the rest of the way.

Shaquille O'Neal was in foul trouble in the second half, so the Magic went to the perimeter, too. Dennis Scott hit five 3-pointers, scoring a season-high 38.

Even though the game meant nothing in the standings, the Magic was bent on showing it could win on the road after six consecutive losses. Instead, Orlando lost for the 16th time in 20 road games and finished the regular season 18-23 away from Orlando Arena, where the Magic lost only twice.

■ DEATH OF HOWARD COSELL

Sportscasting legend dies at the age of 77

By JOHN NELSON
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Howard Cosell, whose caustic "tell it like it is" personality made him the most celebrated sportscaster ever and turned "Monday Night Football" into a national institution, died Sunday. He was 77.

Cosell, who underwent cancer surgery in 1991, died at 4 a.m. EDT at NYU's Hospital for Joint Diseases, his grandson Justin Cohane said.

Cohane said Cosell died of a heart embolism after a long illness.

He was the strident, colorful voice of ABC radio and television from 1953 to 1992. It was a period of phenomenal growth and change in America's pastimes, spurred by television's cascading millions and increased greed among both athletes and promoters.

"Howard Cosell was one of the most original people ever to appear on American television," said ABC News president Rooney Arledge, who was head of ABC Sports during Cosell's heyday. "He became a giant by the simple act of telling the truth in an industry that was not used to hearing it and considered it revolutionary."

Cosell was one of the first sportscasters to acknowledge Muhammad Ali by his new name after he changed it from Cassius Clay and stood up for Ali when the heavyweight champion refused to enter military service during the Vietnam War and was stripped of his title.

"Howard Cosell was a good man and he lived a good life," Ali said. "I have been interviewed by many people, but I enjoyed interviews with Howard the best. We always put on a good show. I hope to meet him one day in the hereafter. I can hear Howard now saying, 'Muhammad, you're not the man you used to be.' I pray that he is in God's hands. I will miss him."

Cosell's acid tongue generated bitter feuds with not only the print media but also contemporaries in broadcasting. Few, high or low, escaped his often bitter sarcasm, including the institutions on whom his fame was based, boxing and the NFL.

"I never sacrificed truth in the name of friendship," he insisted.

But he could exhibit stubborn loyalty when his sense of right and wrong was outraged.

Cosell was vilified by many when he defended Ali, but the boxer went on to beat the government in the courts, reclaim his crown and become one of the most popular champions in history. Cosell held firm and emerged as an even more celebrated figure.

"It was a fight Ali had to make. He made it and won," Cosell said. "People said we, Ali and I, played off each other. That's partially true."

■ SAINT MARY'S TRACK

Belles garner fourth place finish at Earlham

By CAROLINE BLUM
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The good keeps on getting better. Saint Mary's has never seen such a good team get better as it has seen with its track team so far this season. Saturday, the Belles finished in fourth place at the Earlham Invitational.

The team scored 48 points, which was even better than Coach Larry Szczechowski had dreamed of.

"I was warned by several other area coaches that the meet was going to be very competitive. The meet was competitive, but I was happy that we were still able to dominate," said Szczechowski.

Among their successes were two first place finishes, one from sophomore Erin Mellifont and the other from sophomore Paula Kivinen. Mellifont earned her first place for her 2:30.1 finish in the 800M, while Kivinen earned hers for her 4"10' high jump.

"I was happy with my place in the high jump, but I wasn't proud of the distance. The conditions at Earlham were horrible, and I think that really hindered my jump, my feet were caught in the mud. But I figure they hindered everyone's jumps," said Kivinen.

As always, the Belles finished well in their relays. The 4x400M relay qualified for second place with their time of 4:40.1. The race involved Erin Mellifont, Paula Kivinen, freshman Lori Mrowka, and sophomore Desiree Leak. Kivinen began her participation in the relay only a week prior, but will continue to run in the spot for the rest of the season due to its great success.

"Our relay has been working really hard lately. Our hand-offs have gone really well, and we are extremely excited about next week's race," said Leak.

The 4x100M relay also proved successful with their fourth place finish. Their time was 54.7, which was set by junior Jill Jusick, sophomore Kristin Donahue, sophomore Courtenay Powers, and senior JoAnn Weed.

Sophomore Keary Sullivan ran the 5000M for the first time this season, and was rewarded for her efforts with a third place. Sullivan ran the 5000M in only 23 minutes and 29 seconds.

A personal record was set by Desiree Leak in her 68.7 finish in the 400M which was good enough for a fifth place in the event.

"The race was a really good feeling. I have been working to get my time down all season, and Saturday I really felt like I had reached my goal. I hoping to run around a 67 at Elmhurst," said Leak.

Freshman Beth Phelan also was crucial to the team's success with her fourth place finish in the 800M and her fifth place finish in the 1500M. In addition to her participation in the success of the 4x400M relay, Lori Mrowka grabbed a fifth place in the 400M hurdles.

Draft

the fourth round with the 22th pick.

Gibson will face a challenge just to make the club, as the Steel Curtain boasts a fairly deep front seven. His lack of size may hurt, but the Steelers obviously liked what they saw.

The same must be said of the Cleveland Browns regarding receiver Mike Miller. The troubled Miller, who was suspended for the latter half of his senior season, was chosen with the 13th pick of the 5th round.

Due to his checkered background and diminutive size, the speedy Miller was often overlooked in draft circles. Rated as just the 50th best receiver in one list, Miller's potential as a return man was his selling point. Cleveland may have found themselves a poor man's Eric Metcalf if Miller can keep himself out of trouble.

The other pleasant surprise had to be the Saints seventh round selection of Travis Davis.

Apparently a star at the combines, Davis's physical tools were his upside. Much in the vein of Willie Clark, Davis may be able to stick as a special teams cover man.

Other potential picks weren't as fortunate. Tight end Oscar McBride fell victim to an unusually deep crop of tight ends. From big names like Kyle Brady to lesser names like Tony Cline, this class was the strongest in years.

McBride, though, should be able to make someone's roster as a run-block specialist.

UMass' last minute surge sparked by ball-handling

By DAVE TREACY
Sports Writer

It was a game that Massachusetts needed to win. Opportunities were dwindling, and the game clock fell to under five minutes to play. The Minutemen were down 9-7 on their home field with a potential NCAA birth up for grabs.

And they won.

In what may have been the most disappointing game of the year for the Irish, the ball-handling of the UMass offense snatched victory from the jaws of defeat at the hands of Notre Dame.

"Obviously, this was a disappointing game. We had quite a few opportunities, and if we converted on one of them, we could have won the game," said attackman Randy Colley.

Instead it was UMass who converted on scoring opportunities. The Minutemen fired in three consecutive goals in the fourth quarter, with the last coming with :23 seconds left in the game.

It was a see-saw battle throughout. Colley opened up the scoring midway through the first quarter on an assist from defenseman Mike Iorio, and added a second goal a minute later. UMass converted on the next three goals of the period, two of which came from the stick of Brendan Glass.

"Glass had a big day, and he's a good player," Colley said. "He finished his opportunities."

Colley opened up the second quarter with another unassisted goal to tie the score. After a goal by UMass, the Irish again knotted the game, with Brian Gilfillan's score assisted by Will Sutton. Glass scored the next two for the Minutemen, who took a 6-4 lead into halftime.

The Irish came out of the break in a big way, scoring four consecutive goals in the opening ten minutes. The offense seemed to be coming back to the form of the two previous games, with several members of the squad getting involved in the scoring.

Early in the half, Jason Pett narrowed the margin on Sutton's second assist of the game, which was followed by Tim Kearney's goal, assisted by Mark Pasquale, less than a minute later.

Sutton converted next on Kevin Mahoney's dish, and Kearney continued the streak with his second goal of the period off another assist by Sutton. UMass then snapped the streak on Brendan Glass' fifth goal of the afternoon. Glass' goal closed out the third with Notre Dame leading 8-7.

Sutton scored Notre Dame's last goal four minutes into the final period from a Colley assist. Sutton finished with five points on the afternoon, and Colley ended with four.

And then the vaunted Minutemen offense came back.

Glass added his sixth goal with less than five minutes to play in the game. His seventh goal, which tied the score, came with 1:37 left in the game.

Before the teams could reach an overtime period, UMass' Henry Stanziale put a shot past Irish keeper Alex Cade with :23 seconds left to play. The Irish couldn't come back.

The Observer / Angela Addington

In a game that was expected to feature a powerful offense and a dominant defense, UMass found a way to win. The Irish defense, the squad's mainstay all season, dissipated in the final five minutes. The ball-movement capabilities of the Massachusetts squad, the focus of the Irish defense all week, overcame the Irish in their zone to take the game.

"They executed well. All day they seemed to be in the right place at the right time," Colley explained.

The loss, while it may knock the Irish down a few spots in the polls, does not really affect their chances for a tournament berth. The next two games they play are imperative, however, coming against two Great Western Lacrosse League foes.

The Irish play at Michigan State this Saturday, and finish off their regular season at Ohio State on May 6th. The winner of the GWLL automatically receives an NCAA bid. The Irish have received this bid for the last three years, and need to do so again to if they hope to reach the tournament.

We're Building a Solid Foundation For Tomorrow's Health Professionals.

Introducing Masters Programs in Physical Therapy and Occupational Therapy.

At Midwestern University, we're building for the future by adding two new masters programs. Programs that provide future Physical and Occupational Therapists with a superior classroom experience as well as a unique opportunity to interact with students from other health professional disciplines. The result is a solid, well-rounded educational foundation that launches our students into successful, rewarding careers in the health professions.

In June, Midwestern will begin classes for full-time masters programs in Physical Therapy and Occupational Therapy. Preparing students with the skills necessary to perform patient screening, evaluation, education, and treatment. Applications are still being accepted for the charter classes of both programs.

At Midwestern, we emphasize a cooperative learning environment where students actively help one another succeed in and out of the classroom. Our distinguished faculty is dedicated to teaching and mentoring—always available for one-on-one guidance and counseling. It's this supportive, student-centered environment that our students find most helpful for achieving an outstanding health education.

For more information about the new Physical Therapy and Occupational Therapy Programs, or our programs in Osteopathic Medicine, Pharmacy, and Physician Assistant Studies, call Midwestern's Office of Admissions at (800) 458-6253 or write to:

sidered.

My team, Oranjeboom (which for the uncultured is a Dutch beer, and if I may take the liberty, a mascot that inspires more devotion than the inane television show that was our competition's namesake), is a group of ultra-competitive, fairly skilled basketball players. We thought we could do some damage this year, given a decent draw. Playing Models INC. is not a decent draw.

Still, hope springs eternal, and we entered the contest hoping to pull off one of those legendary Bookstore upsets, to win one for frustrated athletes all over campus.

We discovered that it's a different game that is played by the elite Bookstore seeds. We played hard, we were competitive, and we never came close to winning.

My lasting memory from the game is trying to rebound and looking up to see dozens of arms playing volleyball above the rim. None of those arms belonged to my teammates.

Since you can't beat them that way, the only option is to foul them. Certainly a strategy adopted by many undermanned Bookstore teams over the years, but never one that endears you to your opponents.

"You guys are the biggest bunch of cheaters I've ever played against," stated varsity basketball player Jason Williams after the game.

Actually, to be technical, fouling is strategy, not cheating. Mr. Williams will be a better Bookstore player (and after lighting us up for 12, he doesn't have far to go) when he realizes that this isn't Division I. We weren't fouling out of malice, we were just too slow to play better defense, so reverted to the playground variety.

What is the way to compete with a top team? We tried numerous strategies, but after the fouling approach failed, not much else was going to help.

There was the attempt at psychological warfare. We actually took this one and ran with it, getting a hold of Williams' varsity jersey. We unveiled it at a strategic moment, hoping that he would be devastated, or amused, or something, anything.

Instead, our efforts were only rewarded by a shake of the head. The man who gave us a running commentary on his performance throughout the game couldn't muster a response at the best moment. Perhaps the most tragic part of the game. At least the crowd was appreciative.

The crowd, in fact, was another potential weapon to fall back on. When you play a seed, no matter who you are, you draw a crowd, and one that is partisan to the underdog.

Models was expected to score, early and often. When we managed a bucket, a steal, a rebound, or even not to get dunked on or injured, it was greeted with a roar of approval.

The last resort, of course, was trash talking. Even the most mild-mannered players feel compelled to talk smack against better opponents, especially varsity athletes.

However, it seems that being able to talk the game is requisite among the best teams, and Models could boast both Williams and football player Tracy Graham, a duo who were as unstoppable with their mouths as they were with their jumpshots.

A sample. After telling us that we had been fouling him every possession, Williams then exclaimed, "Me...you've got to come out and guard me," after burying a jumper over my outstretched arm. Sort of a damned-if-you-do, damned-if-you-don't situation.

The best we could muster in reply was a meager, "Why are you guys calling everything?" The poor man's version.

In the end, talent prevailed, as it should. There are only so many times that people can jump over you before you realize that you are overmatched. Models is one of the few teams in contention to win it all, and they proved it against us.

Still, the experience of playing a top seed will remain one of my best Bookstore memories. The underdog is an enjoyable, if often fruitless, role to play. Next year, though, I could live with a third round game against 60" of Vertical.

Celebrate a friend's birthday with a very special Observer ad.

against Talk to Me After Class in front of a large crowd. NBT II captured the win 21-16 behind Brad Fish and Joe Haigh's contributions.

"It was a fun game to play," said NBT II's Haigh. "It had the feel of a thirty two or even a sixteen game because they had some great players that created a lot of good matchups."

Brian Hamilton, playing in the absence of Thomas Knight, caused problems inside for NBT II, while Lee Becton and Matt Jennings hassled Haigh and point guard Ton Rinehart all night.

"The upsets illustrate how many good teams there are in this tournament," added Haigh. "A lot of teams could have been seeded."

Sluggers finish sluggishly after blowout of UIC

By MEGAN McGRATH
Sports Writer

In the sports world, you're remembered for what you did in your last game.

This being true, the Notre Dame baseball team's 6-4 extra-innings loss to Illinois-Chicago in their last weekend game made the five wins the Irish earned this weekend seem a little less significant.

The Irish swept Indianapolis Friday, edging the Greyhounds 4-3 and 3-2. Saturday they claimed another twin bill victory, handling UIC 6-0 and 10-3, and in the first game Sunday Notre Dame ran their winning streak to 11 games, crushing the Flames 11-0.

But for the fourth time this season, the Irish responded to a blow-out win with a let-down.

The last time Notre Dame (31-13, 9-2) lost was April 12 at Purdue. The day before they pounded Illinois 15-4. April 7 the Irish followed a 17-8 thrashing of Bowling Green with a 10-6 loss to Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

"We have to learn that each game is a new game, and has nothing to do with the game before," head coach Paul Mainieri said. "We need to learn not to take things for granted."

But after dominating the first three games of the MCC series so thoroughly, one could understand why the Irish could overlook the Flames.

Saturday sophomore Gregg Henebry keyed the Irish effort, tossing a complete game shut-out. He allowed three hits and struck out six.

"I was changing speeds a lot and keeping their hitters off-balance," Henebry (3-1) said.

Henebry received offensive support from Ryan Topham and George Restovich, who blasted home runs for the Irish. Randall Brooks went 2-4 and drove in two runs.

In game two, the pitching staff again doused the Flames. Sophomore Wally Widelski earned a win in his first start, lasting six innings and allowing four hits and no earned runs.

Widelski was buoyed by a six-run explosion in the third, started by Restovich's second long-ball of the day. The Irish then loaded the bases and Craig DeSensi laced a two-run single. A walk to Scott Sollmann reloaded the bags for sophomore Mike Amrhein, who blasted a three-run single.

Rowan Richards hit his fourth homer of the year in the fourth.

Freshman Dan Stavisky continued the Notre Dame pitching staff's success on Sunday. Stavisky went the distance in a seven-inning affair, shutting out the Flames on just four hits.

"I was able to throw a curve for a lot of first-pitch strikes," the freshman said. "Later I could get my fastball in on their hands. Stavisky received tremendous defense from centerfielder Richards. With two outs in the third, Stavisky allowed two hits to put runners at second and third. A diving catch by Richards ended the inning, and Stavisky would not allow a hit the rest of the way.

"Ro made a big play and from that point on I had a lot of confidence," Stavisky said. "Our defense has been playing great and the guys up the middle are playing with a lot of confidence. It makes pitching so much easier."

On Sunday the big blows came in the second for the Irish, as Brooks laced a triple and Craig DeSensi slammed a homer in a four running inning. Ryan Topham had a three-run double in the fourth and another RBI two-bagger in the sixth to give him four RBI for the game.

In the last game, the pitching staff was less than solid.

Starter Larry Mohs lasted just two innings, allowing three runs on three hits. Relievers Justin Gleichowski and Mike Balicki allowed no runs in their five innings of work, and the Irish were able to come back on the Flames.

Trailing 3-2 in the bottom of the seventh, Brooks reached on a double and scored on a Sollmann double. Topham singled home Sollmann to give Notre Dame a 4-3 lead.

But reliever Tim Kraus could not protect the lead, allowing the tying run to score in the top of the eighth. Normally the ace of the Irish staff with a 3-0 record, three saves and an ERA under two, Kraus walked the first two batters in faced in the tenth. Dan Darrah rapped a single to load the bases with no outs.

The Flames took the lead when Bill Overbeck grounded into a double-play, scoring Jody Brown. John Kravarick singled to score Carmen Carcone for the final margin.

"We didn't pitch very well in the second game," Mainieri said. "Larry Mohs struggled and Kraus didn't get the job done for us."

■ SOFTBALL

Irish battle past injuries in sweeping twin bills

BY NEIL ZENDER
Sports Writer

There was no question that the Notre Dame softball team was hurting last weekend. But fortunately for the Irish, it was the other team that got hurt as No. 21 ranked Notre Dame improved its record to 31-13 (11-2 in the MCC) by steamrolling past LaSalle and Cleveland State in a pair of doubleheaders.

The Irish hammered LaSalle in two Friday games, 8-0 and 3-0 respectively, while topping MCC-leading Cleveland State 2-0 and 10-4 on Saturday.

Before Friday's games, Notre Dame faced a lot of questions about its pitching. Both starting hurlers, Terri Kobata and Joy Battersby were hurting. Battersby was fighting an ailing back while Kobata had a troublesome hip. However, when the games started on Friday these injuries were not apparent.

Kobata was her usual deadly self against LaSalle. She struck out eleven batters over five innings and allowed only three hits.

Leading 4-0 going into the sixth, the Irish finished off the Explorers early by ripping out four more runs, and invoking the mercy rule earning themselves an 8-0 win. Jennifer Giampaolo was 3 for 3 and scored three runs and Sara Hayes was 3-3 with 2 RBIs and a pair of doubles.

With Joy Battersby on the mound, Notre Dame won the second game against LaSalle as well, 3-0.

Battersby threw a dandy, allowing only three hits in five innings of work. Freshman Kelly Nichols came onto pitch the last two innings, earning her sixth save of the season, setting a Notre Dame team record.

The Irish opened the scoring with a run in the third. Offensive sparkplug Katie Marten got things going with a two-out single to left. She stole second and scored on a Giampaolo single.

Notre Dame improved on their 1-0 in the fifth inning. Michelle Cline scored on Jenna Knudson's triple and Knudson was driven in by Katie Marten's single up the middle.

MCC leading Cleveland State provided a lot more opposition on Sunday.

Notre Dame nipped the Vikings 2-0 in the first contest.

Kobata was even more dominating than the day before. She took a no-hit bid all the way to the last batter, until it was broken up by Shannon Johnson's bloop single in the top of the seventh. Still, there's not a lot of fault you can find in a one-hit, 12 strikeout complete game performance from a pitcher battling an ornery hip.

"Terri threw well in game one," Coach Liz Miller said. "The weather was better than anticipated. With the sun out, it helped her hip. When it's cold then it tightens up."

In the Notre Dame fourth, Sara Hayes led off with a triple and scored on Meghan Murray's sacrifice fly, giving the Irish their 2-0 victory.

The second bill of the doubleheader required an extra effort and some extra innings.

In the fifth inning, the Irish appeared to pull away from a 1-1 tie, taking a two run lead on RBI singles by Giampaolo and Elizabeth Perkins. Kelly Nichols was then brought in to relieve Battersby, whose back was acting up.

Another Notre Dame run in the sixth gave them a 4-1 lead.

However, the Irish let the lead slip away when Nichols was tagged for three runs in the bottom of the inning. They would have scored more if Giampaolo hadn't ended the inning with a diving catch in centerfield.

"We shot ourselves in the foot with baserunning and mental errors," Miller said. "Those are costly mental mistakes. I'm concerned with the team. We do that a lot. It's the biggest weakness on our team. We're not smart baserunners. We don't stay focused and intense. When things happen we don't react to them. We have to get better."

Notre Dame brought Kobata out of the bullpen to relieve Nichols, and she shut down Cleveland State, firing three shutout innings.

After failing to convert on scoring opportunities in the seventh and eighth innings, the Irish finally broke the 4-4 stalemate in the ninth by exploding for six runs on five hits. The highlight was Katie Marten's inside the park home run that scored Liz Goetz.

"She's been ripping the cover off the ball," Miller said of Marten. "Because of her speed she can turn a routine ground ball into a hit. You'd look at her and think she isn't fast. She's been on base for us like you want your lead off batter to be."

Kobata bore down in the bottom of the inning and preserved the 10-4 victory. It was her second victory of the day, improving her record to 16-2.

Giampaolo was 5-6 with three runs scored. Katie Marten went 6-8 on the day.

■ NFL DRAFT

Topsy-Turvy

Irish prospects experience highs and lows in draft

By TIM SHERMAN
Associate Sports Editor

The NFL Draft, usually a market that is cornered by Notre Dame seniors, has always been known for its slips, surprises, and shocks.

For the Irish class of 1995, the traditional topsy-turvy nature of the annual New York football fest was very much in effect. Those projected in the first round fell faster than 1994's national championships hopes, while the forgotten found their way onto an expanded draft board.

Easily the biggest story for Notre Dame followers to come out of the Big Apple was the descent of cornerback Bobby Taylor from, what many projected, a top twelve pick all the way down to the 50th selection (18th pick of the 2nd round by Philadelphia). The junior who declared himself eligible for the draft after a less-than stellar season gambled that his athletic ability would compensate for his subpar tackling and intensity. He lost.

"Bobby Taylor was a tween-er," said ESPN's Joe Theisman.

"All the personnel people I talked to said he wasn't quick enough to be a corner. He is big, but a little stiff in the hips. Then again, you say, 'how 'bout a safety?' At 6-foot-2, he wasn't quite tough enough."

The other potential first-round pick for the Irish was fullback Ray Zellars. An injury-plagued senior campaign caught up with Zellars though, as he wasn't grabbed until pick 44 by New Orleans.

This was the first time since 1991 that the Irish have failed to produce a first round selection.

Teams may regret that fact with Zellars.

"Zellars could be a steal at pick 44," Theisman appraised.

The inability to play at full-speed was also the downfall of tailback Lee Becton. The shifty Becton, who sparkled as a junior but missed substantial action this season, went undrafted and will be looking to latch on with somebody as a free agent.

Their were positives for more than a few graduating Irish.

Defensive lineman Oliver Gibson, who finally began to realize his vast potential this season, showed something to the Pittsburgh Steelers. The AFC finalist selected Gibson in Former Irish cornerback Bobby Taylor experienced a disappointing draft as he dropped all the way down to the 50th selection after foregoing his last season of eligibility.

■ BOOKSTORE BASKETBALL

Three seeds fall as early pressure mounts

By DOMINIC AMOROSA
Sports Writer

In Bookstore Basketball, ranked teams carry a stigma and a little extra pressure to win early games. Students get fired up to play against stiff competition and hope to pull off the occasional upset. When basketball action ended at 11:00 PM Sunday night, three ranked teams had fallen, including two teams that started the tournament among the top sixteen.

Even the top seeds struggled against a strong field of competitors as upstart teams created problems up and down the random draw.

Your Mamma's knocked off no. 15 seed Duh Plimpton's 24-22 after falling behind 11-5 at halftime. Chris Carrigan's 12 points fueled the upset.

"They hit a lot of good shots and managed to hang around long enough to beat us," said Duh Plimpton captain Todd Leahy. "They were inspired and we let down a little."

"Teams step up to play against the seeded teams," continued Leahy. "If a team stays close, the seed becomes less significant and anything can happen."

"We've played against seeds in the past and we were not intimidated," explained Your Mamma's Joe Zirnhelt. "They were good, but we stepped up our defense and got hot late in the game."

No. 14 Joey Jo Junior Shabadoo found out what can happen to a returning sweet 16 teams in a tough draw when they were beaten 22-20 on Saturday by Little Brown Shoe.

Brown Shoe, captained by Dominic Carrerra, could do well in the tournament according to Joey Jo's Pat Carlevato. "They were an excellent team," Carlevato said. "It was exciting to get a good seed, but it's disappointing to think that maybe we could have competed a little longer in the tournament."

In the second sixteen, Desire crushed no. 26 Clockwork Orange 21-9 as Clockwork played without three regular players. Ryan Walker led a balanced Desire attack from his point guard position.

As the weekend drew to a close on Sunday night, No. 3 seed NBT II went head to head
