Security ups patrols after three campus attacks

By LIZ FORAN
Editor-in-Chief

An outbreak of assaults on campus over the past weekend has prompted warnings from Notre Dame Security about safety on campus, according to Chuck Hurley, assistant director of Notre Dame Security.

Hurley warned students to be cautious when walking on campus at night and to report any suspicious persons or activities to Security immediately.

Three incidents involving four on-campus students and an outside vendor led to three of the victims being treated for minor injuries.

At 2:50 a.m. Friday, a Keenan Hall resident and a Morrissey Hall resident were walking from the area of East Gate towards Keenan Hall. A group of eight or nine men near the Stepan Courts began taunting them with derogatory remarks about Notre Dame, Hurley said.

The group followed the students and surrounded them near North Dining Hall, where one of the students was hit twice from behind in the head with a bottle. The other was knocked to the ground and kicked in the ribs, Hurley said. The suspects then ran away.

Only two suspects were described, one being a Hispanic male, 5'8", 180 lbs. and about 17-18-years-old, with dark hair and no facial hair. The other was a white male, 5'11", 175 lbs., also 17-18-years-old, with short brown hair and a "scraggly" goatee and a small silver looped earring in his left ear.

The victims said they thought the suspects had been playing basketball before the incident, Hurley added.

In another incident, two Stanford Hall residents were standing outside of LaFortune Student Center at about 12:17 a.m. Saturday.

They asked two passers-by for a "couple of extra quarters," according to Hurley. An argument then ensued, and one of the suspects knocked one of the students to the ground.

The student suffered bleeding from the nose and had a large cut on the right side of his head, Hurley said. The student was transported to St. Joseph Medical Center, where he was treated and released.

The suspect was described as a white male, 6'2" with a muscular build, short black hair, wearing a white t-shirt. The victim said he thought the suspect may have been a student.

An outside vendor was also attacked early Sunday morning as he was delivering newspapers around the campus. The vendor was attacked by a man who was trying to steal his bicycle, Hurley said.

Security advises O-C students

By BRAD PRENDERGAST

To complement its warning regarding on-campus safety, Notre Dame Security is advising off-campus students to exercise caution while traveling around South Bend.

The advisement comes in light of two recent shootings at locations near areas where off-campus students live.

Gunshots were reported on the night of Sept. 1 near the 7-Eleven Food Store, 323 N. Eddy St., at the intersection of Madison and Eddy streets. The shots were reportedly self-inflicted, according to Sgt. John Williams of the South Bend Police Department's public information office.

Earlier that evening, a South Bend police officer was patrolling in the area of Hill and Crescent streets when he heard shots fired. A police investigation led to the arrest of two local residents, neither of whom were connected with Notre Dame or Saint Mary's.

Police arrested an 18-year-old man on a charge of criminal recklessness and a 21-year-old man on a charge of assisting a criminal, Williams said.

No one was injured in the shooting. Chuck Hurley, assistant director of Notre Dame Security, said off-campus students should be alert when walking in those neighborhoods during nighttime hours.

"We would recommend that students not walk to and from campus from the downtown area," Hurley said. "Once it gets dark, our students need to be very careful, especially the people who don't really know the area there."

Paul Smallmon, 27, an employee of Shamrock News, said he was attacked about 6 a.m. Sunday just as he had finished delivering newspapers to Zahm Hall.

According to Smallmon, he had just returned to his pick-up truck and was about to start the engine when he heard noises from the rear of his truck.

COBA dean to step down after 9 years

By JOHN DE BOY
News Writer

Next August, the College of Business Administration will mark the onset of a crucial transition period when, after almost nine years of service, John Keane will step down as the college's dean.

According to Timothy O'Meara, Notre Dame's provost emeritus, Keane's leadership has made several significant contributions to the growth of the business school in recent years.

"Jack has provided much-needed leadership during a critical time of change in the College of Business Administration," O'Meara said. "The college has grown in many dimensions under his direction through the past seven-and-a-half years."

During Keane's tenure as dean, the College of Business Administration's faculty has grown from 86 to 97 and its number of endowed chairs has increased from five to 10. Additionally, Keane has overseen the planning and construction of the college's new state-of-the-art building, which opened in the fall of 1995.

For Keane, 66, assuming lead-

As election time approaches, it is essential that individuals look to their own core values and beliefs when choosing their elected officials, according to NETWORK, a Catholic social justice lobby.

NETWORK's Organizer, Sister Regina McKillip, was on the Saint Mary's campus Saturday morning, presenting the Election '96 workshop in conjunction with the Sisters of the Holy Cross.

The focus of the three-hour workshop was to provide current information on federal issues, presidential candidates and critical political decisions facing the United States — and their relation to Catholic social justice teaching.

McKillip stressed the importance of demanding increased discourse from the parties, claiming, "This is an election where we're finding that the candidates are not saying much of anything. We need to demand that the candidates start addressing the issues."

Keeping in line with the global scope of the Sisters of the Holy Cross' service, McKillip said, "We truly are a global

Walking the line

Catherine Deely
Accent Copy Editor

I had an interesting conversation in my dorm elevator the other day. A freshman in my section, with whom I'd exchanged a hundred rushed smiles but had never actually met, introduced herself. "I recognize you," she exclaimed, "You're always on the phone in the hallway!" Yes, I recognized that would be my floorwide claim to fame. She paused for a moment, then ventured, "Are you usually talking to your friends from home?" Yep, I said—always. "Oh, good," she breathed. "I thought I was the only one." Then, determinedly, she concluded, "I'm NOT going to lose touch with them."

And I was struck with a sudden conviction: good for her. She shouldn't have to.

It is a juggling act faced by every student attending a college considerably outside the parameters of the home front. Freshman year, you are bombarded with the message, over and over again: while you may not realize it now, college WILL become your home. Sure, friends you make here will, slowly but surely, come to fill and eventually take over the gaping hole once occupied by the familiar faces of high school days. College will become your new life, your true life, YOU. Things will never again even slightly mirror how they used to be.

And in a way, these seemingly harsh and unthinkable declarations somehow make you think they're true.

You feel guilty amassing a phone bill with your hometown crowd, because a tiny, screeching voice in your head nags that such activity suggests you're not 110% adjusted to your sparkling new n' improved life. Yet when you set foot on home soil to begin your long, luxurious, much-anticipated break, the guilt bends back upon itself: you're supposed to be diving right into Glory Days, and still, you can't help babbling on boastfully about every great moment you've had "back at school." And with such braggadocio confidence...how can it POSSIBLY be right to feel anything less than ecstatic enthusiasm when the time inevitably arrives to return to Papa John's and pep rallies...to leave How Things Were behind once more?

It has taken me, personally, well over a year to stop the ongoing ping pong tournament in my head and my heart...to realize that it's OK for the "adjustment process" never to fully reach a conclusion. College IS great. The friends I've made here and the experiences, illustrious and notorious by turn, we've shared deserve all the appreciation in the world. But I will never expect or allow that world to intrude upon, or replace, the one I return to every time my plane lands for Christmas or I pick up the phone when it's ringing double. There is a virtual treasure trove of stories, memories, and me stored in that world, and I simply refuse to let it go.

So, freshmen, even if you really are having more incredibly outrageous fun than the glossy college guidebooks could have planted in your dreams, don't linger in a second of hesitation when the impulse to break in your CBLD card strikes. There is no correct scientific division between Devotion to College and Devotion to Home—it's all in how you feel. Write those ten-page letters, drag that phone (albeit quietly) out into the hallway at 3 AM; I promise you, you'll never be the only one.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

Unemployment rate drops; stock exchanges fight new bill

WASHINGTON

The nation's unemployment rate plunged to a seven-year low of 5.1 percent in August, the government said in a report hailed by President Clinton on the campaign trail.

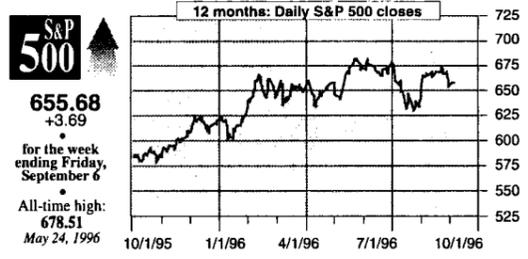

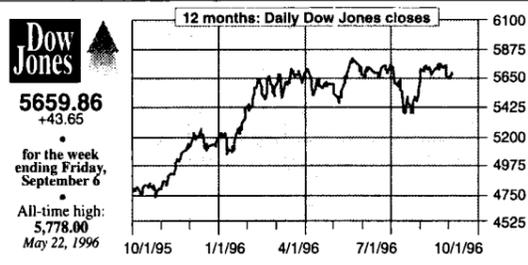

Economists said the drop, from 5.4 percent in July, and a jump in average hourly wages increase the chances the Federal Reserve will raise interest rates to cool the economy.

Republican presidential challenger Bob Dole's campaign used Friday's report as an opportunity to argue that high taxes are preventing Americans from enjoying the benefits of the improved job market.

In an unusual move, the nation's stock exchanges have spent more than $500,000 to defeat a California ballot initiative that

In addition, the American Stock Exchange kicked in $20,000.

Clinton scores points with parents

WASHINGTON

Forty-nine percent of registered voters believe Clinton does a better job than Bob Dole in addressing the concerns of parents with minor children, according to a U.S. News & World Report poll released Saturday. 31 percent of poll respondents think Dole does a better job, the magazine said. Four percent choose Reform Party candidate Ross Perot. If the election were held today, 52 percent of those surveyed said they would vote for, or were leaning toward, Clinton. Dole received support from 35 percent of respondents, and Perot received 6 percent. Two polling firms, Lake Research and Tarrance Group, interviewed 1,000 registered voters on Tuesday and Wednesday. More than 59 million Americans have children under 18 living at home — 2.8 million more than a decade ago and nearly 4 million more than in 1976, U.S. News said. "Many have minimal allegiance to either major party, making them the prized voters," it said.

Residents clean up after hurricane

RALEIGH, N.C.

Their neighborhoods in tatters but their resolve largely intact, residents of hurricane-battered areas turned Sunday to cleaning up formidable messes, watching swollen waterways and adjusting to life without electricity. At least six people were still reported missing. Five electric utilities reported a total of 488,000 customers still without power. Water, and especially ice, remained crucial commodities and lines formed at stores offering supplies — many for free. With many areas flooded with sewage-tainted water and thousands of trees on the ground, life was hardly returning to normal. But, on a muggy, torrid day, people ventured out with rakes and chain saws, and utility and municipal crews and private tree-clearing contractors plied the streets and back roads. "We're so sophisticated in this age of technology and science, but Mother Nature comes through and we're back to 400 B.C.," said Linda Daigle, clearing foliage from her lawn Sunday.

Time Warner revs up internet service

AKRON, Ohio

Time Warner Inc.'s new Road Runner online service gets its debut Tuesday, using an existing cable television system to provide high-speed computer links to the Internet. It will be the largest service to use a coaxial/fiber-optic cable television system already in place to provide connections more than 100 times faster than telephone lines. "This not a test," said Tim Evard, president of the Time Warner division overseeing the Road Runner rollout. More than 2,000 cable television subscribers were on a waiting list for the Road Runner computer connection in the Akron-Canton area. The company expects to expand the service into Portland, Maine, this year, and then in San Diego in early 1997. "The whole world is watching northern Ohio now," said Robert Wells, senior analyst for Lennox Research. "Time Warner is really carrying the ball for the industry." The cost is $39.95 per month for unlimited Internet access, plus network storage space for a personal World Wide Web page and a collection of Time Warner information services — twice as much as standard Internet access services. Evard would not say how many subscribers the company needed to turn a profit, but he said the business would work well with 30,000 customers.

Midshipman admits knowledge of crime

FORT WORTH, Texas

A midshipman who described himself as a close friend of a Naval Academy classmate charged with a murder said he heard her talk about the slaying for weeks, but never told authorities. First-year midshipman Jay Guild said he will leave the academy Monday, rather than face dismissal on conduct charges. Guild, 18, of Kankakee, Ill., said he stayed silent because he initially believed that fellow plebe Diane Zamora was lying about her involvement in the December slaying of 16-year-old Adrienne Jones. Later, he felt that exposing her story would have been like "turning in a family member." Academy officials "will say I was blindly love-struck," he said in Sunday's Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "Anybody besides me would have turned her in. And I should have, too." Jones' body was found Dec. 4 in a field in Grand Prairie, Texas, and police have said they believe Zamora and her fiance, Air Force Academy cadet David Graham, killed her. Zamora, 18, was arrested Friday in Fort Worth.

community, with a global economy. I don't think people realize the importance of working towards that."

Indicating that the United States tends to be very close-minded in its policies, she continued, "The challenge to us is to look at the candidates, and challenge them to address global issues."

Despite the fact that "we must look through Catholic teachings to make decisions," McKillip referred to the U.S. Catholic Bishops' letter addressing Political Responsibilities for 1996, stating that "Catholics should not be viewed as a voting block."

"We are not called to be partisan," McKillip said. "We are called to look at every party, and look at the issues from the vantage point of how they affect the dignity of the human person, and how they advance the common good."

While she analyzed the major issues of the '96 campaign, McKillip maintained that voter involvement should not end after marking a ballot. "After the election, it is absolutely essential that we hold our elected officials accountable," she said.

"As Catholic social teaching tells us, people need to determine what is the common good, and work to make sure the government attends to that."

Sister Ann Oestreich, justice coordinator of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, said, "It was a fabulous, complete presentation of the issues, that looked at legislation through the lens of Catholic social teaching from someone who works on the Hill everyday."

Oestreich stressed the importance of staying on top of the issues and questioning candidates, at local and state along with national levels. "A well-informed voter is a true asset not only to their district, but to the nation."

NETWORK, which recently celebrated its 25th anniversary, is a Washington lobbyist group comprised of over 10,000 members throughout the nation. It is the only Catholic registered lobby in the capital.

his early-to-mid-twenties with bleach blond hair and long bangs — was removing a bicycle from the back of the truck and setting it on the ground, Smallmon told Security. The man was wearing a white baseball hat turned backwards and had bangs to his eyebrows. Smallmon said he could see the dark roots of his bangs from beneath the hat.

Smallmon got out of the truck and confronted the man, who proceeded to strike him over the left eye. Security later transported him to St. Joseph Medical Center, where he was treated and released.

A number of bicycles have been stolen around campus since school began, Hurley added. He advised students to use a "U-bolt lock" to secure their bikes since chains can be easily cut with a bolt cutter.

The rash of assaults on campus is highly unusual, according to Hurley, who said patrols had been increased in the area of North Quad and Mod Quad especially. He advised anyone involved in any incident or who sees anything suspicious to report it to Security immediately.

ership of COBA provided a welcome opportunity to explore the business world's academic side.

"(Being a dean) was a new experience because my career had been two positions in government and seven very diverse positions in business," he said.

Even more exciting for Keane was the chance to return to Notre Dame, where he completed a bachelor's degree in 1952.

"Perhaps the most satisfying aspect of all was to come home to Notre Dame," he said. "Only a Notre Dame graduate can know what that means."

Before assuming the college's Gillen Deanship in January 1989, Keane spent several years as director of the U.S. Census Bureau. Appointed to the position by President Reagan in 1983, Keane oversaw the operation of the nation's largest statistical agency with an annual operating budget of more than $600 million.

Prior to serving as director of the Census Bureau, Keane spent four years in the United States Air Force and 27 years in the private sector in research, management, and consulting positions. Throughout his career Keane worked for such industry leaders as U.S. Steel, Booz-Allen & Hamilton, and J. Walter Thompson.

In addition to the degree he received from Notre Dame, Keane earned a bachelor's degree from Syracuse University, an MBA from Indiana University, and a doctorate from the University of Pittsburgh.

While Keane says that his years as dean have been enjoyable, he feels that the time is right for a change.

"I think it's a good time because you need fresh thinking, and nine years is enough,"

he said. "And then there's the opportunity to get serious about teaching and doing other things that being a dean just won't permit because of the time and the routine."

In August 1997, following the end of his tenure as dean, Keane plans to assume active faculty status as Korth Professor of Strategic Management and Gillen Dean Emeritus.

"I look forward to it," Keane said. "It's a real chance to meet students in a continuing kind of way. I don't know that experience, and I'd like to."

Currently, University Provost Nathan Hatch is in the process of directing a search committee for the next Gillen Dean of COBA. Five faculty members, one undergraduate, and one graduate student have been appointed to the committee.

Hatch and University President Father Ed Malloy will make the final decision based on the committee's recommendations.

Iraq denies involvement in KDP raid

By BRIAN MURPHY
Associated Press Writer

IRBIL

A Kurdish faction allied with President Saddam Hussein captured two towns from a rival Kurdish group in fierce fighting Sunday. The groups gave conflicting accounts of whether Saddam's forces took part in the assaults.

Iraq, meanwhile, claimed it fired anti-aircraft weapons at U.S. and allied aircraft patrolling no-fly zones over its territory Sunday. The Iraqi fire missed and the planes fled, the official Iraqi News Agency said. Iraq made the same claim on Friday and Saturday, also saying there were no hits.

American pilots have said they have detected no Iraqi response to their sorties.

In northern Iraq, the Kurdistan Democratic Party pressed ahead with its week-old offensive, marching east and taking the towns of Degala and Kuysanjaq from the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan.

Both groups agreed that the towns, 20 and 30 miles east of Irbil, changed hands amid heavy fighting.

But the KDP said in a statement from London that it launched the assaults on its own, while PUK spokesman Latif Rashid, speaking to The Associated Press from London, said the faction was overwhelmed by the combined forces of the Iraqi army and the KDP.

The Iraqi government said its forces were not involved. "We stress once again that our armed forces have already returned in full to their previous positions," an Information Ministry source told the state-run Iraqi News Agency.

No details of the fighting were available, and there was no word on casualties.

Iraqi forces teamed up with the KDP on Aug. 31 to capture Irbil, the de facto capital of the Kurdish safe haven established in northern Iraq after the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

The United States responded with missile attacks on southern Iraq on Tuesday and Wednesday, hammering air defense sites in southern Iraq.

Since then, the Iraqi forces appear to have refrained from playing a major role in the battles between the rival Kurdish groups.

But Iraq placed its heavy weaponry only a few miles behind the front-line positions of its KDP allies. Almost 100 Iraqi tanks could be seen in the region on Friday, and Defense Secretary William Perry, speaking on CBS' "Face the Nation," said Sunday that some Iraqi troops "are still nearby and still dangerous."

A United Nations officer in Irbil, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a force made up mainly of KDP fighters, but aided by some Iraqi government troops, was moving to the east on Sunday. He said the intense fighting prevented U.N. officials from going to the scene.

In Washington, Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. John Shalikashvili told NBC's "Meet the Press" that Saddam "is clearly exploiting the difference between those two Kurdish factions."

But he said "very, very few" Iraqi troops were still in the safe haven area. "There continue to be reports of a few hundred here, a few hundred

LONDON

Israel's foreign minister said Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's government "will do everything we can" to establish peace with its Palestinian neighbors, but security is "essential and unequivocal" for peace.

Foreign Minister David Levy, speaking Sunday after a one-hour meeting with Secretary of State Warren Christopher, said Israel "will go as quickly as it takes to assure agreements."

The London meeting was a warm-up for Netanyahu's visit to Washington starting Monday for talks with President Clinton, Defense Secretary William Perry, Christopher and others.

At a joint news conference, Christopher backed Israel for putting curbs on terrorism but urged redeployment of Israeli troops away from Arab residents in Hebron, a town in the West Bank sacred to Muslims and Jews.

U.S. officials said Christopher also asked Israel to let in more Palestinian workers.

Israel closed the border last spring after a series of bloody terrorist attacks on Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and Ashkelon. Last week, the Israeli government said it would issue 50,000 work permits for Palestinians, an increase of 18,000 from the current level.

there."

The KDP said it was pushing east toward the Dokan Dam hydroelectric plant. The group said the PUK, which controls the plant, cut power and water to Irbil after being driven out a week ago. It said Irbil, a city of about 1 million, was suffering from "severe water and sanitation problems."

The offensive was also taking the KDP in the direction of Sulaymaniyah in the east, the last major stronghold of the PUK.

According to the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, many families fled Kuysanjaq, a town of about 80,000, in response to Sunday's fighting.

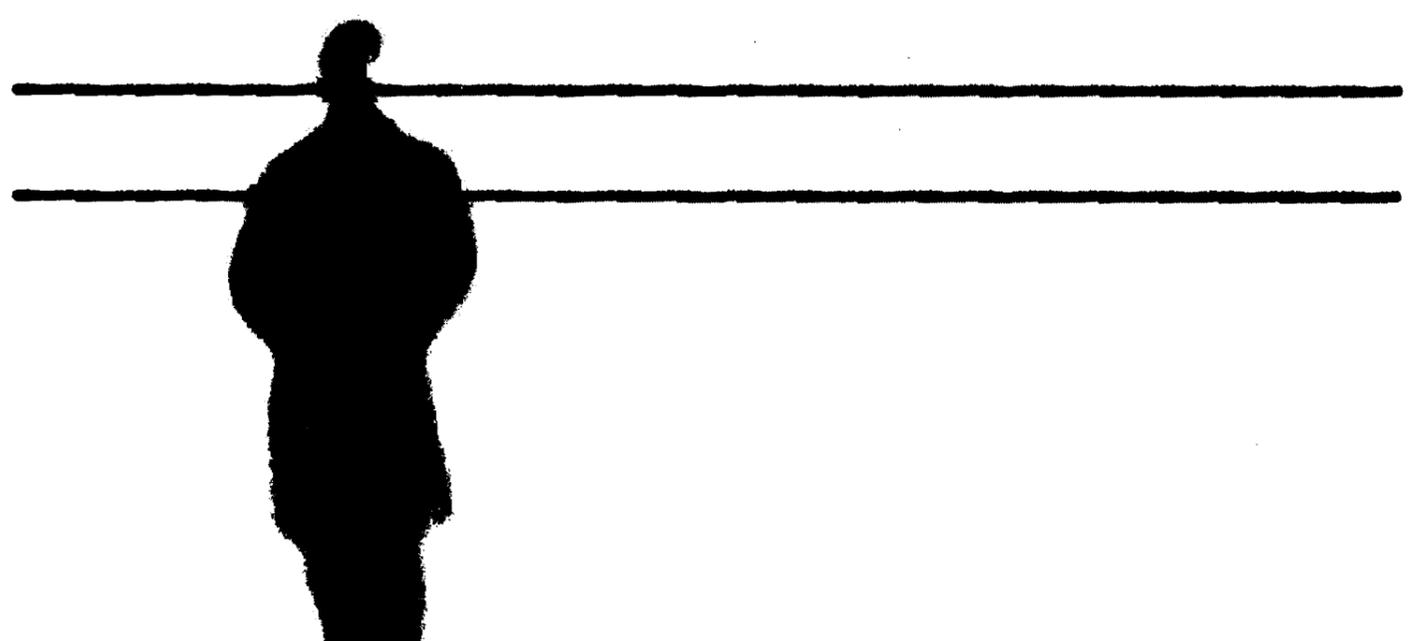

The group appealed for "urgent and decisive" help from the United States and its allies.

But the Americans have made clear they do not want to take sides in Kurdish infighting. The missile attacks last week targeted southern Iraq, and Washington has taken no action in the north. "We should not be involved in civil war in the north," Perry said.

Proposal: Debt paid by criminals

By FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press Writer

ROME
The government has a $86 billion deficit. Three thousand politicians and businessmen are implicated in corruption scandals. So a new proposal is catching on: let them buy their amnesty.

Declaring it's time to close the books on Italy's scandals, Venice prosecutor Carlo Nordio is suggesting that the suspects surrender hundreds of millions of ill-gotten dollars in exchange for their freedom.

His rationale is that the guilty will be atoning for their economic crimes by surrendering the money they made — possibly with a penalty. But others see his idea as a way for the government to raise the cash it needs.

Nordio isn't the first to make such a proposal, but his timing — he laid out his strategy before a Who's Who in business and politics at an economic conference this weekend — is winning him support.

Foreign Trade Minister Augusto Fantozzi said during a break in the conference that the government should continue its crackdown on corruption.

"But we must also pose the question, like Nordio did. In other words, if 20 trillion lire ($13 billion) is needed to fix up the public budget, where will we find it?"

Justice Minister Giovanni Maria Flick said he didn't like the idea, but Deputy Premier Walter Veltroni said it deserved serious debate.

Nordio said the payments would let the suspects atone for wrongdoing, and insisted that he was not proposing a whitewash.

"I don't know if justice means punishing at all costs people who have already done jail" while under investigation, he told RAI state TV.

After the "Kickback City" scandals began in 1992, hundreds of corruption suspects — including former ministers and business leaders — were thrown into jail without charges in an attempt to get them to implicate colleagues.

Pope continues to travel despite illness

By VICTOR SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

GYOER, Hungary
John Paul II is basically healthy and plans to make plenty of foreign trips in the coming months, the Vatican said Saturday as the pope ended a visit to Hungary during which he appeared tired and weak.

The cause of an intestinal illness that has struck the 76-year-old pontiff twice in the past seven months has not been determined, his spokesman said.

John Paul appeared fatigued and walked laboriously as he led an open-air Mass for tens of thousands of worshipers Saturday, telling Hungarians not to lose hope despite hardships following the fall of communism.

His vestments billowed in a stiff breeze on a sunny but chilly morning that tested the pontiff's strength on his first foreign trip since being sidelined three weeks ago by the intestinal illness.

The pope ended his overnight visit and left for Rome Saturday evening.

"Basically, he remains healthy," Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls said.

He said John Paul, who will visit France in 12 days, plans at least four foreign tours next year — to the Czech Republic, his native Poland, Brazil and France.

In March and again in August, the pope canceled public appearances over several days, ran a low fever and was treated with antibiotics for what the Vatican said was an intestinal problem.

Navarro said the cause could be linked to a 1981 assassination attempt, when a Turkish gunman shot the pope in the stomach. Doctors removed three feet of intestine.

But he ruled out any link to a 1992 operation for removal of

Pope endorses Ireland talks

Associated Press

CASTELGANDOLFO, Italy
Pope John Paul II offered encouragement Sunday for peace talks in Northern Ireland, which are to resume this week under former U.S. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell.

"Both communities desire the end of violence," John Paul told a crowd in the courtyard of his summer residence outside Rome. "Both have given proof that peace and reconciliation are possible if all have the courage to embrace the path of dialogue, of mutual comprehension, of respect for the legitimate rights of each one, and, above all, for human rights."

Negotiations aimed at finding a compromise way to govern the British-ruled province resume Monday in Belfast, with several Northern Ireland parties and the British and Irish governments to attend. The talks began in June but the IRA-allied Sinn Féin party has been barred because of the Irish Republican Army's resumption of bombings outside Northern Ireland in February.

"May the Lord enlighten and encourage those who have authority or who can influence public opinion to pursue the true good of the dear population of Northern Ireland and to thus contribute to a true and just peace," the pope prayed.

what the Vatican said was a benign tumor.

John Paul also broke his leg in 1994 when he fell in his bathroom, and has walked with difficulty since.

The Vatican was angered over reports that the pope had failed to read a speech Friday evening because he was not well.

In fact, he read portions of it in Hungarian, leaving the rest to be read by a priest. The Vatican noted he has done that on other occasions when he was unfamiliar with the language.

At the end of Saturday's Mass, he made off-the-cuff remarks in strong, clear Italian about the wind.

Police said as many as 130,000 people turned out for the Mass in the park on the outskirts of this industrial city in northwestern Hungary near Slovakia.

Tobacco giants feel the heat

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON
Feeling its own health threatened, the tobacco industry spent millions of dollars in the first half of 1996 to thwart federal efforts to curtail teen-age smoking, raise the industry's taxes and restrict advertising. Reports filed with the government show companies with heavy interests in tobacco issues spent more than $15 million during the period. Industry giant Philip Morris led the way with $11.3 million, according to the first-ever reports disclosing special interests' real expenses in lobbying

Congress, federal agencies and the White House. Philip Morris has extensive holdings in non-tobacco businesses — Kraft Foods, for example — but reports indicate the bulk of its lobbying efforts related to tobacco matters. Companies are not required to break down their total lobbying spending by business category. Congressional clerks who reviewed the reports say Philip Morris' total appeared to be the largest so far among around 12,000 companies and groups that filed midyear reports over the past two months. "We have had a lot of federal attention from regulators and the White House," said Thomas Lauria, a spokesman for the Tobacco Institute, a trade association. "It's never easy communication, because tobacco is controversial on many, many levels." The industry, once given deference in Washington, has seen its credibility eroded in recent years by allegations that executives covered up knowledge of the damaging and addictive nature of cigarettes, said Michael Pertschuk, an anti-tobacco researcher and activist. "They have the deepest pockets imaginable, and they have the most at stake," Pertschuk said. "The very heart of their industry is under attack."

Morris may testify against First Lady

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON
A House committee chairman says former campaign adviser Dick Morris has indicated he will respond by late Monday to questions about his reported statement that Hillary Rodham Clinton was behind the collection of hundreds of confidential FBI files on former Republican officials. Rep. William Clinger, R-Pa., chairman of the Government Reform and Oversight Committee, said Morris has agreed to respond by 5 p.m. Monday. Clinger said in a statement that he "was astonished to learn from news reports" that Morris "has information linking the First Lady to the improper review of at least 900 confidential FBI files." In a letter dated Saturday and made public Sunday, Clinger asked Morris to "affirm by sworn statement" the truthfulness of his reported contents and to supply all "correspondence, e-mail, memos, talking points, briefing papers, polling data, telephone records and other records" on the subject. Clinger said his committee, which has led the investigation into how the FBI files ended up in a White House security office, "may need to take additional efforts to secure sworn testimony from you." He has suggested that Morris may be subpoenaed to appear before the committee. The Star supermarket tabloid released excerpts Friday from the diaries of a prostitute in which she wrote that Morris had blamed Mrs. Clinton for the White House's acquisition of the files. Morris resigned after the tabloid revealed what it said was his longtime relationship with the call girl. White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta, appearing Sunday on CNN's "Late Edition," said it was his understanding that Morris "did call the campaign to indicate that there was no truth to this story." "I think you have to look at the source of this story," Panetta said. "We're operating off a tabloid story." Panetta said it is Morris' decision how he should deal with Clinger's request. "I would hope he would cooperate the same way we cooperated," said Panetta.

Study criticizes depiction of safe sex on soap operas

By TIM WHITMIRE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK

When, after weeks of smoldering glances, the male lead of a daytime soap opera finally ends up in bed with his brother's ex-wife, they are unlikely to discuss birth control.

Why does this matter, you ask?

Because soap sex and its consequences draw 40 million viewers likely to emulate those daytime dreamboats, said Katherine Heintz-Knowles, author of a study released Saturday on soap opera sex.

"We know that behavior performed by characters who are attractive, powerful and popular is more likely to be imitated by viewers," said Heintz-Knowles, a University of Washington communications professor.

The survey found that, of 594 sexual behaviors shown during five weeks of soap operas, only 58 included the discussion or depiction of planning or consequences.

The study, released by the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation, a private health foundation, was presented to network executives and soap opera writers and producers meeting with reproductive health experts at "Soap Summit II." Last year's Soap Summit I was held for television talk shows producers.

The seminar is staged by Population Communications International, an organization that works with media around the world to encourage family planning and prevention of sexually transmitted diseases.

"The dilemma (soap opera producers) have is they have to provide entertainment," said Dr. Felicia Stewart, director of reproductive health programs for the Kaiser Foundation. "The goal really here is think ... is to try to figure out some way we can be more (educational)."

The survey of 97 hours of programming from the 10 nationally televised soap operas from May 27 to June 28 recorded 6.1 sexual behaviors per hour of programming. That compared to 6.6 sexual behaviors per hour recorded in a 1994 survey.

A sexual behavior was defined as any kissing, caressing, flirting or sexual intercourse that was shown, implied or discussed by characters.

Heintz-Knowles said this year's survey found a higher proportion of sexual behaviors being shown — rather than just talked about — than two years ago.

Of the sexual behaviors recorded in the survey, 73 percent were shown visually, compared to 27 percent verbally. In the 1994 survey, 67 percent of sexual behaviors were verbal, compared to 33 percent visual.

"This is not to imply, though, that soaps are getting more explicit," Heintz-Knowles said. What is being shown is more kissing, embracing and caressing, she said.

Soap sex generally is not casual and almost always is depicted as having a positive effect on a relationship, Heintz-Knowles said.

Researchers said messages about AIDS and condom use were more prominent this year than in their 1994 study. Two soaps, "All My Children" and "General Hospital," used condoms in major plots; "General Hospital" featured an HIV-positive character and "The Young and the Restless" showed a woman deciding to be tested for HIV.

"This study indicates that it is possible for television to play a more constructive role when it comes to communicating messages about sexual responsibility," Stewart said. "But there is still a long way to go."

ER, Frasier take top Emmys

Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif.

"ER," NBC's powerful medical drama, and the network's "Frasier" won top series awards at Sunday's Primetime Emmy Awards, although the shows' actors were shut out.

Kathy Baker of "Picket Fences" and Dennis Franz of "NYPD Blue" won top dramatic acting Emmys, while Helen Hunt of "Mad About You" and John Lithgow of "3rd Rock From the Sun" were honored for comedy series acting. "ER," which led all shows with 17 nominations, won only the top drama award, beating out

"Chicago Hope," "Law & Order," "NYPD Blue" and "The X-Files."

"Frasier" won best comedy for the third consecutive year and had four Emmys this year, including best comedy series writing.

"Frasier" producer Peter Casey thanked the TV academy but said, "More importantly, we feel it sends a message to the pompous and the incessantly fussy of America."

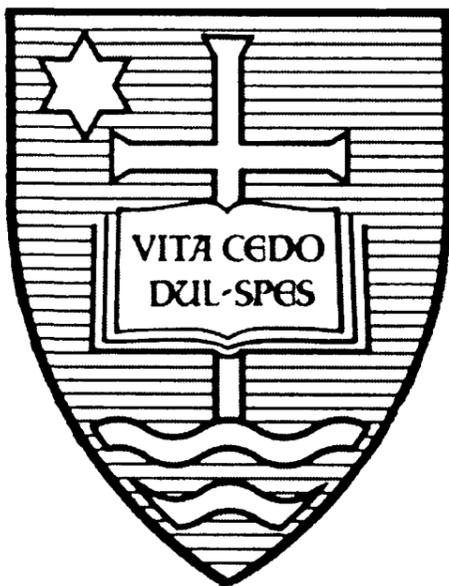

No one show dominated. NBC led the networks with 20 Emmys, including nine awarded Sunday and 11 presented in preliminary categories the night before. HBO was second with a total of 14 and ABC followed with 12.

THE DISCOURSE

Dealing with disparity in America's high schools Admission to top colleges no longer depends on statistical achievements

Last year, while working toward my master's degree at Georgia Tech, my thesis advisor was appointed to the position of Associate Dean of the College of Science. One day I asked him the following question: "As an associate dean I attends plays a large role in the college admissions and financial aid process. Notre Dame and other prestigious universities like to boast in their public relations campaigns about how their students come from the best high schools in America. They brag about how their students lettered in numerous varsity sports, how many AP courses the students have taken, and how well students from certain high schools tend to achieve in college.

The truth is that the high school that one attends depends on several factors, including socioeconomic status, race, address, family financial resources and the good 'ol boy network — all of which are out of the student's control. I have first-hand knowledge of how these factors work.

As middle-class Americans continue their flight to the suburbs, schools in the inner city are faced with the decay plaguing many of the nation's urban areas. These schools are usually the worst in the district, which is exemplified by dilapidated buildings, sparse course offerings, outdated textbooks and unmotivated teachers. In these metro areas, the best schools are usually found in the suburbs. Suburban schools usually receive the most funding, attract the best teachers, offer the most courses, and have the best facilities. This is why I have always been a proponent of busing. Children in the inner city have a right to a quality education.

If I were a parent living in the inner city, I would gladly place my child on the school bus each day and send the child to a suburban school. As I see it, busing is the only hope for inner-city schools. If suburban kids are forced to attend inner city schools, the disparity would fade away.

However, inner city schools are not the only ones facing challenges. During the fall of my freshman year at the University of Tennessee, I remember several rural counties in the northeast corner of the state that were so poor that schools had to delay their opening until October. During television interview, suppose that Students A and B mentioned above are both competing for the same spot in a freshman class at an elite college. Even though they both have 4.0 GPAs the road for Student B is much longer. Undoubtedly Student A attends a high school that has a college-preparatory curriculum. The school probably even offers SAT prep classes.

Student B attends a school where even graduating from high school is a large feat, let alone gaining admission to college. Since Student B cannot take any AP classes, the student will have to do extraordinary things in order to impress the admissions committee. If Student B happens to be black and a resident of the inner city, this may further complicate matters. For example, Harvard admissions officials have publicly stated that they prefer to admit black students from middle-class homes that have attended predominately white schools. So, Student B, regardless of his or her achievements, may not have a prayer of gaining admission to a top school.

Therefore, when I hear people say that everyone in America has an equal opportunity to achieve success, I quickly correct them. Students that attend good high schools are fortunate. These high schools are geared for success. However, students that attend such schools and boast of their scholarly achievements are not necessarily more intelligent than students from other schools; chances are that some or all of the factors mentioned above have worked in their favor. Given the opportunity, kids from less impressive schools can excel also. One's ability to climb the ladder of success depends on which rung the individual starts the climb.

Sean Seymore is a graduate student in chemistry. He can be reached at sean.b.seymore.1@nd.edu views, distraught high school seniors from these counties would explain how the situation was jeopardizing their chances for admission into college. I contrast this situation to students that attend private high schools, some of which are direct pipelines into college. If a student comes from a family that can afford tuition, the maintenance of a respectable GPA can almost guarantee admission to a top school.

Certain kids are victims of their envi-know that you will sit on several scholarship committees. Suppose your committee is making scholarship awards to the entering freshman class, and there is one scholarship left.

Suppose there are two students that both have 4.0 GPAs from their respective high schools. Student A has taken five advanced-placement courses, and has participated in numerous activities. However, Student B comes from a high school where no AP courses are offered, and there are few extracurricular activities available. Who would receive the scholarship?"

My thesis advisor quickly responded, "Student A receives the scholarship." I replied, "Student B did the best he could with the resources that were available; does that not matter?" The dean responded, "We [the committee members] have no way of knowing Student B's potential, and we cannot assume."

There is a disparity in America's classrooms. All high schools are not the same. The high school that a student

■ AT THE MOVIES WITH FATMAN AND DADDY

"Crow 2" Flops with Empty Plot, Lack of Message

By FATMAN and DADDY
Accent Movie Critics

Synopsis: A man and child wrongly killed. A mystic force embodied in a crow. Rebirth, revenge, regurgitated storyline. It's all here in this gothic portrayal of a miserable future cluttered with overacting villains and heroes who like to paint their faces and run around looking rather silly.

Fatman: At some point in "The Crow 2", someone says in disbelief, "This is not real." Much to my dismay, it is. In the brief moments I spent approaching conscious awareness in this pitiful display of pretentious dribble, my hazy mind tried desperately to discover a discernible plot line. It failed. There is nothing of value in this homage to unearned anxiety. Daddy and I, excited about the boundless possibilities of another year at Notre Dame, hoped beyond hope that this film might be a call to a new era of self-indulgent pity and pseudo-existentialist despair. Maybe it is?

I didn't think that many movies could reach the vacuous depths of the first "Crow". I left that film not feeling too badly about Brandon Lee's timely demise. Too bad that some wildly contagious hemorrhagic fever didn't do away with those involved with "The Crow 2". We can always dream, can't we.

The movie raises perplexing questions of form, content, and our current state of cultural mediocrity. The form of the film is a cheesy ripoff of MTV video camera gags that make everything fuzzy and dark. The content is something akin to a video game. The hero fights nasty villains in an ever-increasing order of difficulty until, in the end, he wins the game, takes the prize, washes his face paint off, etc. The movie tries to be stylish in spite of having no content. Instead, it just looks silly.

What does this say about the culture that this movie appeals to? Whatever the merits of body piercing, power chords, and acting dark might be, I'm not sure they have any real meaning. I'm not attacking people who might find this sort of thing interesting; I just find it mundane and simple-minded. The movie, calling on these trends, attempts to be stylistically and occasionally verbally different from other action films. Instead of trying to do something clever or original, it goes for shock and image. It says nothing—it only shows off. In other words, it's not really different, it's just extreme and plays with limits that aren't necessarily imposing on its artistic expression. It searches for identity not through an authentic plot or message, but through flashy camera work and meticulously porarily crack its lips. The critic, then mired in a delusional state of euphoria, thinks to itself: "Aye, verily have I seen all the wretched crap human cinema has the ability to produce; the future films can be nothing but better than those that preceded them." However, due to the critic's existence as the tragic hero of the media world, it is sorely mistaken; and the critic's brief respite is ended as a new torrent of odious bile crashes down upon its head, washing away both the smile and the naive hope that accompanied it.

possible encounter with this reeking pile of feces.

"The Crow 2" is one of those rare sequels that perfectly captures the tenor of the film that spawned it, and by making this statement I am contending that, although seemingly impossible, "The Crow 2" is every bit as bad as the first. In all actuality, "The Crow 2" is the very same movie except for the fact that, this time around, the cast is a different collection of inept hacks. Granted, we must admit that Mia Kirshner has returned, but we must also likewise admit that while her body matured her skills lingered behind, perhaps even atrophying as well.

Once again she stumbles through her role as a ridiculously gloomy denizen of our aimless and hopelessly trendy generation, a person who is perpetually depressed because she lives in a dingy, underlit apartment located in a town where seemingly, and obviously symbolically as well, the sun never shines. Do we identify with and pity her? Nay, not unless we have lost both our Prozac and our better judgement. Instead, we plead with her to remove her ten pounds of facial cosmetics and go outside and get some fresh air, sun, and Vitamin E.

Daddy is forced to postulate that is here that he cultivates his rabid dislike for the film. He hates its heroes and cheers for Iggy Pop and his crass band of villains to kill the infernal bird and forever end this tirade of whining. The exceptionally loud and cacophonous (not to mention downright smelly) musical score and barrage of tattoos that this movie benches at its audience cannot successfully draw scrutiny away from the reality that, at its core, it possesses only a moribund kernel of a narrative; and one we have already seen far too many times at that.

This movie is like the relentless collector of tattoos itself, it lacks the personality to attract the attention of others in itself, so it is forced to employ superficial, and ultimately impotent, measures to render itself interesting. Sadly enough, both entities fail in their pathetic attempts and, in doing so, condemn themselves to tedious existences as fragile shells supported by a complete vacuum of character.

Another year has begun for the Fatman and Daddy, another year of vicious barbs and scandalous zingers. We had hoped that we could begin this year with a positive review of a movie destined for Academy recognition; but we ended up seeing "The Crow 2" instead. Realizing that we have already failed our audience in these initial endeavors, the least we could do was to fire at them a stream of vitriolics powerful enough to steer them away from a

This Film Needs A Bullet...through the Head

By MARK TORMA
Accent Movie Critic

Usually when I write this column, I like to devise a lengthy introduction, move smoothly into a discussion of the movie, and then get to my ultimate opinion of the film. (out of four)

Not this time.

In this article, before I spend — or waste — even another moment talking about "Bulletproof," I would like to leave you with this word:

Tacky.

Remember that word if you're ever browsing the video store for something by that revolutionary '90's comic, Adam Sandler; I never thought I'd say it, but I'd recommend "Billy Madison" instead. On the Damon Wayans front, I think "Blankman" might be a better choice for home viewing, and don't get me wrong, I like Damon Wayans a lot (and I can tolerate Mr. Sandler).

"Bulletproof", though, was a horribly mismanaged project for two very funny men (well, Wayans anyway). In lieu of a plot summary, I'll just say that they really should have been honest and called it "Yet Another 48 Hrs." Wayans got Nick Nolte's perpetually PO'd cop role, and did a workmanly job with it — not sensational, but not bad. Sandler got Eddie Murphy's role of the crook with a chip on his shoulder — and oh, my, what a mistake that was.

See, in "48 Hrs.", Eddie Murphy wove his comedy schtick, the wisecrackin', the jive talkin', into the action, and it worked really well. Someone had the bright idea to have Adam Sandler do the same thing — inject his dim-witted, incompetent buffoon into his character. Well, like I said before, BIG mistake.

While the rest of the movie is taking itself seriously (and that's another problem), Sandler is busy playing the same fool that we know so well. Wayans is always there to rescue him from his predicaments, and we have to wonder how Sandler could have ever gained the utmost trust of "the biggest druglord on the West Coast", played by James Caan.

Keep in mind that this isn't a slapstick comedy a la the "Naked Gun" movies, or "National Lampoon's Loaded Weapon." It's more like "Lethal Weapon" (or "48 Hrs."). Caan has a hit out on Sandler (and therefore on Wayans, his police escort, too) and slaughters an entire posse of DEA agents to get to them.

This is all viewed with the utmost severity: at the climax of that scene, Sandler has to rescue Wayans and himself by piloting their disabled plane to safety. This is the same character who earlier THAT DAY is captured by high-way patrolmen (yet he escapes Caan's hitmen, who follow him everywhere else). He's on his way to Mexico, but he's found passed out in his car on the side of the road—he has even gotten his dog drunk! I'm sorry, but the Buffoon just does not make a believable action hero.

I refuse to make Adam Sandler the scapegoat for this disappointment, though. The writing was shameful; I don't want to pigeonhole Wayans, but it failed to make any use of his comedic talents whatsoever. The writers' suggestion that Sandler's adolescent criminal is unfailingly honest ("I never lie!"), should offend even the dimmest intellectual.

Yet their worst crime was the neglect of the "buddy" element of this "buddy movie". Wayans and Sandler never really meet at any credible middle-ground; Wayans is grave and professional, and Sandler keeps his SNL routine going throughout. Any possibilities of a real friendship between their characters are, at best, slim to none.

If that wasn't enough, the direction was horrid; every shot looked amateurish, like it had been cut out and pasted by a grade-schooler. In other words, it was visually BORING — and if it wasn't boring, it was incredibly TACKY. Yes, it's that word again. It conjures up memories of "Repo Man", that early Emilio Estevez film that had "Beer" brand beer on all the store shelves. That's funny. In "Bulletproof", however, even when Sandler gets into a suggestive, kinky discussion with a backwoods Norman Bates at the tackiest hotel that side of Las Vegas, the humor is diffused: the hitmen show up, the place gets shot up, and it all ends with a truck-chase through the forest.

This film was horribly lacking something I've taken for granted in movies for a long time — self-awareness. Wayans' character has a little too much of it (his undercover character, a small-time car thief, kept referring to himself as "petty") and he really should have lent some to the people in charge of production.

Somehow, they lost their purpose (if they ever had one), and waffled between slapstick and shoot-'em-up. The result is, quite frankly, just bad, and its tackiness, like the bullfighter's costume that Sandler wears at the very end, isn't allowed to be funny, so it's just very tiring. Just very tacky.

■ MOVIE REVIEW

"Moreau" a Success; Stays True to Original Story

By JOSHUA BECK
Accent Movie Critic

Basing a book on a movie is easy. Translating it to the screen with the same clarity and detail as the original story is often hard. These days directors are so gung-ho to add their own ideas to the original script that we are somewhat misled when we think a movie will follow closely to an original story. This is often my problem after I read a book and then the movie comes out some time later. So, as I waited in line for "The Island of Dr. Moreau," written by H.G. Wells in the 1920's, I was somewhat skeptical. My doubts, however, slowly dissipated as the movie went on. Let's face it: Dr. Moreau is good stuff.

As I was watching, I made a note that this is the way movies are supposed to be made. Not often do you find a film that sticks closely to the original work but makes you think that it could not have been done any better than you just witnessed. This is the third time this movie has been remade, and out of all of them, this is simply the best.

The movie begins in the middle of the ocean with three men in a raft. After two of them meet an untimely demise, the third, Edward Douglas (David Thewlis), floats along for days until he is picked up by a boat and a scientist named Montgomery (Val Kilmer). Montgomery revives him and takes him to an island with the promise of radioing for transportation home as soon as they dock. Douglas is given his own room, and through a curious venture finds out that the majority of the island is inhabited by manimals, humans who are slowly regressing to animal states.

A terrified Douglas then tries to escape and is chased by Montgomery and his half-human cohorts. Douglas meets up with some other friendly manimals who have had it with the Law of the island. The Law basically states that the manimals should act like animals, and therefore speed up their regression. Dr. Moreau (Marlon Brando), the creator of all this mayhem and a brilliant scientist in his own right, enters the picture and takes Douglas back. The reason for this insane experiment is then told. The only problem arises in the controlling of the manimals' behavior. The only way that the manimals are kept in check is through a high-pitched electronic signal from Moreau's necklace that sends them into painful fits.

The plot thickens as Hyena, one of the manimals, finds out that a computer chip inside his body has been responsible for his succumbing to the electroshocks. After a gruesome scene in which he rips it out, everything goes downhill. Hyena develops a band of followers with the intent of finding the person responsible for their pain and suffering. The rest of the movie is a fast train ride in which the whole island turns upside down. The ending is shocking, but somewhat expected under the circumstances. In addition, Wells' philosophical arguments about the differences between man and animal are interestingly thought-provoking.

The acting is what makes "Moreau" the great movie that it is. David Thewlis is brilliant as Douglas, a man who wants to but cannot escape from his present state. However, he tries to understand the manimals for what they are despite his predicament. Val Kilmer is in his usual good form as the relaxed, laconic Montgomery, who escapes from his present situation through other means. Marlon Brando is superb as Moreau, a man who is ridiculed and thought to be insane, but rather comes across as a very gentle man who cares about his constituent manimals.

I can't give you a reason not to see "The Island of Dr. Moreau." It is one of the rare gems that stays true to its original base while allowing for the advancement of special effects and the art of makeup. The manimals are half-man, half-animal, and you feel that they have been made to look that way. No matter how grotesque they are, you still cannot help but feel sorry for them. This film is directed with a knack for following the storyline while making it seem more interesting at the same time. The acting is superb, and the special effects are wonderful. So go and see it.

One other thing: read the book before you go. You won't be disappointed.

■ SOAP OPERA UPDATES

Days of Our Lives

By JENIFER KOCH
and JULIE BARBOUR
Days of Our Lives Correspondents

We would like to start by thanking all of you who responded to last week's article. The tremendous outpouring of admiration went straight to our heads, we assure you. Huge applause goes to Natascha for noticing the absence of half of the Brady clan. We were also wondering about the disappearance of Roman, Kim, and Kayla. Now let's talk about this week in Salem.

The search for Will continued this week with Bo and Hope heading up the investigation. While looking through the police sketches, grandmother-of-the-year Marlena finally put two and two together and realized that she had seen Mary with Will in the Paris airport. The ensuing tear-filled confrontation between Marlena and Sami ended with the two of them on a plane bound for Paris.

With classic "Days" timing, Austin and Carrie found out about the kidnapping right before their second wedding attempt. Captain Clueless came through for us again when he realized the crying baby at the inn had been his own (or Uncle Lucas') flesh and blood.

Mary sold Will, handing him over to a baby broker. She promised him a better life with rich, loving parents. Considering the parenting skills of the Days cast, we're apt to agree that the sale isn't a bad idea.

Peter planted a hypnosis device in a hotel mirror, where Kristen used a remote control to place John in a "suggestible" state. Once in the semi-hypnotic condition, John's true fantasies came out and he began to call for "Doc." That didn't ruin the mood too much for Kristen because she still managed to get him into bed.

After the installation of the brain-washing mechanism, Mr. Go-Go-Gadget Peter tried his hand at disarming small explosives. These were the same bombs that Peter ordered Stefano's henchman George to plant in the underground tunnels. Peter's plan to destroy all the evidence of his illegal activities with Stefano accidentally threatened Jack's and Jen's lives. Peter's love for Jen prevailed as he risked being exposed to save beloved Jen. Jack found Stefano's record books—which implicated Peter—but lost them when the tunnels began to collapse. Jen was conveniently unconscious the whole time, so for the time being, could-I-possibly-be-any-more-naive Jen is still standing by her man.

Flashing back to Paris, Billie makes her long-awaited return hiding behind a bouquet of flowers in Austin's and Carrie's room. Little did you know, Countess W. products branched off from cosmetics and into reconstructive surgery. The new Billie won bonus points early, however, for convincing Carrie to change out of her wedding dress.

Our SHOCKER of the Week goes to Celeste, who rolled over in bed one morning to expose her new love affair with Laura's ex-beau and Peter's persistent blackmailer, Daniel Scott. Stay tuned, Days fans, as all of these stories continue to unfold "like sand through the hourglass." Or maybe a little slower than that.

Keep the e-mailings coming to Jenifer.L.Koch.1@nd.edu and barb2883@saintmarys.edu.

General Hospital

By GENEVIEVE MORRILL
General Hospital Correspondent

Last week on GH: psychotic psychiatrist Kevin Collins kidnaps Felicia and begins to drive her to a "safe" place. He slowly drops hints, Felicia puts two and two together, and realizes she's dealing with Kevin's crazed twin/alter ego Ryan. Kevin/Ryan, noting that she has finally seen the light—or lack thereof—just laughs. Tom, Mac, and Lucy find an unconscious Garcia and a doctored tape featuring Mac declaring that Garcia is the stalker...assuring everyone that Kevin is, in fact, the stalker. The exception is Lucy, who can't believe her "Doc" has gone mad.

On a secluded island, Kevin continues to menace Felicia, who tries to escape when Kevin briefly returns to himself. His dark side soon takes control, and produces a large hunting knife. Lucy, utilizing her librarian skills, finds a clue hidden in Shakespearean verse, and Mac in turn figures out where the missing twosome is located. When the rescuers arrive at the cabin, they only listen to Kevin, not barging in on him because they don't know what he might do under pressure. When Lucy sees Mac bring in a sharp-shooter, she rushes to the cabin to reason with her deranged love.

Brenda goes home with Sonny to explain how she feels about her part in Lily's death. Sonny is withdrawn and tells her to talk to her husband or to see Dr. Collins for professional help. (Good idea: after the stalking, Kevin's going to need all the referrals he can get.) Gina comes over and gives Sonny a picture of Stone, telling him how she wishes she could have spent more time with him while he was alive. Sonny, in an unpredicted move, invites Mike over for dinner. During dinner, Sonny's dad comments on his habit of adopting all the orphans in town.

Ned stops off to tell Jax about the move, and notices a cigar and an unusual lighter, which his Mommy Dearest later shows up with. Ned figures Tracy and the Aussie are in cahoots and doesn't tell Brenda, because he fears she might let on that the Q's know.

Carly walks into Jason's apartment and emerges from his shower wrapped in the biggest towel I have ever seen. Jason returns and finds her (gotta start locking that door, Jay!) The verdict: it's over! Carly threatens to tell Robin and says there is a man who would jump on her in a second. Meanwhile, that same man, Tony, is having a fight with Bobbie over her desire to adopt a little girl.

Luke has Mike translate the Greek on Stefan's check: it means atonement, but Mr. Spencer is not buying a kinder, gentler Cassadine clan.

Laura tells Nicholas about the death of her mother and its circumstances. He is disbelieving, but upon confronting his uncle, the story is confirmed. Nicholas feels he's been betrayed and now hates everybody. Laura walks in on Luke's stakeout of Windemere, and her husband informs her he doubts her loyalty. Laura tells Luke that he cannot blame her son for his family's sins, but Luke seems all too ready, willing, and able.

Abdul-Jabbar helps spark Dolphins to second win

By MEL REISNER
Associated Press Writer

TEMPE, Ariz.

Miami Dolphins coach Jimmy Johnson promised that he wouldn't let the strong start of rookie running back Karim Abdul-Jabbar stop him from playing Irving Spikes, and he kept his word.

Abdul-Jabbar scored the first touchdowns of the game on a pair of 3-yard runs against Arizona, then Spikes spiked a Cardinals rally with a 1-yard TD run in the third quarter as the Dolphins cruised to a 38-10 victory Sunday night.

Dan Marino threw two touchdown passes to help the Dolphins (2-0) keep pace with AFC East rivals Buffalo and Indianapolis.

The Dolphins took a 24-0 halftime lead on Abdul-Jabbar's scores, a 20-yard pass from Marino to Lamar Thomas and Joe Nedney's 36-yard field goal with five seconds to play.

Arizona (0-2) made a run for it in the third quarter behind Kent Graham, who replaced Boomer Esiason at quarterback.

Graham broke the Cardinals' drought with a 1-yard scoring pass to Cedric Smith to complete a 69-yard drive. After the kickoff, Abdul-Jabbar fumbled on the first play, and Aeneas Williams recovered on the Miami 28.

That led to a 26-yard field goal by Greg Davis, making the score 24-10.

But Spikes ran for 34 and 5 yards on successive carries, caught a 10-yard pass to the Arizona 1, and scored on the next play to make it 31-10 with 2:58 remaining in the quarter.

Miami rookie Zach Thomas forced and recovered a fumble with 1:22 left, and Marino passed 5 yards to O.J. McDuffie for another TD before leaving the game less than five minutes into the fourth quarter.

Johnson wanted better special-teams play than he saw in a 24-10 opening victory over New England, and he got it against the Cardinals.

Sampras captures fourth title

By STEVE WILSTEIN
Associated Press

NEW YORK Staggered and sick one match, tight and worried the next, Pete Sampras put on an impeccable show of force and grace in the final Sunday night to claim his fourth U.S. Open championship.

From his first 125 mph service winner to his last at 117 mph, Sampras defended his title by blowing away Michael Chang 6-1, 6-4, 7-6 (7-3) in two hours — a half-hour less than the rain delay after Steffi Graf's straight-set victory over Monica Seles for the women's title.

Sampras secured his No. 1 ranking and salvaged a tortured year by dominating Chang in every aspect of the match, even winning long rallies to prove that he could beat Chang at his own game.

To see Sampras sprinting so lightly, moving so quickly and hammering shots so hard for his eighth Grand Slam title, no one who hadn't heard of his problems a few days earlier would believe he could have been so close to defeat in the quarterfinals.

Yet the grit Sampras exhibited in beating Alex Corretja in the quarters, even after vomiting and wobbling wearily on court in their fifth-set tiebreaker, showed up in his unflinching attack against Chang.

The slip of concentration, the bit of a choke that sent Sampras into a fourth set against Goran Ivanisevic in the semis, helped him in this match by steeling him against any let-down. Sampras put together all of his skills — his awesome, accurate serves, his penetrating groundstrokes, his stinging volleys and leaping overheads — to fashion a victory as artful as it was overwhelming.

"Pete played some great tennis today," Chang said. "It was one of those tough days."

Sampras, who measures his year by his Grand Slam victories, would have considered 1996 a failure if he let this match get away.

He fell early in the Australian Open, the semis of the French and the quarters of Wimbledon. More significant than any of that, he had suffered emotionally the whole year as his coach and friend, Tim Gullikson, lay dying of brain cancer and passed away in May.

"It's been very emotional," Sampras said.

Sampras played near perfect tennis in the first set, starting with that 125 mph service winner on the first point, followed by two aces and 120 mph service winner to take the game.

After that welcome to his first U.S. Open final, Chang looked shaken and tight. Before he could settle into the match, he found himself broken twice, trailing 5-0 amid a flurry of his own errors and Sampras aces and winners.

Chang, still searching for his second Grand Slam title seven years after capturing the French Open at 17, didn't begin to steady himself until he was down another break at 2-0 in the second set. Chang held twice in a row for the first time, and at 3-2 finally found the range on returns to put some pressure on Sampras, who accommodated him with a double-fault on his second breakpoint to make it 3-3.

The fans let loose a loud roar, hoping Chang would mount a comeback and at least make it close. They had endured the long wait during the thunderstorm and, as always, wanted to see their money and patience rewarded.

What they got was a third-set tiebreaker that Sampras dominated as much as he did the first set to take the $600,000 winner's check.

Chang, who took home $300,000, lost to Sampras for the ninth time in their last 10 meetings.

This final was the last match in the 18-year-old, 20,000-seat stadium, which will be lopped off near the top and reduced to a 10,000-seat show court outside the new 23,500-seat stadium next year.

Sampras didn't wax nostalgic about the court, though he produced some of his most memorable victories on it. It was here that he became the youngest Open champion in 1990, beating Andre Agassi in straight sets, and here that he won again in 1993 against Cedric Pioline and last year against Agassi once more.

With this victory, Sampras joined John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors as the only players in the Open era to win the U.S. Open at least four times. McEnroe won it four times, Connors five.

Graf tops Seles to extend win streak

By STEVE WILSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK Steffi Graf timed her final volley perfectly, knocking off Monica Seles once more and beating a rainstorm by seconds Sunday to secure a fifth U.S. Open title.

Near the end of one of the greatest and worst years of her life, Graf captured her third straight Grand Slam title and the 21st of her career to strengthen arguments that she is the best women's tennis player in history.

Amid thunder and lightning, Graf's forehand volley clipped the net cord and hopped out of Seles' reach to finish off the 7-5, 6-4 victory. If the ball had popped back the other way, they would have been off the court immediately, waiting out the rain, the outcome undecided.

As it was, both players had to bundle up during the award ceremony as the rain poured and the wind blew.

"I don't think I felt the rain at all," said Graf, whose happiness took her mind off the storm.

Graf's timing and accuracy were nearly perfect the whole match. She served 10 aces and kept Seles scrambling from corner to corner as she beat her in the Open final for the second year in a row.

"Steffi clearly is No. 1. Anyone can see that," said

Seles, who still shares the No. 1 ranking with Graf.

Graf won the French Open for the fifth time, Wimbledon for the seventh time and, after almost skipping the U.S. Open because of a calf injury, won this, too, while her jailed father, Peter, was on trial in Germany for evading taxes on $28 million of her income. She remains under investigation in that case.

"It was really, really difficult to play this tournament," Graf said. "I was really struggling to remain focused."

Somehow, Graf managed to put aside all her problems and keep pounding winners on the court.

"There was a big question of how I would be able to play," said Graf, who has won the last six Grand Slam events she's played. "I was really nervous. Once I got on the court, I loosened up and I was so much more relaxed. I don't know how or why. I didn't expect to be able to show this kind of tennis today."

Graf said she was so nervous because she felt she hadn't played well the whole tournament, despite not dropping a set.

"I really needed to take time between the points today," she said. "I wanted to calm down, concentrate on where I wanted to hit it. Even though I was nervous, I still played the points well. I guess I believe in myself."

Redskins shock listless Bears

By STEVE WYLAND
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON
Ken Harvey, Sean Gilbert and Co. — carrying all the pent-up fury of a Washington Redskins defense maligned for three years — punished, harassed and bulldozed the Chicago Bears on Sunday.

Led by Harvey's key fourth-quarter sack, Gilbert's continuous pressure and Stanley Richard's tide-turning hit that forced a fumble, the Redskins held an opponent without a touchdown for the first time since 1993 in Sunday's 10-3 victory.

The result was a stark turn of fortunes for both teams from Week 1, when the Bears (1-1) took an emotional win over the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys and the Redskins (1-1) came out unprepared in a loss to division rival Philadelphia.

Terry Allen scored the lone touchdown on a three-play, third-quarter drive highlighted by two catches by 14-year veteran receiver Henry Ellard.

The Bears were driving to take the lead at the other end minutes earlier, but Richard jarred the ball loose from Michael Timpson after a third-down reception at the Redskins 25.

Darrell Green scooped up the fumble and returned it 14 yards, setting up the touchdown drive that showcased Ellard at his best.

Left a huge cushion by rookie cornerback Walt Harris, Ellard caught a pass on the first play of the drive for a 27-yard gain. On the next play, he stretched to catch the ball on a out pattern at the sideline, just managing to drag his left foot on the ground for a 16-yard pickup.

Then, the Bears gambled on a linebacker blitz, leaving no one home on the right side as Allen ran 28 yards untouched for the score.

The Redskins defense did the rest, with Rich Owens and Gilbert sacking Erik Kramer at his own 1 on the next drive, and Rod Stephens adding a later sack.

The Bears got inside the Redskins 20 twice late in the fourth quarter, but Harvey knocked Andy Heck back like a paper bag to sack Kramer on a third-and-9 on the first drive, and Kramer's fourth-down pass fell incomplete in the waning seconds to close out the final threat.

The first half was less exciting. Somewhere among the nine punts, most of them cannon-shots by Todd Sauerbrun and Matt Turk that elicited "oohs" and "ahhs" — or were they yawns? — from the RFK Stadium crowd, there was a 37-yard field goal by Chicago's Carlos Huerta, and a 50-yarder by Washington's Scott Blanton tied it 3-3 at halftime.

Redskins quarterback Gus Frerotte completed 18 of 29 passes for 177 yards.

Kramer was 19-for-37 for 167 yards and one interception.

Chiefs frustrate Raiders, 19-3

By DOUG TUCKER
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo.
The once-great Oakland Raiders can't seem to stop the misery.

James Hasty burned them with a defensive touchdown for the second year in a row and Kansas City cruised 19-3 Sunday, handing Oakland its eighth straight loss dating back to last season. It was also the Chiefs' 13th victory in the last 14 meetings in one of the oldest, bitterest and now most lopsided rivalries in the NFL.

Every Chiefs score came as a direct or indirect result of a mistake by the Raiders (0-2), who went for the second straight week with Billy Joe Hobert in place of injured quarterback Jeff Hostetler.

The Chiefs (2-0), beginning defense of their AFC West title, were nursing a 7-0 lead midway through the third period when Oakland mounted its first serious drive. On second-and-goal from the 5, seven-time All-Pro Derrick Thomas beat Pat Harlow's block and delivered a savage hit on Hobert's blind side, knocking the ball loose.

Hasty, whose electrifying 64-yard interception return vaulted the Chiefs to a 23-17 overtime victory over Oakland in Arrowhead Stadium last year, picked up the ball on the 20 and sped 80 yards untouched. It was the third game in a row the Chiefs have scored a defensive TD in their domination of the Raiders.

Six plays earlier, Harlow was penalized for illegal use of hands in his desperate effort to contain the rush of Thomas, who turned the same trick in the fourth quarter. With 3:12 left, Thomas again beat Harlow and separated Hobert from the ball. Barrett Robbins recovered in the end zone for the Raiders, giving the Chiefs a safety.

The frustrated Raiders resorted to trickery in an effort to get moving in the third quarter and, if not for yet another mistake, it might have produced points.

Jeff Gossett went back to punt and then faked a handoff on an endaround to Dan Land. The play fooled everybody, and Gossett kept the ball for 18 yards and a first down on the Chiefs 35.

But a few minutes later, when Cole Ford lined up for a 43-yard field goal, the center snap went through Gossett's hands, and he was tackled by Dale Carter on the Chiefs' 45.

Nine plays later, Pete Stoyanovich kicked a 23-yard field goal to put the Chiefs on top 17-0.

A 23-yard pass interference penalty on Albert Lewis set up the Chiefs on the 1-yard line in the second quarter. Tony Richardson made a fumbling catch of Steve Bono's pass in the end zone on the next play.

Ford's 48-yard field goal with 7:01 left kept the Raiders from getting shut out.

In a scoreless first period, the Chiefs began drives on their own 8, 6, 30 and 3-yard line. But the Raiders were also stymied and managed only one scoring threat, when Napoleon Kaufman broke about five tackles on a 33-yard run to the Chiefs 41. But Keith Traylor broke through Barrett Robbins' block a few minutes later and got a hand on the ball when Ford tried a 43-yard field goal.

Stoyanovich, obtained this year in a trade with Miami, missed his first field goal attempt in Arrowhead Stadium. His 47-yard attempt early in the second quarter hit the right upright.

Up and coming Oilers top Jaguars

By DOUG FERGUSON
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.
Heisman Trophy winner Eddie George and the Houston Oilers made enough big plays to build a big lead over the Jacksonville Jaguars.

The defense finally caught on in time to save the game.

George, the No. 6 pick in the draft, broke the Jaguars' backs with a 76-yard run that led to Chris Chandler's third touchdown pass, and the defense came up with two turnovers in the final three minutes to preserve a 34-27 victory.

The Oilers (1-1) lost seven of eight games last year that were decided by seven points or fewer, and opened the season last week with a 20-19 loss to Kansas City.

"We made it close," said coach Jeff Fisher.

"We found a way to make a play at the end to win the football game."

George had the kind of play that should have made the defensive heroics unnecessary.

Mike Hollis had just missed a 31-yard field goal for the Jaguars — their second time inside the 20 in the second half without a touchdown — and they had Houston facing first-and-20 from the 11.

Seemingly trapped in the backfield on a draw, George avoided tackles by Jeff Lageman and Joel Smeenge, eluded safety Travis Davis and then galloped to the 13-yard line.

That set up Chandler's 11-yard touchdown pass to Willie Davis and a 31-13 lead.

"That gave the whole team a lift," said safety Blaine Bishop. "With a big burst like that, you could sense that this game was over. The defense almost gave it back, but we came up with the big plays when we had to."

Bishop had one of them.

After the Jaguars cut the lead to 34-20, Bishop jarred the ball loose from tight end

Pete Mitchell on the 2-yard line, and Rafael Robinson recovered with 3:08 remaining.

The Jaguars (1-1) made it close when Chris Hudson returned a punt 46 yards to the 3, and Keenan McCardell made a juggling catch for a touchdown to get within 34-27.

Dave Thomas recovered the onside kick, but Mark Brunell's pass on the first play after the two-minute warning bounced high off Mitchell's hands, and Marcus Robertson dove for the interception at the 10-yard line. It was Robertson's second interception of the game.

George finished with 17 carries for 143 yards and a touchdown.

"I didn't want to get tired, but I did," said George. "I saw Jeff Lageman coming up and I said, 'Oh, no, this is going to be ugly.' I just spun out of it and all of a sudden there was this green grass."

Chandler was 14-of-22 for 226 yards. The Oilers had at least one play for seven possessions.

"I don't think we held up our end of the bargain," said Jaguars' linebacker Bryan Schwartz.

"Eddie George is a big back and it's going to take three or four guys to get on him. The Oilers were making big plays and that was a big one. That took the wind out of our sails."

The Oilers took a 34-13 lead early in the fourth quarter after a 16-play drive that lasted more than 10 minutes and ended with Al Del Greco's 29-yard field goal.

Brunell was 27-of-38 for 302 yards. The Jaguars had no trouble moving the ball, but Houston's defense came up with timely plays twice inside the 20.

At first-and-10 from the 11 with Houston leading 17-10, Gary Walker broke through the line and stuffed James Stewart for a 3-yard loss. The

Niners top Rams, Young hurt

By DENNIS GEORGATOS
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO
San Francisco's defense, usually overshadowed by the 49ers' high-powered offense, stole the spotlight Sunday. Helping make up for the loss of quarterback Steve Young, the defense scored on a pair of safeties and registered its first shutout in seven years in a 34-0 win over the St. Louis Rams.

"How about that Ram 'O'?", said Young, forced out in the third quarter with a groin strain. "It looks like the other teams offense is literally playing uphill. It's a phenomenal thing to watch. The domination is complete."

The Rams committed four turnovers and the 49ers' defensive pressure hounded St. Louis into a quarterback switch.

Steve Walsh, booed at home over his ineffectiveness in St. Louis' season-opening win over Cincinnati last week, threw a first-quarter interception and was pulled in favor of rookie Tony Banks, who fumbled three times after being sacked. He also was sacked for a safety for the game's first points in the second quarter.

"He was kind of confused a little bit. I don't think he ever really got a grip on what was going on," said defensive tackle Bryant Young, who had three of San Francisco's seven sacks and tackled Banks in the end zone. "As soon as he set up he had to run out of the pocket so he never got a chance to establish himself."

Elvis Grbac, who replaced Young after the starter was injured, led two fourth-quarter scoring drives in San Francisco's 12th straight win over the Rams (1-1).

Walsh completed 2 of 6 passes for 13 yards before being yanked in favor of Banks, who finished 6 of 16 for 69 yards. With the game out of reach, Banks gave way to Jamie Martin in the closing minutes.

"We were totally ineffective on offense. I just wanted to see if a change might spark us," St. Louis coach Rich Brooks said. "It was a tough situation to put a rookie into. It turned out to be a tough day for him and the entire offense."

Walsh was disappointed that he was replaced by Banks.

"It's frustrating to come out of a zero-zero game because there's a lot of plays left," Walsh said. "I was a little surprised. Obviously, I felt I could turn it around."

Brooks said he was inclined to start Walsh in the Rams' game against Washington in two weeks but made no guarantee.

Jeff Wilkins kicked three field goals, including a 22-yarder with 3:47 left in the third quarter.

Cowboys, Aikman humiliate Giants

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
Associated Press Writer

IRVING, Texas
Cancel the burial detail. The Dallas Cowboys finally looked like Super Bowl champions again.

Troy Aikman rediscovered Dallas' lost offense by throwing three touchdown passes Sunday, and the Cowboys, stung by a bumbling loss to Chicago, celebrated their home opener with a 27-0 victory over the New York Giants.

The much-criticized first-team offense, which hadn't scored a touchdown since the exhibition season opener against Oakland, went 50, 81, and 71 yards for touchdowns to lead 21-0 at intermission.

Aikman had missed suspended wide receiver Michael Irvin and injured tight end Jay Novacek. But this was a day of few busted assignments, crisp route running, perfect passes and stout defense that kept the Giants from crossing midfield until late in the game.

After the Giants (0-2) stopped Dallas (1-1) on their goal line early in the first period, Aikman hit Deion Sanders with a 9-yard scoring pass, flipped a 19-yard touchdown pass to Kevin Williams and found Emmitt Smith with a 5-yard scoring pass just two seconds short of halftime.

Sanders, who went both ways again but didn't come close to the 108 plays in Chicago, beat cornerback Jason Sehorn for the first touchdown pass after the Giants compiled 39 yards in pass interference penalties.

Aikman, who has only a 9-6 record against New York, showed a perfect touch on the pass to Williams on third-and-1 from the Giants 19.

Smith, still playing with a sore neck courtesy of a self-inflicted injury at Chicago on a play-fake, sneaked past linebacker Corey Widmer on the beat-the-clock touchdown pass.

Smith showed no problems with his neck injury and rushed for 94 yards on 25 carries.

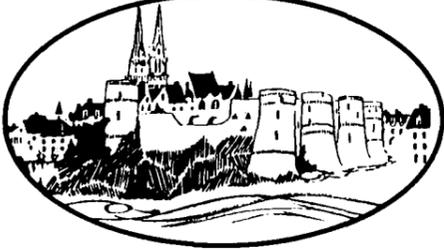

Aikman completed 19 of 27 passes for 228 yards for the revamped Cowboys offense.

Chris Boniol hit field goals of 23 and 29 yards in the second half as the Cowboys played conservatively.

It was the sixth consecutive time Dallas defeated the Giants in Texas Stadium. The Giants opened the season by losing 23-20 to Buffalo in overtime.

New York started the season last year by losing 35-0 to Dallas, the last time the team was shut out. The Giants' deepest penetration was to the Dallas 44 with 5:39 to play. Through the first three quarters, the Giants had minus-6 yards passing.

Streiffer also scored a goal in each of her first two games at Alumni Field.

"It was definitely exciting to be out there in front of the fans," she said.

Immediately following the goal by Gerardo, Daws and freshman Jenny Heft connected on a give-and-go.

Heft got the assist on the effort with a sliding pass to the cutting Daws.

On the other side of the ball, Washington had troubles penetrating the defense as they got off less than ten shots. Senior goal keeper Jen Renola did have to make an occasional save.

Thirteen minutes into the second half, Renola preserved her shutout by punching the ball just shy of the goal post in mid-air.

"This win was tough for us," stated Streiffer. "It was so tough because we were tired, which showed a little bit."

The Irish had their first home victory against the Wisconsin Badgers on Friday night, 3-1. The Badgers looked over-matched by the Irish's speed and agility.

Streiffer, Manthei, and Heft were able to exploit the Badger's defense. Brown turned in a stellar performance with two goals, while Boxx also tallied one.

"Overall this weekend was good for us," said Petrucelli.

matches.

The home team had the eventual tournament champs Cardinals on the ropes but failed to deliver the knock out blow as Louisville's hitting machine Marina Sinchenko, out of the Institute of Metal and Alloys in Moscow, recorded 18 of her match high 22 kills in the final three games.

"We came out very strong and played our game early," observed senior outside hitter Kristina Ervin. "After the second game, the focus wasn't there. That kind of loss hurts morale but we just have to take it as a learning experience and file it away."

Head coach Debbie Brown concurs. "This was a very very disappointing loss because we played very well in the first two games, but we allowed them to get back in the match."

The Louisville and Stanford losses combined were the first back-to-back home losses in head coach Debbie Brown's six year tenure. Their record under Brown at home now stands at 71-6.

In Saturday's action, the Irish bounced back with two 3-0 sweeps of Kentucky and Indiana. All-Tournament selections senior hitter Jenny Birkner and freshman middle blocker Mary Leffers continued their fine play. Leffers led the team in blocking while Birkner and Angie Harris led the team in kills.

In the morning match, Kentucky could not handle the Irish attack as the match only took 50 minutes. Notre Dame dominated action 15-5, 15-1, 15-9 with Leffers totaling 11 kills and an excellent .526 hitting percentage.

In the Indiana State Championship, the Hoosiers gave the Irish a very competitive contest but Indiana came up on the short end of a 15-12, 15-11, 15-7 final.

A lift for the banged up Irish came in the form of Kristina Ervin who has come back after a sprained ankle suffered in the first match of the year.

"It was great to see Kristina come back because earlier people were dropping like flies," commented Harris.

"It's great to have her back," Brown expressed. "She is a very, very good passer. She doesn't have her range of motion back yet, but she'll be 100 percent in a couple of weeks."

ball, there must be a problem there. It's not enough to wonder about the weather; sometimes if you lose the ball once it goes to your head."

Farmer started Thursday night's game against Vanderbilt at the tailback position, losing a fumble on Notre Dame's fourth play from scrimmage.

He was immediately supplanted in the line-up by sophomore Autry Denson, who started the game at split end.

Edwards, usually a sure bet to hold on to the ball, also lost two fumbles for the Irish. However, the senior did score on a goal-line plunge in the fourth quarter and take in the two point conversion to bring the Irish back on top.

"We were very disappointed as a team with the fumbling, but you have to look at the bottom line. We got the win," Kinder explained.

It is undetermined as of yet who will start at tailback against Purdue. Kinder did indicate that there is a strong possibility that Denson may take the pole position, a possibility opened by solid performances from the Irish receiving corps against the Commodores.

"When (fumbles) happen, it takes the air out of the offense," Kinder related. "If we can't keep the ball on the ground, it kills our momentum and our confidence."

The question remains: can someone adequately fill Kinder's place against Purdue? The Irish don't have much time to find the answer.

■ MEN'S SOCCER

Despite frustrating result, Irish make great strides

By BRIAN REINTHALER
Sports Writer

A tie never fails to produce mixed emotions. In collegiate soccer, it indicates that two teams battled for 120 minutes, and neither came out victorious.

For an underdog, it often evokes humble satisfaction. For a favorite, empty consolation. However, none of the above can completely describe the many feelings that resulted from Notre Dame's 2-2 tie with Big East rival St. John's.

The Irish went into Saturday night's contest against top 10 St. John's with the memories of a 6-0 drubbing at the hands of the Red Storm just a year ago. But this did not stop Mike Berticelli's squad from playing for the win. Rather, it may have given the team extra incentive to spoil the plans of the defending Big East Tournament champions.

"We did not come in with any intention other than winning this game," said Berticelli.

From the outset, the Irish never appeared intimidated by the more experienced Storm. Even with the absence of starting marking back Alan Woods, who strained an MCL at the end of practice on Friday, the Blue and Gold defense refused to yield an inch to the heralded St. John's attack. They held the visiting squad to just two shots in the first half and despite failing to register a shot of their own, created plenty of opportunities which were either shot wide or broken up at the last second.

"We played strong, well-organized defense," explained Berticelli, "and did not give up any good opportunities. We stepped up the level of play and I was very satisfied."

The opportunities picked up a bit for both teams in the second half, and each just missed a goal on at least one occasion.

With about ten minutes remaining in regulation, the Irish set up a beautiful scoring chance. There was a penalty kick in the offensive zone which was played into the corner to junior forward Joe Gallo. Gallo quickly centered the ball across the face of the goal box to midfielder Matt Johnson who leaped and fired a header just over the crossbar.

The St. John's opportunity was thwarted by one part good defense and one part luck. With one second remaining on the clock, a Red Storm attacker fired a shot that was blocked in the penalty box and caromed to the foot of the same player. Once again the player fired the ball toward the goal, this time beating goalie Greg Velho. However, the celebration after the goal was quickly halted when it was determined that time had indeed expired before the final shot was taken.

Thus, the Irish had accomplished something that many believed they could not. They had not only played competitively with one of the nation's finest soccer squads for a full 90 minutes, but they had shut that team out and forced an overtime that would afford them the chance to win the game outright.

Since tie games in NCAA soccer are decided by two 15 minute halves, the first order of business for the Irish was resting key players so that they would be fresh for the second of the two periods.

"We had to rest (Chris) Mathis and Gallo," said Berticelli, "and we needed to get through the first overtime (half)."

Ironically, that first half proved to be the most important for Notre Dame.

Less than one minute into the period, freshman forward Andrew Aris continued to display the effort that has made him the leading Irish scorer early in the season. On a ball played back toward the Red Storm sweeper, Aris outthrust the defender and slid to knock the ball past the opposing goalkeeper, giving Notre Dame a 1-0 lead.

Four minutes later, Velho made an excellent play to break up a potentially dangerous situation. A St. John's forward was advancing on a loose ball in the penalty box that rolling toward the goal. Velho got an early jump on the play and smothered the ball just in time to deny the Storm attacker.

However, just one minute later, St. John's finally broke through on Velho, who had played over 275 shutout minutes up until that point. The visitors once again controlled the ball in the Irish zone and a midfielder directed an excellent shot on goal from less than 20 yards out. Velho sprang to his left for the save, but was only able to get one hand on the follow-up shot which deflected into the cage.

With score evened up at one, just a few minutes after the young Irish had finally scored, one might have expected to see them concede and lose hope defeating the favored Red Storm. But the Irish persevered and continued to play with a great deal of heart.

With a little more than two minutes remaining in the first overtime period, sophomore midfielder Ben Bocklage stole the ball on the right sideline and beat his defender as he moved toward the center of the field. Then, from 30 yards out, Bocklage unloaded a cannon of a shot that only lost speed upon rippling the cords in the back of the St. John's goal.

"The greatest thing was the tremendous amount of character that we showed," commented Berticelli. "We didn't break."

The Bocklage goal gave the Blue and Gold momentum that carried through to the second half of overtime. In between periods, coach Berticelli warned his players against watching the scoreboard.

"We're not going to sit back," Berticelli said. "We have to play the game, not the clock."

The Irish did just that. In addition to turning away countless Storm attempts to invade the zone, the offense manufactured a scoring opportunity. The chance was lost to an offside call which resulted from indecision on the part of the young Aris.

Coach Berticelli tried to put the problems in perspective.

"I thought the game was a tremendous positive. Our focus in the game was tremendous, and it brought us closer and tighter as a team."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take full responsibility for your actions if you want others to respect you. An attempt to mix business with pleasure could turn out poorly. Keep your professional and personal life strictly separate! Career advancement will be rapid early in 1997. Romance may not be exhilarating, but it will be deeply satisfying. Widen your circle of friends when you get the chance. Someone from another country could become an important ally as next summer approaches.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actress Sylvia Miles, quarterback Joe Theismann, actor Hugh Grant, singer Otis Redding.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): It is time to set some new goals where your career and romance are concerned. Family members come to your aid, offering financial assistance and emotional support.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Learn more about technology. Purchase a computer for business and family use. Someone's unpredictable behavior could have you worried. Your need for independence is real.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A business competition heats up. You win hands down! Form a partnership with someone who has a proven track record. Discuss personal matters face-to-face with the people directly involved.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): A strong role model is a source of inspiration. However, follow your own heart — not someone else's footsteps. A romantic commitment is favored. Refuse to let other people dictate your wedding or honeymoon plans.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look for ways to improve your neighborhood. A community watch group may ease someone's fears. Thoughts of an old friend keep surfacing. Issue an invitation or make plans to visit this person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good news comes from people at a distance. A trip to an exotic locale sounds exciting. Contact a travel agent. Friends may seek your financial advice.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An event that you want to attend requires advance tickets or reservations. Check it out. Friends urge you to be less SCORPIO and more spontaneous.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try not to be too judgmental if friends disappoint you. New agreements are possible if you connect with business people on a personal level. Romance enjoys beneficial influences this evening.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Concentrate on business negotiations early in the day. Your timing is excellent! Others decide to join your team. An intellectual argument proves disarming.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If possible, take your mate along on a business trip. Old friends in the same city will provide entertainment. Seniors play a major role in a community or church affair.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A romantic relationship comes to an end. A more suitable partner is waiting in the wings. Family and friends will applaud your choice! New memories begin to crowd out the old ones.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Others may be busy shopping while you concentrate on work. Seek a better balance between your work and family duties. Office romances are exciting but unwise. Protect your career by acting professionally at all times.

Irish continue to make it look easy, take two

By KATHLEEN LOPEZ
Sports Writer

Some say the strength of a team lies in its ability to overcome obstacles. The women's soccer team showed their strength yesterday, as they battled sickness and injuries to defeat the No. 13 Washington Huskies, 4-0. Some of the injuries that were sustained happened in the Friday night victory over the No. 14 Wisconsin Badgers, 3-1.

A third of Notre Dame's starting lineup were injured or sick. Freshman Kara Brown sat out yesterday's contest due to an injury against Wisconsin. Brown got kicked in the head, and received stitches just above her eye.

Due to her injury, sophomore Laura Vanderberg, started in her place. Senior midfielder Cindy Daws fell ill, but battled through it to command the Irish in the center.

While fellow midfielder, sophomore Shannon Boxx, also played through the pain, due to an injury to her foot. Boxx had to play defense when freshman Jen Grubb went down in the second half. Grubb turned her ankle while trying to clear the ball.

"It was a tough game for us," said head coach Chris Petrucelli. "Friday night took a lot out of us."

Sophomore Monica Gerardo turned in a spectacular performance for the Irish with two goals in the second half. Her first goal came around twenty minutes into the half. She was fouled outside the penalty box, giving the Irish a free kick. Sophomore Holly Manthei floated the ball into the goal area, where Gerardo then headed it in.

Gerardo's second goal came just ten minutes later. Freshman Jenny Streiffer chipped the ball into the goal box, and Gerardo vollied it in for the

Sophomore Monica Gerardo and freshman Jenny Streiffer teamed up to help the Irish maintain their winning ways this weekend with a 4-0 victory over No. 13 ranked Washington and a 3-1 triumph over No. 14 Wisconsin. # Kinder to rest against Purdue

By DAVE TREACY
Associate Sports Editor

The Irish running game just got more interesting.

Despite previous expectations to the contrary, tailback Randy Kinder will not participate in the home opener against the Purdue Boilermakers this Saturday. A pulled quadriceps muscle has sidelined the senior until the trip to Austin to face the Texas Longhorns on September 21.

"I'm doing rehabilitation now and getting stronger," Kinder said. "The bottom line is that I'd rather come back a little later at 100 percent than push myself and risk a worse injury."

Head trainer Jim Russ and other physicians alerted Kinder of their decision this weekend. Kinder originally injured his right quadriceps muscle at Culver Military Academy two weeks before the start of the season.

The muscle pull has forced both Kinder and the team to reevaluate the running game and objectives for the season.

"I went into this year with several goals set out for myself," Kinder recalled. "Obviously, one of them was to stay healthy for the whole season. It is very hard for me to watch the game and not be able to contribute."

Kinder's unavailability also brings about concerns for the coaching staff. Six total fumbles, including four lost balls, produce many question marks to the surface about who should handle ball-carrying duties. Although Kinder will likely jump back into the starting role he claimed before the season, determining the player who will start against Purdue is still a major issue to address.

"Robert (Farmer) and Marc (Edwards) just had bad games," Kinder assessed. "They are both dependable with the ball. But when two players drop the

In this still very young season, the Notre Dame women's volleyball team has already learned many lessons. This weekend the Irish learned a little more about themselves, going 2-1 in the Big Four Classic at the Joyce Center.

After dropping a tough match to No. 2 ranked Stanford on Wednesday, the No. 19 team in the nation, the Louisville Cardinals, handed the Irish a very discouraging loss by the final of 12-15, 5-15, 15-13, 15-7, 15-12. The grueling five game match took two hours and twenty minutes to play including the pivotal third game which lasted 45 minutes.
