Pro-Life alumni protest Bradley over stadium

By MICHELLE KRUPA
News Editor

Alongside pleas for marriage and ads for pizza flew a different sort of banner over the stadium during Saturday's football game.

Two planes toted signs reading "ND drop Senator Bradley" and "Sen. Bradley backed abortion," messages from the alumni in the Pro-Life Action League calling the University to abandon its lecture series and class taught by former Senator Bill Bradley. During his 18 years in Congress, the New Jersey Democrat held steadfastly to his pro-choice platform.

"Since the University administration is apparently unconcerned that Bradley's public record is in direct opposition to the Catholic Church's mission to value all life, we ... made plans to deliver our message directly to the University's community," said League executive director and former Notre Dame instructor Joseph Scheidler in a recent press release.

"Washington Hall has witnessed greats such as Gilbert Keith Chesterton and Hilaire Belloc, speaking from the same stage," Scheidler continued. "But to sit in that hollowed hall and listen to a man touting the challenge to provide for the needs of children, while he supports the genocide of America's unborn children, was close to sacrilege."

Bradley, who gave his first lecture last Thursday night, addressed the conflict between his views on abortion and those of the Church.

"I support freedom of choice for the woman," Bradley said last week. "I respect those who have an opposing view because they have a strong moral conviction for their belief. I think we just agree to disagree."

"But I think the University governs actions in the University," he added. "I think that people who come here will understand that it's a Catholic institution. I'm not going to second guess the administration as for their religious convictions."

While the Pro-Life Action League chose to display its convictions to more than 80,000 football fans at the Michigan game, Notre Dame's student Right to Life group has a different approach to Bradley's appointment as a visiting professor.

"We are planning on putting out a letter soon with our statement on the matter," said group president Samantha Snyder. "We do object to [Bradley's] record, but we don't want to run a negative campaign."

"We want to disclaim whatever [Pro-

FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT BOARD

FMB discusses $66K deficit

By ERICA THESING
News Writer

In response to last week's announcement of a $66,000 student government budget deficit, the Financial Management Board met in a closed meeting yesterday to discuss its options for removing the debt.

The board outlined a two-year payback plan for the various branches of the student union, according to Andrea Selak, student body vice president.

The plan calls for all the organizations and councils within student government to pay back 50 percent of their 1198-99 debt each year for the next two years. Student Union Board worked out a separate, three-year payment plan of 40 percent, 30 percent and 30 percent because of the size of its deficit.

The board also discussed closing accounts of branches which go over their budgets, but that will be handled on a case-by-case basis, according to Selak. She explained that certain committees can go into debt for a short period of time, then recover after a large fundraiser later in the year.

The board also agreed to check in with each branch, including clubs, organizations and Hall Presidents Council, on a monthly basis to update their financial records and answer any questions for them.

In addition, the Student Senate is putting together an oversight committee as another check against future deficit problems. The senate will further discuss this committee at their meeting on Wednesday, according to Selak.

The entire deficit is $66,000, with $11,740 of that belonging to the Office of the President, according to figures presented at last week's Student Senate meeting. Those numbers may be clarified in a report issued today by the student body treasurer, said Selak.

"There may have been a mistake in some of the transfers so the debt may be less," she said. "But the amount that each club owes will not change. Currently there is $24,000 unaccounted for."

To cover its own debt, student government is looking at each of its committees and examining areas that may be subsidized by other sources.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

Driver card will provide free soft drinks

By ROBERT PAZORNIK
News Writer

Each scholastic year, thousands of young students are killed in alcohol-related auto accidents around the nation.

Last year, Notre Dame's student government, launched a unique designated driver program in conjunction with area taverns and restaurants. The program is designed to reward the individual who does not drink, rather than castigate the individual who does.

Students may obtain special cards which entitle them to free non-alcoholic beverages at participating places by committing to being designated drivers.

"It's really a different kind of strategy," said Brandy Scott, manager of BW-3 Bar and Grill in South Bend. "The goal is the same: to prevent drunk driving. But the means to achieve the goal are entirely different."

As of this week, BW-3 will become one of nearly 20 local bars and alcohol-serving eateries to adopt the nascent program. The list of participants includes area favorites such as the Mishawaka Brewing Company, the on-campus Alumni-Senior Club, The Linebacker, C.J.'s Bar and Grill, Corby's Irish Pub, McCormick's, Club 23, Coach's, the Madison Oyster Bar and a host of other establishments.

"I've never heard of anything like it," said sophomore Scott Killen. "I think it could potentially be more effective than current efforts to encourage designated driving. Public service announcements and billboards can only do so much to alleviate the problems that students face."

Other students seem equally optimistic.

"Finally we have an idea that makes sense," said junior, Joseph Collins. "It's great that students and the administration could finally agree on some kind of alcohol

Responding to the Challenge

How you respond to the challenge in the second half will determine what you become after the game, whether you are a winner or a loser.
—Lou Holtz

When I volunteered to write today's column, I had planned on writing about professor Bradley's lecture and the reactionary criticisms that surround it. This was my plan, but a funny thing happened on the way to the office Saturday. I followed a crowd up the road, past SDH and stumbled on quite a sight. I don't know how many of you have heard, but ND won its first game of the season a few days ago. From what I hear, the team they beat was supposed to be half-decent last year. Now that we're 1-0, the experts claim that the Irish may be better than they previously thought.

Joking aside, the Notre Dame/Michigan game lived up to the hope and hype. The saying "as good as it gets" was almost as appropriate as another shirt (of the maize and blue variety) worn by many students on Saturday. Notre Dame won a game against a top five team for the first time in five years. The Irish D stood tough. The Irish O, led for the first time by #7, recovered from a troubling first half to literally overruled the Michigan defense. The coaching was superb. In short — "though the odds were great, but Old Notre Dame won over all."

In this same space last Friday, a column was written about the mood of football weekends here on campus. A detailed account of a game-day in the life of an average Domer was presented. Well, sports fans, whether Sept. 5 was your first or last game day, remember it. It doesn't get much better than that. We woke up the echoes and the thunder came down — not bad for a home opener.

The greatest part of the game for me was not necessarily observing Autry run past the Maize & Blue or watching Tom Brady get drilled again and again. The most memorable part was cheering on the Irish as they came together to overcome a seven point half-time deficit against the defending national champions. Our team was up against it and things were wrong, but we won one — just for the Gipper. That's what I'll remember.

In his lecture last week, former Senator Bradley did talk about coming together as a nation in an attempt to live more harmoniously in society. He focused on our American culture: past, present and future. He spoke of America as a country that is "about stretching boundaries" and one that is continually redefined.

This past Saturday, I felt that we came together as a school and did achieve harmony, for a few hours at least. When I stormed the field with waves of my classmates and walked out of the tunnel to deafening cheers, I truly understood the expression, "WE ARE ND." Can that feeling be replicated on a day other than Saturday? Are we at a time to make Notre Dame new again? I don't know the answers, but even if we could it wouldn't be easy.

After the win, Bob Davie was quoted as saying, "At some point, you better step up and win a big game ... and this confirms to the players that this will work." That reminds me of another quote I once read. It comes from Vince Lombardi, another coach who knew what it felt like to win a big game or two. He didn't use the word "some" too much, though. He said, "Winning is not a sometime thing; it's an all time thing. You don't win once in a while, you don't do things right once in a while, you do them right all the time. Winning is habit. Unfortunately, so is losing."

GO IRISH, BEAT SPARTANS! WE ARE ND.

Police to begin undercover surveillance of campus parties

STATE COLLEGE, Penn. Undercover police officers may use Penn State ID cards to enter parties this weekend, State College Police Chief Tom King said.

King made the announcement Monday during a question-and-answer period with members of the Interfraternity Council. Hushed whispers met King's statements about the privileges of undercover officers.

"It seems like (the State College Police Department is) going pretty far out of their way to make sure students get busted," said James Hornick, Undergraduate Student Government fraternity senator.

State College police officers who are Penn State students and student volunteers, ranging from those with an interest in law enforcement to those serving State College police as punishment, have participated in undercover operations before, he said.

However, he would not comment on whether non-student police officers would have access to ID cards.

Awaiting approval from the Centre County district attorney, King said he would consider hiring additional students to go undercover to expand the operations.

"I don't think it's very fair for the student population. It's obvious that we're going to party. They shouldn't pry into students' business," said Miranda Minetti (junior-health policy administration).

Although police may have access to ID cards, those cards have not been provided to State College police through the Penn State ID card office, said. The cards only are provided to currently enrolled or employed students, faculty and staff, he said.

With or without ID cards, the officers or student volunteers working on State College police's behalf are not obligated to reveal their affiliation at the door of the party, King said. Once inside, the officer does not have access to closed rooms unless permitted inside, King added. In both cases, even if the officer or volunteer lies to gain entry, he or she can still report incidents.

Athletes fly despite Northwest strike

EAST LANSING, Mich.

The MSU women's volleyball team not only has to worry about the opposition at its upcoming tournament in Louisville, but because of the Northwest strike it has to worry about how to get there. Pam Mitchell, the director of sales at Spartan Travel, said the volleyball team had to cancel its planned flight to Louisville and schedule a bus trip instead. "We have been very pro-active in our handling of the Northwest strike," Mitchell said. "The Northwest strike has been different from strikes in the past. We knew back in April that a strike might happen so we were able to protect the teams with buses." Notre Dame fans that are planning on coming to the football game against MSU may have trouble getting into town. "The football team charters their flights so that really hasn't been a problem. Other sports bringing in recruits to football games may run into problems." "The Notre Dame football team drives to Michigan State, so we don't."

Homesickness more than a social ill

AMES, Iowa

If home is where the heart is, many students are far from it. As newcomers to college life and independence, many freshmen face the strain of living and studying away from the familiarities of home. Stress caused by classes, combined with homesickness and loneliness, can lead many first-year students to depression, withdrawal and sickness. This danger is especially high for freshman who have, in the past, spent little time away from family, friends and "home sweet home." "Homesickness is a common part of a student's adjustment," said Dr. Nancy Corbin, assistant director for clinical services at Student Counseling Center. "Most new students feel excited, yet really they miss the things they have left behind." Some ISU freshmen expressed feeling lonely because of the absence of their high school friends. "I've got the 'lonelies' because I don't have my good friends to turn to," said freshman Shannon Schwab from Evansdale.

Contract negotiations at standstill

KENT, Ohio

Kent State administration and faculty union negotiators have been meeting up to four times a week since late May in hopes of deciding on a new contract for tenure-track faculty. This contract is negotiated every three years. The current contract, which has been in effect since late October 1995, will expire Sept. 16, at 12:01 a.m. If a settlement is not reached by the deadline, several things could happen. Frank Smith, chief negotiator for the faculty, said it is possible that the current contract will remain in effect until an agreement is reached. "This has happened in the past," he said. "But there's no guarantee this will happen again." Stephane Booth, president of the American Association of University Professors at Kent State, said she hopes a settlement will be reached by the deadline, but said this has not been the case in the recent past. "In 1995, we were able to settle by the end of October." it

Ticket scalping presents dilemma

STATE COLLEGE, Penn.

The law of supply and demand. Entrepreneurial enterprise. High payoffs. Risky operations. Sound like economics class? It's not — it's football ticket scalping at Penn State. Each year, the athletic ticket office sells all of the tickets available to students, but even well into football season, tickets are still changing hands. For students short on money, selling football tickets can yield a tidy profit. But reselling football tickets can mean big problems for scalpers. The rules governing the resale of Penn State tickets are simple — a football ticket cannot be sold for more than its face value. If a student is caught scalping tickets, the first offense charge includes a summary violation and a maximum fine of $300. For a second offense, the person faces a misdemeanor charge, a maximum fine of $2,500 and up to one year in prison. Yet each year many students advertise tickets for sale or tickets needed.

SMC students serve homeless

By JESSICA DELGADO
News Writer

While some students headed home for the summer, a group of Saint Mary's students chose to spend the summer working at homeless shelters and clinics across North America.

The students were part of the Caring Connection program, which is supported by SURV director Sister Linda Kors and the alumnae offices of Saint Mary's College.

For the past few summers, students participating in the program have stayed with alumnae while providing services to elderly and poverty-stricken women and children in the area.

This year, seven students worked in cities including Columbus, Ohio, St. Louis, Mo., and Silver Spring, Md. This was the first year that South Bend was a site for Caring Connection and four students remained on campus to tend to the needs of the community.

A year-round stay at the College wasn't the ideal situation for many at first, Kors said, but after their rewarding experiences they did not mind. Mary Porter stayed in South Bend and worked at the Sacred Heart Parish and the local center of Respite Care.

ly in the hospital and home-bound individuals, Porter might have expected scientific learning, but she did not know how much more it would affect her.

"It was a lot different from actually working in the hospital," Porter said. "So much of it was a spiritual experience."

Porter visited those with breathing problems, blindness and, in one case, depression. Although she usually spent her afternoons making chit-chat with them, Porter also tried to brighten their days.

"I'd encourage them to do something, try something different," she said. "Even if I said it one million times before, and it could get frustrating, it was worth it when I'd see even little changes."

But Porter's main responsibility was listening.

"They'd tell me about their families or problems," she said. "I could tell them things or give them advice, but it was usually better just to listen. It means a lot more than speaking."

Like others involved in Caring Connection, Porter had frustrating or disappointing days.

"After visiting, it was really hard because I'd think about the person all day or all week or until the next time I saw them," she said. "I knew it meant so much to them; they loved seeing someone young and having someone to talk to."

In addition, Porter also ran a parish Bible camp for children ages five to 12, where she organized skits, games, crafts and sing-alongs from other countries.

Grads study in Far East

By MAGGY TINUCCI
News Writer

Three Notre Dame graduates have been awarded the prestigious Luce Scholarship in the past three years, an honor that enables them to live and work in the Far East for one year, doing work in a field of their particular interest.

"The scholarship is intended to give exposure and experience in the Far East to those who will one day have important positions in American life," said Steven Skaar, Luce Scholars liaison and professor of aerospace and mechanical engineering.

The scholarship was created more than 70 years ago by Henry Luce of Time magazine because he thought Americans did not know enough about the Far East. He wanted to give young people the opportunity to study a part of the world that would become very important in international issues, Skaar said.

"The foundation has been very happy with their Notre Dame representatives," he says.

Katie Wiltrout, Alex Andreichuk and Tony Yang are Notre Dame's most current winners of this award and were placed in settings compatible with their career objectives. The recipients are given substantial responsibility and gain valuable experience.

Wiltrout, an American studies major at Notre Dame, spent the 1995-96 school year working for an English language newspaper out of Seoul, South Korea.

Andreichuk, a civil engineering major, was placed in a Hong Kong engineering company last year. The company is responsible for large building projects and he was able to travel to major Asian cities.

Yang was nominated by his graduate school, Yale Law School, and is currently beginning his year in the Far East. His experience and interest lies in public advocacy and will be placed in some area appropriate to that, Skaar says.

The only stipulation of the nominees is that they have no previous experience or previous study of any issue pertaining to the Far East.

Life Action League] is doing. They told us what they were going to do, but I don't think students should be involved in it," she continued. "They're not going to get any involvement from us."

Law professor Charles Rice also came out in defense of the League, saying that the University's announcement of Bradley's appointment included talk of his being a national leader in tax reform, international trade, pension reform, community building and building race relations but did not mention his stand on abortion.

"The fact that Notre Dame didn't even consider abortion important means Notre Dame thinks that legalized abortion is not big deal; the murder of 37 million people is no big deal," Rice said. "Bradley's appointment is indefensible. It sends a message to the students that it is acceptable and even commendable for a legislator to support abortion."

University President Father Edward Malloy addressed the issue last week when introducing Bradley at the start of the former senator's lecture series.

"If we are to be a place where the church does its thinking, if, as a university, we are committed to truth-seeking and persuasion, then we must always provide an open intellectual forum," he said. "If we are to be effectively counter-cultural, then we must engage the spectrum of opinion in our prevailing culture."

"We're looking at all of our committees and seeing where we can take that money from," Selak said. "We're going to have to co-sponsor some activities that we already planned. We'll also have to look for funding from University departments and outside sources."

In addition, student government prepared a proposal to request aid from Notre Dame Security for the Safe Ride program.

one paid position — the dispatcher — for each night that Safe Ride operates. The proposed plan would allow that position to be incorporated with the paid student dispatch positions that security already has for Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

The proposal is ready and student leaders are in the process of setting up a meeting with Phil Johnson, assistant director of security, Selak said.

The Financial Management Board is comprised of the student body treasurer, two assistant treasurers, the controllers from student union board, student government and all the clubs and student organizations, and two student senators.

Special to The Observer

The department of civil engineering has received one of three Daniel P. Jenny Research Fellowships for the 1998-99 academic year for research related to precast and prestressed concrete.

The Fellowship, which is given out by the Precast/Prestressed Concrete Institute, carries an award of $10,000 and has been presented to graduate student Michael Allen, under the guidance of professor Yahya Kurama. Allen's project is titled "Seismic Behavior and Design of Unbonded Post-Tension Precast

The PCI research fellowship program was established in 1972 to support graduate civil engineering students interested in research related to precast and prestressed concrete. Fellowships generally conclude with a master's degree thesis and a summary paper published in the PCI Journal.

The other two students to receive the fellowship for 1998-99 are Marty Kopplin at the University of Nebraska at Omaha, and Robert Korry at the University of Wyoming at Laramie.

Brazil rallies against poverty

APARECIDA DO NORTE, Brazil — Tens of thousands of Brazilians marched to demand relief from poverty and neglect on Monday, the country's Independence Day. In dozens of cities, the fourth annual "Cry of the Excluded" rallies drew the landless and the jobless, peasants and squatters, politicians, clergy — and even the occasional cellular-toting businessman. The nationwide protest was organized by the Roman Catholic Church, labor unions and leftist political parties. Many candidates handed out campaign leaflets at the rallies. Many protesters had set out more than a month ago in caravans from remote interior towns to reach state capitals by Monday. Some 50,000 people gathered for a Mass and rally at the Basilica of Our Revealed Lady, Brazil's patron saint, in Aparecida do Norte, 105 miles east of Sao Paulo. Bishop Demetrio Valentini accused President Fernando Henrique Cardoso's government of not caring about the poor.

Spanish seek lucky toad

ALCALA DE LA SELVA, Spain — Forget Viagra; hundreds of people here are turning to a fertility toad — with no unpleasant side effects. With torches lighting their way in the dark of night, residents climbed a hillside Sunday night to pay homage to the "toad": a 17-foot-by-17-foot rock formation that looks like a toad and overlooks Alcala de la Selva, a mountain hamlet of 500 in eastern Spain's Teruel province. According to legend, touching the creature three times — no need to kiss it — under a full moon will make great things happen. The toad is supposed to be all-powerful, helping people with everything from putting zing back into their love lives to winning the lottery or passing a civil service exam. Mayor Benito Ros, estimating that about 1,000 people turned out to worship the toad, admitted that he, too, touched it, but not for luck in the bedroom. "I have four children," said Ros, 47. "I don't need any more fertility."

Divers find Swissair black box

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia — The flight-data recorder recovered by divers near the wreckage of Swissair Flight 111 contains no information from the final crucial minutes before the plane crashed, investigators said Monday. The setback offset good news from the search operation: a Canadian navy submarine has detected a signal from the plane's other "black box" — the cockpit-voice recorder. The chief crash investigator, Vic Gerden, said the flight-data recorder retrieved Sunday was in good condition and should provide more than 100 types of information ranging from altitude and airspeed to whether the plane's smoke warning lights were on. But he said there was no data from at least the last six minutes before the MD-11 jumbo jet plunged into the ocean off Nova Scotia on Wednesday night, killing all 229 aboard.

Young people from around the country participated yesterday in the the Million Youth Movement rally in Atlanta, Ga. The rally ended a four-day gathering for youth across the country.

Youths march in King's memory

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Nearly 400 people — mostly young blacks — took to the streets today as the Million Youth Movement culminated with a march through the historic Atlanta neighborhood where Martin Luther King Jr. was born.

The three-block walk ended with a rally just across the street from Ebenezer Baptist Church where King preached. By then, the crowd of mostly young blacks had almost doubled.

"This is a movement about the future, to encourage the young people to take control of their destiny," said Nelson Rivers, regional director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Among the early speakers at the rally were the Rev.

Jesse Jackson and Kweisi Mfume, NAACP president.

The youth-oriented gathering in Atlanta was much calmer than a similar one in New York on Saturday, which ended with a clash between police and some members of the crowd.

"It's been a very peaceful, very dignified and very proud movement," Mfume said.

The Million Youth Movement was backed by a coalition of civil rights advocates including the NAACP, the Nation of Islam and Jackson's Rainbow/Push Coalition.

"It's about economic, about education, about social and systemic issues and the plight of young people who are, quite frankly, faced with issues today that I never faced in my time," Mfume said.

Among those scheduled to address the rally later today was Martin Luther King III, son of the slain civil rights leader.

Speaking at a church Sunday night in Atlanta, Jackson said the youth-oriented event was designed to help continue the unfinished business of King.

"You may remember, his march was interrupted by an assassin's bullet," Jackson told a crowd of more than 200 at Atlanta's Cathedral of Faith Church of God in Christ. "He laid out the agenda for marching when he was still alive."

Young people from around the country are coming together because they want to better their lives, Jackson said, decrying what he called the nation's focus on "first-class jails, second-class schools."

Lawmakers nix Yeltsin's choice for PM

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Lawmakers rejected Boris Yeltsin's candidate for prime minister on Monday for a second time, throwing Russia into even deeper political turmoil as the economy hurtles out of control.

In other blows to Yeltsin on Monday, the ruble crashed again dramatically and the Central Bank chairman offered to quit. Some Russians flocked to stores to buy goods before prices shoot up any higher.

"The economic crisis is gaining momentum with catastrophic speed," acting Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin warned the State Duma, the lower house of parliament, before it torpedoed his nomination 273-138. "We are all standing on the edge and no time is left for settling scores," he said. "We must begin acting."

The vote sets the stage for a final confrontation between the president and his opponents. Yeltsin must decide whether to nominate Chernomyrdin again or find another candidate. If the Duma rejects Yeltsin's choice a third time, the constitution requires the president to dissolve parliament and call new elections within three months.

Russia has been operating with an interim government for two weeks, since Yeltsin brought Chernomyrdin back after firing him in March. Chernomyrdin's efforts to win confirmation by parliament have left him little time to devote to the worst economic crisis since the collapse of the Soviet Union.

Both Yeltsin and Chernomyrdin met with leaders of the parliamentary factions at the Kremlin before the vote, but there was no breakthrough, and the president offered only a few symbolic concessions.

"It's simply a great program," he said. "The primary goal is to allow students to drink non-alcoholic beverages without forcing them to pay outrageous charges. Ideally, the project will save student lives."

"It's not a question of a free drink, it's a question of a safe ride," said Randy Miller, a bartender at Corby's Irish Pub. "It would be ridiculous not to at least make an attempt at the program. If a life could be saved by a free pop, then I think it's well worth it."

Four die in New York storm

Associated Press

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Violent thunderstorms and possible tornadoes bent flagpoles and blew out windows Monday, causing at least four deaths — including two people hit by debris at the New York State Fair.

At least seven more people were injured at the fair and 20 buildings severely damaged in Syracuse, leaving about 140 students homeless from the early morning storm.

Power also was knocked out during the day to more than 460,000 homes from Niagara Falls to Long Island and into New Jersey.

Gov. George Pataki declared a disaster emergency for nine counties.

The National Weather Service was trying to determine whether it was a tornado that struck the fair, which was canceled for Labor Day. Flagpoles at the main entrance were bent in half by winds. Campers said monuments, tents and stands featuring carnival games were blown down and washed away in heavy-rain flooding.

"If it had happened three hours earlier," vendor Liz Koegel said. "It would have been a heck of a lot worse."

Two people were killed at the fair. A huge chunk of roof from an old dairy building flew more than 100 yards before crushing the tent where John Perry III, a 43-year-old ice cream vendor, was sleeping. A big tree limb slammed the trailer that 61-year-old Beryl Stone, who showed horses, had settled in to rest.

Andre Duclair, a first-year law student at Syracuse University, was in one of those buildings that had roofs blown off, windows shattered or floors collapsed.

Kolettis attended the University of Chicago, earning a bachelor's degree in philosophy, a master's degree in mathematics and physics, and a doctoral degree in mathematics. He taught for three years at Northwestern University before coming to Notre Dame.

A funeral for Kolettis was held Aug. 10 at the St. Andrews Greek Orthodox Church in South Bend. He is survived by his wife, Theodora; two sons, George and Peter; their wives, Julie and Michelle; and four grandchildren, George, Sara, Nicholas and Maria.

■ IRELAND

IRA splinter group pledges complete cease-fire

Associated Press

DUBLIN
The Irish Republican Army dissidents responsible for Northern Ireland's worst-ever terrorist attack called a "complete" cease-fire Tuesday but didn't apologize for their actions.

In a statement issued to the Irish state broadcasters RTE, the dissidents dubbed the Real IRA, said they had decided on a "complete cessation of all military activity." Late last month, the dissidents declared a "suspension" of what they called their "military operations," a step short of the decision Tuesday to call a formal cease-fire.

The Real IRA, which had previously rejected the Irish Republican Army's July 1997 cease-fire, has admitted responsibility for the Aug. 15 car bombing that killed 29 civilians and wounded more than 330 in the Northern Ireland town of Omagh. The last victim was buried Monday.

The cease-fire brings the group into line with the mainstream IRA and several other paramilitary groups. The IRA's main anti-British rival, the Irish National Liberation Army, called a truce Aug. 22, and Northern Ireland's two major outlawed pro-British factions, the Ulster Defense Association and Ulster Volunteer Force, called a joint cease-fire in 1994.

In response to the Omagh atrocity, the British and Irish governments passed anti-terrorist legislation that would give police greater power to secure conviction of suspected Real IRA members.

So far, however, police in Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic have yet to use those extra powers to round up suspects on their list.

British and Irish security forces say the Real IRA has recruited 50 to 100 members since October. Most supporters are believed to live south of the border that has divided Ireland since 1920.

Real IRA members and supporters claimed last week that senior IRA figures had visited their homes and threatened that "direct action" would be taken against them if they committed any more car bombings in Northern Ireland.

The Omagh attack was at least the seventh car bomb planted in a Northern Ireland town by the dissidents. The others had either been defused or exploded after police evacuated the immediate area, causing severe commercial damage and many injuries but no deaths.

The Real IRA's announcement came hours after Northern Ireland's major Protestant party, the Ulster Unionists, ended its ban on direct communication with the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party, another symbolic step down the road to reconciliation.

At a two-hour meeting at Stormont Parliamentary Building in Belfast, the venue for a new cross-community government outlined in April's peace accord, Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble discussed the establishment of a multiparty administration with seven other party leaders, including Sinn Fein chief Gerry Adams.

Trimble had sat through eight months of negotiations opposite Adams without saying a direct word to him, citing the IRA's refusal to start disarming as proof it had really renounced violence. The April agreement commits Sinn Fein to secure the IRA's disarmament by mid-2000.

Trimble had threatened to maintain that frosty pose indefinitely because of the IRA's refusal to begin disarming. But he relented after President Clinton appeared alongside him Thursday in Belfast and called for the IRA and Northern Ireland's pro-British paramilitary groups to disarm under terms of the accord.

A majority of Protestant and Catholic politicians in Belfast's new legislative Assembly in July elected Trimble to lead the new administration.

Snitch city/ house divided

At the end of last semester, The Women's Resource Center was placed on probation for two years under procedures assuring there would be little or no faculty scrutiny of that "higher power" who is Director of Student Activities at Notre Dame.

The DSA's involvement was triggered by an anonymous complaint by student informants (snitches). Faculty and students alike should be appalled by both the increasing frequency of snitching and by the provision in du Lac interpreted to prohibit student organizations and their members from providing information concerning "activities contrary to the moral teachings of the Catholic Church."

The provision effectively divides the University into realms of (daytime) light and (night time) darkness. The University could not maintain its status as a nationally ranked research University if it denied its faculty the opportunity to discuss the pros and cons of "activities contrary to the moral teachings of the Catholic Church."

Such denial of academic freedom (for faculty and students alike) during the daytime would amount to a declaration that Notre Dame is a seminary under strict episcopal control. So why is it OK at night? How can anyone possibly claim that students at Notre Dame enjoy any of the privileges of open, critical inquiry, if they have to check those privileges with Campus Ministry when they form a student organization?

The process that placed the WRC on probation lacked any semblance of procedural fairness. There is only one way to make witnesses out of snitches: let them confront those they accuse in a fair hearing.

Absolutes at the university

It's that time of year again when most universities and colleges crank up their student indoctrination program called a college education. Most university professors tell you there are no absolutes. They say it so absolutely. They don't even think they might be wrong. They are.

The next time some intellectual dogmatist tells you there are no absolutes, ask them to prove they really believe it by holding their breath for an hour. Maybe they only mean there are no absolutes in morality. In that case, they must believe it is okay to rape sometimes, okay to demean someone because of their race sometimes, okay to cheat on exams sometimes and even okay to shoot a professor who gives you a bad grade, sometimes.

They are also the ones who will ridicule you if you disagree with their relative values. You are absolutely a bigot and homophobic if you believe, along with most of humanity for most of history and most religions, that homosexuality is unnatural and immoral.

They will attack you if you hold the view that each individual human life begins at conception and that no one should have the choice to kill. You will be laughed at if you think pornography, like cigarettes, is harmful and ought to be restricted.

If you believe safe and fulfilling sex occurs only in a committed marriage of a man and a woman for a lifetime, you will be thought of as odd or extremist.

Most intellectual elites promote the indoctrination into the belief that we're all here as the result of random, natural processes rather than the intentional creative acts of a divine, loving Creator. If you believe in Divine Creation, you will not only be going against the system, your grades and opportunities for advancement may suffer, especially if you are open about those beliefs.

A good response to these critics is to quote a university hero, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., who stated "To believe that human personality is the result of the fortuitous interplay of atoms and electrons is as absurd as to believe that a monkey by hitting typewriter keys at random will eventually produce a Shakespearean play."

Finally, they say there are no absolutes in religion. Whatever you want to believe is fine if it satisfies you. They fail to take time to investigate the evidence for the only religious leader to have an empty tomb. Religion, like the rest of life is subject to the guidelines of truth.

Jesus Christ said, "I am the way and the truth and the life. No comes to the Father except through me (John 14:6)." His resurrection from the dead three days after his crucifixion by the Roman authorities was witnessed by more than 500 people. No one who reads this column and no one who suggests there are many ways to heaven expects to equal Jesus' accomplishment.

C.S. Lewis was a professor at Oxford University who at one time was an agnostic but became a devout follower of Jesus. He wrote in his book, Mere Christianity, "A man who was merely a man and said the sort of things Jesus said, wouldn't be a great moral teacher. He hasn't left that alternative open to us."

Good advice to students as they listen to their professors promote a relativistic view of life would be to remember the statement by one Penn State professor who responded to the outrageous comments of one of his colleagues. He said, "You can find crackpots anywhere."

■ UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA-BERKELEY

Geography 101

BERKELEY, Calif.

It is the start of another school year and classes are well underway. As college students, we have no doubt learned many things over the years. We have demonstrated that we've learned and absorbed the things that were taught to us since kindergarten. Two and two is four. The Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776. The boiling point of water is 100 degrees Celsius.

But I've noticed that many Americans don't have a good background in geography. Many don't know the countries to our north or south. Some Americans can't even locate the United States on the map. (It's that big horse-looking thing.)

It's not that Americans are stupid. Well, maybe a little. But it's more that the school system does not teach our children enough geography (not to mention a whole slew of other things). So, I've come up with some lessons that should be taught to every child in school and even to adults who lack a good background in geography.

Lesson 1: Major cities are seldom the capitals of their states. New York City, Los Angeles and Chicago are not state capitals. Instead, the podunk towns of Albany, Sacramento and Springfield are the seats of power. Why is this the case? That's simple: to confuse fourth graders who have to memorize all 50 states and their capitals.

Lesson 2: Canada is that big frozen country to the north of us. Contrary to popular belief, it is not a state — yet. It's only a matter of time before it becomes the 51st state. Let's face it — they look like us and they talk like us. We can teach them to say "out" and "about" correctly with shock therapy or something, eh?

There are 265 million Americans and only 30 million Canadians. We can invade when they are all out playing hockey. They can't possibly utilize all that ice like we would be able to; Hockey rinks and chilling Molson's beer only take up so much. And wouldn't it be nice not to have to listen to "O, Canada" at a Blue Jays game? One national anthem is enough. (And, by the way, Ottawa, not Toronto, is the capital of Canada. That little bit of information will come in handy when it becomes the 51st state.)

Lesson 3: Mexico is the country to the south of us. Contrary to Greek myth, it does consist of more than just Tijuana and factories that bottle Corona and Dos Equis. Unfortunately, Mexico does not have a chance to become the 52nd state because the good old white boys in Congress wouldn't approve. They don't look like us and they don't talk like us. (They speak Mexican, for those of you who didn't know.)

Lesson 4: People in Holland do not speak Hollandaise. They put it on their eggs Benedict and then spit it all out when they produce all of the phlegmy sounds that Dutch requires. People in Switzerland do not speak Swiss. They speak German, French, Italian and Romansch. Their army is the only one in the world that can saw wood, core an apple and uncork a wine bottle all at the same time.

Lesson 5: Africa is not one big country. It is a continent with many politically unstable countries on it. The people in one country can't even cooperate amongst themselves, let alone cooperate with other states to become one big country. Many of them claim to be democratic, but most of them can't even begin to spell democracy. They try, but it always ends up turning into something like D-E-M-I-L-I-T-A-R-Y-D-I-C-T-A-T-O-R-S-H-I-P.

Lesson 6: South America is not one big country. See Lesson 5.

Lesson 7: The former Soviet republics end in -istan. One reason that geography is becoming harder is all of the new countries that have been popping up recently. The Soviet Union broke up into 15 independent nations, but who can remember them all?

Sure, people know the famous ones like Russia, Ukraine, Belarus, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. But what about the other nine that are too obscure to remember? A nice rule to learn is the -istan rule. With that, it's easy to remember the other nine: Kazakhstan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Leninistan, Stalinistan, Communistan and Babushkistan.

Well, I hope these lessons have helped everyone to be a little more knowledgeable in geography. This country sure needs it. Now you can go and impress Alex Trebek on "Jeopardy!," but you'll have to try and beat me, first.

Roger Kim is a columnist for the Daily California at the University of California-Berkeley. He is planning to one day win big on "Jeopardy!" with his knowledge of useless facts. Respond to him at opinion@dailycal.org. His column has been reprinted here courtesy of the U-Wire.

Labor unions crucial to understanding Church's social tradition

What a wonderful surprise is Theology Professor Todd Whitmore's column of Sept. 4 "Reviving the Catholic Social Tradition at the University of Notre Dame." His analysis of the scene, save for the omission of a few courses in the economics, sociology and theology departments, as well as developments in the Center for Social Concerns, the Peace Institute and the Kellogg Center, is right on the mark. I look forward to his future columns on the "Catholic Church's best kept secret" — its tradition on social justice!

However, I was disappointed by Whitmore's failure to include in his "constellation of concepts and distinctions" the right to form labor unions for the purpose of collective bargaining. One cannot understand the experience and tradition without reference to labor unions.

Even more immediately and crucially, omission now or later of labor unions as part of the Church's social tradition will only further the not so secret, indeed scandal, of church institutions of all sorts discouraging and/or crushing effort of their employees to form labor unions, as well as similar practices on the part of corporations and government agencies.

Such widespread and scandalous practices are very much at odds with Pope John Paul II's insistence in Laborum Exercens (Human Labor) that in modern industrial life labor unions are indispensable! I am sure that Whitmore will do his usual thorough work.

Comparative Shopping

That's right. No more all-you-can-eat trips to the pasta bar. No more circus lunches and theme dinners. No more cereal cornucopias, wood fired pizza and Sunday morning waffles.

For any off-campus student, this scenario is an every day reality. Faced with a kitchen full of foreign appliances, empty cabinets and a thin supply of money, cooking presents many challenges for students without meal plans. And that's before they hit the grocery store and realize that dining hall luxuries actually cost money when they are on the shelves of local grocery stores.

But don't lose sleep over how to afford this week's grocery bill. Scene did the research for you and went inside four grocery stores, both on and off campus, to check the prices of 20 common grocery items. The results? Take a look for yourself.

The list:

1. Store brand 2 gallon skim milk
2. Store brand white bread
3. Store brand 1 dozen large eggs
4. Regular size jar of peanut butter
5. Regular size strawberry jam
6. 4-pack store brand toilet paper
7. 1 roll store brand paper towel
8. Regular box of Cheerios
9. 1 box Kraft Macaroni and Cheese
10. Minute Maid original half-gallon orange juice
11. 1 large tub Country Crock margarine
12. Half-gallon vanilla frozen yogurt
13. 1 small can of Campbell's chicken noodle soup
14. 12 pack Coca Cola Classic
15. 1 regular bag Ruffles potato chips
16. Bananas (price by lb.)
17. 1 bag store brand frozen chicken breasts
18. 1 Totino's plain cheese frozen pizza
19. store brand flour
20. store brand sugar

19. Kroger brand 5 lb flour: $1.47
20. Kroger brand 5 lb. sugar: $2.29

Total shopping time: 15 minutes

Total Bill: $45.45

Summary: It was very easy to find the 20 items at Kroger. The aisles are well-marked and the prices of items are easy to find. Kroger makes shopping easy for the busy customer by placing common items — such as eggs, milk and juice — in the first aisle. The employees are courteous and there are plenty of cashiers at the check-out lanes. The store has a full produce, meat, seafood, bakery and deli section. Although they didn't have a large bag of chicken breasts, all the other items were well stocked and moderately priced. Kroger is farther away than Martin's, but it is a good place to shop on a low budget.

Shopping at Martin's

Location: 12850 State Road 23, Mishawaka (behind Campus View Apartments)

The results:

1. Martin's brand 2 gallon skim milk: $2.39
2. Martin's brand white bread: 2 for $1.19
3. Martin's brand dozen Grade A large eggs: $.79

11. 1 lb. tub Country Crock margarine: $.99
12. One half-gallon vanilla frozen yogurt: $3.99
13. 1 can Campbell's chicken noodle soup: $.59
14. 12 pack Coca Cola Classic: $4.69
15. 14 oz. bag Ruffles potato chips: $2.99
16. Bananas: $.49/lb.
17. Bag of Tyson boneless/skinless chicken breasts (8 servings per bag): $7.99
18. Totino's plain cheese pizza: 2 for $3.00
19. Roundy's all-purpose 5 lb. flour: $.99
20. Roundy's 5 lb. sugar: $1.59

Total shopping time: 17 minutes

Total Bill: $40.69

Summary: After Martin's expansion and grand reopening, the store has everything a shopper needs and more. The only disadvantage is that items are spread out and it takes longer to complete a shopping list. Martin's had all 20 items, and although the store is large, the aisles are well marked and the prices are easy to find. The store is very bright and clean, and the aisles are much wider than at other grocery stores. Martin's offers an array of options to the hungry customer, from fresh bakery products to an extensive hot foods department and bagel counter. In addition, Martin's offers a discount Martin's Advantage card, which allow students to receive discounts off of selected items. Martin's is also within walking distance of College Park, Campus View and Turtle Creek apartment complexes. The store had good prices and is a good choice for the penny-saving college student.

Summary: Meijer offers a little bit of everything for the average shopper, including competitive prices. The well-lit and well-marked aisles are filled with daily and weekly specials and the special bulk products section can help cut down on weekly shopping trips. The layout of the store, however, makes it inconvenient to complete your list quickly. Milk, eggs and butter are all located on the far end of the store and the produce section is fairly unorganized without clearly marked aisles. In addition, the check-out lanes sometimes become very long and the express lanes do not move very quickly. Although a good choice for one large shopping trip, a quick trip to pick up a few items might be more convenient elsewhere.

Conclusion

Scene ranks the stores

1. Martin's
2. Kroger
3. Meijer

For good prices, convenience and efficiency, Scene chooses Martin's as the best grocery store in town. Although Meijer offers slightly lower prices Martin's location makes it the perfect choice for most off-campus students and the Martin's Advantage Card means you can still receive discounts even if you forget to do your coupon clipping. Although both Kroger and Meijer offer competitive prices, Martin's is made for the busy shopper who doesn't have time to roam all of the aisles looking for things. If you have a lot of extra time to shop and you want to buy items in bulk, Meijer might sometimes be a better choice, but for a quick trip to pick up the essentials, head to Martin's.

The Huddle is a convenient on-campus alternative to the grocery store. For dorm dwellers and LaFortune students, it's a great place to get snacks and essentials without the hassle of venturing off campus.

Especially in colder months when there's nothing worse than having to trek to D-2000 only to have to find your car amongst all those encased in snow and scrape off the many layers of ice that encrust it, the Huddle is a great resource.

The mini-mart does not carry bulk items or a wide variety of name brands, and has standard prices for the products they sell. Like at any convenient store there is no advantage of coupons or specials at the Huddle, but their quick lines and friendly staff make up for any shortcoming.

The employees do not have the prices memorized or know the store like the backs of their hands, as when asked about the price of eggs the student manager replied, "Do we have eggs?" Yet they're approachable and friendly, never hesitant to try to help a wandering student find what they need.

There's no beating the convenience of the Huddle mart. Its items are easy to find and the service quick and friendly, the perfect stop for the busy student.

McGwire ties Maris' record with 61st homer

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS

Only one man had made this trip before.

So as soon as Mark McGwire made his two-footed hop onto home plate Monday, he knew it was time to pay homage to the man whose record he matched.

"I admire everything that Roger went through because I know now what he went through," McGwire said. "I am very, very happy to be linked to him."

Playing on the same field where Roger Maris played for the final time, McGwire hit his 61st home run to tie the mark that had stood for 37 years.

The historic homer came quickly, at just the right time and on just the right day for McGwire.

His son was in the stadium.

His dad was celebrating his 61st birthday. His biggest rival was in right field.

And now, there's only one question left: How soon will the record by McGwire's alone?

"I know that I am one swing away," McGwire said.

This day's celebration began in the first inning as soon as he launched Mike Morgan's fast-ball 430 feet inside the left-field foul pole.

"As soon as it left my bat, I just threw my hands up," he said. "I knew it at that time. What a feeling that was."

And then, with a fist thrust high, he began his triumphant trip around the bases.

Big Mac got a high five from Cubs first baseman Mark Grace as he rounded the bag and got another high five from former St. Louis teammate Gary Gaetti as he approached third. He also banged forearms with third-base coach Rene Lachemann, a tribute to his BashBrother days in Oakland.

"I was, like, in awe," McGwire said.

The 50,530 roaring fans at Busch Stadium stood all the while, except for those in the midst of a wild scramble for the ball. Chicago's Sammy Sosa, whose 58 home runs have pushed McGwire down the stretch, joined the party by applauding from right field.

Waiting at home plate, where McGwire ended his trek with a hop, was his 10-year-old batboy son Matt. The slugger hoisted his boy in his arms and gave him a bear-hug, while groundskeepers rushed onto the field to replace the bases — no doubt headed to the Hall of Fame.

Matt's timing was impeccable, too. He had arrived from California only minutes before his Dad made history.

"I was down there getting my bat," McGwire said. "He said, 'How you doing?' I gave him a kiss, told him I loved him. The next thing I knew, I hit a home run."

The Cardinals spilled out of the dugout to mob McGwire and it took him a few moments to make it to the bench. But he didn't stay there long, springing back out to salute his father, Sosa and the Maris family, watching from seats on the first-base side.

In a touching tribute to the man he matched, McGwire acknowledged Maris' children by pointing his right index finger to the sky, tapping his heart three times and blowing a kiss.

"He tapped his heart, like Dad was in his heart," said Kevin Maris, a son of the former New York Yankees slugger.

Indeed, that was the message: "I know he's with me and that's really all I can say — thank you to all the Marises," McGwire said.

Maris himself had been here before, too, playing the final game of his major league career at Busch for the Cardinals in the 1968 World Series.

The landmark shot provided a nice present to McGwire's father, John. He was sitting in the stands celebrating his birthday — No. 61, naturally.

"What better way to say happy birthday," his hero son said. "I was driving to the ballpark and I was saying that if it's meant to be, hitting the 61st home run on his 61st birthday, it's meant to be."

McGwire homered in the Cardinals' 144th game and now has 19 left to become the home run champion. And when he does, certainly no asterisk will be needed.

Maris never got to enjoy such acceptance.

He hit No. 61 on the last day of a 162-game schedule in 1961, and his accomplishment was forever called into question by commissioner Ford Frick.

The last Irish appearance in the NCAA Tournament came in 1996, when the team went 14-7-2 in overall play. That season also began with a 2-0 record.

Murphy and the rest of the defense hope to use the preparation for tonight's game to build a stronger unit.

"The main priority is improving the defensive team shape for all 90 minutes of the game, not just for short spurts," explained Murphy. "The meat of our Big East season is coming up, and we need to build on this team to win."

Said Johnson, "This game gives us an opportunity to practice things. We aren't going to focus on anything new, just getting people the ball and solidifying the defense." After all, as Cox explained, "this is not the type of team to relax against any opponent."

team. The team relies heavily on her for leadership.

"Lindsay's really the heart and soul of the team," said Brown. "She's a leader in every sense of the word."

In the netters' first three matches, Treadwell has executed well and displayed her leadership skills. She has a combined hitting percentage of .458 against Valparaiso, Georgia and 12th-ranked Colorado. She also recorded two double-doubles (kills/digs).

Treadwell was named the Big East volleyball player of the week, as well as being named to the Shamrock Invitational all-tournament team last weekend.

But rather than concentrating on personal records, Treadwell's focus this season is on helping the team win.

"My team goals are my goals. I just want to make my team play better by keeping the spirit up on the court and making low errors," said Treadwell. "I think I can lead by example, by not ever showing my teammates that I'm upset or down, and usually I'm not."

The Irish seek to extend their conference winning streak this year behind the play of Treadwell. Since joining the Big East, the Irish have not lost a conference match. They also hope to get past the round of 16 in the NCAA Tournament, ultimately in pursuit of a national championship.

Treadwell will try to make the most of her last season playing for Notre Dame. Post-graduation, however, she doesn't plan to leave volleyball behind.

She would like to try her hand at coaching college volleyball, perhaps eventually moving into sports administration.

For now, though, she has her sights set on another Big East championship. And if the Irish and Treadwell continue their spirited play, it will be one goal that is definitely reachable.

Texas hopes to avenge last year's 66-3 loss to UCLA

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Texas linebacker Aaron Babino didn't pick up a newspaper, didn't watch the news or answer his phone.

He didn't want to go to class on the following Monday for fear of having to face questions about the loss. The massacre at Royal-Memorial Stadium. Rout 66. Whatever you want to call it.

"A lot of people just looked at you like ... what happened?" Babino said Monday. "It was horrible."

Other Longhorns dealt with last year's record-setting 66-3 defeat against UCLA by rubbing their own noses in it as a reminder never to let it happen again. They posted articles about the debacle on their walls.

"I just tried to forget about it," said running back Ricky Williams.

New Texas strength coach Jeff Madden made sure the Longhorns didn't forget about it, though. When players began dragging during conditioning drills in the spring and summer, he would yell, "Sixty-six to three. Is that how you want to be remembered?"

He usually got some extra effort.

On Saturday, the 23rd-ranked Longhorns (1-0) will go to the Rose Bowl and face a more experienced, higher ranked and possibly more confident group of Bruins than they faced last year.

No matter how good sixth-ranked UCLA is, however, Texas players vow they will never be embarrassed like that again.

"When we lost 66-3, it hurt the pride of a lot of players," Babino said. "No one on this team had ever lost that bad, in high school or ever. After that game, our season went south.

That shouldn't happen to the University of Texas."

UCLA, which will be playing its season opener Saturday, has become a four-letter word to most Longhorns faithful.

The Bruins pinned Texas with its worst-ever home loss and the second worst loss in the history of the program. The Longhorns, ranked 11th and full of high hopes going into the UCLA game in week two last year, stumbled to a 4-7 season that cost coach John Mackovic his job.

Alfonso's homer gives Mets 8-7 win over Atlanta

Associated Press

NEW YORK
Edgardo Alfonso's two-run homer with two outs in the eighth inning Monday rallied New York to an 8-7 win over the Atlanta Braves that moved the Mets into a tie for the NL wild-card lead.

Alfonso's 16th homer came off John Rucker (1-2) allowed the Mets to pull even with the Chicago Cubs, who lost 3-2 at St. Louis as the Cardinals' Mark McGwire hit his record-tying 61st homer.

Before Alfonso's homer, which gave the Mets their major league-leading 32nd one-run victory, the fans at Shea Stadium endured a 1-hour, 48-minute rain delay as a violent thunderstorm ripped through the ballpark in the fourth inning.

Greg McMichael (3-4), the Mets' fourth reliever, pitched the eighth and John Franco worked the ninth for his 33rd save.

Luis Lopez matched a career-high with four RBIs and Tony Phillips homered for the Mets, who took three of four from the NL East leaders and begin a 10-game road trip Tuesday at Philadelphia.

Andruw Jones homered for the Braves, who overcame an early four-run deficit. Atlanta took a 7-6 lead by scoring five runs in the sixth with two outs.

New York, shut out on three hits by John Smoltz on Sunday, got a two-run homer from Lopez and a solo shot from Phillips off rookie emergency starter Bruce Chen to take a 3-0 lead in the second.

The Mets got another run in the third on Brian McRae's RBI single, and with starter Masato Yoshii looking strong, New York appeared to be in control.

Then day turned to night. The game was halted before the top of fourth by a tornado-producing storm. As the sky darkened, plate umpire Mark Hirschbeck waved both teams off the field and the stadium grounds crew scrambled to get the infield tarp down.

While the crew was securing the covering, a huge gust created an air bubble under it, causing it to flap uncontrollably in the wind.

Big East honors Heft, Grubb

Special to the Observer

Junior forward Jenny Heft scored five goals in Notre Dame's two Big East women's soccer wins last week, including both game-winning goals, to earn Big East offensive player of the week honors.

Grubb

Heft had a hat trick against

West Virginia and two goals against Pittsburgh. For the week, Heft scored on five of 14 shots for a .357 shooting percentage. She earns the honor for the second time in her career.

Junior defender Jen Grubb was named Big East defensive player of the week after recording four assists in Notre Dame's three wins, including three against Pittsburgh. She led the Irish defense which held the opposition to just 10 shots in three games and held West Virginia without a shot in the first half and Pittsburgh without a shot in the second half. Grubb earns the honor for the third time in her career.

The second-ranked Irish opened their season last week with a 4-0 win at Michigan State and a 7-0 win over West Virginia and a 9-1 win over Pittsburgh at Alumni Field. Notre Dame returns to action at the Carolina Classic in Chapel Hill, N.C., this weekend with games against 10th-ranked Duke on Friday and top-ranked North Carolina on Sunday.

Jenny Heft, who scored five goals for the Irish in their two wins this week, earned Big East offensive player of the week honors.

■ U.S. OPEN

Sampras reaches quarterfinals

Associated Press

Pete Sampras strolled off the court after overpowering yet another young challenger. Venus Williams strutted in victory, pumping up the crowd with an on-court dance that looked like an NFL end zone celebration.

On a Monday when thunderstorms turned the U.S. Open into Wimbledon West, Sampras and Williams reached the quarterfinals with convincing wins over dangerous opponents.

But Andre Agassi was struggling to avoid elimination in a match against Karol Kucera in which Agassi mocked his opponent and the players postured at each other across the net.

Kucera was up two sets to one when rain halted play for the night.

Agassi, who had complained that Kucera was stalling by practicing his service toss before hitting serves, began mimicking Kucera's practice tosses.

The two then exchanged moonballs, lofting soft shots back and forth.

Kucera led 6-3, 6-3, 6-7 (5-7), 0-3 when play was stopped.

It was the second rain delay of the match, which will resume Tuesday afternoon.

Sampras had 18 aces and never lost his serve in a 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 win that included a 2 1/4-hour rain break, turning his power lunch with Marat Safin into a late-afternoon snack for the world's top player.

"I was cracking it pretty hard throughout the match," Sampras said. "I got the serve going, which has been a little bit up and down throughout this past week. Today it seemed like it clicked."

The top-seeded Sampras, a four-time U.S. Open champion, next will face the winner of the match between No. 8 Agassi and No. 9 Kucera.

Williams won the final six points of the tiebreaker in her 6-1, 7-6 (7-4) win over No. 12 Mary Pierce, celebrating her win by shimmying to the net.

"I really shouldn't have done the dance. I should have waited until later," she said. "I didn't plan to do the dance. I planned to win the second set really easy."

Williams' quarterfinal opponent will be No. 4 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, who won 7-6 (7-5), 6-3 over No. 15 Anna Kournikova.

■ SAINT MARY'S VOLLEYBALL

Belles finish last in Invitational

By EMILY PARKER
Sports Writer

After winning its first match of the season last week, the Saint Mary's volleyball team hoped to add onto the win column again over the weekend.

Instead, it faltered, dropping all four matches Friday and Saturday and finishing in last place at the Kalamazoo College Hornet Invitational.

In the tournament, the team banded together to face Aquinas College, Bluffton, and Millikin twice. But teamwork was not enough, and Saint Mary's now stands at 1-4.

"We played really good defense, but we didn't play consistently enough," freshman Suzanne Martin said.

Struggling from the start, Saint Mary's was easily taken down in three-set losses to Bluffton and Millikin.

Bluffton delivered the first blow with the scores of 15-5, 15-10 and 15-8. Millikin followed the attack, finishing off the Belles 15-3, 15-10 and 15-6.

"It took us a while to click. Communication was bad," said Mary Rodovich, a junior tri-captain. "We played better Saturday."

Better did not mean the best, however, as Saint Mary's was also wiped out on Saturday.

The only bright spot came when the team won its only set of the weekend against Aquinas.

Still, Aquinas defeated the Belles without much difficulty in the first two sets, 15-6, 15-8.

Saint Mary's seemed to suddenly realize it was in a desperate situation and fought back in the last two sets. Despite claiming the third set 16-14, the Belles buckled in what ended up as the final set, 13-15.

In their third match against Aquinas College, Joyce said she thought the Belles stood together.

"In those two games we really came together as a team," Joyce said.

Despite the element of teamwork, some Belles stood out more than others.

The two games hosted some outstanding plays and players.

Martin racked up 60 of her 120 tournament total assists against Aquinas. Meanwhile, sophomore Victoria Butcko delivered 11 service points.

But in that one match where it looked like they stood a chance, the Belles were unable to grasp a victory.

The disappointing matches for Saint Mary's on Friday and early in the day Saturday became recurring nightmares.

Millikin followed the previous day's battle and obliterated Saint Mary's 15-9, 15-10 and 15-6.

Some Belles still managed to have shining moments despite the gloomy team performance.

Freshman Angie Meyers led the squad with 55 digs over the weekend and brought in the team-high with 32 kills. Her stats were shadowed by Agnes Bill, a junior and a team tri-captain, who had 42 digs and 31 kills. Junior tri-captain Jayne Ozbolt had 10 locked kills.

Rodovich had five service aces followed by Butcko with four.

On Wednesday, Saint Mary's plays its third straight away match, taking on Hope College.

"Our defense is really strong and that's going to win us a few games," Rodovich said. "The tournament didn't bring us down. We learned a lot from it and can make it better."

Irish ready to face Wildcats

By ANTHONY BIANCO
Assistant Sports Editor

With wins in their first two contests, including a 3-1 win at Syracuse this past weekend, the Irish return to Alumni field tonight to host the Wildcats of Northwestern.

Notre Dame is riding an attacking wave that has scored nine goals in two games, backed by a defense that let up just two goals.

The offense has been jump-started by a strong front led by forwards Ryan Cox, Shane Walton, and Scott Wells. Andrew Aris, an attacking midfielder, will be sidelined today with a leg injury. Aris scored a goal on the play in which he was injured, and also nailed an assist in the Syracuse game.

Yet the squad is confident that it can continue its stellar offense.

"Andrew is an integral part of our team," explained Cox, "but we have a deep bench to replace him with."

Whatever the case, the Irish will rely on the star trio to score the goals. In the first two games, Cox, Walton and Wells have combined to score five of the team's nine goals.

"The key for us is that our frontrunners are working together and getting the ball to the goal," said co-captain Matt Johnson.

Despite the obvious tendency to focus on just the Big East conference matches, the Irish remain intent on preparing and playing well in all their games, including tonight's Northwestern game.

The two teams battled to a 2-2 tie last year at Northwestern, but a glance at Notre Dame's schedule shows four consecutive Big East teams just past the Wildcat game.

"Obviously, the Big East is our focal point, but we have to win one game at a time. We can't look that far ahead," said Aris.

Though tonight's game is a non-conference matchup, the Irish need those wins to land an NCAA Tournament bid.

"When the NCAA picks teams [for the regional at-large bids], we can't afford a slipup in the non-Big East games," said co-captain Phil Murphy.

The Observer/John Daily

After scoring nine goals in its first two games, the men's soccer team is looking to continue its hot play.

Treadwell leaving mark in ND records

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN
Sports Writer

No one would guess from watching Lindsay Treadwell play volleyball today that she started out as the worst player on her club team in junior high — and was cut from the team the next year.

Treadwell has come a long way since that inauspicious beginning. A senior from Austin, Texas, she is now the captain of Notre Dame's volleyball team and has the highest career hitting percentage in Irish history, .309. The middle blocker is also a top candidate for Big East player of the year.

"I got too tall for soccer and gymnastics," said the five-foot-11 Treadwell. "I stuck with volleyball because I thought it was fun and that I could be good at it. One of the things that helped me was I was playing for myself. I had to pay for club myself. It was my money going into it, not my parents', so I wanted to get something out of it."

Treadwell's time and money paid off. By her sophomore year of high school, she was named honorable mention all-district while playing for the state championship team. She improved each year, and as a senior, Volleyball magazine selected Treadwell for its National Prep Feb 50 list.

Notre Dame head volleyball coach Debbie Brown attributed Treadwell's success to her drive and competitiveness.

"She has a pretty fierce competitive drive and really responds to a challenge," said Brown. "She has a drive to excel because she demands so much of herself in practice and games, she's able to demand that of everyone."

Since her arrival at ND, Treadwell has had a major impact on the Irish. She has played in all but one match in her four seasons here, and as a sophomore, Treadwell was named the MVP of the Big East Tournament.

Heading into her senior season, she was on the Irish career top 10 lists in ace-to-error ratio (fifth at 1.03) and block average (eighth at .88), in addition to leading the record books in hitting percentage.

"Lindsay has emotion and intensity," said Brown. "She's an excellent middle hitter. There's really not a skill she doesn't do well."

Treadwell's most crucial roles for the Irish may be as a captain and as the only fourth-year player on the
