Developer plans to buy up blocks of houses

The Observer/Kevin Dalum

Off-campus houses like these are being bought en masse by landlords and rented to students

By MAUREEN SMITHE
News Writer

As senior year approaches, many students anxiously await the opportunity to embrace a greater sense of independence and responsibility — namely, moving off campus.

Lots of them flock to the familiar, local places like Turtle Creek, Campus View, College Park and Lafayette Square, to name a few. But Mark Kramer's success is proof that the lure of leaving the dorm extends beyond apartment complexes.

Kramer owns Domuf Properties, a company that rents out houses to students. Two and a half years ago, his company owned one house to rent to Notre Dame students; since then, he added 28 more, and he expects that number to keep rising in coming years.

Students currently rent houses owned by Domuf on Washington, St. Louis, St. Joseph, Carroll and St. Peter's streets, as well as South Bend Avenue. Domuf Property's goal is to have sixty to 75 houses available to rent within the next five years.

"We buy a few houses on a block and eventually add others to fill in the gaps," said Kramer. "For example, we started with just four houses on Washington Street, and we have grown to nine contiguous houses."

Senior Emily Edwards currently rents out a Domuf Properties home with six other students.

"I definitely prefer living off campus, and I think everyone should live off senior year," she said. "There haven't been any problems so far this year with the house. I suppose it will be tough getting to school once the snow comes."

Kramer feels similarly about off-campus living.

"All students should experience it," he said. "It really is an education in itself. It teaches the need to pay rent, bills and utilities."

Clause will be taken up by Academic Council

By TIM LOGAN
Assistant News Editor

More than one year after the University issued its Spirit of Inclusion statement, the spotlight is once again shining on Notre Dame's legal non-discrimination clause.

The Executive Committee of the Academic Council voted Monday to consider a resolution calling for an amendment to the clause — one which would add sexual orientation. The Council will discuss the issue at its Oct. 8 meeting.

In its closed meeting, the Executive Committee did not make a recommendation as to whether or not the Council should pass the resolution; rather, its decision will enable continued debate on the issue.

Committee members stressed that it is still uncertain as to whether the Academic Council will support the amendment.

"I really have no idea [if it will be passed]," said vice president and senior associate provost Tim Scully, who sits on the committee.

Members of the Executive Committee contacted were unwilling to discuss specifics of the meeting.

Alyssa Hellrung, co-president of Outreach ND — the group formerly known as GLND/SMC — hoped the measure would pass.

"Inclusion of sexual orientation in the non-discrimination policy of our University would be an integral step toward making the Spirit of Inclusion a reality," she said in a statement on Sunday.

Other activist leaders echoed Hellrung's sentiments.

"I'm delighted and I just hope that it actually passes," said Aaron Kreider, co-president of the Progressive Students Alliance. The PSA is one of several student groups which has been lobbying the University to change the non-discrimination

Dunbar gets four year sentence

A judge sentenced former Notre Dame booster Kimberly Dunbar on Monday to four years in prison for embezzling $1.2 million from her former employer, local firm Dominiack Mechanical, Inc.

Dunbar, 29, allegedly used the cash to buy gifts for current and former Notre Dame football players. The judge ordered Dunbar to pay back all of what she stole, citing his disgust at her "unwavering determination to financially rape this company."

CAMPUS LIFE COUNCIL

Members debate 24-hour space availability

By FINN PRESSLY

A need for more 24-hour space in dormitories dominated the agenda of Monday's Campus Life Council meeting, drawing from a report presented by the Community Life Committee.

Committee chair Matt Mamak divided the issue into two parts — improving 24-hour space within the residence halls, and on the campus as a whole. Mamak first addressed the committee's progress with residence hall space.

"We're going to identify dorms that need better 24-hour space," he explained. "Once we identify the dorms, we're going to meet with the hall leaders, the rectors and see what changes can be made."

The committee sent surveys to each hall, asking leaders to report on the condition of the 24-hour space in that dorm. While he received few complaints from the newer dorms, Mamak said that many of the older halls are in desperate need of better 24-hour facilities.

"We want to look at more temporary space — what we can do with what we have now," said Matt Mamak, noting the success of Reckers, the new 24-hour establishment in South Dining Hall. His committee has concentrated on the library and LaFortune Student Center for improvement.

"I think it would be helpful to study Reckers now that it's open 24-hours, and evaluate its usage," said Father David Scheidler, rector of St.

■ INSIDE COLUMN

Why can I complain?

I'm not going to be subtle about this. Sometimes, I think life just sucks. Things always go wrong. The lines are too long, the food's not that great, even now I'm complaining over my work.

However, I am constantly reminded of this. What is good? What is bad? Who is to say what is good and what is bad? And speaking of which, what do I have to complain about?

It seems that I'm stuck in neutral at times, that I'm not going anywhere. Still, there are things going for me. I have my health. I may not be a world-class athlete, but I'm in good enough condition to exercise and climb trees.

I am attending a good school. Despite the fact that it is pretty homogenous here, the education is excellent. I've been in worse places anyway. Even though the tuition is high and I have to work to cover some of my expenses, I was able to get financial aid, so I can't complain.

I know some pretty good people, and some pretty good people know me. Even though I don't have so many friends, I do have a few very good friends.

I am not starving or dying. I have a clean dry place to sleep and rest. I have clothes to keep me warm when it gets cold, and a place to wash up when I get dirty. Even the running water and electricity are things that I can't take for granted.

My relationship with my family is good, possibly exceptional compared to what I have heard from some of my peers. I respect my mother, and she has taken good care of me. I have a brother and a sister, and we three would help each other if we needed to. I even know my Lolo and Lola (grandparents), who are quite healthy and active. Even my grandfather is in pretty good shape. Aunts, uncles, cousins — we all know each other and live with each other. It was hard leaving home.

My material possessions are numerous and costly. Just in my room alone, I have a cordless phone, a computer with a 36-bit scanner and HP 890 ColorJet, a portable radio, and refrigerator. I have 40 or 50 CDs, and I'm not going to count the number of books I have on RPGs.

I am even self-confident in my abilities and talents. I am a proficient illustrator, and have decent art skills. I may not be the best, but I can still draw. I can analyze and think like an engineer better than most Arts and Letters majors. I can find my way around a computer. Even my Kung Fu is looking better than before.

What do I have to be dissatisfied about? I don't want to sound rude like some other people, who definitely have as much as, if not more than, I do. I keep trying to remember that there are people much more unfortunate than I am. These people would probably be eternally grateful just to be able to experience and partake in what happens in my life.

I don't want to be ungrateful for what I have. I have to remember what I have and not complain so much about the bad things in life, because life can be so much worse. I sometimes act cynical and criticize much around me, but I want to be keenly aware of my position and the position of others. Sometimes I have to learn to shut up and enjoy the so many blessings I have and forget the few curses upon me. In fact, I bet most of these curses are ones that I really deserve.

In spite of what I have, I should also be thoughtful of others as well. I can't neglect other people who share the same world that I live in.

So what can I complain about?

University of Utah frat under fire following alleged rapes

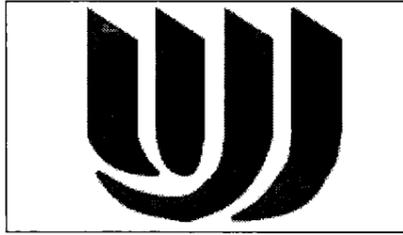

SALT LAKE CITY
Another 18-year old woman has accused a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity of raping her.

Detective Heidi Stringfellow of the Salt Lake City Police Department said this case will probably not be criminally pursued. However, the alleged victim may be called as a witness in the sexual assault case Stringfellow is currently investigating, which allegedly occurred at the Kappa Sigma fraternity house on the night of Sept. 4.

The woman said she will cooperate fully and hopes to testify.

"I just want a little closure to this," she said. "I know it's too late for me to press charges, but these guys need to know that they can't get away this. I'll help bring about justice in any way I can."

The alleged incident occurred Feb. 20. The woman filed a complaint with the SLCPD July 9.

The woman said she did not come forward at first because she wanted to take care of the matter privately, but chose to file the complaint when she heard of other girls being similarly attacked by the same man.

The alleged victim said she was sexually assaulted first in the Kappa Sigma fraternity house and later in the alleged assailant's home.

"We had gone to a party in the Avenues," she said. "[He] was there and we had met about two weeks earlier."

"The police broke up the party and we had to move it back to the house," she said. "I remember him approaching me and we went into another room, the library. We were kissing and a lot of heavy petting was going on."

"He started undressing me and I didn't want him to. I felt really uncomfortable and told him not to, but I was heavily intoxicated and I could hardly move. I was about to pass out. I repeatedly told him no."

"And that's when it happened," she said. "That's when he raped me."

The alleged attacker denies all allegations. "All of these complaints are untrue," he said.

The alleged incident occurred in the library of the Kappa Sigma house.

"There's a huge window looking into the library and all of his fraternity brothers were there at the window watching the whole time it happened," she said.

Tribes protest handling of remains

LINCOLN
Tribal representatives discussed Friday their request for a federal investigation into whether UNL researchers violated an act protecting American Indian remains. The group finished its two-day meeting at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln by discussing investigations and reburial procedures and planning a training session on the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act of 1990. The group was formed at the request of UNL to discuss details of the repatriation of about 1,700 remains. Chancellor James Moeser signed an agreement Sept. 1 stating the university would return affiliated and unaffiliated remains. The State Patrol and a university-hired attorney have separate investigations under way to determine whether the university violated NAGPRA. Randy Thomas, co-founder of Grassroots NAGPRA in Lincoln, expressed doubt about the validity of a Nebraska State Patrol investigation, citing state connections to people within the university system.

An Ohio State staff member died and another is in fair condition after being hit by a car that went out of control in the parking lot behind Lazenby Hall shortly before 8 a.m. Friday. Floyd Meadows, 55, of Lancaster, who suffered chest and other injuries, died during surgery at 12:16 p.m., a hospital spokesman said. Meadows had worked for OSU since 1991 and was assistant superintendent of buildings for the south district. Eugene Johnson, 37, of Columbus, is listed in fair condition and has a broken leg, a hospital spokesman said. Johnson is a custodial worker in Lazenby Hall, located on Neil Avenue, and has worked with Building Services since July. The driver of the car, Estelle Silbermann, 60, of Columbus, had a fractured wrist and other injuries, the hospital spokesman said. She was released Saturday. Police were unavailable to comment on whether she would be charged with anything. All three were taken to Ohio State University Hospitals.

Hurricane misses USF campus

TAMPA
Hurricane Georges moved farther out into the Gulf of Mexico, taking its heavy rains and high winds with it, and leaving the Tampa Bay area unscathed. USF, which spent most of last week preparing for Georges, sustained no damage during the weekend, according to Rick Fender, associate vice president for Administrative Services. School closed Friday to allow students and staff to prepare for the hurricane. Low-lying areas were evacuated in anticipation of flooding from the rains. Area residents taped their windows or stood in line for sandbags. But it was all for naught. "I'm relieved, though I think some people were disappointed there wasn't more action," said Bill Heller, dean of USF-St. Petersburg. "We're glad it missed us." Even though campus was closed and all events were canceled or postponed, USF was not empty. Two shelters, including one designated for people requiring special needs, opened Friday morning to house evacuees.

Fourteen vandals arrested at MSU

EAST LANSING
Casey Shuck woke Friday morning to the sound of water balloons and paint balls hurling at the Sparty statue. But despite the attack, damage was minimal. The physical science junior was staked out by Sparty with fellow Spartan Marching Band members, poised to protect the statue from vandalism by University of Michigan students, when about 30 people attacked the area. Shuck, an alto saxophone player, said that at about 4:30 a.m., some people drove by and fired paint guns and balloons at the statue. Shortly after, more people came out of the bushes toting gallon buckets of yellow paint. MSU police Lt. Mary Johnson said the department received a call about the incident at about 5 a.m. Fourteen people were arrested in the incident. She said warrants are being sought for the students through the Ingham County Prosecutor's Office. Shuck said he and other band members managed to clean most of the paint off the statue, but many sleeping bags and other personal belongings were damaged.

Panel: Current Russian economic crisis is nothing new

BY MOLLY NIKOLAS
News Writer

Frustration with the media for the miscoverage of the recent crisis in Russia fueled a discussion Monday at the Hesburgh Center for International Studies, where three panelists spoke about the nation's complicated financial problems.

The lecture, entitled "Crisis in Russia: The Political and International Dimensions," preceded a question-and-answer session with the panelists, all fellows of the Kellogg Institute fellows. The trio emphasized that the crisis has been highly overdramatized by the American media.

Panelist Archie Brown, a professor of politics at Oxford University, called suggestions by the media that economic conditions have suddenly gotten worse in Russia and that the people may return to communism "nonsense."

Brown noted that Russia has been in a series of economic crises since the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991, with this latest ordeal receiving more attention due to the devaluation of the ruble.

"Economic stability in Russia has become a fairy tale without a happy ending," he stated.

Brown compared Russia's economic productivity now with what it was prior to the revolution in 1991. Industrial output

The Observer/Mike Harris

Three experts on international politics agreed that the Russian crisis has been building for some time.

today is half of what it was and agricultural production has declined 36 percent, with this year's harvest expected to be the worst in years, he said.

Brown also attributed the lack of investments in manufacturing to the poor economic state in Russia today. On a societal note, homicide has doubled in Russia since 1991, and the murder rate has surpassed that of the United States, which held the highest in the Western world.

Brown also addressed the wide correlation between economic and political policies. According to him, the recent political ordeal has been the culmination of years of strife between the legislative and the executive branches of the Russian government.

Martha Merritt, an assistant professor of government and international studies at Notre Dame, was another member of the three-seat panel. She commented on the insubordination of politicians by explaining the relationship between the local regents and the central authority.

Merritt detailed the lack of adherence of the local regents to central authority decrees, offering the cause of this the strong ethnic and cultural ties each local regent has to a respective area.

She conceded that the motivation behind the local regents to act in the best interest of their people was sound, although it often conflicts with the agenda of central authorities, who are trying to act in the best interests of the nation.

Gabor Toka, the third panelist, also attributed the large amount of back wages owed to such people as teachers, doctors and military persons to the poor living standards in Russia.

Merritt also expressed frustration with a Wall Street Journal report on the expanding barter system in Russia, which she contended is false.

"People have been bartering for things instead of using cash since the days of the Soviet Union," she said.

All three panelists stated that the recent crisis is only the outcome of several years of instability. They see the lack of confidence in leadership by the Russian people as a large factor in the instability along with the poor standards of living outside the big cities.

Alcoholism is constantly rising, and with local regents controlling the imports and exports of specific regions, it has been very difficult to establish common economic space in Russia.

All three panelists hope that Russia can slow down its current economic tailspin, and they see printing more money as a way to ease the crisis tremendously. Brown, Merritt and Toka, a professor of politics at Central European University in Budapest, all believe that the political problems can be best helped by bridging the gap between the central authority and the local regents.

Merritt also noted that the Russians have lived under two very different types of rule: one in which they had nearly no freedom and one in which they enjoy a great deal of freedom.

Merritt spoke of her experience talking with the Russian people. She told of one Russian man who told her: "Stalin tried to reconstruct us, Breshnev tried to reconstruct us, everyone's tried to reconstruct us. Maybe we just don't want to be reconstructed."

Stock contest 'challenges' students with simulation

By CHRISTINE KRALY
News Writer

Participants in the Portfolio Management Challenge embarked on a high-stakes financial adventure yesterday — they started to play the stock market, with $100,000 to burn.

A virtual $100,000, that is. "[It's] about as real world as it gets," said Brad Gurasich, the financial division director of the Notre Dame Council on International Business Development.

The contest, which the Council is sponsoring for its fourth year, is a stock market simulation that began yesterday and will continue until mid-April. Individuals and teams who paid a $20 registration fee for a portfolio receive $100,000 of fictitious money with which to play the market.

Students design and monitor the portfolios themselves based on 20-minute delayed figures. This allows the students to essentially do real-time trading with the market.

All the trading is web-based on a site called StockTrak and is carried out by actual brokers.

"Essentially, if you know nothing about the stock market, you can learn," said Carin Pankros, director of the Council's marketing division.

"It [the contest] brings together what you learn in the classroom to real life experience," said Den Henn, PMC co-chair.

The contest involves students of all majors and all levels of stock market experience, regardless of involvement in the Council.

"We wanted to host a contest for the students to learn about the stock market," said Gurasich.

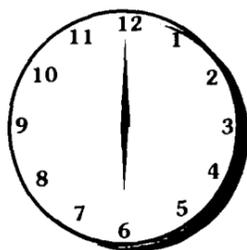

The contest is split into two categories: freshman/sophomore and juniors/seniors/graduates. When the contest ends in mid-April, the top three portfolio managers in each category will be awarded cash prizes.

pus is voluntary, there is only enough on-campus housing for 84 percent of Notre Dame undergraduates. Bill Kirk, assistant vice president for Residence Life, supports the idea of off-campus housing.

"The University fully subscribes to off-campus housing; we need it," he said.

One of the biggest draws to off-campus housing is the lack of parietales. "Parietales are in place here because of the nature of our housing," Kirk said. "Typically, apartments are set up much differently than the dorms. Off-campus apartments and houses are not University facilities, so the University can not enforce anything. However, University rules and regulations still apply on and off campus."

Edwards likes the more independent living situation.

"The advantages definitely outweigh the disadvantages, especially not having to deal with parietales," she said.

With the growing popularity of living off campus, the onus falls on the South Bend Police Department — not Notre Dame Security/Police — to educate students on the risks and safety precautions. That task has increased with the higher number of off-campus housing options.

Police Captain Wanda Shock stressed the department's emphasis on safety.

"We do not expand police controls just because more students are in a particular area," she said. "The tenants, being students, are different than the permanent residents, and that is our main consideration. They are not from this town and they don't know the area. We do try and make education, help and guidance available."

Additionally, Shock encourages off-campus students to attend police department presentations regarding residential security, finding housing and personal safety.

"Give me a group of three or more students, and we will give a presentation on any topic of concern," Shock said.

Occasionally, problems do arise with off-campus students, especially on football weekends.

"When neighbors call to complain, that constitutes the foundation for a warning letter to the students and to the landlord," said Shock. "If problems continue, an abatement notice follows, with which a possible suit could result."

"A copy of the abatement letter would be forwarded to the University," Shock added. "Additionally, if a felony is committed, such as drug use or burglary, the University will hear about it."

Proof of off-campus popularity is evident from the speed with which available Domuf Property homes rent out.

"All but 14 of our houses are rented out for next year, and most of those remaining have tentative agreements already in the works," Kramer said.

Superior Court Judge Jerome Frese suspended 12 of the 16 years in prison she faced on two Class C felonies and ordered her to pay restitution of $1.2 million to her former employer, Jerry Dominiack.

Given a chance to address the court, Dunbar told Frese she was sorry for stealing the money from Dominiack Mechanical. She then turned to face Dominiack and his wife in the front row of the courtroom and tearfully told them, "I'm sorry, Jerry and Connie, for what I've done to you," as the couple held hands solemnly.

Despite Dunbar's plea for leniency, St. Joseph County prosecutor Michael Barnes insisted that she spend time in prison so that "she simply can't walk away from this thing."

"The fact is, Miss Dunbar was in a position of trust. She capitalized on that position of trust, and she capitalized on it to the tune of $1.2 million," Barnes said.

Dunbar, who will be eligible for release after serving two years of her prison term, was sentenced to probation from her release date until Sept. 28, 2014.

As part of her probation, she must continue making restitution payments to Dominiack and cannot have any contact with the 12 players to whom she allegedly gave gifts using the money she stole.

In addition, Dunbar requires court approval to see former Irish player Jarvis Edison, with whom she has a child.

She also must cooperate with any civil action Dominiack brings against players to whom she gave jewelry, clothing and trips, including an outing to a Chicago Bulls game that involved five current Notre Dame players.

Dominiack has filed a civil suit seeking $1.4 million in damages from Dunbar, her mother and sister, and five former Notre Dame players — Edison, Lee Becton, Ray Zellars, Derrick Mayes and Kinnon Tatum. Because Dunbar was ordered to pay restitution to Dominiack, she will likely be dropped from the civil suit, according to William Stanley, her attorney.

The gifts became the center of a school investigation that started in February, a process intended to probe Dunbar's relationship with Notre Dame players and look for any potential violations of NCAA rules.

Notre Dame forwarded its findings to the NCAA, which ruled that Dunbar was acting as a representative of the school while a member of the now-disbanded Quarterback Club. The NCAA informed Notre Dame that it could face sanctions for two rules violations.

Notre Dame athletic director Mike Wadsworth said Monday that the NCAA is still considering whether to penalize the football program. The five current players involved in the trip to a Bulls game were cleared of any wrongdoing by the NCAA in August after the University made them pay back the cost of the trip by making a donation to a charity.

Wadsworth said school attorneys interviewed Dunbar twice this month to complete their investigation and have forwarded their findings to the NCAA, which has not made any indication when it might issue a ruling.

"We had notified them of our intention to interview Miss Dunbar in order to cover every possible avenue we could with respect to our investigation," Wadsworth said. "There isn't any new information with respect to activities by any member of the team or anyone associated with the team or the athletic department."

'THE FACT IS MISS DUNBAR WAS IN A POSITION OF TRUST. SHE CAPITALIZED ... ON IT TO THE TUNE OF $1.2 MILLION.'

WASHINGTON

Researchers are turning anti-impotence pills and injected medicines into rub-on creams and gels — part of a broader effort to make many drugs safer and easier to use by literally dissolving them through the skin. Early testing shows the impotence cream Topiglan is a leading candidate in this effort to give patients targeted relief for many ailments, with fewer side effects. "It's a no-brainer," said Dr. Irwin Goldstein of Boston University, a urologist leading studies of the impotence cream who expects many of today's medicines eventually to be applied to the skin. "It has a lot of use in lots of drugs." Topiglan needs more studies, Goldstein cautions, and is not for sale.

Transplant first in France

LYON

A 48-year-old man who got a new right-hand and forearm is eating and drinking normally four days after the 13-hour surgery, the hospital reported Monday. The graft, the hospital reported Monday, was "well colored" — an apparent sign of satisfactory blood circulation. The five-line hospital statement identified the patient for the first time by name: Clint Hallam. Hospital personnel said Hallam is from New Zealand but lives in Perth, Australia. "Clint Hallam ... had a very good weekend," the statement said. It added that the dressing was changed and "it will be able to get up today." Neither the press service for the Lyon public hospital system nor doctors at Edouard Herriot Hospital could confirm whether Hallam did, indeed, leave his bed Monday. The hospital described his condition simply as "satisfactory." Dr. Jean-Michel Dubernard, co-leader of the transplant team, was not immediately available for comment.

Riots for reform go into week two

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KUALA LUMPUR

Riot police chased a few thousand pro-reform activists Monday through the neon-lit streets of downtown Kuala Lumpur as protesters defied warnings to gather for a second consecutive week.

Witnesses saw dozens of protesters being grabbed, handcuffed and pushed into red police buses. Police did not say how many were detained. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

A local human rights group, SUARAM, said 60 people had been taken into custody in the protest that lasted for more than an hour.

Among them was Tien Chua, the chairman of the newly formed Coalition for People's Democracy, an umbrella group of organizations that back ousted Deputy Prime Minister Anwar Ibrahim, SUARAM spokeswoman Elizabeth Wong said.

Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad's decision to fire and arrest Anwar, his stirred anger in Kuala Lumpur, the capital.

Undaunted by police batons, tear gas and nearly 150 arrests, several thousand supporters of Anwar continued protests on Monday, a national holiday.

Chanting "Reformasi" or "Reforms," the demonstrators marched from a courthouse, carrying banners that said, "Free Anwar."

A phalanx of riot policemen, drumming their shields, advanced on the slogan-shouting activists and then began to chase them through the lanes and into the main shopping district where startled holiday shoppers quickly huddled into corners.

Police also turned their wrath on reporters and photographers, shouting "Go, go, go!"

Anwar and 16 of his associates have been held under a harsh security law that allows indefinite imprisonment without trial. Neither Anwar, arrested eight days ago, nor any of his detained allies have been arraigned in a court.

Anwar has been accused of crimes that include unlawful homosexual acts and leaking state charges. He has denied the charges, saying they were politically motivated.

Protests, unheard of for nearly a decade, are becoming a regular feature in Kuala Lumpur.

On Sunday, more than 10,000 supporters trudged for several miles to attend a gathering organized by Malaysia's opposition Islamic party.

Police had blocked cars from entering a village road leading to the rally.

The day before, police beat demonstrators and used a water cannon to disperse a rally of more than 3,000 people. Twenty-nine Malaysians were arrested.

House passes bill to lower loan rates

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON

A bill that would hold down the college student loan interest rate for all borrowers and raise the maximum grant amount for needy students passed the House on Monday.

The Senate could consider an identical measure as early as Tuesday.

The bill, passed by voice vote, also includes incentives for people to become teachers by offering to forgive their student loans if they teach in urban or rural districts with large numbers of poor children. And teacher-preparation colleges would have to provide information to would-be students about what percentage of graduates pass teacher examinations.

The measure, which would renew federal programs such as student aid, is one of the few education bills to find bipartisan support this election year. It is less politically charged than those dealing with the larger numbers of children in kindergarten through the 12th grade.

"This is one of the most significant bills that we will be passing in this Congress," said Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J. "I say so because these are the issues that count to the American people."

"This is what should be getting through to the American people, that we are doing our work," said Rep. Carolyn McCarthy, D-N.Y.

A key provision would change the way interest rates are determined for student loans. A previously enacted change had threatened to drive away many lenders because of the low return on their government-guaranteed loans.

The new formula, based on Treasury bill interest rates and added points, would hold down what students pay by giving a subsidy to lenders. As a result, the rate for students would be 7.46 percent for new loans — the lowest rate in 17 years — down from 8.23 percent last year, sponsors say.

The measure would also raise the maximum authorized amount for Pell Grants to $4,500 a year in 1999-2000, up from $3,000. The amount would gradually rise to $5,800 in 2003-2004.

responsive to both the student and faculty senate," she said. "I hope that the issue is fully discussed and I'm optimistic that it will be. The Academic Council is a forum where this can be discussed a greater length than it has been before at Notre Dame."

The amendment issue has been the subject of significant debate since last August, when the University adopted the Spirit of Inclusion statement. The Spirit of Inclusion calls on members of the community to accept homosexuals and condemn harassment.

This statement was made in lieu of an addition to the non-discrimination clause, and is thus not legally binding — but an amendment to the actual clause would be.

Debate on the topic reached a high point last March when Father David Garrick, a communications and theater professor, resigned in protest of the administration's policy towards homosexuals. In the wake of that debate, the Faculty Senate passed a resolution calling on the University to include sexual orientation in the clause.

That Faculty Senate resolution is currently being taken up by the Academic Council.

The Executive Committee is composed of 11 administrators and faculty members. It sets the agenda for meetings of the Academic Council, which is comprised of administrators, faculty members and students and which makes major decisions concerning academic policy.

Guliano addresses El Salvador human rights

By RUTH SNELL
News Writer

Discussing the political and economic future of El Salvador and touching on the dangers of sweat shops, John Giuliano spoke Monday at Saint Mary's College about human rights in the country.

The talk, titled "Keeping Hope Alive: Human Rights in El Salvador," was on a theme inspired by the 50th anniversary of the United Nations Human Rights Declaration.

"It'd be nice to say that there was great hope in the peace that the end of the Salvadoran war brought, but that's not true," he said. "There is no peace until justice. The great hope is in the faith of the people."

Giuliano first began working in El Salvador during its civil war, and is now part of a community in Guarjila, the site of the College's Spring break pilgrimage.

He spoke about the hope that the war's end brought, and how that hope will never be fulfilled as long as there is injustice in El Salvador.

According to Giuliano, neoliberalism is the current political movement in El Salvador, and is "the most powerful enemy of the poor in Latin America."

But the prevalence of sweat shops is an even bigger problem for the people there. Work in such "maquiladores," noted Giuliano, is taking the place of work on the farms.

Companies such as Nike have taken over many agricultural areas, he said, and now people buy the food they once grew. Farming has become too expensive, and the $5-per-day wages paid in "maquiladores" are inflationary.

However, Giuliano said he does find hope in the "group of young people trying to build something new in the shape of the old."

Communities of resistance during the war were based on the tenet of each according to his needs. With the pilgrimage, Giuliano is trying to restart and rebuild this idea as central.

"It is risking your future to walk with the rest of us. It is a kind of discipleship," said Giuliano. "I believe in people-to-people work. It seems the bigger we get, the richer we get, the farther away we become from what we're supposed to be doing."

"It is great hope to see a community now close to 100 ... trying to live their life according to God," emphasized Giuliano.

Many young people of Guarjila lived in refugee camps while they were school-aged. Now, when free school costs $300 a year, it is positive that some of the 19 and 20-year-olds are starting ninth grade.

"Also, our first college student is studying agriculture," Giuliano said. "That's hopeful."

The presentation was sponsored by Campus Ministry, the Spes Unica Resource Center (SURV), and COLT, a group of students, staff and faculty that examines a particular issue throughout a semester or year.

A.J. Boyd, student government's CLC bylaws reviewer, suggested that a key ingredient in successful 24-hour space is to have an area conducive to conversation.

"The quintessential college experience is the 4 a.m. philosophy discussion," he said. "And that needs to include both genders... The Huddle just doesn't lend itself to that activity."

The Community Life Committee is still in the process of collecting data on both issues.

"What I see in the future is something in the next two weeks in regards to either the library or the Huddle," said Mamak, adding that organizing information on residence hall space may take much longer.

The meeting adjourned following recognition of Kelly Folks as the new Judicial Council chair.

Sanchez discusses Latina future

By JESSICA DELGADO
News Writer

Elisa Sanchez, president and CEO of MANA, a national Latina organization, outlined her ideas to rebuild the Hispanic community in a lecture last night in the Hesburgh Library auditorium.

"Latinas have the potential to be the leaders of the new millennium," said Sanchez.

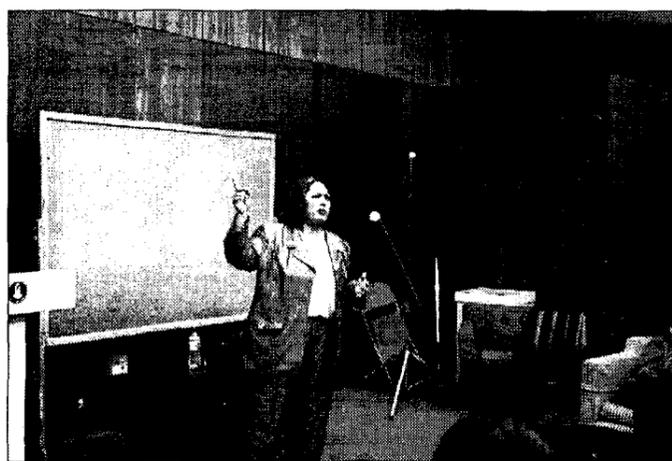

"MANA was created ... to develop the leadership talents and skills of Latinas through focused community service and challenging barriers to and advancing opportunities for Latinas," she said. "We are able to come together, share our ideas and problems, and help other Latinas grow in a positive environment. We want to show what women have to offer."

MANA is a community of women building the future together, making a transition from loose-knit volunteers to a fully staffed, pro-activist, Latina organization.

"Women bring to the table a sense of fair play, great wisdom, and look for the win-win situations," said Sanchez.

MANA has several national initiatives, including "Latina Vote '96," a women's vote project, "Hermanitas," a mentoring stay-in-school project for middle school girls, and "Dia de los libros/dia de los niños (Day of books/ Day of children)," a celebration of bilingual literacy beginning in infancy.

Sanchez was born in Silver City, N.M., where she grew up in a strong family. She says she is driven by the inspiration given to her by her mother, who led a local miners' union, and other Latinas of her community.

The Observer/Mike Harris

Elisa Sanchez discussed MANA, her organization to develop Latina leaders nationwide. She spoke at the Hesburgh Library last night.

"My mother has always taught me to think outside the box, and never set limits for myself," she said. "I was an 8 year-old standing in a picket line for nine months helping my mother and other women in our community stand up for what we believed was right."

She was at her mother's side in the Empire Zinc Strike in Hanover, N.M., which has been made famous by the movie "Salt of the Earth."

From that background, Sanchez has complete faith in the whole Latina population.

"We need to grow from a point of strength, not a point of weakness," she said. "Our community needs our Latinas to be visionary leaders, open minded risk takers that aren't afraid to speak up for themselves or speak their minds."

The theme of all the programs and activities sponsored by MANA is "Rebuilding Latino Communities for the 21st Century."

"We march to our own tune, and we need to make sure we have a betterment of our communities as a whole," she said. "According to the small business sector, Latina owned companies are the fastest growing companies in the country. Growing by an amazing 436 percent."

Sanchez concluded her lecture by stressing the need for public involvement, in order for MANA's goals to be accomplished.

"You need to find a mission that matters to you. We are about setting examples, and not forgetting who we are or where we came from," she said. "We need to remember one thing, Our country will have a woman president in 20 years and she will probably be Latina."

GOP rejects farm bill

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Republicans on Monday rejected a Democratic proposal to give $7.3 billion in aid to America's farmers, opting to stay with their own plan despite the threat of a presidential veto.

The Democratic aid plan was narrowly defeated by a 7-6 vote among Senate agricultural budget writers when offered by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa during a seven-hour long conference hearing. Instead, the Republican plan, worth about $4 billion, is included in the $61.3 billion agricultural spending bill that will be presented to the full Congress for approval.

"I don't see this as a partisan issue," Harkin said in pushing for passage of his plan. "We have a terrible emergency out there and we've got to address it."

Democrats touted their plan as better and cited Congressional Budget Office estimates of the increased money to states under their proposal. Iowa for instance would get $600 million under the Democratic plan but $235 million under the GOP proposal.

Similarly, Minnesota would get $483 million under the Democratic plan but $227 million under the GOP proposal.

The government predicts farm income will drop nearly 16 percent this year to $42 billion as the agricultural economy suffers through its worst downturn in more than a decade. A worldwide grain glut has pushed commodity prices to their lowest levels in memory.

President Clinton last week urged Republicans to increase their proposed $3.9 billion farm bailout plan.

In a letter to congressional leaders, the White House budget office did not mention the GOP plan but said Congress must provide "income-based assistance consistent" with the president's proposal, including the increase in price supports. Clinton's senior advisers will urge the president to veto any legislation that falls short, the letter said.

Both sides agree they want to help farmers but have been unable to agree on how to do it.

Democrats want to give farmers an extra $5 billion through a program that subsidizes growers when commodity prices fall below set levels. Wheat growers would get 57 cents a bushel more, corn producers 28 cents.

Republicans contend that idea is a throwback to the days before the 1996 farm law when subsidies were tied to crop production.

Some economists fear such a program could lead to excess production and depress prices.

The GOP plan includes $1.7 billion in direct payments to all growers; $1.5 billion in disaster relief for this year's crop losses; and $675 million that would mostly go to growers in the upper Midwest who have suffered a series of crop failures over the past five years.

Lawmakers also rejected controversial plans that would have labeled imported meat and ordered mandatory livestock price reporting. Instead, budget writers decided to study the issues before taking final action.

The overall bill far exceeded its original $56 billion price tag.

Some of the amendments added include a $27 million package of pet projects that included money for ailing Georgia cotton growers and money help install irrigation systems in drought-stricken areas. Lawmakers also agreed to add $50 million to help Alaskan salmon fisherman hurt by years of disease.

■ THE BELLE OF SAINT MARY'S

Pro-Wrestling Gets a Tongue Lashing

The following, I'm afraid, must be brought to your attention:

-Unfortunate Sentence Uttered by a Saint Mary's Political Science Professor of the Week: "When he didn't fulfill his promises after the election, liberal interest groups gave President Clinton a tongue-lashing."

Mary Beth Ellis

Animated Movie Preview Appearing in Disney's "The Black Cauldron" That Sounds Disturbingly Like a Porn Film: "Kiki's Delivery Service".

-Most Heartrending Moment of the President's Videotaped Testimony: When he requested permission to take a break in order to relieve the First Bladder.

That being said, we may now turn our attention to more important matters, namely: Professional wrestling.

This is a fine sport, one consisting primarily of large, easily offended men stomping about a canvas ring while occasionally throwing punches that miss the opponent by several inches, if not several feet, yet still somehow cause the recipient's head to snap back in dramatic fashion. I once had the delightful opportunity, under boyfriend duress (this is a person, I must warn you, who in all seriousness once announced, "You know, I just don't understand why more people don't like pro wrestling") to attend a World Wrestling Federation match. Notre Dame, in its never ending quest to improve the cultural welfare of the South Bend area, booked the WWF at the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center here on campus, possibly because the administration was unable to land the Michiana Truck Cap Expo. There was scarcely an occupied trailer on that magical evening when I beheld with my own eyes... Stone Cold Steve Austin.

Mr. Austin, for those of you with lives, is the current WWF champion of-- what is it now?-- I believe the whole entire universe, or at least all homes participating in WWF pay-per-view program events. Mr. Austin rises above the role of mere athlete to that of social commentator with deeply held philosophic ideals — ones that he poignantly expresses by giving everyone the finger a lot. Some wrestlers are even more cerebral than Mr. Austin, such as a person by the name of "Billy Gunn," who attends matches in neon green tights emblazoned "Mr. A.s." We also have a model of intellectual activity in a gentleman named Al Snow who, at the match I was fortunate enough to attend, appeared before the crowd bearing the decapitated head of a mannequin and suspended it high in the air, yelling,

"What does everybody like?"

"HEAD!" the spectators not sitting fifty feet from the House of Rockne bellowed.

"What does everybody LOVE?"

"HEAD!!!"

"And what does everybody NEED?!!!"

"HEAD!!!!"

The moment as a whole was, quite possibly, the apex of Western civilization.

You will be relieved, I'm sure, to learn that the WWF, always with the greater good of the community in mind, deigns to make available a wide variety of Officially Licensed Products for you, the people, to purchase. One may, for a mere $52, acquire a Stone Cold Steve Austin Skull Ring ("Just like the kind Stone Cold wears!"), or an Al Snow "Got Head?" t-shirt, or even — and I hope and pray that someday I will be able to afford this — a Steve Austin pool cue. May we all be so fortunate.

REVIEW QUESTION: If Middle America is so focused on being — well, middle of the road — why, having seen the astounding (one might even say, SUSPICIOUSLY astounding) success of Stone Cold Steve Austin, have we not seen wrestlers calling themselves "Stone Tepid," "Stone Lukewarm," or perhaps "Stone Room Temperature?" Must we always be so extremist?

■ PROGRESSIVE STUDENT ALLIANCE

Administrative Barriers to the Prevention of Discrimination

I want to believe that Administration of Notre Dame does not discriminate against gays, lesbians, and bisexuals. I want to believe that we are following Christ's greatest commandment to love our neighbor, and that when God comes to us as a gay, lesbian, or bisexual person we do not turn him or her away.

But then I remind myself that the University refuses to include sexual orientation in the non-discrimination clause. That the officers would fail to do so is very disturbing. For over eight years students and/or faculty have been passing resolutions, petitioning, and rallying for inclusion. But still the administration effectively reserves the 'right' to discriminate. Why? Why do they do this unless they intend to discriminate? It scares me.

The history of modifying the non-discrimination clause is long and frustrating. It's the all too common story of students advocating justice and administrative barriers being erected in their path. As far back as the fall of 1990, the Student Report to the Board of Trustees called for including sexual orientation in the nondiscrimination clause. More recently, since GLND/SMC was kicked out of the counseling center after meeting there for nine years, on Feb. 20, 1995, the Campus Life Council recommended recognition. Patty O'Hara refused and as a response created the Ad Hoc Committee on Gay and Lesbian Student Needs. In the committee's final Feb. 29, 1996 report it argued, "That the Vice President for Student Affairs should raise to the University officers the issue of modifying the nondiscrimination clause which appears in University publications to include sexual orientation." O'Hara agreed. Also in May 1996, Faculty Senate added their support to including sexual orientation.

But O'Hara stonewalled. She didn't raise the issue. A year later the issue remained unaddressed, so the College Democrats organized students with a large rally and petition campaign in the spring of 1997. In response, that fall we were 'blessed' with the Statement of Inclusion that says a lot of good things, but fails to hold the University legally accountable for its actions and allows discrimination to continue unaddressed. Its hypocrisy and utter lack of value was demonstrated when an 'out' priest and theater professor, Fr. David Garrick C.S.C., resigned, writing in his March 17, 1998 letter, "It is my intention that this resignation shall serve as a heart-felt protest against the refusal of the officers of the University to make a legal provision for the equal rights of gay persons at Notre Dame." Fr. David Garrick believed that if sexual orientation was included, he would not have been suspended from the Basilica and would not have resigned. Over 1,300 students, faculty, alumni signed a petition in support of Fr. Garrick and "equal treatment for all our Notre Dame and St. Mary's sisters and brothers," and the Faculty Senate voted unanimously in favor of reaffirming its support and placed the issue on Academic Council's agenda. Most recently on Sept. 16, Student Senate voted 22-2-4 in favor.

But why raise this issue now? Why after eight years of countless resolutions and Administrative stonewalling should students fight the good fight? Simply put: because we can win!

Unlike previous attempts, this time the decision cannot be merely vetoed by O'Hara or the Officers. For the first time ever, it will go before the Academic Council (hopefully on Oct. 8). If the Academic Council passes it, then it will either be enacted or sent to the Board of Trustees for final approval. A win in the Academic Council would be an unprecedented victory. Student support will influence the Academic Council's decision.

This issue is effectively a 'no-brainer'. It is separate from the issue of GLND/SMC recognition and is in complete accordance with Catholic moral teachings. Do I really need to present arguments that people should not be discriminated against based on their sexual orientation? Hopefully everyone on campus recognizes that discrimination is unjust and that the University should be held legally accountable. Conservatives, liberals, moderates, Catholics, atheists, and radicals should all find common ground here. Last spring, I was deeply heartened to read a letter from four College Republicans voicing their support. PSA wants to cooperate with everyone willing to work for this common cause.

Discrimination is stupid. Denying a student or faculty member a promotion, a job, a scholarship, a place on a sports team, a committee position, or a speaking engagement at the Basilica because of their sexual orientation is unjust. But the Administration can do all of those, and it has not shown willingness to stop. Students need to raise their voices and push this issue through Academic Council. Sign the petition, help collect signatures, talk to your friends, and I'll see you at the next rally! We plan to win. May love vanquish hateful discrimination and let's treat everyone as neighbors, as Christ would have us do. Don't you wish that Fr. David Garrick was still here?

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

Sosa singles Cubs into first playoff since 1989

Associated Press

CHICAGO
Now, Steve Trachsel will be remembered for more than giving up a historic home run. He's pitched those loving losers, the Chicago Cubs, into the playoffs.

With a home run boost from castoff Gary Gaetti and two key singles by Sammy Sosa, the Cubs beat the San Francisco Giants 5-3 Monday night to win the frenetic one-game playoff for the NL wild-card spot.

They survived despite a three-run rally in the ninth by the Giants. Barry Bonds, who grounded out with the bases loaded to end the seventh, came up again with the bases loaded but managed only a sacrifice fly.

The Cubs haven't been to a World Series since 1945 and haven't won one in 90 years, yet they're going to the postseason for the first time since 1989.

And now it's on to Atlanta, an extension of one of the most exciting seasons in their storied, sometimes laughable, always eventful, history. The Cubs, who won six of nine from the Braves, play Game 1

Wednesday.

Trachsel (15-8), who surrendered Mark McGwire's 62nd home run, didn't give up a hit until pinch-hitter Brent Mayne singled with one out in the seventh.

Trailing 4-0, the Giants went on to load the bases with two outs and brought Bonds to the plate. But the three-time MVP, who has struggled in the postseason, grounded out against reliever Felix Heredia and slammed his helmet to the ground.

In the ninth, reliever Kevin Tapani gave up a pair of leadoff singles. That brought on Terry Mulholland, who went eight innings and threw 121 pitches Sunday.

Stan Javier hit an RBI single and pinch-hitter Ellis Burks walked, loaded the bases with no outs and the score 5-1. But Bonds flied out, and then Rod Beck earned his 51st save, getting Jeff Kent on an RBI forceout and retiring Joe Carter on a pop.

It was Carter's final at-bat in the majors. At 38, the hero of the 1993 World Series is retiring.

The Cubs nearly did not get this far, losing six of their previous eight games, including Sunday's finale in Houston. But they were saved when Colorado rallied from a 7-0 deficit to beat the Giants 9-8, forcing the first one-game playoff in the NL since 1980.

Trachsel and Giants starter Mark Gardner kept it scoreless until the fifth inning.

Henry Rodriguez singled and then the balding Gaetti lifted a two-run homer to left, his 19th of the season and eighth since joining the Cubs on Aug. 19 — his 40th birthday — after his release by St. Louis.

Gaetti raised his arms in triumph as the ball landed in the left-field seats and after a delay as fans littered the field, he emerged from the dugout for a Sosa-like curtain call.

Singles by Lance Johnson and Sosa drove out Gardner (13-6) in the sixth. Rich Rodriguez relieved and after Grace walked to load the bases, Matt Mieske, called up from the minors earlier this month, lined a two-run single to right for a 4-0 lead.

Sosa went 2-for-4 with a pair of singles, scoring in the eighth on Jose Mesa's wild pitch.

Sosa finished the regular season, because this game's numbers counted, with 66 home runs, trailing McGwire's 70. But Sosa gets something McGwire doesn't — a chance to play into October.

INTERNAL FOOTBALL

Walsh defeats Badin, continues on warpath

By NATHANIEL DeNICOLA
Sports Writer

Off to an excellent start, Walsh looked to extend its two game winning streak when it faced Badin last Sunday.

The game proved to be an offensive battle in which Walsh emerged victorious, 25-13. Striking early and often, Walsh set the tone for the entire game with four touchdowns on 4 possessions in the first half.

After forcing Badin to punt of the first drive, Amy Krayer returned the kick to the 3 yard line. Carolyn Parnell scored on the next possession on a quarterback bootleg play, and Kelly Donally converted the extra point to give Walsh a 7-0 lead.

A trio of touchdown passes from Parnell to Kelly Perry

Walsh's scoring, amounting to a 25-7 halftime lead. Badin answered with a touchdown in the second half, but it proved to be too little too late as the Walsh defense held strong to preserve the lead.

"This game gave us a lot of confidence," Parnell said. "Our offensive line played excellent and we proved to ourselves that we could put points on the board."

Walsh faces Cavanaugh on Wednesday, Badin takes on Howard.

Breen-Philips 12
Howard 7

With Breen-Philips and Howard coming off loses in their previous games, both teams looked to rebound in the match-up on Sunday.

Howard captain Julie Wernick provided an instant spark for the offense by returning an interception for a touchdown on the first play of the game. The 7-0 advantage would last until late in the first half when Jenny Choi connected with Natalie Kelley for a 20 yard touchdown pass, cutting the Howard lead to 7-6 going into halftime.

Despite the threats by Howard, the second half belonged to Breen-Philips. The combination of Choi to Kelley produced another Breen-Philips touchdown and a 12-7 lead. Howard refused to go down quietly, and threatened again with a second-half drive.

However, Katie Leicht came through with a crucial interception that swung the momentum, and the game, in favor of Breen-Philips. Jenny Wahoske lead a defensive attack that staved off Howard's offense and preserved the victory for Breen-Philips.

"Overall the team finally played together," commented Choi. "This win is a major confidence booster than will help prepare us for the rest of the season."

Cavanaugh 6
Lyons 0

Having scored 37 points in the last two games, Lyons didn't figure to stage a defensive duel with Cavanaugh on Sunday.

However, a defensive duel is what they encountered, as Cavanaugh edged Lyons 6-0. The fist sign that the game would be determined by defense occurred during Lyon's second drive.

Just as Lyons was threatened an interception that proved to be a crucial turning point.

The game remained scoreless until late in the half, when Cavanaugh began a threatening drive. Running back Jodi Jones, the center of the Cavanaugh offense, lead a charge that placed Cavanaugh within striking distance. Jones and quarterback Allison Krilla carried Cavanaugh to a 6-0 lead as time expired in the first half.

Both defenses held strong as Lyons and Cavanaugh exchanged possession for the remainder of the game, resulting in a Cavanaugh victory.

"We are proud of our defensive performance," Sara Kaufman said. "We really needed this win to keep spirits up."

Lyons plays Pangborn on Wednesday, Cavanaugh takes on Walsh.

Keough escapes with close win

By NOAH AMSTADTER
Sports Writer

It was far from a normal South Bend autumn afternoon last Sunday at Stepan Field.

Football was the excitement of the afternoon as the Kangaroos of Keough defeated the Juggs of Knott, 7-0.

The teams displayed impressive skill on defense throughout the game. Punts came down like bombs on a battlefield.

Early in the first quarter Knott threatened to score as it exhibited an impressive option offense. Keough thwarted the attack with an early quarterback sack that set the tone for the game.

"The defense shut them down the whole game and that was the key to the win," Keough defensive end Chris Craytor said. "If they don't score, we can't lose."

The defense made its biggest play of the day late in the third quarter as the Keough goal-line defense blocked a Knott field goal attempt. This play shifted the momentum of the game to the Kangaroos.

Quarterback Travis Alexander and receiver Matt Canna had been connecting all day, but so far had failed to get into the end zone.

As the fourth-quarter clock ran down, Alexander and Canna marched the Keough offense down the field. Alexander first hit Canna for a first down with a minute remaining.

Then, with 20 seconds remaining, the two connected again as Canna caught a fade on the Knott five-yard line and dragged a defender into the endzone. Keough kicked the extra point and the clock ran down for the victory.

"Travis put it right on the money only where I could catch it," Canna said. "I just had to go up and get it and fall into the end zone. The line really gave him a ton of time to do it, they stepped it up on the last drive."

Alumni 10
Stanford 0

On the north side of the field a battle between the Dawgs and Studs took place. The canines won out in the end as Alumni's defensive excellence proved too much for the Stanford offense to handle.

Both teams played inspired defense in the first half of the game. The only time that either team was close to scoring was in the second quarter when Alumni kicker Paul Moore's field goal attempt was blocked by a Stanford defender.

In the third quarter, the Alumni offense finally took charge. On fourth and sixth, Alumni quarterback Alex Gese hit receiver Mike Defonso, who ran the ball in from the five-yard line for the game's first score. Moore put up the extra point kick and Alumni took a 7-0 lead.

In the fourth quarter, Gese completed a long pass to receiver Cas Schneller, who caught the ball on the five-yard line. After two pass attempts came up unsuccessful, Moore kicked a 20-yard field goal for the game's final score.

"Our defense played really great," said Alumni coach Mike Aubry. "They caused a few turnovers in the second half with a fumble recovery and interception that were really

Carroll/St. Ed's
and O'Neill remain winless

By BRIAN HOBBS
Sports Writer

Keenan 38
Carroll/St. Ed's 0

This week in men's inter-hall action the Keenan Knights squared off against the dynamic duo of Carroll and St. Ed's.

Coming off a close victory last weekend the Knights went right to work scoring on the first drive on a quarterback keeper held by Craig Venvertloh which took the wind out of the Carroll/St. Ed's offense.

The Keenan defense held Carroll/St. Ed's to three plays. With the ball turned over to Keenan, Venvertloh struck fire hitting Ben Carpenter mid stride in route to the endzone.

After a tough offensive series Venvertloh scored again on a short carry. Carlos Meade rounded out the first half's scoring on a twenty yard reception in a fourth and long situation. Meade accredits Venvertloh for the precision pass.

"It was a perfect pass," Meade said.

The second half held no better luck for a decimated Carroll/St. Ed's team. Mike Romanchek got things started right where they left off on a 25 yard carry to the end zone. Finally, Keenan's Venvertloh rounded out a five touchdown outing and the day's scoring with a short run to the endzone.

After a nail biter with Stanford last weekend Keenan reestablished the tone of last year's championship season, converting on four of five extra point attempts and closing out a 38-0 victory.

Keenan's record now stands at 2-0 while Carroll/St.

Ed's slumps to 0-2 at the season's halfway point.

Zahm 28,
O'Neill 0

Sunday was indeed a day for blow outs, as a tough Zahm Hall team brought the wood to The Angry Mob of O'Neill Hall.

Zahm's Colton King attributed the 28-0 blowout to a total team effort.

"We were clicking on all cylinders, four different guys scored touchdowns so we aren't relying on anyone too much," King said.

Strong defensive play from Zahm contributed to several three-and-out scenarios for a rough around the edges O'Neill offense.

Captain Jamie Bordas attributed the lackluster performance on a brand new offense that has yet to work the kinks out.

"We are going to work on fundamentals and offensive timing," Bordas said.

Bright spots in an otherwise dismal day for O'Neill were tailback Mike Brown's performance and an explosive Bordas quarterback sack. Indeed the Mob have their work cut out for them posting an 0-2 record at this point in the season.

Zahm Hall's offensive mix is the primary reason for their excellent start this season. Scoring twice in the air and twice on the earth the Zahm offense spent most of their Sunday afternoon on the field.

King and Chris Bystedt were responsible for 12 Zahm points in the air while Brian Tebbe and Matt Meyer rounded out the ground assault en route to a 28-0 victory, the second of Zahm's season.

Matt Meyer attributed the victory to, "four big lucky plays," however with luck like on their side it is likely that the Zahmbies will be able to lock a spot down in the inter-hall playoffs.

the little momentum we had," as Lewis then moved on to score after the turnover.

Freshman Kelly Keegan scored the lone Lewis touchdown in the losing effort on a 40-yard interception return. Coach Bouton said his team has the "general idea of the plays" but need to execute much "crisper."

As for Lewis, senior captain Rosemary Sage believes her team's "strength is definitely our defense," with that unit having allowed zero points in two games. This team has a lot of talent both from upper and lower classmen and should fare well if it puts it all together as in its effort against Welsh.

Pasquerilla West 18, Farley 0

In the second contest, Pasquerilla West came into the action against Farley Hall sporting a defense which had given up no points and boasting an undefeated record thus far into the season. The team left the contest with these two claims in tact, rolling to an 18-0 victory and improving to 3-0.

Senior Lisa Rodriguez got PW going early on with an interception that she returned for a touchdown. Junior captain Kathleen Warin said this was the boost her team's previously sluggish defense needed to get going and record its third shutout of the young season.

PW went on to score twice more through the air, but these times the ball took flight from the arm of its own quarterback. First senior Mary Laflin and then freshman Amanda Gallen hauled in touchdown tosses as the lead climbed to 18-0. This wound up being the final score.

"The score does not reflect how well we played," said Farley's captain, junior Elizabeth Brown.

Brown felt her team's attitude change after the first interception, one that ate at the team's confidence and seemingly set the tone for the rest of the game. With the loss, her team fell to 0-2.

PW feels confident about its prospects for the remainder of the season. In the words of Warin, "We're pretty comfortable with what we're doing." Hopefully for them, this comfort level will continue to translate into wins.

Pasquerilla East 28, Off-Campus 0

The third game pitted Pasquerilla East against the team from off campus.

Not wanting to be outdone by the hall that shares its first name, PE also held the opposition scoreless en route to a 28-0 rout that moved the team's record to 2-0.

The center of attention for both teams was PE senior quarterback Elizabeth Plummer. While she keyed the PE passing and ground games, the off campus team was focused on trying to stop her. They met with minimal success, as the score suggests.

Plummer did an excellent job distributing the ball to her entire receiving corps, highlighted by touchdown passes to junior Melissa Gorman and junior Kerri Hanley. This potent offensive attack struck on it first possession with a healthy combination of runs and passes. The entire team on both sides of the ball never looked back from this solid start.

Leading the defense was the pass rushing attack of juniors Stephanie Foster and Stephanie Trautman. Forget the shoes. It must be the name. Or maybe the class.

One bright spot for the off campus team was the play of senior fullback Christina Hascall who, among her other receptions, had a thirty yard catch.

Off campus coach Chris Mignaneli said his team is "learning as we go along," the group only having had six or seven practices before this game. He said he can already see the growth in his 0-2 team as "the passing game is getting a lot better".

Off to a strong start, junior captain Alison Healy stated that her team is "gearing up for the second half of the season," one in which the schedule promises to deliver some tough games. With Plummer at the helm, PE definitely looks to be a force to be reckoned with in the coming weeks.

The Observer Sports Department is seeking another sports columnist. If interested please call 1-4543.

Admissions Office now open 8:00 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. on Notre Dame home-game Saturdays.

"A whole new world opened up one Saturday morning."

"That's when we visited the campus of Holy Cross College — and my daughter decided she had to go there."

Good decision! No doubt it was aided by the fact that they could talk with someone from our Admissions Office. It's now open on all Notre Dame home-game Saturdays. So college-bound students and their families who are in town for a game can get the full scoop on what our college has to offer. Of course, you can talk with someone in the Admissions Office any weekday. And, if you can't visit us when you're in town for a game, you can learn more about us at the Holy Cross Hospitality Table in Joyce Center. We're a two-year, transfer-intent liberal arts college with a knack for nurturing young minds and giving wings to young dreams. Stop by. And let us open up a whole new world for your son or daughter.

Heft and Grubb earn Big East players of the week

The Observer/John Daily
Junior Jenny Heft racked up four of the Irish's six goals this weekend.

Special to The Observer

PROVIDENCE, RI
Notre Dame junior forward Jenny Heft and junior defender Jen Grubb were named Big East players of the week on Monday.

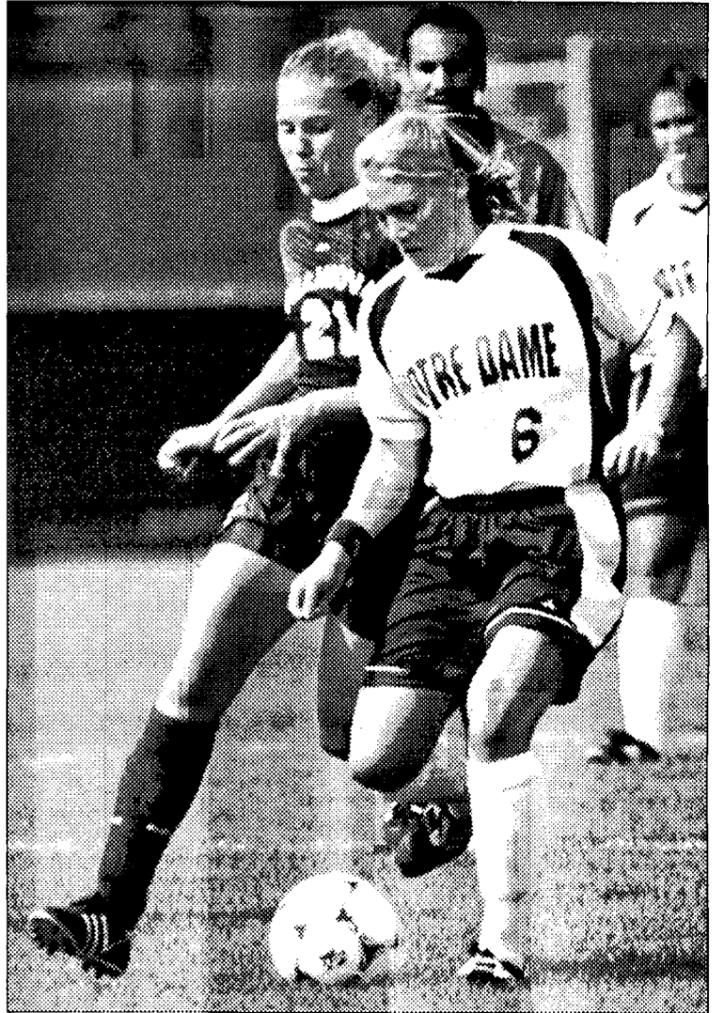

Heft was named offensive player for the second time this season, while Grubb was named defensive player of the week for the third time in four weeks.

Heft scored four of Notre Dame's six goals this weekend, including a hat trick in the 3-0 win over 25th ranked Wake Forest on Sunday, the third hat trick of her career. Heft also scored the second goal of the game against Indiana on Friday.

For the season, Heft has scored 12 goals in nine games in the 1998 season. Heft was named to the all-tournament team of the KeyBank Soccer Classic.

Grubb upped her team-leading assist total to nine with three more assists this weekend to bring her average to one assist per game. She assisted on Notre Dame's game-winning goal against Indiana on Friday night and added another assist on the final goal of the game.

Grubb added another assist against 25th ranked Wake Forest. Grubb also helped the Irish record their fourth straight shutout and seventh of the season. For her performances this weekend, she was named defensive MVP of the KeyBank Soccer Classic.

Shane Walton. Having scored in all but one game this season, Walton is also credited with two game-winning goals. His goal against St. John's this weekend earned him his third rookie of the week honor this season.

Tallying seven of the team's 15 goals this season has led opposing defenses to keep on eye on No. 11.

"Everyone knows who he is. He's a marked man and has to earn everything he gets," said Berticelli.

The attention hasn't stopped Walton so far, especially with the strong play of fellow forward Ryan Cox, who assisted the freshman on the St. John's goal. As defenses try to keep Walton in check, it is Cox who has become more heroic in getting him the ball.

"One player that deserves a lot of credit is Ryan Cox. He's the creative guy, the one that's making a lot of things happen," said Berticelli. "The combination of Cox and Walton has amazed me in how well they've learned to play together so quickly."

The recent string of four overtime matches leaves the Irish looking to jump out with a quick lead that it can hold on to. With a game away from the Big East and Aris, Wells and Bocklage on the rebound, the Irish hope to return to South Bend with a big win.

"We can't be satisfied with a tie," said Walton. "For me, a tie is a loss."

Walton earns rookie honors

Special to The Observer

For the third time in four weeks, Notre Dame freshman forward Shane Walton has been honored as the Big East Rookie of the Week.

Walton, the leading scorer for the Irish this season with seven goals and three assists, tallied the game-tying goal in Notre Dame's 1-1 deadlock with seventh-ranked St. John's on Saturday night. He has scored in all but one game for the 4-1-2 Irish this season with two game-winning scores. Walton tied the score against St. John's at the 17:43 mark off an assist from junior Ryan Cox.

His game-winning goals have come in a 1-0 victory over Northwestern and in a 2-1 overtime decision at Villanova. Walton is the first Irish rookie to score six points in a collegiate debut when he score six goals and dished off two assists in a 6-1 victory against Valparaiso.

Major League Baseball

Rockies fire first manager

Associated Press

DENVER

The first casualty of the Rockies' losing season was Don Baylor — the only manager the team has had in its six seasons.

"After a long, thorough and very difficult evaluation, we feel a change in chemistry is necessary on the field and in the clubhouse," Colorado owner Jerry McMorris said Monday after firing his manager.

Despite the high-priced additions of pitcher Darryl Kile and second baseman Mike Lansing, the Rockies finished 77-85 — their first losing season in four years.

"Major league baseball has enjoyed a remarkable 1998 season, but all of us at the Rockies have been very disappointed in our own season," McMorris said. "We didn't play like we expected to play."

Baylor, 49, led the Rockies to a 440-469 record. He was offered a position as vice president, reporting directly to McMorris, but he did not immediately accept it.

McMorris said during spring training that the Rockies had assembled their best team. But the team's performance didn't measure up.

Both Baylor and Bob Gebhard, the general manager since the Rockies inception in 1993, were criticized all year following an eight-game losing streak in early April that dropped the team out of contention.

While Baylor will not return to the dugout, Gebhard will be back in the front office. McMorris said the team also will create a vice president's position with broad player personnel responsibilities.

Keli McGregor, senior vice president of business operations, has been promoted to executive vice president. His responsibilities will remain with the club's business operations, but he also will have expanded duties within the baseball department. Assistant general manager Tony Siegle was made director of baseball administration.

"We realized that we had lost some experienced baseball people from our front office over the past few years," McMorris said. "We need more baseball people upstairs."

To that end, McMorris said he hoped Baylor would accept the new job offer.

"We do not want to lose Don or his many talents in this organization," McMorris said. "I strongly encouraged Don to accept this role, and I made it very clear to him that it was not a short-term deal."

Many of Baylor's new duties would involve shoring up the Rockies' minor-league system.

"We have not asked any team for permission yet to talk to a manager," McMorris said, "but I expect that process will begin this afternoon. We're looking for a person who has won and who has experience."

Among those reportedly being considered to replace Baylor are Florida's Jim Leyland, Montreal's Felipe Alou and Milwaukee's Phil Garner.

After the Rockies came from behind to defeat San Francisco 9-8 on Sunday, Baylor sounded as if he expected to be fired. "I think it's probably 50-50," he said. "I've been around a long time, and I understand the indicators. I can live with what I've done here in six years."

With Baylor as the manager, the Rockies won 67 games in 1993, the most ever for a first-year NL team. They earned the NL wild-card playoff berth in 1995, the quickest any expansion team has made it to the postseason.

The Rockies went 83-79 in both 1996 and 1997 but slipped back this season.

"Don Baylor is a great individual. He's made some mistakes, but everybody sees how managers make mistakes," NL batting champion Larry Walker said. "I enjoy playing for him. I'd play for him any day."

Shortstop Neifi Perez added, "I love Don Baylor. I don't know how it's all his fault."

Looking to the future, McMorris said the Rockies "intend to bring in at least one impact free agent, and hopefully two."

Irish prepare to face Broncos

By ANTHONY BIANCO
Assistant Sports Editor

It's been quite a stretch for the Irish the past two weeks as they faced four straight foes from the Big East.

Despite a loss to the Scarlet Knights at Rutgers, the Irish came away from the conference games with four points to hold on to a top spot in the standings.

But head coach Mike Berticelli's squad will take a breather this afternoon from Big East competition as the Irish trek over to Western Michigan for their third non-conference game of the season. Notre Dame, riding a seven-game win streak against the Broncos, hopes to improve on its unbeaten non-conference record of 2-0-0.

The primary concern for Notre Dame lies not with the Broncos, but with getting key players healthy for the rest of the season. Forward Scott Wells and midfielders Andrew Aris and Ben Bocklage have all been out of lineups the past few weeks nursing injuries. Though all three started in Saturday's contest against St. John's, they each saw limited playing time in the 1-1 tie.

"Being able to put Andrew Aris, who's at about 60 percent of his usual self, Scott Wells, who's at about 70 percent, and Ben Bocklage, who's at about 80 percent on the field even for periods of time has been a plus for our team," said Berticelli. "It give us some confidence and allows us to get back to playing the way we were before those injuries."

The injuries have given the Irish the chance to test out some of the newer talent on the roster, even in Saturday's all-important standoff with St. John's. Matt Russo, Dustin Pridmore, Antonio Bernal and Patrick Williams all entered the game for the Irish attack in the crucial overtime periods.

"I like to put in younger players for short periods of time to give them a little bit of experience, and yet at the same time, they're capable of making a difference," commented Berticelli.

The freshman who has made the biggest difference on the Irish squad this year is forward

Games intensify as squads hit their stride

Dillon's offense too much for Morrissey

By MIKE CONNOLLY
Sports Writer

In a game that was supposed to be, according to Dillon coach Omar Munoz a "coming out party for Chris Crane," the guest of honor arrived a little late.

Facing double and triple coverage from the Morrissey defense all game, Crane was held to 17 yards on 1 catch. But that one catch could not have come at a more opportune moment for the Dillon offense.

Trailing 3-0 with 53 seconds remaining and facing a 4th and 11 from the Manor 17 yard line, freshman quarterback Colin Conway, who completed five of his 12 passes for 41 yards, hit Crane at the two yard line. Crane bounced off a would-be-tackler and lunged into the end zone giving Dillon its first lead of the game, 7-3.

Dillon's offense struggled for most of the game. Joe Larson and the Morrissey defense registered five sacks and held Dillon tailback Durran Alexander to 18 yards on 7 carries. Conway rarely had enough time to throw as he was constantly harassed by the Manor pass-rush.

The Morrissey offense moved the ball effectively against the Dillon defense most of the game. Quarterback Dan Sullivan, who chalked up 65 yards passing and 39 yards rushing, Halfback Tom Dietrich and the Alumni running game proved too much for the Stanford defense. The Dawgs handed the Studs a hard loss in Sunday's game, 10-0.

Lewis captures first win over Welsh, 19-6

By TED FOX
Sports Writer

With the interhall football season now in full swing, each fall Sunday is filled with gridiron action.

This Sunday was no different, as the warm weather and sunny skies set the stage for some intense action on West Quad in three women's interhall games in three hours.

Game one saw Lewis Hall square off against Welsh Family Hall, a contest in which both teams were looking for their first wins. Unfortunately for Welsh, Lewis reached this goal first, winning the game 19-6, by bringing the attack that featured veteran seniors and not-so-veteran freshmen.

Leading the Lewis offensive onslaught was freshman running back Virginia Brisley who rushed twice for touchdowns.

Senior Leigh Ann West added the other touchdown in Jerry Rice-like fashion, catching a pass and then sprinting the thirty-plus yards to the endzone.

On the other side of the ball, freshman Alison Goodings picked up two key sacks while patrolling the defensive line. Senior Maureen Neville intercepted two passes from her linebacking position, one of which, in the words of Welsh coach Casey Bouton, "Kind of killed
