George Kunz....

Where The Game Is Played

This is where the game is played. Where you hit and shove and grunt and eat that dirt and learn what it's like to take a three-point stance in the snow.

If you're on the Notre Dame offensive line, you do something else, too. You make holes...big holes...really BIG HOLES, in fact.

Irish co-captain George Kunz, playing his last game in ND stadium today, discusses the role of an offensive right tackle on page 6.

....fires off the ball toward his Iowa Hawkeye foe....

....and stands him upright with a powerful block.

"...what it's like to take a three-point stance in the snow."

Sports Parade

By Milt Richman, UPI columnist

Jacques Returns

Today's Sports Parade is written by James F. Cour of UPI's Far West Division.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Jacques Plante insisted he still was good enough to play in New York. The Rangers said he wasn't. They won the argument.

This one-sided discussion took place at the tailend of the 1964-65 season, and as a consequence of it an unhappy Plante was shipped by the Rangers to their Baltimore farm in the American Hockey League.

It took almost four years, but Plante evened the score at Madison Square Garden Wednesday night when he came into the game as the third St. Louis goaltender and carried the Blues to a 3-1 National Hockey League victory over New York.

Plante's very appearance in the contest came under unusual circumstances. Glenn Hall started in the St. Louis goal, while Jacques, dressed in street clothes, was high in the stands in a television booth preparing to go on the show between periods. But with the game barely two minutes old, Hall was evicted with a 10-minute and game misconduct for making what he later termed "some rather rash statements" to referee Vern Buffey.

Rookie Robbie Irons made his NHL debut in place of Hall, but a puck caught him on the ankle during his warmup stint, and he was removed three minutes later.

For the final 55 minutes of the game he was unbeatable, turning back all 21 shots sent his way. It was pleasant vindication for the 39-year-old veteran, who had retired for three years after his demotion by the Rangers.

"There wasn't special satisfaction in beating the Rangers," said the generous hero. "Just to beat any team from the East is an accomplishment."

Vic Hadfield scored the only Ranger goal just a minute and 16 seconds after the game started with a 65-foot bullet that dipped by Hall. But Bill McCreary evened the score six minutes later and Ron Shock got the winner on a second period power play.

Plante, who had two shutouts in eight previous starts, felt that starting the game in the television booth was beneficial to him.

"I was relaxing up there, only worrying about making notes for the show," he said. "If you sit on the bench, even if you're not playing, you don't know when you'll get called in and you're always tense."

Plante decided to return to hockey earlier this year when his wife's health improved. He had worked as a salesman during his "retirement" and so had to get himself back into shape.

"I did two hours of physical exercise every day for two months," he said. "I rode a still bike 15 miles a day and played ping pong for an hour. No running."

Plante said he spoke to new Ranger coach Boom Boom Geoffrion during the summer and that his former teammate was interested in having him back in New York.

"But the next day I got picked up by St. Louis," he said.

Blues Win
With Austin Carr grabbing 40 points, the ND blues downed the second team whites 129-110 in a scrimmage at Sturgis Michigan last night. Bob Whitmore chipped in with 34 points, while John Pleick led the whites with 28. The rest of the scoring was well balanced with Sid Catlett, Jim Derrig, Dwight Murphy, and Jim (Muncie Milkman) Hinga all hitting double figures.

More Than 100 Identify Pro Gridders

Below are listed the names of more than 100 Notre Dame and St. Mary's students who correctly identified all 20 men in The Observer's Ex-Irish Pro Contest.

The tie-beaker question will be posed Sunday evening, Nov. 17, in room 118 of Nieuwland. Contestants whose last names begin with letters A through E should report at 9 p.m.; F through J at 9:10 p.m.; K through O at 9:20 p.m.; P through S at 9:30 p.m.; T through Z at 9:40 p.m.

Those contestants who do not appear at the tie-breaker meeting automatically forfeit their opportunity to win the $25 prize.

Contestants MUST bring their I.D. cards and register at the rear door of room 118 at the appointed time. Contestants should bring reading or study matter because they likely will experience a slight delay while other contestants are being registered.

Decision of the judges is final throughout the entire tie-breaker meeting.

Irish Offense Leads Nation

NEW YORK (UPI)—For one game at least, Notre Dame didn't miss Terry Hanratty at all.

With Hanratty on the sidelines last week, sophomore Joe Theisman took over the Irish attack and piled up 550 yards against Pittsburgh in a 56-7 rout to enable Notre Dame to take over the national lead in total offense.

The Irish rolled up the big total even though Coach Ara Parseghian, enjoying a 49-0 halftime lead, had the Irish stay on the ground throughout the second half when they didn't throw a pass.

Notre Dame now leads with an average of 521.6 yards per game while Houston is second at 518.6 and Yale is third at 474.7.

Notre Dame, which plays Georgia Tech this Saturday, winds up its season Nov. 30 against Southern California—and that may be the game in which the Irish will miss Hanratty, who's out for the year with a knee injury.

Notre Dame, which is tied for the scoring lead with Kansas at 40.1 points per game, is well ahead of the all-time total offense record of 487 yards per game by Nevada in 1948.

'Eleven Prolific Men' Top Two Miles

By MIKE PAVLIN

There is something reassuring about large numbers. Getty and Hughes know they couldn't count their money even if they hired people to do it for them. LBJ knows he has plenty of soldiers to win the war in Viet Nam, if only he used them all at once. And Ara Parseghian can get happily lost in the bushels of figures totalled up by his fantastic offense.

The "Eleven Prolific Men" have run up and down various fields for over two miles in yardage. They have already broken four records, and have a shot at a whopping fifteen more. But, as even a Science major can tell you, the line makes the offense go, and blocking makes the line work.

One man who helps the Notre Dame offensive line do its job is co-captain George Kunz. From his vantage point at right tackle, the 6ft. 4in., 240 lb. senior helps secure for Irish ballcarriers safe passage into the opposing secondary, and makes sure that whoever is slinging the ball gets plenty of time to get his job done.

The view from the stands consists many times of a tangled mass of players pushing and shoving, then magically producing a hole. But there is nothing magical about good blocking. It takes both the knowledge of who to block, and the skill to put him out of the way.

Even on a fairly simple play, such as an off-tackle plunge, blocking assignments can cause problems. "Against an 'Oklahoma' defense with its five-man line, blocking is man-on-man," according to Kunz. "It's asking too much of an offensive lineman to take his man one particular way. We just try to have him move his man anywhere he can." If, at the line of scrimmage, the defense should shift into a six-man line, the blockers must compensate. "If the defense, say, brings a linebacker on to the line, that means that he has moved out of someone else's area."

One of the best looking plays in the Notre Dame offensive arsenal is the "inside reverse", where the fake goes one way, then the ballcarrier cuts back against the flow. "We try to simplify blocking as much as we can on this type of play", says George. "It's up to the guards to get on the ball and move, though sometimes the tackle pulls. On some plays we can have a guard run a fake pull to get a linebacker out of the way. Important in all the plays is the faking in the backfield. In fact, many of our plays just wouldn't work without that good faking."

The "bread-and-butter" end sweep and the option play can be run in different ways. "If the defensive lineman is on your inside shoulder, you have the perfect situation. And even if he sets up to your outside, you can leave him and get another man further inside. By sliding down one man in that position, we can have a halfback take care of the last outside man. On an option play, the tight end may want to block down on the defensive tackle, leaving the isolated end set up for the quarterback-halfback fake."

A good share of the offensive records come from the passing attack. And the sight of Terry Hanratty standing back and carefully picking out the best target is a sure sign that those 250 lb. defensive tackles are just not getting in. "Pass blocking changes according to your individual opponent," states Kunz. "If he is big and hard-charging, the chances are he is not too agile. Then I try to hit low and cut his legs out from under him. But if he's the type who likes to 'hand fight' and then move around, I concentrate on keeping him in front of me."

The "blitz" puts the real heat on the offensive line. "If the defensive team shoots their linebackers on a blitz, we know that there are going to be some pass receivers open somewhere. We don't try to knock two or three men down at once, but we feel that if we can keep out the men assigned to us, the quarterback will have time to hit the open man."

The Notre Dame offensive attack has succeeded this year because some exceptionally skilled men have learned to work together in the all-important unit. Tight end Jim Winegardner is a true specialist: big enough a 6ft. 4in., 225 lbs. to handle a defensive tackle, yet agile enough to grab 14 passes for 177 yards. Guards Larry DiNardo, Ed Tuck, and Tom McKinley average 6ft. 2in., 240 lbs. but possess the speed necessary for leading sweeps. Kunz and Jim Reilly hold down the tackle spots while Mike Oriard has won the center job from Tim Monty. Oriard, like Kunz a converted tight end, came to Notre Dame without scholarship, winning a place as a "walk-on".

Success on the line comes also from knowing your teammate's moves as well as the defensive man's. Larry DiNardo-Jim Reilly, and Kunz-McKinley have developed into excellent guard-tackle units. Expains Kunz, "If you get to know your partner's moves, then you can be sure exactly how much responsibility you must take in a given situation."

Today take a good look at George Kunz and his mates on the offensive line. They'll be working hard to make it a pleasant afternoon for Theismann and Co., and they'll be making a complicated collegiate offense look beautifully simple.

The Irish Eye

By Terry O'Neil, sports editor

Grid Picks

To rework an old saying, I took it in the eye last week.

Not entirely my fault, though. First attempt at this job and they hit me with all those upsets. How did I know three of the Top Ten teams would lose? How could I know Georgia Tech's net rushing against Navy would be minus three yards? How could I know Kansas State would score its first Big Eight win in four years?

Actually, the final chart wasn't that bad—32 right, 13 wrong, one tie for a percentage of .711. But I blew my lunch on most of the important games. And for that, I think I deserve a little hate mail. Right, Joel?

THE EAST

Army over Pitt—Start with a chippie.

Harvard over Brown—Jerry Hart can't do it all.

Penn State over Maryland—Lions crossed me up last week. Hope they do it again.

Yale over Princeton—Brian Dowling preps for the big clash with Harvard next week.

Syracuse over Navy—Third straight shutout for the Orange defense.

THE MIDWEST

NOTRE DAME over Georgia Tech—Watch "Slick" Zloch's interception total rise against the pass-minded Yellowjackets.

Iowa over Ohio State—You read it right. The Buckeyes made Sports Illustrated's cover last week and you know what that means.

Indiana over Minnesota—Some guy told me last week never to bet against the Hoosiers. So I'm gullible.

Illinois over Northwestern—This is like the Steelers over the Eagles.

Michigan State over Purdue—Another upset. Strictly a question of better attitude on the part of Duffy's lads.

Michigan over Wisconsin—E-e-e-e-e-easy.

Kansas over Kansas State—Ditto.

THE SOUTH

Georgia over Auburn—That's what the bookies say.

Kentucky over Florida—By a field goal.

Tennessee over Mississippi—Home field advantage does it for the Vols.

Alabama over Miami (Fla.)—One of Olivo's off days. Tide runs the log to 7-2.

Louisiana State over Mississippi State—MSU remains winless.

Virginia over Tulane—With very little trouble.

Wake Forest over Duke—Reversing last season's 31-13 setback.

THE SOUTHWEST

Arkansas over Southern Methodist—These are two of the four teams tied at 4-1 atop the Southwest Conference.

Texas A&M over Rice—In an effort to escape the Southwest cellar.

Texas Tech over Baylor—Tech retains a share of first place.

Texas over TCU—So do the Longhorns.

Oklahoma over Missouri—Thus creating a virtual three-way tie for the Big Eight title and an Orange Bowl berth.

Colorado over Nebraska—By one TD.

Arizona State over Brigham Young—Revenge for State.

Air Force over Tulsa—Falcons are a surprising 5-3 to date.

New Mexico State over New Mexico—Intra-desert rivalry.

Houston over Idaho—In the Big Dome, no less.

THE FAR WEST

Southern Cal over Oregon State—With luck and rain and more luck, it could be a repeat of last season's 3-0 surprise.

Washington over UCLA—Bruins a real disappointment.

Stanford over U. of the Pacific—At least a two-TD margin.

California over Oregon—If the Bears can forget last Saturday.

Washington State over San Jose State—Big score here.

NFL

Baltimore over St. Louis—Not yet looking ahead to the return match with LA.

Chicago over Atlanta—Perhaps the loss of Sayers will galvanize Bears' resolve.

Minnesota over Detroit—Beating the Packers does something really good for a team.

Green Bay over New Orleans—Aw, no. They couldn't drop this one.

New York over Philadelphia—They're re-designing those buttons in Philly: "Joe Must Go, O.J. Must Come."

Cleveland over Pittsburgh—Steelers have to come down out of the clouds soon.

Dallas over Washington—Cowboys catch an ego-builder after the loss to New York.

AFL

San Diego over Buffalo—Lamonica will shred that Bills' defense.

Houston over Denver—Oilers looking for some way to "re-enter the Eastern Division race."

Kansas City over Boston—A real thumping for the Pats.

Cincinnati over Miami—A mild upset.

Oakland over New York—This could be the AFL championship game pairing.

Kalamazoo Pointless

Kalamazoo College of Michigan has played Notre Dame seven times in football without ever scoring a point.

'Whilst I Slept Last Night...'

(Editor's Note: While most everyone else was taking the Hanratty injury seriously, Observer sports writer Mike Pavlin implanted his tongue firmly in his cheek and came up with this piece.)

By MIKE PAVLIN

Whilst I slept last night I was awakened by an Angel of the Lord who spoke unto me, saying "Come, for you are wanted by the Most High God". And he took me by the hand before the Throne of the Lord. And around the Throne was a great Light, brighter than a thousand suns, and I was not able to look upon it. And I was exceedingly afraid.

And from the Light came a mighty Voice crying: "Thus sayeth the Lord: Know ye that many years ago when your people were sore distressed, they called upon Me in their torture. They cried out to be delivered from the curse of the Wildcat, from the scourge of the Boilermaker they asked relief. And I heeded their call, for they had moved My Heart. And I went down and appeared to YOUR HEAD, called TED. And I made to him a covenant.

"And I sent among you from the Land of Parseghian, a man called ARA, who was exceedingly just and stood upright in the sight of the Lord. And I raised up others like Him, RAY, YONTO, SHOULTS, PAGNA. And they built a great team to rid you of your foes. And they raised up leaders like HUARTE, SNOW, HARDY, LYNCH, CONJAR, and EDDY. And you became a powerful team and your enemies could not prevail against you. Neither could ye be threatened by the Army or the Navy. Came they from the air or on the land and you smote them. And I didst open for your runners great holes in their lines and you scored full many points.

"But know ye that I am exceedingly wroth, for ye have turned against Me. Ye have revolted against your leader, the honored TED. Ye have hidden in your rooms great stores of strong drink, and nightly revel in sin. Ye have not heeded My words against loose women, and ye have invited them into your very rooms. And ye raise up false leaders and give praise to false gods.

"Know ye that the Lord God has struck against you. Your quarterback, the venerable THH have I struck down lame. Naked ye shall strive against the Yellowjacket. Cowering shall ye face the horrible OJ, leader of the terrible Trojans. And ye shall have only a Jerseyman to fight them.

"But know ye that this is not the end of my wrath. For ye must turn from your sinful ways. Lay-off strong drink or I shall cripple the ARNZEN. Put away the Harlot or I shall destroy the CARR and the CATLETT. Heed the words of the Lord, lest your enemies triumph over you. THUS SAYETH THE LORD"

And I was terrified in the sight of the Lord, but He said unto me: "Be not afraid, but return to thy people and preach unto them. Exhort them to turn from their sinful ways, that they may yet be saved. Urge them to repent lest they fall from the TOP TEN.

This was the scene last Saturday as Hanratty spent the afternoon along the sidelines on crutches. Chuck Nightingale, right, also is out for the season, suffering from a severely bruised shoulder.

Leading ground gainer for Georgia Tech this year is Kenny Bounds who has picked up 164 yards in 45 rushing attempts.

Georgia Tech's Eight-Game Stats

THE GEORGIA TECH TEAM (4-4-0). THE OFFENSE is averaging 83.6 yards a game rushing, 256.6 passing, 340.3 total offense and 18.0 points a game. THE DEFENSE has given up an average of 223.4 yards a game rushing, 122.5 passing, 345.9 total offense and 22.8 points per game.
