ELECT SLC REPRESENTATIVES

South Quad

Off-Campus

North Quad

by Don Ruane

Mark Zimmerman and Chris Ottenweller defeated their nearest challenger by 163 and 141 votes respectively as they won SLC seats from the South Quad in yesterday's SLC election. Dick Tarrier convincingly won the Off-campus outlying halls seat by a margin of 115 votes.

Zimmerman and Ottenweller achieved their highest total in Dillon. Ottenweller won 78 votes here as Zimmerman secured 101 votes from the members of his hall. Tarrier, who lost only in Holly Cross, scored his highest vote on the Off-campus ballot with a total of 63 votes. Tarrier had a total of 159 votes, while Zimmerman won 484 votes to Ottenweller's 463 votes.

Ottenweller was "very pleased" with the election, and added that Zimmerman was a "very good choice." He considers the issue of doubling the student representation "very important." He said that this will be one of the many things he will "push" while in the SLC. The new SLC member also said that he will talk with Student Body President, Dave Krashna and his vice president, Mark Winings "to get the feel of things." Ottenweller has one other major goal to accomplish before the end of this academic year and that is to "establish a working base with the people already in the SLC."

Mark Zimmerman

After his election, Ottenweller asked the student body to be "more active and vehement" and to support hall autonomy. He said that it is the "best thing for a hall to declare autonomy and student responsibility."

Tarrier was disappointed by the "apathy" in the election, but impressed by his victory. He believes the SLC is "starting to reach the students," but in his opinion, it still "has to be reoriented."

Pete Collins and Tom Schoaf from the North Quad and Glen Corso from the Grace-Flanner District won positions on the SLC in last night's election.

Pete Collins

Glen Corso

Tom Schoaf

Collins, who lives in Cavanaugh Hall, received 556 votes for the high total; Schoaf of Breen-Phillips was next with 491. The other candidates, Stave Flavin and John Hurley, trailed with 410 and 347 votes respectively.

Pete Collins, a junior from Rochester, Michigan, when contacted shortly after the election, was celebrating with some of his supporters. "We tapped the keg at 7:00 and were waiting for the results in good humor, be they good or bad," he said.

"I tried to run this campaign in a different manner from most around here," he said. "I saw as many people as I could, and those I didn't I hope were contacted by my friends who could tell them something about me."

He went on to say that he was disappointed in the small turnout of voters. "Perhaps in the future the SLC will be able to inspire more people to vote in its elections. It now seems like a powerless body to many people, but I will try to do something about that," he continued.

"I invite the trustees, administration, and faculty to advise and counsel us. But the final decision for the day-to-day lives must lie with the students. Perhaps some day the Free City will be a reality at Notre Dame," he concluded.

The other winner from the North Quad, Tom Schoaf, was unavailable for comment.

In the Flanner-Grace District, Glen Corso of Flanner Tower captured 248 votes, while his opponents, Jim O'Gorman and Bob Ohlemiller, received 148 and 111 votes.

Corso, a sophomore from Maspespequa, New York, said after the election last night, "I want to thank all the students who supported me during the election. I think this definitely indicates a mandate for change."

"My opponents, Jim and Bob, both ran a good campaign. I'm sure they would've worked for the same things I will."

"Now that I'm on the SLC, the first thing I'm going to work for is the fulfillment of my campaign pledges. Both minority recruitment and university priorities must be considered by the SLC. It is the only body that can do the necessary research to present intelligent proposals to the Administration to work on. If the SLC doesn't do it, then no one will."

"I will work with the newly elected student representatives and Dave (Krashna) and Mark (Winings) to effect a badly needed change for Notre Dame."

Grand Prix cancelled

The Grand Prix race, scheduled for next Saturday, and all the time trials were cancelled yesterday afternoon by Grand Prix chairman Mike Giannone because of insurance problems.

All the other activities will continue according to schedule.

Giannone said that he was called into the office of Rev. Charles McCarragher, Vice-President for Student Affairs, yesterday and informed that he had until 5:00 yesterday afternoon to get the carts out of the halls. He was told that the carts were being stored in the halls in violation of the University's insurance contract. Giannone said they were considered fire hazards and the insurance company threatened to cancel the entire university insurance policy.

At the same time he was informed that he would have to obtain full insurance coverage for the time trials and the day of the race. Previously, Giannone said, waivers had been signed by the parties involved waiving the liability of the university for any injuries. However, these waivers are not legally binding.

As a result, Giannone said, the Grand Prix committee would have had to pay about $150 a day for the nine days of the time trials and the day of the race, which he said was exorbitant at this date.

The insurance problem came as a complete surprise to Gianonne who said that up until yesterday morning everything was proceeding normally and that the event was actually $1200 under budget.

"If the news would have reached me 2 or 3 months ago, we could have made other arrangements," Gianonne said.

Nixon abolishes most deferments

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon abolished virtually all future occupational and fatherhood deferments from the draft yesterday, sought authority to induct college students and moved to perfect his four month old lottery induction plan.

At the same time, the President announced steps he said would eventually lead to an all volunteer Army but rejected for economy reasons a proposal by a presidential study commission that conscription be ended by June 30, 1971.

"From now on," Nixon said in a message to Congress, "the objective of this administration is to reduce draft calls to zero, subject to the overriding consideration of national security."

Because of the Vietnam War and other factors, he said, it was impossible to predict whether or precisely when conscription could be ended.

The Pentagon said the draft law should be extended for at least two years, meaning an all volunteer force would not be created at least before mid-1973. But Nixon said that to start making the armed services more attractive for potential volunteers, he was asking Congress for a 20 per cent pay increase for all enlisted men with less than two years' service, effective next Jan. 1.

For a private recruit that would mean a boost from $124.50 a month to $149.40, plus food, housing and other benefits. For a sergeant with less than two years' service, it would mean an increase from $275.40 a month to $330.60.

Meanwhile, the President:

Ordered an immediate halt to the granting of all job deferments, including farm work. Young men currently holding such deferments will keep them and those who applied for them before Thursday will remain eligible. There are 500,00 persons with these deferments, most of them teachers, policemen and others in community services.

Ordered a similar halt to the granting of all paternity deferments, except in cases where a local board determined that drafting a father would create an extreme hardship on his family. As in the case of job deferments, the elimination of paternity deferments is not retroactive.

Asked Congress to repeal a provision it wrote into the 1967 Selective Service Act that guarantees to every college student a deferment for four years or until he is 24

SMC staff students Negotiate new contract

by Ann Therese Darin

Cafeteria workers will meet again with Msgr. John J. McGrath, SMC president, today to settle differences on their new contract.

When the contract was presented to the girls before Easter vacation, it contained points changing the system. These changes, however, would break Msgr. McGrath's alleged promise to the girls at Christmas not to change the program.

Among the most important changes are: (1) revoking scholarship credit for eating time; (2) no allowance for sick time; (3) appointment of student supervision by Saga. Staff students had strong feelings about the changes.

On election of officers: "We felt in the first place that there is no reason why the staff students cannot elect their own officers. Saga doesn't seem to have any complaints about the present system. Neither do the students, who are supervised by an adult anyway."

On sick leave: "Is it better for us to serve food when we are ill or to stay in our rooms in bed? Regardless of how ill we are, we could not afford to miss work under the new provisions."

On eating time: "We realize that we have received an unusually good deal on this matter: this is not the issue. This is the program we originally agreed to which the administration promised we would graduate under. The change would force us to work approximately six additional hours a week. We can't afford to spend that much time in the dining hall."

Instead of signing the contract, the girls went home for Easter vacation and induced their parents, former staff members, and some president of SMC alumnae clubs to write letters of complaint to Msgr. McGrath.

But no action, not even acknowledgement of the letters, was taken until last weekend's meeting of the SMC Board of Trustees.

In considering the problem on Friday morning, the student affairs committee, chaired by Mrs. James Meagher, suggested that Msgr. McGrath drop points 3 (eating/sick time) and 5 (election of officers) from the contract related Chris Wedryk, staff student representative.

Voting on this committee, Ann Marie Tracey, SBP, and Karen Schultz, academic affairs commissioner, expressed concern at the contract.

"It seems almost on the point of absurdity that the administration is bringing up the contract now," commented Miss Tracey. "The whole thing isn't even going to be a problem in the next two years when the program is phased out."

"Although Fr. McGrath maintains that he is correcting an abuse, he is really changing the program. Why make things so hard for the girls when the program is ending anyway?" she continued.

Administrators, however, view the problem differently. They feel, for example, that they should not pay the girls to prepare the food and then to eat it.

In maintaining this program for girls who might not be able to get scholarships, the administration believes that the girls have taken advantage of the program.

At the associate board meeting Friday afternoon, members vetoed the proposal and gave the administration a vote of confidence.

They also suggested at a meeting Saturday morning that representatives from the administration, Saga, and the students meet to settle contract differences. In a letter to Msgr. McGrath, the girls also requested a meeting which took place Wednesday.

"There Msgr. McGrath said that the staff students should sign the contracts as they were originally written," stated Miss Wedryk.

Although Miss Wedryk would not reveal their plan for tomorrow, she did say, "We are united and will remain united until the contract is settled."

Barkett wins

Sophomore John Barkett was re-elected Wednesday as President of Morrissey Hall. Freshman Trey Obering succeeded the recently appointed Human Affairs Commissioner, Orlando Rodriguez, as Vice-President of Morrissey.

In the Presidential race Barkett captured 132 votes (68%) to Driscoll's 57 votes (30%). The Vice-Presidential balloting resulted in 115 votes (60%) for Trey and 70 votes (36%) for Kimball.

Bill Driscoll and Paul Kimball ran on a platform calling for more "gut" action and a willingness by hall officers to "stick their necks out" on vital student issues. John Barkett and Trey Obering expressed during the campaign the need for a wider involvement of the average student in decision-making and called for more student responsibility which would in turn lead to mutual respect and trust.

In other election action, Charles Cruz was elected Hall President of Stanford, defeating Michael Bowling in a run-off. Cruz collected 110 votes to his opponent's 87. Tim Hayes won the position of Secretary-Treasurer by defeating Dave Pantalon and Dave Oran.

Mr. William Matuszeski spoke as part of the "Earth Week" program.

Pollution lecture given by Shawn Hill

Stressing that "people must be willing to pay for a clean environment" and "the need for proper land use", Mr. William Matuszeski, of the President's Advisory Council on Environmental Quality, addressed a small audience yesterday afternoon in Washington Hall. His talk was given as part of the "Earth Week" activities sponsored by the Environmental Teaching Committee.

Matuszeski first discussed what he feels is a common misconception by many people concerning environmental pollution; that pollution is the result of industrial greed and governmental incompetence.

He stated that "industry must change, it must learn that it will have to clean up its messes". He pointed out, however, that before industry can put an end to the pollution they cause, people, as consumers, must want them to. He said that they must also be willing to pay for such a clean-up, through higher prices and less demand for some products.

Matuszeski also felt that government was not to blame for pollution. He stated that from Congress down to local governments there is little pressure to do very much about pollution. For example, he said that the Corps of Engineers dredges harbors along Lake Michigan and dumps the sediments from this dredging into the middle of the lake because no one is willing to have this waste disposed of anywhere else and there is no pressure on the Corps to discontinue this practice.

He then attacked what he called the "Apollo Syndrome, that all you need is a lot of money and advanced technology and you can solve all your problems." He said that many of the causes of pollution are very complex and difficult, often impossible, to solve.

Matuszeski then concluded that the responsibility for fighting pollution ultimately lies with the people. He said that "Any serious attempt to control pollution will result in someone getting hurt." "Before pollution can be overcome, people must be willing to pay for a clean environment."

Matuszeski next addressed himself to "the need for proper land use". He felt that "what pollution comes down to is land use and what land means to people." "The Great American Land Ethic, that we have unlimited land and unlimited power over that land, is a major problem facing environmentalists," according to Matuszeski.

He spoke next of the failures of Urban Renewal and the rape of the land by "suburbia". He said that "the attitude toward suburbia will be the hardest one to crack since people are convinced that it is good."

He concluded that before the land can be properly utilized, people's attitudes must be changed.

He ended his talk with a question and answer period during which he defended both his own and the government's position on the environment.

Lewis Mayhew and Rosemary Park named University consultants on co-education

The presidents of the University of Notre Dame and neighboring St. Mary's College today announced the retention of two academic consultants to study the direction of future collaboration between the two institutions.

The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., of Notre Dame and Msgr. John J. McGrath of Saint Mary's said that Dr. Lewis B. Mayhew, professor of education at Stanford University, and Dr. Rosemary Park, former president of Barnard College in New York City, will start their study of both campuses before the end of the current academic year. A consultant in the area of finance will be named later, they said, as a third member of the study team, which is expected to present recommendations to the trustees of both institutions no later than December 31, 1970.

Mayhew, a past president of the American Association for Higher Education, received his doctorate from Michigan State University in 1952 and taught there for 12 years before joining the Stanford faculty. He was assistant director of the American Council on Education cooperative study of general education and director of the North Central Association study on liberal arts education. Miss Park, whose doctorate is from the University of Cologne, Germany, was president of Barnard College from 1962 to 1967, when she became vice chancellor for educational planning and programs for the University of California at Los Angeles. She is past president of the Association of American Colleges and has held numerous positions on national organizations in the educational field.

The appointment of the consultants grew out of a joint meeting of the executive committees of the boards of trustees of both institutions last month in Florida, the first such joint meeting in the history of the schools.

At this meeting, the executive committees of both boards of trustees also:

—Approved in principle the current sharing of facilities and resources, including the exchange program which this year has seen 1,500 Saint Mary's students enrolled in nearly 2,300 Notre Dame classes and 1,600 Notre Dame students in 2,368 St. Mary's classes.

—Set guidelines for faculty recruitment which call for consultation between "departments of either institution basically concerned with undergraduate instruction" before making appointments.

—Cited the combined Notre Dame-St. Mary's Speech and Drama department as the model for merged departments, with one institution having primary jurisdiction and overall control of faculty and budgets.

—Said standards of faculty competence and salaries for both institutions would be "comparable," while emphasizing that the St. Mary's faculty "is primarily committed to undergraduate education."

—Urged departments to cooperate closely in planning course offerings with the aim of economizing in the use of staff and eliminating unnecessary small classes at both schools.

—Made available to St. Mary's the services of graduate student teaching assistants from Notre Dame.

—Continued the appointment of the Rev. Charles E. Sheedy, C.S.C., of Notre Dame as chairman of the inter-institutional coordinating committee and named a St. Mary's member of the committee, Sister M. Alma Peter, C.S.C., to be vice chairman.

Sorin rejects statement

Following the lead of Lyons Hall, Sorin has voted to reject the recent statement of the Board of Trustees on Hall Life, and instituted twenty-four hour parietal hours, i.e. women will be allowed in the hall at any time. This was decided in a meeting of the Hall Council on Tuesday night, April 21. The Observer was notified of this change by Mike Cotter, President of Sorin Hall.

The twenty-four hour parietal hours instituted by Sorin and Lyons Halls are in clear violation of the minimum guidelines suggested by the Trustees. Unlike Lyons, Sorin College has not issued any formal statement on the issue.

Do you put a higher price on an Olds than we do?

Our own surveys indicate that quite a few people think an Olds costs a lot more than it really does. Result? Many people buy an ordinary car and end up with a lot less car and value for their money.

It's so unnecessary, too, because Oldsmobile has many models that are priced right down with so-called low-priced cars. See your Olds dealer. He'll prove that you're closer to Olds than you think.

But Cutlass really widens the value gap with standard features like these: Regular-gas Rocket V-8 □ Nylon-blend loop-pile carpeting □ Foam-padded seats □ Deluxe steering wheel □ Bias-belted tires □ Door side-guard beams □ Recessed windshield wipers □ Hidden radio antenna.

by T.C. Treanor

YESTERDAY WAS GENTLE

THURSDAY. TODAY IS FRIDAY, IN CASE PEOPLE ARE AS YET UNAWARE OF THIS Gentle Thursday, of course, is nothing more than a thinly disguised excuse for mayhem. It seems ironic that the day is so inaptly named - it features dunking people into a decidedly unpleasant container of water, bribing the campus jocks to jail the enemy of your choice, and a booth especially designed so that people can throw pies at other people—but that's the way it is. Way back when An Tostal was an infant, Gentle Thursday was reserved for gentle things, such as they were—mostly, it seemed, people rocking back and forth in place—but times have changed and the world, the flesh, and the devil have all claimed their rightful places in the festivities.

But that was yesterday; nothing remains of it save vestige beer cans of a stacking contest, the court where SMC once took on Mike McCoy with boxing gloves, and a plethora of pictures observable below, behind, and beyond. Today is Friday, with another slate of events scheduled for today—principally a Kissing Marathon and what is obsquitously known as an Irish wake.

Of particular interest, it appears, is the Kissing Marathon, probably the first contest in history where Grantland Rice's admonition that "it's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game," will be observed. The thing starts at noon and could go on forever. The rules are: The lips, and the lips alone, may touch. The prizes are: a kissing statue for first and a year's supply of Certs for second. The fringe benefits are: obvious. The kicker is: it's probably less risky (that's spelled correctly) than a sleepout on the quad.

The Irish wake is something else (as one might indeed expect it to be.) Back in the old days, before Christianity touched the Emerald Isle, the Irish used to celebrate death in a rather bizzare manner. Participants would get bombed out of their respective minds, and about the third or fourth day (these things lasted a month, or however long it took for the cadaver to become sufficiently offensive) people would drag the remains of the lamented deceased from wherever it was reclining and dance with it. The proposed Irish Wake will have all these elements save perhaps the cadaver, and it will be held from eight-thirty to eternity at the National Guard Armory. It costs a buck to enter, and booze is a dime a draught, but other than that, it's free.

Saturday, like Friday, is neither Gentle or harsh, but rather some form of compromise—like ridiculous. A bed race is slated for one o'clock—a lass from St. Mary's will pilot a bed powered by four gentlemen from du Lac. All will be attired in pajamas. Great.

Fifteen girls oppose ten men in a Tug of War in a mud pit at two-thirty. Four-people teams paddle across St. Mary's lake at one. SMC girls will feed Notre Dame men in a pie-eating contest at two. Ten gentlemen or eight young maidens form teams to compete in a contest to fill a fifty-five gallon water drum with a two and one-half gallon water bucket. Five members of the varsity football team face the varsity basketball team in a piano-smashing contest at three PM. People chase greased pigs for fun and profit at four-thirty. Some philanthropist is providing free food for an eleven-thirty to one picnic on the grounds around Holy Cross Hall. It may be dining hall leftovers—look out for Nicuraugean beef. A six-man Notre Dame football team faces an eleven-girl SMC team in a game of two-handed plenty-of-touch. A free block party rages from ten-thirty at night till two in the morning. To top things off, teams from the various halls at ND and SMC hunt greased pigs in the mud—that'll be at four-thirty in the afternoon.

Sunday everybody will go to church.

Should Congress remove the stricture, Nixon said he would promptly issue an executive order that would bar student deferments except for youths holding them as of April 22, or last Wednesday. Those students would be covered as before.

Students who acquire deferments after April 22—such as those planning to enter college next fall— and are ultimately selected for the draft would be permitted to complete the semester before they are inducted. Students enrolled in ROTC program could postpone their active military service until after graduation.

Through a combination of a congressional and presidential action, Nixon will try to resolve some of the confusion and inequities in his lottery plan.

To produce a more "equitable" method, Nixon said he would ask Congress to repeal a provision of law requiring local quotas. He then would authorize the Selective Service System to issue monthly national calls. Thus, for example, all youths with the sequence number 185 would be inducted, regardless of how few or many were taken from the community, until the military's total monthly requirement was met.

The Presidential's message was the result of draft and volunteer army studies by the Pentagon, the White House, the Selective Service System and a special commission headed by former Defense Secretary Thomas S. Gates Jr.

Although a key congressional figure, Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, D S.C., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, was out of town and unavailable for comment, Nixon's proposal appeared to have enough Republican and liberal Democratic support to indicate chances for approval were good.

Counsel gov't majors

The government department at Notre Dame will be sponsoring pre-registration counseling sessions for all new government majors and all government majors who are not graduating early next week.

New government majors are cordially invited and they can expect help on what kind of courses to take, how to set up a government program, and other academic necessities.

All government faculty members with senior government majors assisting will be available for consultation.

The sessions are a "concrete result" according to senior government major Charley Zappala of the earlier meetings between faculty and students in the government department.

"More personal contact in terms of counseling" was recommended by the committee of faculty and students formed to correct the problem.

The sessions will be next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday from 10-12 in the morning and from 2-5 in the afternoon in rooms 314 and 345 of O'Shaughnessy.

Jorling lectures on law and environment

by Tom Hufendick

Thomas Jorling, lawyer-ecologist and member of the Senate Committee on Public Works, introduced yesterday's Washington Hall audience of 25 (that's right, 25) to the politics of ecology.

In his opening remarks, Jorling called the Committee on Public Works the most active in the Senate. The Committee's degree of activity, he added, is due largely to the amount of work done by Senator Edmund Muskie's Subcommittee on Air and Water Pollution.

"This committee is now in the process of rewriting a 1965 water pollution act as well as a 1966 air pollution act," Jorling said. He indicated that the two present acts are weak as a result of the congressional compromises they were subject to.

Although Jorling commended the Subcommittee on Air and Water Pollution, he was quick to note that the Subcommittee on Rivers and Harbors is also included in the Committee on Public Works.

Jorling called the Subcommittee on Rivers and Harbors an enemy of the ecologically minded because it serves as a rubber stamp for the Army Corps of Engineers. This corps is infamous for pursuing their duty of flood protection without regard to ecologically unsound side effects.

Jorling went on to cite another problem in the legislation of anti-pollution acts. He said improved control of pollution means more expense for industry and, as a result, deleterious effects on the community. Among these harmful effects are unemployment and, possibly, decreased wages.

In concluding his talk, Jorling urged the public to assist in the anti-pollution drive. Jorling declared, "Congress is a small group of individuals working the public will as they see it. Therefore, ultimate responsibility lies with the public."

The public needs a greater sophistication in politics if they are to help, Jorling maintained. First of all, people should realize that action ensues after they attack personalities, not after they attack things.

Jorling provided the anti-war movement as an example. He said, "It didn't pick up momentum until after our action in Vietnam was termed Johnson's War. Politicians are sensitive to this type of thing."

Free City Day

Friday, May 1, has been declared Free City Day. Students and faculty concerned with academic reform and interested in Dr. Nutting's ideas on education, as expressed in Nutting's book The Free City, plan to "turn Notre Dame into a free city for a day," said Jeannie Easterly, a spokesman for the group.

"We're going to discuss Dr. Nutting's ideas on what Notre Dame could be like. For one day, using Dr. Nutting's ideas as a base, we're going to demonstrate what Notre Dame could be like if it were a free city."

Nutting's book describes a community of students and teacher-students, who through dialogue, investigate what it means to understand. In this community grades and requirements have nothing to do with becoming a wise person.

The free city integrates formal learning and the education that goes on outside of the classroom. Nutting is critical of education that is basically job training, or liberal arts courses that are merely collections of facts.

The group plans to have discussions on four general areas, complemented by drama and possibly a hot dog lunch. The discussions have been tentatively planned to cover four general areas, all related to the idea of a university as a free community. First, the possibility of turning the residence halls into educational communities will be considered. Second, the relation of academics to the community will be discussed. Third, the responsibility of the educational community to the society will be considered. Lastly, the effect of grades and competition on learning will be discussed by the faculty, administrators, and students present.

Faculty and students interested in working on the preparations should call 232-7232 or 233-6728.

Tarrier on SLC

"The major problem for the SLC at this time, as Tarrier sees it, is the Board of Trustees' power to use a veto over parts of student life. He said a new 'definition of student life is needed.'"

Zimmerman did not have any reaction to his election and reasoned that it "really hasn't hit me yet." He added that he "enjoyed the campaign and the chance to get out and meet people."

The first thing Zimmerman would like to achieve is a breakdown in the "factionalism" in the SLC. Zimmerman wanted to thank the students that supported him and asked that they "stay behind the people they elected."

OPEN SENATE MEETING

There will be an open meeting of the Student Senate - Student Affairs Committee, at seven o'clock Sunday, April 26. The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss the Trustees' letter, and parietal hours in general. The meeting will be held in the Student Government cabinet offices.

Tarzan Brown would have liked it

by Terry Shields
Observer Sports Editor

"They were the worst running conditions since 1939 when Tarzan Brown won it!" That is the way Matt Carden, a junior at Notre Dame, described the conditions for his first try in the Boston Marathon.

Matt was just one of eleven Notre Dame men to enter the arduous race. The other runners who attempted to jog this grueling 26 mile 385 yard course were: Ed Jerome, Jim McGraw, Tom Homeyer, Steve Rycyna, Jim Coolahan, Fred Bingle, Paul Hollis, Dennis O'Connor, Mike Murphy and Joe Branciforte.

The best finishers among the ND contingent were McGraw (2:59) who finished at about the 200th spot, Homeyer close behind at 3:03, Jerome made it in 3:29 and Rycyna was also in the low three's but there was no accurate time available for him.

With rain pelting down through a whipping wind and 38 degree temperatures, these eleven and 1,000 other runners of assorted shapes and sizes set out on Monday morning with the hope of making the sprint to Beantown inside of the magic four hour time, (if you can do this then you win a certificate of some sort.)

Another record-breaking fact about this year's Marathon was that more people finished under the four hour mark than ever before.

Even with these adverse conditions the Marathon was run in a record two hour and ten minute time by Ron Hill of England. This was not the only major feat accomplished. The top 100 finishers ran the course in under 2:45.

"The participants aren't exactly what I expected. Most of the runners were older than college age. They averaged about 28-30 years old. The oldest guy was Ted Corbett. I think he was in his 70's," said Carden a business major from Buffalo, New York.

Matt started out running around campus with the intention of keeping in shape but he met Homeyer who was a four year veteran of this spring phenomenon known as the Marathon. "Tom talked me into making the trip with him. He would have finished higher but he hurt his knee and it tightened on him with only a few miles left in the race."

The spectators in Boston really love this event and they turn out in huge numbers every year. Carden stated, "They lined up all along the course even in that kind of weather. They yelled encouragement to us and gave us some Gatorade and oranges. They were just great!"

Everyone that enters the Boston Marathon has different reasons for entering. Some expect to win, others just try to see if they can finish. (It was rumored that the Corby Street Striders weren't in either of these groups.) Matt just wanted to see if he could run the race under four hours. He finished in 4:15, but that wasn't bad for his first Marathon.

Like most people who enter the race, Matt plans on returning next year. "If you go once you're hooked. You just gotta go back!"

The Irish Eye

Got a Ticket ?

There will be a noticeable lack of "tix for sale" signs in The Huddle next football season. The reason for this is quite simple, there will be no tickets available to sell.

According to ticket manager Donald Bouffard there is going to be a new policy as far as parent tickets are concerned. "There will be only one game available for the sale of parents' tickets. This game will be the Pittsburgh contest on November 7. Applications are being sent to all parents including next year's freshmen. Up to four tickets may be purchased per application."

The reason for this change in policy is obvious. There was increasing pressure from the alumni for more tickets. Bouffard stated that the ticket office was left with two options. It could either take away seats from season ticket holders, "some of whom have had tickets for the last 30 years," or dip into the parent allotment.

The deciding factor in this decision was based on the fact that "52% of the student body is on some type of financial aid, therefore the parents aren't contributing as much as might be expected."

Bouffard added that this was the only deciding factor. Although many parents don't actually use the tickets and some students use these tickets for "scalping" purposes, this was not taken into consideration when the decision was made.

The Pittsburgh game was chosen as the only game for which tickets will be made available because of the demand for tickets for Purdue, Army and LSU. Pittsburgh is one week earlier than Georgia Tech and weather conditions would make the Pitt game more practical.

Since the Pitt weekend is the only one available for the parents to come en masse, there is a possibility of making this a special weekend. "I talked with Fr. McCarragher about this and we may make it an annual affair," stated the ticket manager.

When asked about the situation with visitor's tickets, Bouffard said that ND allots 5,000 seats and this is the same number that Irish fans are granted for away games. In some cases Notre Dame is granted an even larger allotment, for example last year's Pitt game.

Besides the Pittsburgh game, parents will receive applications for the Northwestern, Navy and Southern Cal away games. No applications will be available for the Missouri and Michigan State games.

Even the alumni are limited to these latter two games. Only those of close geographical range will be granted tickets.

Bouffard also stated that there was no possibility of the capacity of ND Stadium being increased in the near future. "Right now we are spending $1 million to strengthen the existing structure. The funds aren't available to do anything more." The Stadium was built in 1930 and these are the first improvements made since that time.

The question may arise as to why alumni are being granted so many more tickets. The answer is obvious. Money talks! "Our first commitment is to the alumni because they have contributed over $20 million to the university. This is the only tangible way to say thanks." In order to receive ticket applications, alumni must have contributed in the previous year.

Mr. Bouffard does expect some form of protest to reach his office, but there will be little he can do to ease the minds of these people. So far there has been nothing said about the situation. Bouffard attributed this to the fact that there has been few notices made of the new policy to the public. "I definitely expect to hear from many people about this but there is nothing that can be done."

Once again the university was put on the spot and they had to follow their source of income. The only difference this time is that they hit where it hurts most. Everybody wants to see the football games!

Mr. Bouffard added that although this is a difficult situation to be in it is better than "being out on the streets peddling our tickets like some schools are forced to do. We have our bad times, too."

One final note that is worth thinking over, what if the Pitt Panthers come up with a good team this season? Since the game is scheduled late enough in the year to decide who is top ranked the alumni might just miss one of the big games of the season. All it takes is a miracle for the students to defeat the alumni!

Knicks dominate defensive team

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Knicks and the Los Angeles Lakers, who will meet for the championship of the National Basketball Association, placed four of the five players on the NBA all defensive team.

The Knicks, who stressed defense while posting the best record in the league during the regular season, had three of their five starters—forward Dave DeBusschere, center Willis Reed and guard Walt Frazier—on the team.

The Los Angeles representative was guard Jerry West, who was also the leading scorer in the league besides being a defensive ace. The fifth player named was forward Gus Johnson of Baltimore.

Named to the second team were forwards John Havlicek of Boston and Bill Bridges of Atlanta, center Lew Alcindor of Milwaukee and guards Joe Caldwell of Atlanta and Jerry Sloan of Chicago.

The balloting was done by the 14 NBA coaches with Frazier being named on the first team by 13 of them. DeBusschere was the second highest vote getter and West was third.

In closer balloting, Reed edged Alcindor, 15-11. The scoring was done on a basis of two points for a first place vote and one point for a second place vote.

This will be the scene once again tomorrow afternoon when Ara leads his charges into the half-way point of spring drills. This is the first team defense against the second team offense.

Calendar

Football— Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the stadium there will be another game-condition scrimmage.

Baseball— The Irish will try to increase their current win streak as they play Toledo in a single game this afternoon and a doubleheader on Saturday at one.

Track— The track team has traveled to Des Moines, Iowa for the Drake Relays, one of the more important meets of the spring.

Lacrosse— The Irish will host Michigan State this Saturday afternoon at the Stepan Center Field.

Rugby— Notre Dame travels to Iowa City to play the Hawkeyes in both "A" and "B" games.

Crew— The oarmen take on Lincoln Park and Culver Military in their final home meet of the year. The action will take place on the St. Joseph River, Saturday afternoon.

Sailing— The sailors have a big regatta over the weekend at Iowa City. They will compete for the right to represent the Midwest in the national regatta later this season.
