

To serve on amnesty board

Pres. Ford appoints Hesburgh

by Jim Eder
Contributing Editor

University President Theodore Hesburgh has accepted an appointment by President Ford to serve on the nine-member clemency board that will review draft evasion and military desertion cases.

Hesburgh, who formerly served under presidents Johnson and Nixon as chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, has been a strong advocate of unconditional amnesty.

"While I am on record as supporting unconditional amnesty," said Hesburgh yesterday, "I welcome the opportunity to help administer a conditional amnesty, because I feel it is an important step forward in reuniting many young men with their country and, in many cases, with their families."

In an essay printed by the Chicago Sun-Times last May, Hesburgh expressed his personal opinion on the question of amnesty for Vietnam draft evaders.

"Amnesty is a dirty word for many Americans," wrote Hesburgh. "They identify it with traitors, deserters, kooks, kirsute hippies and conscientious objectors."

"What they don't think about is what started us thinking about amnesty—the moral dilemmas of the Vietnam war, where more than a million civilians were murdered on each side, North and South, hundreds of thousands of soldiers killed, 50,000 Americans dead, and a quarter of a million wounded," he explained.

"All of this and much more without anyone having a good explanation of why we were there, what was really accomplished," charged Hesburgh.

"I guess what really pushed me over the line into a position of unconditional amnesty," wrote Hesburgh, "was the sight of one of the greatest war hawks of the all, the strong talker about the bad apples spoiling the other good apples fighting the war, our Vice President Agnew who was super-anti-amnesty until he was caught doing something really bad—and what does he do? He wheels and deals with all his might to achieve amnesty—of all things—for himself."

"All this leads our country into impossible, almost obscene contradictions," the Hesburgh essay continued. "While some agents of the government were trapping and jailing a young man who left his Canadian sanctuary to attend the funeral of his father, other agents were guarding the former Vice President who was enjoying his amnesty, playing golf in Palm Springs," noted Hesburgh.

"At this point," the University president wrote, "I say let's wash out the residue of Vietnam. We have more present poisons to concern us."

"Even if some of those still outside or beyond the law (draft evaders and deserters) did not have the highest motives—though many did—these petty young miscreants, alongside their distinguished elders in Watergate, etc., are pikers. I, for one, can more easily

Fr. Hesburgh has been named by Pres. Ford to serve on Amnesty Board forget what the youngsters did, than what their elders did," reasoned Hesburgh.

The nine-member clemency board will be chaired by former Republican Senator Charles Goodell, a known "dove" on the Vietnam war.

Goodell was appointed in 1968 to fill New York's vacant Senate seat following the assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy but fell out of favor with the Nixon administration because of his strong stand against war policies.

In 1970, Goodell lost his Senate seat to conservative James Buckley following a campaign in which former Vice President Agnew spoke out against Goodell's "radical" ideology.

Goodell, however, is a long-time friend of President Ford, having been one of the younger members of the House who helped propel Ford into its leadership.

The other members of the clemency board, according to United Press International, are:

—Robert H. Finch who served as counselor to former President Nixon after being secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and who is now a lawyer in Los Angeles.

—Vernon E. Jordan, executive director of the National Urban League and a lawyer.

—Lewis W. Walt, retired general of the Marine Corps who was an assistant commander of the Marine Corps and a veteran of World War II as well as the Korean and Vietnamese conflicts.

—Mrs. Aida Oasanas O'Connor, a lawyer now serving as assistant counsel to the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal in New York City.

—James P. Dougovita, a veteran and captain in the Michigan National Guard who works full-time as a teaching aide for minority students in the applied technology department at Michigan Tech University.

—Ralph Adams, president of Troy University in Troy, Ala., and a brigadier general in the Alabama Air National Guard.

—James Maye, executive director of the "Paralyzed Veterans of America" organization based in Washington.

Ford discusses issues at press conference

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Ford said Monday night he pardoned Richard M. Nixon to spare the nation further turmoil and division over Watergate, and "there was no understanding, no deal between me and the former President... none whatsoever."

In a nationally broadcast news conference from the White House East Room—his second as President—Ford said there had been "very persuasive evidence" that Nixon was guilty of an impeachable offense in the Watergate cover-up and a "very real possibility" he would have been indicted on obstruction of justice and possible 10 other criminal charges.

Although Nixon finally conceded only that he had made "mistakes and misjudgments," Ford said that Nixon's mere acceptance of the pardon "can be construed" as an admission of guilt.

Ford said that despite daily reports, he knew little more than what he read or heard in the news media about Nixon's precarious health since his Aug. 9 resignation. He indicated it played secondary role the controversial pardon decision.

The President conceded his decision to grant a full pardon to Nixon in advance of any legal proceedings against him had "created more antagonism than I anticipated." But he insisted he was still "absolutely convinced" his decision was correct.

Under persistent questioning about the circumstances of the pardon—only six of the 20 questions during the half-hour session dealt with other subjects.

Saying he would not pass judgment whether international law permitted it, President Ford admitted frankly Monday night that the United States had intervened in Chile but denied involvement in the actual overthrow of President Salvador Allende.

"Our government had no involvement whatsoever in the Allende coup," Ford said at his second news conference.

But he added that the United States had made an effort to "assist" the activities of opposition newspapers and opposition political parties in the years immediately prior to the Marxist leader's overthrow by a military junta last September. Allende and several thousand others died in the upheaval.

Ford said over a period of time, three or four years ago, there was an effort made by the Allende government "to destroy opposition media, both writing and electronic media, and to destroy opposition political parties, and the effort that was made in this case was to help and assist the preservation of opposition newspapers and electronic media and to preserve opposition political parties."

"I think this is in the best interests of the people in Chile and certainly in our best interests."

When asked by a newsman what right the United States had to "destabilize" the constitutionally elected government of another country, Ford replied:

I am not going to pass judgment on whether it is permitted or authorized under international law. It is a recognized fact that historically and presently such actions are taken in the best interest of the countries involved."

A new executive order will soon clamp tighter control on access to income tax returns and their use by government agencies other than the Internal Revenue Service, Ford said, and new legislation is being prepared to do the same thing. "I personally think that it is something that should be kept very closely held. An income tax return is a very precious thing."

In response to the fears of some economists, Ford said, "Let me say very strongly that the United States will not have a depression." He said the economy is strong, employment is high and inflation will be cured.

Macheca comments on panty raids morality rules and alcohol use

by Doug Meyers
Staff Reporter

The two recent panty raids on St. Mary's were discussed during a meeting last night with Dean of Students John Macheca in Fisher Hall. Macheca said he had heard about "a lot of distasteful things that happened during the raids."

When asked what action the University could take about the destruction of property Macheca said there were two possibilities that have been brought up. This "early fall ritual has deteriorated," he said, especially this year. We can't send Notre Dame security to St. Mary's without leaving someone else in charge since security is responsible for the dorms on this campus.

One possibility would be to have the Rectors and R.A.'s put in charge here so security could be sent to SMC. Another possibility is to break up the raids on campus before they left for SMC.

Asked how damages to St. Mary's were going to be paid, Macheca said he wasn't sure if Notre Dame or St. Mary's insurance would pay for damages in this case. This led to a discussion of why SMC is the target rather than Notre Dame's women's dorms. "Maybe the men feel that if the raid is here, they will have to face the consequences, but at St. Mary's they feel that nothing will happen to them," Macheca suggested.

Macheca rejected the idea of fining anyone caught during a raid since those caught might not have done any damages.

When asked what exactly the sexuality rule provided Macheca said that the University stands by the Catholic position on pre-marital sex. "Punishment varies on the particular case." The SLC tried to clarify the meaning of the rule at the end of last year and "will work on the rule again soon."

Also discussed was the drinking issue. Macheca said that sending people off campus doesn't solve the alcohol problem. "Alcohol is a big part of our society and hopefully it can have an appropriate role here. We can learn to deal with it. He said that he favors the 18-year-old drinking law because he believes students deserve more responsibility and "responsibility brings accountability."

Home football Saturdays

Concessions need permits

by Norm Bower
Staff Reporter

Permits for the campus food concessions on this year's home football Saturdays will again be limited, according to Fr. Dave Schlaver, director of student activities.

Schlaver noted that this policy actually benefits the serving organizations, because it limits competition and improves the chances for realizing a profit. "By setting a limit, it's not all so cut-throat," he said.

Only those halls and University organizations who register with the Student Activities Office by 5 p.m., Thursday, September 19, will be allowed to run food stands. After sign-ups, a lottery will assign game dates to the groups.

Designation of concession sites is conducted two ways. Hall representatives usually sell near their own hall, while organizations are randomly assigned to locations.

Schlaver mentioned that with this year's six home games, groups may get as many as three different opportunities to run the stands.

"Even with limits, it's not easy to make the maximum profits of 50 to 80 dollars," Schlaver said.

"Gimmicks and specialty things are being used more and more to get away from being just a hot-dog stand."

Health standards will still be in effect this year. Compliance with the Occupational Safety and Health Act and University Health and Safety Manager Edward Riley's guidelines will be required of all concession managers. Those in charge of the stands must keep the permit in order to prove registration in case they are questioned by Riley's office in the Security Department.

Group seeks better alumni relations

by David Rust
Staff Reporter

A rejuvenated Student-Alumni Relations Group (SARG) is setting up a program of activities on both national and regional levels to better acquaint students with Notre Dame's Alumni Association.

"We're trying to do away with the neglect of students by the Alumni," explained Paul Holowczak, assistant executive director of the Association, and SARG's director.

SARG is composed of 18 students, eight women and ten men, selected through the Alumni office, and representing different class years, majors and extracurricular interests.

Holowczak, a 1973 graduate of Notre Dame, said that he is the man responsible for conducting SARG's transformation from "a link between students and alumni for the alumni's benefit" to "a link between both for the equal benefit of both."

"I've recognized since I've been here that the problem with the alumni is getting students involved," said Holowczak. "We make no effort to tell them anything about the Association during their four years here, and then, suddenly at the end they're bombarded with questionnaires asking them to join.

SARG sees its role as "beginning a program of presenting the alumni to students" in different functions, said Holowczak.

Historically speaking, SARG saw its peak of activity in 1969-72, but in a role which differed from the present emphasis. Those were the years of student protest at Notre Dame, and alumni, anxious to understand what was going on at their alma mater, were asking questions about the direction in which the University was moving.

SARG, which had been in existence several years previous to 1969, sent panels of students to regional alumni clubs, explaining the reasons behind the protests, and fielding questions from concerned alumni about the effect on their school.

Holowczak, who was a student at the time, believes the panels were a substantial success, but the need decreased as the campus became relatively calm. Consequently, SARG headed back into obscurity, even though it remained active in helping with organization of alumni activities on campus.

"I think students in general don't have an awareness of the Alumni Association or of what it does," he said. "The Association has a responsibility to itself to show itself to students since today's students are tomorrow's alumni."

Since the beginning of this school year the group has been meeting about once every two weeks, and has come up with a program of several "sure" events and several other possibilities.

One of the program's first fruits was organizing in conjunction with alumni clubs, of "Freshmen Sendoffs," events in which incoming freshmen were invited to gatherings of students and alumni prior to their entrance into the University. Holowczak felt that several of these were particularly successful.

The Indianapolis Club initiated last year what it called a "career night," an idea which SARG hopes to expand by sending out career night packets to the various regional clubs, presenting Association suggestions on how career nights should be run.

The event involves inviting students of the club area to an evening dinner, where alumni in the different professions--law, medicine, the arts and sciences, business, etc.--talked with them and tried to give them some insight into their respective fields.

SARG is also continuing to send student panels to club meetings to talk about their honest reactions to Notre Dame, and Holowczak confirmed that, as in the past, a club is always encouraged to invite students from its area to any of its functions.

Much SARG-sponsored activity is slated for the campus, though. On Sept. 23 at 7 p.m. in Washington Hall, SARG will sponsor a showing of 1973 football highlights, in preparation for the Purdue game.

"If we can get a suitable location, we'll show films like these before each home game," said Holowczak. Such films would probably include vintage Knute Rockne game films from the archives and other movies rarely seen by students.

SARG also plans to sponsor a slide presentation called "Notre Dame Review," which is a 45-minute audio-visual treatment of the history of the University. The review, originally created to show to returning alumni on football Saturday mornings, is "full of interesting information on Notre Dame that few are familiar with," said Holowczak.

Plans now call for either circulating the review through the residence halls, or finding a central location and giving several showings.

The projected Alumni Spring Weekend would bring a "maximum of 20 couples to the campus," explained Holowczak, "putting each man in a guys' dorm, and each woman in a girls' dorm, with SARG members." They would arrive Thursday night, attend Friday classes, and spend the weekend "getting firsthand glimpses of what it means to be a Notre Dame student today," said Holowczak.

If the program, which sputtered last spring and had to be temporarily put aside, works their year, SARG hopes to expand it to include many more than 20 couples.

"The problem with the alumni is getting students involved," claims Paul Holowczak, Director of SARG.

Supreme NATO commander

Alexander Haig appointed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Monday announced the appointment of Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. as supreme commander of NATO and commander of American forces in Europe.

Haig, 49, who succeeds Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster, will assume the North Atlantic Treaty Organization post Dec. 15 and take over command of U.S. troops Nov. 1. He is expected to give up his job as White House chief of staff on Friday.

"I'm honored," Haig told reporters of his new post in the military.

Ford's selection of Haig was approved unanimously by NATO's defense planning committee in Brussels Monday, although the Dutch government had previously indicated it would oppose him because of his close association with Richard M. Nixon during the latter's final beleaguered year as president.

Haig, who retired from military service in August, 1973, on a full pension, will be restored to active duty by Ford. Goodpaster, 59, who became the supreme NATO commander in July, 1969, will retire.

In a statement the 14 NATO governments on the planning committee "expressed their lasting gratitude for Gen. Goodpaster's distinguished service," the White House statement said. "On behalf of the American people, President Ford joins in extending his appreciation to Gen. Goodpaster for a job well done."

There was no immediate word on whether Ford intends to appoint a successor as chief of staff. A transition team recommended that this function be shared by six top advisers, rather than one man.

Ford now has three top advisers handling his White House policy planning. They are White House counselors Robert Hartmann and John O.

Marsh, a former Virginia Democratic congressman, and counsel Philip W. Buchen, who holds Cabinet rank.

The change in the White House top command had long been rumored. Haig, a professional soldier, was asked by Ford to remain on during the transition period after Nixon's resignation Aug. 9, but his role became more and more tenuous as the "Ford team" appeared to resent his presence.

Haig has persistently denied friction between the Nixon holdovers and senior advisers of the Ford administration, but privately expressed bitterness over several new reports portraying him as a Nixon loyalist who was unable to adapt to Ford's style.

Haig, a four-star general, served in the White House from 1970 to 1973 as deputy national security affairs adviser under Henry A. Kissinger. In January, 1973, he was appointed Army vice chief of staff.

When H.R. Haldeman was forced to resign as White House chief of staff on April 30, 1973, as the Watergate cover-up began to unravel, Nixon summoned Haig to assume the post. Haig did so reluctantly but has said frequently he could not reject a commander-in-chief's request.

Haig and Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, James D. St. Clair, began to advise Nixon of his diminishing chances to remain in office after they learned the content of the June 23, 1972, tape of talks between Nixon and Haldeman which showed Nixon participated in the cover-up six days after the Watergate break-in.

Haig is a native of Philadelphia and attended Notre Dame for a year before going to the U. S. Military Academy. He served in the Vietnam War and later returned several times as Nixon's emissary for consultations with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Never having received the benefits of a Catholic education (probably due at least in part to my parents' Protestantism) I find myself sorely lacking in the knowledge of the finer points of the Catholic mythos. I didn't even know the story behind the Grotto 'til I chanced upon the movie "The Song of Bernadette" last year. Still in all, I have been fascinated by the Catholic hagiology, among others by St. Augustine. In a class of mortals of doubtful divinity, he has always seemed one of the more worthy of the lot.

St. Augustine once gave as the only rule of Christian conduct 'Love God and do as you like'. The implication is, of course, that if you truly love God, you can't help but to act in a Christian manner. Equally, Jesuit priests, upon leaving the Holy See, are not given a gold embossed twenty volume bound set of inscribed rules governing their conduct. Their training and the guidance given them are a guarantee that wherever they may go, whatever situation they may face, they will always act in accordance with the society and the precepts of Christianity.

The question is, though, why our Catholic Administration has not picked up on these revolutionary ideas. It might seem that the majority of them would have run across them somewhere in their education. However, our campus is faced instead with an Administration which would seem to prefer the twenty volume set of embossed rules & so instead of guidance and guidelines we are the recipients of rules and laws. The specific reference is of course to the anti-sexuality rule.

The difference between guidelines and their instruction and the dictation of rules is enormous. Guidelines presuppose a maturity, common sense, and a level of morality in the guidelines. Rules do not. Guidelines point the way. Rules and laws rule off all three possibilities. Our new student guidebook 'du lac', states that "good laws are an aid to morality". Only in the sense that a good electrified barbed wire fence is an aid to keeping cattle on their best behavior. It might be instructive to review what other Catholic administrators think on the subject of guidelines vs. rules, courtesy of the Observer's poll.

The clearest statement of St. Augustine's 'Love God and do as you like' comes from Fr. Suave of Marquette University who said "Since we subscribe to the Christian ethic, it's more of a common sense thing. We don't need any moral rules." Other restatements of St. Augustine's principle come from Fr. Hanrahan of Boston College ("Since we adopt the Catholic belief, it's all rather implicit that we don't believe in premarital sex, but we don't have it written down as a rule.") and from Stonehill College ("The school believes in the Christian moral system, there is nothing in writing about moral systems except for the basic college guides.")

Perhaps the most frightening aspect of the Notre Dame (read Catholic) rule of sexuality is the awful toll exacted from those who transgress it. One might indeed expect that Christian guides for dealing with the violators of such rules would include forgiveness or at least an attempt at rehabilitation. "Another expectation... would be that offenders (would) be dealt with patiently and personally, more to help than to punish". "Notre Dame represents the paradox of faith... which extends more compassion to those who fail". ('du Lac', the new guidebook) A look at the penalties imposed upon the violators of the anti-sexuality rule would seem to make the above statements hypocritical at best.

The students involved in the transgressions were certainly not entirely forgiven their 'sins' and, worse, neither were they apparently treated with any degree of compassion nor was the punishment meted out by any measure rehabilitative. Okay guys, so what gives?

Over the past year, the only apparent justification given by our administration for the anti-sexuality rule was based on the concepts of our school's Christianity and tied in with the vague alliteration 'the courage to be Catholic'. It appears now that the only Christianity with which the Administration can be linked is that of the Protestant Puritans of 17th century New England and not with the humanitarian Christian traditions of St. Augustine and the Carpenter of Nazareth.

Hopefully we can return to those traditions through the enactment of guiding statements of policy and not rules. To quote an Observer editorial "Our Catholic tradition deserves no less."

Sales pitch?

Dear Mr. Pears:

We are writing to you in regards to the "salesman" soliciting magazine subscriptions in various halls during the past few days. It would be beneficial to you and the students to be made aware of the tactics of this "salesman". In Zahm Hall alone, there were many instances of questionable, if not illegal, behavior.

He was all things to all people. Among his sales pitches, he presented himself as a Vietnam veteran and also a seminarian. However, this was to be expected since during the four hours he was in Zahm, he used three different names.

He not only lacked the proper University permission to solicit in a residence hall, but when confronted by an R.A., he lied about having the permission of the assistant rector. Also, he fraudulently used the names of three R.A.'s to convince students to buy his "magazine subscriptions". Even though all his subscriptions may not exist, to one student, he sold a twenty four dollar subscription for a magazine which his "company" does not supply.

It should be noted that the company he claimed to represent appears to be a legitimate firm. It seems plausible to assume that he is an employee of it.

We would like to know what the University plans to do in this case. Also, what precautions are being taken to prevent future cases like this of unethical and illegal solicitation? If you need any further details and/or other assistance in this matter, there are many people who would be glad to help.

Respectfully,

Cheap shot

Dear Editor:

My son John, 13, is a carrier for the South Bend Tribune on the Notre Dame campus. He is assisted by his 11 year old sister, Krista. John's bike was stolen from the area of Alumni Hall the first day he began his route. Anyone knowing the location of a rust-colored Sting-Ray boys' bike please call 233-6319.

Yesterday Krista was leaving Breen-Phillips Hall and found a male boarding her bike. Caught in the act of stealing this one, he changed his mind and left it. These two kids are performing a service on campus and should not have to contend with such low-grade tactics. Cheap shot, wouldn't you say!?

Yours truly,
Mrs. J.R. Kennedy

Grade gripe

Dear Mr. Drape:

Mr. Ed Byrne's letter, in your Friday the Thirteenth issue, prompts me to write. While Mr. Byrne raises a number of issues which warrant—and, I am sure, will get—further attention, including the perennial question of social life at Notre Dame his remarks about the Dean's List strike a responsive chord. Grades, like women, seem to be a perennial problem here.

Mr. Byrne's letter expresses the assumption that escalating grades reflect improvements in the intelligence, diligence, and academic zeal of the student body. This may be a valid assumption; then again, it may not be. Certain reports, published recently, suggest that there are other reasons for escalating grades, ranging from democratization of higher education in America to slippage in American academic standards, or from the increase in student influence over teachers' careers to the teachers' concern for the welfare of students liable for the draft. Any of these assumptions might be correct, and perhaps they all contain some truth.

I have no answer for the problem of grade escalation, and indeed doubt that anyone on this campus does. But I know that it is a problem. Those of us who are still sufficiently Neanderthal in outlook to believe that "B-minus" is a "good" grade (see the 1974-1975 Faculty Handbook, page 39), indeed a better grade than a Gentleman's C, discover that we are considered "tough" markers whose "fairness" is occasionally questioned, and find that the population of our courses is declining. But there are other dimensions to the problem as well, some of which affect the students adversely. For instance, at the same time that students are pressing for higher grades in order to improve their opportunities for advance studies, graduate, law, and medical admission boards find it increasingly difficult to trust transcripts as indicators of performance and potential. As a result, such boards are inclined to pay less attention to grades, and to place more weight on such indicators as "objective" test scores. The problem and its paradoxes escalate right along with the grades.

I have no answer, but think it might not be premature for this community to begin facing the problem squarely. If we keep on making untested assumptions, and if we are content to offer nothing more than cosmetic solutions, eventually the Dean's List GPA will top out at 4.0, every student will automatically be awarded an "A" in every course, all the teachers will be popular, all the students will be happy, none of the teachers and none of the students will see any reason to waste time in classrooms, and a Notre Dame degree will be utterly meaningless.

Then we could shut down the Registrar's Office, quit selling football tickets, raise money by hawking degrees through the mail, dedicate ourselves to the exclusive pursuit of social intercourse, and convert Notre Dame into a residential apartment complex for unemployed illiterates.

No one here wants this nightmare to come true. In fact, I am sufficiently impressed by the quality of Notre Dame's undergraduates to suspect that some of them are even committed to "scholarly pursuits" voluntarily, and are neither "forced into" them "by existing social conditions" nor look upon them as distractions which interfere with college life. A few even appreciate being reminded occasionally, through the agency of a grade lower than "A", that they do not yet know everything and that they, like their teachers, still enjoy the opportunity to learn.

But since this appears to be the case, perhaps the whole community should find some time, in between debates about social life and University priorities, to discuss and explore the problem of grading together. At least we might even discover that some equitable, usable, and mutually agreeable solution is possible.

Ford offers limited amnesty plan

by Richard Lerner

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Ford Monday offered conditional amnesty to an estimated 28,000 Vietnam war resisters in return for up to two years' public service and an oath of allegiance. He called it "an act of mercy to bind the nation's wounds."

Spokesman for draft evaders and military deserters in Canada and Sweden denounced the plan as "absurd" and "a gross miscarriage of justice," and predicted few would accept it.

Ford's proclamation, twice delayed while he dealt with the Nixon pardon and economic issues, offered conditional amnesty to those who deserted or evaded the draft between Aug. 4, 1964, and March 28, 1973, the date the United States withdrew its last soldiers from Vietnam.

Those wishing rehabilitation and freedom from prosecution must surrender to a U.S. attorney or military official before next Jan. 31. Basically, they will then earn forgiveness by:

-Agreeing to perform "a period of alternate service in the national interest" in such areas as public health and safety jobs but not including "the privilege" of military service. Ford set the service period at 24 months but said it could be reduced in individual cases at the recommendation of various designated officials or a clemency board established by the proclamation.

-Taking an oath of "allegiance to the country and its constitution".

The proposed wording of the oath of allegiance runs as follows:

"I name do hereby solemnly reaffirm my allegiance to the United States of America. I will support, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and will hereafter bear true faith and allegiance to the same.

"I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion, so help me God."

A spokesman for the Selective Service, which will administer the alternate service program, said about half the amnesty workers would likely serve in hospitals or homes for the aged or children. He said many others would find work in conservation or with religious service groups.

In addition to social rehabilitation, military deserters will first receive an undesirable discharge—a category considered less punitive than dishonorable—and, upon completion of alternate service, a "clemency discharge" not affording any veterans benefits.

"Desertion in time of war is a major, serious offense," Ford said. "Failure to respond to the country's call of duty is also a serious offense. Reconciliation among our people does not require that these acts be condoned.

"Yet reconciliation calls for an act of mercy to bind the nation's wounds and to heal the scars of divisiveness."

Ford briefed congressional leaders on the plan before making it public and they told newsmen it would have the support of both Congress and the military.

But spokesmen for anti-war and amnesty groups reacted with disappointment and hostility.

"It's a coverup, it's not amnesty," said Dee Knight, a member of the National Council For Universal and Unconditional Amnesty in Washington, D.C.

Erratum

Due to a typographical error that appeared in yesterday's Observer a passage from Fr. Bill Toohey's column was inadvertently misrepresented. The passage should read as follows:

"Trust is called for from all the members of the community. The highest administrators have to trust that an appropriate pastoral response will be made to student behavior problems by those who are best able, through expertise and familiarity with the persons involved and the circumstances."

St. Mary's student fees explained

by Annette Buzinski
Staff Reporter

The $27 Activity Fee levied against each St. Mary's student will be used to support activities ranging from Student Government to Notre Dame publications.

Elli Quinn, treasurer of St. Mary's Student Government, stated that the Saint Mary's student activity fee consists of five sections, two of which are required and three are optional. The first required fee is for the Saint Mary's Student Government. The $10 acquired from each student supports activities in which all Saint Mary's students participate. SMC also has a booth at the Notre Dame Mardi Gras held in October.

The second mandatory payment is turned over to the Notre Dame Student Government. The $4 per Saint Mary's student finances such social activities as An Tostal, Mardi Gras, jazz festivals, and movies which are shown at reduced rates.

The ND student newspaper the Observer, Saint Mary's yearbook the Blue Mantle, and Scholastic magazine receive the optional donations. The Blue Mantle yearbook fee is $9 per student, and subscriptions to the Observer and Scholastic, are both $2.

Quinn cites that of the 1622 students enrolled in Saint Mary's, 140 did not pay the required $14. As for the Observer fee, 1109 students contributed. Only 833 students paid for Scholastic and 1062 purchased the yearbook, Quinn stated.

As a result of a decision made last year, St. Mary's Student Government instead of the Business Office, is handling collection of student fees. Quinn is sending letters to the 140 students who are delinquent in paying the mandatory fees.

As a British company we'd like to explain our 810 QX automatic turntable in plain English.

How the 810 QX reproduces recorded music accurately.

The BSR 810 QX has a sophisticated synchronous motor, spinning a heavy 7-lb. platter for accurate speed

(regardless of voltage supply or record load) and all-but-nonexistent wow and flutter. Anti-skating force may be adjusted for optimum pressure with either conical or elliptical styli, so stylus sits perfectly centered in groove for precise stereo separation without audible distortion or uneven groove wear. A strobe disc is integrated into the platter design and a variable speed control is provided should you want to vary from, and later return to, the normal speeds. The tone arm will track as low as 0.25 grams to make use of finest light-weight, high-compliance cartridges for maximum fidelity and dynamic range.

How the 810 QX protects records and cartridge stylus assembly.

Tone arm descent is viscous-damped in automatic operation and also when using the manual cue and pause control, for gentle contact with record surface. Platter rubber mat protects records during play and cushions discs during automatic drop. Automatic spindle uses umbrella-type suspension, without outboard balance arm. Stub spindle rotates with record to prevent distortion of center hole. Stylus setdown adjustment prevents stylus damage if dropped outside of entry groove range. Tracking pressure adjustable down to 0.25 grams for newest lightweight cartridges for minimum record wear. Stylus brush whisks dust off stylus between plays. Lock automatically secures tone arm to prevent damage to stylus from accidental movement. Stylus wear meter records accumulated stylus use in hours. Knowing when to replace a worn stylus protects your records.

How the 810 QX provides convenient operation in any desired mode.

After touching a single feather-weight button, the 810 QX can either: play a stack of records, shutting off after the last one; play a single record and shut off; or play a single record, and repeat it indefinitely until you stop it.

Manual operation uses a single button to start the motor, and the cue control to lower the stylus.

How the 810 QX operates quietly, emitting no sound that can intrude on the music.

The 810 QX uses a unique sequential cam drive mechanism. It is a rigid precision assembly that replaces the plumber's nightmare of rotating eccentric plates and interlocking gears that other changers use. Unlike other changers, there are no light metal stampings that can go out of alignment and make a lot of noise, from being carried, bumped, or just from use.

As University chaplain

Griffin discusses new job

by Patrick Hanifin
Staff Reporter

Fr. Robert Griffin, new university chaplain, explained yesterday that he wishes to create a pastoral ministry involving the entire community. "I have no detailed plans for the entire year as yet," he said, "I'm working out my role as I go along."

Griffin emphasized that "My most important responsibility is to be open to anyone in the community who can use my help."

Initial programs he has developed include a series of special Masses in the residence halls, and a children's radio program on Saturday mornings which has grown out of his Keenan Hall Urchins' Mass. "We are going to put into the program all the things we wanted to put into the Urchins' Mass but couldn't because they did not connect with a particular liturgy," Griffin said.

The new chaplain is also setting up a CCD program in Sacred Heart Church, primarily for the children of the faculty.

The position of university chaplain was created for Griffin late last year. "It carries with it a good budget and the right to write my own job description," he said. In earlier years the university chaplain had a job similar to the old prefect of discipline but the job lapsed when Campus Ministry was created.

Regarding his connection with

Campus Ministry this year, Griffin said that he would be cooperating with it but "also independent of it."

Griffin concluded by saying he feels "very fatherly having this pastoral role that extends to the entire University. It is a good feeling."

Panty-raids draw fire

Complaints from St. Mary's concerning the recent panty-raids highlighted an SLC meeting generally devoted to organizational details yesterday. The SLC also agreed to consider the alcohol situation next week.

A deputation of three senior women from SCMC told the Council that the two recent raids were the most destructive in recent years. "We all realize that a panty-raid is supposed to be a friendly way of letting off steam," Frank Flanagan, chairman of the SLC and student body vice-president said after the meeting. "But we would hope that people use their heads too."

Student Body President Pat McLaughlin and SLC member Denis Sullivan were appointed to prepare a statement on the matter for the SLC. According to Flanagan it will be issued to the Observer and other campus media when it is complete and approved. As chairman of the SLC Flanagan will also write a letter of apology to St. Mary's.

The rest of the Council meeting was taken up by committee organization reports. The first regular business meeting of the year will be held next Monday, Sept. 23, when Dean Macheca's alcohol directive will be considered.

I had classes during the scheduled time that the Freshmen photo directories were being issued, so I was unable to get mine. Is there any way that I can get it now?

The extra Freshmen Photo Directories have been saved and are available for those who did not pick them up, at the Service Commission in LaFortune.

When is the deadline for Student Government budget statements?

The Student Government budget statements must be in by September 17. Failure to have it in by then will result in the exclusion of your organization from the Student Government's budget.

Will there be any lectures on campus considering abortion?

The Notre Dame Committee in Defense of Life is holding a lecture this Wednesday, September 18, in the Library Auditorium at 7:30. The speakers will be Dr. Charles Rice of the Notre Dame Law school and Congressional candidate Virginia Black.

Martial law sparks feud between church and state

MANILA (UPI) — The martial law government of President Ferdinand E. Marcos and the Roman Catholic Church in the Philippines appear to be on a collision course.

Both the government and the church hierarchy evidently still hope to avert a head-on clash, from which neither is likely emerge unscathed in this island nation where about 83 per cent of the 40 million population is Catholic.

Whether a church-state collision can be averted may depend on how Marcos responds to an expected request from the Catholic bishops conference to ease the martial law restrictions he imposed on Sept. 21, 1972.

Since then many liberal young priests, some of whom have been jailed for their opposition to the government, have urged the church leadership to challenge the Marcos regime, which they view as repressive.

But many of the bishops and older priests are inclined to avoid such a confrontation.

The event that may have spurred the bishops into action was the helicopter raid on the Sacred Heart novitiate at Novaliches, 12 miles north of Manila, in late August. One priest and 20 college students were taken to Camp Crame, where thousands of alleged subversives have been jailed under martial law.

Marcos subsequently met with church leaders and told them of the dangers of subversion. But he also banned arbitrary raids on religious institutions and ordered the release of the priest and 13 others arrested at the novitiate. The seven others are presumably still being held.

By the time Marcos had acted, however, Archbishop Jaime L. Sin of Manila had called for a "vigil of prayer" to seek justice for those detained under martial law.

Around 5,000 persons attended the service, which provided the first public show of opposition to the government since the imposition of martial law.

Sin, who had not previously criticized the government, protested the raid, saying, "We believe in the principle of separation of church and state." He also disputed the version published in the government-controlled press.

Many priests in the Philippines, both foreign and Filipino, were pleased that the archbishop had taken a public stand.

ND linebackers loaded with talent

by George Eckes

As the ill-fortuned summer of '74 dwindled to a close for Ara Parseghian's coaching staff the central problem for linebacking coach George Kelly seemed to be a replacement for standout Gary Potempa. While other coaches pondered over replacing veterans lost to injury or disciplinary procedures, Coach Kelly could take solace over the fact that a nucleus of experienced talent, which included Greg Collins, Sherm Smith, and Drew Mahalic were returning, and corps of added depth loomed close by.

The loss of Sherm Smith in the Georgia Tech clash has forced Kelly to adjust, but the friendly and forceful Irishman is confident of his men and what they can do. "The injury to Sherm has meant we can't rely on alternating him with Drew Mahalic and switching Mahalic with Collins. We found great success in using the alternating system last year. However Tony Novakov will be seeing more action and he is a very capable young man. He possesses great intelligence and versatility which will be a great asset to his playing."

Not only will Novakov be thrust into an active position, but Kelly will be keeping a close eye on the likes of junior Joe Pszeracki, and freshmen Dave Vinson, Pete Johnson and Doug Becker among others. Kelly has hopes of employing that same alternating system by mid-season.

The question of Sherm Smith still remains however. Although certainly out for the year due to torn ligaments (which were successfully operated on last Thursday) the question of red-shirting becomes obvious. Kelly commented that "it is a multi-faceted question, and many variables exist. There is the question whether Sherm would want to play next year. Then there is the more important question of whether the Athletic Council would allow Sherm to be red-shirted. They take into account many aspects of the athlete's life - the academic situation among others - before giving their opinion."

The linebacker situation looks rosier when you turn to big Number 50, Co-captain Greg Collins. As his mentor, George Kelly says, "You can use all the cliches about Greg. He is above reproach, both on and off the field. He won his captain position in one of the bigger landslide votes here, and that is an example of what he means to his teammates and coaches. He is always ready to compete and never asks for special favors." Collins was named Lineman of the Week by Associated Press last year for his contributions (18 solo tackles, 5 other assists, causing one fumble and recovering another) against Southern Cal and that type of consistent ball playing has earned him a preseason All-American selection by most major writers across the country.

Along with Collins, Marv Russel adds a new dimension to the Irish defense as nose-guard. Despite playing his first game before a nationally televised audience, Russel, the Methodist minister from Ford City, PA., pleased Kelly with his performance. "He is progressing all the time and he played better against Georgia Tech than expected."

Completing the solid trio, Drew Mahalic typifies the modern linebacker. To George Kelly a linebacker should have size, strength, and a great deal of quickness to recover and change direction. Drew Mahalic certainly possesses these qualities. Along with Collins, Mahalic has great pursuit, and that factor along with their aggressiveness and diagnostic abilities makes the tandem one of the best outside linebacking duos in college football.

That outstanding group, along with the rest of the Irish will be

The linebacker corps of Mahalic, Smith, Russell and Collins provided fine performances against Georgia Tech. Smith's loss to the team for the season has provided some worry to the Irish, but Coach Kelly feels he has capable replacements for the season.

facing various formations throughout the season, none of which seem to bother Kelly and his crew. As he worded it no formation can intimidate the linebackers because they practice against one of the toughest formations to a linebacker, the misdirection, which the Irish offense installs quite often. That practice has resulted in another key for the N.D. linebacker, patience. "Patience is important, especially in playing good solid team defense, certainly one of the essentials stressed by an Ara Parseghian team," remarked Kelly.

The Notre Dame alumnus who is entering his 14th year of coaching (the last five with N.D.) summed up his feelings on the linebacking position. "It is certainly a challenging one. You have to blend elements of linemen and defensive backs, to come up with a hard-hitting, thinking, mobile aggressor. Yet it is not always a kamikaze type thing. It has the chance to be enjoyable and satisfying." If the linebackers get as much satisfaction playing, as the Irish fans do watching, they are one group of happy fellows.

IU downs Soccer Team 11-1

by John DeCoursey

Indiana University routed Notre Dame's Soccer team 11-1 last Friday at Bloomington. The fast, aggressive Hoosiers controlled the game from the outset as they handed the Irish their worst defeat in three years.

Indiana scored the first goal of the game after five minutes of play. The Hoosiers continued to pressure the Irish defense throughout the half, and by half-time, they had increased their lead to 4-0.

The second half was even more lopsided as the Hoosiers scored seven more goals, with three coming in a span of three minutes. The Irish scored their only goal late in the game on a high arching kick by Louis Monserrat.

The Hoosiers dominated the game so much, that, despite allowing 11 goals, the play of freshman goalie Mark Klein was the only bright spot for the Irish.

On a better note, the B team defeated Grace College's Junior Varsity 4-0 last Thursday. The offense was well-balanced as four players scored goals. The defense was spearheaded by fullbacks Ryan Sullivan and Jim Donovan, and goalie Mark Seryak.

The Irish have a busy schedule this week with three away games. They play Central Michigan, Wednesday; Eastern Michigan, Saturday; and the University of Michigan, Sunday. On Friday, the B-team plays at home on Cartier Field at 8 p.m. against the University of Michigan at Dearborn.

Ali - Foreman Fight Postponed

NEW YORK (UPI) — The projected $30 million "fight of the century" between George Foreman and Muhammad Ali in Kinshasa, Zaire was postponed Monday when Foreman received a one-inch cut over his right eye while training. Officials said the cut forces a postponement of between six to 45 days.

Hank Schwartz, vice president of Video Techniques, Inc., joint promoters of the fight with the government of Zaire, said the postponement was necessary but no new date could be fixed until the exact extent of Foreman's injury was determined.

Schwartz consulted, via telephone, with Foreman's handlers in Kinshasa and with Bula Mandungu, the president of the fight commission, before reaching a decision to postpone the Sept. 24 bout.

"It's unfortunate, but we have no other alternative," said Schwartz who was involved in Foreman promotions in Tokyo and Caracas.

The new fight date also will have to take into consideration the availability of closed circuit locations in the United States.

Foreman received the gash over his right eye in the sixth round of a sparring session with Bill McMurray.

Drew Mahalic, here recovering the crucial fumble in the Sugar Bowl against Alabama, is one of Coach Kelly's top three.

Swimming Tryouts Set

All Frosh and upper classmen who were not on the swimming team last year, and who are interested in trying out for the team are to attend an organizational meeting on Tuesday September 17th at 4:00 P.M. in the Rockne Memorial Building 2nd floor foyer.
