Candidates respond during open forum

by John McGrath
Senior Staff Reporter

Candidates for Student Body President and Vice-President fielded a wide range of questions from students last night in the Flanner pit. Issues that were discussed included parietals, the off-campus housing situation, plans for increased student involvement, and corporate justice concerns.

In their platforms, all three tickets stressed a need to increase student involvement. Last night each candidate was questioned further to specify concrete ways of bringing about this increased involvement.

"You have to take yourself to the students," said Bill Roche, current director of the Student Union, and a SBP candidate. "If you hit two hall council meetings each week, during the course of the semester, you could make yourself available to the students."

Roche also stressed the need for increased co-operation with campus media while his running mate, Bill Vita, president of St. Ed's Hall, suggested a greater role for class officers as a way of increasing student awareness.

Dan Portman, another candidate, called for "direct contact" between the SBP and students. "I would have a column in the Observer every week or two. Response to that article would then generate feedback in the form of letters or direct contact," Portman explained.

Portman also called for the establishment of a student government-controlled Security and Maintenance Board as a way of increasing student influence over campus activity.

Mike ("Hymie") Heaney, commenting, "I don't put a whole lot of stock in committees," defined the role of SBP as a "motivator." "My approach would be to reach out," Heaney said. "It isn't that difficult making yourself available--but you can't do it by locking yourself in the second floor of LaFortune."

Heaney blasted SBP Andy McKenna's response to University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh's recent decision to reject parietals revisions, by remarking, "He should have chided the Administration for its continually antiquated view of parietals."

Heaney, calling for "grass-roots agitation," addressed the parietals problem by stating, "We haven't tried hard enough. We have got to start directing ourselves to the ones who really run this place." He was referring to his proposed letter-writing campaigns to alumni and members of the Board of Trustees.

He admitted that there is a limit to the actions students can take, commenting, "This is primarily a career preparation and education institution and we can't ask people to get thrown out of school."

Portman, who is running on a platform promising a "fresh approach" to student government, also recommended a letter-writing campaign and petition-signing campaign to make alumni and University officials aware of student concern over the parietals issue.

"But if that doesn't work, we might have to show support through a

Pushes SALT talks

Carter warns Soviets

ATLANTA [AP] - President Carter declared yesterday that the turmoil in Iran and Southeast Asia demonstrates dramatically the need for a new U.S.-Soviet arms treaty, and vowed he will not let peripheral issues stand in the way of agreement on the pact.

In a major pitch for the nearly complete strategic arms limitation treaty, Carter again cautioned the Russians against meddling in Iran's internal strife or taking actions that would widen the conflict between China and Vietnam. However, the president stressed that he will press for agreement on the new arms pact - SALT II - despite these trouble spots.

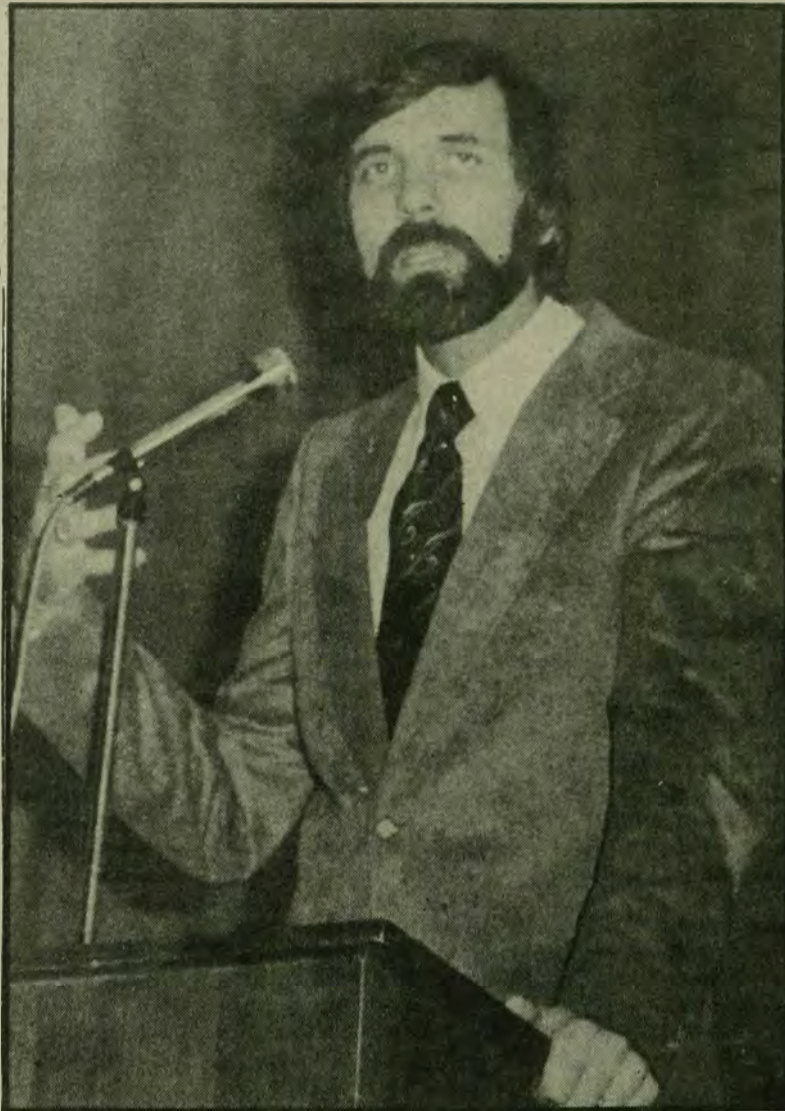

"It is in our national interest to pursue it even as we continue competition with the Soviet Union elsewhere in the world," Carter told a friendly audience at the Georgia Institute of Technology in his home state.

In a speech billed in advance by presidential aides as a major foreign policy address, Carter repeatedly and strongly rejected demands by conservatives for a foreign policy that would link progress on arms negotiations with the Soviet Union's conduct around the world.

And he told the audience of some 7,000 persons that the emerging SALT II accord "will make the world safer and more secure."

Carter said disturbances and turbulence in Iran, Southeast Asia and elsewhere increase rather than diminish the need for an arms agreement. At the same time, he said, direct of indirect Russian interference in Iran "will have serious consequences and will affect our broader relationship with them."

Vietnamese border town falls to Chinese attackers

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) - Striking behind a heavy artillery barrage, Chinese troops yesterday captured the big Vietnamese border town of Lao Cai. The Vietnamese defenders routed some Chinese elsewhere in the border country according to reports in Bangkok and Hanoi.

Soviet news agency Tass, in a news dispatch from Hanoi reported the fall of Lao Cai 175 miles northwest of the Vietnamese capital. High intelligence sources in Bangkok said the Chinese had thrust as far as ten miles south into Vietnam, four miles beyond the deepest penetration. Monday, Vietnam's U.N. ambassador said in New York the invaders had advanced 12 miles into Vietnam.

Hanoi claimed Peking's troops were resorting to chemical warfare, firing shells filled with "toxic substances."

Vietnamese U.N. Ambassador Ha Van Lau said in New York that Hanoi's forces had killed 5,000 Chinese soldiers in the first three days of the four-day-old invasion, including 1,500 killed in heavy fighting Monday.

Vietnam has now reported its own casualties, but the Thai sources said Vietnam has suffered more casualties than the Chinese. Both casualty figures and battle reports have been difficult to verify independently.

As battles raged along the 450-mile Chinese-Vietnamese frontier, there was a flurry of reports that the Chinese were withdrawing or about to withdraw.

Most reports centered on what the dean of the diplomatic corps in Peking, Ambassador Elie J. Boustany of Lebanon, was told in a meeting with Chinese Deputy Foreign Minister Ho Ying.

But Boustany told the Associated Press in New York by telephone that Ho did not discuss "military information" with him, but merely reaffirmed that the invasion was a limited operation to "teach a lesson" to Hanoi and that China would not hold on to any Vietnamese territory.

The Chinese have not said when they will pull their troops back across the border.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug, quoting Chinese sources in Peking, said the Chinese plan a withdrawal with no pre-conditions. China will not link its withdrawal with a pull-out of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia, the sources reportedly said.

The Soviet Union, Vietnam's ally, has warned the Chinese to get out of Vietnam "before it is too late."

In New York, U.N. officials continued private consultations with representatives of the 15 nations on the Security Council about a possible council meeting to deal with the conflict. Such a meeting was not expected until today at the earliest.

Carroll reps address HPC

by Aileen Lavin
Staff Reporter

The HPC met with members of Carroll Hall last night at a meeting in Keenan Hall to discuss the status of the parietals issue.

"We don't believe students are apathetic, we tend to think they are cynical. If given the opportunity and led to think something will come out of it, the students will do something," the representatives from Carroll said.

Citing statistics from the poll recently taken in all the dorms, they emphasized that, of the 65 percent of the students that responded to the questionnaire, over 85 percent said they were dissatisfied with the present state of parietals and wanted them to be reduced to a hall offense.

Many of the hall presidents pointed out that not all of this 65 percent would be willing to actually participate in any movement, even though they were dissatisfied.

"I caution you against thinking this council will get students riled up enough to do something," Tom Paese, president of Flanner stated.

The representatives stressed the need to go beyond the normal channels to meet success.

"We are suggesting that it is time something less than legal should be done," Mark Mocoski, Carroll representative, said.

"Anything illegal is asking hall presidents to put themselves on the line and that it isn't fair to them," Executive Coordinator Chuck DelGrande said.

The HPC as a body would not be able to support any illegal movement proposed by Carroll Hall, he continued.

The HPC asked Carroll representatives to provide a concrete proposal before they could pledge their support to any movement.

"What we need is a formalized statement, stating the form of protest and stating the logistics of it," DelGrande concluded.

Student Body President Andy McKenna was at the meeting to outline the proposed Campus Life Conference for the HPC.

"The purpose of this conference is to offer new directions in dealing with problems and frustrations," McKenna explained.

Vice-President of Student Affairs Fr. John VanWolven and McKenna will present a specific proposal to CLC next Monday night.

McKenna expects the conference to open up communication between the administration and students. If the Conference is successful on the hall level it will be expanded to a campus-wide level, he said.

Members of the Freshman Advisory Council also met with the HPC to voice their dissatis-

Police strike cancels Mardi Gras festivities

NEW ORLEANS [AP]-Sponsors canceled all remaining Mardi Gras and Carnival parades yesterday citing a four-day police strike that has already dulled the traditional midwinter festival. Captains of the private social "krewes" or crews that sponsor the parades said: "We are not going to let Mardi Gras be held hostage by the Teamsters." The police are members of Teamsters Local 253. Mardi Gras is a $50 million industry in New Orleans. Police union spokesmen have called the festival "our four aces" in seeking to wring concessions from the city.

Utah House votes to allow media to witness executions

SALT LAKE CITY [AP]-The Utah House has voted to allow up to nine reporters to witness criminal executions. State law currently bars the media from watching a death sentence carried out. The measure, which passed the House 40-29 Monday, now goes to the Senate. It would ban cameras and recording equipment until after an execution has been completed and the body has been removed. Backers said allowing the media to witness an execution would increase the chances for accuracy and fairness. They also argued the deterrent value of capital punishment could not be effective without some news coverage of an execution.

Meany refuses to quit; plans corporate price watch

BAL HARBOR, Fla. [AP]-AFL-CIO President George Meany brushed aside suggestions that he retire and announced yesterday that he is mobilizing federation members to blow the whistle on companies that exceed President Carter's anti-inflation price guidelines. Meany also vowed to continue to criticize Carter's policies when organized labor disagrees with them. He denied his attacks signify a break with the president and said he and Carter had a pleasant conversation Monday. "I think he (Carter) makes some mistakes and, frankly, I will continue to comment on those mistakes," Meany said, adding, "The president doesn't seem to be upset about it." Meany said he had promised to help monitor violations of the price guidelines. Meany said Carter had called the labor leader to ask for the federation's help, and that Carter thought the AFL-CIO's plan to create a national price watchdog network was "very good."

The symptoms come on very quickly, Thompson reported, with symptoms similar to those of other respiratory diseases like laryngitis, colds or head and neck infections. It generally progresses to severe headaches.

Use of the same glass as a carrier, transmittal of spittle, being coughed on in close quarters, kissing or extremely close prolonged respiratory contact all could result in the transmission of the bacteria, hospital officials reported.

Mardi Gras gambling receipts top previous revenue records

by John Calcutt
Executive Editor

The 1979 Mardi Gras celebration closed Saturday night, and Chairman John McAustin reported that this year's gambling revenues totalled approximately $33,000, $700 more than last year. M.A. IN PUBLIC POLICY STUDIES at the UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

The Committee on Public Policy Studies is a formal academic unit of The University of Chicago, offering a graduate master's degree program which focuses on preparation for a wide variety of careers. The Committee does not automatically assume that government solutions are the preferred solutions to public policy problems. Its program presupposes a role for the private sector as well as the public sector, in solving public policy problems, and assumes that public policy leadership requires an understanding of both arenas and of the complex economic and social framework within which public policy operates.

The Committee on Public Policy Studies offers a new two year program leading to the Master of Arts degree in Public Policy Studies. Major components of the program include Analytic Courses in Economics, Political Analysis, Statistics, and Decision Analysis; a range of Applications Courses offered by the Committee and the other departments and professional schools of the University; a series of Policy and Research Seminars devoted to the scholarly, interdisciplinary investigation of specific public policy issues; and Internships in the public and private sectors.

demonstration," Portman conceded. "If the university goes ahead and confiscates ID's (in response to a proposed 'break parietals night'), that's a slap in their (students') faces.

"When they ignore us, that shows that there is no two-way relationship (between students and the Administration)," concluded Portman.

Roche discounted Heaney's proposed letter-writing campaign to Board of Trustees members in protest of the parietals situation, remarking, "To try to use the Board of Trustees would be useless—if there's anyone more adamant about parietals than Hesbur h, it's them."

"We have to explore different avenues (in dealing with the parietals problem)," Roche concluded, "but we don't want anyone to get thrown out of

All three candidates endorsed a constitutional amendment that would place a voting representative for off-campus students on the student government Board of Commissioners.

Heaney stressed that the representative should have full voting privileges while Portman emphasized that the present off-campus committee is "insufficient to meet the needs of 1500 off-campus students." Roche, meanwhile advocated the hiring of a full-time Off-Campus Director to handle O-C affairs.

The candidates expressed support for a boycott of Nestle's products in protest against alleged improper pricing and distribution policies of the company in Third World countries.

Roche also responded to questions about the apparent excessive of records at the bookstore, commenting, "Records aren't the only thing overpriced at the bookstore. Everyday items are tremendously overpriced."

He cited some examples of excessive pricing, pointing to a bottle of 50 Bayer aspirin that sells for $1.14 in the bookstore.

"At Ayr-Way, that same bottle costs 47 cents—that's a difference of 142 percent," Roche ex-

Duggan reports on meeting

SMC Board of Regents increases tuition, salaries

by Ellen Buddy
Saint Mary's Editor

John Duggan, Saint Mary's president, reported to a special faculty meeting yesterday afternoon results of this past weekend's Board of Regents meeting. The Board made decisions concerning faculty salaries, tuition, future plans for the proposed library and various other decisions concerning the faculty and student body. Rank salary, the pay scale upon which professors' salaries are based, was increased on all four levels according to Duggan. Full professors, associate and assistant professors and instructors will receive pay increases of over five percent and compensations will increase by at least ten percent for all four levels. Part time faculty will receive a 15 percent salary increase and campus hourly wages will increase by 16 percent, Duggan said. The salaried staff (the administration) also will receive an increase approved by the Board. Tuition will increase $570 next fall for the entire academic year, according to Duggan. Four hundred of this amount is actual tuition and $170 is a combination of room and board. According to Duggan, "The increased estimated income for the school is 69 percent for next year." Evan Wollen, an Indianapolis architect, was appointed at the meeting to design the new library. The Board interviewed five architects and their work before reaching the final decision this weekend. "His approach is a very democratic one," Duggan said. Wollen intends to spend time on campus to observe the traffic pattern and hold open meetings with students, faculty and administration to hear their ideas about the library's location and the structural design. At this time a definite location has not been designated. "He is much more interested in building a library that is compatible to its surroundings, not a high tech building," Duggan said. "It's his job to study our campus and talk to our people and then decide." Wollen has designed other buildings and halls for various universities in Indiana. Duggan discussed the formation of a new position in the administration--vice-president for college relations. The main objective of such a position would be to coordinate fund raising. "We have a lot more to do in fund raising if we are going to build a library and convert the old one," Duggan said. The candidate for this position was approved by the Board. His identity cannot be released at this time because he has not been relieved of his duties at another college, Duggan said.

plained. Roche also claimed that, according to his research, book prices are also excessive. "At some schools, the books are priced 20-30 percent below the list price. Here they are not only the same as list, but in some cases, above (the list price)."

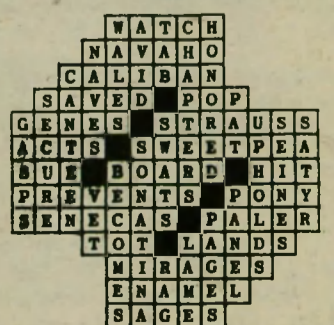

When asked how he would go about tackling the problem, Roche said that the first step would be to "sit down with the bookstore people and see if we can work it out (lowering prices). If that didn't work, maybe we could organize a boycott."

Portman advocated a need for competition on campus as a means of providing lower prices for necessity items. "I think there should be other outlets for anything that students want to buy on campus," Portman said.

of besting yet another one of his own records with a strong performance in the NCAA's.

Yet DiSabato realizes that a repeat of last season's NCAA performance will be difficult.

"Whether I'm at 126 or 134 the competition will be very tough," concedes DiSabato. "The quality and talent are the same at both weights - you're never going to have an easy match. It will take two strong wins to make it to the regional finals, and needless to say it'll be even tougher after that."

DiSabato's biggest competition will probably come from Nevada-Las Vegas' Tyrone Rose, a senior who finished seventh at last year's NCAA finals. Billy Fitzgibbons, a Cal-Poly senior who was third in last year's Western Regional, and Paul Feliz, an Air Force junior who was third in the Midwest Regional in 1978, could also figure at 134.

DiSabato sees himself as seeded probably second or third in the tournament. "They take previous finishes, national ranking, and individual records into account when seeding, so I should get a fairly good seed. If I'm seeded I probably won't have to face another seed until the second round, so that will give me a chance to get prepared."

If the preparation DiSabato has had already this season is any indication, then he should be more than ready for this year's NCAA tournament.

these years at Notre Dame.

He still likes to win one for the Gipper, of course, but obviously attaches more value to developing winning people. Phelps is justifiably proud of the fact that only one of his scholarship athletes at Notre Dame so far has failed to get his degree. And, he points out the Gary Brokaw "plans to come back and get his last six hours next year."

Phelps is equally proud that his program has competed at the highest collegiate level without turning Notre Dame into an NCAA outlaw.

"You either live with the rules, or you don't," he points out. "Maybe I'm a purist, but that's the way I was brought up by my mother and father. Being an undertaker's son, there are a lot of things you learn about right and wrong."

So, as basketball nobility, he is obliged to talk straight to parents on recruiting missions. And this is what he says:

"What I promise parents, is that their sons will graduate with a degree that means something. That's what higher education and intercollegiate athletics is supposed to be all about. That's the responsibility we have with these guys."

DiSabato and wrestling: synonymous in Ohio

by Bill Marquard
Sports Writer

In Ohio, the name DiSabato is synonymous with wrestling, which is quite an accomplishment when one considers the caliber of wrestlers in that state.

Ten DiSabato's have graced the high school and collegiate mats of the Buckeye state.

Yet, thanks to Dave, Notre Dame's 134-pound co-captain, the DiSabato name is gaining the prominence nationally that it has enjoyed in Ohio for quite a while. As a sophomore last year, DiSabato finished second in the NCAA Midwest Regionals and advanced to the Nationals, where he placed in the elite top 16 at 126 pounds.

This year DiSabato is looking for another trip to the Nationals and an improvement over last year's illustrious performance. He will have his chance this weekend when Notre Dame hosts the NCAA Western Regionals at the ACC on Saturday and Sunday.

"Although I'm moving up a weight class from last year, the experience I've had from last year's tournament should more than offset the weight difference, explains the junior DiSabato.

"In fact, I should probably have an extra advantage at 134 because I won't be cutting weight like alot of the other wrestlers.

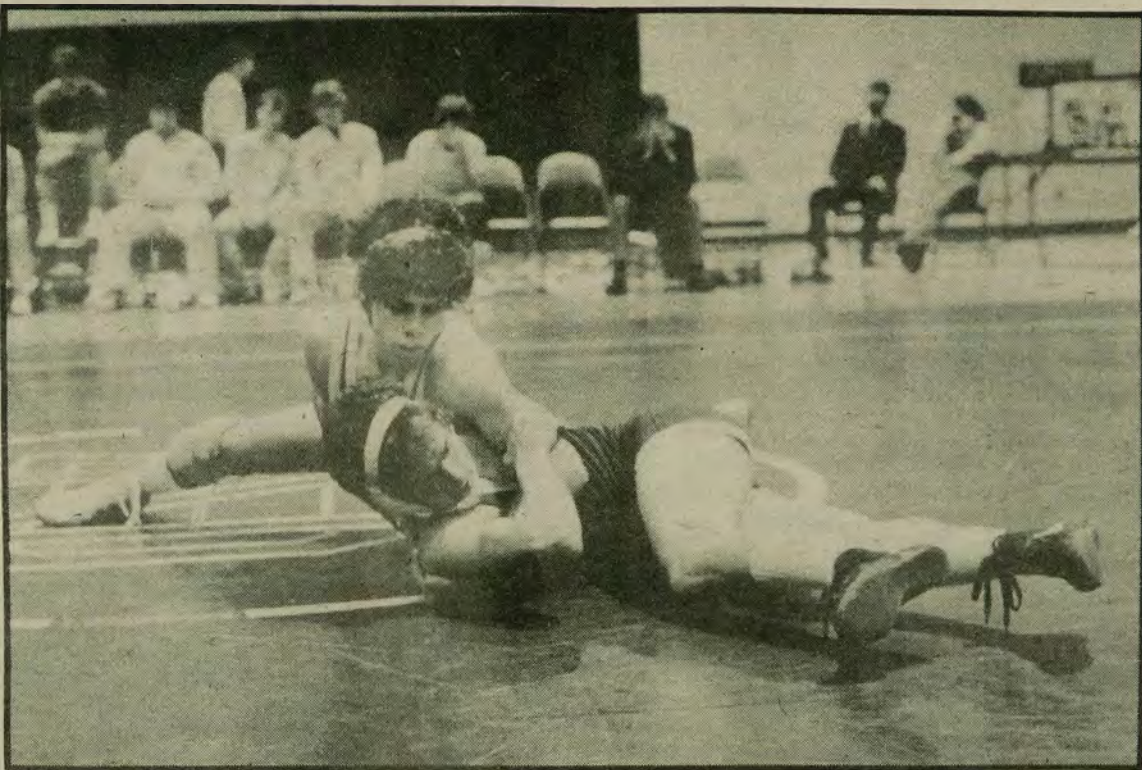

Many people who regularly weigh as much as 150 or 152 will cut down to 134 for the NCAA tournament. By the time they cut all that weight, they're exhausted both physically and mentally.

"On the other hand, my regular weight is around 134 or 136, so I'll be primed both physically and mentally."

If this season record is any indication, DiSabato is right on target at 134. The Columbus, Ohio native dropped five of his first eight matches of the season while struggling to maintain his weight at 126. Having opted to move up to 134, DiSabato has since won 20 of his last 22 matches, including the ten-match winning streak he is riding into this weekend's NCAA tournament.

Along the way, DiSabato has bettered two team records he set last season and has moved into sole possession of third place on Notre Dame's career win list. His 98 takedowns this season topped the mark of 81 he set last year, while his 31 near falls easily surpass the record 19 he had last season. With 68 career wins, DiSabato trails only Pat McKillen and Rob Dreger, who both graduated last year, on the all-time victory list. McKillen has 79 and Dreger 72 wins.

DiSabato is only six wins short of the record 29 he had last season, so he is well within reach [continued on page 7]

Irish tracksters lose, 64-62

by Mark Perry
Assistant Sports Editor

In a triangular meet held last night at the ACC, the Notre Dame track team lost a close decision to Indiana State, 64-62, but defeated Bradley, who scored 36 points.

"We competed well," Irish coach Joe Piane commented, "but we had too many people who were sick or injured. With a little luck, we could have beaten them."

"We had a lot of good performances," he added. "We run with ISU twice more this season, and we should beat them both times with everyone healthy."

Notre Dame led 57-56 going into the last two events, but ISU edged out the team of Chuck Aragon, Rick Rodgers, John McCloughan, and Jacques Eady in the mile relay. Then the Sycamores took second in the triple jump, with Notre Dame's Ahmad Kazimi taking third, to give them the two-point victory.

Pete Burger started the meet off right for the Irish, as he won the mile run in a time of 4:13. Chris Lattig took third for the Irish, and Joe Strohman took fourth.

Arnie Gough turned in one of the best performances of the evening, as he won the high hurdles in 7.36 seconds. Freshman John McCloughan took fourth in the event.

In the pole vault, Perry Stowe took first for the Irish at 15 feet, six inches, and just missed breaking his ND record, 16 feet, in his final attempts. Mike Noland took third at 14 feet, six inches.

Jim Slattery edged out teammate Jay Miranda in the 1000-yard run, taking first in 2:17, with Miranda in second at 2:18.

Steve Welch was the only first place finisher for the Irish, as he won the two-mile run in 9:10, followed by Marc Novak who placed second.

Other seconds for Notre Dame went to Ken Lynch (440-yard dash), Tom Ferenc (shot put), Tim Macauley (880-yard run), and Jacques Eady (300-yard dash).

Thirds went to John Kuzan (shot put), and taking fourths were Bill Slatherly (440-yard dash), Jeff Anderson (60-yard dash), Keith Cooper (880-yard run), Dan Callan (600-yard run), Gough (300-yard dash), and Eady (high jump).

The next meet for the Irish will be this Friday and Saturday, when they travel to the University of Illinois in Champaign to compete in the Illini Classic. The next home meet will be March 3 against Kentucky State.

Hesburgh, Ryan, Hanson, lobby for Title IX revision

The presidents of the Universities of Indiana and Notre Dame and of Purdue have called for the exemption of revenue-producing sports in the application of the federal government's Title IX provisions for equal expenditures for men's and women's athletics.

In a joint statement, John W. Ryan of Indiana, Arthur G. Hansen of Purdue, and Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., of Notre Dame said that unless revenue-producing sports are excluded in determining the equal per capita bases for men and women athletes, the overall development of both men's and women's sports will be "jeopardized" by the erosion of their financial support now coming from football and basketball.

The presidents also affirmed their institutions' support for the goal of equal opportunity for men and women in intercollegiate athletics.

The full text of the statement is as follows:

We jointly and publicly affirm our support of Title IX as the law of the land and its objectives to provide equal opportunity for men and women in intercollegiate athletics. To that purpose our institutional programs reflect an intent to fully comply. It is imperative, however, that the final regulations permit the exemption of revenue-producing sports in determining equal per capita bases for men and women participants. Unless this recognition is given to the role played by these sports in financing the overall athletic program, the continuing development of women's and men's sports will be jeopardized

Politiski breaks records in Irish loss

by Mark Hannuksela
Sports Writer

No loss is easy to take, but some losses are less easy to take than others. A case in point: last Friday's women's basketball contest between Notre Dame and Marion College. In that game, Notre Dame's Jayne Politiski set two school records by scoring 29 points and pulling down 21 rebounds, and her Irish teammates came back from a 17 point half-time deficit, yet Marion won the game on a desperation twenty-footer with :03 left, and an Irish turnover on the ensuing in-bounds pass. What ever happened to poetic justice?

Well, it seems that the verse of this poem has been altered. For the last couple of weeks, the team seems to have gotten a bit complacent. Riding the crests of a 12-3 record, the girls took on Goshen College a week ago. Trish Albrecht and Julie Froese combined for 43 points for Goshen, while no other teammate scored more than eight, yet ND could only manage a four point win. Last Tuesday, the girls traveled to Rensselaer, Indiana to take on Saint Joseph's College. Amidst some admittedly poor officiating, Notre Dame played sloppily, and lost by five, 67-62. Then came the Marion game.

The Irish head into this Thursday's district tournament with those two consecutive losses, and a 13-5 record. If they are going to get out of that tournament (which, on paper, appears as though they should), co-captains Carol Lally and Molly Cashman are going to have to get their teammates a bit more inspired to play.

A team of any sort needs a consistent level of intensity if it is going to be effective over the course of a season. The ND women had it, but have seemingly lost some of it. A feeling of cockiness has hit the Irish, a feeling that has resulted from their early season success. Now this team can play with any that I have seen (and a few that I haven't), but they will not, unless the mental aspect of their play changes.

Last year, in their first season as a varsity team, the Irish women gained a birth in the state tournament, eventually bowing out in the semi-finals. Head Coach Sharon Petro is hoping to guide her cagers back to the campus of Indiana State University for another shot at the state title come next week. But that trip will not be possible if the team continues to play the way it has been playing.

The general feeling of the coaching staff is presently one of disappointment: disappointment at the recent play of the team, and disappointment at the lack of concentration during games and practices. But no one associated with the ND women, has given up on this team, or the remainder of their season. However, if some change doesn't come about soon, the women's basketball season may be cut short.

Modern-day Rockne plays clean

For a school with the highest profile in American college athletics, Notre Dame creates little terror in pressure-proof Digger Phelps.

"I thrive in a situation like this," says the basketball coach of the Fighting Irish. "I can truly say that I'm a man who enjoys his work."

If ever two parties were made for each other in sports, it's Phelps and Notre Dame. Starting with the fabulous Knute Rockne days in the 1920's, Notre Dame has been "marketed" with clan, and Phelps has worked especially hard at personifying the Irish image.

He is a glad hand, a wink, a smile, a green carnation in lapel - and, as he himself might tell you - sometimes a bit of the Irish blarney.

Even bad conduct by fans doesn't turn him sour.

In a recent appearance at Madison Square Garden, where his team defeated Manhattan, Phelps found a disquieting welcome committee. He heard hoots from some New Yorkers who remembered that he had left Fordham eight years ago for the greener pastures of South Bend. Some saw Phelps as a traitor for leaving the Rams flat in the middle of a contract.

On other Notre Dame visits to New York in the past, Garden fans have flashed signs with unkind, distasteful references to Phelps' father, who is an undertaker in nearby Beacon, N.Y.

But he shrugs it off with characteristic cordiality.

"I love coming back to New York, and I don't even have a T-shirt," says a smiling Phelps, alluding to the "Big Apple" shirt popular in the Big Apple.

Digger Phelps is not your average big-time basketball coach, which perhaps is the reason that he has managed to remain so bright and breezy all [continued on page 7]
