Sen. Bayh discusses election-year issues

Editor's Note: Q & A will become a weekly Observer news feature interviewing people of interest to Notre Dame-Saint Mary's students.

Last Friday, U.S. Sen. Birch Bayh of Indianawas in South Bend to appear at a luncheon ofretired United Auto Workers, where he was interviewed by News Editor Tom Jackman. Inhis remarks, Bayh called for a tax cut to lessen the effects of the recession.

Q: What's the difference between yourtax cut proposal and the Republican proposal?

A: I would not have the kind of disproportionatedollar figures for the upper income brackets. Most of the people in upper income brackets have a number of tax loopholes that they can take advantage of in deducting interest and capital gains and other kinds of benefits, butthe people who really need the help are the people in thelower and middle income areas. Not only are they theones who need the help, but that's what's going to helpthe economy. If you give commodities they won'tlet us sell in their countries.Q: President Carter's new economic plan increases thefederal deficit by about eight to ten billion dollars. Does this worry you at all?

A: Yes, it worries me, but what worries me even more is the reason we got the deficit to where it is now, which is not because of increased spending but because of increased unemployment. And the only way we're going to get a balanced budget is to get people put back to work. The latest figures show for each one percent of unemployment you had about $25billion in lost revenue or increased expenses as a result of unemployment compensation and welfare payments. If we had the same kind of employment

Government, strikers reach settlement

GDANSK, Poland (AP) —

Government negotiators and Polish strikers reached a final agreement, ending the labor crisis here and setting out sweeping political and economic reforms unprecedented in a communist bloc nation.

"We will go back to work with energy," said one of thousands of workers at the Lenin ship yard strike center here. The tired but exuberant throng roared in approval, and then began the cautious process of realizing their victory and restoring the nation's reeling economy.

The agreement, signed by strike leader Lech Walesa and chief government negotiator Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, finished a crisis that had dragged on for 18 days, involving more than 350,000 workers in Poland's industrial north, and had spread to more than 20 Polish cities.

Jagielski bowed to a last minute demand by the workers and agreed that political dissidents arrested for allegedly encouraging the strikers would be freed by today.

Sources in Warsaw said four of the 29 dissidents who had been jailed during the strikes were released at 5 p.m. — 10 minutes after the signing ceremony in Gdansk. They said the four, Miroslaw Chojacki, Jan Ajsner, Seweryn Blumsztajn and Jan Cywinski, had been charged with belonging to an organization planning criminal acts, an offense punishable by up to five years in jail. The sources said they did not know if the charges were still pending.

Jacek Kuron, leader of the Committee for Social Self-Defense, called KOR, was among the dissidents remaining in custody, the sources said.

The strike settlement also requires authorities to review all cases of political prisoners within two weeks.

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency, Tass, distributed an angry statement that made no mention of the settlement and blamed the strikes on "anti-social elements." The article was broadcast on Soviet television hours after the agreement was signed. It did not speak of any possible Soviet-bloc intervention, but stressed Poland's importance to the bloc as a member of the Warsaw Pact military alliance.

Workers elsewhere in Poland, most notably in the southwestern city of Wroclaw, said they would honor the Gdansk settlement and resume work upon its confirmation. On Saturday, strike leaders in the major western port of Szczecin ten dollars, or a hundred dollars, of tax relief to a person with low income, they're going to spend that for things that they really need in a relatively short period of time, and that goes through the economy, and in buying the things they need they put other people to work producing those items. And that's the way we get the economy back on its feet.

Q: You recently asked a Senate Appropriations Committee to resume the price mechanisms for steel imports. Is that going to cause a reciprocal effect in other countries?

A: That's fine, let them reciprocate. All we're doing is saying that you can't ship your steel into our market below the cost of production. We don't ship our steel into their market below the cost of production. Same way with automobiles — there's no reason why they should take a $6,000 American car and tax it to the place where it's $12,000 before you can buy it in Japan. We don't do that with their automobiles, we ought to treat their products the same way they treat ours. Television sets are another example. They won't even let us sell color television in Japan. Now we've just got to stop that, I don't want a trade war, but I'm not going to sit still and let our workers be put out of work while foreign workers are competing with us and selling

Pope plans England visit

LONDON (AP) — Paul II will become the first reigning pontiff to visit Britain in a trip tentatively planned for summer 1982, more than four centuries after King Henry VIII's dispute with the Vatican split of the English church from Rome.

The Pope has accepted a invitation from British Cardinal Basil Hume; the Roman Catholic information service said yesterday. The announcement already has aroused angry reaction from some militant Protestant clergy.

Enmity between the Roman Catholic Church and the Church of England lasted long after Henry's break with Rome in 1534, when Pope Clement VII refused to grant the king a divorce. In later years, many people from both sides were burned at the stake.

The ill-feeling is not yet entirely gone.

John Paul's travel plans were incomplete, but a church spokesman said they would not include a trip to Northern Ireland, where 2,053 people have died in 11 years of sectarian violence between its half-million Catholics and one million Protestants.

The Rev. Ia Paisley, the fiery Northern Irish Protestant leader, denounced the Pope's British trip. "The blood of the

Commissioners Board convenes

by Tim Vercelotti

The Board of Commissioners held their first meeting of the year last night. The Board, which includes the Student Body President, Vice president, Student Union Director, and other representatives of the various branches of student government, opened the meeting with a discussion of the upcoming budget hearings. The hearings, which decide the student government monetary allocations for campus clubs and groups, are scheduled for September 21 and 28.

Among the other items on the meeting's agenda was the proposed reorganization of the student government. Student Body President Paul Riehle reported that a three man committee is currently researching the possibilities of governmental renovations. The group is looking through back issues of The Observer and Scholastic, examining the student governments of other schools, and talking to past Notre Dame Student Body Presidents. A report on the committee's work will be submitted at the next meeting of the Board of Commissioners, scheduled for September 14.

Another subject of discussion was the problem of overcrowded student housing. One Board member pointed out that some animosity is beginning to crop up between Flanner Hall residents and their new neighbors, the students who were displaced by the fire in St. Edward's Hall. The Board decided to explore the possibility of allocating some money to St. Ed's residents for hall activities.

Ten hostages held aboard a Braniff Airways jetliner in Lima, Peru, returned here yesterday aboard the same plane which was seized by Cuban refugees for 23 hours at Lima's Jorge Chavez Airport. The returning travelers, who were met at Los Angeles International Airport by family members and friends, said their captors did not mistreat or threaten them during the ordeal. The incident began Friday when about 400 Cubans smashed through glass doors at the Lima Airport and swarmed onto the runway. The Braniff jetliner, en route to Los Angeles, was taken over by 168 Cubans who demanded to be flown to the United States.

A fire blamed on boys playing with matches burned out of control for a sixth day yesterday after consuming more than 21,000 acres of brush and timber and causing an estimated $250,000 damage to homes on Mount San Jacinto above Palm Springs, Calif. Authorities would not predict when they might contain the blaze, which was being battled by more than 1,000 firefighters and which has led to 14 firefighters receiving minor injuries. "It's about 40 percent contained now, but we're not predicting full containment," said California Department of Forestry fire information officer Fred Snow. "The containment is not concentrated on a particular side, which is sort of our problem — the fire really depends on what the wind does," Snow explained. On Saturday, the fire damaged or destroyed six winter homes in the Andreas Canyon on the Eastern flank of the mountain.

Don't tell Baron Arnaud de Rosnay it's impossible to cross 2,200 miles of ocean standing on a surfboard, powered by the wind and sustained only by dates, caviar and water. The 34-year-old French aristocrat doesn't think in terms of "can't." He says his planned 20-to-30-day trip from the Marquesas Islands in the South Pacific to Hawaii "will be a winning of a very hard fight, which was to decide to make the impossible possible." Although he learned how to handle a wind surfboard only a little more than a year ago, the tall, muscular Frenchman has chalked up two long voyages since then. He "sailed" across 850 blistering miles of the Sahara Desert on a windsurf skate board in a 56-hour trip in March 1979. Five months later he crossed the icy waters of the Bering Strait, between Alaska and Siberia, in eight hours. "What you want to do is feel very humble and just accept and use any element that you can take to go faster and faster and the farthest," de Rosnay said.

China's experiment with modified forms of capitalism will expand next year to include the first personal income tax in the communist nation's 31-year history, the official Chinese news agency announced yesterday. The Xinhua news service said China also will levy business taxes on more state-owned enterprises and collect taxes from the expanding number of foreign joint ventures and foreigners next year. Finance Minister Wang Bingqia announced the new tax policies at Saturday's opening session of the National People's Congress, China's Parliament.

The world oil surplus could last at least until late 1981 even if Saudi Arabia were to reduce its oil output by one million barrels a day, the trade publication Petroleum Intelligence Weekly said yesterday. "The huge cushion of surplus stocks," with total Western world inventories expected to reach a peak of 5.8 billion 42-gallon barrels by early fall, "could linger for another one or two years," the newsletter said. "Oil inventories in some European nations have now reached the equivalent of 120 days' supply while Japan is at a record 110 days and rising, and the United States at about 75 days," it said. The newsletter attributed the surplus to high levels of Saudi oil output and an "unexpectedly sharp drop" in Western oil demand following a 132 percent jump in world oil prices since the beginning of 1979.

Inside Monday

Silence is our enemy

Margie Brassil

Last Thursday was a late night, or Friday was an early morning. Either way, there I was at 7 a.m. heading into downtown South Bend to deliver the paste-ups for Friday's Observer to the printer. U.S. 31, as all ND and SMC students know, winds its way smack through the center of beautiful downtown South Bend, splitting in two just after Memorial Hospital in opposite one-way directions.

Half asleep while one of the other editors drove, I looked out the window on what appeared to be a beautiful morning, but after a full night at the paper I could hardly be blamed for not fully appreciating it. Yet, just before I could fall asleep, something did catch my half-closed eye.

Tied to the trees in front of every main building down the highway was a yellow ribbon. I also recalled seeing them tied to trees along Saint Mary's Avenue, but never really took note. But here they were — not in the hundreds of course, more like a respectable 20 or 30, but enough to wake me up and ask, "What are these things?" "For the hostages, it started in Battle Creek Mich. and spread around," was the reply.

Everyone has heard the song — "Tie a yellow ribbon 'round the old oak tree" released some seven years ago. Granted, it was about a man returning from prison wanting to know if his girl still wanted him, and considering the hostages committed no crime and yet are being held prisoner, there is some comparison in that respect. But what the yellow ribbon tied to a tree now means as a result of that song, is "We want you back."

On the return trip from the printer, I was still pondering the yellow ribbons and what they meant, when we approached the viaduct crossing 31 just before Angela. Written on the columns in spray paint were the words, "F — Iran."

Ordinarily I hate graffiti; it's so destructive and often vulgar — which this message was, except that this comment, made as an answer to the hostage crisis, shows more than just juvenile delinquency.

This person had to be very, very angry to write those words and by this anger, he also must have cared a great deal. His words are now a daily reminder to anyone who travels US 31 that Iran is causing us trouble and still has 52 of our people hostage.

The situation seems to be at a standstill. It is now 303 days and all officials are saying it is too ticklish a situation to comment on. In fact, the silence is so loud on this issue that it's scary. Stories in the papers are found buried near the back, if at all.

One hostage has returned. In Chicago I read a quiet story on page five that said Richard Queen had been well treated by Iran and would be all right.

Here it is folks — Campaign Year, filled with promises and speeches and plans to build a better America. The conventions were held and the rats for the Rat Race of all rat races have been picked. 52 Americans are still being held hostage and not one word has been said by anyone at either convention or in the campaign about getting them freed. Not one word!

This should be a major issue. Reagan should be able to do wonders with it, saying, "See how Carter has messed up!" And Carter should be saying things like, "I'll have them home by Christmas!" Actually, I don't care what they say, I just wish they'd say something.

Why isn't anything being done or said? Why did the rescue attempt fail? (Sorry, I can't buy sand in the engines.) Why did Carter even wait so long? Why is no one saying anything? National security? Come on. Have we forgotten all the classic leaks that should have been hushed in that hallowed name, but weren't? Label something national security and chances are greater that someone will find out about it.

I wish I knew what was going on. But I don't. And no one else seems to know either. But you know what I'm really afraid of? The less we hear about it, the more apathetic we will become and our countrymen could remain hostage forever with nothing ever being done in the name of "national security." If they are not freed soon it soon it will be the fault of the American people for falling asleep. Like I almost did before I saw the yellow ribbons, and the angry message on the viaduct column to "F — Iran."

Students, merchants profit Stepan Mall receives praise

Stepan Mall, the brainchild of SU Services Commissioner Mike Method, has been greeted with favorable reactions by local merchants, students and the Student Union.

The Mall, which was held Thursday and Friday in Stepan, has prompted enthusiasm from both businesses and students. Local realtors have already contacted Method and expressed their interest in the project.

"The Mall is a convenient place for students to buy things for their rooms, and they don't have to go off campus," Method commented.

Though this year is the Mall's first, Method hopes to commence a tradition. He believes "everyone wins" with the Mall: retailers make money; students benefit from convenience, and the Services Commission makes a profit. The profit is then fed back to students when SU allocates funds to deserving clubs and organizations on campus.

Students expressed their enthusiasm over the Mall. Comments ranged from "It's nice" to "I'm glad I can get shelving without the hassle of going off campus."

One student, however, did comment that he thought prices were "steep" and said he wished the Mall sold used items.

A spokesman for Interior Concepts commented that his firm plans to return next year "for sure."

the beginning of this year when we passed that balanced budget, we would have about a $25 billion surplus instead of a deficit, but when people are out of work, they're not paying taxes, they're drawing unemployment compensation and welfare which increased expenses. So what we hope is that by spending that money in the tax cut, we get the economy turned right now, about 6.2 percent unemployment, that we had at around, we get people put back to work, so that really we have a better chance of balancing the budget than when they're out of work.

Q: Are the Democrats unified now? Do you think that there was any split caused by the Carter-Kennedy rift that will carry over into the fall campaign, or is everything patched up and are the Kennedy people ready to go behind Carter?

A: I don't know. My judgement is that there was a deep division between Kennedy and Carter supporters, that went beyond personalities, it went to programs and substance. With this new economic plan, I think the President has accepted some of Sen. Kennedy's ideas. He hasn't gone as far as Sen. Kennedy wanted, but I think Sen. Kennedy has responded and is enthusiastically supporting President Carter now. To answer your other question, I think that some of that hard feeling is still there. How long it will last, I don't know. I think the thing that will come closest to healing the divisions within the Democratic party, more than anything else, is Ronald Reagan. When he comes out and tells what a glorious war Vietnam was, right away you have about all the Kennedy Democrats saying 'wait a minute, I'm not going to vote for somebody like that'. When he talks about how unemployment compensation is a welfare vacation for loafers, you got a lot of other people saying 'wait a minute, I'm not going to vote for a fellow like that'. When he can't determine whether you have one, two or three China policies, then you're going to have people who are concerned about a lot of things, wondering, 'Dowe want a man like that in the White House?' I think that is one thing that President Carter has going for him, and that the Democrats have going for us, to unify our party against a man who is representing the other party. I think there're going to be more and more Democrats who are dissatisfied or disenchanted with President Carter who will say, 'Well wait, I'm not going to throw my vote away on a third party candidate, and I'm sure not going to vote for Ronald Reagan, and I'm not going to stay home.' I know I don't agree with some of the things that President Carter has done; I think this high interest rate/tight money policy was absolutely asinine. That's Republican economics, that's the same thing that Nixon and Ford three times in eight years, and we got three recessions. So why wouldn't you get it if a Democrat uses it. It doesn't make any sense. There should

Rajai appoints new cabinet in Iran

by the Associated Press

Iran's prime minister yesterday named a new Cabinet — the country's first since the takeover of the U. S. Embassy in Tehran almost 10 months ago. U. S. officials hope the appointments will speed the release of the 52 American hostages.

Several of those named by Mohammad Ali Rajai, the Iranian prime minister, were educated in the United States and other Western nations. Many, including some who lived in the West, were said to have close ties to the hard-line Islamic Republican party that controls Parliament and were foes of the U.S.-backed Shah of Iran.

Hossein Musavi Khameneie, nominated to become Iran's minister of foreign affairs, was described by the official Iranian news agency Pars as being a member of the central committee of Islamic Republican Party and the editor of the party's newspaper. He was reported to have been arrested in 1973 by SAVAK, the shah's secret police, for activities against the then all-powerful monarch.

Another appointee, Seyyed Asadollah Lajevardi, named minister of commerce, was reported by Pars to have been tortured in prison for his political activities against the late monarch.

The news agency said Rajai announced the appointments in a letter to Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Majlis, or Parliament. Parliament is expected to act on them this week.

The speaker had been quoted as saying the legislators would spend this week considering the Cabinet appointments, then begin the hostage debate. No new defense minister was named.

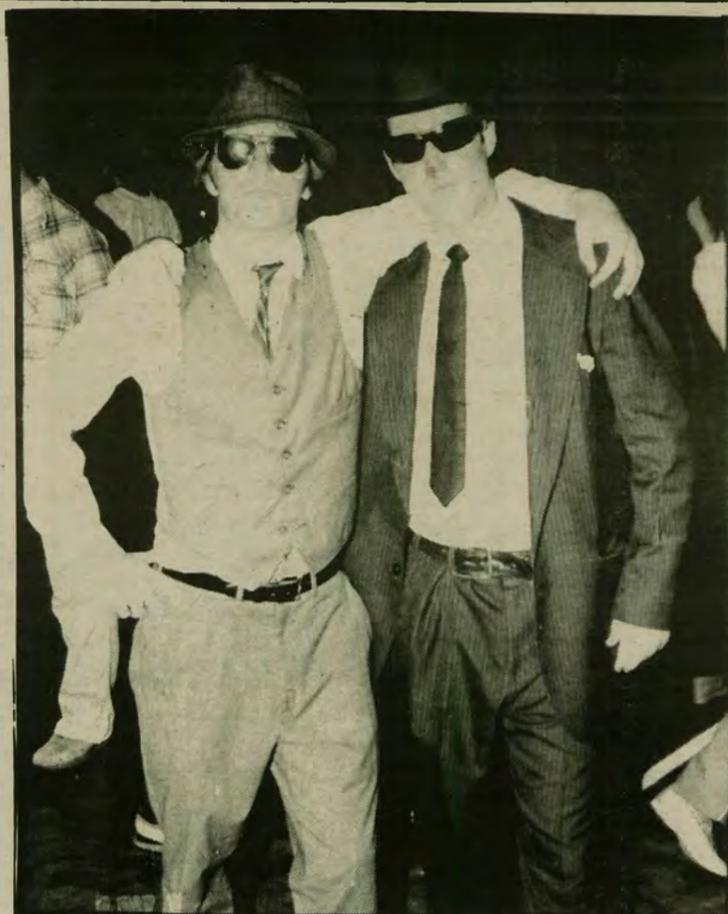

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary leader, has ordered the Parliament to consider the 302-day-old hostage issue, but the debate has been postponed repeatedly. Iran's president, Abolhassan Bani Sadr, last week spoke out against spy trials for the hostages, but many members of parliament are thought to favor such trials.

The last Iranian Cabinet was headed by Mehdi Bazargan, who re-signed as prime minister shortly after the storming of the U. S. Embassy in Tehran and the hostage-taking last Nov. 4. American officials have maintained that the absence of a government structure in Iran has blocked negotiations for the hostages' release.

According to Pars, the other new appointees include:

Mahmud Wandji, minister of post and telegraph and telephone, who received a doctorate in electronics from the University of California. He is said to have "cooperated" with the IRP but is described as a political independent.

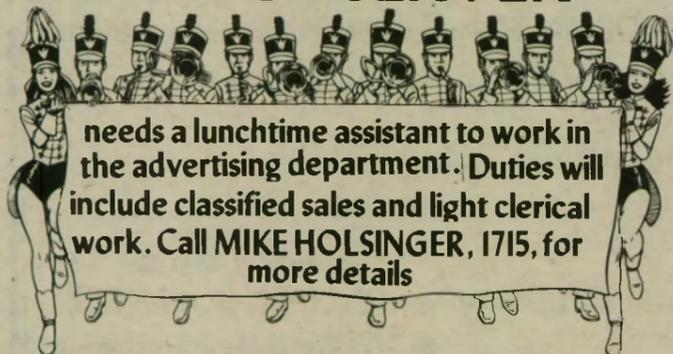

Mohammad Norbakhsh, minister of economics and financial affairs, who is said to have been active in Islamic student associations while studying in the U. S. He is now said to be formulating a plan to relieve the country's high unemployment rate.

reached an agreement with the government, and some enterprises were already operating again.

There were unconfirmed reports that the Gdansk and Szczecin agreements would apply to the other strikers.

The strike, begun over a meat-price hike announced July 1, ended with promises of labor unions independent of government control, the right to strike for worker demands, and reforms affecting nearly every facet of life in a communist country.

"We will see to it that the new union always be independent for the sake of Poland," Walesa said as he and Jagielski signed the 21-point agreement. "And now I declare the strike over."

In addition to independent unions, the settlement requires authorities to review all cases of political prisoners within two weeks, freeing them during the review.

"I am glad to say we ended our dispute without the use of force but by the way of discussion. We showed that we can understand one another."

Jagielski drew cheers when he said: "I have done for you what you have asked for. We were talking like Poles should talk to each other, like a Pole talks to a Pole."

"There are no winners and there are no losers," he said.

martyrs cries out against this visit," he said.

One of the province's leading Catholic politicians Gerry Fitt, welcomed the trip and added: "It's a sad comment that Northern Ireland has been isolated from this visit."

Militant Scottish Protestant Pastor Jack 'Glass of the Scottish Reformed Church called the Pope's visit to Britain, "The greatest betrayal since Judas Iscariot." He said it was "a vile abomination" and that thousands of Protestants would take to the streets if the pontiff set foot in Scotland.

The announcement indicated the purpose of the trip is to bring the Catholic Church closer to other Christian churches in Britain. "The Pope stressed the great importance he would attach to the ecumenical aspect of the proposed pastoral visit," the announcement said.

There are about 4.5 million Roman Catholics in Britain, where the National Churches are the Church of Scotland and the Church of England, whose temporal head is Queen Elizabeth II.

"Naturally if the queen is in England at the time of the visit, she will receive the Pope," a Buckingham palace spokesman said. "The Queen is paying a state visit to Italy in October and will visit the Pope at the Vatican October 17," he added.

P.O. Box Q

'Rocky Horror' an Abuse of Morals

Dear Editor,

Recently the Student Union of Notre Dame sponsored the movie, "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," for the "entertainment" of the student body. The renowned movie depicted a "sexual revolution" against the stuffed shirt policies of yesteryear when high morals and ascetic purity were in fashion.

The storyline parodies the Frankenstein creation story and uses this popular forum, coupled with rock 'n roll, to advocate its cause. The movie, however, is nothing short of pornographic. Opening with the star, Dr. Frankfurter, dressed in a make-up and drag and singing to his male creation, "In 7 Days I Can Make You a Man," the movie continues on this line proclaiming, through graphic example, transvestitism, sexualism, homosexuality, lesbianism, oral sex, cannibalism, pre-marital and extra-marital sex, and various other topics no less controversial. Any characters of respectable nature are painted out to be morons and soon succumb to the cause, i.e., hero and heroine lose virginity to the same Dr. Frankenfurter. What is even more unique to the situation is the dialogue exchange between the characters on the screen and the characters in the audience. Besides yelling unprintable hecklings, as is traditional with the movie audience, the goals of the raunchy flick were soon verbalized with "Down with society," and "Up with decadence!" In short, "Rocky Horror" was an advocacy of sex on a pure pleasure-oriented and perverse plateau (if it feels good, do it), and gives visions of what Sodom and Gomorrah must have been like.

My question is why is a student organization of a major Catholic university using such a vehicle for mere profit? Why does a school, which advocates high morals and sexual ethics, show a movie which calls for the "breakdown of society" and a lifestyle based on hedonistic pleasures? Why is a school which supposedly creates an environment to produce educated students of healthy body and mind, playing host to such smut?

It would be wise for the Student Union and the University to reevaluate its goals and standards, or just break out the golden calf for the sake of a buck.

Co-Ed Dorm Living Long Overdue at ND

Dear Editor,

After 8 years of feeble attempts to implement co-education at Notre Dame, it's about time that THE OBSERVER has finally decided to endorse the establishment of a co-ed dorm.

In deference to Pam Degnan's recent commentary, "Not yet time for co-ed dorms", setting up one of the soon-to-be-built dorms for co-ed living would be a very real and constructive change for Notre Dame. Co-ed living, that is, men and women living in the same building, either in every other room or every other floor, not as Ms. Degnan describes, cohabitation, is a perfect living arrangement for Notre Dame students to meet and interact with members of the opposite sex on a normal daily basis. I emphasize the "normal" aspect of co-ed living because that's exactly what this campus lacks: a normal living alternative.

The administration's Victorian attitudes have sought to avoid the issue of co-ed dorms ever since economic necessity forced them to admit women to Notre Dame. Parietals, kegs, etc. have been their smoke-screen to keep the students occupied and to keep the issue buried. For those of you out there who are tired of the "strained" social atmosphere here at Notre Dame, a co-ed dorm is just what you need and deserve. Let the administration know how you feel — they'll just keep their heads in the sand until you pull them out.

A Farewell to U.S. Arms ?

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — The Republicans have pledged $100 billion for new arms to "catch up with the Russians." This will presumably include new missiles, the B-1 bomber, super submarines, more surface naval ships, and beefed up tactical forces that can be flown to any part of the world.

The country is all for it. The only thing the GOP hasn't explained is where they are going to get the personnel to man the new hardware.

The truth of the matter is the Air Force, Navy and Army cannot find the crews for the equipment they now have. The mood of the country is to spend money on anything the military says it needs, as long as American sons and daughters are not required to put on a uniform and use it.

What's the answer? The solution is to draft all the illegal aliens who have come across the border and swear them into the armed forces.

While military pay may be a pittance to an American, it is a fortune to an illegal South American, Mexican or Haitian refugee. Rather than pick tomatoes or grapes the illegals would be trained to use our new military equipment, and be taught all the latest methods of warfare.

Instead of being hounded by immigration officials, they would be given PX privileges, USO dances and food stamps for their families. We would have Cuban pilots, Chinese tank drivers and Vietnamese missilemen.

The officer corps would be made up of foreign generals, colonels, majors admirals and captains who have been overthrown in their respective countries by communist takeovers as well as those who have failed in right-wing junta revolutions in their respective countries.

By the time the $100 billion allocated by the Republican party would be accounted for, not one American would have to spend a day in the military to defend his country.

It is estimated that there are over 10 million illegal aliens in the United States right now. All we need is 5 million for a respectable defense capability. The other 5 million could be signed up for the reserve, and be permitted to work in the fields until an emergency required them to be called up.

While the illegal aliens would only be required to serve for four years, those who refused to re-enlist would immediately be deported to their country of origin for being in the United States without a visa.

The beauty of this plan is that we could fulfill all our military commitments without fear of political fallout because we are endangering the lives of American boys. It would also resolve the debate as to whether American women should be required to serve in the armed forces.

But best of all, it would alleviate the bitterness that some Americans feel toward various boat people arriving in the United States. Instead of wanting to send them back, we would welcome those refugees with open arms as fresh mercenaries, ready to fight to keep America free.

If the United States wants to be number 1 in the world again, as the Republicans intend us to be, we are going to need all the illegal foreigners we can get.

Security arrests Huddle patron

A man described as being a "little off the wall", but "harmless" was arrested last night by two Notre Dame security guards for "blocking traffic" in the Huddle.

According to two Huddle employees, the suspect, who is in his early 30s, was standing next to the door of the LaFortune entrance to the Huddle when two ND security officers approached the man and began questioning him. After several minutes, the suspect, who showed no signs of resistance, was pushed to the wall, frisked, handcuffed and subsequently arrested.

"I can't believe that they would handcuff the poor guy", said one Huddle employee, "he was just standing there minding his own business."

ND security refused to comment on the incident until a later date.

be no place for 20 percent interest in this country, and yet that's exactly what we had.

The inability to take on the oil companies, and to put them in their place and to stop this tremendous inflation, with the periodic increases in energy (prices), that's something I wish the President had been more aggressive on. But those are two reas, in other areas I agree with him very much.

Q: What sort of impact will John Anderson have? Will he have an impact?

A: Well I think he'll have an impact, how big it will be I don't know. I have great respect for John Anderson, and I think he should be permitted on the ballot. I think the Democratic National Chairman trying to keep him off the ballot does not look good and it is not good. I think that anybody who wants to run for president, or senator, or anything else, ought to have the chance to do so. Now having said that, I go back to what I said a moment ago. I think the closer we get to the elections, the more gaffes Ronald Reagan pulls and the more dangerous he appears as a man who would be sitting there with his hand on the button, so to speak, I think the more Democrats who might be inclined to vote for John Anderson are going to perceive their vote as making it possible to elect Ronald Reagan, and they won't want to do that. That's what happened the last time we had a major third party candidacy like the Wallace candidacy, where his strength went down and down and down as people began returning to the fold recognizing that Wallace wasn't going to win, all they could do was elect Richard Nixon, and that's exactly what they did do.

Q: What about your campaign? What sort of tack will you take?

A: Dan Quayle talks about a new brand of leadership, but that new brand of leadership is one that's for giving the biggest tax breaks to the wealthy, not to the lower and middle income people, giving the oil companies free rein to run prices at whatever they want. That kind of thinking he feels very sincerely, very genuinely, but I think he's wrong, and my record, on the other hand, is there for people to see. I'm on the other side of that question, and we'll just have to let (the voters) decide. I don't think Dan Quayle can come across like Santa Claus because he isn't Santa Claus. He's had the vote for four years, and I think the people have a right to see how he votes because I assume that's how he'll vote as a senator.

Q: Where is the recession right now, in your opinion?

A: I don't know. I was one who thought it was coming while everybody else thought we weren't in it yet. Unfortunately, I guess maybe I was right and some other folks were wrong but it's not the kind of thing you want to brag about. Now I see that this latest report of economic indicators shows that they're strengthening, maybe things are looking up.

... Knafelc

Toman went on to say that Knafelc's major setback right now is that he is still awaiting a doctor's 'OK' to resume contact. He has been throwing lightly since Wednesday.

Aside from football, Knafelc, who is an Economics major, says he enjoys playing basketball, and looks forward to the annual Bookstore Basketball tournament once football season is over. And in the evenings after practice, what does he do to relax? "There really isn't a whole lot to do," he says with a chuckle, "besides study and watch TV."

Like many of his Irish teammates, Greg expressed a sense of remorse over the announce resignation of Devine, but is anxious to get the upcoming season underway.

"As a team, we are starting to look good. The desire is there, and we're looking forward to getting started. I'm sure we can do better than 11th (pre-season pick of the Associated Press), but our goal is the National Championship. We have no other one than that."

Knafelc completed his only pass attempt of 1979 on a 17-yard scoring strike against

Purdue as a fake field goal attempt gave the Irish six points. "It's important for us to win that first one," he notes, "and I think we will beat Purdue."

For the sake of Greg Knafelc's teammates, all of their fans hope that the victim of circumstance with the dynamite stats is a man of his word.

Quarterback Knafelc hangs-in

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the first in a series of five on the Notre Dame quarterbacks. The order the features appear in The Observer in no way reflects the status of the players in any way.

by Mark Hannuksela
Sports Writer

How does one account for the fact that the quarterback with highest career completion percentage probable will not be starting Saturday when Notre Dame opens its season?

Perhaps more than any other reason, it's because Greg Knafelc has been a victim of circumstance.

In the fall of 1977, Knafelc entered the University of Notre Dame as one of the top quarterback prospects in the country. At the time, he was listed fourth on the Irish depth charts behind veterans Rusty Lisch and Joe Montana and fellow freshman Tim Koegel. Three games into the season, Montana replaced Lisch as the starter, and the "comeback kid" went on to lead his teammates to the National Championship. Montana played the entire 1978 season and Lisch then returned to lead the Irish offense in 1979.

Here in 1980, Knafelc was expected to battle Koegel and Mike Courey for the starting job, and was doing just that until he sustained a shoulder injury in practice a few weeks ago. Now, the six foot-five inch native of Green Bay, Wis., is facing a fourth season of little, if any, activity.

"Sure, I'd like to play," says Knafelc, whose career completion percentage is 67 percent (two of three). "I wouldn't be here if I didn't want to. But I have no regrets about coming to Notre Dame. I've enjoyed my three years here, and there isn't really anywhere else I'd rather be."

"Obviously, my chances of starting Saturday's game are not very good because of my shoulder, although it is feeling better. Everybody here wants to play, and I just have to keep working harder once I'm able to."

Ron Toman, coach of quarterbacks and receivers for Notre Dame has praise for Knafelc, and the attitude he has maintained during his years as an Irish football player.

"Greg has a really good attitude," says Toman, who is in his fifth year as an assistant to Dan Devine. "That's something that is pretty tough to maintain when you're not playing much, but Greg has done extremely well in that area."

Non-football weekends: Help or hurt the team?

by Beth Huffman
Sports Editor

This football season the Notre Dame team will have three "free" Saturdays. The question bounced around the Skywriters' press conference last Thursday was whether or not the open dates will help or hinder the Irish.

"I personally have never liked open dates in the past," Devine said. "But with the tough schedule we have this year it could be to our advantage."

Last year's 7-4 Irish had no free dates. But, a look back to the 9-3 1978 season finds a free date between the disheartening 3-0 opening loss to Missouri and the 28-14 defeat at the hands of Michigan. The near two weeks between the Tiger's win in the sweltering Indiana heat and Wolverines' victory led to noting but the Irish matching the worst Notre Dame start in history (0-2).

The three free Saturday dates fall before games with Michigan, Michigan State and Southern Cal. The USC game was originally scheduled to coincide with the basketball team's trip to UCLA for economical reasons, however, the football game was moved so that ABC could televise the clash. With the television money in the picture the University could do nothing sensible besides accept the network's suggestion.

With the tough Irish schedule this year the week-ends off could drag out the season.

"I think it is good for a young team," John Scully, a senior captain from Huntington, N.Y., said. "It gives us needed time to fix mistakes."

"Of course, for the older guys it makes the season a bit longer, I hope it does not wear the attitude down."

Junior defenseman Bob Crable and Steve Cichy both agreed the lay-offs were "good" and "scheduled to our advantage."

Tom Gibbons, another senior captain, hopes the delays will give the Irish a "chance to heal" after tough games but is also touched with some skepticism.

"The long two week wait can drag. If it occurs a week after we have a phenomenal game we could lose momentum."

With his usual frankness senior defensive tackle Scott Zettek expressed his dislike for the 1980 Irish schedule.

"I don't care for it," Zettek told the Skywriters. "It throws off the team's rhythm. We could hit a low--but hopefully we'd come out of it. But, I really think it hurts more than it helps."

Whether good or bad for moral, injuries and the Notre Dame team as a whole, the 1980 Irish will have three open Saturdays to use watching opponents on television, and waiting, for the next week.
