Elections spark controversy over vote-counting authority

By JOSEPH MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Tuesday's election has sparked controversy over who should count ballots for student elections.

At last night's Judicial Council meeting, Judicial Coordinator Bob Gleason told members that in the future he wants ballots to be counted by council members, not Ombudsmen, who now do the counting.

"We're on the polls, and we're the ones who ought to count the ballots. We can do it as well as they can. The Judicial Council used to count the ballots until 1978. In that year the Judicial Council must have been irresponsible and the (student body) president gave the job to Obud."

Gleason's proposal comes as a response to Ombudsman Chairman Andy Tucker's remarks at last Monday's Student Senate meeting. Tucker became upset, Gleason said, when Gleason voted in favor of allowing The Alternative ticket as write-in candidates for student body president and vice-president.

Under election rules, write-in votes are not counted unless approved by the senate. If the ticket clears this hurdle, the senate chooses the words by which students will indicate votes for this ticket.

In Tuesday's election, only the phrase The Alternative represented a valid vote for the ticket of Chapin Engler and John Dardis. Gleason voted against this measure. He favored allowing any words or names which indicated the voter's choice.

When the Engler-Dardis ticket was approved, Tucker threatened to not count the ballots. Gleason quickly responded the Judicial Council would count them, but Tucker didn't carry out his threat.

"Andy was vehemently opposed to our votes. He took it personally," Gleason said.

"We used to run the elections from start to finish. It was originally our job. It might have been true a year ago we couldn't handle it, but this is a whole new council. I feel the Judicial Council is very capable," said Gleason.

Gleason said he wants to avoid any confrontation with Tucker, who was unavailable for comment.

During Gleason's term as coordinator, the council has become increasingly involved in campus politics. Recently, the Judicial Council assumed control over the parietal issue after Gleason told Student Body President Brian Callaghan it was the job of the council, not the senate.

Another area in which the council is involved is student rights. Gleason said the Du Lac Review Committee will hold a hearing on Feb. 21 to discuss possible revisions of its content. Also, the council is considering publishing a booklet on student rights.

Gleason said all of these activities indicate the Judicial Council is no longer the sleeping giant on campus.

Government agencies exhibit job prospects

By P.A. CIMINO
News Staff

Government Career Day is being held today on the second floor of LaFortune Student Center from noon until 4 p.m.

This year marks the sixth time that Career and Placement Services will be sponsoring this event, and it promises to be the best ever.

Paul Reynolds, assistant director of the Career and Placement Service, is in charge of coordinating the day. When it was started in 1979, "the original intent of the day was for liberal arts majors", said Reynolds. However, now Government Career Day is open to any major and all students are welcome.

"The day is much like a career fair", Reynolds said. "There will be representatives from 30 federal, state, and local agencies in the LaFortune ballroom, the majority of these being federal agencies. These include such notable groups as the Environmental Protection Agency and the Peace Corps."

Each agency will have a booth or table and students can wander the floor and stop at any of the stations. In the past some agencies have brought job applications. However, Reynolds stressed the fact that the agencies are not here to recruit students but mainly to offer information.

There is some good news for students who are looking for jobs with government agencies. Although there has been a hiring freeze for the past few years, the job market looks much more promising now and an increase in government-oriented jobs is expected throughout the next year and a half.

Reynolds is very optimistic about the turnout and hopes that many students will stop in just to see what is going on. He feels that anyone who attends Government Career Day will be pleasantly surprised and may receive some information which will be helpful in the future.

Black market sales of Macintosh computers punishable by fine

By TERRY BLAND
News Staff

Black market sales of Macintosh computers could result in a $2,000 fine according to Lisa Ralieg, reporter for Micromarket World, a national computer publication.

The reduced student price for the Macintosh — nearly $1,000 less than the retail price — has raised the possibility of black market sales. Someone has already advertised to buy a Macintosh in the South Bend Tribune, said Ralieg.

Rick Farrell, assistant director for purchasing of Notre Dame, would not confirm any suspected black market buying or selling of Macintoshes. "We are committed to regulate the program," says Farrell, "so that the University can continue to purchase the Apple computers. If we don't, we jeopardize the system."

"People cannot sell their computers," said Ric Haley, manager of the campus computer store. "The purchaser is required to sign a legal document called the first refusal clause. This states that the person cannot sell the computer for a period of one year."

Haley added, however, that if after five years the owner wants to sell the computer, he must first check to see if the University wants to purchase the unit. If the University does not want the computer, the owner can sell it to anyone.

"If you do sell the computer to someone," says Haley, "the warranty is no longer good and the computer will not be serviced." A 12-month service contract may be purchased along with the computer.

"If a change of ownership is discovered," says Haley, "both the people who bought and sold the computer are subject to litigation."

The Macintosh computer is currently selling for $1,090, which includes a keyboard, display screen, and a pointer box called "the mouse." The retail cost is about $2,000.

"The Macintosh is very sophisticated," says Haley, "but it's also a simple computer to use."

It is not known if the black market selling is a national trend. "I haven't found it going on anywhere else,"

Invitations have gone out to all Democratic candidates to attend Notre Dame's quadrennial mock convention scheduled for Stepan Center April 4-7. Students will represent all 50 states and American possessions in the speechmaking and voting for a candidate representing the party out of power. Two major political figures have confirmed plans to attend the event, both of them fathers of Notre Dame students. They are Charles Manatt, Democratic party chairman, and Romano Mazzoli, congressman from Kentucky. Mazzoli also will be speaking tomorrow at noon in room 101 of the Law School in a lecture sponsored by The White Center. — The Observer

Dr. Pit-Mann Wong, associate professor of mathematics at Notre Dame, has been selected as an Alfred P. Sloan Research Fellow. He is the fifth Sloan Fellow in the University math department. Wong is one of approximately 20 mathematicians who received the basic research fellowships offered each year. Recipients are selected for their potential to make creative contributions to their field of scientific study, receiving $25,000 to support their research over a two-year period. Wong has been a full-time faculty member at Notre Dame since 1981, and has also held teaching positions at Tulane University and Rice University. — The Observer

New Scholastic editor could mean an attempt at investigative work

When the general board of Scholastic elects a new editor-in-chief later this month, it probably will break a four-year-old tradition. Mostly likely, the new editor will not be a member of the People of Praise, a charismatic group which was founded at Notre Dame.

More important than a switch in philosophy (People of Praise is a conservative group which among other things believes in biblical support for an all-male priesthood), the change could usher in a new era of investigative journalism on campus.

People of Praise, while a genuinely Christian fellowship, is a relatively timid organization which above all does not want to rock Notre Dame's leaky boat — and that's too bad, because Saint Mary's and Notre Dame have more than a few skeletons in their closets.

A fundamental premise has been missing from Scholastic for the past four years: Notre Dame is not a sacrosanct institution of higher learning, but a group of sinful individuals who need a prod to keep them from making too many mistakes.

Scholastic has strived toward making Notre Dame a more knowledgeable campus. Recent years have produced issues dedicated to ROTC on campus, the Catholic character of Notre Dame and the meaning of liberal education.

The issue to be released this week will feature a recap of the football season, an $8,000 effort that few will read and fewer will remember past next week.

The only real investigative piece was one done about The Observer last fall, a good example of what the Scholastic can do. A decent overview, the article nonetheless failed to reveal any new specific information.

But why should Scholastic, a predominately literary and feature magazine, devote itself to muckraking? Is not The Observer supposed to chase down the dirt and air the University's dirty laundry?

Yes and no.

Committed to getting the facts straight and finding out the whole story, The Observer should track down every lead to find out what is going on behind the scenes, whether that scene be tenure, University investments, ROTC on campus, or Department of Defense contracts.

But The Observer also has a problem — it is a daily newspaper which acts as a mouthpiece for every organization on campus. As a daily record of what's going on at Saint Mary's and at Notre Dame, The Observer often gets bogged down in publicizing campus events and

Paul McGinn
Executive Editor

Inside Thursday

covering lectures in which very few persons are interested.

And that's where Scholastic should come in.

As a monthly magazine, Scholastic has the opportunity to put much more time into coverage of tedious and complicated subjects. Rarely do Observer articles exceed the equivalent of two double-spaced typewritten pages.

Scholastic, however, has both the layout (32 pages per month) and financial capabilities (a budget of more than $50,000) to provide readers with well-thought out investigative pieces which could blow the lid off Father Hesburgh's "New Jerusalem."

But beyond the altruistic want to provide the campus with the best possible news coverage, there is an ulterior motive for wanting Scholastic to become an investigative magazine — competition.

Ask any newspaperman in the country about competition between newspapers and he or she will tell you that a newspaper without direct news competition is more lazy than a newspaper competing against another paper.

When a competitor shows up a newspaper by printing a story first, one can bet that paper will be less willing to let a story lie on the back burner the next time.

If The Observer had true competition, a number of campus issues would have been uncovered sooner. The An Tostal financial fiasco, changes in faculty health insurance benefits, University investments and problems with the new telephone system all could have used more extensive and more thorough coverage, the sort of thing that Scholastic has the resources to do.

Many people at Scholastic have said they want to complement The Observer by providing feature stories and overviews which this newspaper is not designed to do.

But it seems that at Notre Dame, the best complement would be to compete directly in the investigative news arena.

The views expressed in the Inside column are the views of the author, and do not necessarily reflect the views of the editorial board or staff.

Futuristic essays win student $2000 in Honeywell contest

By ALAN PARKIN
News Staff

When Allen Gates picked up a copy of Time magazine last winter, he was expecting no more than a brush-up on current events, but an ad in that magazine has helped him become $2,000 richer.

It was, however, more difficult than entering a sweepstakes. Gates had to write three two-page essays for a contest sponsored by the Honeywell Corporation. His essays, along with those of nine other students, were chosen as the best among 750 entries submitted by students from 282 different colleges across the nation.

Gates, a senior in the Arts and Letters-Engineering combined five-year program, decided to enter the contest after seeing an article advertising it in Time magazine. "It looked interesting. Also, I like to write and this looked like a good opportunity to express myself."

The contestants had to choose two out of six topics and write about the technological advances in these areas they feel will be made by the year 2008. The six topics were computers, aerospace, biomedical technology, electronic communications, marine systems, and energy.

In addition, each contestant had to write an essay about the impact this technology will have on society.

Gates' first essay dealt with biomedical technology. In it, Gates states he sees scientists attempting to extract chemical substances, useful in medicine, from plants and animals. They represent a large, untapped resource which science knows about, says Gates.

Also, he believes cellular researchers will determine how to prevent aging and how to regenerate cells which contain the original genetic information. With a new knowledge of genetics, Gates envisions scientists producing sturdier, higher-yielding plants.

Gates also wrote about new diagnostic computers giving better and more accurate diagnoses in neuropathology; increased use of lasers and fiber optics in surgery; and an almost total elimination of blindness.

His second essay deals with computers. By 2008, Gates sees a world with a sixth generation of computers, using artificial intelligence, with the ability to rewrite their own programs to meet the demands of different situations. This means they will virtually control themselves. Also, they will have the ability to utilize logic in their thinking process.

Gates feels, however, that the most important breakthrough will concern a language for computers which will be common to all nations.

Marine move overdue says Dowty

By EDWARD NOLAN
News Staff

The recent United States move to get the Marines out of Lebanon by the middle of March is long overdue, according to Alan Dowty, Notre Dame professor of government and international relations.

Dowty said the Marines "had little influence where they were, ... so as I see it they should go where it is safer."

Last week's decision by President Reagan to move the Marines offshore was met with questions as to his motives. Some believe Reagan wanted to regain the popularity poll points he had lost because of this issue. Dowty said that "in a government like ours decisions are made in response to public opinion, and that's what Reagan did."

The public clearly opposed the

The Observer/Thom Bradley
Alan Dowty

Marines' presence in Lebanon, "while congressional objections were growing. Reagan would have had quite a fight on his hands and the marginal cost of the Marine's weak position did not constitute such a battle."

Dowty said he detected no enthusiasm for a broader involvement of the Marines in Beirut. The involvement "was determined a long while ago, ... when the number of troops to send over was decided and again when the United States decided not to respond to the killing of the Marines." The pullout was called for, Dowty believes, because the Marines were not influencing the situation in Beirut, and Reagan wanted to cut United States losses.

"The whole mission seemed doomed from the beginning because no one understood what was actually going on in Lebanon," Dowty said. "It was wrong for the United States to assume that the Syrians would just up and leave if we asked them to."

Dowty elaborated by saying the Syrians have long-term plans for the captured area, and do not plan on evacuating.

says Ralieg. "but nobody knows for sure." Ralieg said that she talked to a person at Harvard but that there was no confirmation as to whether people were selling on the black market there.

The University of Michigan is branding an upper case M on the Macintosh comuters sold there in an effort to control black market sales.

Farrell believes that people have exaggerated the issue of students buying and selling the new computers on the black market. "We have ethical and moral people in the University," says Farrell. "People do more harm than good trying to make a big issue out of this."

Notre Dame is one of 24 universities making up a consortium with Apple. Other schools selling the new Macintosh at a reduced price are Harvard, Yale, Michigan and Northwestern. The agreement between the schools and Apple is reportedly worth about $24 million dollars.

The Macintosh is a 32 byte CPU "state-of-the-art" computer. A store in the basement of LaFortune is now selling the Macintosh and other Apple computers. Ric Haley, the store manager, says he has already received orders from about 100 students for the new Macintosh computer.

"When the first group of students pick up their computers at the Stepan Chemistry Building," says Haley, "there will be a short seminar in which students will be shown how to run the computer."

Friday, Leon Forrest will be featured. Described as a "graduate of the Ralph Ellison school of black writers", Forrest will read from and discuss his work "A Tree More Ancient Than Eden."

Each author will lead a workshop in the Library Lounge at noon of the day following his or her lecture. All workshops are free and open to the public. In addition, some authors will visit classes where they will take part in discussions.

Saturday night will feature the winners of the student writing competition reading their own works in the library auditorium at 7:30.

Chairman Heather O'Shea and her committee are attempting to involve the campus more closely with this year's event. In past years, receptions following lectures were held off-campus; this year, several of the dorms will host parties.

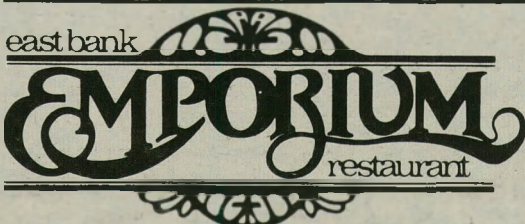

O'Shea suggested the relaxed and unstructured style of the activities may encourage student participation and enthusiasm. "Hopefully, it's going to be more campus-wide, more festive ... We want to make the whole week something special"

GRADUATING ENGINEERS

REACH FOR TOMORROW WITH MARTIN MARIETTA AEROSPACE

Here are three important things every graduating engineer should know about Martin Marietta Aerospace:

1. Our unique organizational structure gives you unusual flexibility in determining your career path and accomplishing your personal goals. Unlike most other aerospace firms, Martin Marietta uses a matrix organizational system that gives you a "technical home" rather than placing you in a single program or product area.
2. Martin Marietta will provide you with a stimulating environment through challenging assignments. We have hundreds of long-term contracts that require imagination and creativity. And we have some of the world's most sophisticated equipment and facilities to assist you in your efforts.
3. And finally, we want to talk to YOU. We will be holding on-campus interviews very soon. Arrange to talk with us and we'll give you more information about Martin Marietta Aerospace and its opportunities. And remember, if you enjoy reaching for the challenges of tomorrow, look into a career with Martin Marietta today.

Martin Marietta Aerospace has many new opportunities awaiting college graduates. Major facilities are located in Denver, Colorado, New Orleans, Louisiana, and at Vandenberg AFB, California.

We don't have to trust the Soviets

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of articles on the logic of a nuclear arms freeze.

Many people think we cannot trust the Soviet Union. It is widely believed that the Soviets, with their ability to suppress free inquiry and to operate in secrecy, could cheat easily on any agreement to limit nuclear weapons.

George Crowell

Guest columnist

The United States, by contrast, is an open book. The Soviets would cheat readily while the United States could not get away with cheating at all. This view, with many variations, is widely held, but it is seriously mistaken.

The United States possesses a remarkable array of equipment which enables it to monitor Soviet nuclear weapon systems with a high degree of confidence. The fact is that the Soviet Union could not cheat in any significant way without being caught.

U.S. satellites constantly cross Soviet territory providing highly detailed photographs of features on the surface below. The September 1983 National Geographic reports that "they can reveal Soviet license plate numbers, and even distinguish uniformed personnel from civilians." The United States has surveillance cameras that are "a million times more sensitive to light than the human eye."

But U.S. surveillance capabilities are not limited to the clear daylight that photography requires. Other satellites carry highly sensitive infrared detectors that can follow the hot exhausts of missiles and aircrafts in flight.

More remarkably, they can penetrate darkness to produce detailed pictures of Soviet activities on the surface or even underground. Satellite-based radar systems penetrate the cloud cover and fog as well as darkness. Complex cameras known as multispectral scanners have the capacity to reveal even camouflaged objects.

In addition to its satellites the United States has radar and radio receiving equipment located on the ground, on aircraft, on ships at sea and even in submarines. They constantly monitor Soviet military actions and communications. These are recorded, analyzed, and if necessary, decoded by teams of experts. The most advanced and powerful computer systems assist in each of these tasks.

With this astounding array of detection equipment, each type supplementing and supporting the others, the United States misses very little that the Soviet Union does with its nuclear weapons. Not every move can be detected. But that is not necessary. The principle of "adequate verification" was accepted by Nixon and Brezhnev in 1973.

Such a principle makes sense because, as has long been recognized, each new nuclear weapon offers at least ten opportunities for detection. Each weapon has three components: a warhead, a launcher (such as a submarine or silo), and a delivery vehicle (such as a missile).

Each component goes through three stages: testing, production and deployment. Three check points for each of the three components gives nine opportunities for detection. Count as one the mining and processing of nuclear weapons grade material, and there are 10. Detection at only one point is enough for adequate verification.

Existing nuclear arms control treaties have created difficulties for verification because they have allowed limited numbers of some weapons to be deployed, but not others. A freeze, allowing no new weapons, would greatly simplify verification.

It is far easier to tell from satellite photos that a weapons factory is completely shut down than it is to distinguish whether its activity is permissible or not.

Former U.S. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown said, "Our national technical means enable us to monitor all key aspects of Soviet strategic programs... despite the closed nature of Soviet society."

If a freeze is to be workable, it is not only our side's distrust of the Soviet Union which must be recognized, but also Soviet distrust of the United States. Since the U.S.S.R. has its own "national technical means" for detecting the nuclear weapon systems, this condition appears to be adequately met.

George Crowell is an associate professor in Religious Studies at the University of Windsor (Ontario). Tomorrow: Deterrence is not Defense.

Looking at war from an arm's length

Recently, in The Observer and other publications, writers have paraded their ideological views of how necessary arms control treaties are to achieving world peace. While most of these essays have been well written, almost all have been too idealistic.

Ed Konrady

Guest columnist

To create a practical foreign arms policy, one must accept the basic inconsistencies of the United States and the USSR, and the reasons behind starting wars.

The Soviet Union is an aggressive nation that truly believes it will rule the world someday. The United States is a defensive nation that wishes to keep a peaceable status quo. As ultra-patriotic or self-serving as this may seem, current economics and recent history defend the point.

Many of the essays seem to imply that the existence of arms cause wars, rather than political tensions. War results from unsolved political dissensions. Nations enter wars only when they think they can profit from them. There always will be conflicts between nations. The key to avoiding war is not to avoid all conflicts, but to take the profit out of war.

Since the instigator of an overwhelming number of skirmishes is the Soviet Union, the United States must find a way to take the profit out of the Soviet's expansionist program.

The Soviet Union's strength is its armed forces. The entire communist bloc economy is a shambles, however, and their technology is still behind Western countries. Because the Soviet Union's weaknesses are the United States' relative strengths, we can and should use the carrot-and-stick principle, a form of detente with deterrence.

A good example of this will be coming soon. When and if the Soviets perceive that Reagan has a fairly good chance of being re-elected, they will ask for a summit. A president in the middle of a campaign is easier to deal with than after receiving a new mandate from the public.

When the Soviets ask for the summit, there must be a deal between our acceptance and the Russian influence in Central America. For example, the first Soviet-American summit in Moscow in 1972 occurred only after the Berlin settlement. This accomplished three things. First, the United States held a favorable bargaining edge over the USSR during the settlement. Second, negotiators got a feeling of how much they could push either side. Third, it allowed the summit to be successful before it even started.

An upcoming danger in the coming months will be Reagan's possible tendency to form a treaty no matter what, in order to combat the democratic blasts at not working at achieving diplomatic peace. A treaty that may or may not be favorable to the United States, but is unenforceable, is useless.

It is obvious that the USSR will never allow on-site inspections, and because of the advances of military technology and the use of multiple warheads, we cannot inspect by air surveillance. Therefore, the United States must come up with a treaty that would be in the best interests of the Soviets to keep.

By combining economic benefits with arms control agreements, and not allowing our superior technology to get away from us, the United States can form an effective arms control agreement. But any agreement must include regular summits, because with every summit we have, communication is strengthened and the Soviets will stay under control in order to avoid losing "the carrot."

P. O. Box Q

Endorsements?

Dear Editor,

Please excuse my ignorance, my journalism is not really what it should be, but allow me to ask one simple question: Is it fair for The Observer to endorse one candidate over another in the student body presidential race?

This may seem like a silly question to anyone who has read page seven of the Feb. 13 issue. Obviously our independent newspaper feels obliged to take a stance and support a candidate, (especially if the ticket favors allowing this publication to remain "independent") but why?

The Observer is not a big city news publication. Its sales do not depend upon the quality of its news reporting and editorial opinions. Accordingly, the circulation numbers of the paper here on campus do not reflect true patrons, thanks to that silly "collection agency" under the dome.

Due to the unique financing of your publication, I do not think The Observer should take such stands in student politics. A candidate has no control over patronizing the paper, the same paper that may provide bad press for this ticket or excessive praise to its opponents.

him to improve."

"We had some easier competition this year on the club level, and it helped to make our record look better," says the right defenseman regarding this year's schedule. "But we did play some good teams like St. Thomas and Michigan-Dearborn. We could have played some better teams and still have a good record."

There's a good possibility that Notre Dame will be playing some good teams next year with a probable move back up to Division I status. "I was hoping we would come back to Division I," says Thebeau. "When next year comes around we'll be ready to play — no matter who we play."

It is this optimistic attitude that has helped Bob Thebeau find several good friends at Notre Dame. "Most of my closest friends are on the hockey team," he says. "I spend so much time with them, and we do so much together. I have a lot of good friends here at Notre Dame."

Thebeau has big plans for his future after graduation. "I plan to play overseas — maybe in Sweden," he says.

Before looking too far into the future, however, Thebeau must first look to next year as an important member of the Notre Dame hockey team. "We're losing a lot of good seniors," he says. "We'll need good freshmen to fill in. We'll probably struggle a little bit at first, but we should do fairly well because everyone's got a good attitude about it."

If There's Leadership In You OCS Can Bring It Out

OCS (Army Officer Candidate School) is a 14 week challenge to all that's in you...the mental, the physical,
the spirit that are part of what makes a leader.

If OCS were easy, it couldn't do the job. It wouldn't bring out the leader in you, or help you discover what you have inside.

But when you finish and graduate as a commissioned officer in the Army, you'll know. You'll know you have what it takes to lead. And you'll be trim, alert, fit, and ready to exercise the leadership skills that civilian companies look for.

If you're about to get your degree and you want to develop your leadership ability, take the OCS Challenge.
Call your local Army Recruiter, and ask about OCS.

Loss

the game, and it was out of reach for the Irish.

High-point man for the Panthers was Billy Culbertson, who scored 18 points. Clyde Vaughan had 16 points and eight rebounds, while Keith Armstrong scored 13.

High for the Irish was Sluby, with 18 points. Price was second with 13 points, all of which came in the second half. Price missed his first shot of the second half, and then went on to hit six in a row before missing again.

Two Irish players set personal records for their performances in the game. In 31 minutes, Jim Dolan tied his personal-best 13 rebounds, and Joe Howard dished off a career-high 12 assists in just 32 minutes of play.

Ironically, Notre Dame was impressive in both shooting percentage (55 percent for the game, 66 percent in the second half) and rebounding (a 32-21 margin) in the disappointing loss.

The statistic which may explain the Irish defeat is the number of turnovers. Notre Dame gave the ball away 20 times in the game, while Pitt lost possession only 11 times.

"The turnovers killed us," Phelps said. "You can't play against a team like this and have 20 turnovers.
That's the story of the game: the turnovers."

Panther coach Roy Chipman added his appraisal of the game.

"I thought that the whole key to the game was defense early in the game," Chipman said. "We played exceptionally well and made it very difficult for them to get the shots they wanted."

"I think because of the defense and some easy baskets as a result of turnovers, we sort of took the crowd out of the game," the Pitt coach said.
"Everybody knows that is a big factor out here."

The Irish, now 15-9, will be in Provo, Utah on Saturday to take on Brigham Young. Phelps says his team has a lot of "adjusting" to do before that game.

"All we've done all year long is make adjustments," he says.

The first major adjustment, according to Phelps, came when the team was 3-3 at the start of the season. At that point, Dan Duff got the team in what Phelps calls "a good groove."

Now, the Irish are playing without the benefit of starting guard JoJo
Buchanan and starting center Tim Kempton. Both are out for the remainder of the season with injuries. In addition, starter Jim Dolan is being plagued by a foot problem, which is causing him a lot of trouble.

Hopefully, Notre Dame will be able to overcome these new hardships and perhaps earn an invitation to the NIT.

Men's, women's swimming

Irish set for championship meet

By MARY SIEGER
Sports Writer

If you thought you had to wait until the Olympic games opened in Los Angeles this summer for exciting swimming competition, guess again. The Notre Dame men's and women's swim teams will travel to the University of Evansville to participate in important conference championship meets this weekend.

Starting this afternoon, the men's squad will compete in the Midwestern City Conference Championship Meet. The meet is a new addition to the Irish schedule and the team wants to claim the first place trophy its first year in the meet. "Some of our swimmers are gearing up for this meet and we want to win it," said Irish co-captain Dan Flynn.

During the three day meet, the Irish will swim against squads from Butler University, the University of Evansville, Xavier University, Loyola (Chicago), and Saint Louis University. "It's going to be a long and drawn out meet and I've never participated in anything like it," said Flynn.

Earlier this season, the Irish defeated Xavier University in the Notre Dame Relays and the team expects a repeat performance against Xavier this weekend. But since this is Notre Dame's first year in the meet, the Irish have no reading on the other teams.

"We don't know what to expect from this meet," said Flynn. "But we know it's not as strong as the Midwest Invitational and the bulk of the team is shooting for the Midwest."

The Irish have compiled an impressive 7-3 dual meet record and several swimmers are tapering their times to prepare for this weekend. The Irish expect to see many of their veteran swimmers achieve personal bests for the season.

"This meet will be different for different people," said senior co-captain Al Harding. "We expect to get experience and a strong showing from those swimmers who are tapering."

"This meet will give us a chance to swim events we didn't swim in all year," said Flynn. "We do want to do well, but we're pointing toward the Midwest Invitational."

While the men's team is swimming in the Midwestern City Conference Championship, the women's squad will be competing in the Northstar Conference Championship Meet. The women's meet will be held simultaneously during the men's meet, and like the men's team, this is the first year the Notre Dame women's team has participated in the meet.

"We're shooting to win and do our best," said Notre Dame co-captain Raili Tikka. "We'd love to say we won the Conference Championship in our first year."

The Irish women will face teams from Butler University, the University of Evansville, Xavier University, Valparaiso University and Saint Louis University. Although the Irish have never met these squads before in competition, the team is confident it will do well. "I'm sure we'll be competitive, or else we wouldn't be in it," explained Tikka.

Last week, the Irish completed the regular season with a 6-5 record after defeating Depauw, 73-55. Most swimmers earned their best times of the season which should give them confidence going into this weekend's meet. "If the progress continues, the team can enjoy more success at the Conference," said Notre Dame head coach Dennis Stark.

Irish perform poorly, lose game and NCAA Tournament hopes

By PHIL WOLF
Sports Writer

Sometimes it is amazing how quickly dreams can die.

Just last week, there was still talk of the Notre Dame men's basketball team getting an invitation to the NCAA tournament. Following back-to-back losses at the ACC, however, Notre Dame's hopes of receiving a tournament bid are certainly dimmed.

Irish coach Digger Phelps said last night after Notre Dame's sloppy 67-59 loss to the Pittsburgh Panthers that an NCAA bid is out of the question.

"It's obvious we're not going to the NCAA," Phelps said. "I think we still just have to play with what we have left, and if we get a chance to go to the NIT, we'll go."

The Irish will have to improve considerably on last night's performance if they hope to see any post-season play.

Notre Dame fell behind immediately to the Panthers when Billy Culbertson hit his first two shots of the game to put Pitt up by four just 45 seconds into the contest.

Joe Howard then dished off two assists in the next two minutes to Ken Barlow, who laid in four points of his own to tie the game.

The contest remained close until about the midpoint of the first half, as the teams traded baskets until 10:42, when Tom Sluby put the Irish up, 12-10. That two-point lead turned out to be the last for Notre Dame, as Pitt exploded for nine unanswered points to lead, 19-12, with 5:43 left in the half.

The Irish kept themselves out of the contest for most of the first period by committing 14 turnovers and taking only 19 shots. The Panthers capitalized on the mistakes to take a 29-18 lead into the locker-room at halftime.

"We put ourselves in a hole in the first half with 14 turnovers," Phelps said afterward. "I just think we were over-anxious in some situations. That put us in a hole, and we never really recovered from it."

The Panthers continued to dominate the Irish in the second half and built up their largest lead of the game, 40-24, with 13:50 remaining in the contest.

The Irish then seemed to come to life for a few minutes. Joseph Price came off the bench to help the team run off seven consecutive points and come back within nine.

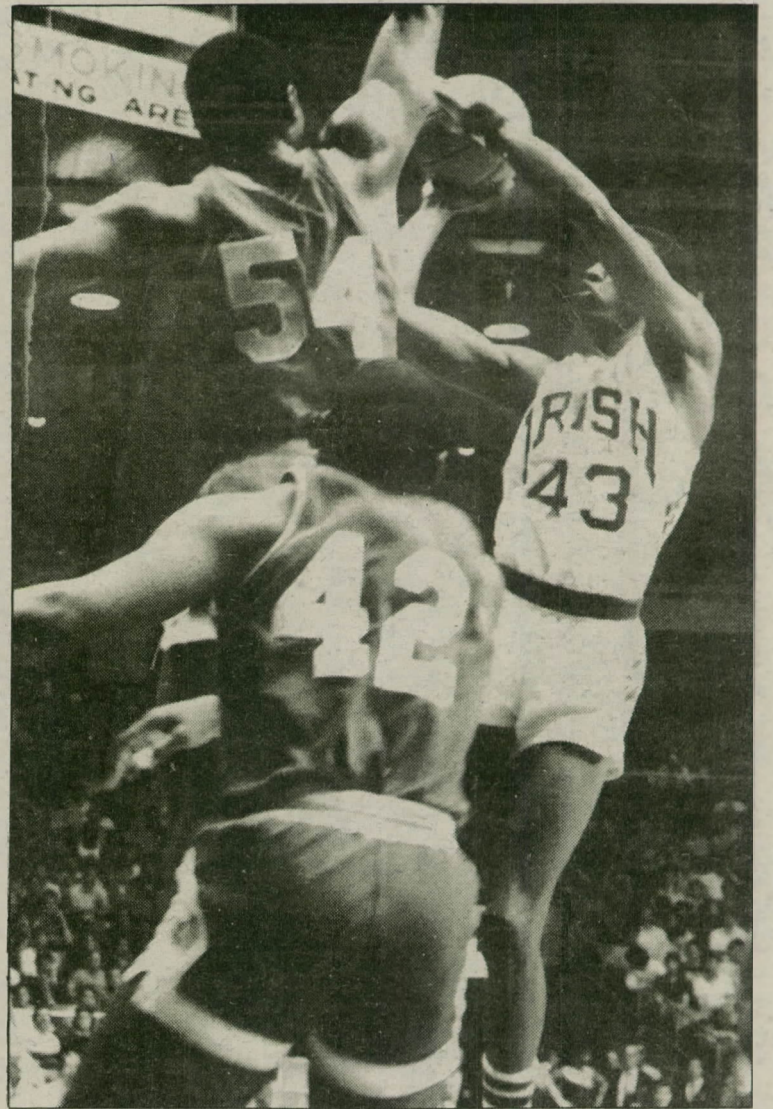

Ken Barlow actually started the scoring spurt with a three-point play at 12:38. Barlow then grabbed a rebound at the other end of the court, and sent it back the other way with Joe Howard. Howard passed off to Price, who bagged a perfect 20-foot jumper from the right side.

Following a Pitt turnover and a TV timeout, the Notre Dame student section came to its feet for the first time all night to support the Irish cause. Price gladly answered the crowd with a beautiful 20-foot fall-away jumper, this time from the left side of the key.

The Irish could not gain control of the game, however, and the students soon seemed dead on their feet.

Notre Dame began to chip away at the Panthers' lead again, and eventually came within six points of the victors. By that time, though, there were only five seconds remaining in Even Cecil Rucker couldn't help Notre Dame last night as the turnover-plagued Irish fell to the Panthers of Pittsburgh, 67-59. Head coach Digger Phelps says the loss obviously puts the team out of contention for a NCAA tournament bid. Phil Wolf's story at left.

Digger signs another recruit for '84-'85

Digger Phelps has added another player to his bounty for next year. Yesterday it was announced that Jeff Peters, a 6-4, 180-pound guard out of Whitko High School in South Whitley, Ind., intends to enroll at Notre Dame next fall.

Peters is currently the fourth-ranked scorer in Indiana high school basketball this season, holding down a 28.7 average. In addition to his scoring prowess, the left-handed shooter also contributes an average of nine rebounds, six assists, and four steals per game to the Whitko cause.

A guard who can play either the point or shooting spot, Peters has 1,030 points in his career at Whitko, making him that school's first 1,000-point scorer. He has shot 61 percent from the field and 79 percent from the line so far this season.

"Jeff Peters is a very good outside shooter," assesses Phelps. "That's what caught our eye. He's got a good head for the game, has good court sense, and handles the ball well. He's got the potential to be a very competitive player at the college level."

"He's unquestionably the best all-around player I've ever coached," said Whitko coach Bill Patrick about Peters.

Peters had also given consideration to Purdue, Wisconsin, Northwestern, Michigan State, and Cincinnati, before deciding on Notre Dame.

He is the fifth player to say he will play for the Irish next year. Assuming all other scholarship players return next year, with Peters, Notre Dame will have the NCAA limit of 15 players on scholarship in the 1984-85 season.

Hard-working sophomore

Thebeau adds enthusiasm to Irish

By SCOTT BICHA

Upon meeting Bob Thebeau one might tend to believe he is a shy individual, but the members of the Notre Dame hockey team would disagree. The right defenseman's enthusiastic attitude radiates both on and off the ice.

"He's a character to a certain degree," says head coach Lefty Smith. "He keeps the guys loose."

Thebeau describes himself as a motivator for the team. "I try to get the team up for games," he says.

And getting up for the games is exactly what the Irish have done this year, losing only one of their 23 contests this season.

One of the reasons the team has done so well this year is due in part to the efforts of Bob Thebeau. "He has the ability to get up and rush the puck," says Smith. "He has a good shot and gets it in the net."

The 5-11 sophomore marketing major started his successful hockey career when he was just five years old. "I started skating when I was four years old," says Thebeau. "I played mostly on travelling teams until I started high school."

Thebeau joined the St. Peter-Marion High School hockey team in the fall of 1978. Bob had an impressive three years in high school, culminating in an even more impressive senior year.

"I was named captain of my team," says Thebeau, "and I received an award for being the team's most valuable defenseman." He also led St. Peter-Marion, a school in Worcester, Massachusetts, to the Central Massachusetts state title his senior year.

"High school hockey is strong in Massachusetts," says Thebeau. "We're just about like Minnesota when it comes to hockey."

Thebeau was highly recruited by Notre Dame and several other colleges. He was able to narrow his choices down to Yale and Notre Dame. "I chose Notre Dame because I wanted to see how they played in a different league," he says. "The CCHA (Central Collegiate Hockey Association) is supposed to be a good league."

Thebeau also contends he was struck by the overwhelming vitality of Notre Dame. "I was on a recruiting trip, and I saw a Depaul-Notre Dame game. The spirit just hit me," says Thebeau.

Thebeau has accumulated a superb college record at Notre Dame. He collected 19 points as a freshman and 39 points in his second year with 15 goals and 24 assists. "I'm pretty coolheaded on the ice," says Thebeau. "I don't try to look for scraps." Smith considers Thebeau an "offensive defenseman," which is a good indication of his drive and forcefulness on the ice.

"He (Thebeau) is a hard worker," says Smith. "He has age and experience. His natural maturation and the level of competition has helped Irish right defenseman Bob Thebeau chose Notre Dame over other schools because of the "vitality" and "spirit" of the student body. The sophomore now shares that winning attitude on and off the ice, helping the Irish hockey team to a 21-1-1 record this season. Scott Bicha's profile at right.

Frustrating campaign

U.S. hockey team ties Finland

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — Disaster has dogged the American hockey players ever since they began competing here. Coach Lou Vairo hopes it will stay behind when they leave.

After Finland scored with 21 seconds left yesterday to earn a 3-3 tie with the United States, Vairo said that once the Winter Olympics end he's "going to head home and hope the plane makes it."

Four years ago the U.S. beat Finland, 4-2, to win the Olympic hockey gold medal in Lake Placid, N.Y.

That took its toll on the team that played Finland yesterday.

"It's been difficult to put aside what everyone expected of us," U.S. player Bob Brooke said. "We were intent to do it, but it proved to be really, really difficult. There was the buildup for six months (of exhibition games) and what the 1980 team did. It all added up."

From the opening 4-2 upset loss to Canada to yesterday's tie 1-1, clinched the worst U.S. hockey finish in Olympic history — no better than seventh place — little has gone right for the Americans this time around. They rarely played well over long stretches or enjoyed good luck. Frustration built and they vented it in costly penalties.

"We've taken just as much as we've dished out," said Brooke, whose goal with 38 seconds left made the score 3-2. "What hurt us was the retaliation penalties. I attribute it to the frustration..."

The last frustration against Finland came 17 seconds after Brooke had scored. The Finns replaced goalie Kari Takko with an extra skater at 19:31 and eight seconds later Anssi Melametsa beat U.S. netminder Marc Behrend, who was screened on the 30-foot wrist shot.
