Dorm loft policy changes debated at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's

By JOSEPH MURPHY
News Staff

The issue of lofts in dorms has awakened an outburst of attention at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

At Notre Dame, Dean Roemer, in a letter to The Observer, said "appropriate policy changes are being considered" after an incident last fall at Michigan State University. A student died after a fall from an elevated bed, commonly called a loft.

Roemer also said, "Construction on dorm rooms may be banned at the University of Illinois after a student was injured falling out of a dorm loft. The student has since filed his intent to sue the university. Since the University of Illinois cannot guarantee the safety of all student-built, elevated beds, it may have to ban construction to limit its liability."

Ferman Badgley, police commander at Michigan State University, said, "There has been no lawsuit. Michigan State University is in no way liable in any way I can see. The student was intoxicated. He was in his room alone. Apparently, he fell and fractured his skull. The loft was no higher than a bunk bed, but the student died."

Dr. Gary North, director of housing at the University of Illinois, said, "We did have a student fall out of a loft. The loft was constructed without our authority by another student's father. A young woman visiting the room fell out of the loft and cut her leg on an exposed bolt. She tore thigh ligaments and had severe scarring. The young woman has since filed an intent to sue against the university.

"As we replace furniture, we are restricting lofts."

Both North and Badgley said these were the first such incidents in the history of their universities. Badgley said, "Michigan State University has the largest student housing in the country." MSU has 17,000 students living on campus.

Donald Gerhing, co-editor of The College Student & The Courts, explained loft liability. "Once a university allows a student to build a loft, they create a duty for themselves. It's a question of risk management." Gerhing said the low number of incidents makes it a risk a university can accept. He cited research by a University of St. Louis professor which indicated lofts create a positive dorm environment.

When contacted, Roemer said, "Student Affairs intends to discuss (lofts) next week. I don't know what the University policy is going to be.

French truce observers targets of sniper attack

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Snipers fired at French truce observers in Beirut on Wednesday and warring Christian and Moslem militiamen traded artillery barrages that killed six people, state television reported.

None of the white-helmeted French observers was injured in the first attack on them since they took positions at the only remaining crossing between Christian east and Moslem west Beirut 20 days ago, the television said.

The station said a patrol of the observers on duty near the crossing came under automatic rifle fire at around midday. The report did not say whether the attack came from the Moslem or the Christian side of the Lebanese capital.

There was no comment on the report from Lebanese police or the four-party security committee, under which the French marine commandos have been serving as truce observers.

The committee, which includes representatives of the Lebanese army as well as Christian, Druse and Shiite Moslem militias, was meeting at a horse racetrack at the time of the attack in an attempt to stop the shelling of residential neighborhoods.

Police said six people were killed, including two soldiers, and 45 wounded by overnight shelling. It did not issue new casualty figures for the fighting during the rest of the day.

Christian-controlled radio stations said artillery salvos crashed into east Beirut.

Student officials call new final exam policy an unnecessary burden

By TOM MOWLE
Assistant News Editor

Student government officials expressed disappointment over the elimination of senior exemptions and other amendments to the Academic Code passed at this week's meeting of the Academic Council.

"We didn't think our proposal on senior exemptions would go through," said Student Body President Rob Bertino. Student Government Information Director Tom Knee said, "Mike Hayes (acting academic commissioner for student government) raised some good points, but it seemed the members of the Academic Council were pretty narrow-minded about it."

According to Knee, Hayes, who represented the Senate to the Academic Council, noted if senior exemptions are taken away, there will be a lower level of achievement among seniors because they will no longer strive for a B, but will settle for a lower grade.

The past policy, which is still in effect for this semester, has been: "At the discretion of the instructor, graduating seniors who so request may be exempted from taking the final examination in an undergraduate course if their work in that course up to the time of the final examination has earned a grade of at least a B."

Professor Kenneth Sayre, a member of the Committee on Final Examinations said the exemptions policy had "no support whatsoever" among committee members.

Dean Christy, senior class president, said "I don't agree with the exemption policy. It's not going to help the University academically. Second semester seniors don't pay a whole lot of attention to final exams — they're more worried about jobs, graduating, saying good-bye to friends. All it's going to be is an added burden that they won't take seriously."

"We can make an appeal to the Academic Council," he added, "to find out why they made the change and maybe work out a compromise. The intention is for a better Notre Dame academically, but the question is how this will add to that."

Professor Mario Borelli, chairman of the Faculty Senate, said no review of the council's decisions would be possible. Bertino agreed any attempt to appeal would be worthless. He did say seniors have a lot of things to plan in their second semester, such as arranging jobs and housing in their new workplaces.

Sayre commented this change could "make it a lot easier to make exceptions because the chairperson knows the particular needs of the course."

Borelli said there was no disagreement on this point in the Senate "in light of abuses such as giving the final on the last day or not at all. Modifications are possible if approved by the chairman. We wanted to let instructors know variations were possible. They could give a take-home, for example."

A clarification to the policy on failures was also made by the Council. The previous policy stated, "Unexcused absences from the semester examination will result in the student's receiving a grade of F." Borelli said the Faculty Senate pointed out this ambiguity, but made no recommendation.

Sayre said the committee read the original intent of this as being failure in the course, not just on the exam. "Questions were raised," he said, "as to the justice of this: if the final should be so important as to result in failure in itself. The general sentiment was that the value of the final depends on the weight given to it. Policy ought not to dictate one general weight."

The committee reaffirmed the University's policy that final examinations must be given as scheduled. The procedure for making a change from this was amended to require the approval of the department chairperson and review by the dean. Previously, the dean's approval was required.

Weights for final exams were changed from the old policy of zero to one-third of the grade to a range of one-fifth to one-half of the grade. Knee said the Senate had favored leaving the old policy in effect, but would have accepted an upper limit of 40 percent.

Institute debates democratic ideals

By MARY CAROL CREADON

"Economic Development and Democracy" is the topic of the Helen Kellogg Institute's international conference April 15-17 at Notre Dame's Center for Continuing Education. The conference draws its inspiration from the work of, and is intended to be a tribute to, Albert O. Hirschman on the occasion of his retirement from the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton University. The 25 invited participants, among the most distinguished North American, European, and Latin American specialists on the subject, will present the range of discussions begun by Hirschman.

Funded by a gift to Notre Dame by the Helen Kellogg Foundation, the Institute is designed to advance understanding of Third World development, especially in Latin America, through research, education, and outreach activities. In its study of Latin America, the Institute is focusing on democracy, development, and the human values, personal and social, linking the two.

The conference will conduct four sessions. On Monday, April 16, Session 1, 9 a.m.-12:30 p.m., is titled "Strategies for Economic Development." Session 2, 2:30-6 p.m., deals with "Trespassing: Economy, Politics, and Society." Tuesday, April 17 will open with "Values and Perceptions in Social Change" in Session 3, 9 a.m.-12:30 p.m. The final session, 2:30-6 p.m., will look into "Possibility of Democracy: Exit, Voice, and Loyalty." All sessions are open to Notre Dame faculty and students.

An Indiana Army lieutenant who is attempting a solo ascent of Mount McKinley is at the 14,500-foot level and appears to be in good shape, a glacier pilot said yesterday. Jim Okonek of K2 Aviation said he spotted 31-year-old Bruce Shearer of Indianapolis early Wednesday, and the climber stamped out a message in the snow indicating he was OK. Bad weather had obscured the 20,320-foot peak for nearly a week. Shearer left base camp on March 24, and said he was taking enough supplies to last 30 days without getting into emergency rations. — AP

Deficits won't give a victory to Democrats in November

Sky-high budget deficits will be the rallying cry for Democrats, if the party's platform committee listens to Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan. On Monday, the senator from New York called the federal deficit "the social issue of this coming election."

Social issue or not, the deficit will continue to be lambasted by more and more Democratic candidates as November nears. But the latest serving of party political rhetoric smells quite a bit like last month's fare: all fluff and no substance.

Charles Manatt, chairman of the Democratic Party, gave an indication of how little substance the issue will receive with his statements at the Mock Convention last week. Explaining the perils on the horizon, Manatt compared government deficits to those in personal finance, as if the U.S. had a checking account and a debt limit at the local bank.

Such comparisons are ludicrous and only serve to deceive voters. Even the connotation of the word "deficit" suggests imminent insolvency, bankruptcy, foreclosure or other fiscal disaster. In truth, the government faces no danger of a cutoff of funds. The Treasury Department may sell as many bonds as it needs to finance expenditures, though each issue increases the amount of the money needed to cover interest.

Deficits are not necessarily bad, and indeed if the government were to balance the budget tomorrow, the reduction in spending (or increase in taxes) would be so disastrous as to cause a major depression. It should be remembered that the economy is just coming out of a recession; hence, tax receipts are down and government unemployment payments are still high. The impact of recession is great; it may have been responsible for one-half of the fiscal 1983 deficit.

In addition, state and local governments are running a combined surplus of approximately $50 billion. Therefore, the net deficit is substantially lower. And no matter what you read, the connection between interest rates and the budget deficit has not been empirically proven. Some economists even argue there is no connection at all. As a graduate student in economics always told his class, "All we can say is that we can't really say."

But in politics, one never says, "We can't say." The Democrats have to do the talking, because all of their campaign issues are slipping away with the economic recovery.

"The Democrats are looking for an issue, and they will try to make as much hay as they can from it," says Robert Schmuhl, professor of American studies. But Schmuhl is doubtful the deficit issue will work. "I'm not sure it will have much of an impact on the voters. The president and his supporters will say they are not responsible for starting it, that it's really an outgrowth of policies that the Democrats created."

Mark Worschheh

Managing Editor

Likewise, he believes Republican Party leaders are not worried by the prospect of a deficit issue. "Supporters of Ronald Reagan — Senator Paul Laxalt is a prime example — say the deficit is so large and the implications of the deficit are so complex that the deficit as an issue doesn't have much meaning."

Recent history seems to be on Laxalt's side. General themes, such as "honesty" in 1976 and "less government" in 1980, elected Presidents Carter and Reagan. Other than Gary Hart's "New Ideas," the Democrats are still searching for that theme that will give them the keys to the White House in November. Says Schmuhl, the key is substance. "It has to be a coherent and developed program that is an alternative to the Reagan administration." The deficit issue will not provide the Democrats with the substance they need to win the presidency. Their rhetoric, aside from being misleading, will not move the masses to the polling booths. Sen. Moynihan should drop the idea of putting budget deficits at the fore of the fight. If the Democrats really want to defeat Reagan, the leaders should concentrate on the party's strengths and the Republican's weaknesses.

A view of the Shuttle Challenger from the elbow camera, on the Canadian Arm, as mission specialist

James van Hoften checks out the maneuvering unit.

Challenger astronauts successful in mission

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The shuttle astronauts prepared yesterday to come home with an empty cargo bay — a symbol of their twin successes in delivering one satellite to space and repairing another.

Solar Max, the first satellite to undergo surgery in space, was speeding along at 17,400 mph in an orbit all its own, apparently fully recovered. Challenger released it at 4:26 a.m. EST, then flew nearby for eight hours, ready to grab it back just in case.

"As things look now, the repairs were successful," said Jim Elliott, a spokesman at Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland, which is controlling the sun-study satellite and reading its data.

Landing at Kennedy Space Center was set for 7:09 a.m. EST today, on the shuttle's 106th revolution of Earth since launch a week ago yesterday.

There was a second opportunity for landing in Florida after one more orbit, at 8:47 a.m., in case of morning ground fog. That possibility was a concern, but Maj. Donald Greene, an Air Force weather officer, said "It looks like it's going to be really nice." A shift in the wind canceled an earlier forecast of unacceptable clouds.

Before they went to bed, the astronauts were given a report that summed up conditions in one phrase: "significant problems, none."

"Satellite servicing is something that's here to stay," said Commander Robert L. Crippen, who will guide Challenger down to its second landing here. "We pick up, repair and deliver."

The delivery part came Saturday, when Terry Hart guided the shuttle arm to a bus-size satellite in the cargo bay and put it overboard for retrieval in 10 months by another crew. The 11-ton cylinder holds 57 experiments that will be exposed to micrometeorites, cosmic rays and atomic oxygen in studies vital to building space stations.

The first attempt at pickup was the flight's big disappointment. Space walker George Nelson was unable to attach a docking device to Solar Max to steady it for retrieval by the shuttle arm. Nelson's efforts started the satellite tumbling wildly, but the Goddard engineers were able to stabilize it.

On Tuesday, Crippen guided Challenger close to Solar Max and Hart, with one stab of the arm, locked on and took it into the cargo bay.

Repair day was Wednesday. Nelson and James van Hoften replaced the system that accurately points the satellite's instruments at the sun. They also swapped an electronics unit.

After more than three years of circling the globe as a barely functioning satellite, Solar Max was then ready to provide valuable information on giant solar flares that pour torrents of radiation into interplanetary space. What scientists learn from the satellite may help them better understand the sun and how it affects weather, radio communications and other conditions on Earth.

"We are confident we will have full use of six instruments on board and we're hopeful we'll have some science from the seventh instrument," said Elliott. That instrument was not working when the fuses blew on the pointing unit in 1981.

Missionaries train at Notre Dame; prepare to work with African poor

By STEPHEN REIDY
News Staff

Twenty-five missionaries preparing to serve in Africa will descend upon Notre Dame June 4 for a four-week intensive training program. The 25 include priests, nuns, brothers, and lay people.

The African Institute, as the program is called, "was started in 1969 to prepare people who were going to work in African churches. Before that," says government Professor Dr. Peter Walshe, organizer of the 15th Institute, "people had no idea of the African context" in which they would be working.

The Institute is only for those going to sub-Saharan Africa. It will teach the participants about the history of lower and tropical Africa, the traditional native societies, and the current economic and political problems. Notre Dame faculty will teach, supplemented by African bishops, missionaries and theologians.

There are now some 400 alumni of the Institute dotted all over southern and tropical Africa, according to Walshe. The Institute has gained a national reputation for its success in training missionaries. "In effect," says Walshe, "we've become a training ground for many missionary groups in the United States. Walshe cited the Marists and the Franciscans as two of the larger groups. The Institute is ecumenical, he added, naming the Mennonites as "one of the Protestant groups we work closely with."

Although the Institute enjoys a good reputation, "there are still some things we would like to do,"

says Walshe. "We're always short of money. We would like to increase the number of scholarships we can offer to Africans." These scholarships would enable them to teach in the U.S., sharing their expertise, as well as to study their own society.

Borelli explained the change by saying "The Faculty Senate felt that since the final exam is a major part of the grade, it should not count for zero or five percent. A lower boundary was needed. The upper limit was intended for upper level courses because of the similarity between them and graduate level courses where the final may be the main component of the grade."

Sayre said the elimination of a sentence specifying that "regardless of the grade on the final examination, an instructor may fail the student if the student has not completed all the course work" should not be interpreted as taking away that right. "The sense of the council," he said, "was that instructors obviously have that authority and it's unnecessary to say it."

He said the other change, which specified there would be only one study day before exams, was made for practical reasons. The addition of a second study day, he said, "although desirable, was not sufficiently in demand."

The Committee on Final Examinations was called by the Provost's Office. This portion of the Academic Code has not been changed in over 10 years, according to that office.

Reagan speaks with autoworkers on the recovering U.S. economy

Associated Press

CLAYCOMO, Mo. — President Reagan told autoworkers at an assembly plant yesterday that the economy has recovered and people have gone back to work because "all of us ... have hung tough" and ignored those who said it couldn't be done.

In remarks after having lunch in the hourly workers' cafeteria and touring the assembly line of a modernized Ford plant in Clay County outside Kansas City, the president said his effort to "rebuild America from the bottom up" hasn't been easy.

"Times have been rough, and yes, the recession was much deeper and longer than almost anyone predicted," Reagan said. "But these problems had been building up for 20 years, and we were determined to find a real economic cure, not just resort — as they had so often in the past — to another political quick fix."

And in a jab at his political opponents who accuse him of a lack of compassion, he said, "There's no compassion in snake oil cures."

"All of us, working together and ignoring the gloomcriers and pundits who said it couldn't be done, have hung tough," Reagan added. "Today, as we see the auto industry and the economy humming with activity, aren't we glad we did?"

While Reagan visited the Claycomo plant, which the White House had selected as a model of resurgence in the auto industry, the leading Democratic contender for his job, Walter F. Mondale, toured a Chrysler plant across the state in Fenton. Reagan stopped at that plant a year ago to view the evidence of a recovery that was just then getting under way.

Many of the several hundred workers gathered at the end of the assembly line to hear Reagan's speech wore blue and white "Mondale" baseball caps that had been handed out earlier at the plant gate by the United Auto Workers.

Mondale's trip was strictly political — the Missouri Democratic caucuses are a week away — whereas the president's trip to Claycomo and Dallas, where he is to visit a housing site today, was billed by the White House as an official visit and therefore paid for by taxpayers and not the Reagan re-election committee.

But it would be difficult to distinguish Reagan's remarks to the autoworkers from those he delivers at political events such as campaign fund-raisers. The message almost always is: the economy is on the mend, and the Reagan program should get the credit for it.

The Ford plant is not only an example of increased production and rehiring of laid-off workers that Reagan came to celebrate. It also is representative of an industry whose profits have shot upward in part because it has used computerized robots and imported parts to permanently trim its workforce in the past six years.

William Barker, president of the Kansas City local of the UAW and an avowed Mondale supporter, said about a third of the 2,000 persons who have gone back to work at Claycomo came from a dozen closed or partly idled Ford factories around the country. And the Kansas City plant still has at least 1,500 workers on the street, he said.

Lofts

I'm merely saying we're looking at the subject."

Roemer said he was unaware of any loft-related suits involving Notre Dame.

Father Michael Heppen, director of Notre Dame student residences, said, "I'm certainly willing to discuss (lofts) with Dean Roemer. I think our regulations are rather strict. During the first week (of school), rooms are inspected by the fire marshal." Heppen has final authority in any decision concerning lofts.

Roemer questioned the safety of lofts if a fire should occur. Since smoke rises, students in lofts could suffer more than those in regular beds, Roemer said.

While the Notre Dame administration considers tightening its loft policy, officials at Saint Mary's are contemplating allowing lofts in dorm rooms. Currently, there are no lofts. One of the proposals being considered to have the administration allow students to build lofts only from kits brought through the administration. Thus, Saint Mary's can maintain a quality control over loft construction.

Jason D. Lindower, Jr., controller and business manager at Saint Mary's, said, "We're looking for a model which satisfies our concerns for safety and student's concerns for convenience."

A questionable commencement speaker choice

Peace Corps Director Loret Ruppe, Father Hesburgh's choice as the 1984 commencement speaker, has brought with her a storm of controversy to the federal agency.

According to The Washington Times, Ruppe has liberalized the Peace Corps abortion policy while still claiming to be "strongly pro-life." Her spokesmen, however, continue to defend the agency's policy of providing transportation expenses for its volunteers seeking abortions. Since 1981, the Peace Corps has provided such aid to more than 200 volunteers and has cost taxpayers more than $300,000. This not only makes her statements hypocritical but is contrary to the policies of the administration that appointed her.

Though The Washington Times is one of the more conservative newspapers serving the Capitol, it is not alone in criticizing Ruppe. The Washington Post has reported that she tape-recorded private conversations with her deputy, Edward Curran. Although the incident was reviewed by White House counsel Fred Fielding and found to be in violation of agency regulations, it was labeled a personnel dispute and swept under the table by the Reagan administration.

Many believe Ruppe's problems as Peace Corps director stem from her lack of previous experience in public office. The wife of Michigan Congressman Philip Ruppe, Loret Ruppe's limited political experience includes serving as Michigan chairwoman of George Bush's presidential campaign in 1980 and co-chairwoman of the Reagan-Bush presidential campaign after Bush's campaign fizzled. Before this her experiences as a Michigan housewife offered her very few administrative opportunities.

Ruppe is a moderate Republican within a conservative administration, which indicates that her appointment was merely a reward for her work in the 1980 campaign and not the result of her party loyalty or her qualifications for the job.

It is difficult to imagine that Hesburgh was not aware of the controversy surrounding Ruppe in Washington. Being the commencement speaker at Notre Dame may be too great an honor for a person with, at best, questionable administrative abilities and who personifies the patronage politics of the Reagan administration, which sacrifice knowledge and experience for cordiality.

The graduating seniors should feel cheated by Hesburgh's choice. Because rumors around campus were predicting many respectable speakers — ranging from Chrysler Chairman of the Board Lee Iacocca to Pope John Paul II — a controversial Washington politico is a disappointment. In recent years this honor has been bestowed upon far more worthy recipients, such as Chicago Archbishop Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and President Reagan.

When a poor politician and a worse administrator like Loret Ruppe is chosen as commencement speaker, we must question exactly how much Hesburgh is preserving our integrity as an outstanding Catholic university.

The true collegiate student athletes

The football and basketball teams draw a great deal of publicity. Their members are recruited vigorously from across the nation and offered lucrative scholarships to play under the Golden Dome. The exploits of these players are covered like blankets by the media and then beamed about the land.

Randy Fahs

Friday analysis

These celebrities are the so-called "student athletes" of Notre Dame. They are coddled and pampered so that they can perform at their peak, to bring glory and all-important dollars to ND.

But what of the "real student athlete" — the ones who lack notoriety, fame, and scholarships? They do not hear roaring crowds, in fact, they are lucky if there are more spectators than participants at their games and matches.

I had the afternoon free last Wednesday, so at the invitation of a friend I went to a fastpitch softball game between Notre Dame and St. Joseph's College. The stands were empty, but it really did not seem to matter to these girls. They were not recruited for their throwing arms or their batting averages. Rather, they were brought to ND because of their SAT scores and their contributions to their communities.

The "real student athlete" is a slightly different breed from our intercollegiate superstars. The person who plays at the club or intramural level does so solely for the love of the game, the thrill of competition, and the desire to be physically fit. No one knows their names yet they continue to play with vigor. There are no pro contracts or TV interviews waiting for them when they come off the field.

I am not saying that participants in major college sports are not athletes. They demonstrate great skills in their events, but what I am looking at are the motives behind their participation in athletics. This society is in a great quest for modern day heroes and it deeply admires athletic skill in certain events. Unfortunately, part of the purity and fun is lost when money, glory, and in the case of the Olympic games, international propaganda come into the forefront of the competition.

I worry when we speak of our academic credibility with respect to major college sports. I wonder how many of our athletes would have been accepted to Notre Dame if they were confined to wheelchairs. I also wonder how many athletes across the nation would have gone to different colleges, or maybe no college at all, if they had not been offered scholarships.

My critics will charge that the football and basketball programs make enough money to support minor sports, and that they attract a great many potential donors to Notre Dame. I do not deny this, in fact I think it proves further that major sports are little more than a business — even here, beneath the shadow of the Golden Dome.

I am not suggesting that we demolish the stadium or turn the ACC into a permanent truck and RV show (even though it might become Hoosier Heaven). Sports on the major college level serve the purposes of raising money and generating campus unity.

What I am doing is criticizing the fact that, in many instances, athletics has lost its simplicity. But, purity of sport still exists at the club and intramural levels, or anywhere for that matter where people participate in athletics simply for the joy of it, not for some type of materialistic gain.

It is impossible to equate athletics with dollars and cents without bastardizing its true nature. For true athletes everywhere and for those softball playing girls who don't even have a field to play on at Notre Dame: You demonstrate what sport truly is everytime you take the field. It is refreshing to see and I salute you.

Mondale's assets

Dear Editor:

In response to the April 9 letter from Vincent DeSantis regarding Walter Mondale's experience, I would like to make several points.

First, I never said "Experience is his (Walter Mondale's) biggest asset." The April 2 Observer article in which I am quoted features the headline, "Mondale's Experience Biggest Asset." This headline was chosen by The Observer, not by me. A headline closer to my feelings would have read, "Mondale's Experience an Asset in Race Against Hart and Jackson."

Secondly, Professor DeSantis accuses me of assuming that, "There is a necessary correlation between political experience in the national arena and presidential success." On the contrary, I do not believe that experience is essential for success, but I do contend that past political experience is one of many legitimate and important criteria in the selection of a presidential nominee.

During the Mock Convention campaign, Walter Mondale's experience his record and past accomplishments as a U.S. senator and as vice-president were touted by my committee as one way to illuminate the differences between Mondale and his Democratic contenders. In the interview, the only time I was quoted using the word "experience" was after being asked how I planned to differentiate Mondale from Hart.

While the Mondale campaign often cited experience as a criterion in the selection of a candidate, a potential nominee cannot and should not be judged on this basis alone.

Character, issue positions and a vision for the future are all vital in evaluating a candidate. Based on these criteria and others, it remains my belief that Walter Mondale is the best candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Mike Brogioli

Mondale Campus Campaign Chairman

Space ignored

Dear Editor:

It has come to our attention that the Notre Dame Mock Convention's platform failed to include a policy concerning space development. In the interest of student awareness, we propose the following policies as a focus for discussion.

Space research has produced many concrete benefits. The pictures relayed by Voyager have revolutionized the planetary sciences. NASA's research programs have also fostered many of the current "high tech" industries. Solar energy research received a tremendous boost from NASA's research on photovoltaic cells. NASA's research on the miniaturization of computer circuits revolutionized the computer industry. Space exploration was the prime motivating factor behind this research. To maintain this pace of development the U.S. should revive the Galileo and Haley's comet missions and construct a permanent, manned space station for use as a platform for interplanetary exploration.

Industries involved in space exploitation incur great expenses. The U.S. Government should institute tax incentives for industries researching semiconductors, pharmaceuticals, composite materials and all other space-related industrial research and development. The government should support consortiums for the development of projects too expensive for single companies to pursue. NASA would then be able to utilize its unique talents to advise these research consortiums.

The United States can also solve its energy shortage by exploiting the vast energy reserves in outer space. The U.S. should support utilities in the construction of the SPS, a vast array of solar panels in earth orbit. This system can take full advantage of solar energy (which is four times as intensive in space), and then beam this energy to earth via a microwave generator or high-powered laser.

Space also has a vast amount of material resources. U.S. should construct a permanent lunar base to exploit the moon's metals through an extensive mining program. These metals could then be transported to earth or space-based industries.

Space offers many unique opportunities for the enhancement of our national security. Such opportunities include a space-based ABM system. The U.S. should support Colonel Daniel Graham's High Frontier in all its aspects, and begin construction of such a system immediately.

Comedy on the court — the Trotters at ND

by Jeff Blumb
features staff writer

They may have never won an NBA championship but the Harlem Globetrotters are synonymous with basketball just the same. For nearly 60 years now, the Trotters have delighted more than 100 million people in 101 different countries with their unique brand of basketball, in the process becoming as All-American as apple pie.

The "Magicians of Basketball" brought their travelling road show to the ACC last night for a basketball game, which, by the time it got underway, had become second fiddle to the renowned antics of the Trotters. Undoubtedly, the Trotters' combined display of basketball talent and comic relief brought back childhood memories for many of the adults in attendance, at the same time creating new memories for all the children present.

Before beginning their 16,060th game in this their 58th year of existence, the Trotters warmed up the crowd of about 5,000 with their famed Magic Circle routine to the tune of — what else but "Sweet Georgia Brown." The routine, which has five Trotters in a circle exhibiting the famed passing and ball handling skills of the Globetrotters, got everyone more than primed for the game.

All the usual characters were there. The Washington Generals — the Globetrotters' long-standing patsy. Bruce Briggs — the fat ref who is the butt of many Trotter pranks. Curly Neal and "Geese" Ausby — the most well-known of the Globetrotters and the only two left from the famous Abe Saperstein teams of the mid-1940's through the mid-1960's. Dribbling ace Marques Haynes has long since left to form his own team, the Harlem Wizards, and former cut-up Meadowlark Lemon has departed to start up The Bucketeers.

Neal and Ausby, better referred to just as Curly and Geese, of course are the stars of the show. Geese is the one who gets involved with the crowd. Curly the sentimental favorite.

Geese had everyone in stitches moments after the game had begun when, upon seeing a little boy running courtside toward the exit, the aging 44-year-old Ausby promptly yelled at the youngster to go back to his seat. The boy immediately about-faced and went running back to his parents.

tributing the cones to other players and some members of the audience. Other Ausby stunts during the night included a plethora of abusive dialogue with referee Briggs, assorted actions to distract General players at the free throw line, and an impromptu dance with an older woman from the crowd.

Neal, 41, knows he and Ausby will soon be leaving the Globetrotters. Perhaps for this reason, many of the younger, lesser-known Trotters are now getting involved in many of the team's more famous gags. Osborne Lockhart last night pulled off probably the Trotters' most well-known gag, the water bucket trick. This, of course, is the one where the crowd believes it will be drenched as the players run around with a

Playing the role of the "Good Humor Man," Geese removed a tray of ice cream cones from the hand of a man heading back to his seat with the refreshments, promptly dis-bucket supposedly full of water, but finds that when the contents are directed toward it, only confetti comes out.

they fell to the New Jersey Reds, 100-99, to end a streak of 2,495 straight wins.

Last night's game closed with Geese dunking the ball while atop the shoulders of another Trotter. Considering the relation between Ausby and the Globetrotters, the night couldn't have ended in more fitting fashion.

Excellence comes to play at 1984 Jazz Fest

features staff writer

The 26th annual Collegiate Jazz Festival, the oldest in America, gets under way tonight with yet another outstanding array of talent.

This year's festival brings together many of the best college jazz bands in the country and some of the top professionals in the jazz industry.

Tonight's show opens at 7:30 when the Notre Dame Jazz Ensemble, directed by Fr. George "Jazz" Wiskirchen, takes the stage.

The evening's performances by the Fredonia Jazz Quintet, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Ensemble, the Kevin Gainer Quartet and the Fredonia Jazz Ensemble will climax with the traditional "Judges' Jam."

This year's judges bring with them experience from all across the broad spectrum of jazz. Willis Conover — jazz broadcaster, concert producer, narrator, writer, and educator — will once again be master of ceremonies. Judging for the festival this year will be drummer Danny Gottlieb, trumpeter Terrance Blanchard, bass fiddler Dave Holland, Joanne Brackeen, Paquito D'Rivera and — returning for his fifteenth Collegiate Jazz Festival — Dan Morgenstern.

Festival Director for the 1984 CJF is John Garvey, a music professor at the University of Illinois. Garvey brings to the festival a wealth of musical experience that goes beyond jazz. He recently returned to Illinois from a sabbatical in Bali, where he was learning to play Balinese music. He founded both the UI Chamber Orchestra and the Russian Folk Orchestra, and he still conducts the latter. He will be directing the University of Illinois Jazz Band this weekend.

Tomorrow's shows start at 1:00 and 6:30, also at Stepan Center. In addition, the CJF High School Division takes place at Clay High School from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The high school division promises to be as well-represented as its collegiate counterpart, with high schools from Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, and New York represented.

The Collegiate Jazz Festival has taken on a new look in recent years. At its inception, the festival was designed as a competition, with prizes donated by area instrument manufacturers. Lately, the emphasis has been switched to participation, with "Outstanding Performance" plaques being awarded to three big bands and three combos. In addition, the judges will award "Outstanding Instrumentalist" certificates at their own discretion.

Collegiate Jazz Festival chairman Bob O'Donnell and his staff — Bob Weber, Laura Hamilton, Scott O'Grady, Sandy Pancoe, John Cerabino and Kevin Peartree — have put together what promises to be another excellent festival.

'Fools' — a fairytale farce

by Mary Jacoby
features staff writer

For those people in the world possessing a singular obtuseness of mind commonly recognized as stupidity, life can be fairly difficult. Such unfortunates are a rather pitiful sort. Ideas and directions slosh around enough inside their minds to cause the annoying discomfort of thought, but nothing ever jells into rudimentary common sense.

Neil Simon's fairy-tale farce "Fools," which will be presented this weekend by St. Ed's Hall, turns this theme into a slapstick comedy. A small Russian village has supposedly been cursed with chronic stupidity for over 200 years. People sweep dust back into their houses and milk cows upside down in order to get more cream.

In desperation, the townspeople hire Leon Tolchinsky as a schoolteacher, in hopes that he will be able to break the curse. Leon, unaware of what he's getting into, soon finds out that if he can't dispel the curse within 24 hours, he also is doomed to dullness.

Of course, Leon is not free to leave the village because he has fallen in love with the beautiful daughter of the town doctor. The plot thickens as Simon attempts to show it is not a curse responsible for the widespread stupidity, but rather the people themselves who have not been trying to learn.

"Fools" will be presented by St. Ed's Friday and Saturday nights at 8 p.m. in Washington Hall. Admission is $1.

Rating the campus

You know the feeling . . . that late-night craving that can only be satisfied by biting into a thick golden crust, loaded down with plenty of meaty sausage and pepperoni, covered with a layer of thick tasty cheese and drowning in a sea of tangy tomato sauce.

Pizza. Immediately.

Inevitably, it leads to a march down the stairs to the hall foodsales operation to sample the campus equivalent of the delicacy described above.

Foodsales pizza was in the headlines in December, when the University closed down the in-dorm, student-run operations because of sanitation violations. Many of the violations were related to the pizza ovens used in most dorms. The violations were quickly corrected and foodsales reopened, subject to stricter health standards.

The Observer Showcase department decided to find out exactly how good campus pizza really is since foodsales were forced to clean up their act. Six eager pizza critics set out in search of the perfect pizza. The stuffed participants in this feat were Keith Picher, Margaret Fosmoe, Tom Mowle, Mary Healy, Mark Worscheh and Sarah Hamilton.

Each pizza was judged on a 5-point scale in each of the following categories: crust, sauce, topping and cheese. The results are listed below.

Due to financial constraints, only one trip to each hall was possible. Therefore, any given foodsales may produce a better or worse pizza on any given night. Comments about service, atmosphere or the size of the foodsales operation may be included, but these factors did not affect the pizza rating.

The prices listed are for plain cheese pizza. There is a varying charge in each dorm for additional toppings.

You don't have to accept our judgement. But if you choose to go blindly in search of the ultimate campus pizza and wind up with a dud instead, don't say we didn't warn you.

Bon appetit!

Lewis

Lewis Hall pizza transcends the rating scale. The kitchen is very unclean, so it is clear how the pizza gets its taste. On the way up in the elevator to the lounge (there is no place to eat near the foodsales), we thought the carpet smelled as if someone had very recently been ill. It was with heavy stomachs that we realized the odor came from the pizza. The crust is not cooked well, the cheese is blotchy and the toppings appear moldy. The sauce seems all right, but considering everything else, it is hard to be sure. In short, it's no wonder the University closed down the foodsales on campus, if they tasted a Lewis pizza.

Hours: Mon.-Sun. 9:30-12. Price: large, $3; medium, $2; small, $1.

Dillon

Voilà! A Dorm foodsales does know how to make pizza after all! Big Red would make Luigi proud. Dillon is one of the few foodsales that spreads enough sauce on its pizza. Best of all, this pie has flavor. The crust is tasty and baked just right. A bit more sausage wouldn't hurt, nor would a little more time in the oven, but these are not complaints, just suggestions for perfection. A carpeted side room with video games, two tables covered with checkered tablecloths, music, and a varied menu make this foodsales the culinary showplace of South Quad. Hours: 9-12 every day. Price: large, $3.60; small, $2.50.

Leprechaun

Oh, if we could only get pizza like this in the dining halls. ND Food Services' creation puts much of the other campus fare to shame, but then again, it should, considering the extra cost — almost $2 more than Flanner. Well browned cheese floating on a sea of tangy tomato sauce gives this 'za our second-highest rating. Drawbacks are the wafer-like crust and the sparse toppings. Leprechaun pizza is sold both at the Oak Room Cafeteria and The Huddle. True pizza fans will opt for the Oak Room, since it's the closest thing to a real restaurant on campus. The table candles, table cloths and serene setting make for finer dining than your usual basement establishment. If this place had a beer license, it would be a campus smash. Oh, well. Hours: (Oak Room, 239-7518) Sun.-Thurs., 9 p.m. to midnight; Fri.-Sat., 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. (The Huddle, 239-7157) Seven days, 4 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Price: (both locations) extra large only, $6.80; slice, $.90. Free delivery.

Holy Cross

What Holy Cross pizza lacks in quality is made up for in the dining arrangements, which includes booths and barstools. The sausage topping, unlike most, has a taste that stands out from the cheese and sauce, both of which are plentiful and tasty. The ovens are located in a back kitchen, which makes for a pleasant dining atmosphere. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 9-12, Fri.-Sat. 11-1. Price: whole, $4.25; half, $2.25.

Walsh

Head for the vending machines! The "pizza muffins" designed to fill the pizza void in Walsh Hall tend to have the opposite effect. A Walsh pizza muffin consists of a soggy English muffin spread with a little soupy tomato sauce under hacked pieces of foul-tasting cheese. No toppings are available. And to round off their eating experience, victims get to cook the things themselves — in a slow-heating antiquated toaster oven. If the muffins aren't enough to drive you away, the dismal uninviting atmosphere of the foodsales area certainly will. Note: Bring your own napkins and plenty of change; they have neither. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 10 to 12. Price: pizza muffin, $.50.

Keenan

Keenan's new highly-touted "deep-dish" pizza, although a fair deal, is nothing to write home about. The ready-made crust does rise to heights that are virtually unknown on the rest of campus, but it might rise even higher if it were cooked as long as it should be. The crust is left white and doughy. The pizza, like many on campus, suffers from a shortage of sauce. The sausage, on the other hand, is a little too prominent. In fact, diners may note that because of the excess of crumbly sausage, the pizza closely resembles a coffee cake. Keenan's regular pizza, cooked for the same amount of time, might be a better option. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 9:30-12:30, Fri.-Sat. 10:30 to 12:30. Price: large, $3.90; medium, $2.40; small, $1.75.

Badin

Badin Hall does not (and cannot) try to compete with other dorm pizzas. Frozen and pre-packaged, a few minutes of microwaving by the salesperson turns the pizza into a scalding, sloppy mess. No toppings available. Its thin crust, patchy cheese and nondescript sauce make a Badin pizza definitely not worth leaving your dorm for — that is, unless you live in Badin. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 9-11:30, Fri. 11:30-1. Price $1.

Stanford

This could be considered the bourgeois of campus pizzas. A Stanford pizza is definitely palatable, yet certainly nothing to arrange a road-trip for. The sausage is sapid and generously sprinkled. The cheese is slightly better than other pizzas of similar quality; the sauce is average. The crust is the low-point of this pizza — it was overcooked and tasteless. Fair is the most honest way of describing this pizza. The food sales are spacious and there is adequate social space is nearby. Be prepared to wait a while for your order. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 9:30-12, Fri.-Sat. 10:30 to 1 a.m. Price: large, $3.25; medium, $2.50; small, $1.80; slice, $.40.

Observer/Pete Laches

Howard

Here's vending machine pizza at its worst. This pre-packaged stuff — and the self-serve microwave — belongs in a 7-11, not a dorm. The sparse sprinkles of cheese, the four pieces of pepperoni (five if you're lucky), the spongy crust and the lack of sauce combine to make a pizza that would embarrass even a third-generation Italian. But pre-packaged food doesn't mean cleanliness — the adjoining TV room looked like a rodent feeding ground, popcorn and chips littering the carpeted floor. Hours: 10-12 every day. Price: small only, $1.

Sorin

Sorin Hall pizza is among the best on campus. In fact, it is hard to believe that it is a hall pizza. Their thick-crust pizza is covered with a much tastier sausage than the average dorm pizza. The rather sweet sauce and better than average cheese are worthy of a legitimate pizzeria. The one thing which marks Sorin as a dorm foodsales is the total lack of dining arrangements. Sun.-Thurs. 10:30-12. Price: large, $3; small, $2.50.

Flanner

The basement of a Dai doesn't seem to video games or already-thin crust leaving a lump clog just about sauce was appropriate amounts of sauce. Uneven cooking. Flanner might examine a rather. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 9-11:30, Fri.-Sat. 10:30-12:30. Price: large, $4.90; small, $2.50. Phone: 283-4111.

A dining sensation

Observer/Pete Laches

Pangborn

This pizza is definitely worth going a little off the beaten path for. It is bound to tempt the palate of many campus pizza-seekers. The sauce is fair, but a little sparse. The crust rates about average with other campus pizzas. The tasty cheese and flavorful topping, however, are both first-rate. Together they form a late-night dining experience that is a little better than the average dorm food sales can offer. An extra incentive is the speedy preparation (2 to 3 minutes) of one's order in an up-to-date and well-lit food sales area. A nearby tv and game room provides a comfortable place to enjoy one's snack. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 10:30 to 12, Fri.-Sat. 12 to 2 a.m. Price: whole, $3.75; slice, $.60.

Grace

Not only is a Grace pizza a good sound choice, but Grace foodsales, otherwise known as Sarge's, is the nearest thing to your corner grocery store. The largest foodsales on campus, Sarge's is a good place to go when the late-night munchie cravings come on and The Huddle is closed. As for the pizza, its thick golden crust supports a very inviting eating experience. The sausage is flavorful and generously spread. The sauce is tasty, but in rather short supply. The cheese, rather bland, rates slightly lower than the other components of this pizza. The large, carpeted, nicely-lit eating area, complete with booths, juke box and wide-screen TV, makes Grace perhaps the most pleasant dining experience to be found on campus. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 7:30-12, Fri. and Sat. 8-1. Price: small, $1.85; large, $2.70.

Cavanaugh

If only the Naugh's pizza were as good as its crust. Cavanaugh seems to have raised baking pizza crust to an art. The edges are crunchy; the center is tender without being flimsy or bread-like. This pizza is no more generous with its sauce or spices than most hall foodsales. The cheese was obviously cooked and not merely melted (a plus), but still it lacked that appetizing golden tone. The sausage was crumbled too small, but liberally distributed on the pie. Parked in a corner in the basement of the dorm, Cavanaugh foodsales does not exactly entice people with its aesthetic atmosphere, but pizza can be ordered ahead by calling 283-4729. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 10-12. Price: large, $3.20; small, $1.70.

Zahm

Zahm pizza is like Russian Roulette: the more you have, the less you enjoy it, due, at least in part, to the sauce and filling crust. It is also difficult to get — in four trips, pizza was being sold only once, despite the posted hours. The cheese and topping are very plain and less than memorable. Sun. 10:30-12, Mon.-Thurs. 9:30-12; Fri.-Sat. 10:30-1. Price: whole, $2.90; slice, $.55.

Pasquerilla East

Pasquerilla East pizza-bagels are not even recommended by the hall's own food salesman — he suggests going to Grace if you want pizza. The pizza-bagels are okay for what they are, but not as pizza. The sauce is soupy, and the cheese only hides the sauce. No toppings. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 8:30-12:30, Fri.-Sat. 9:30-1:30. Price: Two bagel-halves, $1.

Alumni

Alumni's foodsales pizza should qualify as the eighth wonder of the world, since it's a wonder that anyone can eat it. The crust on this pizza is magnificent. The chefs have achieved the perfect crispness at the edges and tenderness at the center. Obviously, the crust is Alumni foodsales' piece de resistance. The rest of the pizza is a lot easier to resist, probably because it is so difficult to eat. There is a lot of cheese on each pizza, but for some unknown reason it tends to run to the center. (Strange cheese indeed!) Nor is the cheese cooked long enough. This, added to the fact that there is not much sauce and only an average amount of sausage, explains why it is so difficult to eat Alumni's pizza. Hours: Sun. 8-10:30 p.m., Mon.-Thurs. 7-12, Fri.-Sat. 10-1. Price: large, $3.25; small, $1.75. Phone: 283-3906.

Farley

Farley pizza is a campus connoisseur's delight. A delicious first-rate product is created in the rather modest, foodsales tucked away in the basement of the hall. While a few other dorms have better sausage, the pizza of Farley is blessed with delicious, abundant cheese and (a rarity) plenty of tomatoey sauce. And underneath it all is a thick tasty golden crust. True pizza enthusiasts will plan a visit to Farley soon. Hours: Mon.-Thurs. 9-12, Fri. and Sat. 7-9. Small, $2; Large, $3.

Carroll

Every Domer should make the long trek to Carroll Hall foodsales at least once, as much for the tasty pizza as for the friendly, homey atmosphere. Carroll's product is thick and gooey, with plenty of everything from crust to topping. The crust is doughy and not cooked quite enough, but much thicker than most. There is enough tomato sauce, for a change, and cheese is heaped on top of it. The cheese also suffers from being a little underdone, but is nice and stretchy the way some like it. The sausage, though there is plenty of it, is of average taste. For entertainment while you wait (5-10 minutes), there are video games, pinball, and foosball located next to the foodsales. Hours: 9-1 every day. Price: whole, $3; half, $1.75.

Breen-Phillips

Though it lacks a distinctive sauce, there are few drawbacks to a BP pizza. Its crust is crispy, but not burned. The granular sausage topping resembles most sausage on campus. In general, this pizza would seem very ordinary, but when compared to some of the others on campus, B-P's product is very good. The only place to eat in the hall is in the study lounges, and service is a little slow. Hours: 9-12:15 every day, Sun 1-3 p.m. Price: whole, $2.70; half, $1.50; pizza bagel, $.80.

Pasquerilla West

One of the spicier pizzas around may be had at PW's 1st floor eatery. But that zippy sauce couldn't quite make up for a doughy crust and less-than-usual applications of cheese and sausage. PW's unique economical individual pizzas are recommended only if you can't find anyone to split a larger one with. The sterile, closet-like atmosphere suffers from a lack of music, although two tables and a microwave oven were amenities. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 9-12, Fri.-Sat. 9-1. Price: large, $2.75; individual-size, $.65. Phone: 283-GRIF.

Morrissey

What was Domino's phone number? Morrissey residents should commit it to memory. You'd think "The Manor" would have pizza fit for nobility, but pre-packaged pizza is strictly for the peasantry. It takes a special talent to burn pizza crust and still retain its flimsy quality. Contrary to the practice of Morrissey's pizza chefs, cheese melted in a microwave oven should be put in a fondue pot, not on a pizza. Morrissey redeems itself to an extent by pouring lots of sausage onto each pie. Yet this could be just to hide the sauce, or lack thereof. The scarcity of sauce explains the overall bland taste: if there is no sauce, there can be no spice. A spacious setting complete with a booth in which to enjoy one's pizza is available. Whether it is clean or not is debatable. Hours: 9-12 every day. Price: whole, $3.25; half, $1.75.

Lyons

This is one of the better pizzas on campus. The sausage is meaty and spread over the entire pizza. Sauce is plentiful and delicious. The cheese is a bit failing — it has a gummy consistency and detracts from the overall flavor. The crust is thick and tasty, and nearly cooked to perfection. Sausage, pepperoni, extra cheese and mushrooms are available at this well-ordered and efficient food sales. Pleasant social space is which to enjoy one's pizza is located nearby. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 9-11:30. Price: whole, $3; half, $1.75; slice, $.50.

St. Edward's

The "bare essentials" attitude of Saint Ed's foodsales permeates the dorm's pizza too. The crust is thin, crispy and tasteless; the sauce watery and unappetizing. Fair-tasting cheese and sausage cannot entirely redeem the quality of this dining fare. Saint Ed's pizza is definitely not worth traveling great distances for. Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 11-12. Price: large, $2.75; small, $1.85.

Letters to a lonely God

A dream of Easter

by Rev. Robert Griffin
features columnist

I sometimes dream of resurrections. A fisherman dreams of hooking Moby Dick. A football player dreams of winning the Heisman trophy. A priest has a dream of the resurrection. The priest, his friends say, suffers from an over-worked imagination. Maybe he's been tripping on the seeds of the Easter lily. Only a nutty cleric has dreams about the waking up of the dead.

In my dream, I'm on a battlefield. It's the day after a war in which heavy fighting has left dozens of bodies torn apart. I'm one of the victims who got hit early, left as a stiff for three days. Knowing that I've passed over, hearing the click of the turnstyle as I turn the corner on life, I'm thinking: "So this is what death is like." I was packed with a group of black singers in the choir loft of the Ebenezer Baptist Church, and to tell the truth, it was crowded and hot. I had expected heaven to be more Jewish, and I kept waiting for the singing. I wasn't disappointed with the afterlife, however, because I've always loved the play "The Green Pastures."

Heaven turned out to be the dream within the dream; later, I was back on the battlefield as a casualty. I could hear the sounds of other victims getting up. I realized I should be getting up too. So I stood up and examined myself and found I was whole again. There were other soldiers all around me, examining themselves and finding that they were whole. They were laughing and smiling, touching arms and legs that had been blown away in cannon barrages. The gray mists which had hung over the landscape like a veil were burning off under the new sun of an April morning. Old veterans greeted young veterans with pleasure at being reunited. All of us moved off that field which had belonged to death in the directions of homes filled with peace.

Woody Allen tells us that when he was drowning, his life passed before his eyes. He saw himself at the old swimming hole and buying gingham at the country store. Suddenly he realized the life being flashed was somebody else's life. The dream I had of being raised as a soldier from the battlefield was somebody else's dream, because I was never a soldier.

I have friends who get put out when I tell them my dream. They believe in resurrections, but they don't want to know the details. Resurrections begin in cemeteries, and involve the shaking off of dust and mold and odors, as the processes which begin with burial are reversed. They don't want to hear stories that rattle dry bones or stir up ghosts. Easter gives them a hope that the grave is not the end. Colored eggs and jellybeans symbolize their joy without adding physical details or imagining a dark drama of the earth suddenly moving with life under the headstones.

"Lazarus laughed," one of my friends said, "after finding out that death is easy."

"How do you know?" I asked. "I heard it in a sermon," he replied.

"There are other opinions," I said. "In the Greek version, he's like the dead man that tells no tales." My friend shrugged, and I shrugged back in a use of body language that wants to get in the last word. Resurrections, even when they are accredited, are indescribable, like the look of compassion lighting the Saviour's face. Any other viewpoint is as unreal as the Emerald City of Oz.

On Easter, after hearing about the empty tomb, I will read the account of the marriage feast at Cana. I got the idea of connecting the Cana feast with the resurrection from reading Dostoyevsky. In the "Brothers Karamazov," the elder of the monastery, Father Zossima, has died. At his wake, the monks are scandalized that the body, judging from the smell is showing signs of corruption. The monks had expected miracles from so holy a priest. They are scandalized that God has not preserved the body. They conclude that Father Zossima could not have been a saint.

Alyosha, the 13-year-old who is the youngest of the Karamazov brothers, grieves at the death and decay. He leaves his monastery, without permission, to seek corruption with a woman. Later, full of love for the dead man and still innocent, he returns to the chapel where the body is kept. The story of the marriage feast is being read, and this Gospel moves Alyosha with joy at the goodness of God and the beauty of creation. Under the night sky, with his face pressed to the earth, he makes a decision to serve God in the holiness of the world, which is corruptible, rather than in the monastery, where corruption is a scandal.

"Lord, will these dry bones live again?" asked the prophet Ezekiel, and God promised him the resurrection. The New Testament says the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall arise. The bodies that were buried corruptible shall rise incorruptible. Unless a grain of wheat, falling into the earth, dies, it will not bring forth new life.

If you try to picture the resurrection harvest in your mind's eye — with graves opening for the exit of ghosts, or the sea giving up its dead — it gets spooky to think about, like the Gothic tale of Frankenstein. Nobody ever wrote a play claiming that Frankenstein laughed.

It is easier to domesticate the unthinkable. Those of us who believe in Christ as the Resurrection and the Life feel at home with something as familiar and holy as a wedding feast where the Lord serves the wine.

There is nothing theological about the stuff of my dreams. There's nothing miraculous about my supply of jellybeans, except that there are so many, they could be reproducing themselves. The Easter bunny keeps being generous, as though he were catering a party for the sun making love to the earth, waiting like a bride.

the development of the situation. Village dancers are used as a living backdrop for the show, creating interesting space on the stage and physical excitement as they go through poetic rituals.

A comic element was cleverly brought about through the use of trios. In one instant Lisette and Alain (Jeffrey Choppin), her arranged fiancé, are dancing a pas de deux when Colin joins them in creating a humorous pas de trois.

The costuming helps create a visual unity. The villagers are dressed earthy but not downtrodden and the friends are colorful yet never overbearing or too pastel. The use of bows in the costumes helps carry an underlying ribbon motif throughout the show. Lisette's costume was distinctive enough to stand out on its own but didn't act as a distraction when she danced in a group, owing to the creative design of Linda H. Wigley.

Adding to the effectiveness of the performance were three sets designed by Thomas Leff. The sets achieved a realistic quality through the efforts of a guest scene painter, Thomas M. Ryan.

La Fille Mal Gardee is showing tonight and Saturday night at 8 and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in O'Laughlin.

Albert Finney stars in this rollicking adaptation of Italian Henry Fielding's bawdy 18th-century novel about a young lad who leaves home and wanders toward London. Admission to all Film Series presentations is $2.50 and they are shown in the Annenbun Auditorium.

Young love and an unchaperoned daughter

by Mary Feider
features staff writer

Young love interrupted by the matchmaking plans of an overbearing parent is a recurring theme throughout many of today's scenarios. In La Fille Mal Gardee the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Dance Theatre has successfully and refreshingly brought this theme to the O'Laughlin stage.

The love of Lisette (Jennifer Ferrick) and Colin (Christopher Smith) is innocently played out through the movements of dance. Lisette's spirit fluctuates throughout the show. Her dance is light as she moves through her chores. With Colin she is often demure; her moves subtle and graceful in a testing, trying manner. In conjunction with the dancers who function as her friends, Ferrick proves that she can dance in a group as well as a pas de deux. Ferrick helps the characterization of Lisette develop through the dance as her moves mature from lighthearted dancing to her final dramatic expression of love for Colin.

A consistent characterization of a young man in love is brought about through the subtle mannerisms as well as the overt gestures of Christopher Smith. His moves are smooth and robust echoing his spirited youth.

The closest thing to perfection on the stage was brought about in the Widow Simone (Mary Madeline Riley). In Act I the Widow Simone is a tyrant. During the following act the audience cannot help but fall in love with her as she flirts with Thomas (Paula Ballantine), a wealthy proprietor. The Widow Simone brings comic incentive at her every entrance and the love affair with her progresses throughout the performance. As successful as the Widow Simone character is Riley's interpretation of her. The precision of her dance and the expression of her gestures show she has indeed captured the spirit of the Widow Simone.

On pointe through much of the performance, Lisette's friends move well together as a group. The friends also help carry the story line as they act as moderator between Lisette and the Widow Simone.

Debra S. Stahl was successful in choreographing the show to express

Irish win two, Bowling Green next

By MARY SIEGER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team improved its spring season record to 10-2 as the Irish easily defeated the University of Northern Illinois, 5-2, and Bradley, 8-1, this week before the team departs today for a three-match trip in Bowling Green, Ohio.

Last night's contest with Northern Illinois at the South Bend Raquet Club was a disappointment for the Irish since the team was unable to complete the competition. Due to a mix-up in court scheduling, the Irish were forced to leave after the team won its fifth match.

"We were unable to finish our number two and number three doubles matches," said sophomore co-captain Greta Roemer. "It would have been 7-2 if we'd been able to finish since both teams were winning."

There were other surprises in store for the Irish last night when the team was forced to make some last minute changes in its starting lineup. Freshman Joanne Biafore substituted for Pam Fichette at number four singles, freshman Tammy Schmidt took Laura Lee's spot at number five singles and Roemer covered Biafore's regular starting position at number six singles.

Schmidt played well for the squad in her debut appearances for the Irish against Northern Illinois and in the number six singles spot in Wednesday's competition against Bradley.

"I'm impressed — she kept her concentration and didn't mess around," said Irish co-captain Lisa LaFratta. "It's nice to know there is someone who can step in and win for us."

Roemer is also unaccustomed to playing singles and last night was her second appearance in the singles competition for the Irish. Although Roemer lost her match, she hung on until the end.

The Irish will play the Falcons in the first of their three weekend matches this afternoon in Bowling Green. Tomorrow, the Irish will begin a doubleheader with an easy match with the University of Central Michigan. Later in the afternoon, the Irish will battle the University of Miami (Ohio) who is leading the Mid-America Conference.

quarterback job are senior Scott Grooms and freshman Joe Felitsky.

"I'd have to give the edge to Scott Grooms right now just because of experience," says Hudson. "Joe hasn't played the game in about two years because of injuries, but he's improving with each given week."

Grooms, at 6-2, 197-pounds, returned to Notre Dame from Miami of Ohio and sat out the 1982 campaign. After earning the backup spot to Blair Kiel in 1983, his season ended abruptly when he suffered a broken collarbone in the season opener against Purdue.

The 6-3, 205-pound Felitsky has surmounted a high school knee injury and summer intestinal surgery to move himself into contention for the quarterback spot.

When he was given a clean bill of health near the end of last season, Felitsky got some practice experience by working with the Irish prep team. An extra year of eligibility is a possibility for Felitsky since his health problems kept him out of varsity competition for all of 1983.

"Joe Felitsky's most valuable asset is his arm," says Hudson. "He's a big man that can throw the ball. The biggest thing right now is experience. He doesn't have confidence in what he's doing. He doesn't understand everything yet, but he's working at trying to get better at it. It will just take time."

Under the leadership of Steve Beuerlein, the quarterback situation looks very promising for the Irish. Having two eager backups in Grooms and Felitsky can never hurt. And with plenty of time still ahead for all three, it appears that things can only get better.

points on 21 shots and grabbed 8 rebounds for Encore.

Ed Smierciak and Four Other Guys That Are Better Than John Paxson soundly defeated Planet Q-22, 21-6. Pat Deignan shot as well as a John Paxson, as he hit eight of his nine shots, and his teammates rounded out the scoring for a team total of 21-of-33.

Another Good Recruiting Year may have to improve its recruiting next year, since the team fell victim to Bleeding Ax Wounds II, 21-8. Tim Beardsly inflicted some wounds for the winners, bagging nine baskets on 13 attempts.

The award for the mis-named team of the day goes to Yes, We Will Lose in the First Round, which beat Buttsweat and Tears, 21-11. Terry Ziegler led the attack for the improperly named team, hitting seven of 13 shots. Joe Whalen added seven more points to the win on his 7-of-15 shooting.

An appropriately-named team, Quick Exit, did just that yesterday, bowing out of the tournament to Win or Lose We Still Booze, 21-9. The Boozers should be drinking happily this weekend, thanks to 9-of-21 shooting and 17 rebounds from Don Skloss and 8-of-24 shooting and 10 rebounds from Mike Walsh.

Mark Keefe turned in a notable performance yesterday to lead his team, Destiny Without a Cause, to a 21-16 victory over Make Yurts Not War. Keefe scored 14 of his team's points, while missing only 11 shots. It's a good thing Keefe shot so well, too, because his teammates hit only 7-of-55, for a team total of 21-of-80.

On Stepan 6 at 6:15 p.m., Tony Anzalone shot 8-of-12, as Strapamasqueon the Combat Wombats defeated Dave, 21-9.

Today, the best action seems to be early in the afternoon, as the first round of Bookstore XIII draws to a close. Three good games are scheduled to tip off at 4 p.m.

On Stepan 4, Much Better Off — the new edition of last year's Hall of Fame team, The Even Worse Off — meets Four K & O.C. On Bookstore 10, The Creamers meet Gumby Takes Pokey Up the Rear, while Lyons 12 is the site of the matchup between Yank My Doodle, It's a Dandy and Our Little Pollacks Got a Babe. Yank My Doodle, It's a Dandy was in the top 32 last year.

At 4:45, the game to see may be Geritol Express against Rave On John Donne. The Geritol Express is a team of faculty and staff members.

Today the Irish host Marquette and Ohio State at Courtney Tennis Courts for a tough triangular. The Warriors and the Buckeyes met this morning, and the Irish will face Ohio State this afternoon. Saturday, Notre Dame and Marquette play in the morning. If the weather is inclement, action will move into the ACC.

"Ohio State is tough," said Fallon. "They have a full scholarship team, plus my former assistant, John Daly is their coach."

Baseball team swept by Wolverines

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame baseball team expected two tough games from the Spartans of Michigan State on Wednesday, and that is exactly what it got.

The Spartans had no trouble sweeping the Irish by scores of 7-1 and 7-2, as the Irish could not seem to muster any timely hitting.

In the first game, the Spartans jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning off Irish starter Buster Lopes. Although Notre Dame came back with a run in the second, MSU quickly ran away with the game by scoring five runs over the fourth, fifth, and sixth innings.

Spartan hurler Ralf Mojsiejenko hurt a Notre Dame team for the second time this year. After punting MSU to victory over the Irish in football this fall, Mojsiejenko pitched a five-hitter for the victory. Mike Metzler and Tom Shields each had two hits for the Irish. Lopes took the loss, lowering his record to 2-2.

In the second contest, Notre Dame jumped out to a 2-0 lead off Spartan starter Dave Mammel, but the team would score no more that day. MSU scored four runs in the second and three more in the fourth to take the 7-2 win.

Dave Clark had two hits, including a triple, for the Irish, while Shields doubled. Mark Clementz took the loss and is now 0-3.

The Irish are now 11-12 for the season, and face a tough Xavier University ballclub in Cincinnati this weekend. A four-game series will open the Midwestern City Conference schedule for the Irish. Gallo's goal is to make the conference playoffs this season, and the Irish can move a step closer to accomplishing this with a good performance this weekend.

Golf team travels to '84 Kepler Invitational

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

After a strong outing last weekend in Purdue, the Notre Dame golf team will be traveling to Columbus, Ohio, this weekend where they will face outstanding competition in the 25-team Kepler Invitational hosted by Ohio State University.

Last weekend in a tournament dominated by a tough opening round on Saturday and horrible weather conditions on Sunday, the Irish were able to come away with a 10th place finish and an average of 76, 5-over-par, for the two day, 36-hole Purdue Invitational.

According to Irish Head Coach Noel O'Sullivan, the key to the tournament were the extraordinarily tough first 18 holes which were dominated by teams with full scholarship players. Purdue, the host team and winner of the event, shot a 355 (71 average) Saturday.

"The competition was extremely stiff (with eight Big Ten teams) on the first day with others teams shooting 71's, 72's, and 73's," said O'Sullivan. "The Notre Dame showing was not at all humiliating or disappointing — it just wasn't up to that caliber that day."

The second round action, which was plagued by high winds, brought the tournament back to reality according to O'Sullivan. The Irish, who were an average of 5 strokes off the pace on Saturday, finished 2 strokes off the pace on Sunday and 3 strokes off the winning team's pace which ended at 731 compared to 768 for the Irish.

"Although the placement seems weak," commented O'Sullivan, "the performance of the Notre Dame golfers was prideful and strong."

Irish scores from the Purdue Invitational were Moorman 74-82-154, Leyes 74-80-154, Pangraze 77-78-155, O'Donovan 77-78-155, Bona 79-77-156, and Huffman 82-74-156.

In Columbus, the Irish will be competing against Ohio State, Indiana, and Ball State, all of whom are considered "perennial powers."

This 54-hole, three-day tournament will begin this afternoon and will continue through Sunday on Ohio State's Scarlet Golf Course.

Rowing team hosts first spring regatta

By KATHLEEN NICHOLSON
Sports Writer

This Sunday, the Notre Dame men's and women's rowing team will host their first spring regatta of the 1984 season on their racing course located on the St. Joe's River.

The men's and women's teams comprised of both novice and varsity boats will test their prowess against Northwestern University and Grand Valley Rowing Club in a series of rowing events.

With the completion of the new boathouse and the addition of many new boats this year, the club hopes that new interest will be sparked for the sport of rowing here at Notre Dame.

Students are encouraged to come see the competition this Sunday. The race begins at 11 a.m. at the boathouse on the St. Joe River about 1.5 miles off Notre Dame Avenue.

A wet bookstore game is not a happy game

By PHIL WOLF
Sports Writer

It was bound to happen eventually. After several days of beautiful weather, the rain finally fell on Bookstore Basketball XIII yesterday.

The Bookstore rules clearly state (Playing Procedures, no. 1), "As in the past, games will be played regardless of weather conditions." Of course, weather conditions in years past have been much worse than yesterday's, as games have been played in freezing weather and snowstorms.

The spring rain yesterday did not really dampen the intensity of play in round 1 of the World's Largest Basketball Tournament, though, as several individuals and teams put forth outstanding performances.

Bookstore XIII

The slick ball and court did not stop Showtime from turning in the second shutout victory of Bookstore XIII, as the team aced Five Marines Who Do it With a Grunt.

Kim Adams led Showtime to the victory, hitting seven shots in a row before missing her last shot of the game. Kevin Rodgers helped in the shutout by hitting five of his nine shots.

Obviously, what the Five Marines do with a grunt is miss shots, and, indeed, there was a lot of grunting

Tennis team wins eighth straight

By ED KONRADY

The men's tennis team overcame a tenacious Northern Illinois team to extend their winning streak to eight matches, and improving their record to 17-6.

"I was surprised," said Head Coach Tom Fallon. "Last year the match was cut short, and we won 5-1. Although they lost their top man, their coach recruited very well, and on Bookstore 10 yesterday afternoon. The Five Marines managed to miss on 26 shot attempts in the losing effort, as Brian Hearney personally threw up nine bricks.

After every missed shot, The Five Marines grunted and groaned as they did pushups as punishment for their blunders. The players for Showtime waited patiently for The Five Marines to get back to play defense before taking the ball to the hoop as if the defense were not there. Hopefully, The Five Marines will be better at defending our country than they were at defending against Showtime.

Meanwhile, on Bookstore 9, Jomigod and The Val Dudes narrowly escaped a shutout at the hands of Free Wheelin' by virtue of Joe Hohl's two points. Hohl shot 2-for-12, while his teammates choked on 25 shots.

Chris Richardson took the "honors" as high non-scorer for the Val Dudes, as he went 0-for-13. Richardson blamed his team's performance on lack of experience and poor playing conditions.

"For three years I haven't seen it rain this hard," Richardson said. "Besides, we had two guys who had never seen a basketball."

Joe Whelan led his team to the victory by hitting half of his 14 shots from the slippery court.

they will continue to beat a lot of people."

"The score of 7-2 is misleading," said Paul Najarian. "Their new players turned out to be tough. The match was a lot closer than the score."

The match was forced indoors to the ACC "tartan smooth" courts due to the rain. "It was a tough match," said Assistant Coach Tom Hartzell. "Because we hadn't played on these courts ourselves for a while, we real-

Wooster College tomorrow

Lacrosse team awaits home opener

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

They might not admit it, but the Notre Dame lacrosse players are probably glad they will be in South Bend this weekend. Even if the weather turns cold and windy like it usually does during the season, at least the Irish will be playing at home.

Home-field advantage is something that Rich O'Leary's squad has not had since the season began over spring break. Now seven games into the season, Notre Dame will get to play host to an opponent for the first time.

Tomorrow's game is an important one for the 4-3 Irish. Wooster is one of the better teams in the Midwest Lacrosse Association, and Notre Dame can ill afford another conference loss after splitting a pair of MLA games this past week.

The Irish will also be looking to avenge last season's 22-16 loss at Wooster. In that game, the Notre Dame offense exploded early, giving the Irish an early lead. However, the defense played its worst game of the season as the hosts quickly erased the lead to score a relatively easy win.

Obviously, O'Leary will be looking for his defense to protect the goal much better than it did last year, and, if the first seven games are any indication, he should not be disappointed. The Notre Dame defense has allowed more than 10 goals a game only three times this year and registered its first shutout ever in Tuesday's 15-0 drubbing of Mt. Union College.

"We've got a new defense this year which has really helped us out," explains Simpson. "We used to play a man-to-man defense, but now we play a zone defense that is something like a 3-3 defense. It almost cuts off every shot from close in, so I can see the shots better and get better saves."

The slaughter at Mt. Union was more of a practice session than a game. The Notre Dame regulars played for the first quarter, rolling the score to 9-0 and then letting the seldom-used players get in some playing time. Shutouts in lacrosse are even more infrequent than shutouts in Bookstore, yet the Irish were able to keep their badly-outmatched opponents from scoring a single goal. In the two games between the teams, Notre Dame has outscored the Purple Knights, 43-4.

It was a different story at Ohio Wesleyan last weekend, though, as the Irish fell behind 7-2 at halftime and could never get closer than four goals the rest of the way, eventually losing 12-5 to the defending MLA champs.

"They were a better team than we were," admitted O'Leary. "I think the score should have been 8-5 or 8-4, but we had a lot of breakdowns in the game. We would have a good flurry by our offense but not score, and then they would come back and score easily."

Notre Dame's showing was not nearly as good as O'Leary had hoped, so the outcome could hurt the team's confidence level. However, Simpson is confident that the loss will have a good effect on the team.

"The loss makes us want to work harder," said the junior goalie. "We're still not out of (the conference race) at all."

Wooster should prove to be a good test for the Irish because it has probably the third-best team in the conference behind Ohio Wesleyan and Denison. If Notre Dame wants to have a chance for the MLA title, it must take advantage of their home field.

Starting quarterback role is Beuerlein's

By ED DOMANSKY
Sports Writer

Taking the helm as starting quarterback is certainly not an easy task. Most teams will look to a seasoned veteran to meet the challenge.

For the Notre Dame football team, however, this vital role will rest with Steve Beuerlein, the 6-3, 200-pound sophomore from Fullerton, California.

Not too surprisingly, offensive coordinator and quarterback coach Ron Hudson expresses great confidence in Beuerlein's abilities.

"Any program at this level would like to be starting a junior that had been in the program for a couple years and had a little bit more understanding of the system," he says. "But Steve, as a sophomore eligibility-wise and academically, is far more advanced than a normal sophomore. Because he started eight games for us last year, it's not like we're talking to a rookie. It takes a little of the nervousness out, and that's a real positive thing for us."
