Senate discusses prices at bookstore, suggests possible alternatives

By MIKE MILLEN
Staff Reporter

Senate action against high bookstore prices was announced at last night's Student Senate meeting.

"The fact is, they do sustain a profit," said Senator Pat Browne, referring to the Notre Dame-Hammes Bookstore. Browne alluded to a study conducted in January by Student Body President Rob Bertino, then a senator.

The study consisted of 40 randomly chosen bookstore items comparatively priced at seven local stores. According to the survey, "as some products were of varying quality or not available at several stores, a final list of only 23 items were compiled."

Browne contends "the survey proved that the bookstore charges more." As evidence, 200 sheets of college ruled paper, which cost $1.79 at the bookstore, were found to be less than 90 cents at both G.L. Perry and Martin's. The University's price of $1.89 for Crest Toothpaste was seen as being unusually high, as six of the seven stores charged less, with K-Mart asking only $1.04.

"Since the survey was conclusive for health and beauty aids," Browne said, "we proposed alternatives." He first proposed the bookstore "supply some of the goods at cost or below cost," but "they didn't want to do this." Browne said the loss of revenue on these items would be compensated for by the markup on Notre Dame paraphernalia. His second alternative involved the bookstore "supplying products of a lower grade." Browne said this idea was rejected because bookstore officials felt Notre Dame students were "brand conscious" and would not buy generic items.

"Since we can't work within the bookstore, we will work outside of it," he stated. A Student Senate committee has been formed and is looking into the possibility of starting some sort of "student store." The store would carry items similar to those of the Notre Dame Bookstore, but of a generic quality.

At the meeting, Browne said a survey was going to be taken as to whether "students at Notre Dame are money conscious rather than brand conscious." Feasibility of the proposed student store will also be examined. "We will make comparisons of wholesaler's (prices) and labor in the store," he said, adding "we will set a cost of goods just over the break-even point."

Executive Coordinator Doug Wurth advocated more action. "Why waste our time with surveys" he said, asking "do we have an official response as to why we can't go into direct competition (with the bookstore)?" It was pointed out Ombudsman would handle the surveys, so committee members could devote their time to other matters. As for direct competition, about which Executive Coordinator Ray Wise also questioned, Browne said he was not aware of an official administrative response, although he felt chances were low of being allowed to do such.

When asked for a location for this store, Browne said "we would have to find a place." Bertino, however, recommended using a currently unoccupied part of LaFortune in the basement. The issue will surface again in future senate meetings.

Director of Food Services William Hickey asked for the senate's official condemnation of the food fights in the dining halls last Saturday. Hickey said one of his managers stated the incident was "one of the worst things we've ever seen." "We are dedicated," he said, "and in a sense of fairness I'm asking you to put peer pressure on students." At Hickey's request, the senate unanimously passed a measure to officially condemn the food fighting incident in the dining hall and issued a formal apology to University Food Services and its employees.

The fiscal policy of student government and the student activities board was unanimously approved. Student Body Treasurer Al Novas reported available funds of $247,000. He said 20 percent of the money will go to clubs, with the rest going to the five official student government organizations and a contingency fund. Novas reported "clubs will have one more opportunity to appeal for money."

and head outside to study, play football, or just go for a long walk around the lake before the snow, or at least before the first frost hits the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's campuses.

Labor Secretary Donovan named in 137-count New York indictment

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Administration sources said yesterday that Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan has been indicted by a county grand jury in New York in connection with a subway project by the construction company he formerly served as executive vice president.

Six officials of the Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J., were also named in the 137-count indictment, one source said. The source spoke on condition he not be identified.

Labor Department and White House spokesmen declined to comment on the matter.

The source said Donovan was flying to Houston yesterday to make a series of speeches when the indictment was handed down.

"The secretary was notified by telephone during an airport stopover" in Atlanta, and immediately headed back to Washington, this source said. He said the secretary planned to meet with his attorney, Dean Burch.

In Biloxi, Miss., traveling with President Reagan, White House deputy press secretary Peter Roussel said, "We have not received any information or been informed" about the indictment.

The grand jury in the Bronx was investigating charges that the Schiavone Co. falsified records in a federally funded subway project in New York.

Donovan, who was a part-owner as well as executive vice president of construction company before he joined the Reagan Cabinet in 1981, had been investigated for nearly a year by a special prosecutor in 1982.

In two separate 1982 reports on allegations that Donovan, as a construction executive, had ties to organized crime figures, special prosecutor Leon Silverman concluded there was "insufficient credible evidence" on which to prosecute the secretary.

Donovan had testified before the grand jury for 4½ hours on Sept. 24. At that time, he released the results of a lie-detector test that the secretary said cleared him of any involvement in an alleged scheme — before Donovan joined the Cabinet — to misrepresent the work of a minority subcontractor on the subway project.

"It is my hope that my appearance today and the presentation of the polygraph results will put an end once and for all to the baseless allegations that have unfairly plagued me throughout my public life," Donovan said after emerging from the courthouse.

The focus of the Bronx grand jury probe was the relationship between the Schiavone Co. and the Jopel Construction and Trucking Co. of the Bronx.

In its work at subway excavations in New York City, Schiavone hired Jopel to assist in hauling dirt. Under federal regulations, ten percent of the contract had to go to minority-owned companies. Jopel was co-owned by a black Bronx politician and by a reputed organized crime figure.

The investigation involved allegations that Schiavone overstated the amount of work that Jopel performed.

The lie-detector test on Donovan was performed at the secretary's request on Sept. 11 by Joseph Buckley of John E. Reid and Associates of Chicago.

Donovan described the firm as "one of the premier lie-detector experts in the country."

"I answered during that test all of the specific questions" raised by the district attorney and "needless to say I was not surprised that I had passed it with flying colors," he said last Monday.

In his report, Buckley said Donovan had denied that he knew about the circumstances of the hiring of Jopel or any illegal arrangements between the two companies. Buckley also said that Donovan denied any participation in Jopel's hiring and denied that Schiavone gave incorrect information about Jopel's work or misrepresented it.

The Schiavone Co. had sought to quash the grand jury investigation, charging that it was politically motivated and noting that Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola is a Democrat. But a judge refused the request, leading to Donovan's testimony and indictment.

NBC news reported that the indictment alleges one count of grand larceny, 125 counts of false documents and 11 counts of false statements. Federal authorities were asking Donovan to surrender at 8 a.m. Tuesday at the Bronx courthouse, the network said.

Alfred Stepan dies

Special to The Observer

Alfred C. Stepan, a benefactor and trustee emeritus of Notre Dame, died early yesterday in his Winnetka, Illinois home after a lengthy illness. He was 75.

A 1931 alumnus of Notre Dame, Stepan founded the Stepan Chemical Company in Northfield, Illinois. From 1954 to 1959 he was a member of the College of Arts and Letters Advisory Council and joined the University's Associate Board of Lay Trustees in 1958. He was named to the new board when the University's governance was reorganized in 1967, and retired from active status in 1979.

Stepan and his wife, Mary Louise, underwrote the construction of Stepan Center, a student activities building on campus and one of the nation's earliest geodesic domes, in 1962. He was also a principal benefactor of the $9.3 million Stepan Chemistry Hall, a research facility dedicated two years ago. Stepan was awarded an honorary degree from Notre Dame in 1963.

Friends may call at the Donnellan-Fitzpatrick-Franklin Funeral Home, 10045 Skokie Blvd., Skokie, between 3 and 9 p.m. today. Father Theodore Heshburgh, University president, will concelebrate the funeral mass at 1 p.m. Wednesday in Faith, Hope and Charity Church, Hill and Linden Streets, Winnetka.

Saint Mary's Board of Governance met last night in the Haggard College Center. Robert Foldesi, director of personnel at the College, spoke to the board about road pattern changes around LeMans Hall, and ticketing and parking violations, especially during football weekends. Student government is currently trying to have more space available for visitors during such weekends. Student officers also discussed plans and dates for Founder's Day, Tuesday, Oct. 9, and Octoberfest, Oct. 11 and 12. Students are also reminded this is Alcohol Awareness Week at the College. — The Observer

Two students were injured when their car crashed into a tree on Saint Mary's main road early Sunday morning. According to witnesses, the passengers, a Notre Dame man and a Saint Mary's student, lost control of their car returning to campus at approximately 2 a.m. The two were believed to have been taken to a local hospital. Security at the College declined to release any information concerning the incident until today. — The Observer

The Not Ready for Prime Time Players ?

The Saint Mary's Athletic Department has a little problem with its varsity basketball team, but if the department waits it out, all will blow over and once again, passion's fervor will fizzle. The basketball players will get some kind of coach (word is out one of the Notre Dame varsity basketball players is looking to earn "Corby money". He heard how cute Saint Mary's "girls" are when they try to dribble a basketball.).

The "girls" will still get to play, so what's all the fuss? The College maintains excellence in all areas and providing for healthy team spirit and exercise is in keeping with its ideals.

All this commotion about leaving monies out of the budget for the team is getting a bit out of hand. Imagine a coach resigning because of a few minor "oversights" which seem to be technicalities anyway. For instance, the team has three basketballs already and is looking for more. How many does the team need to play anyway? The team got new uniforms this year. One would think that would be sufficient. But no, the wrong uniforms came in and the team's upset. Orange pinafores would work just as well: pinafore pullovers are equally useful for scrimmages and games; are much better for distinguishing one team from the next, and are much cheaper than regular uniforms.

Not to get picky, but the team should be able to afford its own socks. There is no need to put that kind of a financial burden on the athletic department and in turn the administration. Let's be reasonable. Athletic departments just don't go around paying varsity players to play.

Now the former coach, Mike Rouse, adds insult to injury by expecting, no, demanding, mind you, that the department budget for a bus driver to chauffeur the team to and from away games. Does he think the "Belles" are a real and competitive varsity team that they have to go to the National Catholic Basketball Tournament all the way in Iowa? Besides wanting the team to compete in the tournament, he requested money so the team could return to campus in January, a few days before the beginning of the semester to train for the event. C'mon, this is just supposed to be for fun. Basketball is just a game.

There are plenty of local teams to last a season: Bethel College, Goshen College, and Clay High School. This would eliminate the hassle concerning a bus driver. Had Rouse the sense to be content with this, he would not have had to resign.

Let's be reasonable. The administration is trying to maintain a grip on reality in this situation. After all, Saint Mary's is an "all-girls" liberal arts college where sports is just a pastime. It's an edifying experience to see Mary A. Doctor practice hours a day, sacrifice time and studies to play Bethel College... six times a season.

It just doesn't make sense for the athletic department to consider the players or the coach in all of this when money is at stake. And the figures add up. Rouse recruited, on his own time, five students to come to Saint Mary's specifically to play basketball for the College. He translated that into more than $200,000 of revenue for the College but can't understand why the department will not budget $1000 for recruiting. It adds up in my book. These women were recruited by Rouse to come to Saint Mary's to be a part of the team so they could make many of the same sacrifices as Division I teams with zero benefits. So now, here are five Saint Mary's students who had hoped to be part of a team, who don't even have a coach and who may not have a team.

The resourceful athletic department will think of some way to get a new coach. In fact, the new Athletic Director, JoAnn Nestor could double as a coach, if the Notre Dame player changes his mind. Of course, she would have to get her chauffeur's license to drive the bus, but she wouldn't be doing anything the assistance varsity softball coach has not already done. Just trust the department. After all, they sprung for the team's shoelaces.

U.S. Supreme Court to judge in Oklahoma gay-rights legislation

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court, studying gay rights for the first time since 1967, said yesterday it will decide whether public school teachers may be fired for advocating or promoting homosexuality.

The court, issuing orders in some 1,000 legal disputes as its 1984-85 term began, agreed to judge the validity of an Oklahoma law that allowed school boards to fire teachers for such conduct.

A federal appeals court struck down the law, ruling that it violates teachers' free-speech rights.

In other matters, the court:

-Refused to reinstate the attempted-murder conviction of socialite Claus von Bulow, accused of trying to kill his wife so he could inherit $14 million and marry his ex-actress lover. Rhode Island prosecutors still can force von Bulow to stand trial a second time.

-Left intact a Dade County, Fla., program that sets aside some county-run construction projects for businesses managed by blacks. The program had been attacked as a form of unlawful "reverse discrimination" against whites.

-Barred U.S. businesses from answering questionnaires used by Arab nations to carry out their trade boycott of Israel. The justices left intact a federal law that bans businesses from disclosing, when asked by the Arabs, whether they have dealings with Israel.

-Agreed to decide in a case from Nebraska whether states may force motorists to have their photographs appear on driver licenses if that violates their religious beliefs.

-Set the stage for its latest journey into the quagmire of obscenity law by agreeing to consider reinstating a Washington state law that includes the word "lust" in its definition of what may be judged obscene.

-Let stand the federal government's regulation of the funeral industry by refusing to disturb rules imposed on 22,000 funeral homes nationwide two years ago.

In the gay rights case, the invalidated Oklahoma law stated that a teacher could be fired or otherwise denied work for engaging in "public homosexual conduct or activity."

The law defined that term as "advocating, soliciting, imposing, encouraging or promoting public or private homosexual activity in a manner that creates a substantial risk that such conduct will come to the attention of school children or school employees."

The National Gay Task Force challenged the law in a test case against the Oklahoma City school board, attacking the law as written without alleging that it had been used against any teacher or teacher applicant.

A federal judge ruled in 1982 that the law was valid, but the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals voted 2-1 last March 14 to reverse the ruling as it pertained to "advocating, encouraging or promoting" homosexuality.

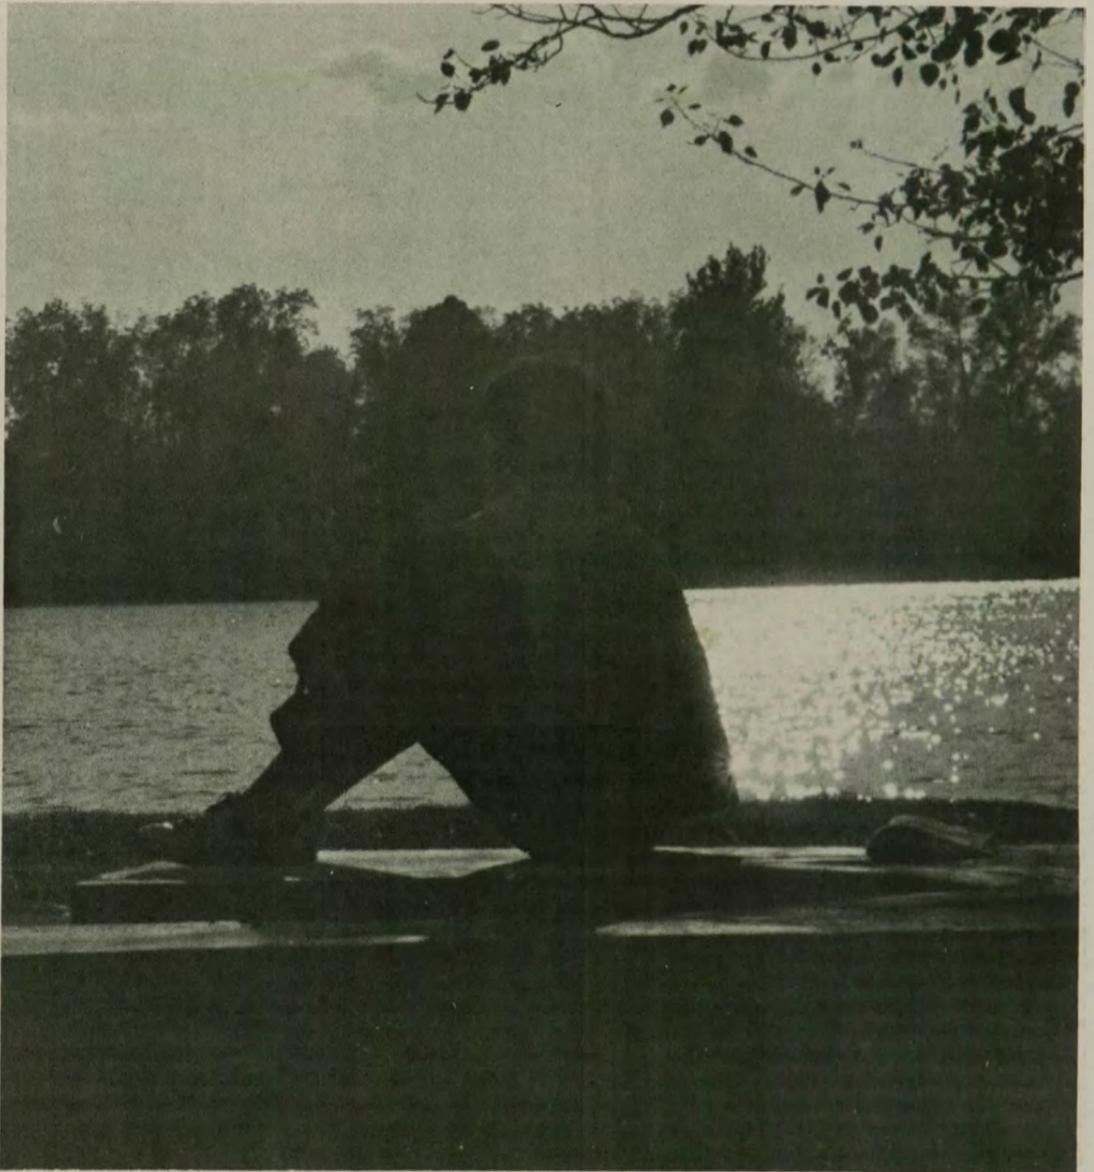

The appeals court cited past Supreme Court decisions in saying that the Constitution's First Amendment does not permit someone to be punished for advocating illegal conduct at some indefinite future time. The court said the Oklahoma law would allow firings without any showing of school disruptions.

In seeking Supreme Court review, school board lawyers argued that the law is capable of being read and enforced in a way that would not violate free-speech rights and still protect school children.

But lawyers for the National Gay Task Force attacked the law as "a heavy-handed attempt to limit debate on an important public issue by forbidding all public school teachers from speaking out on homosexuality."

The Supreme Court has not issued a decision in a homosexual rights case since 1967, when it ruled that aliens found to be homosexual may be deported as persons "afflicted with a psychopathic personality."

Numerous gay rights cases have come before the court since then, but the justices have consistently dodged them until now.

Chinese show off new weaponry

Associated Press

PEKING — China unveiled a homemade arsenal of nuclear and conventional weapons, including three-stage intercontinental ballistic missiles not shown in public before, at a lavish national day parade yesterday.

"It was a very impressive display of equipment," said a Western military observer. "It demonstrates a pretty good capacity in terms of standards of manufacturing."

Military attaches had their cameras whirring as ICBMs, an Exocet-type missile, an Israeli-like tank gun and new artillery filed through Tiananmen Square in a two-hour pageant celebrating the 35th anniversary of the People's Republic of China.

Normally, even invited military delegations fail to see China's latest weaponry.

Most impressive were the strategic missiles, including two squat submarine-launched missiles for China's first nuclear submarines.

Also on view were three medium-range CSS-2 ballistic missiles, three CSS-3 intermediate-range ballistic missiles, and three CSS-4 intercontinental ballistic missiles, painted red and white and towed in three stages.

With missiles able to hit targets up to 8,000 miles away, China, a nuclear power since 1964, counterweights the Soviet Union.

Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, the 80-year-old chairman of both the party and government military commissions, began the nation's first military review since 1959 by inspecting his troops from an open limousine.

He then spoke from the rostrum of Tiananmen Gate, urging the People's Liberation Army to be "alert at all times" and prepare for modern warfare.

Defense has taken low priority in China's "four modernization" program — behind agriculture, industry and science and technology — and Deng is streamlining the 4.2 million-member People's Liberation Army to purge leftist opponents and raise standards.

Soldiers, sailors, airmen, paratroopers, militia, armed police, women medics and cadets marched 25 abreast in formations of 14 ranks each. The 8,000 troops were well-drilled and snappy in their new uniforms. The promised restoration of the rank system was postponed, and none of the troops wore insignia.

Reagan blasts Democratic policies

Associated Press

President Reagan charged yesterday that his Democratic challenger has a "knee-jerk addiction to tax increases," while Walter Mondale accused the Republican incumbent of offering a "parade of alibis" to explain the Sept. 20 bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex in Beirut.

With just five weeks to go until Election Day, the rhetoric intensified in advance of Sunday's presidential debate. Both Reagan and Mondale planned to spend most of the week preparing for their televised confrontation, the first of two planned before Nov. 6.

"I don't doubt that the president's for peace," Mondale told a rally in New Brunswick, N.J. "But he has not mastered what he must know to command his own government and to lead.

"When the president doesn't know what he must, he can't command. It guarantees deadlock among his advisers. When a president is not vigorously involved, things just don't happen," he said.

"In Central America, there are no talks," Mondale said. "In the Middle East, there is no policy. In Lebanon, there was no protection. And on Earth, there is no arms control."

Reagan focused on the economy, ridiculing his opponent's plan to reduce the deficit.

"Some people have labored so long at making government bigger they've developed a knee-jerk addiction to tax increases," the president told the Economic Club of Detroit as he set out on a three-day campaign trip. "And every time their knee jerks, we get kicked."

Without referring to Mondale by name, Reagan said the policies that the Democrat "has supported all his political life" resulted in "an economic hangover that we must never ever suffer through again."

He said Mondale had inaccurately predicted that inflation would go up before it went down and that any economic recovery would be "modest or anemic."

Geraldine Ferraro, meanwhile, criticized the Reagan administration's economic policies, chiding Vice President George Bush for pulling out his wallet to illustrate his belief that pocketbook issues are all that matter to voters.

"That spontaneous gesture of selfishness tells us more about the true character of this administration than all their prepaid commercials," the Democratic vice presidential candidate said at a rally in Akron, Ohio. "Of course we care about money. But this is an election, not an auction and the U.S. government is not up for sale to the highest bidder."

Bush, also in the South, said Mondale's latest criticism of Reagan's meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko amounted to "more carping."

Cruise ship in dry dock capsizes injuring crew

Associated Press

NORFOLK, Va. - A cruise ship in dry dock with 145 sleeping crew members aboard capsized onto its side in the water yesterday, injuring 31, one critically, and briefly trapping dozens in cabins turned downside-up, authorities said.

"It's just like a nightmare," said Sylvia Ventineglia, a ship purser whose foot was cut by broken glass. "I'm just glad I'm alive."

The 487-foot, Panamanian-registered Veracruz I had arrived just hours before the 3:48 a.m. accident at Norfolk Shipbuilding & Drydock Corp. for ten days of routine maintenance work before the winter cruise season, said Bill Birkhead, a lawyer for the shipyard.

Between 7 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sunday, the white-hulled ship was supported on wooden blocks in the dry dock, a platform on which vessels are raised above the water to be cleaned, painted and repaired, Birkhead said. "There was no hint of any problem at that time," he said.

Shipyard guards also checked the vessel only minutes before it fell over into the water, crushing a wooden wall of the dry dock, Birkhead said.

"Why it happened we're still trying to determine," he said. The shipyard and Coast Guard are investigating.

Ventineglia, 39, of Manchester, England, said she was among the 145 crew members sleeping in their berths aboard the ship when it fell.

"I heard a little creaking noise, and I thought, 'Oh God, the ship is going over,'" she said.

As a radio, books, magazines and other items tumbled on top of her, she thought, "I'm never going to get out of here alive," but she managed to climb out, she said.

400 escape Ft. Worth hotel blaze

Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas - More than 400 guests, including several who were trapped and screamed for help from balconies, were evacuated Sunday night after a fire broke out in an 11th floor closet at a downtown hotel, officials said.

One person suffered smoke inhalation and was treated at the scene.

The fire, which started just after 9:30 p.m., reached five alarms before it was brought under control by 11 p.m., Fort Worth Fire Department spokesman Jim Noah said.

Several guests were trapped on the top floor of the 12-story hotel at Commerce Street and Interstate 30 after the fire started, some leaning over balconies shouting "Help us, please help us."

But Noah said those guests, their faces covered with wet towels, were later evacuated down the hotel's interior fire escape.

The fire, which drew scores of spectators to the east side hotel, apparently began in a maid's closet, and was confined to the top two floors, Deputy Fire Chief Don Peacock said.

The cause was under investigation, he said.

The more than 65 firefighters who responded to the fire were hampered by the building's height, Noah said.

Janie Williams of Austin, who was with her husband on the ninth floor when the fire began, said "nobody seemed to be real panicky. A hotel employee pounded on our door about 9:30 and told us to leave."

She added that "you couldn't hear the alarms on the top floors. They were muffled. We couldn't hear them until we got down to the third floor."

Government kept open by Congressional bill

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Congress passed a short-term money bill yesterday to keep government offices open until mid-week while the Senate tried to free itself from an impasse over civil rights legislation which held up a long-term spending package.

By a vote of 50-47 and without debate, the Senate passed the stop-gap measure that would keep money flowing at current levels to most of the government until midnight Wednesday. It then went to the White House.

"It's not much, but it's all we've got," said Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr., R-Tenn.

The House passed the stop-gap measure earlier in the day on a 240-79 vote.

The new fiscal year began at 12:01 a.m. EDT yesterday with most of the federal government technically out of money. Only four of 13 necessary appropriation bills for fiscal 1985 have been signed into law.

Nonetheless, government offices opened as usual yesterday morning, although the bill needed to provide most agencies with about $476 billion for the entire fiscal year is tied up in the Senate.

Last Saturday, the Senate passed a simple two-day extension of the deadline. The House decided instead to pass a three-day extension.

But even the simple stop-gap bill provided an opportunity for legislators seeking to attach pet projects to "must" legislation as the 98th Congress draws to a close.

Meanwhile, the tangle in the Senate remained unbroken as election-conscious legislators expressed growing discomfort with the thought that Congress might not meet its target of adjourning for the year at the end of the week.

"I've got a campaign schedule that starts Friday night," said Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the assistant GOP leader. "Somehow or other sanity has to return to this appropriations process."

Supporters of a House-passed civil rights measure aimed at negating a Supreme Court ruling that limited the application of federal anti-discrimination laws are fighting to attach it to the omnibus money bill.

They have won votes that the so-called Civil Rights Act of 1984 could be considered as an amendment to the money bill.

In a ruling Feb. 28, the high court said a law banning sex discrimination at colleges and other institutions receiving federal aid applied only to the program involved and not to the entire institution. The legislation would, in effect, reverse that decision.

But conservatives opposing the measure say it would go far beyond restoring federal laws to their status before the ruling.

Led by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the conservatives continued to block passage of the measure by trying to attach their own amendments on such politically volatile subjects as court-ordered school busing and gun control.

Even after the stalemate over that bill is resolved, senators also will be trying to attach other pet projects to the measure in the usual rush to find a piece of "must" legislation to which lawmakers can attach amendments that they want to see enacted before Election Day.

Has the arms control era come to an end?

In the aftermath of President Reagan's White House meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, the question is being raised as to whether or not real and substantive arms control talks between the United States and the Soviet Union will actually materialize. Democrats are charging that the meeting was merely for political purposes and that the President's record of hard line rhetoric and confrontation reveals his true intentions. The GOP, in turn, is hailing the meeting as proof that the U.S. arms build-up assumed to contain the maximum number of warheads it had been tested with.

This method of verification is now being threatened with the deployment of cruise missiles and mobile land based missiles. Cruise missiles are small and easy to hide, and since all cruise missiles need not be nuclear, it is quite difficult to pinpoint just how many nuclear cruise missiles each side may have. Mobile missiles are deployed in a manner in which they are shuffled around either above or below ground, making it difficult to monitor how many of them are actually deployed. Thus, with the advent of such new weapons systems, the traditional methods of verification are being undermined.

This situation is in turn a symptom of another historical pattern in arms control in which arms agreements contain loopholes allowing them to be subverted with new technology. Since SALT I, both sides got around the intent of the treaty by simply adding more warheads to each missile. SALT II dealt with this problem by fixing limits to certain categories of warheads, but it nevertheless did not restrict long-term cruise missile deployment. As both the U.S. and the Soviet Union have started cruise missile deployment, we have arrived at the current dilemma in which any arms control agreement will have serious verification problems.

No sooner have we accrued an arms control agreement and it seems to get subverted by advances in technology. This process is clearly evident today in U.S. talk about defensive space based 'Star Wars' technology, systems which would undermine the 1972 ABM treaty, often considered the most important agreement of all by arms control experts. Recent technological advances in beam weapons, lasers, and computers have led some scientists to believe that such defensive weapons may actually be feasible. The Reagan administration is planning on spending $2 billion in the coming year on research in these "Star Wars" systems.

Thus, we are caught in an historical pattern in which meaningful arms control is constantly suppressed by the onslaught of new technology. While new cruise missiles and mobile missiles frustrate verification efforts and make comprehensive arms control agreements difficult to achieve, even newer space technology threatens to undermine the 1972 ABM treaty which has been the cornerstone of all our arms control efforts to this time. U.S. unwillingness to relinquish its hold on these new advances make it highly unlikely that the Soviets will make cuts in their land based missile force. We seem to be caught in a maze of spiraling historical forces which make arms control more elusive than ever.

While some people claim that space technology is the utopian solution to ending the risk of nuclear war, more pragmatic thinkers seem to agree with former Defense Secretary Harold Brown who warned in 1979 that these weapons were a source of deep concern because he always felt that there was "some possibility that some clever briefer could delude a political decision maker into thinking that they were going to work." Certainly, pragmatism tells us that we won't mitigate the current arms race by starting another one in space.

What's needed is real and meaningful arms control, yet this may not be possible anymore. After you sift through all the political rhetoric and accusations from both the Democrats and the Republicans on this issue, ask yourself the deeper question of whether either candidate can achieve an arms control agreement. If it appears that the era of comprehensive arms control has indeed come to a halt, then we all need to ask ourselves where it will all end. If it is no longer possible to put a cap on the arms race, then just what does lie at the end of the track?

Paul Komyatte is a senior government major at Notre Dame.

Paul Komyatte

has succeeded and that now we are indeed ready to talk with the Soviets.

While the political accusations fly back and forth, however, both sides seem to be missing the real issue. The critical question right now is not which candidate will be more likely to achieve arms control, but whether or not a comprehensive arms control agreement is even possible in today's technological environment. After the Soviets walked out of strategic arms reduction talks (START) in Geneva last year to protest against new U.S. missile deployments in Europe, many experts warned that the era of comprehensive arms control was over.

Indeed, in some respects, the current arms control debate seems to be returning us to square one, back to the issues that were central to the 1972 SALT I agreement and Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) treaty.

With SALT I, the U.S. agreed to Soviet demands that we restrict Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) systems in turn for our desire that the Soviets limit their offensive missile systems. Today, the Soviets want to restrain current U.S. defensive 'Star Wars' technology, while the U.S. wants deep cuts in the Soviet arsenal of super powerful land based missiles. Neither side appears too willing to budge in its demands, leading to the current arms control stalemate.

The current standstill, however, has deeper roots than merely in two opposed uncompromising viewpoints. As technological advancements have sprouted forth through the years, the resulting new weapons systems are making accurate verification of new arms agreements more elusive and unlikely. Early arms control as developed in SALT I relied upon the counting of each side's missile launchers. Satellite reconnaissance made it easy to count these land based silos, bombers, and submarines used to launch missiles. As technology progressed, arms controllers started counting actual warheads on missiles. Each side's missile tests were monitored and it was accepted that each missile would be

The President escapes

We have just seen why the president's keepers wave off questions, curtail press sessions and simply refuse to call press conferences. Given a serious matter to talk about, Ronald Reagan will - under questioning - say things silly or false or both.

The serious matter was the death of Americans in Lebanon who were under his care and were not protected, despite ample advance warning that they were targets. The president's first remark was to claim that anyone who remodels a kitchen knows it is hard to get the task finished on time.

What would we say of his own Secret Service protectors if they left the president's life exposed, and afterward adopted the kitchen-remodeling life defense? The mere likening of their task to such a casual effort, with its incidental annoyances, would show they had no worthy conception of their duty.

Is the president less duty-bound to protect citizens he has committed to a dangerous situation than are the guards who surround him? Other lives become kitchen appliances to a man who had already lost, prior to this last bombing, 276 American lives in combat areas. When does he begin to realize that a battle zone is not a leaking faucet?

The president's next comment on the matter was even worse. The reporters were sealed off from him, but a college student got to him with a question, and he said that American lives were lost because his predecessors of "recent years" were guilty of "destruction of our intelligence capacity" because they felt that "spying is somehow dishonest."

Where does one begin to analyze an assertion so breathtakingly false where it is not irrelevant? Don't blame me, the president said; blame the nameless men who betrayed their high trust before I arrived. His aides went drearily about their customary task after he had slipped their controls - denying as much as they could of the statement, altering the rest, spreading its meaning, hoping to make it meaningless so no one would notice how McCarthyite the meaning of it is.

The argument was irrelevant because Reagan said it is the job of intelligence "to know in advance what the target might be." Everyone knew who the target was - not might be - in Lebanon. There was no failure of intelligence, just repeated failures of protection.

No one in authority ever acted on the view that "spying is dishonest." Some abuses were criticized, though only partly amended, as the result of a Republican administration's study under Gerald Ford. Some reduction of the CIA was made possible - indeed, necessary - by the ending of the Vietnam War.

But the destruction of the CIA is going forward now in ways that did not occur even under Richard Nixon. Nixon kept demanding from the CIA and FBI intelligence estimates that reflected his views rather than independent observation - e.g., that demonstrations in American were being funded from abroad. The agencies resisted that pressure.

Reagan asserts the same thing Nixon did, with no better evidence, and pays no attention to the agencies on this matter. He has Casey to do that - who has driven out two top analysts already because they would not make their findings reflect a prior policy commitment emanating from the White House. Those are the pressures that undermine the independence, accuracy and efficacy of intelligence units; and they have never been stronger than under a man who, in a cowardly manner, calls his predecessors the betrayers of their trust.

THE PRESIDENT THROWS A DOLLAR ACROSS THE RIO GRANDE

Where have all the salad bowls gone?

When nothing is really going on, discussion tends to return to the old standards. Let's say it, the football team has been doing well, no one has really had a chance to flunk a class yet, and even the weather has been boring. So, of late, it has been the trend to criticize what can always be criticized: the dining hall.

It is only in late September that such a furor could be created over such a seemingly insignificant thing as a salad bar. Salad bowls, ketchup, and Italian dressing suddenly potatoes when I know full well there are at least a dozen salt shakers in any given dorm. I cannot cry for those who have no fresh fruit when there are several pounds of bananas hidden in their wardrobes. The same goes for salad bowls, plates, trays, glasses, and everything else.

It is foolhardy to try to complain about such shortages in the dining hall when we ourselves cause them. If each student takes just one fork, then thousands will have to be replaced. If each student takes just one glass, then we will all have to put the ice in our hands and squeeze our fingers tightly to hold in the fruit punch. If each student takes a place setting, the dining hall will have to close down, as Hungarian noodle bake is not exactly a finger food.

The apparent mystique of owning something from the dining hall has indirectly caused a great deal of problems. It is simply impossible to stock a room or an apartment with an entire set of Buffalo china and expect the missing pieces to spontaneously regenerate. Yet, some students seem to think that this is the case.

It would be absolutely ridiculous to search students as they leave the dining hall, or to inspect each dorm room. The solution must come from within the student body. If, indeed, everyone wants to continue such "appropriations," then we have no business complaining. However, the thought of graduating with bowls and pieces of dining hall dinnerware in one's hope chest seems just a bit farcical, especially to those of us who are standing at the salad bar without bowls.

become necessary for the very continuance of life itself.

It always strikes me in a rather amusing manner that my fellow students complain about the lack of salad bowls, silverware, etc. The other day I was attacked by a Lyons junior who had no bowl for her daily fix of salad with blue cheese dressing. Her penny loafers pounded the tile with tremendous force as she verbally abused anyone who appeared even remotely connected with the dining hall. I was willing to bet that her next step would be to bombard those around her with handfuls of olives and croutons, had not some bowls arrived at that very moment. I was also willing to bet, however, that this same girl was in part responsible for the very shortage she was complaining about.

I find it difficult to feel sympathy for those who have no knives when those same people have enough dining hall silverware in their rooms to open a branch extension of Oneida. I feel no pity for those who have no salt for their

The significance of the next president

Tired of hearing about the election? Aren't we all? It seems as if the campaign for the Presidency is a never-ending process. Actually, one could say that Walter Mondale has been running for the White House since January 21, 1981. But only a little over a month is left for Walter.

Many people by now have probably made up their minds and just tuned out the candidates. The speeches are dull, repetitive, and full of rhetoric, most say. Politicians, the cynical point out, won't do what they say anyway, so what does it matter?

Brian McKeon

cal point out, won't do what they say anyway, so what does it matter?

Stop for a minute and think about the significance of this election. Many questions linger about a Reagan second term. First of all, there's the Supreme Court: At present, the Court is on the verge of a great shakeup, as many of the justices are getting old, and on the doorstep of retirement. The man elected President this year may have the chance of nominating three or more justices. Such a change is rare in American history, and the average voter fails to take notice of its importance. If Reagan is reelected, the new Court could have an impact not seen since the Warren Court of the 1960's, which effected great social change. Legal experts agree that decisions affecting abortion, school prayer, and civil and criminal rights could be watered down or even overturned.

Secondly, there is the case of the bulging federal deficits. Everyone agrees this is a major headache, but what will be done about it? Walter Mondale, the Democratic candidate, has already put his cards on the table, pledging to make some sort of dent in the deficit. Reagan has remained silent about his plans, but has made it clear that he does not wish to raise taxes.

What about relations with the Soviet Union? Relations with that superpower stand at a low not seen since the Cuban Missile Crisis. Much of the credit for that goes to Reagan. Only recently has he come out with a conciliatory tone, a seemingly blatant political move. Will he continue to talk to them, or revert to his past ways of antagonizing them?

Then there is Central America. This area will be a trouble spot for years to come, especially if the U.S. continues its interventionist policies. If Reagan gets a second term, will he invade Nicaragua? This country will not be the pushover that the U.S. found in Grenada.

The list goes on. This, like every Presidential election, will have great impact on all our futures. Will Reagan be voted back in, forming the proclaimed Republican majority? Or can Mondale make a startling comeback?

Whatever your preference, try to vote, and make an informed decision. This Sunday, October 7, the first of the Reagan-Mondale debates is set to take place. Watch it, and see who has a better grasp on the issues - don't rely on images to make your decision. These debates could decide whether Mondale makes a race of it or gets crushed in a landslide. If Reagan does well, the election is probably over; but if Mondale comes off as an actor in need of cue cards, than it could be an interesting month.

Cimino's argument doesn't stand up

Dear Editor:

As members of the Notre Dame community and of Dillon Hall, we would like to respond to Paul Cimino's column, "Howard Fights Back Against False Image" in the September 25 edition of The Observer.

We agree with Cimino that Howard, as well as any other dorm, does not deserve prejudiced or unjust reputations. Our purpose is to point out his poor journalistic techniques in defending his dorm's cause.

Any reputation Howard may have is not a "Dillon conspiracy" against the dorm. Cimino states, "boys" from Dillon are still harping on this subject (homosexuality) to try to get the whole campus to believe that Howard is a gay dorm." A conspiracy such as this is ludicrous. Any reputation any hall has is held in the minds of certain individuals all over campus. Just as Cimino does not wish to be branded with a generalized reputation of his dorm, so the members of Dillon do not appreciate being labeled as a whole.

Cimino goes on to state that girls attend Howard Hall parties. Wonderful! Obviously girls are going to attend a major party such as this. Cimino wrongly uses football players as a measure of ultimate heterosexuality. He lists a group of football players and says they don't live in Dillon - they live in Howard. What is his point? It appears that the author believes that athletes are a sign of heterosexuality in a dorm. Once again this is an irrelevant point.

Cimino next claims that Dillon has the quantity and Howard has the quality. The author believes that the quality of an individual is a measure of his athletic prowess. Notre Dame has a strong tradition of an athletic student body, but academic and social aspects are equally valid judges of quality in individuals.

Hence, Cimino does not further his dorm's cause. He writes the article in such a fashion that it parallels the immature attitudes he wishes to expel from our minds. Cimino would have done better if he had not issued a personal attack on Dillon, but rather spoke out against dorm stereotyping across campus. To enhance further relations between dorms, such articles as Paul Cimino's should not be written, nor read by the Notre Dame campus community.

Post-game food fight shows poor taste

Dear Editor:

Wow, what a food fight after Saturday's game! They always said N.D. students have the most spirit.

I couldn't believe it when someone said, "Shame on you. You're wasting food while there are millions of starving people in the world." I told them to stop bothering us because we gave up our Wednesday lunches every week.

Then they had the nerve to say "You kids really made a mess for the dining hall workers." To this I confidently rebuked, "Well they're supposed to clean up after us. That's their job, isn't it?"

We're so neat. We kids really know how to celebrate. I don't know why they say we're not grown up enough to drink beer, do you?

Texas gets top spot; Irish ranked sixteenth

Associated Press

The Texas Longhorns, despite the loss of 26 seniors from last year's 11-1 club, have become the fourth team this season to claim the No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press college football poll while Vanderbilt made the Top Twenty for the first time in 26 years.

Texas' 28-3 victory over Penn State, coupled with No. 1 Nebraska's 17-9 upset at the hands of Syracuse, raised the Longhorns from their second-place ranking of a week ago and climaxed a steady rise to the top. Texas, No. 6 in the preseason poll, has jumped one spot in each regular-season poll and became No. 1 yesterday for the first time in three years.

While Nebraska tumbled from first place to eighth and Penn State skidded from fourth to 11th, Texas received 51 of 60 first-place votes and 1,183 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. The Longhorns were followed by Ohio State, Washington, Boston College and Oklahoma.

"Any way you look at it, you have to feel proud to be No. 1, and we are," said Texas Coach Fred Akers.

"I think we deserve it (the No. 1 ranking) as much as anybody I've seen. We are young and we are building, but we're playing with just a terrific effort and the top players are making the top plays."

Texas last was No. 1 midway through the 1981 season — and promptly lost to Arkansas 42-11.

"It didn't last long," Akers said. "I will mention that to the team."

Ohio State, a 35-22 winner over Minnesota received five first-place votes and 1,113 points. Washington received one first-place ballot and 1,008 points and jumped from sixth to third with a 52-7 rout of Miami of Ohio. Boston College, which was idle, inched from fifth to fourth with two firsts and 1,005 points while Oklahoma defeated Kansas State, 24-6, and rose from seventh to fifth. The Sooners received the other first-place vote and 959 points.

Florida State, which trimmed Temple, 44-27, jumped from ninth place to sixth with 846 points. Brigham Young did not play but rose from eighth to seventh with 836 points, followed by Nebraska with 794. Oklahoma State climbed from 10th to ninth with 751 points after a 31-7 triumph over Tulsa and Southern Methodist went from 11 to 10th with 691 points thanks to a 26-17 victory over Texas Christian.

The Second Ten comprises Penn State, Georgia Tech, Michigan, Miami, LSU, Notre Dame, UCLA, Auburn, Vanderbilt and Georgia. Syracuse, which lost to Rutgers 19-0 two weeks ago, did not make the Top Twenty despite its upset of Nebraska.

Last week's Second Ten was SMU, Georgia, Clemson, Michigan, Southern California, Miami, UCLA, Georgia Tech, Notre Dame and Auburn.

Clemson, which was No. 2 two weeks ago, dropped out of the Top Twenty by losing to Georgia Tech 28-21, its second straight setback. Southern Cal fell out after losing to LSU 23-3.

Meanwhile, LSU, 3-0-1, appeared for the first time this season and Vanderbilt, 4-0 for the first time since 1950, made it with a 30-21 victory over Alabama.

Volleyball team meets Bowling Green tonight

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

After two straight losses, the Notre Dame volleyball team will try to get back on the winning track tonight as it takes on Bowling Green at 7 p.m. in the ACC Arena.

The Irish will be facing the Falcons for the first time in Notre Dame's short volleyball history, and it appears as though the battle will prove to be a hard-fought one.

"Bowling Green is a vastly improved team over last year," says Irish head coach Art Lambert. "They took Central Michigan to four games just like we did, so it should be a pretty even match-up."

Although the Irish have been struggling up to this point with a 4-6 record, a few team members have performed very well.

Senior hitter Josie Maternowski has been far and away the most consistent player on the team. She leads the team with a .229 spiking percentage and 62 digs. She also has totalled 79 kills.

Freshman hitter Kathleen Morin has been a very pleasant surprise for the Irish. She has a .199 spiking percentage and eighteen service aces.

Sophomore Karen Sapp has rebounded from a rough start to total 74 kills, second on the team. Junior Tracy Bennington also has helped the Irish greatly at the net, leading the team in blocks.

With four games in the next five days, this will be a very important week for Lambert and his team.

against Kelly Blyse, she would have beaten her, but she lost in a close match."

Overall, Petro, who guides a team with only two scholarships and no assistants, was fairly pleased with her team's outing. The weekend helped point out areas where the Irish are in need of improvement or help. However, Petro explained that no changes in the lineup will occur due to the weekend outing.

"I think the tournament gave us a chance to play more tennis (and) gave us a chance to realize what we need to work on, especially against good competition," said Petro. "It gives us a little insight into what kind of practice we need to do."

The Irish will use this week to warm up for the Irish Invitational, which will be played at Notre Dame next weekend.

Spartan coach is improving

Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Michigan State basketball Coach Jud Heathcote, who suffered a heart attack last week, is in satisfactory condition and improving, the university's director of sports medicine said yesterday.

Dr. David Hough said Heathcote's recovery after last Thursday's attack is "right on target."

Heathcote, 57, was expected to be out of the coronary care unit of Lansing's St. Lawrence Hospital within the next two days and released from the hospital in "another week or so," Hough said.

He said Heathcote probably would be able to resume some of his head coaching duties in six to eight weeks.

Michigan State's first basketball game is scheduled for Nov. 24 against Canisius in Buffalo, N.Y. The Spartans' first Big Ten game is against Ohio State on Jan. 3.

Heathcote became Michigan State's head coach in April 1976 after five seasons as head coach at the University of Montana. He led the Spartans to the NCAA championship in 1979.

was a lot of traffic, and I really couldn't see the ball before it was too late. When I saw it was already on my shoulder pads."

Brown has made his share of freshman mistakes, but he also has done a good job learning a new position and a new offensive system.

"Timmy is adapting pretty well," said receiver coach Mike Stock. "He has been forced into activity prematurely, and he has been playing even though he doesn't know the whole system totally."

Stock has been pleased with Brown's performance thus far, but he would have rather not had the newcomer thrown into the system so abruptly.

"Timmy should have had the chance to be worked in a little at a time," commented Stock. "I'm really pleased with the way he has fought against adversity, but I think he is playing too much too early. My philosophy is not to play freshmen that much. I like to slide freshmen into the system easy."

Brown has learned the pass patterns quickly, but he still is having a difficult time learning the defenses of Notre Dame's opponents.

"It wasn't really too complicated to learn the system," said Brown. "It has been difficult learning the defensive coverages every week. Each team runs their defensive coverages differently and I've had a hard time picking that up."

Brown's biggest asset as a receiver is his speed, although he still hasn't had the opportunity to really use it. His speed is evident from his personal best of 46.9 seconds for 400 meters.

"Because of my speed I can get free a little easier," comments Brown. "That way I don't have to work on my patterns as much. If I use my speed I can blow by a defender. The coaches keep telling me that they are going to send me deep, but they haven't yet. I'm just waiting to go deep."

Now that Brown has picked up the basics of the Notre Dame offense, he now has the chore of learning the finer points of the system, which includes the improvement of his blocking techniques.

"He needs to concentrate on the specifics of his game," comments Stock. "He knows the basic fundamentals and assignments; he now needs to smooth and iron out the minor points of his game."

"He has really improved his blocking since coming to Notre Dame," continued Stock. "Blocking was one phase of his game that he really needed to work on coming out of high school."

With an average of 12 yards per reception, however, the Notre Dame coaches may have a little patience with Brown.

Tennis

that they get out and practice," said Petro. "It's difficult to play against those types of people when your practice time is as limited as ours is."

In doubles, the part of the team which possesses the main question mark for the Irish this far, Notre Dame's showing was highlighted by a strong showing by Panther and senior co-captain Laura Lee. The Panther/Lee team made it to the semi-final round after winning a first-round match by default, a second-round match over the Northwestern team of Tina Oechsle and Kristin Laux, 1-6, 6-1, 6-3, and a third-round match by a tally of 6-3, 6-3 over Tennessee's Chris Nagel and Celestine Kelly.

In the semi-final action, however, the two Irish players were stopped by the winner of the singles action, Kathryn Bumstead and Elizabeth Moorman of Vanderbilt, 6-1, 6-1.

"Our doubles were outstanding in some matches and not so outstanding in other matches," said Petro, who says she would like to see more aggressiveness on the part of the Irish in doubles, as well as in singles.

"They (the Irish players) have to develop some consistency," said Petro. "They have to keep going after it all the time and not get lazy or lay back."

"Had she (Panther) played a little bit more of an aggressive game

Major league teams prepared for tonight's baseball playoff games

National League

Associated Press

CHICAGO - San Diego Padres Manager Dick Williams has a plan he hopes will take some pressure off the commissioner's office.

"We're going to try to take the decision of what to do with that Sunday game here (during the World Series) out of the commissioner's hands," Williams said.

If the Cubs win the best-of-five National League Championship Series, beginning here today, the World Series will start in the American League to avoid weekday games in lightless Wrigley Field.

The three games on Friday, Saturday and Sunday would be played in Chicago - with a 2:45 CDT start on Sunday, more than an hour later than the 1:25 CDT start of the playoff games.

If the Padres win, the World Series begins in San Diego and moves to the AL city over the weekend.

"We'll just put the weekend games in the American League, and we'll host the first two in San Diego," Williams said.

Pitching in the playoff opener will be right-hander Rick Sutcliffe, 16-1, for Chicago and right-hander Eric Show, 15-9, for San Diego.

The Cubs, who last won the NL pennant in 1945, and the Padres are the only two teams in the league that have not been to the playoffs since 1969, when the current division format was adopted.

Manager Jim Frey, in his first season with the club, guided the Cubs to the NL east title with a record of 96-65; the Padres won the West with a mark of 92-70. The two teams split the season series 6-6.

After Sutcliffe, Frey will go with Steve Trout, the only left-hander on the starting staff, and right-hander Dennis Eckersley. He has not named a fourth starter.

Williams will start left-hander Mark Thurmond in Game Two, then right-hander Ed Whitson. Game Four starter could be Tim Lollar. He is expected to be ready although he missed his final start of the season on Sunday in Atlanta with a stiff shoulder.

Show is 6-1 lifetime against the Cubs, his only loss coming this year to Sutcliffe.

American League

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - There are plenty of impressive numbers being tossed around in anticipation of tonight's opening game of the American League Championship Series between the Detroit Tigers and the Kansas City Royals.

The Tigers were 6-0 at Royals Stadium this year. Kansas City has reached the playoffs five of the past nine seasons. Detroit got off to the fastest start in major-league history and wound up with baseball's best record. The Royals finished hotter than any team.

What does it all mean?

"When this starts, none of that matters," Kansas City second baseman Frank White said yesterday as the teams went through workouts here.

What does matter?

"Everybody knows that Willie Wilson ignites the Royals and that George Brett is the power guy," said Jack Morris, 19-11, Detroit's Game One starter. "That's nothing new."

"Willie Wilson is going to dictate a lot of what happens," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "And George always seems to pop in there somewhere."

Bud Black, who will start tonight for Kansas City, is making a more general approach.

"They have a well-balanced lineup," Black, 17-12, said of a Tiger team that led the majors in home runs and runs scored. "They have power, they have speed and they can hit for average."

The best-of-five series offers a marked contrast in teams.

Detroit roared to a 35-5 start and coasted before winning the American League East title on Sept. 18. Kansas City began the season without Wilson, who was serving a suspension for cocaine use, and Brett, who had undergone knee surgery, and had to scrap before winning the weaker American League West on Sept. 28.

"Nobody expected us to be here," Brett said. "Not until there were two weeks left to go."

Negotiations underway

Umpires threaten to strike tonight

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Union and league officials negotiated by telephone yesterday, without the help of new Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, to try to avert a strike by major league umpires on the eve of baseball's postseason playoffs.

Ueberroth reported for his first day on the job and said he would not interfere. He vowed the playoffs would go on regardless, with "somebody out there to call the game," be they amateurs, minor league or regular umpires.

The best-of-five playoffs start today in both the American and National Leagues.

Telephone negotiations were being conducted yesterday by Richie Phillips, attorney for the umpires' union, and the league presidents, Bobby Brown of the AL and Chub Feeney of the NL.

Calls to Phillips' home and office in Philadelphia were not returned and Brown and Feeney, at the playoff sites, were unavailable for comment.

Ueberroth, who was president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, succeeded Bowie Kuhn as baseball's boss and said he would not enter into the negotiations.

"We have presidents of both leagues and it's their responsibility," he said. "The commissioner's office is not involved at all."

Reminded that the playoffs were just a day away, Ueberroth said: "More often than not, negotiations with both parties in a labor dispute will go down to the wire."

"Obviously, umpires are going to work the games, but how that'll be done is really up to Bobby Brown and Chub Feeney. It could be amateur umpires, could be minor league umpires. There'll be somebody out there to call the game."

Although Ueberroth insisted there still wasn't a strike since a game had not yet been played, Paul Runge, vice president of the Major League Umpires Association, said from his home in El Cajon, Calif., "It's definite. We've instructed the umpires of the American and National Leagues to go home."

"I don't think there's a whole lot of chance to work the playoffs or the Series unless (the leagues) do a complete turnaround. I don't think anybody in their right mind likes a strike," Runge said. "I think we've been forced into a strike."

Melissa Sommer and her Irish teammates had a successful weekend, as Notre Dame won a game and tied one in its own tri-meet. Mark S. Pankowski has details of the games in his story at right.

Field hockey team succeeds in tri-meet during weekend

By MARK S. PANKOWSKI
Sports Writer

This past weekend was a successful one for the Notre Dame field hockey team, which picked up its first win of the 1984 season.

At the tri-meet played on Alumni Field, the Irish evened their season record at 1-1-1 by tying their first game and soundly winning their second.

In its first match Friday, the Notre Dame team outplayed Eastern Michigan yet could only manage a 2-2 tie. In their second game, again the Irish outplayed their opponents, but this time they romped to a 7-1 win over Dayton.

In the Eastern Michigan game, Beth Bisignano and Molly McCabe each had one goal for Notre Dame. However, the real story of the first match was Notre Dame's failure to take advantage of its scoring opportunities. Out of 28 shots on goal, the Irish generated only two goals.

First-year head coach Jill Lindenfeld said she was frustrated with the team's lack of scoring in Friday's game.

"We should have won the first game," Lindenfeld said. "We had a total of 28 shots on goal and three of them hit the post. We did everything but score."

The Irish team helped ease Lindenfeld's frustration by thrashing Dayton the next day, 7-1. The list of players scoring in Saturday's game read like the team roster.

Leading Notre Dame's scoring was Corinne DiGiacomo with three goals and one assist, followed by Melissa Sommer with two goals and two assists, and Bisignano with one goal and one assist.

Regina Degnan also had one goal and one assist and Benet DeBerry rounded out the team's scoring with an assist.

As could be expected, Coach Lindenfeld had much praise for her team's performance Saturday.

"We played great," Lindenfeld said, "We used the width of the field, made good use of the circle, and passed well to get around the defense."

Lindenfeld mentioned several of her players as having a good game against Dayton. She was especially pleased with the play of DiGiacomo and Sommer.

"Melissa and Corinne were definitely our standouts in the second game," the Irish coach said.

However, Lindenfeld still saw an area that needed improvement.

"We haven't been scoring off corner shots," she said. "Our corner-shot execution needs to be worked on."

Not to sound too critical, Lindenfeld was quick to sum up her feelings about the weekend, saying, "We played brilliantly."

Lindenfeld and the Notre Dame field hockey team won't have long to savor their victory, however. They put their 1-1-1 season record on the line today against Michigan State at 4 p.m. on Alumni field.

After today's game, the Irish travel to games at Goshen College Thursday and Western Michigan Friday.

Tim Brown

Rookie accepts starting position

By JOE BRUNETTI
Sports Writer

For most freshmen at a big-time college football school the first year is a learning experience with most action being seen from the sidelines and occasional spot duty coming in games in which the outcome has long been decided. However, for Notre Dame split end Tim Brown that is not the case.

The freshman from Dallas, Tex., has seen considerable action already this year, including a start against Missouri last week, brought on by injuries to regular starters Joe Howard and Alvin Miller.

"Coach Faust told me that I could be the fourth receiver coming in this year," said Brown, "so I really wasn't expecting to play as much as I am. I'm really pleased with the playing time I am getting. I don't care how much time I get as long as I'm playing."

Seeing regular duty for a freshman is difficult enough just trying to learn a college system, but Brown also has had the task of learning a new position as well. The 170-pounder played running back throughout his high school career at Woodrow Wilson High School while amassing more than 4,000 all-purpose yards.

"Coach Faust recruited me as a receiver last year," commented Brown. "I expected to be recruited as a receiver coming out of high school because of my weight. I don't weigh enough to play back in college."

After catching five passes in his first three games as a college player, he grabbed five balls in his debut start against the Tigers to raise his season total to ten receptions for 120 yards. However, he also still has the freshman jitters which resulted in two dropped passes against Missouri.

"I've been doing things like dropping passes that I shouldn't be doing and haven't done before," said Brown. "I think I just need to settle down a bit."

"On the first one I knew that if I caught it I could score. I guess I got a little excited and I tried to run with the ball before I caught it," said Brown. "On the second one there

Brown's first dropped pass is the typical example of a receiver getting too excited to catch the ball and then forgetting to do the task at hand: catch the football.

Women's tennis team gains much experience

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team had a successful trip this weekend, as the Irish were able to gain some much-needed Division I experience and realize any weaknesses they had in the Northwestern Invitational held in Evanston, Ill.

"There were some good matches that were good wins and there were some matches that I thought we should have won," said Irish head coach Sharon Petro. "But overall, when you take a look at the whole team effort, I think we did fairly well when you consider the type of competition that was there."

The tournament, which developed matches by picking the opponents at random from a field of 64 entries in singles and 32 in doubles, saw Notre Dame junior Sussie Panther advance to the fourth round before losing to Kelly Blyse of highly touted Northwestern, 7-5, 6-4. En route to her meeting with Blyse, Panther knocked off Maureen Harney of Southern Illinois, 6-0, 6-4, Tennessee's Angy Kreis, 7-5, 6-4 and Jaime Plumber of Kentucky, 6-4, 6-2.

Notre Dame's second seed in team play, junior Mary Colligan, played tough but also was overcome in the end by a Northwestern starter, 6-3, 2-6, 6-3. Irish freshman Michelle Dasso likewise lost in the first round but was able to rebound slightly and make it to the semi-finals of the consolation round.

"The Northwestern people play a very hard baseline game and you can do that when you get out and practice for the number of hours

Still undefeated

Sorin crushes St. Ed's in interhall

By BRIAN MCCARTHY
Sports Writer

The second week of men's interhall football ended Sunday with only three teams remaining undefeated and untied. One of those teams, Sorin, posted its second straight impressive Rockne division victory, an 18-0 pounding of St. Ed's.

The two defenses dominated the first half, which ended without a score. However, Sorin broke loose in the second half, scoring three touchdowns — two on passes from quarterback Tim Laboe.

The first touchdown was a five-yard toss to Mike Scotty and the second was a forty-yard strike to Jim Folstrom. Sorin's other points came on an eight yard dash by tailback Sean Garrett, who ran impressively throughout the game.

In the second Rockne division contest, Carroll earned its first victory of the season by downing Pangborn, 3-0. Both defenses played well, as neither team was able to mount a serious drive. Carroll's score was a twenty-five yard Kevin Corbley field goal that followed an errant Pangborn punt snap which gave Carroll the ball on the eight yard line. Carroll evened its record to 1-1 while Pangborn fell to 0-1-1.

Holy Cross opened its season on a winning note, as it downed Cavanaugh, 7-0. Holy Cross quarterback Joe Casper scored the winning touchdown on a ten-yard naked reverse.

In other Leahy division action, Stanford's Dan O'Donnell booted his second field goal of the year, a thirty-five yarder in the third quarter, as Stanford slid by Zahm, 3-0. Stanford's record now stands at 1-0-1, and Zahm fell to 1-1.

Morrissey, fresh from a twenty-nine point offensive explosion a week earlier, was hoping to overcome Dillon in their Parseghian division match. However, Dillon's defense remained unscored-upon, as they shut out Morrissey, 16-0. Dillon's offensive firepower was provided by Scotty Bentivenga on a ten-yard run and Stosh Marcyk on a ten-yard reception.

After being shut out last week, the Flanner offense let loose, as they cruised to a 17-3 victory over Grace. Flanner fullback Larry Diedrick dove Tim Brown, a freshman wide receiver on the Notre Dame football team, was vaulted into a starting role for the Irish last weekend. The rookie performed particularly well, as Joe Brunetti explains in his profile of Brown above.
