Nine assaulted Sunday on South Bend Avenue during morning attack

By LIZ MILLER
Copy Editor

Three Notre Dame seniors and six alumni reportedly were assaulted early Sunday morning by two men with clubs at 1406 South Bend Avenue, according to junior Maria R. Kronstein, a friend of the victims. Three head injuries were reported and an alumnus reportedly required 18 stitches.

According to one of the victims, who asked not to be identified, after the incident a South Bend policeman said it would have been all right to "beat the intruders and leave them in a field."

The victims allegedly lost between $100 and $150 each in cash, in addition to credit cards and checkbooks, said Kronstein.

Among those allegedly assaulted were six alumni staying off-campus. Other alleged victims of the incident were three off-campus Notre Dame students.

The incident was said to have occurred at approximately 4 a.m. Sunday, when two men allegedly entered a Winnebago camper which was parked outside the house. They reportedly used large clubs to threaten and then beat the alumni who were sleeping in the camper.

The incident was said to have lasted over 45 minutes.

The alleged robbers were leaving the Winnebago when some friends of the victims drove up in a van belonging to one of the victims. One of the men reportedly smashed the front window of the van with his club. The occupants of the van then got out and tried to surround the assailants, who allegedly hit several of them with the clubs and then ran off into the woods behind the Sunnyside Beverage Company, next door to the house.

One victim said he immediately called the South Bend Police Department but was disconnected. He said the person answering the phone told them they had to wait until morning to file their complaint.

The victims called back later and received help. A squad car later patrolled the neighborhood.

A patrol car stopped at the house but the officer did not get out of the car, it was reported. He took the names of the victims and other information, but allegedly said, "There's nothing we can do." He reportedly told the victims to go out looking for the two men themselves.

"They expected us to take care of the problem," one of the victims said.

The victims were assisted Sunday morning when Chief of Detectives Donald Ruszkowski was called in to start work on their case.

When reached for comment, South Bend Lieutenant Badicz, who was on duty at the time, confirmed the facts of the assault. However, when asked about the officer's alleged remarks, Badicz declined comment.

Fielding faculty questions

Student government to evaluate communication and coordination

By MIKE MILLEN
Staff Reporter

Senate effectiveness and the lack of communication between coordinators and senators was discussed at last night's meeting of the Student Senate.

According to Student Body President Rob Bertino, motivation is lacking. "We've got to get our butts moving," he said, adding "the senate depends upon the people within it." Bertino later expressed dismay because little "new business" was introduced at the meeting.

The discussion started with Executive Coordinator Ray Wise's observation that a problem existed between senators and executive coordinators. Wise said his commissioners might be working on ten or 15 different projects, but mention to the senate of a particular project might not occur until its completion. This resulted in senators sometimes starting projects already underway.

The discussion then moved to the role which senators plays in student government. Student Body Vice President Cathy David asked Senator Tom Abood to define his role as a senator. "I'm beginning to question that," he replied.

As a result of the discussion, two committees were formed. One to examine the structure of the senate, the other to attempt at improved communication.

A resolution recommending "all cars remaining over break be parked in one confined area" unanimously passed. Introduced by Senator Javier Oliva, the plan is designed to make "an orderly way where snow plows can do their work."

"We're not forcing them (to use the lot)," Oliva said, but he thinks students will, to avoid "theft and vandalism."

Student Activities Board Manager Kevin McGovern announced an upcoming Fixx concert. Slated to be held the evening before the Penn State game, tickets will sell for about $12. Because of the short notice, McGovern said there will be no lottery, adding, "I know it's not the best thing as far as students are concerned, but time constraints (are a problem)."

A student exchange was announced by Executive Coordinator Alison Yurko. "The exchange would involve three or four members of student government," she said, explaining that students would stay with Notre Dame senate members for a weekend. Yurko added that the fate of the Lil' Sibs Weekend was to be discussed at a meeting with rectors later that evening. An Observer reporter was not allowed to cover the meeting because Christian Life Commission members did not wish to be quoted.

Senator Tom Abood reported that some of his constituents were having problems bringing alcohol onto campus. Executive Coordinator Ray Wise said one of his commissioners would look into the problem, although a memorandum last week allegedly directed gate security not to hinder students transporting alcohol.

Last week's foodsales workshops were successful, according to Senator Dan MacNamara. They were not mandatory, but MacNamara said the 70 percent turnout rate was "pretty good."

Senator Pat Browne said the student store project was underway. "The preliminaries look pretty good," he said, adding "We met with Mr. Mason (vice president for business affairs) last week. He wants us to work through the bookstore." Browne said OBUD's telephone survey, designed to see if students were "brand conscience," will be completed this week.

College is 'running smoothly' under administration of Duggan

By ANNE GALLAGHER
Staff Reporter

As Dr. John Duggan celebrates his tenth year as president of Saint Mary's College he is able to point to a term which has seen the College grow in size and increase its endowment five times since his arrival in 1975.

Dr. John M. Duggan

"I think we've developed a lot of momentum over the past ten years and I think the College is in good shape," he said.

Duggan accepted the position at Saint Mary's after serving 22 years in administration, both at Yale University, where he was assistant dean of freshman, and Vassar, as vice president student affairs.

"Saint Mary's is a switch up from Vassar," he said, commenting that he enjoys being in a climate designed for educational growth solely for women.

"I have three goals for myself and the College," he said. "First, whenever I get the chance, I want to be able to compensate the faculty better; a first rate faculty is the only way to make a first rate college."

"Secondly," he continued, "I want to increase the annual giving and endowment. The endowment money goes directly into the school, and it allows us to spend more on the students and provide for a better education."

"Finally," he said, "I want to build, particularly the science building."

A new science building is one of Duggan's major projects in his twenty-five million dollar EXCEL campaign. Over the past three years, fifteen million dollars has been raised, and the Cushwa-Leighton library is one of the results.

With the completion of the science building, Duggan will have two new buildings to his credit. Yet he is adamant about maintaining the present size of the college. "I don't think we'll get much bigger beyond the science building, and I don't want to see us enlarge our population," he said.

Duggan feels it would be detrimental to the College to attempt an increase in enrollment, pointing out the number of college-age students is diminishing rapidly. He also believes a larger population would be harmful to the spirit of Saint Mary's. "We would lose something special about the place," he said.

"Saint Mary's is small enough so that we don't lose sight of the individual, yet it is large enough that we can offer the classes and sports we want to," he said.

He added that the presence of Notre Dame is an extra benefit. "The University greatly adds to our diversity," he said, indicating that the exchange of students is beneficial to both campuses.

"If I had a daughter," he said, glancing at the office pictures of his five sons, "I'd want her at an all women's college."

"I think my job has become easier over the years," Duggan concluded. "The College is running more smoothly now -- we do things better."

What's Behind Curtain Number Three?

Tom Mowle
Day Chief
Inside Tuesday

Walter Mondale looked pretty good in Sunday's debate with President Reagan. Pretty good, that is, compared to his popular image. And pretty good compared to Reagan's surprisingly poor performance. But the debate performance may not have a significant impact on the election. There were several times when you could have said "Reagan lost a few votes there," but he has lots of votes to lose. On the whole, Mondale looked pretty good, but there were times when he looked very bad, like when he laughed at his own joke.

Then again, perhaps Mondale's overall performance will shine in comparison with Reagan's disorganization. The President's closing address may rank with the worst ever given; he did not look good saying "No, that didn't happen," when Mondale challenged his record. And he may fare even worse in the next debate, on foreign policy.

Perhaps the reason no one is saying who won the debate was that both lost. Mondale did better than expected, but he wasn't good enough to sway people who had already decided for Reagan. Reagan may have lost people with his barrage of numbers, but Mondale was almost as numbing.

It is far too early to speak for the general public, but in my case, I could not help but think with all the evasion and imprecision on both sides, that there must be someone better than these two men. I don't think I'd want either elected this year; unfortunately, there is not even a semi-viable third-party candidate at whom to throw my vote.

I would not want Walter Mondale as president. Image does make a difference in politics and, agree or disagree with him, Mondale has a poor image. This will not make him a better negotiator with the Russians or anyone else. Religious fanatics don't care who the president is, they are too romantic to fear death. But the Russians are not likely to try to do anything risky to world peace unless they think they can get away with it.

Since World War II, in Korea, Berlin, Cuba, Angola, Afghanistan and elsewhere, the Russians have only taken risks when they thought they could succeed. Sometimes they did; when they didn't, they backed down. They probably have no more desire for war than we do, but if they are confident that Mondale is weak, they will naturally see what they can get away with. They did with Kennedy and were wrong. Whether Mondale would be weak or not is less important than whether or not he would be so perceived.

Reagan, on the other hand, would not be much better. Tensions are high between the Soviets and this country; under such conditions a slight miscalculation could lead to annihilation. In response to this situation, Reagan proposes a space defense system. To summarize a complex issue: to implement an ineffective system would be wasteful and worthless; to attempt to implement an effective system would invite a pre-emptive strike. Neither strikes me as attractive. Reagan is mentioning this idea less and less, but I would not trust him in a second term. He still likes the idea.

Reagan's greatest advantage is that many of his weaknesses are in areas where Mondale is even weaker. The deficits are too large. Reagan won't get them down, but Mondale is even less likely to do so. No one seems interested in doing what should be done.

Pentagon waste alone would fund many social, educational, cultural, and peaceful scientific programs. The country's bridges and highways are falling apart, so laws are passed allowing heavier loads. Weapons systems don't work, so more money is thrown at ever-more-complex replacements — that also don't work.

This year my choice is between a man who I think will destroy the country's economy and a man whose policies are likely to lead us, unintentionally, to nuclear war. As someone with a life ahead of him, I don't like either choice. I know little about Barry Commoner, or the Libertarians, or anyone else with no hope, but I may have to start considering them. I want to vote, but in conscience cannot vote for either man.

Then again, there is a sign in my dorm that reads "Spock for President — It's the Logical Choice." Maybe that's not such a bad idea.

Temporary housing still a necessity according to residence office head

By CHRIS SKORCZ
News Staff

For the fifteenth year in row, the Notre Dame Office of Student Residences is faced with having to place students in temporary housing on campus.

As many as 16 freshmen remain in the converted study lounges of Grace, Flanner, and the Pasquerillas. Initially 128 students were assigned to temporary housing six weeks ago.

Evelyn Reinebold, director of student residences, said students in the lounges "will be moved into permanent rooms as soon as possible, as soon as we have the chance."

Opportunities to house students arise from last-minute non-matriculation to vacancies created by students leaving the University since the school year began.

At present there aren't enough openings on campus to house the students either in the same dorm or in other halls.

"Usually all the students are out of the lounges by now. This year is an exception. It is only a temporary situation," Reinebold said. "It is not that too many freshmen are being accepted; rather, the normal trend to move off-campus has slowed."

Housing priority has five levels of preference. First choice goes to those currently living on campus. Incoming freshmen who were accepted and applied for housing shortly thereafter, are next. Students who left school with a leave of absence are the third group to receive housing. Those in the five year Arts/Engineering Program are fourth.

The last group assigned housing is freshmen who were late acceptances or those placed on the waiting list in addition to transfer students. It is this group which ends up in the lounges or off-campus.

Lounge residents have mixed feelings about the situation. "We are paying the same amount as others but our surroundings are inferior," said Nick Koulajian, a freshman in Grace Hall's only lounge residence. "Our mail is late and, with four in the room, it is really crowded. Worst of all, we have no control over when or where we are moved. We can't get settled because we don't know when we'll be moved. Also, we like each other and don't want to be separated."

This last sentiment was echoed by Diane Dutart, a freshman in Pasquerilla West. "I wish we were able to have a say in where we are moved. It would also be better if we could choose our roommates before they move us. Personally, I would like to stay here . . . I think the people in charge of housing need more foresight."

For the rectors the situation is difficult to handle. "It's frustrating for rectors," said Father David Noone of Grace. "I have to tell students, after they've become accommodated, that they must leave."

Sister Joris Binder of Pasquerilla East said, "the hardest thing is that people become attached to a building but could be moved at any time to another dorm. It could be very traumatic for the students in the lounges."

In addition to the freshmen living in the lounges, there are more than 300 transfer students living off-campus awaiting housing on-campus. Reinebold remarked a new plan has been developed to accommodate the transfers desiring on-campus residences. "In the past, students had to re-apply to the housing waiting list. We have eliminated that; now, students will simply move up the list until it's their turn," she said.

The problem of over crowding is not unique to Notre Dame. A recent New York Times article mentioned a lack of adequate housing as a growing concern across the nation's campuses.

"Actually, we seem to be better off than most," said Fr. Noone. "I was pleasantly surprised at how quickly the situation was improved here. Housing has done a great job considering that we are down to one lounge from ten only recently."

Reinebold added, "Everyone involved has been very understanding and we appreciate that."

Both sides declare a debate win

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - In style and substance, Walter Mondale accomplished what he wanted in his debate with President Reagan, but the unsettled question is whether the Democratic challenger's strong performance will close the gap in the presidential race.

As expected, both sides claimed victory after Sunday night's debate, but even the White House statements confirmed that Mondale had scored well.

"Even if you disagree with our view that we won the debate, a draw was a win for us," said White House staff chief James Baker, sounding several degrees short of triumphant.

James Johnson, Mondale's campaign chairman, gave no indication yesterday that he thought anyone could disagree with his assessment that "Walter Mondale came out as the clear winner . . . Walter Mondale clearly dominated the evening. He showed substantial strength throughout."

Johnson said the Mondale campaign's polling immediately after the debate said the challenger was seen as the winner by 52 percent of people surveyed, while 32 percent picked Reagan.

Baker also had a post-debate poll and said it had Reagan the winner by a margin of 41 to 38. He said the same sample said they would vote for Reagan in November by a margin of 54 to 36.

The two sets of figures in the Reagan campaign poll could be seen as supporting the view of Mondale aides that immediately after a debate, people tend to think the candidate they support was the winner. Under that theory, a lot of Reagan supporters were conceding Mondale finished on top Sunday night.

It may become clearer over the week how big an event the debate was and whether it will make a tight race out of what looked like a Reagan landslide.

One hint of what could happen was the Gallup poll conducted for Newsweek magazine which said Mondale was seen as the clear winner by a 54 to 35 margin, but that more than half those surveyed also said Reagan better reflected their views and was more capable of dealing with the country's problems.

Becoming famous and killing cockroaches

Most people inherently want or need some sort of recognition on a regular basis. The recognition that they want is, of course, the positive kind. Recognition, after all, gives a person a sense of accomplishment as it entails someone, or a lot of someones, noticing them or their work. And when a whole bunch of people notice someone, that person becomes famous.

Mark Boennighausen

Gravity is a myth

Fame is something a lot of people want. People see Michael Jackson on the cover of thousands of magazines, marvel at the millions of fanatic fans and wonder why he is so famous. The fact that he is able to dance like a puppet and sing like a choirboy is often overlooked by the envious.

A certain group of people, called athletes, often become famous. The recent Olympic games gave the nation a whole host of new personalities. And many of these athletes will admit that part of the reason they work so hard to excel at their sport is because of a desire to gain recognition.

Although it is more common with individuals, in some cases entire teams reach the plateau of fame. The 1969 Cubs' team is a perfect example. The 1984 version of the same team could have joined this category, albeit in a different manner.

This need for fame has been analyzed by the most eminent psychiatrists and psychologists. Many theories have been developed to explain it. One such theory explains the desire to be famous as an example of the human species' denial of death. In this interesting explanation a person seeks immortality by trying to become a historical figure. It follows from this theory that anyone who makes the World Book Encyclopedia receives a degree of immortality. And I will freely admit that I have a secret desire to make it into the "B" book of that collection.

Realistically, however, most of us will not become historically famous or famous for even a week. Nevertheless, there is hope that we will receive some sort of widespread recognition. Indeed, a recent article in The New York Times reinforces this hope.

In the article, a person who was working in relative obscurity burst into the news scene and received widespread recognition in a fascinating way. Dr. Stuart L. Schreiber, an associate professor of chemistry at Yale University, received eight inches and a picture in The New York Times for synthesizing an aphrodisiac to lure cockroaches to their deaths. Schreiber did, though, have to share the picture with a cockroach.

As described in the article, the substance Schreiber synthesized causes cockroaches to "stand on their back legs and start flapping their wings." And afterwards, the article continues, it is easy to see that the cockroaches are suffering from sexual excess as many have "broken antennae, gnawed legs and tattered wings."

This substance, named periplanone-B, is so powerful that several quadrillionths of a gram is enough to send seven or eight cockroaches into sexual frenzies leading ultimately to their deaths. Undoubtedly, this is not cruelty to insects. Although modest about his accomplishment, Schreiber does admit that his new sex attractant "could save lives" by preventing famines in some parts of the world where cockroaches infest and consume valuable amounts of foodstocks.

Not everybody can create such a valuable product but Schreiber does provide a sterling example for the rest of us. As we finally leave school, whether it be in one, three or whatever number of years, the career world will provide ample opportunities for a bit of fame.

Although out in the "real world" there will no longer be Dean's Honor lists or chances to write for the college newspaper to get one's name in print, Schreiber has shown that no matter how obscure or seemingly unimportant a person's work, the possibility of being recognized on a widespread level and perhaps grabbing a piece of immortality is within one's grasp.

Give us something to relax to also

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank you for your inclusion of Pat Beaudine's insightful review of Lou Reed's "New Sensations" album. It was one of the most enjoyable articles I've seen so far in The Observer. While it certainly takes an appreciation of the album in question, really to appreciate Beaudine's careful analysis, I think that even non-listeners could get some enjoyment from this review.

It is exactly this kind of feature article that I think The Observer needs more of. Often, I find myself glancing through the whole paper without finding a single interesting article, and so I end up throwing the paper away reading the comics. I am not some uneducated cretin who is uninterested in world articles, but I do find the articles on the progress of the presidential race (if, in fact, there really is any) a bit repetitive and boring. I am not proposing the The Observer become a type of tabloid like The National Enquirer, but I wish your staff would make an effort to print articles on things students are really interested in.

I realize that Notre Dame has a reputation for being a highly-respected educational institution, and that if its school newspaper was all feature articles, it would lose some of that respect. All I ask is that you keep giving us the news, but please give us something to relax to also. Thank you.

Notre Dame spirit shines against Miami

Dear Editor:

Although Saturday's game against Miami may be recorded in the scorebooks as a Notre Dame loss, it represents a victory far greater than that which the Hurricanes achieved. Across the nation Notre Dame and spirit are considered synonymous, and the cheers that rocked our stadium Saturday truly fulfilled that reputation. Despite a driving rain and a wind that chilled the bone, Notre Dame fans remained steadfast. And the cheers for the alumni band were just as loud and supportive as those after the first touchdown.

As a freshman, I am especially warmed by the friendliness and spirit that Domers emit. The Miami players could not help but know that 'We are ND' - and we're proud of it!

Jerry Falwell brings back McCarthyism

I do believe my second-favorite journalist (second to Murray Kempton) is Myra MacPherson of The Washington Post. Her coverage of this election year has been astonishingly good. I remember especially her

Garry Wills

articles on the Jesse Jackson candidacy. And in a new series she has found just the right tone of coverage for the pious lubricity of Jerry Falwell.

MacPherson does her homework. She is able to show the continuity of strategy behind Falwell's changing views. Back in the 1950's, Falwell defended segregation by claiming integration was just a plot hatched in Moscow. In the 1980's, he opposes the Democratic Party because it is just the stalking horse for homosexuals. He opposes a plan not for its internal flaws, but for its unworthy sponsors.

The simple and accurate word for this is McCarthyism. The McCarthyites saw communist plots everywhere, even within President Eisenhower's executive staff. At the Democratic National Convention this year, Falwell saw homosexual conspiracy everywhere. This is not simply a campaign to secure gay rights, but to bring about "a different America." To rape our children.

"Militant homosexuals plan to force every major American corporation to set official policies giving them favored job status...to pass laws forcing churches and Christian schools to hire homosexuals and lesbians even if they flaunt their lifestyle...and they do have their eyes on our children!"

How does he know this? Because his son infiltrated the ranks of the enemy in San Francisco.

cisco. How did he do that? By walking down the street. In Falwell's words, "He went incognito into the streets." The description of what happens on the streets of San Francisco makes it seem that no one could remain incognito without traveling in drag. Why did Falwell subject his 17-year-old son to this experience? Because the boy is a photographer, and Falwell wants to send his followers, in sealed envelopes, pictures of homosexuals seen in flagrante. These are enclosed in his missive "in a sealed envelope to protect children from such sights." What about his own child? The old sin-sniffer knows how to ginger up a sermon, all right.

In the 1950's, the plotters were more discreet. Integrators did not kiss pictures of Stalin on the streets in the South. But only Stalin had a motive to eliminate segregation in America. According to Falwell: "The true Negro does not want integration. He realizes his potential is far better among his own race. Who then is propagating this terrible thing? First of all, we see the hand of Moscow in the background..."

Falwell's doctrine of "the true Negro" is an interesting one. What is a false Negro? Someone pretending to be black? Maybe a KGB agent in burnt cork. The absurdity of American politics can only be grasped when we remember that the president and the vice president of the United States honored, at the other convention, this lurid ecclesiastical clown. Vice President Bush even found a way to give Falwell credit for preventing a second Holocaust. The second Holocaust, I suppose, would murder millions of heterosexuals if Falwell's son had not exposed the Democratic plotters with his camera.

Our taste in saviors of the republic certainly has declined. Even McCarthy's charges look sober by comparison with Falwell's.

The Observer is the independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame du Lac and Saint Mary's College. It does not necessarily reflect the policies of the administration of either institution. The news is reported as accurately and as objectively as possible. Unsigned editorials represent the opinion of a majority of the Editorial Board. Commentaries, letters and the Inside Column present the views of their authors. Column space is available to all members of the community, and the free expression of varying opinions on campus, through letters, is encouraged.

only three matches. Two wins came against Ferris State in the opening round.

"It was tough to play six singles matches in two days," said Killen. "But our singles play was tough."

"Notre Dame has a fine team, and I have a lot of respect for them. Western Michigan has some fine players and they are strong in singles and doubles. Overall, Notre Dame and Western Michigan are a cut above our program."

The Irish will take this week off to prepare for the upcoming North Star Conference Tournament in Evansville, Indiana. The tournament begins on Friday.

The Observer Notre Dame office, located on the third floor of LaFortune Student Center, accepts classified advertising from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. The Observer Saint Mary's office, located on the third floor of Haggard College Center, accepts classifieds from 12:30 p.m. until 3 p.m., Monday through Friday. sive tackle. He played for three years under Notre Dame head coach Gerry Faust when Faust was with the Moeller program.

"I had visited most of the schools that were after me," explains the 6-6, 271-pound sophomore. "But I always kept Notre Dame in the back of my mind. Then when I found out the Coach Faust was coming here, it made my decision that much easier. The school was just so impressive and its football tradition speaks for itself."

Askın entered Notre Dame in the fall of '82 with hopes of contributing the most he could to the team. But a major setback occurred prior to the start of the fall season. After hard work and dedication all through the summer, Askın suffered a stress fracture of the lower leg.

"It was the worst feeling ever," recalls Askın. "I had put in so much time during the summer getting conditioned and working out, only to get injured two months before the season."

Askın didn't get down on himself and his career at that point, however. Through an extensive weight training rehabilitation, Askın began to recuperate from the fracture. He also used the time to learn more about the game and his position.

Askın returned to competition for the 1983 season, earning a monogram as a backup offensive tackle. He played mainly at the strong tackle position. Askın appeared in every game except for the Penn State contest and saw lengthy duty stints against Purdue, Michigan State, Colorado and Army.

Fortunately, because of the injury to Williams, the newest starter on the offensive line has continued to improve.

Though his efforts were diminished due to an Irish loss on Saturday, Askın turned in a fine performance against a tough Miami team. He and his teammates on the offensive line will have to look forward to re-establishing the running game this week. The Irish could look to Askın for an example of coming back against adversity.

Irish fall short in Indiana match

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

After three straight convincing wins last week, the Notre Dame volleyball team had high hopes for another victory Saturday night against the Hoosiers of the Indiana University.

But Indiana, behind strong net play and the benefit of an experienced setter, foiled those hopes by shooting down the Irish by scores of 15-5, 15-13, and 15-5.

With the loss, Notre Dame's record fell to 7-7 on the season, while the Hoosiers lifted their mark to 7-9.

After being wiped out in the first game by the score of 15-5, the Irish appeared to be making a match of it when they took a 12-8 lead in the second contest. But Indiana played well from that point on, and the Irish could not hold back the comeback, losing by the close score of 15-13.

After taking the momentum away from the Irish, the Hoosiers had no problem cleaning up the match with an easy final game win, 15-5.

Leading the Irish in this match were hitters Tracy Bennington and Kathy Baker. Bennington led the squad with seven kills. Baker, who had come back from a shoulder injury, had six kills in 12 attempts with zero errors.

The key to this matchup was the experience of Hoosier setter Karen Dunham. Time and time again, Dunham set up her front line for easy kills. Two players who stood out for Indiana with their play at the net were Heather Minnealy and Julie Cauley, with nine kills and eight kills, respectively.

As a team, Indiana finished the match with 39 kills in 80 attempts for a .488 efficiency. Dunham finished with 30 assists, a very impressive total.

In contrast, the Irish could only convert 30 out of 82 attempts into kills, finishing with a poor .366 percentage. Irish setters accounted for only 13 assists, showing that inconsistency still prevails at the setter position.

Even with the disappointing loss, last week must still be considered a success. Entering the week with a 4-6 record, the Irish needed victories badly, and proceeded to win three of four games against some formidable competition.

Notre Dame needed a confidence-building victory against St. Louis on Friday, and responded with a three-game triumph over the Billikens. Lambert had hoped that his team would use the momentum from the win in that match against the Hoosiers.

But the showing of the team was not up to how it had performed against St. Louis, as many errors were scattered throughout Notre Dame's play.

The team will have to continue to improve, though, as it faces tough North Star Conference foe Loyola Wednesday night in the ACC Arena. Both the Ramblers and the Irish are undefeated in conference play, so tomorrow's game should turn out to be quite a battle.

Women's tennis team takes second with good play in ND Invitational

Western Michigan continued its reign as winners of the Irish Invitational for the third straight year by edging out Notre Dame in its own tournament by two points yesterday on the Courtney Tennis Courts.

Western Michigan won 33 of the 36 matches it played to overcome the Irish who finished with 31 wins (points). Coming in third was Toledo with 14 points, followed by Saint Mary's with 12, Central Michigan with nine, and Ferris State with four.

"Western Michigan has a really good team," commented Irish co-captain Lisa LaFratta. "We were getting a little tired at the end, but I think we played well overall."

In the tournament, the Irish singles players did fairly well, winning 20 out of the 24 matches they played. All four downfalls came at the hands of the eventual champs.

For the Irish, junior Mary Colligan, who played in the number one spot, went 5-1 in the two day tournament. Colligan lost only to Amy Yeast of Western Michigan, 6-2, 6-1. Senior LaFratta, who also was 5-1, lost to Maria Whitfield, 7-6, 6-0 to scar her otherwise perfect outing.

Third for the Irish was sophomore JoAnne Biafore, who was defeated in close sets, 6-4, 7-6, by Sonya Garshnek, for her only loss in the tournament in six games. Junior Izzy O'Brien was downed by identical 6-4 scores by Jan Weigand.

In doubles, the Irish were also very successful as they took 11 of 12 challenges. In the number one spot for the Irish, junior Susie Panther and senior co-captain Laura Lee compiled a 5-1 record, losing only to the Western Michigan team of Janet Ray and Sherry Collins, 6-2, 7-6.

"We could have done a lot better, but we waited until the last set to get going," said Lee. "Western Michigan played well throughout the whole tournament."

The second Irish doubles team of senior Cathy Schnell and freshman Michelle Dasso wound up the tournament as the only undefeated Irish unit going 6-0. This senior-freshman duo provided Western Michigan with one of its three losses in the tournament. They were successful in downing team of Karen Seaman and Michelle Coddens, 6-1, 7-5.

"The last match was exciting," said Lee. Lee believed that the success of the winners could be accredited to their lineup which placed their number one and two singles players against the number two and three players for Notre Dame.

"Overall, we looked great the first matches," said Lee. "But we didn't pull it off when we needed to."

"The doubles teams are finally starting to look good," commented LaFratta. "I think that on any given day we could beat Western Michigan in a dual match."

In the tournament, the Saint Mary's Belles also had a good outing as they won 14 matches to finish fourth overall against these stronger teams who had scholarship players.

"We always enjoy playing in the Irish Invitational. We thought that we did very good," said Belles head coach John Killeen. "Our overall play and concentration was very good."

In singles action, the Belles won 11 out of 24 matches. Outstanding for Saint Mary's was Mary Carol Hall. The number two player in singles for the Belles wound up with a 4-2 record. Her only two losses were close and came against two of the top players in the tournament as she lost 6-3, 6-3 to Whitfield of Western Michigan and 6-4, 7-6 to LaFratta of Notre Dame.

In doubles, the Belles met less success as they were able to win

Irish drop another big game St. Louis defeats soccer team, 3-1

By ANDY BARLOW
Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS, Mo. - When it seems things can get no worse, some additional mishap often occurs anyway. This was true for the Notre Dame soccer team this past weekend.

After leaving the starting goalkeeper at home, getting sideswiped by a drunk driver in St. Louis, and watching the football team lose to the Hurricanes, the Irish received a 3-1 loss at the hands of the Billikens of St. Louis University Sunday afternoon.

The Irish were hesitant entering the contest with the Billikens.

Playing the nation's eighth-ranked team is not an everyday occurrence, and the team showed some tension as the game began.

SLU controlled the opening kick off, but the Billikens were temporarily stymied by Notre Dame's incredibly tight man-to-man defense. The Billikens overcame the defense by playing a swirling, shifting attack.

Before the Irish could orient themselves to this new look, Steve Hunsicker of St. Louis took advantage of some confusion in front of the Irish net and tapped in a goal after only four minutes of play.

"That quick goal shook the guys up a little, but they got into their rhythm pretty well after that," said Notre Dame coach Dennis Grace. "The guys knew this was a big game and they were a little tight to start with."

The Irish tightened up after that initial shock and held the Billikens scoreless for the remainder of the half.

Senior Dan Coughlin, a native of St. Louis, was in the Irish goal for the first half. Coughlin was well protected by freshman fullback Steve Lowney and sweeper Dominick Drano.

"Dan Coughlin did a fine job once he settled down," Grace said.

At halftime, Grace made some defensive adjustments to slow the SLU offense, and the Irish came out attacking as the second half began.

The Irish were unable to mount any serious scoring threats, however, but the acrobatic saves and aggressive play of keeper Jim Flynn kept the Billikens at bay also.

St. Louis, held scoreless for the first 21 minutes of the second period, later struck twice in ten minutes to put the game out of reach.

Notre Dame forward Rich Herdegen was given credit for the sole Irish goal of the day when an over-anxious St. Louis defender stole the ball from Herdegen and drilled the ball into his own net. Had SLU been so charitable from the start, the final score would have been much more pleasing for the Irish.

"This was a key game for us, to say the least," Grace said. "Our players really didn't let SLU's national ranking get to them and I think they saw again today as they did against Indiana that we can play with the big guys. Their performance ought to give them some confidence."

The Irish will need that confidence in the coming weeks as their upcoming schedule includes matches with perennial rivals Marquette and Akron. Akron is currently ranked second in the nation.

Notre Dame will have a few days off to rest up from the loss to St. Louis and to prepare for Friday night's 8 p.m. clash with Central Michigan on Cartier field.

Askin replaces injured Williams at guard spot

By TRISH SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Following a rough beginning in his college years, it seems that some of the rewards that are due to John Askin after his hard work and dedication are finally materializing for John Askin.

This past spring, Askin switched from the tackle to the guard position. His top-flight performance as a run blocker and his proven quickness prompted the change. The change of position did not grab a lot of attention at the time, because it made him a back-up to consensus all-America Larry Williams. But due to Williams' nagging injuries this season in games against Purdue and Missouri, Askin got his opportunity to start for the Irish against Michigan State, Colorado and Miami.

"To be quite honest, when I first came to Notre Dame I didn't think my chances were very good at even playing," says Askin. "When I was put behind Larry, I thought that I would have two more years left to play after Larry graduated. It really feels good to be starting. The coaches showed that they have a lot of confidence in me."

"I was happy to make the switch to guard. I like to run more, and a guard has to move a lot more. I also can't keep weight on like Tom Doerger can, for example."

The switch did not change the dilemma of an offensive lineman for Askin, however.

When a running back has an outstanding effort, his name is splashed on the front page of the paper the next day. Yet when an outstanding running back does not do as well as most people expect, some of the criticism is directed to the play of the offensive line.

Whether it is justified or not, it must be difficult for an offensive lineman to give his best effort and not see much of the glory. But Askin has a different view on the position he plays.

"Sure, we don't get all the press, but we have the satisfaction of knowing that we put forth an effort to the team's success," says Askin. "It takes eleven players out on that field, and we all have to do our job."

A consensus prep All-American, Askin earned four letters at Moeller High School in Cincinnati as offen-
