Browne ousted by OBUD, reinstated by senate SBP candidate admits to campaign violations

By MIKE MILLEN
Senior Staff Reporter

Pat Browne and Joanie Cahill, one of three tickets for student body president and vice president, avoided forfeiture of their candidacy by a one-vote margin of the Student Senate.

The senate voted 8-7 Saturday to reinstate the Browne-Cahill ticket after the Ombudsman Election Committee voided the candidacy on Friday because of failure to report campaign expenditures properly and six other lesser violations.

Ombudsman Director Henry Sienkiewicz said the violation was a conspiracy from its inception. He explained, "Joanie Cahill admitted to me that she, Pat Browne, and (former Browne campaign manager) Lee Broussard had conspired to cheat by not reporting all campaign expenses in advance. This was premeditated. It was not done in the heat of the moment."

The senate convened Saturday at the request of Browne and Cahill.

Two of the votes cast in the secret ballot belonged to Browne and Cahill, while one vote belonged to Duane Lawrence, a vice presidential candidate on another ticket.

Responding to the senate's reversal of OBUD's earlier decision, Ombudsman Election Commissioner Maher Mouasher resigned Saturday afternoon. Shortly thereafter Sienkiewicz submitted OBUD's resignation "as the official organization in charge of student elections."

Sunday, the senate imposed a construction upon Browne's campaign: all posters must be removed and all campaigning must cease.

Browne admitted to violating Ombudsman election rule seven, which states "failure to disclose the proper cost of any election materials... will (result) in forfeiture of candidacy."

After claiming to have turned in all poster receipts, Browne had 2,000 additional campaign posters printed without presenting the receipts to Ombudsman. The additional receipts, if included in Browne's campaign total, would have pushed the total over the $95 campaign limit by at least $25, forcing the Browne ticket to withdraw. Mouasher said he talked with Browne early last week about the need to disclose all expenses and "gave him (Browne) a 36-hour grace period" to report the printing.

Sienkiewicz "saw a stack of the (Browne-Cahill) posters on a shelf" in the O'Shaughnessy copy center after the Browne-Cahill ticket had submitted its campaign expenses to the OBUD Election Committee and a copy center employee confirmed to Sienkiewicz that the order had been filled.

Browne admitted to the violation after OBUD confronted him with their findings.

Regarding the violations, Browne responded, "My intention was to win. It was a mistake."

Mouasher explained, "In a private meeting on Thursday night with Pat, Joanie, and me, Pat was so desperate to remedy this 'simple little mistake' he even asked me to rig the election so he would lose the election without getting kicked out and losing face."

Rick Ruehlmann, junior class president who resigned his senate seat because of the senate's reinstatement of Browne-Cahill said, "When you're willing to cheat, it's not worth it. It's reprehensible."

"They had no intention of presenting those receipts; it's the issue of cheating," Mouasher resigned after the vote.

Browne said the issue should be decided by the student body, arguing "they see our violations."

Executive Coordinator Doug Wurth said "You can't say I'm going to impose this (set of election rules) and then say that they (Browne and Cahill) are above the violations."

OBUD refuses to run the election

By BOB VONDERHEIDE
Editor-in-chief

Ombudsman says it won't run the election.

The junior class has resigned its position on the Student Senate.

And a student government executive coordinator has quit.

All three are protests against the Student Senate's decision this weekend to allow the ticket of Pat Browne and Joanie Cahill back into the race for student body president and vice president. On Friday, OBUD had disqualified the Browne-Cahill ticket, citing seven campaign violations.

"I don't understand how Pat and Joanie can live with themselves with any sense of honor," said Henry Sienkiewicz, director of OBUD. "I'm disgusted, appalled, frustrated and bewildered by their (the senate's) condoning of cheating."

Browne, who has admitted to some of the violations, appealed OBUD's Friday decision to the Student Senate on Saturday. The senate voted 8-7 to reinstate Browne's candidacy.

Immediately after the senate's decision, the Election Committee of Ombudsman informed Student Body President Rob Bertino that it would not coordinate the details of this Tuesday's election. The senate had appointed OBUD to run the election, and campaign rules had been approved last fall.

"We have decided we can no longer effectively run the election," Sienkiewicz said. "Therefore, we have resigned our appointment."

Election rules state that OBUD has authority over disputes, but a two-thirds vote of the senate Saturday to suspend the rules placed the final authority with the senate.

Rick Ruehlmann, junior class president and voting member of the senate, spoke out during Saturday's meeting against reinstating Browne's candidacy. After the senate decision, he withdrew the representation of the junior class from the senate.

"Quite frankly, we feel the Student Senate is a mockery, and we are no longer proud to be members," Ruehlmann wrote to The Observer.

And yesterday, Ray Wise, student government executive coordinator for University interests, resigned his post. "I just can't approve of the actions Browne and Cahill took during the campaign," he said. "And I don't believe there's anyway the senate can condone their actions."

Hamilton named as editor

Sarah Hamilton, a junior from Scotch Plains, N.J., has been elected editor-in-chief of The Observer for 1985-86.

She will assume her duties March 25.

Hamilton, who served as a news editor this year, said she is excited about the The Observer's potential.

"This year we have worked on developing wide coverage of both campuses, always keeping in mind objectivity and fairness," Hamilton said. "Next year this philosophy will become routine."

The editor-in-chief, Hamilton said, must understand all facets of the newspaper - its responsibilities as a business, its duties as a newspaper, and its role as a service to Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

Sarah Hamilton

Joining the University's budget system last year was a necessary evil, Hamilton said. "From a financial standpoint, budget unit control encourages professional and consistent business policies and practices," she said. "But we are always concerned with our editorial independence because the people we are reporting on should not be holding our money."

Six violations cited against Browne-Cahill

By MIKE MILLEN
Senior Staff Reporter

In its list of rule violations by the Pat Browne and Joanie Cahill ticket, Ombudsman presented seven separate instances. They were:

•Printing 2,000 platforms more than the number reported to the election committee

Penalty: Forfeiture of candidacy
Browne has admitted to this violation.

•Campaigning in classrooms

Penalty: A 50 percent reduction in the campaign's spending limit which resulted in a forfeiture of candidacy because of overspending.

Mahe Mouasher, Ombudsman election commissioner, witnessed this violation.

•Endorsement and campaigning prior to campaigning period

Penalty: Warning issued

A Stanford Hall newsletter mentioned Browne's candidacy.

•Endorsement and campaigning prior to campaigning period

Penalty: An 11 percent reduction of campaign spending limit.

A second Stanford Hall newsletter mentioned Browne.

•Campaigning prior to campaigning period

Penalty: Forfeiture of candidacy due to third violation of early campaigning rule.

Mouasher had an eyewitness account of posters begin put up in Walsh Hall one-half hour before it was permissible.

•Use of club newsletter for campaigning

Penalty: Not discussed, according to OBUD, probably will result in fur-

In Brief

A police raid of Corby Tavern, 1026 Corby Blvd. early Friday morning resulted in 51 people being issued tickets on suspicion of minors entering a tavern. Fourteen of the 51 also were given tickets on suspicion of false identification. Two were arrested on charges other than violation of state liquor laws. One was arrested on suspicion of public intoxication and disorderly conduct. Another was arrested on suspicion of public intoxication and resisting law enforcement. State police said the raid was part of a state-wide campaign called Stop Underage Drinking and Sales and was conducted by state police, state excise officers and South Bend police. As of last night, further information was not available from the police. - The Observer

Students panicked when a false rumor of a Jeanne Dixon-predicted campus mass murder resurfaced at Otterbein College, Westerville, Ohio. First reported in Nov., 1973, then again in Jan., 1977 and again in Dec., 1980, the rumor returned in Oct., 1984. The false rumor said that Dixon predicted that someone dressed as Little Bo Peep would kill 13 students at a small, midwestern, liberal arts college starting with the letter "O" on Halloween night. - The Observer

Two Notre Dame students, Robert Jones and Amalia Lopez, were among the 145 students nationwide named fellows by the National Consortium for Graduate Degrees for Minorities in Engineering. Each award provides a fellowship which pays tuition and fees at a member university of choice, plus an annual stipend of $5,000 per academic year. In addition, each fellow is assigned to a paid summer internship with a employer member. - The Observer

Change the election rules and listen to what they say

A student body presidential election with one ticket and no one to count the ballots is not the best of situations.

For approximately two hours Friday afternoon there was only one official ticket, and since Saturday afternoon, there has been no one to officially count ballots.

Saturday afternoon the elections committee of OBUD resigned because they, "felt (they) could no longer effectively run the election," said Ombudsman Director Henry Sienkiewicz.

Student Body President Rob Bertino has addressed the problem by appointing vice president Cathy David to chair a newly created Student Government Ad Hoc Elections Committee to assume the former election responsibilities of OBUD.

Pat Browne and Cahill were nearly forced out of the running because of multiple campaign rules violations.

They allegedly violated the most serious rule - they spent too much money.

"It's not hard to do," a former candidate for class office said.

According to this source it is easy to "fudge" on what you spend.

He used the example of the photographs commonly seen on campaign posters.

"First you have a friend take some pictures," he said. "Finally you decide on one to use. Every step costs money, but you only pay for the one picture."

Another example is the posters themselves.

"You print up more than you need in case there is a run-off. If there is a run-off you want to put up some fresh posters because some get torn down."

Because it is easier and less expensive to have posters printed at one time, it is easy to go over budget. "You only report what you use originally," he said.

According to this former candidate, going over budget is "widespread, it is expected, sort of an unwritten rule. If you find out that your opposition has gone over the budget by $30, you don't say anything because you know you went $20 over."

It is within the rules and outside of the rules at the same time and I submit a fairly simple solution.

Student government should control the production of all campaign materials.

The rule has failed; Browne went over budget and is still in the election.

If all campaign materials were controlled by student government, and stamped by them to assure authenticity, candidates could still be creative and there would be no problem of overspending, fudging the rules, or blatant cheating.

Despite the violations of campaign rules, Browne was allowed to continue his campaign after a vote by the Student Senate on Saturday. Because of the timing of the announcement of Browne's violations, very few people knew of the void on the ballot that existed Friday afternoon. Ombudsman had ordered the ballots printed with only the Healy/Lawrence ticket showing.

According to election rules, to be recognized as an official write-in candidate, a 300-signature official petition must be presented by 4 p.m., the Friday preceding elections. Two possible tickets attempted to get the signatures. Only one made the deadline - and only by 30 seconds. Had there been any delay it could have been a very lopsided election.

There should be at least two tickets on the ballot for student body president. There are enough ambitious, hard working people around here so that two tickets should not be that difficult to create.

In the event of the forfeiture of all, or all but one, there should be an extension of the deadline until the afternoon of the next Observer issue so people could find out. As it stands, one candidate could know that the other had been violating the rules and not say anything until there was very little time for any other candidates to get on the ballot.

The 1985 SBP election has been a prime example of how elections should not be run. The results of this year's election will effect three-fourths of the current undergraduates. Those three-fourths should make it known that this is not how they would like to see elections run in the future.

Dist. 5 candidates address OC difficulties

By KEVIN YOUNG
News Staff

District 5 senatorial candidates Jim Hagan and Race Thoman agree there are problems unique to off-campus living and both believe they could be effective representatives.

The fifth Student Senate district constituents are those students living off-campus as well as those living in the Moreau Seminary.

Thoman sees her possible role of off-campus senator as one of making her constituents needs known to the administration.

Through active representation Thoman believes that she could open better lines of communication between off-campus students and the administration, and thus better manage the needs of off-campus students.

Hagan said that after living off-campus for three years, he is familiar with the special problems that face an off-campus student. He believes that as off-campus representative, his job would be to address these problems.

Hagan said, "I know the advantages and disadvantages of living off-campus, and I am willing to do anything necessary to alleviate the disadvantages."

The candidates agree that transportation and parking are the two main issues affecting off-campus students.

Thoman, a transfer student, feels the plight of the transfer student is another important issue, while Hagan believes the lack of an inexpensive meal plan for off-campus students is of major concern.

If elected, Hagan will push for student parking zones in the front part of existing parking lots, and a cheaper meal plan for off-campus students. He would like to see a meal plan offered to all off-campus students during registration, so that a discount could be given for mass participation. Hagan would also advocate more frequent bus service to off-campus destinations such as Campus View, and Notre Dame Apartments.

Thoman believes she can use her off-campus experience to tackle off-campus problems. Her list of accomplishments include: editor of the off-campus newsletter, off-campus liturgical commissioner, Multiple Sclerosis fund raising organizer, and organizer of the second off-campus formal.

If elected, Thoman would like to see transfer students, especially females, guaranteed on-campus housing after living off-campus for one year. She believes the Adopt-a-Transfer program is a good idea and should be continued. Thoman would also push for a marked increase in the number of bus shuttles to off-campus destinations.

Dance starts MS drive

By CATHYANN REYNOLDS
Staff Reporter

The Multiple Sclerosis fund raising drive began Saturday with 1,500 people attending a video dance at the ACC.

Aline Gioffre, chairman of the "Millions Against MS" drive, reported the campaign has so far "grossed $5,000."

"People are buying buttons and refreshments all benefitting MS. They are coming because they are curious and staying because they like it," said Student Body Vice President Cathy David.

MS-drive volunteer Celeste Alleva said schools around the country will compete in fund raising and be judged by the amount of money raised on a "per-student capita of undergraduates" basis. The winning school will receive a free concert, courtesy of MTV.

All funds must be collected prior to the March 31 deadline.

"United Skates of America", Feb. 20, will be a roller-skating event culminating with "The Rock-Alike" contest where contestants "dress up and lip sync," like a rockstar, according to Alleva.

Gioffre explained that the winner of the "Rock-Alike" contest will go on to compete with winners from other colleges participating in the MS drive. The winner of that competition will get a "paid internship for the summer with MTV," Gioffre said.

"Pasquerilla West and Stanford have sold an incredible amount of raffle tickets," said Gioffre.

Student Senator Tom Abood was not pleased with the outcome, "I think we have set a dangerous precedent."

Senator Javier Oliva criticized OBUD's rule enforcement, "I think you guys are out for blood." He thought OBUD had "malicious intent" in enforcing the campaign rules.

Mouasher thought his decision to forfeit Browne's candidacy fair, "You (the senate) had a chance to approve every rule. If you didn't read them, that's your problem." He said, "We try to help candidates even when they are breaking the rules." Browne's first violation, which carried a fine of 11 percent of campaign funds, was never announced publicly by OBUD.

OBUD also presented six other violations, three of which it claimed were sufficient to mandate the immediate forfeiture of candidacy.

However, the senate's discussion focused mainly on the violation involving the 2,000 posters because this carried the maximum penalty and was admitted to by Browne.

In the senate meeting Sunday, Student Body President Rob Bertino said, "I've gotten a few resignations. We don't need those kind of people on the senate."

A resolution requiring Browne and Cahill to "remove all existing campaign material by 9 p.m., Sunday night" and prohibiting the ticket from "engaging in any future campaigning" under penalty of "immediate forfeiture of candidacy" passed.

In response to OBUD's refusal to participate in the election process, Bertino said he had suspended their funds for the election in order to allocate them to the Student Government Ad Hoc Elections Committee chaired by Student Vice President Cathy David. Bertino added, "We are considering further punishment" for OBUD.

Flanner residents battle in Dist. 4

By DAVID BROWN
News Staff

Peter Blood, Michael Jaeger, and Steven Tacyaerts are all Flanner Hall residents, and all are running for the district four Student Senate seat.

Tacyaerts, a sophomore Arts and Letters major, has centered his campaign on "getting Pasquerilla East and West and the two towers, Grace and Flanner, back on the map."

A past chairman of the Lil' Sibs Proposal Committee, Secretary of the Flanner Hall Council, a member of the rector's advisory committee, and a participant of the Multiple Sclerosis Fund Raising Commission, Tacyaerts says he has the experience to better communicate with the students in his district.

If elected, Tacyaerts would set up a Senate Advisory Committee with a representative from each hall in district four. In the interest of objectivity, Tacyaerts said he would accept applicants for the job.

Tacyaerts also said he would pursue the possibility of cable TV for his district, more social events, reduced lines at the North Dining Hall, and the installation of exercise equipment in Stepan Center.

"The Senate is more or less what you make of it and I am willing to do my best," said Tacyaerts.

Freshman Michael Jaeger is stressing communication in his platform. "Without communication the senate cannot be doing its job," he said. In an effort to attain what he called "necessary student input" Jaeger would, if elected, install an idea box at each residence hall in his district. Also, Jaeger would push to insure that each senate meeting had its minutes published.

Jaeger cited his three-year term as high school class president, participation in a leadership forum, his status as an Eagle Scout, and membership on the Police-Community Relations Board of Holland, Mich. as experiences which would enable him to achieve his goals.

Jaeger is concerned with students having to reside in Grace and Flanner study lounges. He also said Stepan Center should be made more available to students.

Peter Blood, a junior in the College of Business Administration, is "aware and interested" in "representing the views of the students" of district four.

Past positions held by Blood include: Alcohol Commissioner, Special Projects Commissioner, Assistant Academic Commissioner, and Job Bank Coordinator.

Blood would like to make the administration more aware of student social and academic needs, publish a senate newsletter, and pursue the possibility of converting the two towers into coed dorms. Grace and Flanner "are fit to be coed", he said.

Blood said the women's dorms are more susceptible to intrusion whereas coed dorms would create "a more stable environment".

ther campaign spending reduction, resulting in a forfeiture of candidacy due to overspending.

Cahill, President of the Cleveland Club, used one-quarter of a one page Cleveland Club newsletter for campaigning and neither secured an endorsement from the club officers nor paid for the newsletter printing from the campaign budget.

No violations were found by OBUD involving the Healy-Lawrence campaign, even though Ombudsman Director Henry Sienkiewicz said this ticket was monitored more thoroughly.

Elections

Tomorrow Notre Dame students will go to the polls to elect a student body president, vice president and senators. The Observer asked both sets of candidates for president and vice president to answer five questions which the News Department selected as pertinent to this year's elections. The responses are printed below as the candidates submitted them to The Observer yesterday. The candidates had to abide word limits on each question.

Pat Browne - SBP
Joanie Cahill - SBVP

Bill Healy - SBP
Duane Lawrence - SBVP

Q: What is the most pressing issue facing Notre Dame students?

The most pressing issue facing Notre Dame students today is the overall student life on campus, especially the social environment. Considering the overall student opinion toward this problem, we feel that only a cooperative effort between students and the administration (ie. financial funding for student programs and social facilities) can remedy this concern. Effective student leadership is paramount in conducting this shared effort. We are confident in our abilities to provide this effective leadership.

Last year the students' number one concern was the Alcohol Policy. Now there is a terrible problem with social life and it's solution must be made top priority. We will set up a permanent committee on social life; push for the establishment of an Undergraduate Club; and sponsor a Winter Festival in January. Working closely with the Hall Social Commissioners, we will fight for a better Social atmosphere here at Notre Dame.

Q: Do you think there should be a student on the Board of Trustees?

Yes, we feel the most important responsibility of student government is to represent the students to the administration. However, student government has not been extremely effective in this role in the past. In our opinion, the reason for this ineffectiveness is the lack of a strong student voice in the administration. Electing a student to the Board of Trustees will help alleviate this problem. We make reference to this in our platform.

We feel strongly that there should be a student representative on the Board. We believe that students have the right to voice their opinion about their education. This student will be able to present student concerns to the Board as well as student reaction to current policy. The "student voice" at Notre Dame needs to be listened to more often; a representative on the Board would be a good step in this direction.

Q: In what direction do you think student government should lead the social life on campus?

One main purpose of the alcohol policy was to move the concentration of social life out of the halls and place it in central areas. As stated in the PACE Report, the social life at Notre Dame needs to be addressed by the administration and alternatives (whether financial funding for programs, LaFortune renovations or a new undergraduate club) must be provided. Our job is to ensure that the student voice is represented concerning these alternatives.

The establishment of a consistent place for social interaction is a necessity here at N.D. Prior to the completion of an Undergraduate Club we will push for a restaurant/entertainment center on 2nd floor LaFortune. This will provide a place for dating/socializing on a regular basis and along with "special" events now held, will provide the necessary alternatives students need to have. Social life will be our first priority.

Q: How much influence does student government have on campus and how much should it have?

Recently student government has not been effective in its role as the student voice to the administration. Personally having worked effectively with the administration, we think that student government as a body can reflect our past successes by gaining increased influence in the future. We believe the first step in achieving this goal is to reorganize the internal structure of student government so that it runs efficiently and without overlap.

Student Government has the possibility to accomplish much and we feel it can be very influential in students' lives. Our attitude is that Student Government is as successful as students wish to make it. For this reason we wish to get more students involved and have the students make decisions concerning their social life and education. We feel the use of "Student referendums" will add to the legitimacy and scope of Student Government next year.

Q: If you are elected to office, what will you add to the University?

Our most significant addition will be an effective student government. We feel the only way to do this is to increase contact and communication with the students in order to utilize a stronger student voice in effectively dealing with the administration. Student government cannot be effective if the members it represents are apathetic to its efforts. Only by bringing student government closer to the students can we achieve this goal for the University.

We feel we can provide the type of leadership necessary to make Student Government a very respectable part of this university. We are excited about the opportunity to work with and for the students of Notre Dame. We have a positive attitude toward changes in Student Government and Social Life. We would like to start building Student Government into a highly professional organized and effective part of this university and the N.D. community.

OBUD is undermined by Student Senate vote

In a special session Saturday morning, the Student Senate overturned Ombudsman's decision to disqualify the Browne-Cahill ticket and reinstated it on the ballot for student body president and vice president.

This decision, passed by an 8-7 margin, is a serious blow to the integrity of the Student Senate and the election guidelines it passed last fall.

Earlier this year, Student Body President Rob Bertino pushed for clearly defined election rules and the consolidation of their enforcement under Ombudsman. This legislation was intended to address an election system which in past years has been wrought with fraud. But this year when the violations continued, the rules were ignored.

In what was clearly a partisan decision, members of the Student Senate chose to protect their favorite son and their own interests. The senate members who voted in this decision included both Browne, a student senator, and Cahill, one of two Hall Presidents' Council representatives in the senate. Also voting was Duane Lawrence, the other HPC representative and the vice presidential candidate on the Healy-Lawrence ticket.

At the Saturday meeting, Ombudsman Director Henry Sienkiewicz cited seven violations by the Browne-Cahill organization. The major violations include exceeding the campaign expenditure limit and early campaigning. Browne and Cahill admitted that they conspired to exceed the spending limit. They also admitted to campaigning early.

Ombudsman did its job and did it well. Sienkiewicz closely scrutinized the progress of each campaign and documented the Browne-Cahill violations. But when it came down to enforcing the rules, Ombudsman's authority in the election process was undermined and student government's ability to enforce election rules in the future was left suspect.

Ombudsman did its part. But when the Student Senate was asked to make a tough decision, enforcing its own election rules, it failed, leaving students to wonder whether elections at Notre Dame will ever be fair.

The Observer endorses neither candidate

Tomorrow, Notre Dame students must choose between a ticket of questionable integrity and one of questionable ability. The Browne-Cahill ticket is now stained with the admission of campaign violations, and the Healy-Lawrence combination offers little in the way of specific remedies to student problems.

In short, the choice is not pretty.

Pat Browne and Joanie Cahill made a conscious decision to violate election guidelines because in Browne's words, "We wanted to win." Also Browne gracefully tried to cover up his campaign's violations. He asked Ombudsman Election Officer Maher Mouasher to hold the election without disclosing the violations and then declare Healy and Lawrence the winners - regardless of the vote. It was only when Ombudsman confronted them with documented proof of the violations and disqualified their candidacy that Browne and Cahill admitted any wrongdoing and sought an appeal from the Student Senate.

Both Browne and Cahill have shown definite success in dealing with the administration: Browne with the establishment of the student store, and Cahill with her well-planned presentation to the Board of Trustees on the role of women at Notre Dame. They have good ideas about promoting greater involvement in student government.

But Browne and Cahill's actions cannot be condoned. Their disregard for guidelines raises questions concerning what means they will use to get what they want. Their actions also have reinforced the attitude that student government is just a joke. Their ability to promote constructive change undoubtedly has been impaired.

Bill Healy and Duane Lawrence merit consideration. Healy communicates clearly, displaying the polish and finesse of a professional politician. His ideas about restructuring student government, giving senators concrete duties and giving hall presidents a greater voice show initiative and thought. Healy and Lawrence also seem to have a good grasp of the problems with student social life and are committed to addressing them.

But the Healy-Lawrence ticket has many shortcomings. Both seem to lack a comprehensive understanding of the role of student government in shaping student life. Healy stresses, as his main point, the need to improve student social life. It seems that Healy wants to be little more than a social commissioner. More important issues, such as the University's computer facilities and curriculum in general and the problems involved with delayed LaFortune renovations, seem to take a back seat.

Healy and Lawrence also lack experience in dealing with the administration. And although their understanding of the problems of social life deserve praise, they have no original plans to alleviate these problems.

Neither the Browne-Cahill ticket nor the Healy-Lawrence ticket display both the integrity and the experience needed to represent students in government. Therefore, the Observer Editorial Board, in a 6-3 vote, has decided not to endorse a candidate in this year's student body presidential election.

Bertino speaks up for Student Senate decision

As student body president, and chairman and non-voting member of the Student Senate, I feel it is my duty to the student body to clarify and put into perspective the senate's activities during the past few days regarding the candidacy of Pat Browne and Joanie Cahill for student body president and vice president, respectively. While many senate members have voiced strong personal sentiments for both parties involved, I feel a more objective view is appropriate.

As many of you may remember, when Student Body Vice President Cathy David and I ran for office last spring, there were many problems - the legitimacy of permitting a write-in ticket, and two instances of class tickets missing mandatory meetings - where the decision of the Ombudsman election committee was not satisfactory to the parties involved. They petitioned the senate to reverse these decisions and won.

To alleviate the problem of violators overriding the decision of OBUD and appealing directly to the senate, my administration attempted to make a constitutional change. The change would have been an addition to Article VI, Section 1, Point 1, and Article I, Section 2, Point 13, of the student government constitution, which reads: "The senate shall set regulations for all elections under this constitution." The proposed amendment would have added to that statement: "These regulations would be in effect throughout the current senate term without change or amendment. All disputes regarding elections will be under the sole jurisdiction of the Ombudsman election committee."

Had this amendment passed, no appeal could have been made to Student Senate, and the decision of the OBUD election committee to forfeit the candidacy of the Browne-Cahill ticket would have stood. But the amendment failed, and the rules remain unchanged, allowing tickets to appeal to the senate.

The OBUD election committee did their job: they were given rules approved by the senate, told to enforce these rules, found violations, and determined the penalty directly from the senate-approved rules. They should be commended for their work. Browne and Cahill, however, were simply exercising their option to appeal.

The result of the senate appeal was, by a vote of 8-7, to reinstate the ticket of Browne-Cahill. (As chairman of the senate, I am not constitutionally permitted to vote.) Although the decision was far from unanimous, it was nevertheless a majority. There have been numerous instances where senate votes have not been unanimous, yet the resulting decisions have been considered the opinion of the senate as a whole. This instance is no different. The senate feels the ticket of Browne-Cahill should be reinstated. As punishment, the senate directed Browne and Cahill to remove all campaign materials and discontinue campaigning. Again, while some individuals disagree with this penalty, it is nevertheless the decision of the senate and must stand.

Some individuals have expressed discontent that both Browne and Cahill, along with Duane Lawrence (vice presidential candidate on an opposing ticket), were allowed to vote on the appeal. As voting members of the senate, they may abstain if they wish. They, however, have a right to vote which cannot be denied.

Finally, regarding the resignation of two Student Senate members, not only do their actions nullify any opportunity for them to voice their opinion on this matter, but also they have forfeited the opportunity to officially represent the students, whose interests they represent, in future decision-making.

If any other senate members are unable to see beyond their personal opinions and accept the decision of a body chosen to represent the interests of all students, then I will gladly accept their resignations.

Browne and Cahill discuss their actions

Yes, we made a mistake. We were wrong and we admit it. We are sorry. But in acknowledging our mistake, we are not willing to acknowledge our defeat.

Ombudsman declared the forfeiture of our candidacy, a decision we felt was unjustified, considering the violations on which it was based. Most of these violations were not directly under our control, were unintentional, and in context, were basically insignificant. Our failure to turn in receipts is an action for which we can offer no excuse. We feel, however, that a moment's ignorance should not jeopardize your choice of student government leadership and possibly sacrifice the benefits our ticket would provide.

Pat Browne

Realizing student government is composed of humans (faults and all), we decided to pursue the issue of our candidacy by appealing the decision to the Student Senate. We felt this appeal would lead to a more representative decision, rather than allowing a small body of individuals (the OBUD election committee) to decide, in effect, who your next student body president and vice president would be.

The senate, as a body, apparently agreed with us and in turn passed this decision on to you. The senate formulated a penalty requiring us to remove all our campaign materials and forbidding us to distribute any more. In fact, they have forbidden us and our supporters to campaign at all. The sole exception is allowing this letter to be written to The Observer, which could then decide whether or not to print it.

Because we sincerely want the opportunity to serve you as student body president and vice president, we have no choice but to accept these conditions. As a result, we are running on our record of past accomplishments and hard work in student government on behalf of you, the student body. Our campaign is based on a willingness and strong desire to work on your behalf to improve the quality of student life.

You know the facts. While these include our campaign mistakes, they also include our achievements and experience. We can only ask that you accept our apology and take the responsibility the Student Senate has given you in electing the ticket you feel will serve you best.

Rules, regulations and du Lac's absurdities

I recently had occasion (please don't ask why) to read a wonderful little document titled "Du Lac: A Guide to Student Life."

The University's well-known (if not well-loved) Student Affairs Office publishes this pamphlet, which makes for some fascinating reading. I particularly recommend du Lac to students of sociology, psychology, history and law as an interesting case study with relevant applications to their respective disciplines. Engineers, scientists and future businessmen may also find du Lac an amusing alternative to ruminating about life while sitting on the commode.

The pamphlet begins with a fact-filled chronology of the University's development to a responsible lifestyle, and an education in and out of the classroom." The results of this policy can be seen clearly by comparing the social development of Notre Dame students with that of students at less enlightened Universities.

Under "Athletics," du Lac makes the lucid, if somewhat ironic, observation that, "The name 'Notre Dame' no longer brings thoughts of just a football powerhouse, and with good reason." No argument here.

Most fascinating to me, probably because of my keen interest in law and justice, is the section titled "University Rules and Regulations." There, students of law will be intrigued to learn, "Due process in a university is not necessarily the same as due process in civil courts with its more elaborate precautions which are required to protect the accused from abuse." A fact well-known to the dining hall workers fired last year.

Other rules and regulations, though not as well-known, are just as interesting because of their originality and relevance. For example:

"Regulation 2: Every student must carry a Notre Dame ID card and surrender it when requested by any official of the University, including campus security police, dining hall authorities, residence hall staff, and members of the faculty.

"Regulation 4: The Associate V.P. regulates the use of the lakes and property adjoining the University. This includes the parking facilities.

"Regulation 9.b. Firearms are not allowed in students' rooms. A firearm is described as any instrument that causes any missile to be projected. This includes rifle, shotgun, all pistols, BB gun, pellet gun, and bow and arrow.

"Regulations for Student Rooms A.3. A fine of $75 per coat shall be assessed against any student who uses a color of paint not approved for use by the Notre Dame Paint Shop.

"Regulations for Student Rooms B. The use of the following electrical appliances is prohibited in all residence halls: air-conditioners, broilers, rotisseries, skillets, rice cookers, and other such high wattage appliances. Due to the energy crisis these regulations will be strictly enforced."

And finally, why are the University rules and regulations accompanied by a photograph of a lightning bolt from heaven striking the campus near the dome?

outside, looking in from its pre-history of the 1830s to the Notre Dame we all know and love of 1985. As any serious student of history can tell you, studying Notre Dame past helps one to understand Notre Dame present. For example, du Lac tells us that years ago, "Regimentation of student life in addition to classwork included rising at 5:30 a.m., participation in prayer and devotional services, supervised recreation, restriction to the campus, silence between exercises, surveillance of mail, curfews...."

Alas, the more things change....

This "history" also includes little-known facts about Notre Dame's academic tradition. In the 1940s, University President Father John O'Hara purged "undesirable books from library shelves" and railed against "the evils of loose living." As du Lac so eloquently puts it, "Better book knowledge could assuredly have been had at many secular schools...."

Du Lac notes that later, in the 1960s, "the University President was absent from campus more and more..." and that students demanded "a greater role for themselves in University policymaking."

The sociologist should pay particular attention to the section titled "Academia" (page 10), where the University states its philosophy of education: "Notre Dame possesses a 'learning by living' atmosphere, an approach

Ombudsman Election Committee

Dear Editor:

We write this letter to explain our Feb. 9 resignation from the elections committee of the Ombudsman. Ombudsman is a hard working and respected organization, of which we were proud to be a part, but recent actions mocking fair play and decency compel us to expose these events. The actions to which we refer include flagrant violations of the conduct rules, agreed to by the Student Senate and the Ombudsman, regarding candidates for election.

The most grave violation was a campaign expenditure exceeding the amount permitted and campaign rules dictate forfeiture of candidacy as penalty. This ticket also did not submit the receipts for additional printing which put them over their spending limit. When confronted with these and other violations, the ticket submitted their withdrawal, and admitted their unethical acts. Subsequently, they choose to circumvent the rules of conduct by appealing, via the Student Senate, to be permitted to perpetrate their candidacy on our community anyhow.

We felt we had to take a temporary leave from Ombudsman for as members we could not expose this behavior. As we are no longer connected with Obud, we must speak out for the honesty, integrity and fairplay, that this community demands and deserves.

A major concern of Notre Dame students is the administration's apparent disregard of student opinion. How can we expect the University to respect a student body led by people who have lost all credibility and who have shown that they are not above lying, cheating and abusing the student's trust. We think that if elections are to be taken seriously, we must

Student Senate loses junior representatives

Dear Editor:

Throughout the year, we have questioned the credibility of the Student Senate, and Saturday's charade confirmed our belief that this body is incapable of functioning effectively. It is a shame that so many good people have worked so hard for this organization, and now feel embarrassed to be members of it. Quite frankly, we feel the Student Senate is a mockery, and we are no longer proud to be members of this organization.

We respect the fact that Pat Browne admitted his mistakes and now we wish the rest of the senate could do likewise. This year the senate spent a considerable amount of time establishing election guidelines and procedures. We find it a farce that upon the breaking these rules, this same body can so easily reverse their prior decisions. The Student Senate has done itself a great injustice. Because of the manner in which this situation was handled, we have come to realize a major difference in personal philosophies existing between the Student Senate and the junior class officers. Because of this, we respectfully withdraw our seat from the Student Senate until April 1, when new leadership will take over.

Wiping out the time-out blahs

DO you ever get way out of control? A dynamic and unique spirit surrounds the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's community at sporting events. Seemingly normal, mature and sophisticated students transform into wild, fired-up fans who energetically cheer, clap, and yell the Irish to victory. Even with this high standard of spirit, one student manages to stand out as a special example of the Notre Dame fan.

Jeff Anhut, a junior at Notre Dame majoring in History and Psychology, says that he gets "way out of control" when the Notre Dame Band plays "Wipe Out" at the mens' basketball games.

Anhut is from Ypsilanti, Michigan, and transferred to Notre Dame last fall from the University of Minnesota, where he wrestled on scholarship. Anhut is glad he transferred because he has always wanted to go to Notre Dame; he commented, "Notre Dame emulates the college experience."

When asked why he first started dancing, Anhut replied, "My friend John and I started dancing when the band played 'Wipe Out' — it was real spontaneous." Anhut continues his dancing because of the positive response from the crowd, band and cheerleaders. He feels the purpose of the crowd and cheerleaders is to fire up the team for victory — he is proud to do his part. The spirit he inspires is worth the little teasing he receives.

The crowd certainly does get "pumped up" at the games. By now, everyone is accustomed to his dancing, and the crowd anticipates Anhut's crazy outbursts. Sometimes, it seems Anhut is riding a surfboard, while at other times he just shakes his whole body in a torrid frenzy. Whether he is taking off his shirt, wearing a bandana, or covering his eyes with shades, he ignites the crowd with the ease of an entertainer.

Anhut is an avid Notre Dame fan, following all sports. His favorite sport is football, but this season he has been following the mens' basketball team closely. He misses a game only when he has to work at the East Bank Emporium, where he holds a part-time job. This unfortunate circumstance arose for the St. Louis game. When the band played "Wipe Out," the crowd was disappointed to find a friend in Anhut's place, holding up a sign that read, "He's at work." Although the crowd chanted, "YOU, YOU, YOU," the friend chose not to tamper with perfection.

Anhut is pleased with the team's performance this year; he comments, "Digger Phelps impresses me as a smart coach by playing controlled basketball. They've been playing well and with the players they've got, they will be better."

The basketball players are aware of Anhut's uncontrolled spirit, and they think it's great. Star guard David Rivers comments, "He's doing a heck of a job getting the fans into the game — which really helps out a lot." Junior Jim Dolan agrees, and adds, "I don't get to see him, but he really gets the crowd going." Even though the players can't watch Anhut dance, they can sense the excitement that he stimulates in the ACC; it can only convince them of the crowd's support, and inspire them to a superb effort.

Anhut is appreciative of the band's support; he says, "The band deserves all the recognition because I couldn't dance unless they played. The band and cheerleaders do a great job and they are a big influence in getting people up for the game." Two members of the band, seniors Nancy-Rose Netchi and Julie Schwebel, reciprocate, "We both think he's a great addition to the atmosphere of the games. He generates enthusiasm and gets the crowd involved in the game." Junior Pete Piche, another member of the band, adds, "I think it's a great gimmick, and the crowd really seems to enjoy it. He's entertaining in his own uncontrollable way."

The cheerleaders are glad to see the crowd become more spirited; they only wish more fans would show their own spirit as Anhut does. Cheerleaders Kathy Ravotti and Patrick Wenning agree, "We think it's really positive and if more people would take on his attitude it would help the overall spirit of the game."

Though Anhut may get "way out of control," it is an expression of his enthusiasm for the team. "Some people think the school spirit is ridiculous," he says, "but since I've had the opportunity to be somewhere else, I know that's not true."

A world of talent in Washington Hall

features staff writer

Last Saturday night, the International Student Organization held their annual festival in Washington Hall Auditorium. This year's theme, "To Teach," was a continuation of last year's, "Imagine." Last year, the international students presented the world as it could be, a world filled with peace and love. FESTIVAL '85 strived to teach us how it should be.

This message was sent out through 19 acts, featuring songs, dances, skits, and the various talents of students from around the world. Emceed by Louisa de Mello and Winston Griffin, the show was dedicated to all the children on the I.S.O. Adoption Program.

Opening the show was the Lebanese dance act Debkeh. Dedicated to the people who are caught in the struggles within Lebanon, the dance set the mood for the show by demonstrating the unique ethnicity of each act to follow. Next, the Bahamian skit showed the "personality" of a Bahamian woman who has just arrived in the United States. Walking into the 10 a.m. mass at Sacred Heart, the woman, played by Karen Joseph, disrupts the services with her native outbursts of 'Praise the Lord'. When confronted by the congregation, in particular an old friend who has become 'Americanized,' she retorts by singing, "I'm a better woman than you."

One of the returning acts, Martial Arts, featured the Tae Kwon Do Club. The members expressed their talent and power through a series of falls, one-on-one combat, and board breaking. A welcome addition this year was a Kung Fu artist, David Scott, who demonstrated an advanced empty-hand form and the weapon kata with a seven-linked chain.

After the excitement of the Martial Arts was the pleasant calypso song, "A Man and A Group of Animals," performed by Ballayram. The song pointed out how we, as human beings, humorously entrap ourselves by contrasting our "superior" qualities to various animals and then asking the question, "Who is more civilized, the man or the jackass?" Finding it hard to answer the question, the audience laughed heartily.

Adeptly following this song was a filler entitled "Tarzan," in which the long haired apeman gave out a bellowing call of the wild while running out of the audience and onto the stage.

Returning back to campus, "The Hearing Aid" skit presented Bill Clarke, Howard Reeves, and Narshma Santoramanshi's opinion of the inadequacy of the infirmary. The humor arises from the futile efforts of a young man in trying to obtain a hearing aid. The eye doctor is called in, takes the ear doctor to his room, discovers his mistake and then gestures the coat rack into his room. The act ends with a robbery of the offices as the deaf ear doctor and blind eye doctor wrestle with each other. The concluding comment of the robber is "I didn't know it would be so easy to rob the infirmary."

In a Spanish duet, Angel Delgado and Dolores Toubanc moved the audience with the romantic ballad "Las Begonias." An added bonus was Delgado's witty comments before the song, which provoked laughter and audience participation.

Concluding the first half was a hand-clapping, foot-stomping polka song that brought to mind images of a Polish wedding. Leading the band was Frank Vidergar, who plays a mean accordion.

After a short intermission, the second half began with three belly dancers, who enticed the audience with a seductive and exotic dance. It was disappointing when the next act to follow took us back to the one place everyone tries to avoid on the weekends — the classroom! Seeking a member of the audience to accompany him on a tour of a few classes going on, Winston Griffin was fortunate enough to discover Student Body President Rob Bertino present. When asked what he knew about the academic life on campus, Bertino replied, "Not too much!" To rectify this misfortune, Bertino and the audience was allowed to listen in on four classes, including Biology, Philosophy, Theology, and Government.

The piano recital by Mike Szatkowski spanned time and space by performing a medley of pieces from various parts of the world. Beginning with a recital which is usually given by a beginner pianist, Szatkowski advanced in talent and years while taking the audience from Paris to Poland.

The disappointment of the festival was two acts which were performed back-to-back. These were "British Visit of South American," and "Disunited Nations." The first, which was supposed to be a mockery of the Falklands-Malvinas conflict, relied too much on stupid actions for audience laughter. Margaret Thatcher was portrayed in poor taste as was the issue at hand: a toilet-paper manufacturer's strike. The audience was subjected to further poor taste in "Disunited Nations," as representatives from the United States, Lebanon, Brazil, Chad, the Soviet Union, and Israel attacked each other with crude one-liners. If the message was to demonstrate the fallacy of the United Nations, it could have been presented with a finer sense of taste.

The saviors of the second half were the last two skits, in which the message of the festival was explained. In the skit "War," the audience witnessed the tragedy of man's greed and selfishness. Wearing arm-bands with the names of the countries which they were portraying, the actors explained the present solutions to the problems facing each nation: death. As the new answer of peace and brotherhood was proposed, the result was the abandonment of hate.

In the finale Winston Griffin asked those members of the I.S.O., who are tomorrow's world leaders, to remember this message, and to teach it to those they will come in contact with in the future as they had just taught it to the members of the audience. In a fitting finale, everyone was asked to join in singing the song, "We'd Like to Teach the World to Sing"; this was achieved in Washington Hall Saturday night.

David Scott, a Kung Fu artist, expertly swings the dangerous "kata."

Pair disagreed with MVP choice

Bird, Thomas losers for first time

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The 35th National Basketball Association All-Star game was a bittersweet experience for Larry Bird and Isiah Thomas, who were the top scorers for the East team but played on the losing side in the mid-season showcase for the first time.

The NBA record crowd of 43,146 at the Hoosier Dome gave the biggest cheers to the two Indiana products, but All-Star Most Valuable Player Ralph Sampson led the West to a 140-129 victory, snapping a five-year winning streak by the East.

"This is just one game a year, so it definitely is a thrill," said Bird, playing in his sixth straight All-Star game since coming to the Boston Celtics as the college player of the year from Indiana State in 1979. "This year especially, since I had the opportunity to come back here and play."

Bird, the All-Star MVP in 1982, scored 21 points for the East. Thomas, playing in his fourth straight All-Star game since coming to the Detroit Pistons following his NCAA championship sophomore year at Indiana University in 1981, led the East with 22 points and five assists.

"It was fun because I got to see a lot of people I haven't seen in a long time," said Thomas, the 1984 All-Star MVP. "There were a lot of people walking around with IU jackets and sweatshirts. It just makes you feel real good."

Both Bird and Thomas suffered minor injuries during the game and sat out portions of the second half.

"Injuries don't bother me that much," said Bird, who left the game for three minutes in the fourth quarter after getting socked in the nose. "I just play with it, unless I bust up my ankle and can't play."

Thomas suffered a thigh injury in the second quarter. He didn't play in the third period and left the game with six minutes to go in the final quarter.

Both players were impressed with the new domed stadium, which seats more than 60,000 for the Indianapolis Colts' NFL games.

"It was a first-class weekend," said Thomas. "The (host) Indiana Pacers did a great job with it. But the place was so big, whenever the crowd did make a noise, they didn't get the vibrations back, so they really weren't into the cheering."

Bird said, "We've played in the Sil-verdome (at Pontiac, Mich.) and the Kingdome (in Seattle), and this is even better. The floor was new and the lights were shiny but I felt very comfortable. It really didn't affect the play."

Although Sampson's 24 points and 10 rebounds earned him the MVP award, both former winners Bird and Thomas thought it should have been given to Magic Johnson, who had 21 points and 15 assists.

"The difference was Magic," said Bird. "The way he played, and the way he got the ball to the other people. They (the West) just hit the open man and were getting the strong rebounds."

Thomas said "Magic had to be" the MVP. He controlled the tempo of the game.

Bird added, "It's always fun to come back to Indiana and play. It's always good to see your friends and family."

Sampson earns MVP Award

West wins All-Star Game, 140-129

Associated Pres

INDIANAPOLIS — Ralph Sampson stood out for more reasons than just his 7-foot-4 height in yesterday's National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

"He was head and shoulders above most of the players when the game was on the line," West Coach Pat Riley said after Sampson scored 11 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter to help the Western Conference break a five-game losing streak with a 140-129 victory over the Eastern Conference.

Sampson, who pairs with rookie Akeem Olajuwon to form the imposing Twin Towers offense for the Houston Rockets, also pulled down 10 rebounds to earn Most Valuable Player honors for the 35th edition of the All-Star series, which the East now leads 23-12. An NBA record crowd of 43,146 attended the game at the Hoosier Dome.

"It was real fun out there," Sampson said. "I had to switch out (on defense) on the best players in the world. It was fun defending against them. They each do something a little different."

Sampson said he didn't realize he was playing well enough to win the MVP.

"I was totally surprised," he said. "I was so involved in the game that I wasn't aware of my performance. The object today was just to win the game."

The East started well, outrunning the West in the first six minutes while taking a six-point lead. But the East shot poorly after that, finishing with a shooting percentage of .408 after making only 49 of 120 field-goal attempts.

The West hit 56 of 96 shots for a percentage of .583, while Sampson connected on 10 of 15 attempts.

The West never trailed after taking a 34-33 lead late in the first quarter, although the East managed five ties after that.

The final deadlock was 70-70, but Larry Nance of the Phoenix Suns, dethroned Saturday as the league's slam-dunk champion when he finished fifth behind winner Dominique Wilkins, started a 24-13 streak with two straight baskets.

Rookie Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls was among the participants in yesterday's NBA ALL-Star Game in Indianapolis. The game was played before a record crowd of over 43,000. The West team defeated the East, 140-129, to break a five-year losing streak. Story is at left.

the kind of player he will be for the Irish in the future. Given the chance to start two weeks ago when Tim Kempton was out of the line-up with the flu, Royal has stepped in to give Notre Dame perhaps its most effective front line combination of the year. Kempton may find it hard to win his job back if Royal continues to play as well.

A native of New Orleans, La., Royal will get a chance to equal his 13 points and eight rebounds of Saturday on Wednesday night, when some familiar faces in the New Orleans Privateers come to town. Before the season started, all the talk was of a Kempton-Barlow-Dolan front line. With Royal now emerging

Perhaps the biggest sore spot of Saturday happened before the game even started, when oranges rained down on the ACC floor from the student section as Syracuse was to be introduced. This display of immaturity by a small minority very easily could have cost Notre Dame a technical foul, a disadvantage the Irish couldn't have afforded to start with in such a tough game.

Up to this point in the season, student support has been at one of its highest levels in years. And Phelps, ever the master of basketball's psychological aspect, has been truly appreciative of that support because of the positive effects it has had on his relatively young team.

It meant a lot to both the players and coaches when so many students showed up at 2:30 in the morning last week to greet their arrival after the UCLA win. While a win over UCLA is not a win over Syracuse, the presence of such great support, and the fact that the players know of this support, only will boost the team's confidence as the season winds down.

Student support is important to the success of this team, perhaps more so than with some other teams across the country, but the Irish certainly do not need the kind of support given before the start of Saturday's game. The support has been great this far, and was excellent for much of Saturday afternoon. The key now is to maintain that level of support the rest of the season without having it deteriorate as it did for a few brief moments Saturday.

Ken Barlow scored two of his 16 points on this dunk in the second half of Notre Dame's game against sixth-ranked Syracuse, but an Irish victory was not to be as the Orangemen prevailed, 65-62. Eric Scheuermann has the game story on page 16.

Brisco-Hooks lowers 400 mark

Slaney's injury may be serious

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - The injury to star-crossed Mary Slaney in the Vitalis-U.S. Olympic Invitational track and field meet might be more serious than first believed, her coach, Dick Brown, said yesterday. Slaney, the former Mary Decker, was forced to withdraw from the women's 1,500-meter race Saturday night with just over two laps remaining with what at first appeared to be a severe cramp in her right calf. But Brown said, "I think the cramp probably caused some torn tissue. We will probably know in two or three days." Meanwhile, Brown said that Slaney, who was on a pace that would have made her the first woman to break four minutes indoors, would "continue to ice" the injured area, "to stop the blood from flowing and leaking." Triple Olympic gold medalist Valerie Brisco-Hooks, who a week earlier had set a world indoor best in the women's 440-yard race and broken the American record in the 400 meters en route, lowered the 400 mark from 52.99 seconds to 52.63. She led all the way but had to withstand a closing rush by former record holder Diane Dixon, who missed by one-hundredth of a second of catching Brisco-Hooks at the finish. Carl Lewis, winner of four Olympic gold medals, showed his versatility on and off the track, winning the 55-meter dash in 6.15 seconds, then a few minutes later by singing the national anthem.

Sheehan wins at Sarasota Classic

Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. — Patty Sheehan birdied the final hole to break a tie with Nancy Lopez and finish with a 10-under 278 to win the $200,000 Sarasota Classic yesterday. Sheehan's 6-under 66 was the low score for the round that became a daylong duel with Lopez, who carded a 4-under 68 for a 279. "It was just one of those days that I really hit the ball well," Sheehan said. "The putts fell that I needed. This was a classic confrontation between two players who really wanted to win." The victory was worth $30,000 to Sheehan, whose eight titles in 1983 and 1984 were the most by any player on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour. Sheehan started the day one shot back of Lopez and third-round co-leader Patty Hayes, who entered final play with 5-under 139s. Sheehan birdied her first two holes and continued on to a six-birdie, no-bogey round. Tied for third, four shots back at 6-under 282, were Jane Blalock, who had 67 Sunday, and Betsy King, who fired a 70. Janet Anderson's 70 for a 5-under 283 earned her fifth, while Donna H. White was another stroke back after her 71 round. Hayes, meanwhile, had a final-round 76 and was down the list at 1-under 287. The leaders were still fighting for sole possession of the top spot as Sheehan prepared to hit into the green of the par-5 18th at the 6,124-yard Bent Tree Golf & Racquet Club.

Men

four with two more free throws, Joseph Price had the ball stolen off a bad pass. After one more free throw by the Orangemen, Barlow scored to bring the Irish to within three, 65-62.

But the Irish could not steal the ball or even foul the Orangemen as the final 15 seconds ticked off the clock, and the students proceeded to vent their frustrations by pelting more oranges and toilet paper onto the court.

"I'm happy with our team," said Boeheim. "After the tough games we've had in our conference, I was happy with the way we played. This is a tough place to play, and Digger's great at getting people up for a game. Down the stretch, we just made some good defensive plays to help us keep control of the game."

But the Notre Dame view of the game was definitely one of a lost opportunity.

"This shows we can play with the top teams in the nation," said Phelps, "but it would have been nice to win it. It would have helped us get into the NCAA Tournament."

"It seems like we keep getting to this point right near the Top 20, and then keep falling short," said Barlow. "We've got to come through when it counts."

With many tough games left, the Irish now get back to work, hopefully finding what it takes to win the big one.

The Notre Dame hockey team skated to a series split with the Cyclones of Iowa State over the weekend. After dropping a 4-3 decision on Friday, the Irish came back to defeat the Cyclones on Saturday, 7-4, despite the benching of six regulars. Ed Domansky has the wrap-up at right.

Notre Dame wins one, drops one in weekend series with Iowa State

By ED DOMANSKY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame hockey team gave a little and got a little in its weekend series with Iowa State.

On Friday night, the Irish gave away a 3-1 lead and fell to the Cyclones, 4-3.

But on Saturday, Notre Dame got a solid performance from each player and came away with a convincing 7-4 victory.

The weekend split improved the Irish record to 7-16-1, while Iowa State moved to 19-9-1.

Friday night, Notre Dame held a 1-0 lead after the first period and seemed on its way to the locker-room at the end of the second period with a 3-1 lead.

Unfortunately, the Cyclones had other ideas and scored twice in the last minute to knot the score, 3-3.

After controlling the game for 39 minutes, the two goal outburst appeared to take the spark out of the Irish. And for the remainder of the contest, Notre Dame couldn't get back on track.

"We couldn't hit anything," said Irish head coach Lefty Smith. "We weren't opportunists when the openings were there. And when we had chances, their goalie (John Carr, 28 saves) came up big."

Co-captain Brent Chapman, Tom Parent and Rich Sobilo tallied the Notre Dame goals.

Marc Guay turned in a strong game in the Irish net. He stopped 29 Cyclone shots.

Saturday night's crowd saw a different Notre Dame team take the ice. After a somewhat lackadaisical performance in Friday's loss, the Irish came out with fire in their eyes and promptly went to work on their guests from Iowa.

At times the game seemed to lack the finesse and quality puck control which often typifies a college hockey game, but the Irish made effort and hustle pay off.

"We used a lot of new, different people and combinations," said Smith. "Some of it wasn't pretty, but at the same time, I was really pleased with the effort from everyone."

"We finally started being proud to play," said left wing John Nickodemus. "After last night, they out-hustled us, but tonight we gave 110 percent the whole time and played with real pride and intensity."

Notre Dame played without the services of six regulars, who were not in uniform for disciplinary reasons after arriving late for a Saturday morning team meeting.

After two periods of even-paced hockey, which found the Irish and Cyclones tied, 3-3, Notre Dame exploded for four goals in the final period to nail down the victory.

The Irish picked up two of their goals while skating shorthanded and added another on the powerplay. Notre Dame made good on three of eight powerplay opportunities in the game, while Iowa State was two for six.

Notre Dame goaltender Al Haverkamp turned away 17 Cyclone shots to earn the victory. Mario Amantea made 23 saves for the Cyclones.

Nickodemus broke the 3-3 tie with a wrist shot high over Amantea's glove on an Irish powerplay just 56 seconds into the final period. Moments earlier he just missed the net on a similar opportunity.

Fifty-one seconds later, Tom Mooney picked up his first of two goals in the period to put Notre Dame up, 5-3.

The Irish were held in check until the 6:50 mark when Mike McNeill, breaking in the slot, took a pass from Tim Reilly and slid the puck past Amantea, and Notre Dame led by three, 6-3. The goal came with Frank O'Brien off for holding.

Iowa State scored its last goal of the night at 8:28 as Paul Pence fired the puck past Haverkamp from the right face-off circle.

Mooney's second goal, with the Irish shorthanded, at 19:08 finished off the scoring.

The Cyclones had jumped out to an early 1-0 lead on goal by Dan Jenkins after the Irish had difficulty clearing the puck from in front of Haverkamp.

McNeill's first goal of the game tied the score, 1-1, at 16:24 when he deflected a shot from the point by Rob Ricci.

The Cyclones took a 3-1 lead with goals by Dave Carrigan and Brent Lervick in the first five minutes of the second period.

Reilly and co-captain Bob Thebeau tallied for Notre Dame at 7:19 and 12:18, respectively.

In Friday's loss, Chapman gave the Irish their 1-0 lead at the first intermission when he beat Carr at 17:45.

Parent made it 2-0 for Notre Dame with help from Nickodemus and Steve Whitmore at 8:33 of the second period.

Lervick pulled the Cyclones within one, 2-1, less than three minutes later.

It took just 31 seconds more for Sobilo to put the Irish up 3-1 as he tipped home a Lance Patten shot from the blueline.

Forward Mary Beth Schueth shot a perfect seven-for-seven from the field Saturday as Notre Dame recorded a 107-61 mincing of hapless Xavier University. The win put several new entries into the Irish record book and upped their record to 12-7. Larry Burke details the game on page 16.

Television replay for game officials in experimental stretch for USFL

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — While quarterback Doug Flutie's pro debut failed to materialize, the United States Football League unveiled another new "star" — a television for videotape replays to review officials' calls.

Flutie, the Heisman Trophy winner from Boston College, stood on the sideline as expected Saturday night during the New Jersey Generals' 21-7 loss to the Tampa Bay Bandits.

Gene Bradley and then Ron Reeves called the signals for the Generals. And Reeves wound up peripherally involved in the USFL's first experimental use of a television replay.

It was a system set up — but not announced — in advance by Cal Lepore, the USFL's supervisor of officials, at the urging of Harry Usher, the league's new commissioner. Lepore said later it wasn't announced beforehand because he wasn't sure the equipment would be available or work properly.

Late in the third quarter, Reeves completed a pass to wide receiver Danny Knight for a 10-yard gain to the Tampa Bay 11-yard line. When Knight was tackled by the Bandits' Bobby Futrell, the ball popped loose and Kevin McClelland of Tampa Bay fell on it.

Generals Coach Walt Michaels asked for a replay and Lepore — after two-minute review process — ruled the play had been officiated correctly. New Jersey was assessed a time out because the appeal had been denied. If the fumble ruling had been reversed, no time-out would have been assessed.

Lepore said the replay experiment would be tested again on Saturday in Houston's game at Birmingham; then the league will decide whether to use replays during the season.

If it does, it will be a first for pro football.

The National Football League experimented with videotape replays in seven nationally televised exhibition games in 1978 but discarded the idea, saying it was too cumbersome and that it could raise more questions than it answered.

shot even better from the field, hitting 78 percent (21-of-27) of their shots, and that it was the reserves who did most of the scoring for Notre Dame. Brommeland scored 18 of her 20 points in the second half, and Kathy Barron added eight points in 11 minutes as Notre Dame's lead grew as high as 48 points in the second half. By that time the only drama left centered around whether or not the Irish would break the 100-point barrier for the first time in their history, which they did on Barron's 15-foot jumper from the left side with two minutes remaining.

Xavier turned the ball over 32 times in the game, and the Irish finished with 29 steals.

"We figured that we could get to Xavier with the full-court press," said DiStanislao. "With the press working well, we were able to force some turnovers and gain some offensive momentum."

"We showed a lot more consistency in this game. We had a little let-up in the first half, but I'd say that overall it was a consistent effort, especially for our younger players. Kathy Brommeland has been getting better and better, and Beth Morrison and Kathy Barron played well. Sandy did a good job underneath for us also. I think the players are starting to see what its going to take for this team to have a solid season."

Syracuse escapes with 65-62 victory over Irish

Syracuse guard Dwayne "Pearl" Washington tallied a game-high 20 points Saturday to lead the sixth-ranked Orangemen to a 65-62 victory over the Irish. The game's final moments were marred by a controversial charging call on Notre Dame's David Rivers with the score tied, 60-60.

Controversial charging call draws hostility from crowd

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

For much of Saturday's Notre Dame-Syracuse basketball game, it appeared the sixth-ranked Orangemen would meet the same fate as the oranges hurled by excited Irish fans before the player introductions.

But it was not to be.

David Rivers was whistled for a controversial charge with 1:54 remaining, nullifying a layup which would have given the Irish a 62-60 lead.

Instead, the Orangemen brought the ball back downcourt with the score tied, 60-60, and proceeded to hit five free throws in the final 1:30 to give them a 65-62 victory over Notre Dame.

"I was very surprised at the call," said Rivers, who, along with Ken Barlow, led the Irish with 16 points. "In fact, I was shocked, simply because the guy didn't have position. I expected to at least get two points out of it, because I had released the ball before I hit him."

Referee Joe Forte, who was knocked into the crowd on that play, disallowed the field goal, saying Rivers had not released the basketball before making contact.

"I question the charge," said Irish head coach Digger Phelps. "And I question whether the field goal was good. If anything, I was looking for the three-point play."

"Even if all they give him is the basket, we're up by two. If they tie it, we'll have a chance for the last shot. That was how we were going to win a game against a team like Syracuse."

In fact, for much of the contest, the Irish seemed ready to pull off the upset. Donald Royal hit a 12-foot bank shot to give the Irish a 2-0 lead, a basket which drew a shower of toilet paper from the crowd. The Irish then went on to take a 31-26 lead over the Orangemen at the half, holding the visitors to 33 percent shooting from the field.

But in the first 90 seconds of the second half, Syracuse forward Rafael Addison and guard Dwayne "Pearl" Washington led a charge that wiped out the Irish lead, and the Orangemen tied the game at 33.

"It was important for us to come out and start fast in the second half," said Syracuse head coach Jim Boheim. "Dwayne got off well, and (Addison) started working more and knocking down better shots."

"We knew coming into the game that Syracuse was a very explosive team," said Phelps. "I think we did a good job by not allowing them to jump out quickly like they've done all year. Their early second-half spurt was a key, but we came back. From then on, it was just one of those down-to-the-wire games."

After allowing the Orangemen to creep out to a 47-41 lead, the Irish made their move to get back into the game. Within a span of 19 seconds, Notre Dame scored six points to tie the game at 47.

After a Barlow slam dunk, Rivers stole the inbounds pass and scored on a layup to make the score 47-45. Only 11 seconds later, Scott Hicks followed that up with a steal and layup of his own, forcing Boehm to call a time-out.

With the crowd on its feet, the Irish came out and quickly took a 50-47 lead. But two free throws by Washington, who led the Orangemen with 20 points, and a jumper by Addison gave Syracuse a one-point lead with 8:56 left.

From that point until the controversial call on Rivers, neither team could gain more than a two-point advantage.

And when Syracuse had to make its free throws as the clock wound down, they did it.

"We hoped that if we could stay close and make them go to the line, we would have a chance to win it in the end," said Phelps. "They hit their foul shots down the stretch. I just thought a bad call took us out of it."

Center Rony Seikaly, who had missed a crucial one-and-one in a one-point loss to Boston College on Tuesday night, hit two foul shots with 1:30 remaining to give the Orangemen a 62-60 lead.

The Irish called time-out to set up a play, but lost a golden opportunity when Royal dropped the ball out of bounds as he was preparing to shoot.

"At times during the game we lost our composure," said Rivers. "Today, we just beat ourselves. The guys understand what we'll have to do next time."

Women shatter numerous records en route to 107-61 rout of Xavier

By LARRY BURKE
Sports Writer

Xavier women's basketball coach Laura Massa was certainly well aware before Saturday's game that Notre Dame had been playing its best basketball of the season in recent weeks. Massa had undoubtedly heard stories of how the Irish had rolled over their last three North Star Conference opponents, winning by margins of 39, 21, and 15 points in their last three games.

But nothing could have prepared Massa for what happened to her squad Saturday afternoon in the ACC. The Lady Musketeers were quite literally dominated in every phase of the game, as the Irish routed them, 107-61.

The victory was the fourth straight for Notre Dame, and its seventh win in its last eight games. Mary DiStanislao's squad has now won six straight games at home; its last loss at the ACC was on Nov. 26 to Purdue. Overall, Notre Dame now stands at 12-7, 5-1 in the conference. With the loss, Xavier's record dropped to 2-17 overall, and 0-6 in the NSC.

Xavier, a team that allows 87 points per game, had its name entered into the Irish record books several times as a result of yesterday's thrashing. Notre Dame's 107 points broke the mark of 96 set against Marquette in 1983, and the Irish also set a new standard for shooting percentage in the game, as they hit on 70 percent of their shots to break the old record of 64 percent set against SMU in 1982. Notre Dame made 27 free throws, which tied the single-game mark set against Dayton last Wednesday, and had 38 free throw attempts, which set a new school record.

Trena Keys led the assault for the Irish with 23 points on a career-best 11-of-14 (79 percent) from the field, as she raised her team-leading scoring average to 17.5 points per game. Keys now has 333 points this season, which ties Carrie Bates' season scoring record for a junior.

Kathy Brommeland scored a career-high 20 points for the Irish, on 8-of-10 shooting. Mary Beth Schueth hit all seven of her shots from the field to finish with 18 points, and Sandy Botham added 14 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

The Lady Musketeers let things get out of hand early, as they folded in the face of an Irish full-court press that forced numerous turnovers. When Notre Dame unveiled the press in the opening minutes of the game, Xavier lost its composure and presented the Irish with plenty of easy scoring opportunities. The result was a 15-0 spurt for Notre Dame that boosted the Irish to a 22-4 lead in the first seven minutes of the game. The Lady Musketeers got no closer than 14 points the rest of the way, as Keys scored 17 first-half points and Schueth added 13 to give Notre Dame a 52-30 lead at intermission.

The Irish shot 63 percent from the field in the first half, and their aggressive defense forced 17 Xavier turnovers and racked up 15 steals. Notre Dame held Xavier's Stacey Land, who averages 20 points a game, to just five points in the first half.

The second half was pretty much the same story, except that the Irish

see WOMEN, page 14

It was more than just a loss

The record books will say it was a loss. But Saturday's Notre Dame-Syracuse basketball game is nothing that the Irish players should be ashamed about. Notre Dame certainly played well enough to win, yet failed to come away with the victory which may have been enough to finally crack the Top 20.

It appeared that the Irish had taken a 62-60 lead with 1:54 left in the game when David Rivers drove in for a layup. The whistle blew and most at the ACC thought Rivers would have the chance for a three-point play. But when referee Joe Forte got up off the seat of his pants, called a charge on Rivers and waved the basket off, the dream of a win over the sixth-ranked Orangemen was shattered.

Whether the call was correct or not is hard to say. Most everyone has his own opinion on the matter, including Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps. Phelps, who usually will refrain from bad-mouthing the officials, spent much of the post-game press conference discussing that call, that one mistake in his mind. The fact that the Irish coach would so uncharacteristically bemoan the call says a lot about how much he disagreed with it.

Mistake or not, though, the Irish will have to move on from here in preparation for next month's NCAA tournament. There will be other games like this one, and Notre Dame will have to start winning them if it hopes to go anywhere this year. Although it didn't show on the scoreboard, in many respects Saturday's game was a victory for the players - a victory as far as now knowing that they can play with the best teams in the country.

Jeff Blumb

Assistant Sports Editor

To find one of Notre Dame's brightest spots Saturday, you need to look no further than the play of sophomore forward Donald Royal. Royal, who seems to be coming into his own recently, had an excellent day offensively against Syracuse's 6-10 center Rony Seikaly. Despite giving up three inches to the freshman from Greece, Royal dominated the match-up by effectively using his quickness and by being more aggressive than Seikaly.

By taking the play to Seikaly, Royal demonstrated
