Post created to assist handicapped students

By ROBERT RAPHAEL
News Staff

As a result of the increased enrollment of disabled students, Assistant Provost Sister John Miriam Jones was appointed last July as coordinator of disabled students by Provost Timothy O'Meara.

"It was time to do something different," Jones explained, "We realized we needed one person to oversee efforts to serve disabled students."

Previously, the University Committee for the Physically Handicapped and the Office of Student Affairs provided services to disabled students.

Jones' responsibilities include accessibility to buildings and classrooms, communication with faculty and administrators regarding special academic needs, referring disabled students and evaluating long term needs.

"All of a sudden we have more students who we have to be concerned about," Jones said. This year's freshman class, as last year's, has registered 25 disabled students. Previously, there were less than 10 disabled students in each class, estimated Jones.

This increase can be traced to the 1974 Equal Educational Opportunity Act, which stated that educational institutions could not discriminate against disabled students, according to Jones. In addition, she said, educational institutions that accepted federal funding could not deny services to disabled students. Disabled students who started their primary education in 1974 in an ordinary environment are now of college age.

In 1974 Notre Dame formed the committee to work towards the accessibility of buildings and to insure that services were not denied to students.

Currently, Notre Dame meets its legal obligations.

"But that's not the only thing we're interested in. We want to make the experience of a disabled student as good as it possibly can be," Jones said.

Jones attributed the impetus of concern for the disabled to Stephen Rogers, who chaired the committee since 1980. Rogers, a blind professor, dedicated his time to working with the disabled. "Stephen was our inspiration," Jones said.

Last year, Notre Dame spent $20,000 restoring St. Edward's Hall to make it accessible to handicapped students. Father Pedi, rector, states the money was used to install two remote control doors, building spe-

Thatcher plans reply to Soviet expulsions

Associated Press

LONDON - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher summoned two of her senior Cabinet officials for urgent talks yesterday on whether to order out more Soviets in response to the Soviet Union's expulsion of 25 Britons.

Press Association, the British domestic news agency, said Mrs. Thatcher, Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe and Home Secretary Douglas Hurd reached a decision, but were keeping it secret to avoid giving the Soviets advance notice.

The agency's unattributed report said the decision would be announced before Mrs. Thatcher leaves this afternoon for a four-day visit to Egypt and Jordan.

A spokeswoman for Mrs. Thatcher confirmed that the meeting took place, but refused to give details.

Howe had cut short a weekend break to begin what he said were "urgent and careful" talks with aides on how to respond to the Kremlin's move, announced Saturday. Mrs. Thatcher returned to London from her country retreat, Chequers, for the late-night session with Howe and Hurd.

Weinberger assails Soviet lack of control in border incident

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger, denouncing the Soviets for failing to "control their troops," said yesterday that a U.S. military observer in East Germany was detained at gunpoint for nine hours after his truck was deliberately bumped.

Weinberger said the incident, which happened "a few days ago" but was not previously announced, involved a soldier in the same unit as Maj. Arthur Nicholson, a U.S. army officer killed by a Soviet bloc soldier earlier this year.

"The Soviets bumped his truck deliberately where we were supposed to be, and doing what we were permitted to do under a treaty that is some 40 years old," Weinberger said on CBS "Face The Nation."

"It is the third or fourth incident of this kind," Weinberger said. "When he attempted to get out and fix the truck they pushed him back into the truck and held him at gunpoint and detained him for roughly nine hours and generally behaved in the same way in which they did when Maj. Nicholson was killed and murdered."

Weinberger's statement, which included no identification of the soldier or the location of the incident, was made in response to a reporter's question and appeared to take the White House, the State Department and even Pentagon officials - by surprise.

Public affairs duty officers at all three branches said they had no information on the incident beyond what Weinberger had said. Revelations of previous incidents involving U.S. observers were made immediately after they occurred.

An administration official, providing a few additional details, said

Weinberger may have "overdramatized what happened."

"It's not clear if the truck was in a place it was supposed to be," said the official, speaking on condition he not be identified. He said that after the vehicle was hit it slid into some wire along a road and became entangled.

The official said that when a Soviet commander belatedly came to the scene - blaming his delay on getting lost - he ordered his troops to disentangle the truck.

"The Soviet commander apologized profusely," the official said. He also said he had the impression that the soldier wasn't held nine hours, but was gone from his headquarters on the mission for nine hours.

Under a U.S.-Soviet pact, a limited number of American soldiers are permitted to travel in East Germany in return for similar rights by Soviet soldiers in West Germany.

Asked why the incident had not been announced by the United States at the time it happened, Weinberger said: "we're trying our best to get the conditions corrected. We're not interested in publicity."

New University Ministry director 'pastor' of ND campus

By MICHAEL DUNCAN
News Staff

University Ministry is "like the parish of the University" according to its recently appointed director, Father Andre Leveille.

"The University Ministry is connected with the liturgical life and pastoral activities of the entire University community," said Leveille. He added that as Director of the Ministry his role is "the head pastor of the school - its spiritual leader."

Leveille is in charge of a large staff, making sure "that pastoral needs are taken care of." He assigns many of his staff members to be in charge of the various programs offered by the Ministry.

One such program, which accounts for much of the work done by the Ministry, is Liturgical Music and Planning. This program focuses on planning the music and often the themes for many of the 118 masses that occur at Notre Dame each week.

The Pre-Can, another program offered by the University Ministry, is designed to help engaged couples prepare for marriage. According to Leveille, more than 115 couples a year join the program.

Two programs that Leveille feels are very important are the Retreat and Social Outreach Programs.

His office acts as a "clearinghouse" for thirty-five retreats a year and also sponsors two of its own. Leveille said they give "time for students to get away and do some serious thinking about their life and their faith. It is a perfect opportunity to pray and to get their lives in order."

He also feels the Notre Dame community should take a more active role in the the social outreach program. In particular, he recommended sponsoring refugees in order to help them start new lives.

Other programs sponsored by University Ministry include: Military Draft Counseling, the Religious Bulletin, and the Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults which provides Christian and Catholic Baptisms, and Confirmations.

Before starting his present position July 1, Leveille was Director of Vocation for the Congregation of the Holy Cross, where he was one of the top five vocation counselors for all the catholic religious orders in the United States. This gained Leveille an audience with the Pope.

Leveille is concerned with the problems that face youth. He wants it known that he is "available to students."

"I don't want to be the administrator that's hiding behind doors."

Leveille's main aim is to make sure that "someone is a better Catholic or Christian for coming to Notre Dame." Leveille feels that if the students are not "closer to God when they leave then I have failed."

Enough football fun found without road trip to Ann Arbor

O.K., so I'm a loser.

While everybody else on campus made the trip to Ann Arbor to see the Wolverines knock off the Irish, I stayed at Notre Dame. The token junior Arts and Letters student among hundreds of car-less freshmen and throaty engineers.

Now I'm paying the price.

I've heard incessantly for two days that Notre Dame is not a real campus. At Michigan, people saunter up to a keg instead of mowing down everything in sight to get to one, and, "there were 60 girls to your left, 60 girls to your right, and they were all fantastic!!!"

This last comment came from a just-returned and still-euphoric Domer (whom I saw at a misery party Saturday night - black armbands required) who kept repeating it to me and adding mournfully, "You'll never see anything like that at Notre Dame, Mary."

Well, I'll reserve comment on that statement, but one thing I'm sure he missed out on was the experience of watching the game on TV.

Now don't mistake me, I've seen my share of televised football games, and I've even seen my team lose on occasion. So this game should have been like many others. Why was it so different?

I should have been clued-in even before kickoff that I was in for a strange afternoon. From the moment a particularly clueless girl in a crowded Keenan room heard the name Ara Parseghian and inquired innocently who "Eric" was, and if he had anything to do with Notre Dame football, I probably should have left in search of another TV. But even that wouldn't have helped.

True, I would not have had to hold my temper and stifle impatient outbursts when she asked things like, "Was that bad for Notre Dame?" as the Irish fumbled a kickoff inside the 20-yard line.

But nothing short of turning down the sound could help me escape the inane and rambling commentary of CBS Sports.

For example, what exactly did Bo Schembechler mean when he said that he'd like to maintain a "semblance of possession?" You either have the ball or you don't. There's no in between. As the afternoon wore on, however, I began to realize that whatever Bo's "semblance of possession" meant, the result was going to be disastrous for Notre Dame.

Or what about Brent Musburger's enlightening comment, "What has hurt Notre Dame has been Michigan's drives." Either Mr. Musburger assumed his entire audience was composed of "Who's Eric?" types, or he merely felt an enormous compulsion to demonstrate his incredible grasp of the obvious.

Mary Heilmann

Assistant News Editor

The guys watching the game with me were almost as good as the commentators at underestimating the intelligence of the room's female contingent. Granted, the clueless girl in the corner did her best to enhance our reputation. But in general, the idea that one is a football incompetent simply because one is a girl, is a myth that needs to be dispelled. Therefore, the statement that "Michigan only needs a touchdown and conversion to go ahead" when the score was ND 6, Michigan 0, was rather unnecessary.

By game's end, however, even these irritations were forgotten in the apathetic gloom that hung over the survivors of the first contest in the 1985-86 season.

We all trudged back to our respective dorms to sit quietly in darkened rooms and search our pasts to discover what we had done horrible enough to bring such a fate upon us. But all was not lost.

Good old Bill Hickey and the University Food

Services, perhaps sensing such an outcome, had the foresight to prepare pizza, chicken patties and chocolate chip cookie bars to assuage our misery.

So, all of you who were stupid enough to make the long trip to Ann Arbor and have to put up with endless kegs, rows of 60 fantastic girls, and frat parties - don't try to tell me that I should have road-tripped to Michigan for entertainment. I had all I could stand.

All the effort it took, was assembling a clueless girl, Brent Musburger, and the Fighting Irish.

Saint Mary's senior Barbie Samuelson and Notre Dame senior Brian McCarthy were on hand, along with 105,521 others, to cheer on the Irish in their first Ann Arbor appearance in four years. Saturday's crowd boasted the largest in attendance of any collegiate contest that day. 200 tickets were made available to Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students through a lottery earlier this week, but many more were believed to have made the trip north.

Colleges react to student protests; sell off interests in South Africa

Associated Press

A spring of campus protests and a summer of South African violence have swelled the ranks of colleges that are selling all or part of their investments in companies with dealings in South Africa.

Since April, when scores of U.S. campuses erupted in anti-apartheid protests, about 20 colleges and universities from Maine to Arizona have adopted policies of total or partial divestiture of South Africa-related holdings.

Sixty-one schools have sold nearly $300 million in such portfolio holdings since tiny Hampshire College in Amherst, Mass., became the nation's first college in 1977 to adopt a South Africa-free investment policy, according to the American Committee on Africa, a New York-based anti-apartheid lobbying group.

A spot check by The Associated Press found many other colleges actively considering tougher policies as well.

In recent weeks:

•Columbia University, the scene last spring of some of the most bitter student demonstrations, announced it is likely to agree next month to divest itself of its $39 million in stocks of companies with South African operations. The plan has the support of Columbia President Michael Sovern.

Columbia, in New York, would be the first Ivy League college to adopt a policy of total divestiture of South African investments.

•Rutgers University in New Jersey, another hotbed of student protest last spring, was considered all but certain to accept an investment committee recommendation made on Aug. 30 to sell its remaining $7.5 million in South African holdings.

•The University of Iowa divested itself of more than 90 percent, or about $2.3 million worth, of its South African-related holdings. Some students were angered because the school insisted it acted for economic, not moral, reasons.

By contrast, a committee set up to study divestiture at Iowa State University is expected to recommend shortly that the school sell its $550,000 in such holdings, for moral reasons.

•The Arizona Board of Regents voted Sept. 6 to order the University of Arizona in Tucson and Arizona

State University in Tempe to divest themselves of their $3.3 million in South Africa-related holdings as soon as possible.

•Bitterly divided trustees of the University of Vermont opted last week for limited divestment of the school's $7.3 million in South Africa-related investments. Vermont Gov. Madeleine Kunin argued in vain for full divestiture at the emotion-charged hearing.

•As a result of tightened investment policies adopted this summer, Oberlin College announced this past week it had sold U.S. Steel stock valued at $620,000 and IMS international shares worth $142,000 because neither company had signed the "Sullivan Principles," a voluntary code of conduct in which firms agree to work against apartheid.

Among the schools that say they are reviewing their South African investment policies are Harvard, Yale, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, University of Southern California, University of Notre Dame, Indiana University, Northwestern University, Johns Hopkins University, Brown University, the University of Rhode Island, and Wesleyan University.

Coast-to-coast strikes reaching settlements

Associated Press

Negotiators reported progress yesterday in settling a school strike in Rhode Island, where 600 teachers have defied a judge's back-to-work order, as striking Seattle teachers planned to vote today on what their leaders called a "totally unacceptable" offer.

About 8,000 teachers nationwide were on strike, affecting almost 115,000 students in seven states, including Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio, New York and Illinois.

In Rhode Island, negotiators in Pawtucket were to resume talks last night after a 16-hour session with mediators ended Saturday without agreement. Both sides reported some progress.

Superior Court Judge Corinne Grande ordered the weekend mediation Friday, hours after 2,000 of the district's 8,200 students were turned away from school because only 12 teachers obeyed her order to return to the classroom. She said she would consider citing the teachers for contempt if the talks fail.

The district has offered a one-year contract with a 5 percent pay raise, while the teachers want a three-year pact with total salary increases of 27 percent.

'Beautiful rooms' at SMC

By PEGGY PROSSER

Liz Meehan, Maureen Erny, Mary Costa, and Lisa Hagen.

Beauty will be in the eyes of the judges during the Saint Mary's "Beautiful Room Contest," starting Sept. 23, with the finals Sept. 26.

Saint Mary's student government is sponsoring this new event and the five categories include: most beautiful, most collegiate, most unusual, cutest and best party room.

The idea was the result of a student government meeting last May. Fall was chosen because rooms are newly decorated, said Contest Chairman Patty Fallon.

Fallon will be assisted by her committee of hall vice presidents

Preliminary judging by the hall housekeeping staffs will start at 3 p.m. on Sept. 23. Final judging by selected members of the Saint Mary's faculty and administration will begin at 5:30 p.m. on Sept. 26. "The judges will be people that we have contact with every day," Fallon said.

"This contest will be a good chance to get roommates together. It's good for building up spirit, and will be starting a tradition for those who come to Saint Mary's in the future," Fallon added.

Prizes have not yet been announced and interested students may sign up through their section representatives this week.

The additions to St. Ed's have been positive, according to one handicapped resident. "The people who worked with me had a very positive attitude, they were willing to satisfy my needs," said Pat Reese, a freshman with cerebral palsy. "Everybody is trying to help me out," Reese said.

Jones is now concerned with problems such as narrow classroom doorways and heavy doors that make passage difficult for handicapped students.

"People who have obstacles to overcome are special people," Jones affirmed. Currently, there are over 75 disabled students at Notre Dame. Their disabilities include: paralysis, arthritis, leg amputation, cerebral palsy, heart condition, blindness, hearing impairment, nerve damage, reading disabilities and quadraplegics.

The bigger things in life are not always the better

Has any news caught your attention lately? Seen any headlines? Remember the air disaster in Japan that cost 520 lives? Or how about the space shuttle, logging more miles every single day. And gee, we certainly cannot forget Pete Rose breaking Ty Cobb's record Wednesday night.

Tom Considine

the answer

For better or for worse, characteristics of our media and press mirror similar characteristics of our society at large. Case in point, our obsession with size and quantity, our solid belief that numbers do not lie and that bigger numbers tell better stories. C'mon, who has the biggest and loudest stereo on your floor, I am sure you know. Who has the most cars in your neighborhood, again, I'm sure that you know.

Question: What do many people desperately want? Answer: The biggest bank account.

People are interested in size and quantity; it is seen in their priorities and their actions. Similarly, our society is obsessed with size, and this obsession is reflected in the news media of our day. Perhaps that is why such items as airline disasters make such extensive headlines; people are fascinated that so many passengers could die. Perhaps that is why the space shuttle receives so much attention; people are amazed by the fact that a funny shaped metallic crate can do so much and go so far. And perhaps that's why Pete Rose's quest is so newsworthy; people are enthralled by so many hits.

This fascination with size reminds me of a trip that I made two years ago. I went to a state park to see an awesome 800 foot gorge. Believe me, this was quite a sight: deep drops of flat stone, dangerous slopes, even a railroad trestle that spanned this natural wonder. You should have seen the people; they were doing everything in their power to get the best view. One guy was climbing a gnarled tree; another was leaning dangerously over a fence, a third held his two year old kid over the edge.

It seemed that everyone in that park was staring down that gorge. Everyone was trying to get that perfect view, myself included.

Then, for some unexplained reason, I turned my head from that fascinating sight and looked behind me at a patch of grass about 20 feet away. There sat a four year old boy, away from everyone else; there he sat - just staring at one little, insignificant object. But I could tell that he was as enthralled by that dandelion as all the adults were by the gorge.

It was right then and there I learned the importance of little things.

An Englishman once remarked to me that "Everything in America is big." Well, what I think he meant was our country has a special place in its heart for the big things, for those deep gorges and big news events. And I suppose a love for the big is fine in itself. But just do not forget those dandelions and those little things. Perhaps someday you will realize that bigger is not better - only bigger.

We should put our wealth into another perspective

Just when you think you have got everything in perspective, along comes a child who innocently knocks you back into reality and forces you to rethink your ideals. Willis, an eleven year old from South Bend, had this effect on me. A friend of mine, Joe, is his "Big Brother."

Lisa Perez

in perspective

"Man, you must be rich!"

Those were Willis' first words when he entered the room. There wasn't anything too extraordinary inside of the room: a bed, a television, an Atari video machine, a stereo with a bunch of tapes and some posters on the walls. Nothing there would accurately qualify Joe as wealthier than the middle class which he is.

"I'm not rich, Willis," Joe said. Willis just looked at him.

Later, we were walking around campus, talking about basic things, trying to break the ice of unfamiliarity. Joe thought he had hit upon the perfect topic, sports. In the midst of this conversation, a prominent Notre Dame basketball player happened to walk by. Willis got so excited that Joe walked over to him and asked if he'd mind saying hello to Willis. The athlete walked over to Willis and introduced himself. Willis put his tiny hands in the large hands of the basketball player and looked up in childish awe.

"I hope you're going to root for me this year. I'm counting on you."

"I will."

"Watch all the games, OK?"

"I'll try."

Not too impressive a conversation, but one which made Willis' day. Afterwards, Joe teased Willis about his amazement with the athlete, and asked if he had watched any basketball games last year. Willis said he had not.

"Why not?"

"I don't have a television."

Surprised at his answer, it suddenly became apparent why Willis had thought Joe was rich. I had been looking at wealth from my perspective, while Willis, who did not own half of the items in the room, judged wealth based on the things he could call his own. Compared to that, Joe certainly seemed wealthy. Willis had not seemed envious; he was just making a statement which appeared factual to him.

After getting over my initial surprise that anyone should think something a luxury when most people consider it a commodity, I thought about how lucky we are. Sure, we all vary in degrees of good fortune and we all wish we had more, but when we put our lives in focus we should realize how lucky we are. We can all watch television, wear cool clothes, buy food when the dining hall is at its worst and catch the football and basketball games when we feel like it. When we graduate we will all be in a position to make decent money and live the kind of lives we are accustomed to. Not too much will be beyond our reach, and we probably will never lack for the necessities. We should consider these things the next time we feel a little sorry for ourselves.

Our perspective of things should not be based solely on ourselves. Instead the fact that some people want more because they do not have the necessities should be the perspective by which we judge things.

Feeling sorry for people less fortunate than we are is not enough. One twist of fate and we could have been "those people." Giving something to one less fortunate than yourself is a gift that will not soon be forgotten. This need not mean monetary giving; sometimes giving of yourself is the best gift of all.

The day with Willis ended with a thank you and still we had not given anything that could be considered tangible. All we'd given him was some time and attention. Saying goodbye, Joe gave Willis his phone number and told the boy to call the next time he wanted to come over.

"I can't," Willis said.

"Why not?"

"I don't have a phone."

Joe gave him a quarter.

Chauvinism rampant in writer's column

Dear Editor:

Although I am not a Saint Mary's student, I was appalled at the faulty reasoning and rampant chauvinism expressed in Erin O'Brien's Viewpoint editorial, "Decision to go coed at Saint Mary's is weighed."

First, a matter of terminology: as long as any college-aged woman continues to call herself and her peers "girls," she is inviting all those around her to treat her as such. Women are far more likely than girls to earn the respect of their peers and their superiors.

In addition, the term "guys" is similarly degrading to men. "Guys" can be a friendly and neuter phrase referring to any group of peers, male or female. The stereotyping of "guys" as "sweaty, competitive, dominant and egotistical" dating machines is offensive to both men and women alike.

Second, O'Brien seems to confuse the possibility of the college going coed with the actuality of coed dorms and the subsequent abolition of parietals. A quick walk through the Notre Dame campus would reveal that coeducation is not the same as cohabitation.

Third, O'Brien's hypothesis that the mere presence of "guys" on campus would make the academic integrity of the College legitimate denies the proven excellence of a Saint Mary's education. In addition, her very next paragraph on the alleged "final advantage" of having "guys everywhere" is not only insulting to both men and women, but also destroys the claim to greater academic integrity she was trying to establish.

Perhaps if O'Brien could see beyond the chauvinist stereotypes she herself promotes in her article, she might come to understand that the real "woman's world" does not depend on the mere presence or absence of men, but on the ability to perceive the inherent worth, dignity, and equality of all human beings.

Stereotype of feminism harmful to everyone

Dear Editor:

I wholeheartedly agreed with Maura Mandyck's attack on the "shameless stereotyping" in television cartoons. She is right to worry about the effects on impressionable children, "being subliminally convinced that half the population is worthless."

But it's not necessary to get up early Saturday morning to experience gender-oriented stereotyping - one need only look to the opening lines of Mandyck's column. Why is it necessary to begin with the disclaimer that she is not a feminist and follow with a trite and ludicrous depiction of feminists? The efforts of some to paint a picture of feminists as unattractive, humorless women, dressed in drab clothing, working tirelessly for unisex bathrooms, women in combat, the break-up of the nuclear family and the end of the American way of life have been sadly effective.

Webster's New World Dictionary defines feminism as "the movement to win political, economic and social equality for women." Yet feminists are often portrayed in blatantly stereotypical ways. "I'm not a feminist, but..." Surely the goals of political, economic and social equality are nothing to be ashamed of!

How refreshing it would have been to read Mandyck's column in The Observer beginning with the proclamation that she is a feminist, followed by the same good, pointedly humorous treatment of a serious subject. One sure way to eliminate a negative image is to replace it with a positive one. If the negative stereotype of feminism persists, "both men and women will suffer a loss."

Greedy administration makes seniors cynical

Dear Editor:

When I came here three years ago as a freshman, I was full of optimism about the bright four years that were opening before me. Optimism that Notre Dame would win the National Championship, optimism that the Administration really cared about students, optimism that this was going to be the best four years of my life...

Three long years later I look back at those freshman days and think of the senior's attitudes towards ND, about their pessimism and criticism, and I thought with a freshman's optimism: They're all just too critical. Now I see four years later that they weren't so far off.

Why has ND become such a depressing place to be? Because the Administration has become a purely capitalistic organization in the best tradition of Marxist doctrine. They are out to survive and prosper at any expense, especially that of the student. How can I say this, you ask? Look around you at the actions of the University and see how two faced it really is. First off, let's look at the teaching here. Many of the professors are so involved with research that they cannot properly prepare for class. This is evident especially in the engineering and science departments--while I am not about to specifically name professors, you upperclassmen affected should know what I am talking about. The University is dedicated to research and the prestige and money it brings the University, NOT how it effects the poor teaching that results from not enough time to prepare for class. I'm not against progress, but when someone is paying for a class, they deserve better treatment than this.

In addition, another instance of the University's greediness is evident by the recent endowments reported received earlier in the beginning of the semester in the Observer. This was called one of the "largest recorded" endowments to be received by the Administration, yet the price of room and board has increased approximately 7 percent--more than the National Inflation rate--while the students and parents paying for ND can see no relief in sight.

Consistent with the Administration's self dedication to financial security and prestige is the continued building of structures that do not better the life of the average student. Granted the LaFortune renovation is underway in addition to the Law school addition, but look at how long it has taken the Administration to get around to it. And during this time what about the real needs--more living and social space. Oh--sure, new dorms are planned for sometime in the future, but they will probably take as long to get started on as has LaFortune and the Law school addition. Some people will bring up the swimming pool. That will probably function like the weight room in the ACC: restricted to varsity use during the few hours students could possibly use it. And to quickly name another few sore spots, how about: the new loft policy to abolish lofts in the next four years, the health hazard of no air conditioning in the Pasquerilla's and the rector policy as exemplified by the 'firing' of Father Steve at Carroll Hall to name a few.

Then we come to the Fountain. Why? I can think of absolutely no reason why it should be built. If the Administration wanted to dedicate something to ND students who died in the wars, they should dedicate something that will be appreciated and used, like the LaFortune renovation, or a new dorm, not a $500,000 Stonehenge. The fountain's location doesn't even make sense. The fieldhouse mall was one of the few crossing places on North Quad where students ran into each other and could just sit on the grass and talk, read, listen to bands, or play frisbee--but since we all know it's illegal to play on the grass the criticism is invalid anyway.

Many of you out there are going to ask if you hate this place so much, why don't you leave. Simply, I cannot. Financial and other commitments prevent it, and if I could, I would, except that I would miss the people who make this place worthwhile. I have been told that I should accept ND as it is since many places are worse off, or no better. If this is so, then we are really doomed because no body of students should have to be ruled in such an autocratic manner, and if this truly is "as good as it gets," then there is something very wrong with the scholastic system and the society that created it.

My advice to you new freshmen is this: If you can find a better place, transfer. If you are committed to four years here just as I am, then I charge you not to sit back and endure the Administration's tyranny. Revolt. Build your box fountains, hang your bedsheets to protests, write your letters, and continue to protest to make the Administration feel the pressure. Only as a result of constant pressure can the University be forced to change.

Saint Mary's is great even without the boys

Dear Editor:

I feel much pride attending and being part of a small, private, Catholic, all women's college - Saint Mary's. And since I read freshman Erin O'Brien's Viewpoint article about a coed Saint Mary's, I have been trying to calm down enough to put my thoughts on paper.

I'm not sure who "they" are that have been considering the idea of Saint Mary's admitting "boys." I know 10 years ago it was under consideration to combine Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, but was decided against for various reasons. As for a coed campus, I know my friends and I have joked about it, but never with any sincerity.

A coed college is not what I have been waiting for, nor do I get too excited at the thought of it. First, let's not assume a coed campus means a free-for-all and the immediate removal of parietals. In fact it would more likely increase strict enforcement of them. Although we feel the "curse" of parietals, I must admit I am thankful for them many times. I feel much safer knowing I am protected from just anyone off the street wandering through our halls, and it's saved me at least twice this year from kicking out my roommate and her boyfriend when I want to go to sleep.

I think the Saint Mary's reputation of "girls here for their MRS degree" is one that follows women all over the country, both at public and private schools. I know the high placement and valued reputation of a Saint Mary's degree, however, far outshines the former.

Let's look beyond the fact that there are no men enrolled in this school. That does not mean we no longer care how we look or dress. There is so much pride here - yes, in the way we dress and smell, but also in our classwork and relationships with faculty, administration, and classmates. I love sitting in a small class of about 15 and really getting involved in a good discussion, even when one of those students is a Notre Dame boy!

I guess the presence of boys was not a priority as I was choosing a college - education was. I have found the freedom to participate in clubs, organizations and student government, and believe it or not, there is plenty of competition! And along with the close friendships I have with girls on this campus, I also have them with both girls and guys at Notre Dame. Admittedly it took some time, but I've found them worth waiting for.

I believe Saint Mary's College offers a very special atmosphere and excellent education, and I'm so glad I'm here! Relax, freshmen, and give it some time. Soon you will realize parietals are not such a big deal when weighed against the advantages of this community, and you can still put on a skirt. I hope I'm long gone by the time Saint Mary's goes coed. I'm a SMC chick and proud of it!

Rape is a subject that cannot be taken lightly

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to some comments made by Kevin Flynn on an article by Andy Barlow discussing the supposed lack of campus security. I agree with Flynn that Notre Dame need not be a "Fort Knox" in terms of security. It's also unrealistic, as he points out, to compare the number of crimes committed on this campus to the crimes of a metropolis such as Chicago.

But in his eagerness to defend the efforts of Notre Dame security forces, he does something that saddens me, for it is becoming common: he de-humanizes the act of rape, an act which is a tragedy for society as a whole, and very traumatic to the individual.

I call to mind the statement, "Notre Dame has had only one rape in seven years." "Only one" rape (and I don't want to ignore other crimes such as murder, theft, etc.), is immediately too many times. The occurrence of rape is something that should not be used as supporting evidence to the defense of any security force, just because it's "below average" in national standards.

Kevin Flynn, I want to thank you for helping to protect the well-being of all people who walk on this campus. But please allow me to remind you that the only time rape can be a good statistic is when it does not exist at all. I'd hate to be there when that rape victim of last semester picks up the paper to read that she has been the "only" rape victim in seven years.

Alumni mania on a quiet Saturday morning at ND

features writer

It's a Saturday morning at Notre Dame. The rising sun gleams on the dome. Birds chirp. Squirrels frolic. Hangovers throb.

There is something different, though. Something is in the air. Could it be? Yes! It's a football morning at Notre Dame and that means alumni. Lots of them. There are many different kinds of alumni. Most of them went to ND and they return often because it is special to them. Some of them are Subway alums, people who never went here but would have liked to. Then there are those who are simply enthralled by this place.

It doesn't really matter why they come, only that they do. As you sleep they descend on the campus, Nikons and baby strollers sparkling in the early autumn sunshine.

You are still asleep. Deep within the walls of your dorm you lie curled in bed, blissfully unaware of the new morning.

Suddenly your door opens very quietly and feet pad across your dirty laundry which is strewn all over the floor. Even half-asleep you sense that someone or something has entered your room. It must be your roommate. Silly roommate. Always breaking parietals and sneaking home in the early morning. What a nutty guy.

Hold it, your roomie went to sleep before you did. You start to get nervous and as you lie there in terror you hear whispers.

"Wow Dad, we're so close."

"Yes son, isn't it incredible, a Notre Dame student in his natural habitat! Look at all the dirty clothes, smell the old beer. Just think son, Knute Rockne probably slept here!"

You watch in disbelief as the son pockets your toothbrush as a souvenir and decide you've had enough. You sit up in bed quickly.

"Dad, it's awake!"

"Oh my God, nobody's gonna believe this at the office! Oh no, I'm out of film! Run! Run!"

Yes, the alumni are back and there are more of them than ever. They usually walk around campus in groups. Male alumni wear hornrims and plaid pants. They take pictures of everything and they slap a lot of backs. They also have great tailgaters. Female alumni wear khaki skirts and sunglasses. They have lots of children and they are some of the friendliest women in America.

Alumni children are called "little Domers" by their parents. They wear ND sweatshirts and ND shorts. Most of the boys have little blond bowl cuts. The girls wear plaid skirts and have a lot of green hair ribbons. These kids run around in circles a lot and chase the squirrels. They are the only ones on campus beside Father Hesburgh who do not drink beer on game days. They are the future of Notre Dame.

Let's meet a typical subway alumni family. Sandy and Steve Ferman are from Highland Indiana. That's an hour and a half away from the Notre Dame campus but they were here on Labor Day simply because they "love the atmosphere." Sandy and Steve have two children, both blond. One is in a stroller and the other is on roller skates.

The Fermans hope that their kids might go to Notre Dame because they grew up with the University's mystique but they never made it to school here. Sandy and Steve love Notre Dame so much that they spent part of their honeymoon here. That's right boys and girls, their honeymoon.

Why does Notre Dame mean so much to these people? Why does the bookstore sell so many ND mugs and extra-small sweatshirts? Why do people cry at the grotto? Why do millions of dollars pour in from alumni and non-alumni alike every year? It might just be good marketing or the old reputation. Then again it might be something more, something magic. Think about it. Do you know anyone who spent their honeymoon at Michigan?

ND's rolling tympani drummer makes his own tunes — and fun

features writer

With the weighty expectations surrounding this year's football season, one tends to wonder whether the half-time show will once again provide the season's only entertainment. Will the Notre Dame band once more prevail over Fighting Irish football?

Although this question lies unanswered as of yet, one senior is optimistic about both forms of entertainment.

In a whirlwind of twirling mallets and spinning drums, he entertains fans with one of the most celebrated instruments in the University of Notre Dame band - the rolling tympani.

Who is this talented drummer who amuses fans with his half-time antics? None other than senior John Lagorio, who describes the purpose of his famed position as "just basically trying to make a fool out of myself." This he does, to the enthusiastic cheers of a rowdy football crowd.

A fourth year band member and last year's drum co-captain, Lagorio has been banging drums since grade six. For his first two years in the University band he played the snare drum, and switched over to the prestigious position of rolling tympani player just this year.

"I switched partly for the time commitment," Lagorio remarks. "As a naval ROTC midshipman, I didn't have time to take over a whole section. I also wanted to have a good time this year and the tympani seemed a good way to do it."

Having a good time is exactly what Lagorio intends to do. "I plan to do some things never done before - let's just say funny things... I just hope I don't kill myself," he says.

In such a coveted position, others tend to question Lagorio's intentions.

"Yes, people call me a glory hound," he states, "I'm sure I'll see TV cameras this year, but the important thing is the spirit the tympani creates. We're all out there to have a good time this year. I just happened to pick the front position."

It is this front position that fans love. "I hope to increase school spirit by being crazy and showing enthusiasm on the field. It's a collective effort but sometimes hard to do everything I want to do and still be a part of the band."

The rolling tympani has no music written for it, so Lagorio must improvise not only his music but also his position on the field as well. "I have to find my own place in the band's design. I can basically go wherever I want," he remarks.

Glory does have its price, however. At the recent welcome back picnic, Lagorio injured himself from the repetitive rubbing of the mallets against his hands. "I was

"I was spinning the mallets and they kept rubbing and rubbing, and when I looked down blood was dripping from my hands. Well, it's all in fun."

— John Lagorio

spinning the mallets and they kept rubbing and rubbing, he relates, "and when I looked down blood was dripping from my hands. Well, it's all in fun."

This, Domers, is something to remember this season. Amid the numerous debates over Faust's success with the Irish this year, rest assured that the Notre Dame band will return in its full regalia.

All in all, John Lagorio is optimistic about this season and the role he plays. "Many times I'll end up looking like a clown, but in the end, that's what the crowd enjoys."

Dolphins, 49ers recover to gain wins

Associated Press

Dan Marino won over the fans while winning the game that kept alive Coach Don Shula's home opener streak as Miami defeated the Indianapolis Colts 30-13 yesterday.

Marino, ignoring his first Orange Bowl boos, passed for 329 yards and two touchdowns, hitting on 29 of 48 passess.

"I was not worried about the crowd reaction," said the third-year quarterback, who turned 24 yesterday. "I just go out and try to do my job the best I can." Marino missed five weeks of the preseason because of a contract dispute.

Marino, who led Miami to the Super Bowl last season, was booed when he first trotted onto the field, and again when his first pass was behind Mark Duper and fell incomplete. But he connected on the next two attempts and the 53,693 fans were back on his side.

San Francisco, the defending Super Bowl champion, also turned boos into cheers, as Roger Craig's 62-yard touchdown run highlighted a 35-point, second-half which carried the 49ers over the Atlanta by a score of 35-16.

St. Louis stays on top in N.L. East

Associated Press

CHICAGO - Cesar Cedeño went 5-for-5 and drove in four runs, two with a homer, and Danny Cox won his 16th game yesterday as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs 5-1.

The victory kept the Cardinals one-half game ahead of New York in the National League East. The Mets beat Montreal 6-2 yesterday.

Rookie left-hander Steve Engel, 1-5, was the loser.

Cox, 16-9, gave up five hits over seven innings. Todd Worrell finished up with two innings of hitless relief.

Mets 6, Expos 2

MONTREAL - Danny Heep hit a three-run homer in the first inning, Mookie Wilson homered and doubled twice and Howard Johnson added a solo home run yesterday, leading the New York Mets over the Montreal Expos 6-2.

Ron Darling, 16-5, won his sixth straight decision, allowing five hits in 7 1-3 innings. Jesse Orosco finished up for his 16th save.

Montreal starter John Dopson, 0-2, got only two outs in the first inning before leaving.

Blue Jays 8, Yankees 5

NEW YORK - The Toronto Blue Jays, keyed by Cliff Johnson's two-run single, kayoed New York with a six-run third inning yesterday and opened a 4 1/2-game lead in the American League East by beating the Yankees 8-5.

The Blue Jays pounded five New York pitchers for 14 hits.

Doyle Alexander, 16-8, pitched 7 1-3 innings and was charged with two runs. He walked five batters and struck out four.

Gary Lavelle relieved during New York's three-run eighth inning. Tom Henke got the last two outs.

The Blue Jays jumped on Ed Whitson, 10-8, in the third.

Angels 12, Rangers 4

ANAHEIM, Calif. - Reggie Jackson hit a three-run homer in the first inning and Doug DeCinces homered for two runs in a six-run eighth to help the California Angels to a 12-4 victory yesterday over the Texas Rangers.

The Angels had 14 hits and 11 walks off five Texas pitchers.

Kirk McCaskill, 10-11, gave up three runs in 6 1-3 innings and was replaced by Stuart Cliburn, who pitched the final 2 2-3 innings to earn his sixth save this season.

Texas starter Jose Guzman, 0-2, pitched the first five innings, allowing five runs on six hits and five walks.

A's 4-2, Royals 2-7

OAKLAND, Calif. - George Brett hit a three-run homer and Bud Black threw a four-hitter to help the Kansas City Royals beat the Oakland A's 7-2 and salvage a split of their yesterday doubleheader.

Irish

cepted by Doug Mallory to end Notre Dame's chances.

The lack of offensive production by the Irish had many people, including Wolverine coach Bo Schembechler, questioning Notre Dame's play selection, especially early in the game. On the nine plays of their first three possessions inside the Michigan 20-yard line, the Irish did not pass once. All three of those series resulted in field goals.

"I was surprised that they ran so much," noted Schembechler. "People think they can run the ball on us, but I don't know why."

That was a question that Beuerlein also had difficulty answering.

"It was frustrating, and a lot of guys didn't understand it," said the Irish quarterback of the abundance of run calls. "But the coaches have been around a lot longer than we have, and they have a philosophy they want to stick with. We had no trouble getting down the field and then we thought we could hit the run. Obviously the coaches thought we could pound it in on the ground."

Beuerlein threw only seven passes in the first half, and did not attempt a pass inside the Michigan 20 until the game's final drive.

The end result was a defeat, the second year in a row that the Irish have dropped their opening game in less-than-impressive fashion.

"We just have to do a character reevaluation, come out and play harder and cut down on mistakes," offered tailback Allen Pinkett, who was "held" to 89 yards on 22 carries. "There were some crucial mistakes made. All four years I've been here this situation has come up."

If it comes up again next weekend when Michigan State comes to town, then it could be a long season for the Irish.

EXTRA POINTS - The television situation for this Saturday will most likely go as follows: ABC will televise the Michigan-South Carolina game nationally in the afternoon, while the Notre Dame-Michigan State game figures to be picked up by ESPN for a live night telecast, meaning that temporary lights will once again be utilized in Notre Dame Stadium...

Irish get third in volleyball tourney

By CHRIS STARKEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team got its first win under its belt this weekend at the Hoosier Classic in Indianapolis, and settled for third place in the four-team tournament.

The Irish defeated Butler in the consolation match, 15-13, 13-15, 15-1, 15-5 on Saturday, after falling to Indiana, 15-12, 15-5, 15-13 on Friday. Notre Dame did not face Purdue, the fourth team in the tournament.

Coming off losses to Kentucky and Ohio State, Coach Art Lambert was encouraged with his team's performance in Indianapolis.

"Overall, we played pretty well in finishing third," he said. "I did feel, however, that we had a really good chance to take them both. The opportunities were there in that first match, but we failed to capitalize."

Lambert felt that the youth of his team was still a factor.

"We're coming around, though. Had this game (Indiana) been in the middle of the season, I think we would have taken them."

Notre Dame will get another chance at the Hoosiers when the Irish play host to Indiana on Tuesday, November 5.

Lambert also praised the play of freshman setter Whitney Shewman. "She's a youngster who really had an exceptional match against Butler," he commented.

Notre Dame's next test is tomorrow at Bowling Green. Lambert is wary of the Falcons.

"They're an unknown quantity," he said. "They've changed a lot since the last time we faced them. We'll be ready. Slowly but surely we're coming together as a team."

Line

We went light in practice last week because of the injuries, but we may just have to work on the trenches all the time this week.

Schembechler, meanwhile, feels that his line's fine play will be a springboard to even better things for his team.

"Having success against Notre Dame will help our line," said the Michigan mentor, now in his 17th season at the Wolverine helm. "We don't really have the size, but we have the quickness. We gave Notre Dame problems by changing alignments on the line. Our guys were pretty tough to handle."

No doubt, this loss will be tough to handle for the prideful players in the Irish trenches. A group so used to success in their endeavors usually will not accept defeat lightly.

On Saturday, though, the Wolverines were able to upset the Irish by surprising them at the line.

"I didn't think we'd be able to run as well as we did," said Schembechler.

And that was the bottom line.

It started out as a game. Eating everything I wanted ...thousands of calories. Then throwing up so I wouldn't have to worry about gaining weight. But my game turned into something else. A way of life. Bulimia had taken over. Making me feel guilty. Alone. And out of control.

One phone call helped me begin to change all that. When I contacted HOPE, I discovered a special program designed by Memorial Hospital of South Bend that helps people like me who have eating disorders. By the end of the program I was finally feeling better about myself - finally feeling like I was in control.

If you or someone you know has an eating disorder, call 284-7151. And discover how HOPE can help.

N.D. soccer team loses two over the weekend; record drops to 1-5

The Notre Dame soccer team lost two games over the weekend to drop to 1-5 on the season.

The Irish lost yesterday at Evansville, 4-2, in overtime. Friday night, Notre Dame fell to Wisconsin-Madison, 2-1, on Cartier Field.

In yesterday's contest, Rob Schoenstein scored two goals in the first overtime period to nullify an Irish comeback and give Evansville the victory.

The Purple Aces scored two goals in the first three minutes of the contest to lead the Irish. Notre Dame freshman Randy Morris put in the first Irish goal eight minutes into the match.

With just two minutes remaining in the game, Irish freshman Joe Sternberg tied the score with an assist from junior Marvin Lett.

Notre Dame goalkeeper Hugh Breslin made four saves in the match.

Evansville is ranked eighth in the nation with an 8-0 record.

In Friday's game, the Irish led first when freshman John Guignon took a loose ball in front of the goal and headed it home at 11:11.

The Badgers came back with a goal at 31:48 to tie the score. Andy Rectenwal beat Breslin on a penalty kick for the goal. The kick was awarded when Notre Dame defenseman Stuart MacDonald used his hands to save a shot that was speeding toward the unguarded Irish goal.

The Badgers broke the tie at 63:52, when Brad Hickey scored off a pass from Rectenwal on the left wing.

Each team took 15 shots on goal in the contest. Breslin made seven saves for the Irish. Gerard Averill turned eight shots away from the Wisconsin-Madison goal.

The Irish will play host to Michigan State at 7:30 p.m. Friday on Cartier Field.

The Observer/Pete Laches

Notre Dame's John Guignon, shown here in action against Wisconsin-Milwaukee on Sept. 7, scored the only goal for the Irish when they fell to Wisconsin-Madison Friday night. Notre Dame also lost yesterday to Evansville. Some details of the games appear in the story at left.

Saint Mary's volleyball team takes part in nine-team Illinois tourney

By JILL SARBENOFF
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's varsity volleyball team opened its season Friday, participating in a tournament in Elmhurst, Ill. The highlight of the weekend came when the Belles defeated the number-one seed, Elmhurst College, in two games in the opening match.

After the exciting first match, the team moved on in pool play to take on Augustana College. Nine teams were in the tournament and they were divided into various pools.

Saint Mary's lost to Augustana, however, in the second match of round one.

In round two, the Belles defeated Aurora College but lost to Illinois Benedictine. This put Saint Mary's in the consolation bracket with the fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth seeds.

On Saturday morning, the team lost to Augustana again in three games and also lost to Carroll College in three games. With these two losses, the Belles finished the tourney in ninth place.

Throughout the tournament, however, there were some good efforts made by the team. Sophomore Colleen Mergens led the team in sets, while junior Mary Reidy, and freshmen Margaret Feldman and Tami Suth paced the team in kills.

Freshman manager Karen Krok feels that the motivation displayed by the team this weekend will be a key factor in the team's success this season.

"They really want to win. They seem to try really hard and always give all that they have," said Krok.

On Friday, the Belles will be traveling to Lisle, Ill. for a weekend tournament at Benedictine.

Irish field hockey team opens its season by winning one, losing one

By TERRY LYNCH
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame field hockey team opened up its 1985 season this weekend by splitting its first two games against Ball State and Michigan.

The Irish opened at home Friday with a crushing 6-1 defeat at the hands of a powerful and efficient Ball State team. Ball State, ranked 20 in the preseason poll and probably the toughest opponent the Irish will face this season, proved itself equal to the advance billing by virtually dominating play throughout the entire game.

"You can't take a thing away from them," said Head Coach Jill Lindenfeld after the defeat. "Ball State is an outstanding team. They scored all nice goals, used the right side of the field well, and their teamwork was good."

The game began with the appearance of being a close match, but eventually Ball State kept the ball in the Irish end long enough to score 11 minutes into the first half on a goal by June Lenbar. Lenbar went on to score two goals in the first half, and along with an effort from Kelly Dawson, Ball State took a 3-0 halftime lead.

The Irish, however, came out early in the second half playing inspired hockey. After a particularly fine save by Irish goaltender Patti Gallagher, forward Molly McCabe scored on a spectacular breakaway, and the Irish cut Ball State's lead to 3-1.

Hope for a comeback proved to be short-lived for the Irish as Ball State struck again, scoring three times in a 15-minute span. Ball State midfielder Dawson turned in an impressive performance, ending the afternoon with a hat trick.

After the game, Irish players had nothing but praise for the Ball State squad.

"They had excellent stickwork, and they were just better skilled," remarked co-captain Mary Rose Rodgers. "But considering the amount of time we've been out here (practicing), we held up pretty well."

"Defensively, their players were not marked tight enough, especially in the circle," said Lindenfeld. "We didn't use enough small passes, and tried to do too much with the long ones."

Goaltender Patti Gallagher, who finished the game with 25 saves, echoed Lindenfeld's sentiments on the defense, and added that the absence of co-captain Christine Weinmann from the game had a lot to do with the lopsided score.

"We really missed Christine today. It's a different defense without her."

The Irish rebounded from their opening-day loss yesterday with a 1-0 victory over Michigan in Ann Arbor. The goal was scored by sophomore Benet DeBerry on an assist from senior link Regina Degnan. Patti Gallagher recorded seven saves between the pipes for the Irish.

"Today's game was much like last year's," said Lindenfeld after the game yesterday. "We controlled the ball more, and even though Michigan had more shots on goal, the defense played well. Patti Gallagher played a fabulous game."

"After Friday's loss, I told the team to just relax and have fun, and that's what they did."

Wolverines rally past Irish in second half, 20-12

The Observer/Pete Laches

Senior Irish defensive tackle Eric Dorsey is sandwiched by two Michigan offensive linemen during Saturday's game between Notre Dame and the Wolverines. For more on the game, see Larry Burke's story at right. Marty Burns writes on the Irish problems on both sides of the line below.

Penalties, mistakes prove costly for ND as Michigan scores upset on national television

ANN ARBOR, Mich. - Quarterback Steve Beuerlein just hoped that his team would be able to pick up the pieces.

"Winning this game would have been a big one for us," said the Irish quarterback of Saturday's 20-12 loss to Michigan. "We're just going to have to start from the beginning again. We have to get it together. I'm tired of saying wait 'til next week."

But what the Irish will be doing between now and next week could hardly be called waiting, according to Coach Gerry Faust.

"We went light in practice this week because of the injuries (the likes of which kept wideout Alvin Miller and cornerback Mike Haywood out of the contest)," said Faust. "But this week we may just have to work in the trenches all week. We'd better come back right away. I'm tired of this stuff about us not moving people off the ball. I'm not going to wait for it until November.

"Michigan controlled the line on both sides. We've got to come off the football next week, and we will come off the football."

Problems on the line were not the only reason for Notre Dame's defeat yesterday, however. Costly mistakes, critical penalties and questionable playcalling helped the Wolverines erase Irish leads of 9-3 and 12-10, to the delight of most of the 105,523 in attendance.

Of the mistakes, by far the most damaging was Alonzo Jefferson's fumble of the opening kickoff in the second half, which was recovered by Michigan's Dieter Heren on the Notre Dame 14-yard line. At the time Notre Dame led, 9-3, on the strength of three John Carney field goals, and it appeared that the Irish might be able to escape with a low-scoring win. But the Wolverines gained new life after Jefferson's turnover, as three plays later quarterback Jim Harbaugh scampered 10 yards into the end zone for the touchdown that gave Michigan its first lead of the game.

As if that wasn't bad enough, Jefferson suffered a season-ending injury on the play. His knee will require surgery, and his loss leaves the Irish in a jam as far as the tailback situation is concerned.

"That fumble was definitely the big play we needed," said Wolverine tailback Jamie Morris, who knifed his way through the Irish defense for 119 yards on the afternoon. "There's no doubt that that was the tuning point in the game."

Later in the third quarter, after Carney had tied a school record with his fourth field goal to put the Irish ahead 12-10, a crucial penalty swung the momentum in Michigan's favor once again. It was a questionable roughing-the-passer call on defensive tackle Wally Kleine that helped keep alive an 80-yard Wolverine drive that produced the winning touchdown. The call came on a third-and-seven play, as Wolverine tight end Eric Kattus dropped a pass at the 15-yard line with nothing but open field in front of him. The net result was a first down for the Wolverines at the Notre Dame 13, instead of a fourth-and-seven from the 26 that would have necessitated a 43-yard field goal attempt by freshman Mike Gillette. Earlier in the game, Gillette was short on a 47-yarder.

It appeared on the replays that Kleine was in the air as Harbaugh released the ball, and could not have avoided a collision with the Michigan quarterback.

"That call surprised me," Kleine said. "If it was a penalty, then it was a stupid mistake."

Whatever the case, fullback Gerald White cruised through a big hole over left tackle three plays later to put Michigan ahead, 17-12. There were still more than 16 minutes left to play, but the Wolverines looked ready to put the game away.

In the fourth quarter, a 15-yard pass interference penalty on cornerback Marv Spence aided the Wolverines' march for their final points.

The Irish had two chances in the final five minutes, but came up empty both times. In the final minute they drove down to the Michigan 11-yard line, but Beuerlein was sacked for an 11-yard loss on third down and then was inter-

Line play proves to be the crucial difference in loss to Wolverines

ANN ARBOR, Mich. - A frustrated and weary Gerry Faust left little doubt to a long line of reporters what he thought made the difference moments after his 13th-ranked Notre Dame team lost its season opener for the second consecutive year.

"I thought Michigan controlled the line of scrimmage on both ends of the ball," said Faust. "We aren't going to win many football games when they do that. The game was won on the lines and in our failure to execute there."

A sub-par performance in the trenches, of course, was not supposed to be possible with this Irish team. Even on a day when nothing seemed to go as it should have, this development, which began to show itself late in the first half, was a surprise to almost everyone viewing the contest.

After all, Notre Dame has a national reputation for producing the biggest and strongest lines year in and year out. In fact, Michigan coach Bo Schembechler had expressed concern about the experience and strength of the Irish lines earlier in the week.

Schembechler had good reason to worry, for the Irish starters on the offensive line averaged around 6-5, 270-pounds per man. The defensive front, meanwhile, had the intimidating duo of 6-5, 270-pound tackle Eric Dorsey and 6-9, 274-pound Wally Kleine to go with 6-2, 252-pound nosetackle Mike Kiernan.

Yet when the dust had cleared in Michigan Stadium on Saturday, the Wolverines had outrushed the Irish 251 yards to 97. The Michigan lines, which featured several players in new positions, were able also to apply pressure on Notre Dame quarterback Steve Beuerlein on some critical plays.

"They had a better rush and opened up better holes," said Faust. "If we can't open holes our game won't go. When you make five or six yards on first down you're going to win the football game."

Early in the contest, it was Notre Dame who was banging for five yards a crack, as the Irish checked the Michigan running game on defense and then moved the ball downfield on offense. The result was a 6-0 Irish lead by the middle of the second quarter.

Things changed at this point, however, as the Wolverines began pushing their way downfield for 55 yards in 10 plays to add a field goal. It was more of the same in the second half as Michigan tailback Jamie Morris followed the blocks of his line to key two long scoring drives which put the game away.

Senior offensive guard Tim Scannell admitted that he and his teammates may not have been quite ready for the quality play exhibited by the Wolverine defensive line.

"I think they were a lot quicker than we anticipated," said Scannell. "They just outquicked us and moved to where they wanted."

Although Faust was less than pleased with the play of his lines, he vowed a better effort next week against Michigan State, another Big 10 school with big and talented lines.

"We have to execute better on both of our lines," said the fifth-year coach. "I tell you though, we're going to come off the ball next time."

Notre Dame cross country squad wins meet by beating three teams

By PETE GEGEN

The Notre Dame cross country team won its first meet of the season last Friday, besting three teams in Columbus, Ohio. The score of the meet was Notre Dame 44, Ohio State 46, Michigan State 49 and Missouri Baptist 108.

Co-captain Jim Tyler won the five-mile race with a time of 24:18. Sophomore Dan Garrett placed fifth, and co-captain John Magill finished tenth.

"I felt pretty relaxed," said Tyler about his run. "I started to tire on the third and fourth mile, but I was able to pass the leaders in the last half mile."

The fourth Irish runner to finish was freshman Ron Markezich. In his first college-level race, the youngster placed 11th.

"It was a lot different than high school," noted Markezich. "They really took off fast at the start, so I was behind the first couple miles. I had to catch up."

The final three runners to place for the varsity were Tom Warth (17th), Jeff Van Wie (19th), and Tim Diamond (20th).

Head coach Joe Piane said he was very pleased with the efforts of these last three runners. However, he was not completely satisfied with the performance of his team as a whole.

"Some of the runners did unexpectedly well," he said. "But some did not run well at all. We can do a lot better."

The team had a little trouble sticking to Piane's philosophy of running as a pack.

"We have to run in a group better," said Tyler. "We were a little spread out on Friday."

Injuries have also caused a few problems for the Irish. Both Craig Maxfield and Rick Mulvey have been slowed by foot problems, and Mike Collins is not expected to return for four weeks.

On the positive side, the team demonstrated that it does have the talent to match or even surpass last year's achievements.

"The Ohio State team returned the entire team which was fourth in the Big Ten last year," noted Piane. "And they were wondering who these guys were from Notre Dame."
