Second quake rocks Mexico City; 10 ND students 'okay'

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY - Exhausted rescue teams worked through the night Saturday, digging into the rubble of collapsed buildings for more victims of the big earthquakes that ravaged the world's most populous capital.

The government put the death toll at 2,000, but unofficial estimates said it could reach five times that.

A second quake hit Mexico City and four states Friday night, spreading panic and toppling some buildings damaged by Thursday's devastating quake.

All 10 of the Notre Dame students enrolled in the Mexico City program were reported safe by an unidentified man who had visited the students Saturday and telephoned a parent from Houston, according to Isabel Charles, assistant provost and director of the Foreign Study Programs.

The Notre Dame program operates through the Universidad Iberoamericana, located in a southern section of Mexico City. This area was not reported to have been heavily damaged.

Mexico City police said Saturday that at least 2,000 people were killed, 15,000 were injured and 20,000 were homeless. They said 196 damaged buildings were a threat to safety and would have to be demolished.

Mexico City's mayor, Ramon Aguirre, told The Associated Press late Saturday that 1,641 bodies had been recovered from under collapsed buildings in the capital, but that 2,000 people were still believed pinned under debris and possibly dead.

The back-to-back tremors collapsed 411 buildings in Mexico City alone, Aguirre said. Six thousand people were treated for injuries, and 5,000 capital residents rendered homeless by the quakes were being housed in refugee centers, the mayor told the AP.

U.S. ambassador John Gavin, who flew over the city Saturday, told reporters the death toll could reach 10,000, but that was "just a guess." He said 1,000 people may have been killed or injured in one high-rise apartment complex in the Nuevo Leon neighborhood.

Gavin also said that five Americans had perished. He did not release their identities, but said they were a couple staying at the devastated St. Regis Hotel, and a mother and her two children.

Earlier Saturday, Greg Lagana, spokesman for the State Department Earthquake Task Force in Washington, identified three of the victims as Mary Vallejo and her children from Nebraska.

Mrs. Vallejo's brother, Mike Zgud of Kearney, Neb., said State Department officials contacted the family Friday evening and told them that Mrs. Vallejo, 34, and her children, Ilse, 8, and Alonzo, 5, were among those killed.

Officials said at least 1,300 bodies had been identified by Saturday afternoon. Rescue workers continued looking for survivors, but said they would have to stop soon and clear the rubble to avoid the possibility of an epidemic caused by rotting bodies in the debris.

People roam the street in front of a collapsed building after an earthquake hit Mexico City Thursday. The quake registered 7.8 on the Richter scale. A second quake struck Friday night. See story at left.

Aid from around the globe arrives in disaster relief effort

Associated Press

Aid ranging from U.S. helicopters, Soviet medicines and proceeds from a Polish soccer game were destined for quake-ravaged Mexico City Saturday as nations around the world pledged help.

In Puerto Rico, businessmen formed the Roberto Clemente Relief Committee and sent 300,000 pounds of food. Clemente, a Puerto Rican-born member of the baseball Hall of Fame who played with the Pittsburgh Pirates, was killed Jan. 1, 1973, in the crash of a plane he had chartered to deliver supplies to victims of the big Nicaraguan earthquake.

Following is a brief summary of aid being sent to Mexico by various countries:

- ALGERIA The government sent a plane carrying tents, blankets and

- medicines, plus a team of civil defense rescue specialists who assisted in relief operations following the 1980 earthquake that devastated the Algerian city of El Asnam and killed an estimated 6,000 people.

- BRAZIL The Mexican colony in Rio de Janeiro, estimated at about 40 families, opened a bank account to collect funds for victims.

- CANADA An air force Buffalo aircraft left Saturday for Mexico with communications equipment and more than a ton of blankets purchased by the Canadian Red Cross.

- ISRAEL The army is sending equipment designed to locate and dig out survivors from collapsed buildings. The equipment was designed in Israel and will be operated by Israelis experienced in its use.

- ITALY The Civil Defense Ministry is sending 35 tons of medicine and non-perishable food and dogs trained to search for victims.

- SOVIET UNION A plane carrying 2.5 tons of medicine and tents arrived in Mexico Saturday and the Soviet news agency Novosti said two more planes carrying 50 tons of supplies were being sent.

- TURKEY The semi-official Anatolia news agency said the government would donate $10,000. The Turkish Red Cross said it would send an unspecified amount of food, medicine, cloth, tents and blankets.

- UNITED STATES The State Department said help, including helicopters and mine rescue teams, was on its way. President Reagan is sending his wife, Nancy, to Mexico City to explore ways to deliver aid. Churches and corporations joined with relief agencies to commit at least $650,000. A teletthon planned in Los Angeles hopes to raise $500,000.

Student government to study possible activity fee increase

By MARK PANKOWSKI
Copy Editor

Should the mandatory student activity fee be increased to improve students' social life?

Student government is planning an in-depth study to decide this issue, and if it makes a recommendation favoring an increased fee, it is likely the administration and the Board of Trustees will approve it, according to Father David Tyson, vice president for student affairs.

But whether a favorable recommendation is made remains in question.

Director of Student Activities Joni Neal advocates increasing the mandatory fee, which she said now brings in approximately $247,000 per year.

Although Neal said she is unsure how much the fee should be increased, she said doubling the $35 activities fee would not be excessive if "all the groups bring in good entertainment."

An increase is necessary to provide adequate funding for all student organizations, Neal said.

"There are simply too many groups that (the funds) must be distributed to that no one group is receiving adequate funds," Neal said. "These groups need a larger budget to bring in either more programming or more well-known entertainment. 'Not just rock n' roll stars but also lecturers,' she said.

Student Senator Chris Abood disagrees with Neal.

According to Abood, the University provided the Student Activities Board last year with an increase in funds equal to $15 per undergraduate that remains separate from the activities fee, yet there has been "no great impact on social life."

"There's been a big increase in funds over last year and (social life) hasn't improved," he said. "In fact it has decreased."

Neal said students' social life did benefit from the increase in funds and cited the Around The Corner club as one example of the improvement.

Approximately 80 percent of the funds the University provided Student Activities went to finance the club, which has "events planned for every weekend of the semester," Neal said.

When student government does study the issue, said Neal, it will take into account what fees other similar universities charge, whether those fees are mandatory or voluntary, and what student organizations that fee provides funding for.

A recommendation then will be made based on "what information they get and what this campus can and is willing to absorb," she said.

"If we raised it to $150, the students would revolt," Neal said.

If the recommendation is favorable to a fee increase, she said, a request would be made to the office of student affairs. If Tyson approves the request, it would go to the officers of the University and then would be presented to the Board of Trustees meeting during its spring spring.

Tyson supports an increase in the fee.

"I think if they make a recommendation to raise the activities fee, I would recommend it to the officers and the Board of Trustees," Tyson said. "If it's well documented, I think I could get it approved by the officers as well as the board."

No student club or organization, except for the class governments, has made a presentation to the senate requesting more funds, said Abood.

"Right now no one has shown me why they need more money for any specific reason," he said. "There has been no presentation to (the senate), except for the classes, complaining that they need more funds."

Neal, who is now in the process of allocating $2,000 saved for student groups appealing for more money, said she is hearing a lot of complaining.

"So far during the September appeals, 38 organizations are asking for first-time money or appealing for more money than they received last spring," she said.

A Roman Catholic priest accused of supplying young people with cocaine, marijuana and alcohol at his suburban Detroit rectory has pleaded innocent to the charges, state police say. Father Neil Kalina, 30, of St. Kieran Church in Shelby Township, in Romeo, Michigan, was freed on $12,000 bond Friday after arraignment on one count of delivering cocaine, two counts of marijuana possession and two counts of providing alcohol to minors, said Trooper Curtis Schram. Schram said he learned the priest was providing and using the drugs with young people after investigating parents' complaints that he was supplying alcoholic beverages to them. - AP

An early morning fire in Mount Clemens, Michigan destroyed a hotel Saturday, killing two people and forcing evacuation of 40 occupants, police said. The fire, which started about 3:30 a.m. in the lobby of the Turn-of-the-Century Lawrence Hotel in this Detroit suburb, was extinguished within an hour, said police Sgt. Mike Lubeckyj. The bodies of a man in his 20s and a woman in her 30s were pulled from the remains, Lubeckyj said, adding the fire's cause has not been determined. One hotel occupant was seriously injured, officials said. - AP

Medical issues in the media: more harm than good?

From the National Enquirer to Newsweek, nearly every publication is screaming the same message. AIDS.

We are deluged with pictures of Rock Hudson weeks before his death and graphic descriptions of hysteria in Hollywood and the local grammar school.

And lost somewhere in the degrading photos and screaming parents are the patients and the problems. We read, or can read, as much about AIDS as we care to stomach, but chances are, few of us have gained any real understanding of the problem or its solution.

It's not the first time an illness has been used to sell magazines.

A few years ago eating disorders - anorexia nervosa and bulimia - were the darling of medical media. We were treated to pictures of an emaciated Karen Carpenter and dozens of pseudo-informative articles in woman's magazines.

In many cases these articles did more harm than they did good. Although the media is exploiting AIDS victims, the press cannot spread the disease itself. You can't get AIDS from reading an article. A story, however, inadvertently could push someone toward bulimia.

Ron Thompson, a psychologist at Notre Dame's Counseling and Psychological Services, said some of his patients "learned about it (bulimia) from some of the things they read in Cosmo and Redbook." Bulimia is a disorder which involves bingeing and purging to lose or maintain weight. For a woman desperate to improve her appearance, the suggestion of this seemingly painless way to lose weight might be appealing. Thompson said that some bulimics never thought of trying these methods until they learned of them from magazine articles.

Thankfully, the media blitz on eating disorders has drawn to a close. But as the dust clears and the press moves onto the next disease the problem remains.

Eating disorders are "a problem that will be with us through the 80s," said Thompson. "It's a big, big problem on campus."

It's also a problem that Notre Dame is prepared to deal with. Thompson, who has been treating patients with eating disorders for six years at Indiana University, is one of many qualified staff members at Counseling and Psychological Services willing to help students with eating disorders.

Notre Dame offers treatment on a number of levels. Individual therapy is available, and the center now is forming a therapy group. Counselors also are willing to work with residence hall staffs and help them recognize and deal with the problem. Residence halls may request an educational workshop, focusing on proper eating habits as well as eating disorders.

Students need not parade up to the third floor of the Student Health Center to get information. Counselors now has tapes available on eating disorders, for those who aren't sure if they have a problem or would just like some information. Students also may call and discuss their concerns and questions with Thompson or another staff member. Callers will not be required to give their names.

"Talking about bulimia is hard," said Thompson. "They know they're doing something wrong... They don't like themselves for what they're doing and are afraid someone else won't like them."

But for those suffering from eating disorders, making the effort to talk about it can be worthwhile. "People have been cured," said Thompson. "It's not the kind of thing that has to bother you for the rest of your life."

The media will continue to overdramatize and exploit "popular" diseases. We can only hope that somewhere in the stack of newsprint, those who need information are able to find it.

How you live
may save your life.

Student government starts own 'ad agency'

By GREG STOHR
Staff Reporter

Notre Dame Student Government has announced the creation of Adworks, the Notre Dame Advertising Network, an agency which will specialize in all types of advertising for student organizations.

Student Government hopes that Adworks, originally the idea of Bob Vonderheide, former editor-in-chief of The Observer, will alleviate what it believes to be the inability of student organizations to adequately publicize campus events.

"In the past, for a lot of events, there has been a lack of coordination in publicity," says Student Body President Bill Healy. "When Bob Vonderheide presented the idea to us last semester, we jumped at it."

Vonderheide had noticed the ineptitude of groups trying to publicize events through The Observer and felt a need for a new body to coordinate student advertising.

"You have to have a professional approach," he said. "There is a certain amount of skill involved. It (Adworks) works like an ad agency."

Headed by junior Frank Vidergar, Adworks presently has a staff of approximately 15.

It now answers to the Notre Dame student government but Vidergar and Healy hope that Adworks will eventually become an independent organization.

"I have as my goal to become autonomous," Vidergar says, "but it may not happen this year."

Adworks' budget of $2500 comes partially from Student Government and partially from the Office of Student Activities. Vidergar says he hopes only to cover the budget, not to make a large profit.

"It's a business, but we still look at it as a service to the students," the business major says. "We will make very little profit because we will keep our rates really low."

Though Adworks has yet to work with a medium other than The Observer, Vidergar plans to utilize posters, Scholastic magazine, radio, and perhaps The South Bend Tribune in the future. He expects that a growth in business volume will allow Adworks to explore these other media.

The professionalism of Adworks, Vidergar thinks, will make it beneficial to student groups.

"Our people have marketing experience," he says. "Lots of our artists have worked in advertising agencies before."

Adworks will be open for business Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 3 until 5 p.m. The Adworks office is located on the second floor of LaFortune Student Center.

SMC computer ability to expand

By KATHY CEPERICH
News Staff

The basement of LeMans Hall will house a new computer center at Saint Mary's, which will be operative next semester according to Associate Professor Peter Smith of the Saint Mary's Mathematics department.

Terminal labs, microcomputers and computers will be included in the east wing addition.

Last spring, on the suggestion of Dr. Mark Bambenek of the Chemistry department, a petition was sent to the administration requesting the additional machines. "They indicated to the administration that they needed more micros on campus. The need had (already) been recognized and it (the petition) served as additional impetus," Bambenek said.

"We needed the space, it was a planned process. We had already planned to do it when the petition was submitted," said Smith.

Additional Zenith 158 terminals, new printers and a new prime computer will be purchased, according to Smith.

Bambenek said plans are underway to increase the power and capability of the present computer mainframe.

Previously a room in Madeleva Hall held the computers. The move is being made mainly to give additional space.

Some of the terminals will be available to the students 24 hours a day in an overnight facility and the rest will be available from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Students had been complaining about the shortage of computers, especially the Apple MacIntoshes. According to Juniors Leigh Ann Henriksen and Colleen Walker, "There is a justifiable demand for MacIntoshes. To write a paper one has to wait 2 to 3 hours. They (MacIntoshes) are so easy to learn that the number of users is growing faster than the number of machines."

"The administration is trying to develop a long range policy for computer use (and) what we're seeing now is that they're starting to implement the policy. The computer lab at Lemans is one stage. Ultimately the entire computer operation will move into that area," said Bambenek.

Development director chosen by Saint Mary's

By DIANE SCHOEDER
Staff Reporter

Fundraising at Saint Mary's has a new leader with Becky Drury named as Director of Development by Vice President for College Relations, Lawrence Durance.

Drury is responsible for overseeing the annual fund and alumni fund, as well as direct mail campaign and state planning, she said.

Because Saint Mary's is relatively new at fundraising, Drury said she was attracted to the challenge and "newness lends itself to molding." "I like to be a part of something new and essential to the college," she said.

The development department has several new goals slated for the 1985-86 school year Drury said, commenting that the most important and underlying goal is to build an endowment at Saint Mary's comparable to that of other women's private colleges.

Assistant Vice President of College Relations, Anne Reed, stressed the need to compete with private schools, such as Smith and Holyoke, which have been raising funds for a much longer period of time.

To begin with, Drury is initiating two new fundraising programs. The Saint Mary's class of 1961 will be the first class involved with the reunion gift project. In celebration of their 25th anniversary, an anonymous donor has agreed to put up 10 thousand dollars if the class can raise 40 thousand by the first week of June, Drury said.

Also initiated will be the National Endowment for Humanities Grant. Both programs are brand new this year and Drury said she is looking forward to the success and continued growth of similar fundraising programs.

"I hope to begin to develop and refine the methods of solicitation and to deliver the message to a broader base of constituents," stated Drury, who sees fundraising as a business. One way in which she plans to carry this out is by hiring the Institutional Development Council to organize solicitation funds.

Fourteen-hour FarmAid benefit generates more than $7 million

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. - Flanked by huge banners reading "Keep America Growing," singer Willie Nelson and cavalcade of other stars yesterday braved pouring rain to perform in a marathon FarmAid concert aimed at helping the nation's struggling farmers.

"Thank you very much for coming to the concert for America," shouted Nelson, the driving force behind the 14-hour concert featuring some 50 stars of country music, rock and blues.

As a crowd estimated at 64,000 filed into the University of Illinois football stadium, Nelson and Neil Young teamed up to sing "Are There Any More Real Cowboys." Nelson then brought cheering fans to their feet with "Whiskey River."

Nelson said a nationwide television and radio audience was calling pledges in at a rate of $500,000 an hour. Singer Brenda Lee, who emceed the program for cable television, said about $3 million was pledged by late afternoon. That was in addition to $4 million promoters said was raised before the concert began.

Nelson has said the concert's purpose was to raise money to help needy farmers and to increase public awareness of farmers' problems.

"We want everyone to call in from 'Surf City' or wherever," lead singer Mike Love of the Beach Boys, told the audience.

Music styles ranged from the rock of the Blasters to the country of George Jones and from the blues of B. B. King to the classics of Roy Orbison. Carole King played a white piano on the front edge of the stage with the FarmAid curtain as a backdrop.

As darkness approached, John Fogerty — formerly of Creedence Clearwater Revival — had the audience clapping and dancing, and told them, "Next time you sit down to a meal remember it didn't come in a cellophane bag from Safeway, some farmer put his whole life into growing that food."

A steady rainfall began shortly after the concert opened at 10 a.m. The stage, with a rotating center disk for quick act changes, was covered with a blue plastic roof but puddles still formed and crew members armed with mops tried to keep up.

Some concert-goers covered themselves with sheets of clear plastic, while others huddled beneath umbrellas or hooded rain-coats.

"A once-in-a-lifetime thing like this, how could you miss it," said Ken Lewis of Bloomington. "What's a little rain. We'll dry out tomorrow."

Tom Parkinson, a University of Illinois spokesman, estimated that about 64,000 people were in the stadium at mid-afternoon, but said the number could climb as more concert-goers arrived.

Despite the rain, the crowd rocked as X sang "Breathless" and swayed as Arlo Guthrie did "City of New Orleans."

About 500 people received medical treatment by early evening, and another 300 were expected to be treated by the time the concert ended at midnight, said Dr. Alan Baird, co-director of emergency services for the concert.

"We just had minor cuts, scratches, twisted ankles," he said. Baird said marijuana use was widespread.

Soon after the concert began, country singer Hoyt Axton got some of the rain-soaked audience up and dancing with "Joy To The World," then was joined by Tanya Tucker. By then, television cameramen on stage had their video equipment wrapped in yellow plastic to keep it dry.

Reagan cautions U.S. against 'false hopes'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Reagan, warning against "false hopes" about his upcoming summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, said Saturday the meetings could "bear fruit" if Moscow is serious about superpower cooperation.

"The Soviet Union frequently has been bent upon expansion," Reagan said in his weekly radio address.

"Indeed, since the 1970s, the Soviet Union has been engaged in a military buildup which far exceeds any rational definition of its defensive needs."

Reagan said that "given the Soviet nature of the Soviet system and its ideology, we must not raise false hopes."

Speaking from his retreat at Camp David, Md., the president noted that he will meet Soviet Foreign Minister Edward Shevardnadze for the first time on Friday, a session Reagan said has "special significance."

The meeting is to prepare for the Nov. 19-20 summit meeting in Geneva, the first U.S.-Soviet summit since 1979.

In his meeting with Shevardnadze, the president said he plans to raise the issues of human rights, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, and bilateral concerns such as trade and security matters, as well as U.S. efforts to achieve "genuine, verifiable reductions" in nuclear arms.

The president said he will "search for signs of a Soviet willingness to engage in genuine give-and-take," with the summit in mind.

"The differences between communism and democracy are profound," Reagan said. "There will inevitably be competition between us. But it's the responsibility of the leaders of the United States and the USSR to ensure that this competition is peaceful."

Reagan said that in the meetings he intends to protect Western interests, but also do his part to improve relations and tell Shevardnadze "how genuinely we wish this meeting to bear fruit."

"If there's comparable seriousness and flexibility on the Soviet part, cooperation between our two great nations will be enhanced," Reagan said.

The president slammed the Soviets for following policies that have "inflicted bitter costs upon the Soviet peoples every week," which he said included a mounting death toll among Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan and a decreasing standard of living at home.

"Mr. Gorbachev can change this," Reagan said, advising the Soviet leader to shift scarce resources from arms purchases to strengthening the economy.

Premier Fabius admits of French involvement in sinking

Associated Press

PARIS - Politicians and newspapers Saturday criticized President Francois Mitterrand and Premier Laurent Fabius for not clearing up allegations that a government espionage agency was responsible for the bombing of the Greenpeace environmental group flagship, the Rainbow Warrior.

Greenpeace campaign coordinator Steve Sawyer pressed the French government to accept "moral and financial responsibility" for the bombing following Fabius' admission.

"We hope this will open the eyes of world public opinion to the fundamental immorality that lies at the base of the international nuclear arms race," Sawyer said in a statement from his headquarters in England.

Defense Minister Charles Hernu resigned Friday in the scandal over the July 10 bombing in Auckland, New Zealand, which sank the Rainbow Warrior before it could leave on a protest voyage to the French nuclear testing site in the South Pacific.

Later that day, Adm. Pierre Lacoste, head of the General Directorate for External Security, was fired after refusing to answer questions about the incident.

French newspaper headlines Saturday read: "Hernu Sacrificed," "The Minister Leaves, The Mystery Remains," "The Truth Still Awaited."

"Taken a month and a half ago, yesterday's decisions would have given the feeling that the government was acting with resolution," wrote the Parisien Libere. It said the government now appears to be acting "under the pressure of events." Mitterrand, who earlier in the week ordered a shake-up of the spy agency over the scandal, has remained personally untouched by it. New reports agreed he was unaware of French involvement in the attack until a week after it occurred.

However, Serge July, editor of the newspaper Liberation, said the Greenpeace affair is "a time bomb that still risks exploding at the door of the presidential office."

Jean-Claude Gaudin, president of the Union for French Democracy, in the National Assembly, said, "The forced resignation of Messrs. Hernu and Lacoste leaves the problem of the truth and the real responsibility."

"Mr. Mitterrand is the chief of the armies and Mr. Fabius is responsible for defense," he said.

UDF leader Jean Lecanuet said, "Designating a scapegoat can only appear as one more maneuver to try to delay the establishment of the truth and dissimulate the responsibility. It is improbable that they were not informed."

Jacques Toubon, head of the conservative Rally for the Republic party, said Fabius should explain why, as head of the government, "he is incapable of directing the affairs of France."

The Communists also went on the attack. Poliburo member Charles Fiterman said, "Given the dimension this affair has taken, it appears difficult to me that the highest authorities of the state were not informed."

Two French espionage agents are under arrest in New Zealand, charged with murder, arson and conspiracy, and three others who fled to France are being sought under international arrest warrants.

Jet and ultralight collide; two dead

Associated Press

AUBURN, Ala. - A corporate jet and an ultralight one-man plane collided yesterday, killing two people and injuring five in what federal officials called the first fatal collision involving an ultralight.

The planes collided as they approached for landings at Auburn-Opelika Airport, said Herb White, a spokesman for Auburn University. The University owns the airport.

The ultralight pilot, who was killed in the crash, apparently did not have radio contact with the airport, White said. The co-pilot of the jet also died, said Lee County Coroner Jon Williams.

The accident was the "first fatal collision involving an ultralight and an aircraft," said Ira Furman, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington.

Ultralights usually are one-person aircraft with open cockpits and small engines, descended from hang-gliders powered by tiny engines. Their popularity increased rapidly in the mid and late 1970s, and by 1981, it was estimated there were 6,000 ultralights in the United States.

The jet, owned by Louisiana-

Pacific Corp. of Conroe, Texas, was "upside down in the grass on the side of the runway," said White.

Five people injured in the crash were treated at East Alabama Regional Medical Center, said Sherill Lewis, a spokeswoman for the hospital.

"One of them is critical, two of them have fractured spines, one is in surgery and one was released," she said.

She said the injured were relatives of an Auburn student to whom they were delivering furnishings from home.

Williams identified the ultralight pilot as B.J. Tidwell, of Auburn.

Marching band contest

Associated Press

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. - Ben Davis High School of Indianapolis walked away with the sweepstakes trophy and top honors in the Class A competition in the Mid-States Marching Band Contest at Indiana State University Saturday.

Ben Davis captured the sweepstakes trophy by collecting the most points among the 37 bands competing at ISU's Memorial Stadium.

Ben Davis also grabbed the honors for outstanding wind section.

Staci Harris of Clay City was named outstanding drum major and Lafayette Jefferson's drummers were named the outstanding percussion unit in the competition. Northview's flags and rifle corps won an award as the outstanding auxiliary unit.

Ben Davis was followed by Class A competitors Lafayette Jefferson, Avon, Marion and Terre Haute North.

In Class B competition, Lawrence North finished just ahead of defending champion East Noble. They were followed by Northview, Mooresville and Bloomington North.

Dear Fellow Students:

By now, most of you have heard about the tragic accident involving a Notre Dame Freshman, Kevin Hurley. Kevin is still critically ill and needs our prayers. Notre Dame Students are very good at setting aside special days for raising our consciousness about various issues (World Hunger, South Africa, etc.). We have set aside Tuesday, September 24, 1985 for Kevin.

On behalf of all of Student Government and Howard Hall we invite you to join in our prayers. At 5:00p.m. on Tuesday, Father Hesburgh will say a very special Mass for Kevin in Sacred Heart. We also ask that each hall dedicate one of their daily masses to Kevin. Please come to Sacred Heart tomorrow and let's all join in raising the Notre Dame Spirit up for Kevin.

Sincerely,

Bill Healy

Burfords arrested on DWI charges

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Former Environmental Protection Agency administrator Anne Burford and her husband, Robert Burford, an Interior Department official, were arrested on drinking-related charges late Friday night, officials in suburban Virginia said.

Mr. Burford, director of the Bureau of Land Management, was arrested by Virginia State Police after they saw his car stopped in the middle lane of a highway outside Washington. He was charged with driving while intoxicated and refusing to submit to a breathalyzer test.

Two hours later, shortly before 1 a.m., Mrs. Burford was arrested by Arlington, Va., police on a charge of being drunk in public after making a scene at the Arlington County Detention Center, jail officials said.

Mrs. Burford was in the car with her husband at the time of his arrest, according to C.W. Grant, a spokesman for the state police.

Arlington County Sheriff James Gondles said Mrs. Burford was ringing a button that buzzes deputies inside the jail. She also insisted loudly over the lobby intercom that she be allowed to see her husband, and repeatedly said she was a lawyer who knew her rights.

Arlington police officers eventually tired of Burford's behavior, Gondles said, and arrested her. "I would describe her behavior as abusive," he said. "Drunk-in-public charges are not very common anymore. You almost have to ask to be arrested."

Gondles said Mrs. Burford was cooperative after she was arrested, but two hours later she "became a problem" while inside her cell. She was banging her shoe on the cell, and when a deputy went to investigate, he was "scratched up" by Mrs. Burford, Gondles said.

Controversy marks reunion of war veterans in Germany

Associated Press

FRANKFURT, West Germany - Former Nazi SS soldiers welcomed a group of U.S. World War II veterans to a controversial reunion yesterday and agreed to continue their decade-long friendship despite criticism from Jewish leaders.

As television cameras whirled, 25 veterans of the U.S. 70th Infantry Division and their wives hugged and shook hands at Frankfurt airport with three veterans of the 6th SS mountain Division. The two divisions fought each other in the Battle of the Bulge in France near the end of the war.

"This is no official joint reunion or celebration; we're not trying to create a precedent or a confrontation," said Floyd Freeman, a U.S. veteran who organized the Americans' two-week visit to Germany and France.

"We are just meeting our friends by choice as individuals," Freeman said.

The veterans have been meeting annually in the United States and Europe since 1976, but Jewish leaders urged cancellation of this year's meeting on the grounds that SS units were involved in Nazi atrocities.

In response, the U.S. group called off its traditional get-together with the German veterans at a French cemetery but said they still planned to meet informally in the small Bavarian spa town of Bad Windsheim later this week.

"This is the only year a fuss has been raised. Maybe it's the 40th anniversary (of World War II's end), the memory's fading and some people want to jog it," said Delyle Omholt, president of the 70th Infantry Association.

"We're here to check out old battlefields, meet friends. We do respect criticism, and that's why we're now going to the cemetery alone. We of course do not condone Nazi atrocities."

Wilhelm Gottenstroeter, director of the SS veterans organization, insisted the annual encounters with former enemies were meant to nurture friendships and "have nothing to do with politics."

Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal earlier this month cabled the U.S. veterans group urging the meeting be canceled.

"The SS will use it as a sign of reconciliation," he wrote. "Your meeting will become an offense for millions of victims of Nazi oppression."

Neil Sandberg, a top official in the American Jewish Committee, said last week that the Waffen SS, the military arm of Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler's elite guard, "included large amounts of people who ran ... concentration camps."

Willi Weiler, an SS veteran who greeted the Americans at the airport Sunday, said his division had nothing to do with the death camps and was never accused of atrocities at the Nuremberg war crimes trial in 1946.

Nevertheless, Gottenstroeter said any meetings with the U.S. veterans during their 1985 visit "will be in private settings to avoid any disputes or trouble."

Two 40th-anniversary reunions of Waffen SS veterans last May prompted violent street demonstrations outside the meeting places.

Jewish and veterans groups in the United States protested President Reagan's visit in May to a German military cemetery where SS members were buried.

NBC collects Emmy nominations and awards in 37th presentation

Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. - "Cagney & Lacey," CBS's once-canceled policewoman show, and "The Cosby Show," the series that has sparked NBC's drive for top ratings, dominated the early awards at the 37th annual Emmys yesterday.

"Cagney & Lacey," which stayed on the air only because of a massive letter-writing campaign, won as best dramatic series - upsetting NBC's much-nominated "Miami Vice" - and took awards for best direction and best writing.

Tyne Daly, as Mary Beth Lacey, won best dramatic actress for the third straight year.

"Every year I come expecting to hear someone else's name called," she said. "I think it must be the part I get to play."

But NBC, which has topped the ratings for 16 of the past 17 weeks, dominated the awards with eight of the first 15. It led the nominations with 125, more than double the totals for both CBS and ABC.

"The Cosby Show," new last season, won best comedy writing for Ed Weinberg and Michael Leeson and best direction for Jay Sandrich. Bill Cosby, the star and driving force behind the show, rejected a nomination, saying he didn't believe in competing against other performers, and boycotted the ceremony at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

"So much of my work is shaped by Bill Cosby's wit and philosophy of what a family could be," Sandrich said in accepting his honor at a faster-paced, restricted awards show televised live on ABC.

William Daniels, the heart surgeon Dr. Mark Craig on NBC's "St. Elsewhere," won the award as best actor in a dramatic series.

Betty Thomas, Sgt. Lucille Bates on NBC's "Hill Street Blues," won best supporting actress in a drama, but was upstaged when a prankster accepted the award for her, saying she couldn't be present - even though the camera had plainly showed her in the audience.

"Well, it is definitely hard to follow an act like that," she joked, when she finally took the podium after a commercial.

"Miami Vice," a pastel and neon blend of cop show and music video, won best supporting actor award for Edward James Olmos as the stone-faced Lt. Martin Castillo.

"Yes, Lieutenant Castillo does smile," Olmos said.

The show, which had the most nominations with 15, won three technical Emmys announced earlier, but lost the first two awards for which it was eligible. John Addison's music for CBS's "Murder, She Wrote" beat Jan Hammer's "Miami Vice" score and Karen Arthur won the dramatic directing Emmy for a "Cagney & Lacey" episode, defeating two "Miami Vice" nominees.

Robert Guillaume, the star of ABC's "Benson," whose character has progressed from manservant to lieutenant governor, won the award as best comedy actor.

"I know you can't tell, but I just lost my color," the black performer joked. "This certainly beats going home empty-handed for a sixth time, and I'd like to thank Bill Cosby for not being here."

The women comedy performers were both repeats from last year: Jane Curtin, as the more insecure of two roommate divorcees on CBS's "Kate & Allie," was best actress, while Rhea Perlman won supporting actress for her portrayal of the tough barmaid Carla on NBC's "Cheers."

"Twice is really a lot to be up here!" Miss Perlman exulted, concluding with a greeting to her husband, former "Taxi" actor Danny De Vito: "Danny, I love you. I got two and you only got one!"

John Larroquette, who plays Dan Fielding, the pompous, woman-chasing prosecutor on NBC's "Night Court," won best supporting actor on a comedy series.

"Hill Street Blues," which has dominated the Emmys the past four years, was eclipsed by "Miami Vice" in this year's Television Academy nominations, 11 to 15. Both "Hill Street Blues" and the NBC musical special "Motown Returns to the Apollo" had 11.

Express Press

OF INDIANA INCORPORATED

Big Red Q Quickprint Center is changing its name to Express Press of Indiana, Incorporated effective May 6th 1985

Our franchise agreement with Big Red Q Quickprint has come to an end, and we determined that our customers could be best served by becoming an independent Quickprinter. This decision was made because we have developed into a larger company than a typical franchised Quickprinter, with more diversified printing, typesetting, and high speed copying skills. We now possess in-house the talent to provide everything the franchise did formerly — without the extra financial burden of the franchise royalty payments. Needless to say, this will help us maintain our keen competitive edge well into the future.

During the past year, in addition to completing our new facility here in South Bend, we have opened a second location in Michigan City, Indiana, upgraded our typesetting equipment to Compugraphic's newest, finest state of the art equipment, added a new printing press that allows us to print 2 colors on the sheet at once, and have just installed a high speed copier that will copy one or both sides of the sheet, collate simultaneously and do it very rapidly, allowing us to extend some very special prices for your multi-original, short run copying, booklet, manual, or legal brief.

So when you see the new Express Press sign, and hear us answer the phone "Express Press" remember we are moving ahead in Quickprinting even further.

We appreciate your business and look forward to serving you better in the future.

Thank you,

Money

"All I have are clubs and organizations beating a path across my carpet. Every group that comes in here is requesting money," she said.

According to Abood, saying that students pay only $35 for their social life is misleading. "Let me put it this way. I pay $35 in activities fees. I pay $15 to Student Affairs and Joni Neal. I paid $30 to join the sailing club.

"I paid close to $100 and some students pay over $100," Abood said.

Student Body President Bill Healy, who supports increasing the fee, said most clubs that do charge membership fees "don't charge drastic fees. Those that do have traveling costs."

Healy said clubs serve specific interest groups and likened the clubs to toll roads. "The logic is like the highway tax," he said. "If you use it, you pay for it."

Abood said that although he thinks no student in general wants to see his fee increased, those that likely will be discussing the issue are the ones receiving the funds.

"Every person on the student government budget committee receives money from the student activity fee except the treasurer," Abood said. "I don't think any one of them will say we need less money."

Cavanaugh men ham up quad with quote of the day

Mary Berger

The fanatic Notre Dame fan who clads his entire body in blue and gold and uses body paints to enhance the effect. The person at that party Friday night walking the tightrope suspended between two lofts. The occupants of 131 Cavanaugh Hall.

What do these three personalities have in common? A desire for attention. They are hams at heart and dare to different. Norms fall by the wayside when they arrive.

The young men living on the first floor in the northeast corner of Cavanaugh Hall approached their quest for attention in a novel way - with the now rather well-known "Quote of the Day" in their window.

"We had to live by the rector so we thought we'd have some fun," said junior Chris Thompson, creator of the window attraction. "We decided to take advantage of our position and do something weird - at least amusing."

Thus, the "Cavanaugh Quote of the Day" was born. "Each night we go through a list of quotes we have and pick our favorite according to our mood," explained sophomore Mark Hannon, a member of the quote crew. "We began with about 15 of our own quotes and now we use ones suggested by people who walk by."

"The quote that has received the best response is: 'When the load gets tough, the tough get loaded,'" said sophomore Mike Ricker. "We had people yelling and clapping, and banging on our windows that day."

Student response to the daily inspirations has ranged from "quite amusing" and "pretty entertaining" to "offensive" and "sexist." Senior Joe Creely, who lived in the room last year, feels that the quotes such as "Women can't live with them, can't shoot 'em," are "infantile and a very poor reflection on the hall and its members." He added emphatically, "I think it is a disgrace to the legacy of the room."

Thompson has found that the majority of audience reaction has been positive. "One guy told us to take it (the quote) down and one girl told us we were being sexist," he said. "But, we've had people cheer and even had three girls come in and introduce themselves because they wanted to see what kind of guys would do something like this."

What did these girls find? Three sophomores and a junior who "like doing weird things," and as one of their quotes says, "Never let schooling interfere with education."

Spectator participation is encouraged by a sign next to the quote that says "Suggestions and crowd response welcome." Hannon said this request has led some students to bang on the windows and complain when there is no quote, because walked out of their way to see it. Some suggestions have been offered but as Mark said, "We do have to be selective."

When the quote of the day is one that might be considered offensive, like Friday's "Smile - it's the second best thing you can do with your lips," Thompson said he sits and watches to see how women react and sometimes asks a woman what she thinks. He added that only one woman has told him the quotes are offensive.

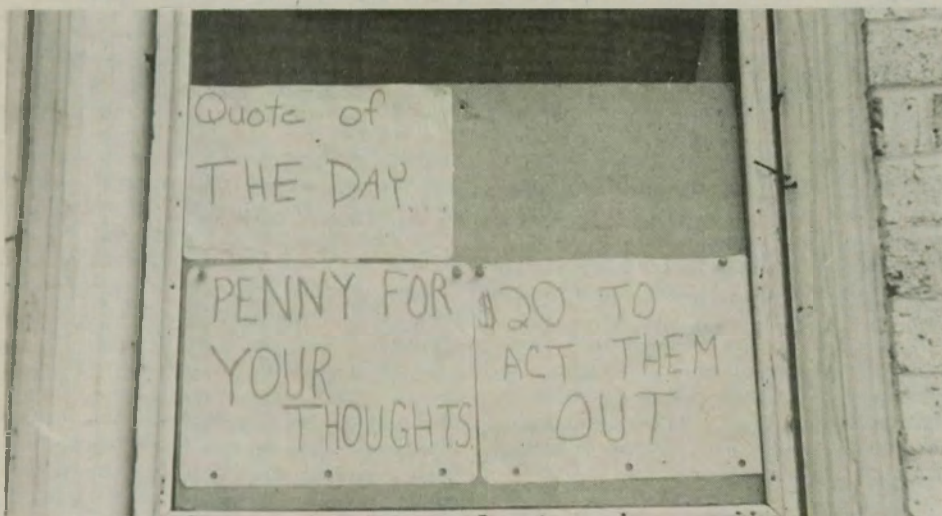

Other women students who read the quotes say they have been offended at times but usually enjoy the quotes. Freshman Ros Winner said, "I enjoy it when they are funny but when they aren't, it offends me because some of them degrade women." Theresa Henley, also a freshman, said, "They are really funny sometimes and sometimes they are offensive but it's their right to put whatever they want in their windows."

Some men who read the quotes feel strongly that the quotes are too often sexist. Joe Creely said he would be extremely insulted if he was a girl passing by the quote.

But freshman John Sullivan said quotes like "Everyone has to believe in something. I believe in having another beer" are "meant to be taken lightly. They aren't aimed at anyone in particular. If names were used, that would be offensive and really rude."

Freshman Laurie Bain agrees with a smile, "Keep it up!"

Keep it up the quote crew will do - only six days a week, though. Laughed Hannon, "Even God rests on Sundays."

Restaurant for the dogs

Associated Press
MOCKSVILLE, N.C. — When the customer at the curb of Miller's Restaurant barks for service, employees jump.

Every day for more than 10 years, the black, brown and white dog has crossed two busy highways and trotted down the road to pick up his take-out lunch. Then he makes the trip home to a shop behind the Western Auto store to dine in comfort.

"Mooch just showed up here one day a little more than 10 years ago," said Arthur Freeman, who adopted the pooch. "He looked terrible. Had no hair. We took care of him, fattened him up, and he started doing this (getting his lunch) all by himself. Done it ever since."

Sometimes Mooch gets bread soaked in steak gravy with pieces of steak on the side. Sometimes it's chicken, his favorite.

One time, Miller's was so busy they didn't feed Mooch, Freeman said, so after waiting half an hour, he took his business elsewhere.

He went next door to Hardees and barked. They fed him.

Police chief hires wife as officer

LAUREL HILL, Fla. — Police Chief Malcolm Dreading didn't have to interview many candidates when he wanted to hire a patrol officer. His wife got the job.

Dreading had been the entire department until last week, when his 30-year-old wife, Cathy, became an officer. But the step from police wife to officer was a short one — she already had been handling the radio when her husband was away.

Laurel Hill has a population of 700, but there are 3,000 people in the surrounding unincorporated area and the town is bisected by a major highway.

Mrs. Dreading will get on-the-job training, riding with her husband for a few weeks. In January, she'll begin a 16-week course to prepare for state certification. State law permits new officers to work 180 days before beginning formal training.

Town votes to dump Rolls-Royce

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A man donated a $25,000 Rolls-Royce to Palm Beach County, and officials promptly voted to dump the classic car into the Atlantic Ocean.

But Greg Hauptner, 39, doesn't mind. He gave away the car in the hope the commissioners would sink it as the county's first artificial reef, and upstage neighboring Broward County, which boasts a sunken Mercedes — of sorts.

The freighter Mercedes I, which ran aground last November, was hauled away and sunk March 30 as a reef.

So Palm Beach officials decided to work toward forming their own artificial reefs, valued as prime sport fishing and diving spots.

"Where else but in Palm Beach County could you find a Rolls-Royce to sink as an artificial reef?" Commissioner Jerry Owens asked Monday after accepting Hauptner's offer.

Hauptner's 1967 Rolls, which he bought himself as a 30th birthday present, has bad brakes and a dent in the front end.

Wedding - take 2

MANSFIELD Woodhouse, England — when Mark and Sandra Kerry got married two months ago, their wedding pictures got lost in the mail.

So on Saturday, they staged it all again — complete with 200 guests, including friends, relatives, four bridesmaids and the vicar.

The vicar gave permission for the photographs to be taken inside the Anglican church, St. Edmunds at Mansfield Woodhouse, a town in the English Midlands, just as they were in the real ceremony.

A florist sent a replica bouquet of the original 24 red roses carried by the bride.

The couple, both 21, said they had to contact all the original 200 guests to tell them of the wedding.

They said the envelope containing the original photographs came back torn and containing no pictures.

When the spending stops, who will pay the price?

When is something going to be done about our government's deficit spending? Solutions seem to be on every politician's lips, but when it comes to voting for these measures, the voices fall silent.

Ken Kollman

no easy solutions

James Fallows, in the September issue of "The Atlantic", addresses what he calls "The Three Fiscal Crises": the budget deficit, the trade deficit, and the unbalanced borrowing from other nations. He ties them together and shows how the connections between them create an enormously complicated issue which necessitates quite a bit of belt-tightening.

In very simplified terms, the current level of borrowing that our country does just to pay off its debts drives up real interest rates, which in turn can cause foreigners to deposit their money in U.S. banks. This causes the dollar to become unnaturally high because the exchange rates on the invested foreign money is higher than normal.

With the value of the dollar so high, our exported goods are more expensive to foreigners, contributing to our ballooning trade deficit. It is a cycle that does not meet back at the starting point, but rather goes up a notch every time, spiraling to incredible figures.

With the present federal deficits lingering at approximately five percent of the country's gross national product and a projected 1985 trade deficit of $120 billion, there remains little doubt as to the existence of what the House Budget Committee has said "may be the final and most costly burden placed on future generations."

Reagan and his fiscal policies only pass along the economically painful solution to another administration. Fallows says "Reagan's supporters contend that his administration has restored confidence and patriotism to a nation that lacked them. Maybe so, but it may be remembered longer for conditioning us to the free lunch."

This burden is not reserved solely for the future. It also is costing us a great deal today. Our current affluence is in return for a lower standard of living in the future, but it depends on our spending a large part of what we have now for the interest on what we borrowed in the past.

Four out of every 10 dollars collected in individual income tax dollars goes for premiums on Treasury bills. A man with the same percentage of debt, let alone interest on the debt, would have declared himself bankrupt several times over.

One area to find a solution might be attacking the trade deficit. Calls for protectionism against foreign competitors are growing increasingly loud, and economists cannot agree whether this will be beneficial to the economy, or just another band-aid remedy by some of our shortsighted Congressmen and lobbyists.

By far the most widely accepted solution is balancing the federal budget, a task that only gets more difficult every time Caspar Weinberger and Tip O'Neill open their mouths. Yet drawing on Walter Mondale's experience, no sane politician ever will call for a tax increase of any substantial size, at least not in the near future, and we all can see how difficult it is to cut spending. One balances a budget by either of these two methods, and progress in both directions is at a virtual standstill.

So where does this lead us? Fallows gives us few answers. What he does do is put too much of the blame on Reagan. No doubt, Reagan deserves a large share of it and history will most assuredly grant him his portion. But what about the voters, Congressmen and lobbyists?

In effect, we are all to blame; an uncomfortable outlook by any standard. After all, voters like getting $100 of defense and social benefits for $80. Our grandchildren, however, are not going to like this burden, for they are the ones who will suffer for our shortsightedness.

Offers 'concrete' ways to build a better campus

I do not know about you, but I like the idea of the new fountain memorial. This majestic piece of architecture to which some people have applied the misnomer "Stonehenge II" is another indication that Notre Dame is a progressive university

the troubadour

I know what some of you are thinking: the monument will be a big and hulking monstrosity that will ruin the intimacy of the little sidewalk cafe and forever hinder our view of the library. I believe these are the sacrifices we must accept if we wish to be a major university. I firmly believe that the benefits from the grandeur of the sculpture will far outweigh any of its perceived aesthetic defects. I myself think that it is far more aesthetically pleasing than a smaller, more delicately crafted design. Grandeur, after all, is a sign of modernity. Allow me therefore, to give a few examples of its benefits.

First, the monument would provide never-before-imagined photo opportunities for alumni visiting on football weekends. As it stands now, all the prime locations for a scrapbook shot are greatly overcrowded. There are just too many people who stand by the dome and the library. This lovely fountain will divert some of this overflow and force fewer alumni to wait in line.

Second, it helps fill an embarrassing gap in the University's outlay. I am afraid the concrete sidewalks were not enough to give the area the aesthetic delight of a proper campus. The area was too empty, too devoid of some contribution to the University. Too much grass was showing anyway. The campus has too much grass as it is (and it is so time-consuming to have it cut). Some people have suggested a garden with real flowers be planted as a fitting memorial. Such people have only a myopic vision of a university. Such things are old-fashioned and frankly, too sentimental. Concrete is the way for a truly progressive university. It is sleek, clean, easy to maintain and very "modern." Add to this the sight of concrete columns hulking over the sidewalk cafe, and I am sure you will agree their impressive stature and imposing grandeur will more than compensate for the trifling simplicity and beauty that is sacrificed.

Third, of course, the University shows quite advanced thinking by adhering to the whole phenomena of memorials. A university can never be great unless it honors its dead members by the standards that befit them. The old type of memorials were not quite successful. The memorial crossroads fountain is a touching but ineffectual gesture. One can walk right by it without realizing the stature the man was held in. The Rockne Memorial, though impressive, is too mundane. Rockne's honor is besmirched daily by its use. Even the various statues on campus are too beautiful and too delicate to evoke the proper grief and respect the dead deserve. No, the modern monument must be impressive, completely useless and utterly ugly.

The Shaheen/Mestrovich Memorial is another example of Notre Dame's progressive spirit. The great sculpture's works themselves are not impressive enough to honor the man. They were too simple, too subtly beautiful to truly show Mestrovich's genius. It took a master stroke to put all those sculptures together, giving his works a bold, overwhelming focus. Distributing them across campus would only have dispersed the beauty all over the University. The true genius came, however, in modernizing the whole memorial by the impressive concrete foundation. The wonderful sign, I think, is also impressive. No one can walk by without thinking, "this is a memorial." Even the benches give an almost sacred air, like pews in church. The new memorial will serve to develop more fully this theme, and add a more imposing grandeur to the campus in honor of the dead.

Yet I hope the University with its spirit of modernity does not stop here. Much more work must be done to bring fame and honor to the University. I see potential, for example, in the whole concept of memorials themselves. There is plenty of grass in the South Quad, used for nothing but recreation, which could easily be the site of a World War II memorial. Say, why not honor all the dead? We can find some grassy knoll somewhere to honor the dead of World War I, the Spanish-American War, the Civil War, the Boxer Rebellion and the Hough Riots. The possibilities are immeasurable and as long as grass remains, we at least should consider the possibility of memorializing someone.

I have a few other modest proposals, that if you grant me an ear, I would like to share with you. We should turn O'Shaughnessy into offices for the New Institute for Scholarship, Notre Dame Magazine and the Commission for Excellence in Education. Any great university has committees working to solve the many problems of university life and they should be given optimum space and facilities so they can research these problems more effectively.

We would not need that many classrooms anyway. We could just decrease the total number of classes and increase total class size to, say, a thousand. We could thus take advantage of such places as Stepan Center, the stadium and the ACC for classes. They are underused now as it is. This would solve the problem of class size by making them all uniformly gigantic and by giving the professors fewer distractions as they work toward publication.

By the way, the idea of a student-faculty lounge is ludicrous to me. At a great university students are too busy getting good grades, and professors are too interested in getting published to really learn anything from one another. We are no longer so naive as to think learning is the real reason for the existence of a progressive university.

The sooner we realize money is the true mark of success, the more successful we as a university shall become. The University has already made great strides in this direction but, I believe, they still fall short. Thus I propose to make better use of the library. We don't have enough books to fill up the whole thing anyway. Let us consolidate all the books from the 4th to the 8th floor and convert the upper floors into a combination meeting room, luxury hotel-restaurant (with all the entertainment unknown in South Bend). This way, Father Hesburgh can more easily and effectively wine and dine rich alumni to increase the endowment. And if he is lucky, to get someone to donate another memorial.

I hope that I have offered some thoughtful insight into Notre Dame's future. I further hope that in all seriousness you consider these proposals for what they are. You will agree, I am sure, with their spirit if not their content.

Explains reasons for survey's responses

Dear Editor:

Ellyn Mastako's article in the Sept. 17 issue of The Observer revealed that students at Saint Mary's believe homosexuals are discriminated against on both campuses. It further showed a large majority of Saint Mary's students don't want additional information about male and female homosexuality. Could it be these two findings are linked, maybe even as intimately as cause and effect?

The basis of discrimination is fear, and fear has its roots in lack of knowledge. By this, I do not mean to infer that Saint Mary's women have a monopoly (or even partial interest) in fear and ignorance. They are but a sample of the American population which, in general, would just as soon not be reminded that homosexuals exist, much less take the effort to learn more about homosexuality.

My contention is most people are afraid of homosexuality. They may be afraid of having a gay or lesbian roommate/neighbor, or they may be afraid of being approached by a homosexual. The possibility that such things could occur may provoke feelings of discomfort, but there is something deeper, something darker here.

Perhaps homosexuality is terrifying because it's not just the personal property of a few, isolated "perverts" but is, instead, to varying degrees, a very real part of a large majority of the human race. Kinsey's landmark report (1954) only has been corroborated in its finding that feelings of physical attraction for members of the same sex are widespread and are not limited to predominately homosexual people.

Our particular culture forces us to devote substantial amounts of psychic energy to the task of burying these feelings. For the most part, we are successful because we must be successful; failure means almost certain ostracization, failure means becoming one of the untouchables. So successful is the repression that only an occasional dream rises up to tell us what we've been hiding from ourselves.

Fear of confronting and coming to grips with our personal homosexuality leads many to simply ignore and even avoid the topic of homosexuality, unless it be in the safe form of a crude joke or a slur, rather than deal with the harrowing consequences. The result, or maybe the cause, is a mass of educated people who actually believe that there are two distinct categories of people: homosexual and heterosexual. Believe that people consciously choose to become homosexuals; that it is impossible for homosexuals to be happy because they are sick, or sinful, or both and that all homosexuals are child molesters, or transvestites or effeminate. There are not enough letters in the alphabet with which to catalogue all the myths and misunderstandings.

When one walks around with such a burden of misinformation, it is very easy to discriminate against homosexuals. If you don't want to be a part of discrimination (and that is a big "if"), you must first put away your fear. In order to put away your fear, you must replace misinformation with truth - you must want additional information.

Congratulations to the Saint Mary's administration and Campus Ministry team, and especially to the respondents of the survey, who took that first critical step.

Worry less about form and more about content

Dear Editor:

Sue Barton recently wrote a letter including comments on the use of the terms "girls" and "guys." She said the use of "guys" was inappropriate except when addressing mixed groups of people. I do not mind being referred to as a "guy" (as opposed to a "man"), but when the plural term is used to address groups which include women, it seems sexist. Ideally we should all start saying "y'all," as is done in the South.

Unfortunately, this brings up another problem, prejudices about accents, about which I am more seriously concerned. There is a widespread view in academic environments (including Notre Dame) that a southern accent sounds "uneducated" and should be suppressed if a person is to gain intellectual respect.

This is a silly attitude, especially since most Southern accents are more pleasant to listen to than the nasal twangs coming from other parts of the country. There is nothing inherently wrong, however, with these latter accents, either. I've been accused of having such an accent myself.

We ought to be tolerant of foreign accents as well. American students tend to complain and/or make fun of their foreign-born professors' and fellow students' accents, saying they are too difficult to understand. Granted there is sometimes a genuine problem, but in most cases all that is needed is a little more mental flexibility on the part of the listener.

The important thing at a university is communication - and we should worry more about the content of the communication and less about its form. Do you hear, y'all?

Football fans watch the game and want to win

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to Kelly Portolese's article on "Notre Dame-Saint Mary's equality."

Being a student at Notre Dame, (not Notre Dame-Saint Mary's), I had a hard time reading the article without "shaking down the thunder."

My first problem with the article is that it considers a Notre Dame football game a social event. Social Event? When the Irish beat the University of Southern California in 1977 or the University of Michigan in 1980, I don't remember any headlines reading "Irish Know How to Throw a Party." But then, of course, I read the sports section, and not the society page.

Notre Dame football is a battle from beginning to end (especially these days), and fans have a responsibility to help their team in every way. If any Saint Mary's student is complaining about the price of the football tickets she must pay, yet wants to be a part of a Saturday social event, she is welcome to my father's tailgate - and I'll buy her tickets from her so the rest of my family can be a positive force in helping Notre Dame win.

The question is "Why?" and I commend Portolese on her observation. It is not why do Saint Mary's students pay more than Notre Dame students, however, but why do they even have the opportunity to buy tickets to a Notre Dame game? Never in my 20 years on this earth have I heard the greatest college football rivalry referred to as the "ND-SMC vs USC game," nor have I heard any cheer "We are ND-SMC."

I think Portolese should keep in mind her opportunity to buy tickets to the Notre Dame games is a privilege, not a right at any price. Maybe she should also stop expressing her views, before Holy Cross Junior College and Saint Joseph's High School hear about her gripe and offer to pay face value for the tickets currently offered to her at two-thirds price.

Maybe she also should pray I never get Mike Bobinski's job.

Majority of students do not steal from peers

Dear Editor:

I'm writing in response to Jeffrey Griffin's letter to the editor in The Observer on Tuesday, Sept. 3 about the loss of his bookbag. Last week I lost a very valuable amethyst and gold bracelet given to me by my parents for my 21st birthday as part of a matching set with a necklace and earrings.

So I know how you feel, Jeff Griffin, about the loss of your bookbag and I'm sorry. But I am more sorry about your pessimistic attitude. I thought you, as well as the many young members of the class of 1989, to whom you directed your irrational warning, would like to know that my bracelet, which I thought was gone forever, was found and returned to me.

The girl who found it easily could have kept the bracelet. But because she's a sincere, thoughtful person, she realized what it meant to me and returned it. Yes, there are honest, trustworthy people at Notre Dame and I hope you find out before you graduate. It's unfortunate the loss of your bookbag caused such a hopeless attitude toward your fellow students.

I admit there may be thieves at Notre Dame, as there are everywhere. But, more importantly, there are honest, sincere people at Notre Dame as well. In fact, they are in the majority. And to the many young members of the class of 1989, I hope you find these honest people as I have found them.

Words sometimes have more than one meaning

Dear Editor:

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students are taking life in South Bend much too seriously. This is evident by the response to Erin O'Brien's light-hearted article on Sept. 12 concerning what life would be like should Saint Mary's decide to go coed.

O'Brien obviously was writing tongue-in-cheek, but it appears several readers mistook humor for ignorance. The article was in no way a reflection of the "academic prestige" of either institution, but rather a humorous look at college life as it is and what it could be like.

To those of you who insist on taking everything so literally, that's your prerogative. But, please, lighten up on those of us who don't.

Put pressure where it can be heard the most

Dear Editor:

Upon returning to the University this fall, I found myself wishing that I could bring one aspect of home back to school. At home I am able to receive WBNY, the Buffalo State radio station. I listened to it all summer break and became quite addicted. When I returned to Notre Dame, however, to my dismay I found I could not tune in our campus station, WVFI. Notre Dame is suffering acutely from the absence of a radio station. Its format and programming are very acceptable (progressive music), but the technical quality (or lack of it) makes the station sorely inadequate.

One could argue the students are apathetic and would like to listen to the local stations just as well. This, unfortunately, is not the case. Supply the students with the equipment to produce a radio station that can be received and they will listen. By not supplying the students with a workable station you deprive them of a very large facet of college life: music. You also deprive them a means of expression and communication.

A fund drive one-quarter as successful as last year's MS drive would allow Notre Dame to purchase the basic tools with which to build an adequate campus radio station. If you support me in this endeavor, please write to The Observer, or what is more preferable, contact anyone in student government and encourage them to put pressure where pressure is needed.

Sutton wins on sudden-death hole

Associated Press

ABILENE, Tex. - Hal Sutton rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt on the first hole of sudden death yesterday to beat Mike Reid for the $72,000 first-place check in the $400,000 Southwest Golf Classic.

It was Sutton's second victory in extra holes this year. He defeated David Ogryn in a playoff at the Memphis Classic.

Reid, who has finished second twice in his nine years on the tour but has never won, missed the green on the 398-yard, par-4 No. 1 hole but chipped to within a foot for a certain par.

Sutton hit the green in regulation then canned his putt to earn his fifth victory of his PGA tour career. He has now won $362,560 on the tour. Sutton has been in three playoffs on the tour and won all of them.

Howard Twitty made a hard charge, shooting a 3-under-par 69 to finish at 14-under 274, just a shot behind Sutton and Reid, who were at 273. He won $27,200.

Richard Zokol was another shot back at 275, posting a 2-under 70 over the windswept, par 36-36-72 Fairway Oaks Golf Club Course for $19,200.

Reid and Sutton came to the 18th hole tied after they both birdied the 471-yard, par-4 No. 17. Reid also birdied the 165-yard, par-3 No. 16 to tie Sutton, who had either lead or shared the lead since the third hole.

Boh missed 15-foot putts on the 72nd green to force the first playoff in the five-year history of the tournament. Sutton shot a 1-under-par 71 while Reid was level par 72 as they played in the same threesome with Andy Bean.

Field hockey team beats Huskies

By CHRIS STARKEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame field hockey team turned a tight defensive struggle into a 2-1 victory over Northern Illinois yesterday on a soggy Cartier Field. The win evened the Notre Dame's record at 2-2. Coach Jill Lindenfeld had words of praise for her team.

"Today was the best we've played this year as far as game flow," she commented. "We had good teamwork, and strong ball movement."

"There are a few things we can do to improve, but overall, I was really happy with our effort."

While the game remained scoreless for much of the first half, Notre Dame found the ball on their end of the field for a disproportionate amount of time. The Irish hung tough, however, and some determined saves by senior goalie

Patti Gallagher kept the Huskies off the scoreboard.

Notre Dame got its first score twenty minutes into the game, as junior forward Beth Bisignano tallied through heavy congestion in front of the enemy net, scoring her second goal in as many games. A missed breakaway attempt by junior wing Corinne DiGiacomo helped set up the score.

The second half saw Notre Dame increase its lead on a perfectly executed penalty corner shot. Senior forward Molly McCabe brought the ball into play, and senior link Regina Degan controlled it with a stick stop. Senior back Christina Weinmann then put the Irish up 2-0 on a blast over the goalie's shoulder.

This margin was short-lived, however, as the Huskies fought back to score on a Kim Darkin goal with eight minutes left in the game. This turned out to be the end of the scoring, though, and Notre Dame was able to preserve the 2-1 victory.

Lindenfeld was especially happy with the play of Gallagher and Bisignano.

"Patti was tough in the nets today," she said. "She and Beth helped us a lot. Beth set up a lot of plays on offense."

"It really was a team effort, though, and I was pleased with everyone."

Next on the schedule is today's game against Lake Forest. Lindenfeld says her team is ready.

"Lake Forest gave us a good game last year, and we'll have to play well again," she said. "Last year we played on a poor field with poor officiating. Tomorrow it's on our field."

"They're a physical team, but I think we're a little better in the skill areas. On a field like ours (astro turf) that will work to our advantage."

Spinks offers rematch for title to Holmes

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. - Michael Spinks wouldn't mind a rematch, but Larry Holmes says his fighting days are over.

"I think Larry deserves a rematch; he gave me a chance," Spinks said Sunday, several hours after his history making performance.

Spinks became the first light heavyweight champion to become a heavyweight champion, scoring a close, but unanimous 15-round decision over Holmes for the International Boxing Federation title.

"It's all over now," Holmes said in his hotel suite following his upset loss, which prevented him from tying Rocky Marciano's 49-0 record. "I'm glad."

"Why do you think I lost? They wanted a rematch," Holmes said of the decision in which all three judges gave Spinks the last round. This gave Spinks a one-point margin on two officials' cards. He won by three points on the third card.

"It was in the cards for me to lose," said Holmes, adding that he has been bothered this year by a pinched nerve in his neck.

"I hate to make excuses for myself," he said. "God always gives you a sign when to quit."

Most boxing observers feel that pressure will be put on Holmes for a rematch.

Butch Lewis, who promotes Spinks' fights and co-promoted Saturday night's match, said he wasn't sure what was next for Spinks.

Before the fight, NBC had offered $3.5 million for Holmes to go after victory No. 50 against somebody like Alfonzo Ratliff in prime time Nov. 22, which is a ratings sweeps period.

Ratliff also lost Saturday night, dropping the World Boxing Council cruiserweight championship in a 12-round decision to Bernard Benton.

A first defense by Spinks certainly would be attractive to NBC or the other networks or to HBO, which telecast Spinks' upset victory.

Lewis said Spinks could hold both the undisputed light heavyweight title and the IBF heavyweight championship for 90 days.

When someone asked which title Spinks would relinquish, both Spinks and Lewis laughed.

One intriguing fight possibility mentioned was a fight between Spinks and Marvelous Marvin Hagler, the undisputed middleweight champion, at catch weights for the heavyweight title. The weight limit could be 175 pounds.

"I don't want to fight Hagler," Spinks said.

Spinks, who weighed 200 pounds, 25 pounds over the light heavyweight limit, said he "felt I needed the 15th round to win."

Eagles, Colts, Saints get first wins

Associated Press

Chargers 44,
Bengals 41

The Philadelphia Eagles ended an embarrassing touchdown drought and snapped Washington's eight-game home winning streak yesterday with a stunning 19-6 National Football League victory over the Washington Redskins.

The Eagles won their first game of the season behind four field goals by Paul McFadden, from 34, 36, 37 and 41 yards, and their first touchdown this year, a 17-yard pass from rookie Randall Cunningham to Earnest Jackson. Washington, meanwhile, dropped to 1-2 and failed to score in double figures for the first time in 58 regular-season games.

Other first-time winners yesterday were the New Orleans Saints, who downed Tampa Bay 20-13, and the Indianapolis Colts, who took Detroit 14-6.

Elsewhere, it was San Diego 44, Cincinnati 41; Dallas 20, Cleveland 7; Denver 44, Atlanta 28; Pittsburgh 20, Houston 0; New England 17, Buffalo 14; the New York Giants 27, St. Louis 17; Miami 31, Kansas City 0; the New York Jets 24, Green Bay 3, and San Francisco 34, the Los Angeles Raiders 10.

Tonight's game has the Los Angeles Rams at Seattle.

On Thursday night, Chicago beat Minnesota 33-24.

Saints 20, Bucs 13

Dave Wilson threw for a pair of touchdowns and safety Terry Hoage forced a fumble and intercepted a pass at New Orleans. The Saints won despite losing guards Brad Edelman and Kelvin Clark and center Steve Korte to first-half injuries. Tampa Bay, 0-3, lost receivers Jimmie Giles and Kevin House to injuries.

Colts 4, Lions 6

At Indianapolis, Colts reserve fullback George Wonsley rushed for a career-high 170 yards on 27 carries. He also caught five passes for 32 yards as Rod Dowhower won his first game as an NFL coach. The Lions' Darryl Rogers suffered his first NFL coaching defeat.

49ers 34, Raiders 10

In a meeting of teams which have won two Super Bowls apiece in the past five years, the defending champions got two TD tosses from Joe Montana and a 28-yard scoring run with a fumble recovery from Milt McColl. The 49ers' rugged defense forced Los Angeles QB Jim Plunkett from the game with an injured left shoulder.

Defense

stun a quick attack. In the defensive backfield, senior Pat Ballage, in his second game as the starting strong safety, also had three unassisted tackles and an interception. Irish cornerback Troy Wilson also notched an interception to go along with seven tackles - five of which were unassisted.

On the line, the Irish were obviously led by a strong rush which refused to allow McAlister time to pass and forced many poorly-thrown passes. Senior nose guard Eric Dorsey led the intense effort with 12 tackles, including two quarterback sacks for a total loss of 14 yards.

From their linebacking spots, Furlan and junior Mike Kovaleski had eight and nine tackles, respectively, while Mike Larkin, Robert Banks and Cedric Figaro chipped in with 18 from the outside in holding the Spartans to 141 yards total offense following their first touchdown drive.

Bob Thomas' 34-yard field goal with four seconds remaining ended a wild game at Cincinnati. Lionel James caught one of Dan Fouts' four touchdown passes, good for 60 yards, and ran 56 yards on a draw play for San Diego. Fouts was 24-for-43 for 344 yards.

The Bengals, 0-3, led 41-34 with 4:39 left thanks to Larry Kinnebrew's 8-yard scoring jaunt. But Fouts found James, then James Brooks fumbled the ball back to the Chargers, who moved to the winning kick.

Cowboys 20, Browns 7

Danny White, who makes a living throwing TD passes, caught one from halfback James Jones and also tossed for a score at Irving, Texas. White handed off to Jones at the Cleveland 12, then slipped into the left corner of the end zone, where he took Jones' pass.

Broncos 44, Falcons 28

John Elway's three touchdown passes and Rich Karlis' three field goals paced the visitors. Denver benefitted from two long pass interference calls on Atlanta's Wendell Cason, good for 31 and 42 yards.

The 0-3 Falcons were without three injured regulars from their secondary.

Steelers 20, Houston 0

Pittsburgh's defense manhandled the Oilers, holding the visitors to 134 yards of total offense. The Steelers have not allowed a touchdown in two home games this season. Donnie Shell had an interception and a fumble recovery as the Steelers registered their first shutout since 1981.

Patriots 17, Bills 14

Irving Fryar returned a third-quarter punt for 85 yards and a touchdown on a second chance. Buffalo's John Kidd had punted and the Bills stopped Fryar. But they were penalized and Kidd had to kick again. This time, Fryar scooted the distance.

New England's other TD came on a 5-yard pass from halfback Craig James to Tony Collins. The hosts scored their first touchdown of the year when Greg Bell went 16 yards with a Vince Ferragamo pass in the second period.

"We went out with the point of view that we could go out there and win the game," said Banks of the defensive unit. "Instead of going out there and 'holding them,' (the attitude of) 'We can go out and win the game' became a factor today."

In the end, it was apparent that a strong desire and effort on the part of the defense was the final difference. An ignited defensive spirit saw many poorly-thrown Spartan passes and many Spartan runners dropped for losses. Once the Irish had taken claim to their homefield advantage, hope of a Spartan comeback was diminished.

"You couldn't measure the intensity level out there," explained Furlan. "It was something that you just had to witness yourself. We just felt confident as a team. That's the big thing - having confidence in yourself and in your teammates and if you have that, there is no one that could defeat you."

On Saturday, the Irish will be able to prove their confidence as they will be looking for their first win on the road this year at Purdue.

Giants 27, Cardinals 17

St. Louis damaged itself with penalties and three second-half turnovers and the Giants took advantage for TD passes of 20 and 16 yards by Phil Simms. Bobby Johnson, who caught the 16-yarder in the fourth quarter, also had an 8-yard score as he hauled in his first two receptions this season. Phil McConkey, who grabbed the 20-yard TD toss, also had his first two catches of the year.

Dolphins 31, Chiefs 0

Dan Marino threw for two touchdowns in the second half following a scoreless first 30 minutes, and the Dolphins blanked the highest-scoring team in the league. Kansas City had scored 83 points in winning its first two contests this season.

Irish

Purdue. On that day, Brown subsequently fumbled away the kick to give the Boilermakers a quick three points.

Saturday, however, Brown was a year wiser, and he took the opening kickoff of the second half 93 yards down the left sideline to give Notre Dame a 14-7 lead. The run, which included a pair of jukes that brought Spartan chasers to their knees, was nothing special to Brown but the critical break of the game for the Irish.

"The guys did a great job," said Brown. "It was a big hole, and I just ran. I did it a lot in high school."

Brown later was on the receiving end of a 49-yard bomb from Beuerlein which set up the third Irish touchdown, a two-yard Pinkett run in the fourth quarter which gave the Irish a 20-10 margin.

These two quick scoring strikes by Notre Dame seemed to break the back of the frustrated Spartan attack, which had been stymied by a determined Irish defense after rolling at will for 82 yards and a touchdown in 10 plays on the opening drive of the contest.

Many figured freshman Bobby McAlister (4 completions - 17 attempts, 55 yards) to get the starting nod at quarterback against the Irish, but few expected the wiry, sprint-out runner to show so much poise on the opening drive.

Today's Game

L.A. Rams at Seattle

On his first two collegiate passing attempts, McAlister linked up with flanker Mark Ingram for 41 of the yards on the drive. This, and the solid running of sophomore tailback Lorenzo White, whose quickness out of the backfield helped him to accumulate 123 yards in 31 rushes on the day, threatened to make it a long day for the Notre Dame defense.

"I thought that first drive we had was the best one of the season," said Perles. "Lorenzo White ran as hard as he could all day. When the play started I thought McAlister was going well . . . but it was the first game the young man had ever played. I'm looking at him for the future."

After this drive, however, Faust and the Irish coaches put senior cornerback Mike Haywood in the game as a type of rover, free to chase after the scrambling McAlister. With the big defensive line of Notre Dame (4 sacks for -24 yards) consistently overpowering the smaller Spartan line, McAlister played right into the tenacious Haywood.

"They're difficult to throw over," explained Perles, "so we thought we could get outside the pocket. But the corner (Haywood) did a great job catching (McAlister)."

Split end Tony Eason did a nice job catching Beuerlein's spiral in the endzone for a game-tying touchdown in the first stanza after the Notre Dame defense had found out how to shut down the Spartan attack. This play capped a six-play, 54-yard drive keyed by a 35-yard jaunt by Pinkett.

The Irish closed out the scoring late in the fourth period on a 5-yard touchdown run by Stams. This score was set up by a sensational, diving block of Michigan State placekicker Chris Caudell's attempt of a 49-yard field goal by safety Brandy Wells.

All was well for most of the day for Notre Dame and its fans.

"It was obvious that we got beat by a better team," said Perles. "(Notre Dame) played an emotional game. If they play the way they played today, they're going to end up with a lot of wins."

Irish soccer team ties MSU, loses to Hoosiers in weekend action

By PHIL WOLF
Assistant Sports Editor

There was a case of bad timing for the Notre Dame soccer team when it took to Alumni Field yesterday against Indiana. The Irish played poorly while the Hoosiers played their best game of the season and took a 4-0 victory back to Bloomington.

The loss dragged Notre Dame's record down to 1-6-1, including a 1-1 tie with Michigan State Friday night on Cartier Field. The Hoosiers, who beat Ohio State, 4-1, Friday night, went to 3-4.

"We have been improving with every game," Indiana Head Coach Jerry Yeagley said after yesterday's contest, "and I'd say this was (our best game of the year). I thought we played with intensity and concentration for the whole game."

"We kept our composure and poise, and we really moved the ball nicely as a team."

The Irish, meanwhile, lost their composure and let the Hoosiers take advantage of their tentativeness.

"As soon as the game started, we just gave them way too much respect," Irish Head Coach Dennis

Grace said. "You have got to give the opponent some respect, no matter who you play, but you can't fear them. We certainly did fear them, and it showed in the game."

"We never really went out to challenge them. We backed off. We were intimidated by them."

"I don't think we played well," Grace concluded. "We didn't even give them a good workout."

The Hoosiers established the lead early in the game when Han Roest scored off a corner kick with an assist from Rod Castro just 3:42 into the match. Pete Stoyanovich dribbled through a loose Irish defense and shot the ball past goalkeeper Hugh Breslin for the second goal of the game at 15:29.

Breslin made nine saves in the contest, while Bruce Killough, his Hoosier counterpart, recorded three.

Chris Keenan added a goal at 60:37 with an assist from John Stollmeyer. Keenan then assisted as Barry Margolin knocked in the last goal at 69:39.

Indiana outshot Notre Dame, 29-9. The Hoosiers also had a 15-2 edge in corner kicks en route to their eight victory over the Irish in as many years.

"We played very well," Yeagley said, "and the things we wanted to do we were able to. I'd say rather than a bad effort on Notre Dame's part, it was an extremely good effort on ours."

Grace, a former player and assistant coach under Yeagley at Indiana, disagreed.

"Midway through the first half, the sun came out. That was the only bright spot I saw," he said.

There were more bright spots last Friday night, but the Irish still could not record a win. They tied Michigan State, 1-1, under Cartier's lights.

Notre Dame outshot the visiting team, 25-7, but still managed only the one goal.

The goal came at 62:21. Senior tri-captain Dave Miles scored his first goal of the season from 30 yards after receiving a cross from Joe Sternberg, who carried the ball down the right side of the field.

The Irish had numerous other scoring opportunities, but many shots were saved by Spartan goalkeeper Paul Zimmerman, who had 10 saves all night. Several other shots hit the goal posts or barely missed the opening.

"We had plenty of opportunities," Grace observed after the game. "We were all over that team. We had enough chances to win. And again (for the seventh time this season), we didn't win. A tie is just as bad as a loss."

The Spartans scored their goal at 78:11. Peter Crawley beat Irish defenseman Stuart MacDonald and passed to Jim Gallina, who shot the ball past the outstretched Breslin.

"There is no way we should have let them get back in the ballgame," Grace said. "They're very fortunate to get out of here with a tie. They didn't have too many scoring opportunities."

The Spartans forced Breslin to make only five saves.

The Irish continued to dominate play in the two overtime periods, but they could not get the ball in the net.

It was the third time Notre Dame had been in overtime this season and failed to win. The Irish previously had lost to Wisconsin-Milwaukee, 3-2, and Evansville, 4-2, in overtime contests.

It was the Spartans' first overtime game this season.

Last year, the Irish settled for a 2-2 tie with the Spartans in East Lansing.

Notre Dame will play at Wisconsin-Green Bay on Saturday and Northwestern on Sunday.

The next Irish home game is Oct. 2 against Bowling Green.

Cardinals stretch lead over Mets

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS - Tommy Herr hit a two-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning to give St. Louis a comeback 6-5 triumph over the Montreal Expos Sunday and solidify the Cardinals' lead in the National League East.

The victory, coupled with New York's 5-3 loss to Pittsburgh, extended the Cardinals' lead to three games over the Mets.

Herr's blast, over the left field fence, came on a 3-2 delivery from reliever Jack O'Connor, 0-2.

Herr's homer made a winner out of Ken Dayley, 4-2, who relieved Joaquin Andujar to start the eighth.

The Notre Dame baseball team lost four games over the weekend, losing a doubleheader to Bethel on Friday, while being swept in another twinbill yesterday by Western Michigan. For more on the weekend, see Bill Irvin's story at right.

Irish baseball team plays poorly, loses four games over the weekend

By BILL IRVIN
Sports Writer

The rain came down on the Notre Dame baseball team this weekend, both literally and figuratively.

As a cloudburst fell during the first game of yesterday's doubleheader against Western Michigan, the Irish exhibited soggy play in dropping an 11-2 contest. Western Michigan also won the second game handily, 9-2, thus completing a dismal weekend for Notre Dame. Bethel College also gained a sweep on Saturday, beating the Irish, 10-3 and 9-3.

The tone of the weekend's action was revealed in microcosm in that first game yesterday, as Western Michigan exploded for seven runs in the first two innings. After an infield out and a walk started the game, the next three hitters knocked out singles, setting up an RBI sacrifice fly by Abe Walker and a run-scoring single by Jim Davis. The visitors, up 4-0, quickly iced the win by pushing across three more runs in the second, on two hits and two walks.

In addition to their inability to stop enemy hitters this weekend, the Irish also failed to generate much offense. In the fifth inning of Sunday's second game, the Irish started to mount a comeback when Scott Rogers blasted a tape-measure homerun to centerfield. Two walks followed the blast, and the runners moved up on a ground-out to the right side. Ken Soos, however, just missed on a pitch as he flew out to left. Rick Vanthournout then bounced out to end the ending.

As could be expected, Irish coach Larry Gallo was not pleased with his team's performance.

"It's very evident that we've got a tremendous amount of work to do," said Gallo. "We ran into outs, pitchers weren't holding people on, batters were taking strikes. We played very poorly Saturday. I think we made eight errors."

Gallo indicated that he does not intend to accept continued losing.

"I'm not used to losing. I've gotten us an accelerated schedule, and we're not going back to playing nobody."

Though unhappy about the losses, Gallo did find some bright spots in the action this weekend.

"I'm pleased with our young pitching. Madsen and Fitz did a good job, and Carmen did too. Shields hit two homers, as did Rogers."

Gallo noted that perhaps the problems of some of the upperclassmen on the team can be traced to trying to do too much.

"Sometimes they try to do more than they can do."

The Irish mentor also responded to critics of the fall season.

"Playing intersquad ball is not like playing outside competition. And no way does losing in the fall develop a losing attitude. We're learning what we have to work on. It's true that we're not getting good pitching or good hitting. But I still feel we have the talent to do well."

"We need a lot of hard work and dedication - we have many games left."

Next week, the Irish will have the opportunity to redeem themselves, as they have another four-game weekend. Saturday, they take on Spring Arbor College in a pair of games, while battling St. Francis College on Sunday.

Martin gets into fight with his own player in Baltimore

Associated Press

BALTIMORE - Billy Martin, the embattled New York Yankees' manager, suffered a broken right arm in a fight with pitcher Ed Whitson early yesterday at a Baltimore hotel.

Martin held an impromptu news conference when he reported to Memorial Stadium for yesterday's game against the Baltimore Orioles with his arm in a cast and a sling. Whitson, who reportedly suffered a cut lip, had been sent home.

"I think it happened when he kicked me," Martin said of the broken ulna bone in the forearm. "He kicked me once in the groin, and once in the arm."

The latest in a series of brawls involving the fiery Martin was described by a security guard at the Cross Keys Inn as "one of the most brutal fights I've ever seen."

Members of the Yankees' traveling party said the brawl started in the same hotel bar where Martin was involved in a shoving match with a patron Friday night.

Players and members of the media tried to break up the fisticuffs. But onlookers said the fight continued each time Whitson broke free, and continued into the hotel lobby and the parking lot, finally ending with a shouting match on the third floor of the hotel, where they yelled and cursed loudly at each other.

Martin contended that he became involved after trying to act as a peacemaker in a budding fight between Whitson and an unidentified patron.

"I was sitting at the end of the bar, talking with (infielder) Dale Berra and his wife, and Whitson was in a booth," Martin said. "A guy told me, 'You'd better get over there, Whitson's in trouble.'"

"Dale and I went over," Martin said, "and he had a guy straightened up, like he was going to belt him. I told him, 'Hey, don't get in trouble ... you don't need it.'"

"I don't know what he said, but he turned on me and went crazy," Martin said. "He kicked me a couple of times. That's when I got hot, and tried to pop him. I don't deny that."

There was speculation that Whitson may have been seething over losing a starting turn Friday night, when Martin replaced him with Rich Bordi in the first game of the Baltimore series.

Martin said he told Whitson of the switch before the Yanks left Detroit, after the pitcher told him that his arm was tender and he "might not be ready" for Friday's game.

"I can't go with that," said Martin, contending that the trainer told him there was a 50-50 chance that Whitson could pitch and that pitching coach Bill Monbouquette said the right-hander couldn't start.

The Religion/Science Controversy

The Use and Abuse of Science in the Defense of Religion

Saturday, October 5, 1985

9:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

$20.00 per person

This conference is concerned with the extent to which science is and can be used or abused in defending the rationality of religious beliefs. Churches around the world use creationist films and books to argue that "you do not have to throw out your brain to believe in Christianity." Numerous Christian groups push what some think are quack medical systems or psychological strategies. Astrologers, members of the Flat Earth Society, psychics, and others often use the biblical scriptures as support for their beliefs. How can one recognize what is a legitimate use of science and theology and what is abuse? We invite you to join us as we explore this topic.

Notre Dame uses tough defense to whip MSU

Notre Dame linebacker Rick DiBernardo (43) grabs Michigan State quarterback Bobby McAlister in Saturday night's game against the Spartans. Repeated pressure by the Irish defense forced McAlister to complete only four of 17 passes. Marty Burns details the game at right, while Mike Chmiel writes on the Irish defensive effort below.

Much-maligned defense comes to life and conquers Spartan offense

Defense is the name of the game. And defense was the name of the game Saturday night as a spirited Notre Dame defensive unit led the Irish in overcoming the Michigan State Spartans by a 27-10 score.

Following a season-opening loss to Michigan by a 20-12 margin, there were cries that the Irish suffered on the field from a lack of intensity and spirit. After the Irish won the toss to open the game, elected to kickoff, and subsequently gave up a touchdown on the 10th play of the game, many believed that these cries were apparently justified.

The Irish defenders, however, soon proved all critics wrong as they shut down the Michigan State offense and held them in check for the rest of the game.

"We were a little over aggressive in the first series when we were over-running the ball and their running back was cutting back against the field," said Irish linebacker Tony Furjanic. "But when we got back to the sidelines, we settled down and realized where our mistakes were."

In the game, the Spartans used freshman Bobby McAlister at quarterback since veteran Dave Yarema was injured in last week's game with Arizona State. The inexperienced McAlister promptly got the Spartan attack off the ground in his second play from scrimmage with a 27-yard pass off of a play-action fake.

Following a run up the middle, one off-tackle and a 14-yard pass completion, fleet-footed tailback Lorenzo White ran the ball around the left side of the line and into the endzone untouched from the four-yard line.

After the Spartans stopped a five-play Irish drive and got the ball back on their own 20, the Notre Dame defense took over. The Irish held their opponents to only two first downs the rest of the half and 11 for the game. After completing his first three passes for 49 yards, the freshman completed only one of his next 14 for six yards and was intercepted twice. He was also put out of the game for part of the third quarter with a crushing sack at the hands of Irish defensive tackle Wally Kleine.

"They're a real good team," said McAlister following the contest. "Their strength is their defense. Their defensive line is good, and overall their whole defense is really tough.

"They've also got a good secondary. They play a basic cover-three and they play it well."

While the line played an important role in denying the freshman the time to pass, the Notre Dame secondary did well in denying the Spartan backs the space to maneuver. Faced with the talented White and a running McAlister, the Irish coaches went with a so-called "sub-defense" in which they brought an extra back up close to the line to help with containment.

"One of the things we did defensively was to go into our sub-defense," said Irish head coach Gerry Faust. "We put (Mike) Haywood out there as an extra back, like an outside linebacker. Most of the time, to the side he (McAlister) sprinted, we were able to contain him in hoping that Haywood would come from the backside with his speed and run him down."

With this defensive scheme, Haywood was able to nail the sprinting quarterback and tailback three times from his close-up position and

Brown's 93-yard TD return highlights Irish victory

By MARTY BURNS
Sports Writer

The prodigal Notre Dame football team made a homecoming of sorts Saturday evening as it struck down an overmatched Michigan State team, 27-10, in front of a partisan sell-out crowd in a provisionally illuminated Notre Dame Stadium.

When it was all over, those 59,075 fans in attendance were prepared to kill the fatted calf for their 1-1 Irish, who atoned nicely for last weekend's flat showing against Michigan by correcting many of the areas in which fatal sins had occurred.

This time, a spirited Notre Dame unit used a more wide-open passing game, an aggressive defense, some bold coaching moves and even issued a complete reversal of form on the opening kickoff of the second half. And what's more, the Irish did all this before their home crowd, which had been witness to a mere four victories in the last twelve attempts on the home sod.

"It's a shame it takes a loss to wake you up," said Notre Dame tailback Allen Pinkett, who rushed for 116 yards and one touchdown on 25 carries. "But there is a pride factor. We didn't feel we had defended our home stadium the way it should have been."

Irish outside linebacker Mike Larkin, who sprained his left ankle near the end of the game, and who is listed as questionable for next week's contest at Purdue, concurred with teammate Pinkett when asked about the enthusiasm shown by the squad.

"This was our stadium, our home," said Larkin, one of four captains on the team. "Michigan State wanted to take from us what was rightfully ours."

It appeared for awhile, however, that the 1-1 Spartans might just be able to commit this larceny, as Notre Dame self-destructed on two lengthy second-quarter drives, allowing Michigan State to go to the halftime tied with the Irish at 7-7.

"I thought we did a decent job when we went in at halftime tied 7-7," said Michigan State head coach George Perles. "They (the Irish) had a lot of opportunities and just didn't cash in on them."

Notre Dame quarterback Steve Beuerlein, who completed 15 passes in 27 attempts for 217 yards and one touchdown, took the blame for both of the bungled opportunities. The first mistake occurred early in the period after the Irish had driven 53 yards from their own 20 to the Spartan 27. Head Coach Gerry Faust ordered his troops to go for it on fourth-and-one, and called the right play, a play-action pass to a wide open fullback, Frank Stams, in the right flat. Beuerlein, though, put too much on the pass and it sailed over the head of Stams.

Later in the period, after the junior signal-caller had hit flanker Tim Brown for 12 yards and a first down at the Michigan State 8-yard line, he rolled left and threw an easy interception into the gut of Spartan safety Paul Bobbitt at the goalline.

"I take the blame for both of those times," said Beuerlein. "On the second one, I was rushing because the 25-second clock was running down, and I didn't analyze the coverage right. I thought it was a man-to-man but it was a zone. I'm human and I make mistakes. I'm just glad they (the Irish coaches) kept faith in me."

Faust certainly had faith in Brown last season as he inserted the freshman speedster from Dallas, Tex. as the opening kickoff returner against

Irish volleyball team beats Eastern Kentucky to salvage one victory

By CHUCK EHRMAN

One out of three isn't all that bad. And one victory is all the Irish could manage in a weekend of volleyball down south at the Georgia Peach Classic in Athens. The Irish fell to both Georgia and Oklahoma, but were able to knock off Eastern Kentucky.

The Irish were given anything but a warm welcome by Georgia on Friday night. Once again, the script turned to a familiar ending - a loss and an upset coach.

"We just gave the game away," said Coach Art Lambert. "We handed it to them."

The Bulldogs whipped the Irish in three straight games, 15-5, 15-7, 15-12.

Saturday morning found the Irish stumbling again, this time at the hands of Oklahoma, by a score of 15-10, 15-8, 11-15, 15-5.

But the Irish changed their luck in the next match, taking Eastern Kentucky to town, opening the floodgates and sailing to victory in three games. The team won 15-12, 15-6, 15-8. The victory gave the Irish their second win of the young season.

"The team really bounced back against Eastern Kentucky," said Lambert. "The girls finally pulled themselves together. I think some of the freshmen found themselves and are beginning to settle down. We're improving."

Improving they are. Eastern Kentucky was no slouch. Earlier in the season they beat Kentucky, a team that walloped the Irish in the season opener. So things are looking better.

Lambert also was able to finally come up with a starting lineup. He has stopped his juggling act and decided to go full-steam ahead with senior Mary McLaughlin, junior Karen Sapp, sophomore Jill Suglich, and freshmen Maureen Shea, Mary Kay Waller and Whitney Shewman. Sophomore Kathleen Morin will now spell relief from the bench. Now Lambert only has to overcome the tragedy of unactualized potential.

Although it is too early to pronounce the Irish cured, the team will surely be content if it can turn in a few more carbon copy performances of the Eastern Kentucky match.

Next up on the schedule is a road trip to Purdue this Wednesday. Hopefully the Irish can pick up where they left off.

Sophomore flanker Tim Brown (81) jumps over Michigan State defenders as he returns a Spartan kickoff. Brown returned a later kickoff 93 yards for a touchdown and caught a 49-yard pass to set up another score. For more on the game, see Marty Burns' story above.
