U.S. Bishops to convene at Saint Mary's

Special to the Observer

A delegation of U.S. Catholic bishops to the world bishops' synod on the laity will convene for a pre-synod synthesizing symposium on Saint Mary's campus, June 7-10.

The meeting will serve as an information-gathering and agenda-focusing session for the world synod to be held this fall in Rome.

In making the announcement, College President William Hickey said, "We consider it a privilege that Saint Mary's, with its long history of involvement in lay leadership and its firm commitment to the tradition of the Church, was chosen by the delegation as the site and resource for this meeting."

Archbishop John May of St. Louis, as the new president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, will head the delegation. He will be accompanied by the three other delegates elected by the Council: Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, Archbishop Rembert Weakland of Milwaukee and Archbishop Stanley Ott of Baton Rouge.

The two alternate delegates, Bishop Ricardo Ramirez of Las Cruces, New Mexico, and Bishop Raymond Lucker of New Ulm, Minnesota, will also be in attendance.

A total of 35-40 participants is expected. In addition to the Bush knew of arms deals, says memo

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - An Israeli official told Vice President George Bush last July that deals for the sale of U.S. arms were being sought with Iranian radicals, a secret memo says, contradicting claims by President Reagan that the administration dealt only with so-called moderates.

"We are dealing with the most radical elements, ..." the Israeli told Bush according to the memorandum, first reported in Sunday's editions of The Washington Post. "They can deliver ... that's for sure. ... we've learned they can deliver and the moderates can't."

The memo, written by a Bush aide, acknowledged that Israeli contacts with Iran were aimed in part at freeing Americans held in Lebanon. And it provides a view of a more active Israeli role than Jerusalem has acknowledged in the U.S.-Iran arms dealings.

Stephen Hart, a spokesman for Bush, would not comment on the memo beyond acknowledging that it is authentic.

In other news related to the sale of U.S. arms to Israel and the diversion of the proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels:

-William Casey, the former director of the CIA, was closely involved with Lt. Col. Oliver North, the fired National Security Council adviser, in efforts to supply military help to the Contras while such assistance was banned by Congress, according to a report in Sunday's Miami Herald. The newspaper, citing official documents and knowledgeable sources, said Casey and North traveled to the Middle East and Central America during a period from 1984 to 1986 seeking assistance for the rebels.

North met several times, including over dinner, with a wealthy Connecticut woman who bankrolled at least part of a pro-Contra lobbying drive, the woman, Barbara Newington of Greenwich, Conn., has acknowledged. The meetings suggest a close link between North and the efforts of Mrs. Newington's friend, Carl "Spitz" Channell, to put together a costly public relations blitz.

Channell, through a network of conservative groups he controls, financed speaking trips by Nicaraguan rebels and a television ad campaign of at least $1 million that targeted congressional opponents of President Reagan's plan to give $100 million in military and other aid to the Contras. The source of the funding has come into question, with congressional and federal investigators examining a report in the Lowell (Mass.) Sun that North provided profits from Iranian arms sales for the campaign.

-Robert McFarlane, Reagan's former national security adviser, was able to receive classified messages from the White House with a secure telephone hookup and computer in his home for a year after leaving his job, The Baltimore Sun reported Sunday.

Week's events to promote awareness of Third World

By ERIC HOLLOWAY
News Staff

Third World Awareness Week will be highlighted by activities sponsored by several campus organizations devoted to bring attention to the problems facing underdeveloped nations.

The events, which started Sunday, include lectures by faculty and guests, a fundraiser by campus bands to be held in Theodore's, a showing of the movie "Gandhi," a "pena" gathering, and a First/Third World dinner.

The Overseas Development Network is sponsoring many activities along with the World Hunger Coalition, the Anti-Apartheid Network, the Student Organization for Latin America, Women United for Peace and Justice, and CILA.

"We feel there is a two-fold purpose to this week," said Sophia Twarog of the ODN. "The first, as the name implies, is to create an awareness. The second purpose is to create a sense of unity between the different groups with the same objectives."

The ODN said that last year's Third World Awareness Week was a success, and ODN hopes it will become an annual event. The members of the groups involved said there is a definite need to open the eyes of the students to the reality that exists in poverty-stricken nations.

"We need a week like this to shake us out of our complacency in this ivory tower and to become aware of people around the world who's needs are not fulfilled," said Anti-Apartheid Network Chairperson Margarita Rose.

- Tonight at Theodore's "Vatican III" and "Smoke From Nowhere" will perform from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. ODN is sponsoring the event. There is an admission charge.

Ebey named as Malloy's assistant

By ELIZABETH CORNWELL
Staff Reporter

Father Carl Ebey, a Notre Dame assistant professor of accountancy, has been named executive assistant to the University's president-elect, Father Edward Malloy. Malloy said the appointment was effective at the end of the spring semester.

Ebey will replace Father William Beauchamp, the executive assistant to University President Father Theodore Hesburgh, when Beauchamp assumes the vice-presidency of the University in May.

Ebey's duties will include advising the president in difficult situations, assisting with special projects, and occasionally serving as a representative for the president, according to Malloy. Ebey will also continue to teach.

"The specifics of the job depend on the various things that emerge . . . the job has a general description that doesn't sound like much, but what it really means is that he'll be busy all the time," Malloy said.

Father Carl Ebey

Ebey commented on the appointment, "I'll be a staff assistant, to be used at his pleasure. My role will be to help Father Malloy establish his plans and programs for this University. I'm excited to be able to do it - I think this is an exciting time to be working for the University. I admire Father Malloy very much. I've worked with him for eight years, knew him in the seminary."

Ebey was chosen on the basis of his past accomplishments, according to Malloy. "Why did I choose Carl? I have tremendous confidence in his judgement. He's held a responsible position in our community for the past five years as the treasurer for the Indiana Province. Finally—he's a very good friend," Malloy said.

Ebey, 46, received an accounting degree from Notre Dame in 1962, an M.A. in Theology from Holy Cross College, Washington D.C., in 1968, an M.B.A. from Notre Dame in 1972, and a D.B.A. from Indiana University in 1980. He was ordained in 1972 and has served as both steward and treasurer for the Indiana Province of the Congregation of the Holy Cross.

Ebey was on the internal auditing staff of the University from 1972 to 1975 and director of student accounts from 1975 to 1977. He joined the Department of Accountancy in 1980.

In Brief

"Wheel of Fortune" personality Vanna White will be the subject of a Playboy magazine pictorial in the May issue, a Playboy spokeswoman said Sunday. "I haven't seen the pictures yet because I've been out of town, but I can assure you they will be tasteful, quality shots," said Ms. Radomski, Playboy's director of corporate communications. Ms. Radomski said she understood Ms. White posed in lingerie for several of the pictures. - Associated Press

A minister handed out condoms to his congregation at Sunday's service to dramatize the need for measures to stop the spread of the deadly disease AIDS. "We should be having a dialogue about these issues, shouldn't we? But most of us are still squeamish," the Rev. Carl Titchener told about 250 people who packed the Unitarian Universalist Church of Amherst. Acknowledging that some people might call his dramatization a gimmick, Titchener said he hoped to make people more aware about AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases. - Associated Press

Reason can prevail if leaders talk instead of shout

We exchanged war stories, she and I. For a brief moment, all of the letters - from God or at least people who claim to be God, from prisoners on death row and the people who want to keep them there, from pacifists and warmongers, from liberals and conservatives, and from the famous and fanatical - all blurred into one, one experience unlike anything we had anticipated.

She and I are two windburned but enthusiastic survivors of the many cross-currents which an editor of a small college newspaper must face.

We get junk mail, hate mail and crazy mail. She is a more well-known and controversial editor than I and therefore gets more mail. But we get more than just letters.

She laughed mildly as she recounted what it is like when she goes into class at the beginning of each semester. Some of her classmates invariably mutter, "Oh, no - she's in here."

Her newspaper is The Dartmouth Review. It's extremely conservative and outspoken on a campus that generally is not either.

She said some of the students hate her. Professors, from time to time, ridicule her. She is the butt of many private and public jokes.

Her only crime, she said, is that she is a conservative at Dartmouth and has the courage to put her thoughts to print.

The impression she gave me was the majority of the established community was not open to her and her colleagues' ideas. Rather than debate in a reasonable fashion the many issues at hand, people become vicious and personal in their attacks.

What seems to be true at Dartmouth is sometimes true here. Often, personalities and rhetoric cloud the issues. People who claim to have open minds do not.

Rather than debate the merits of a point, people make comments in public and in print which are untrue, unwise, and unnecessary to the general debate at hand.

Revenge, more often than not, replaces discussion.

History, though, does not have to repeat itself.

One week ago today, the Notre Dame Student Senate rejected a call to discuss placing The Observer under some form of advisory board in which student government money would be spent reviewing the newspaper's status.

The Observer's history is filled with conflicts between student government leaders and the newspaper's general board.

Few students understand or care about such political maneuvering. Many of the comments made back and forth are worthy of a good laugh; however, in a very real sense everyone loses as a result of the periodic battles.

Joe Murphy

Rather than worry about running the newspaper or student government, the leaders have to decide how to respond to the latest charge of being called a buffoon by the opposing side.

Last spring, I met with Jeanne Heller and Mike Switek and promised The Observer would try to be fair in its actions, as well as in its rhetoric. We sought better avenues of communication to increase our understanding of each others' roles and perspectives.

The result has been that everyone has gotten along much better, and there has been more talking than shouting between us.

In light of our mutual history of conflict, the senate's vote to table the resolution still comes as a surprise. Had the resolution passed, a crisis in communication and relations between The Observer and student leaders could have begun.

The Student Senate recognized the need for our continued editorial independence. We responded by acknowledging our responsibility to provide fair and professional coverage. All of which signals that, for the moment, some of the past mistakes have been noted and efforts to avoid repeating them have been to some degree successful.

In particular, I would like to publicly thank Mike Switek and Don Montanaro for defending the concept of a free campus press when no one would have faulted them for not doing so. After the vote to close discussion, I was glad reason prevailed and that I was the editor at Notre Dame, and not at Dartmouth.

Kidnappers deliver new ultimatum on hostage videotape

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - An American hostage said in a videotape dropped off by his kidnappers Sunday that he and three other men, including two Americans, will be killed if Israel fails to release 400 Arab prisoners within 24 hours.

A six-minute videotape showing Boston native Alann Steen, 47, was delivered to a Western news agency in the name of Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, which kidnapped Steen and three others from the campus of Beirut University College on Jan. 24.

The group's other hostages are Robert Polhill, 53, of New York City; Jesse Turner, 39, of Boise, Idaho; and Mithileshwar Singh, 60, a native of India and resident alien in the United States.

Israel indicated Sunday it was willing to discuss the swap of an Israeli airman missing in Lebanon for the release of the 400 Arab prisoners, a proposal advanced Saturday by Nabih Berri, head of the main Shiite Amal militia and Lebanon's justice minister.

However, Israeli officials said in Jerusalem they would not respond to an ultimatum and would not conduct such talks in public.

Under Berri's proposal, all foreign hostages also would be released in Lebanon by the various extremist groups holding them.

Berri, meanwhile, backed away Sunday from an earlier weekend statement that Anglican Church hostage-negotiator Terry Waite would be freed by Monday, now saying the release would take more time. Waite has been missing since Jan. 20.

A weary-looking Steen, reading from a statement in a monotone, said on Sunday's videotape: "if our lives are important to America, it must order Israel to release the 400 Palestinians as soon as possible - that is, Monday as a maximum."

"We also tell America that if it commits any stupidity, we will be prone to be killed. Besides, Americans in the whole world will be the victims of our administration's stupidity."

Bennett claims colleges fail because so many drop out

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Education Secretary William Bennett, defending plans to make major budget cuts in higher education, claims that colleges are unproductive because half of all college students drop out.

But educators call his criticisms misleading and inappropriate, and there appear to be no statistics that entirely support Bennett's claim.

"We are concerned about productivity. Almost half the students who enter four-year programs . . . do not complete those four-year programs. We think that's a problem," Bennett told a House Appropriations subcommittee last Wednesday.

A day earlier, after making the same point to the House Budget Committee, he asked, "What kind of movie is it we're running that people want to leave halfway through?"

An incomplete analysis by the department's Office of Educational Research and Improvement indicates that 50 percent to 60 percent of students who started four-year programs in 1980 graduated at the end of four years, with others presumably finishing their degrees later.

A consultant hired to analyze the same data found that 42 percent of students who started two- and four-year programs in 1980 finished them in four years -compared with 51 percent in 1976. And 26 percent had dropped out in 1984 compared with 19 percent in 1976.

Jay Noel, a program analyst in the department's planning and evaluation service, said those numbers show a "deterioration of college attendance, graduation and completion" that concern Bennett.

However, Noel did not have numbers just for the four-year programs Bennett mentioned to Congress.

delegates and their alternates, the meeting at Saint Mary's will include the episcopal members of the U.S. Bishops' Committee on the Laity, prior heads of that committee and invited lay men and women.

According to Doris Donnelly, co-director of the Center for Spirituality at Saint Mary's and coordinator of the event, the agenda for the meeting has yet to be set, but likely topics would include the role of women in a renewed and renewing Church, the theological education and spiritual formation of the laity and the collaboration between the laity and clergy in society.

Donnelly said the symposium will provide the bishop-delegates with information and the opportunity to focus their own agenda in determining the message they will take to the world synod later this year.

Holy Cross Associate gains valuable experience

During the fall and spring of my senior year at Notre Dame, running furiously from classes to the basement of the library for interviews, dodging mud puddles, sinking into snow banks with high heels, I found myself terribly apprehensive. I was not at peace with myself, not content with where my life seemed to be going. Something was missing. Ideas of spending a year in volunteer service came in and out of my head, but time and time again, I would be talked out of it. "Are you crazy?" friends asked.

Patty Cisle

guest column

Following that "something" inside which would not keep quiet (more appropriately described by Fr. John Dunne as "the heart's desire"), I looked more seriously at volunteer programs, primarily at the Holy Cross Associates and the Jesuit Volunteer Corps. In my searching, I came upon a quote on a brochure from the Jesuit Volunteers which said that once you're a volunteer, you're "ruined for life." Immediately I said, "Forget it - I don't want to be ruined for life. Things can be challenging enough as it is at times." But "something" inside wouldn't let me be at peace so I talked to friends, professors, and I prayed and asked for some direction to put this "feeling in my heart" to rest.

The more I read about the Holy Cross Associates program, the better it sounded. Yes! This is it. A program that enables me to live out my Christian ideals and really put them into practice through service work, community living, simple lifestyle and working in lay ministry. I could have a chance to look at our American culture from another angle.

I started the application over the Christmas holidays, all the while knowing this is what I was supposed to be doing. It was a blind leap which I felt extremely safe taking. This contentment, though, was on the interior; on the exterior, I was frazzled. It was hard to take a step in the opposite direction of my peers and family, a step away from society and norms. But in the norms of Christianity, it was o.k.; I could step freely and feel good about it.

After being accepted into the Holy Cross Associates program, I was elated. I knew it was what I wanted to do for the next year. In April, I was told that I'd be working at a small Catholic high school in Colorado Springs as a guidance counselor for juniors and seniors. From the spring until orientation in July, the reality of my commitment began to sink into me. "Uh-oh, now you've got yourself in the position to be 'ruined for life.'" What it was going to be like living in community, working without pay, praying together, living simply with one car between six people? Though it scared me down deep, I was excited to begin this challenge.

On Aug. 5, 1985, we arrived in Colorado Springs. There we were - six college grads (Yuvvies, not Yuppies) with no money, a "beautiful" brown station wagon to share, a house to make "home" for a year, and community service assignments to be carried out. For two months, I was on top of the world. My work at the high school was rewarding, I loved my housemates, the Holy Cross community in Cascade (outside of Colorado Springs) was extremely supportive and then the real challenge of Christian community living began. The honeymoon phase was over and the hard realities of every day community life were there. I was tired of having no privacy, never having a car, having no cash to go out with the teachers from school, "neurotically" cleaning the house on Saturdays, and not having the "ideal" Christian community we had set our hearts to forming. What was I doing in Colorado? Was I being ruined?

But at the same time, the "something" was speaking to me and telling me I was right where I was supposed to be. The giftedness of others I had discovered in my Associate year is what pulled me through those questioning periods. I was surrounded by so many people who really cared - my housemates, the Holy Cross parish of Sacred Heart, the Holy Cross novitiate, the HCA home office, and the staff and students at the high school. So many treasures given to me - things I never dreamed of when first thinking about joining a volunteer group. Walking with people who showed such deep concern and commitment, who weren't afraid to share, to make mistakes, to laugh at themselves. I was being ruined but in the most beautiful of ways.

In being ruined, I was able to grow and to look beyond myself and into the hearts of others. In my ruined state, and that's exactly how I felt at times, I was able to rebuild, to gain a strength and to better understand my Christian faith. I found out I have a long way to go; but fortunately through my HCA experience, I learned to open myself up and leave room within for growth. Only in doing this, can I remain responsive to the call of faith. I'm glad I listened to that "something" inside. Try it! The possibilities are endless.

Patty Cisle is a 1985 Notre Dame graduate, a Holy Cross Associate in Colorado Springs 1985-1986, and is presently doing graduate studies in Boston.

P.O.Box Q

Lowering drinking age would improve policy

Dear Editor:

I agree with Mike Wilkins' column that Notre Dame needs to change its alcohol policy. However, I was surprised to find a second year law student neglecting to address the administration's concern about alcohol related liability.

The University should not and will not change the policy. That would disregard Indiana law; such a change would be irresponsible. Rather than vainly pressuring the administration for change, students should work for appropriate changes in State law.

The reasons commonly given for the 21 drinking age are to decrease drunk driving and to distance alcohol from minors. The higher drinking age does not directly address either problem.

If mandatory jail sentences and/or license suspensions do not reduce drunk driving sufficiently, then stiffer penalties are in order, not age restrictions. Should paltry fines not reduce drinking among minors, then stiffer penalties should be levied against the minors' guardians.

$45 fines for 18, 19, and 20 year-olds in bars solves nothing. People in this age group are not the only drunk drivers nor are they all drunk drivers, and they have traditionally been granted the privileges and responsibilities of adults. Accordingly, as adults, they should work for lengthier sentences for drunk driving, stiffer penalties for guardians of drinking minors, and a lowering of the drinking age to 18. Only with these changes will Notre Dame ever again have a less restrictive alcohol policy.

Before and after in this week's soaps

ALL MY CHILDREN: To keep Ross away from her, Natalie left Palmer's mansion and moved in with Benny and Donna. Ross got mad at Ellen for suggesting they see a marriage counselor. A jealous Jeremy, thinking Matt was making out with Erica, threatened him with a gun. Coming: Jeremy learned of another rival for Erica's affection.

ANOTHER WORLD: Rachel told Mac it was Mitch who urged her to follow her heart, and her heart led back to Mac. Reginald learned Peter was Linda's last client. After Linda was murdered, Peter changed the clocks in the mansion so that Bridgette could provide him with an alibi. Mary and Vince got along much better. Coming: Peter's so-called secret gives Reginald new ideas.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Lucinda seemed unaware of James Stenbeck's continuing machinations. Lily was upset to think she might be the cause of more problems between Iva and Lucinda. Frannie asked some embarrassing questions. Coming: Tonio springs a surprise.

CAPITOL: Angelica felt threatened by Trey's growing emotional distance. Wally and Brend realized they had to make a decision about commitment. Kelly agonized over her confused feelings for Thomas and her lingering feelings for Trey. Coming: Sloane faces an uneasy prospect.

DALLAS: J.R. and Bobby sent Sue Ellen, Pam, John Ross and Christopher to California to escape B.D. Calhoun's threats. Cliff was frantic when Pam wasn't around to help him get through a difficult deal. Donna and Senator Dowling continued to enjoy their friendship. Coming: April gets another chance to cause mischief.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Marlena appeared in the garden and heard the children calling her mommy. Roman assured Olivia he would get on with life again. Max was shot and rushed to surgery where Mike and Robin saved his life. Tamara was shaken by the appearance of Mr. Coleman. Coming: Kimberley's trial takes a serious turn.

FALCON CREST: Lance was frustrated in his attempts to help Melissa. Her behavior cost him a chance to join an exclusive club. Richard became the new distributor for Angela's wines. Vickie and Angela worried about Dan's preoccupation with Suzanne. Coming: Chase and Maggie provide Lance with help he hadn't expected.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: A mystery woman helped Lucy escape and booked them both on a bus headed for Nashville where Terry and Patrick were hiding. Lucy was later shocked to learn the woman is Sarah, Ted's murderer. Camellia created a situation to make Anna think she and Duke might still be having a love affair. Coming: Barbara needs blood that only Tania can supply, if she gets the message in time.

GUIDING LIGHT: Rusty was a little uncomfortable, but not displeased, at the way his relationship with Mindy seemed to be progressing. Chelsea and Phillip were more than willing to continue their new affair in spite of some doubts on both sides. Coming: Josh made what could be a life or death decision.

KNOTS LANDING: Anne's presence in Knots Landing caused confused feelings for both Paige and Mack. Karen was unable to shake off some forebodings about Anne's influence in their lives. Coming: Greg gets the information he needs to act.

LOVING: Trisha was rushed to the hospital with a near-fatal drug overdose. Gwyn later told her that her father had returned and was much changed. Cabot collapsed and Tony gave him CPR. The storm raged as Eban and Lottie took shelter in an abandoned house. Eban later tried to attack Lottie who rushed out into Curtis' arms. Coming: Steve tried to keep his promise to Trisha in spite of Nick's threats.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Jonathan told Dorlan that Diane is a swindler. Asa moved into the Vernon Inn to let Clint take over the mansion. Pamela was also at the Vernon Inn. At the custody hearing, Doctor Larry Wolek admitted that Vicki mishandled an emergency with little Joey. Coming: Vicki is surprised at Clint's testimony.

RYAN'S HOPE: Jackie warned Joe to honor their marriage or she'll tell Max who he really is. Slobhan, feeling ill, fainted. Roger told Maggie he loves her and lied that he hadn't been with Della. Maggie didn't believe him and rushed to an abortion clinic followed by Roger and Delia. Slobhan told an unbelieving Jackie that Max headed a criminal network. Coming: Slobhan is shocked by a new discovery.

SANTA BARBARA: Keith warned Cruz he'll throw the book at him if he learns he helped Kelly escape. Jeffrey and Kelly snuck into the costume party. Hayley assured Jake she's happy being married to Ted. Mason asked Tori to marry him. Coming: Eden gets upsetting news.

THE YOUNG & THE RESTLESS: Evan pushed for Andy to hear him out. Julie decided to take a chance and make a pass at Ashley. Victor's attempt to learn about Ashley's whereabouts lead to new frustrations. Coming: Ellen worries about Jack's growing interest in her.

Beach Boys Concert

The Notre Dame Cheerleaders practice here for a skit which will take place during the Beach Boys Concert.

Mom...I didn't recognize you

Things change quickly in the outside world.

Oh sure, it all seems pretty gradual in those "As-Soon-As-The-Hangover-Fades" Sunday Afternoon phone calls home. Somehow "We're thinking of changing the curtains in your brother's bedroom" seems more like a betrayal when you get home and find all the furniture in the house changed. "You should see how fast that house down the street is going up" becomes kind of a denial when all the new houses render your street unrecognizable.

Kevin Walsh

None of the above

This is always among my thoughts as I pack to go home. What new horror awaits me? Along with a healthy sense of anticipation there also exists a hesitant dread of the unfamiliar. Of course, I also think about a lot of stupid things as I pack to go home, because it's always 3:00 in the morning after four or nine too many beers. I never know why I packed toilet paper when I get home. I think about a lot of stupid things.

After I get home, the unexpected greets me at every corner. My mom's hair always looks different. There's always some new wallpaper somewhere. It's usually pretty funny in my house to see what the new fad food is. Last time it was these little thin "ginger" cookies that my mom bought on sale and were supposed to be "good for you." They looked and tasted suspiciously like dog food. Surprise, surprise.

I guess I'm still living on this unrealistic ideal of my house as a warm place where cookies are always baking and a porch light is always on, awaiting my return from this extended sleepover. I cling to this naive belief that time and progress stops wherever I am not. No matter how much it gets thrown back in my face, I still hold on to it. I don't know why.

This last Christmas break was a perfect example of what I'm talking about. New furniture. A new VCR. A new car. A new house. But those actually are all secondary. It's the people who change who scare me the most. I always get caught off guard.

Like my little brother. Seconds after I saw him, I adapted to the fact that that pudgy, fat-cheeked little stumbler I left this summer had grown a couple yards since I saw him last. And the peach fuzz struggling to command his lip didn't rearrange his goofy little smile at all. What really threw me for a loop though was The Voice.

"WHAT'S UP, KEV?" he said, the word.

She left me standing there in numbed shock. When I found her again she was on the phone.

"Who ya talkin to?" I asked secretly.

"Johnny" she hissed back, annoyed that I had asked.

She ignored me and turned back to Johnny. "Really?!" she exclaimed, giggling. Two giggles later I became suspicious. Who was this twisted despoiler of children - "Johnny?" She's too young to have a boyfriend. Boyfriends were still supposed to be alleged at this point. I grabbed the phone from her.

"Listen, you little zipperhead, this bra thing is only a phase, get it? Leave my little sister and her youth alone or I'll be forced to..." I struggled for the appropriate fourth grade threat. Subtle, yet forceful. "...I'll be forced to rip your face off." The "Rip-Your-Face-Off" threat always scared me as a child.

I slammed the phone back into its cradle and turned back to my little sister. Smiling now, I put my hands on my knees and spoke in a baby voice, "Wanna go play CandyLand now?"

She adjusted her bra and kicked me.

It's just the kind of thing that was happening to me all break.

The crowning glory came when I clapped my little brother on the shoulder in a universal gesture of fraternal goodwill. "So, big guy, how's the fifth grade treating you??" I asked, using two question marks.

He looked at me with a strange disbelief in his eyes and spoke in a voice deeper than time and space, "UH, I'M IN SEVENTH GRADE NOW. . .AND IT'S TREATING ME FINE..."

I mouthed a soundless "Oh..."

Somebody deep inside me screamed.

So let's all be glad we're back at good old familiar Notre Dame and we're hitting that beautiful stretch of the second semester when the shortest month of the year lasts longer than eternity and when the whole campus is either covered in snow or brown slush.

How do you relate to God?

Editor's Note: The Observer is introducing the Religion page which will run twice a month. It will feature campus views on the Catholic, Church, and religious issues. Today's question is: Some people relate to God as father, some as mother, parole officer, or alter ego. How do you relate to God? When you relate to God, what happens?

Of the two questions "Who is God?" and "What happens when you relate to God?" the second is more manageable. I don't know that I can do the first. With regard to the second, my experience of the divine most often occurs late at night when I settle down, look at the day, look at my life and see what's happening. What are the biggest parts of my life and how am I doing with those? I look at that and pay most attention to the parts that are confusing, difficult and overwhelming, trying to understand what's going on. It's somewhere in there that the experience of the divine occurs. Something happens which almost always calms me down, helps me see things more clearly, helps me understand what to do next and strengthens my sense of humor. The experience is so intensely personal that I call it God. That's the only name I know that fits. Some characteristics of God: Best Teacher. Old Friend. Fun to be with. Who God is includes all of those then some. That's the closest I can get to a name.

Sister Karol Jackowski is dean of student affairs at Saint Mary's.

How do I relate to God. As Providence is the best single word to describe it. When I was young I prayed to God in the words of the "Our Father" but I never imaged God as a larger than life Father in the sky. I don't recall ever imaging God at all.

But, young, I did look to God for the things a good Father provides: loving care, supplying all my needs. I prayed for concrete things—to find my lost bracelet (I found it in the sand of a clear running brook where I played), to get a pony. I never related to the Jesus I was taught in Sunday School (protestant) because he seemed pusillanimous.

As I grew older I left organized religion for approximately ten years. Still I often turned to God, God as a loving and ab-in whom we have our spiritual being. I became more aware of a pattern in my life which had led me here, for a purpose (which I may someday know). In other words my belief in God as the one who provides, cares, leads, structures our life - as Providence - was confirmed.

And now? My relation to God remains very much what it was solutely trustworthy presence, God who led me along strange paths, God who deserted me but who haunted me.

When I turned back to religion it was to the Catholic Church. There I found Jesus as the Risen Lord, as Christ in whom I could believe as the living Word of God. I had, even in my most agnostic days, always found guidance and the presence of God in Scripture. It was not difficult to believe in Christ as Word, as Wisdom, as the Image of God in whom we are created. I found the Spirit as a child, but matured, even grown old, as I am. That is, God is an intelligent being who cares about me, about those whom I love, about the world, whom I can trust confidently to provide now - and if God so wills - forever: Providence. I still talk easily to this God, but I no longer ask for bracelets and ponies. In fact I don't ask for concrete things, other than the well-being of those I love, and all suffering humans. I do give thanks to God, often. I give thanks for all the good things that come to me - and I make formal thanksgiving to God in the liturgical celebrations which are important in my life.

What happens when I relate to God? I am no longer alone. I have a sense of presence - loving, caring presence, whom I can trust absolutely. Especially at the Sunday liturgy I am comforted for the week past and strengthened for the week to come. I am reminded of all those for whom our community prays. Christ, the living Word of God, is among us - as we say when we exchange the 'peace' before communion.

Ellen Weaver is assistant chairwoman of theology at Notre Dame.

God is to me: Friend, Artist, Musician, Theologian, Democrat. She is Friend because she is a companion in the adventure of life. I am bonded with the Immortal in relationship the essence of which is freedom, non-intrusiveness and shared joy and pain. She allows me to make my mistakes, laughs over them and finds some redeeming feature in them which will heal and nourish. She has been with me on occasions of acute physical pain and near death experiences and she has pointed to a life beyond, as mysterious as it is real.

God reveals her/himself in the multifarious ways of life. In this age of cacophony I hear her in silence; in this age of human manufacture I find her in the jocund wind in the trees, in liberating ecstasy of my malamute as he prances in the woods, in tutelary care of my mare for her foal and the life surging through my veins from equine movement beneath me.

She is Artist. With meticulous and infinite finesse she planned each atom of the universe. Who could equal her creativity, her ingenuity, her colour scheme or the paradoxical nature of many of her creatures? And she becomes incarnate in the bewildering diversity of human beings which she created. She is present in the mobile wrinkles of Mother Theresa; in the dismembered body of the leper; in the physical beauty and hope of youth; in the quick body of the unborn.

She is conductor of the great orchestra of sound, human, animal and cosmic—if we have ears unphoned to hear! Who could compete with her avian choir?

She entered the human community in the person of Her Son, Jesus. He came as a theologian. He is experienced in the unrivaled didactic power of his parables. But He was not only a theoretician. He accomplished his field research by identifying with the most degraded, abused and jested of humankind. He accepted the most obscene death - that of a slave. By his resurrection from the dead he taught us "that there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamt in thy philosophy..." (words of immoral bard).

God is a democrat. As sovereign of sovereigns she neither dictates nor coerces. The members of her/his realm are free citizens whose conduct should be governed by responsibility to the community of humankind, respect of the human person and genuine feel love for their sovereign.

She is master/mistress of communication arts chief of which is her/his Spirit. This Spirit comes as constant innovator, impatient of vegetating stasis, yet observer of the constant norm which preserves the shalom of church and state. To imbibe her is to inhale freedom and refreshment. She comes in the coolness of baptism water and descends like dew upon the Eucharist banquet.

Josephine Ford is a professor of theology at Notre Dame.

It is easier to explore my relationship with God by first considering what my relationship with God is not. When I was growing up, I was taught that God was a "father-figure." I was taught that God was the final judge, and thus One to be feared. I was taught that God was all powerful and all mighty, and that any image I could come up with in my own mind would not do God justice.

Today, relating to God is a conscious decision for me; it is something that I chose to be involved in. Because I chose this relationship, it is not the intimidating relationship that I had before. I am not afraid of the God who is the Final Judge, because that is the same God who lets me know myself by allowing me to make mistakes, fumble, stumble, and many times fall flat on my face. . . usually to get up and try again, or sometimes even give up. But I have courage in myself because in my relationship with God the elements of perfect friendship are present. God assumes the brunt of my anger, frustration, questioning, denial (of spirit or self), doubt, joy, giddiness, excitement, nervousness, anticipation, curiosity, and wonder without ever refusing me. God does not give me answers or definitions but allows me the opportunities and situations to realize myself.

If I never understand my relationship more than this, that will be O.K. because I know that I will continue to strive for understanding through questioning, anticipating, and reaching out without the need for a definition.

Jeanne Heller is student body president at Saint Mary's and a senior English major.

Though God is much bigger than any vision I have of a Father, I most often find myself relating to God as my 'Spiritual Father.' It is as though God nurtures and protects me when I am weak and allows me to be what I am ultimately meant to be. The biggest problem I have in relating to God is that I usually underestimate His goodness and love to me.

When I fully let go of the restraints I normally place on God, I find a great peace and comfort that surpasses any other joy I know.

I do not wish it to all sound so simplistic and easy, because it is not - a few of the things which are really good for us really are. But the more struggles I go through, the easier it is for me to relate and communicate to God.

Nick Mathioudakis is head of ICHTHUS and a senior business major at Notre Dame.

Vandy beats ice-cold Irish, 60-56

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - Randy Neff, a 52-percent free-throw shooter entering the game, hit three-of-four from the stripe in the final 15 seconds as Vanderbilt upended Notre Dame Friday night, 60-56.

The Irish created their own misery, though, as they shot 35 percent (18 of 51) for the game including an incredibly anemic 18 percent (4 of 22) in the first half.

"We played about as badly as possible in the first half," said Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps. "We were horrible. You're not going to beat anybody, especially on the road, by going 4-for-22."

But as bad as the Irish were, they still had a chance to win late, cutting a seven-point deficit to one with 16 seconds left. But Donald Royal missed a three-point play free throw with the Irish down, 57-56. After Neff missed a bonus free throw with 15 seconds remaining, Mark Stevenson overthrew Royal. The Commodores inbounded, and the Irish had to send Neff back to the line where he slammed the door on the Irish.

"Don't take anything away from Vanderbilt because they did the things necessary to win, especially hitting the foul shots late. They won the game because we didn't want to win the game

"We just didn't respond until there were six minutes left, and we thought we had a chance to scramble back into it. We come back at the end, and we can't get a shot when we have a chance to tie."

As for Vanderbilt head coach C.M. Newton, whose own club only hit on 41 percent of its shots en route to raising its record to 14-9, he was happy that his Commodores shook their problems and hung on for the win.

"We had a couple of poor shots, and everything else we took was on balance but just didn't go in," said Newton. "Fortunately for us, Notre Dame went through the same thing. When a team only has four field goals at half, you ought to have them buried. It was a good win for us and a very intensely played game."

"Notre Dame is just what I thought they were. They're a really class, tough basketball team. A lot of teams when you get a seven-point lead go down and miss their free throws. They never believed for a minute that they weren't going to win."

Scott Draud led the 'Dores with 14 points, while Will Perdue and Barry Goheen hit for 13 each. For the Irish, Royal scored 21, and David Rivers and Jamere Jackson each had nine.

Notre Dame was without Sean Connor, whose three-point shooting had become a factor in the past week. Connor injured his right ankle near the end of Thursday's practice and was on crutches Friday night. The lack of bench scoring hindered the Irish against Vandy, but Phelps didn't accept that as an excuse.

"Even without Sean Connor, there's no excuse," said Phelps. "That's a cop out. Other people want to play, there's their chance. Our freshmen should be playing like sophomores by now. Put everything else aside, and we still should either win the game in the last minute or at least go into overtime."

Indiana beats Wolverines

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. - Guard Steve Alford scored 30 points yesterday, including 16 of Indiana's 22 during an eight-minute first-half streak that carried the No. 2-ranked Hoosiers to an 83-67 Big Ten Conference basketball victory over Michigan.

With Alford scoreless the first nine minutes of the game, the Hoosiers struggled and never led by more than two points.

lane for a violation. Turnovers in the last five minutes also showed the Irish were wearing out.

And then there was Manning, who was nothing short of sensational in the second half. Manning had 23 points in the second stanza on an assortment of hook shots, turnaround jumpers and free throws. Everytime the Jayhawks needed him, Manning answered the call.

With the score tied at 55 with 3:07 remaining, Manning really took matters into his own hands, scoring nine of Kansas' last 15 points, including five-of-seven free throws. Manning capped his afternoon with a long pass downcourt to Kevin Pritchard (the Jayhawk's second-leading scorer in the game with eight points) who played it in to end the game. "I thought we were in pretty good shape with about five minutes to go and we were up five with the ball," said Irish head coach Digger Phelps. "Then we had two straight turnovers, and that hurt us. Even the timeouts and adjust-

Mark Stevenson ments didn't help. The last five minutes we just didn't do the things we had to do. We should have been driving the ball more rather than worry about shooting jumpshots, because we had the bonus. We should have had more than 29 foul shots. We didn't look to get the ball inside and get the foul shots, and that's where we broke down in the last five minutes.

"I thought we came out and could've gotten blown out, but we didn't lose our composure. We got the lead and played very well in the second half for about 15 minutes. Those last few points are no indication of how the game went. I think our kids did a pretty good job of playing the way they did."

Manning's performance overshadowed one of the most balanced Irish scoring attacks of the year. Led by Mark Stevenson's 14, the Irish got double figures from four players. Rivers and Voce each had 13, while Royal added 11.

IRISH ITEMS - The Irish were again without Sean Connor against the Jayhawks. Connor, who sprained his right ankle Thursday, flew back to South Bend following Friday night's loss to Vanderbilt.

ND wrestlers get slapped against CMU

By CHRIS KILEY
Sports Writer

Although it was scheduled to be a wrestling match, the Central Michigan Chippewas entered the ACC yesterday and gave their rendition of the Bengal Bouts en route to a 27-14 victory over Notre Dame.

"Central Michigan is not good on their feet, so they resorted to intimidation techniques like slapping heads," said Notre Dame Assistant Coach Ricky Stewart. "They got our kids to start blinking and flinching, and then took advantage of it."

Many of the Irish wrestlers were not pleased with this ploy and returned blows which were closer to jabs than head taps.

"Overall, there was some good, solid wrestling," said Stewart. "What I am pleased with is that our better wrestlers are now winning consistently. They are improving every match by eliminating mistakes and sticking to the basics."

After losing the first two matches, the Irish captured the next three weight classes with wins by Jerry Durso, Pat Boyd, and Ron Wisniewski, giving them a 10-6 advantage after the 150-pound match.

Yet, inexperience and injury again haunted the Irish as Chris Geneser was the lone winner in the last five matches.

"I hate to dwell on it, but we are still filling holes," said Stewart. "These guys are wrestling their hearts out. Mike Sheets, for example, is actually a 142-pound wrestler. He is moving up two weight classes and it is hard for him to learn much with the weight disadvantage."

The frustrated Irish are still searching for only their second victory of the season. They travel to Ann Arbor on Friday to take on the Wolverines of Michigan and return home on Sunday for their last home meet of the year against Indiana University.

Men's swimmers get two victories; women lose tough meet to Cards

By KELLY TOWNSEND
Sports Writer

In fast-swimming action Saturday, the Notre Dame men's swim team defeated Kalamazoo in their last home meet of the season after destroying Bradley on Friday night. The women, meanwhile, lost to Ball State in a hard-fought encounter.

The men's team went to Bradley with a determined attitude and left with an impressive victory. Last year the meet against Bradley went down to the final event. This year, the Irish took the lead from the beginning and left Bradley in their wake, 129-88.

Coach Welsh said he was impressed with the performance by the team.

"The team was primed and ready to win the meet," said Coach Welsh. "The key to the meet was to win the 400-yard medley relay and never let Bradley catch up."

The Irish did just that, cutting off three seconds off their time. It is Notre Dame's first win over Bradley in eight years. Senior John Ward recalls his first meeting with Bradley four years ago.

"My freshman year Bradley's swimmers would come off the bench and just out-swim us," said Ward. "This year we controlled the entire meet."

As in earlier victories, it was the depth of the Irish team that contributed to the victory. While not always taking first, they were able to take second and third in most events.

Saturday's action began with the women's team taking on Ball State in of the most even meets of the season. The depth of the Irish proved to be no advantage against the equally-deep Ball State team.

Despite improved times in individual and relay events, Notre Dame was unable to close in on hard-charging Ball State. The high point of the meet came in the one-meter diving event. Freshman Georgia Boessler, expected to place third, dazzled the crowd with excellent dives and earned first place. Coach Welsh only had praise for the women's performances.

"It was the best complete-team effort since Christmas," said Welsh. "They improved their times all around and were just excellent."

Following the women's meet, the men took on Kalamazoo. The the times for the Irish all dropped considerably, with the biggest coming in the 400-yard freestyle relay. Swimmers Jim Dowd, Roger Miro, Chris Petrillo, and John Froman combined their swims for a record-breaking time of 3:10.44. The swim broke the Rolfs Pool record set last year by St. Bonaventure.

Coach Welsh said he was pleased with the weekend on the whole and sees the Irish coming to a peak.

"We're getting stronger and faster every week," said Welsh. "The men are coming together into a tough, unified team. It was an excellent weekend overall, and we accomplished most of what we hoped to do."

With such momentum behind them, Notre Dame prepares for the University of Illinois-Chicago Tuesday.

Virginia falls to Tar Heels in overtime

Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL - J. R. Reid completed a three-point play with 1:36 remaining in overtime and third-ranked North Carolina held off Virginia for a 74-73 victory in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball yesterday.

The victory enabled Coach Dean Smith to win 20 games for the 17th consecutive season and was the 599th in his career, all at North Carolina. The Tar Heels are 20-2 and have not lost in nine conference games.

Reid, who finished with 21 points, hit two free throws with 57 seconds left in regulation to give North Carolina a 69-67 edge, but two free throws by Mel Kennedy with 33 seconds remaining tied the score.

Notre Dame dropped a pair of games over the weekend. Dennis Corrigan has the details of yesterday's loss to Kansas at right, and Friday's defeat at Vanderbilt on page 8.

Jayhawks turn back Irish, 70-60; Manning hits career-high 40 points

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

LAWRENCE, Kan. - After Kansas' 70-60 victory over Notre Dame, Jayhawk head coach Larry Brown jokingly apologized to reporters for making them miss that afternoon's NBA All-Star game. It didn't matter.

Kansas forward Danny Manning put on an all-star display of his own, scoring a career-high 40 points on 16-of-21 from the field and 8-of-11 from the line to lead his Jayhawk teammates past the Irish.

"Danny answered all those people who said he's not asserting himself," said Brown. "I've been with some really great players, but not when you consider what the kid did and the shots he made at crucial times. He played against three pretty good defenders. Before the game I thought Danny would have to take control. Digger does so many things to you defensively, and it was the type of team that we want to go in to him. There's no way I thought he'd go 16 for 21. It took that type of performance."

Irish head coach Digger Phelps agreed that Manning, who has been accused of going into the tank in games, played with meaning Sunday.

"I thought Danny Manning turned it on for 40 minutes today," said Phelps, whose squad dropped its second straight and fell to 13-7 on the season. "He put on a good show, going 16-for-21 the way he did. He's just a great player, and he came to play today. That's what hurt us at that end of the floor today.

With teammates Cedric Hunter and Keith Harris sidelined with injuries, Manning took over early. He scored 10 of the Jayhawks first 13 points as Kansas (18-5) raced to a 13-4 lead at the opening of the game.

But the Irish fought back and what at first looked like a runaway turned into a dog-fight. The Irish went on a 13-3 tear to take the lead, and the game seasawed through out the first half.

In the second half, the Irish twice opened five-point leads in the first 10 minutes of the half. It also looked as if the Irish would be able to use a favorite tactic - shooting free throws. With just over 15 minutes to play, the Irish were in the bonus, much to the dismay and disgust of the capacity crowd of 15,800 at Allen Field House. But the Irish couldn't or wouldn't force the ball inside to get points the easy way. And then, fatigue and Manning took over.

Playing in their seventh game in 15 days and with a bench that hadn't produced two days earlier against Vanderbilt, the Irish starters were forced to go the distance in the second half, despite foul trouble. The fatigue showed in little ways. For instance, with the Irish down, 55-51 and Rivers at the line to shoot a bonus free throw, Gary Voce fell into the

ND women let lead and game slip away against Hurricanes

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

The Miami Hurricanes were faced with the prospect of being giant-killers when they visited the Notre Dame women's basketball team Saturday. It was mission accomplished for the 'Canes, who earned a hard-fought victory, 62-61, over the Irish.

Miami had to overcome a tremendous Irish height advantage. Notre Dame's starting lineup averaged 6 feet, including three players 6-2 or taller. The tiny Hurricanes averaged 5-7 and had no starters over 5-10.

The game was all Irish in the early going, as they used a 10-point run to take a 26-11 lead with 6:24 left in the first half. Notre Dame was using its height advantage, getting the ball into the paint to Heidi Bunek, who scored 12 in the first half. Miami's scrappy team held tight and managed to keep the score close, trailing by only seven (30-23) at the half.

An adjustment on defense by the 'Canes turned the game around.

"They played a zone early on," said Irish coach Mary DiStanislaio. "Late in the first half they switched to a match-up and clogged up the middle on us."

The adjustment worked again in a second half that was as physical as the game can get. The Irish also began to have trouble with the Hurricanes' press, and Miami took the lead for the first time 46-44 with 10:36 left in the contest.

The teams traded the lead until Miami's Hope Butler hit a fast break basket at the 5:50 mark and teammate Toni Smiley followed with a baseline jumper at 5:15. Another Butler basket put the Irish down 53-48 with 3:15 to go.

Notre Dame's Annie Schwartz scored six of her 12 points in the final two minutes, but Miami kept answering with free throws and fast-break baskets to hold on to the lead. Schwartz's baseline jumper at the buzzer was not enough as the Irish lost 62-61.

Coach DiStanislaio said she was disappointed with her team's second half play.

"We deviated from our game," she said. "We stopped working inside and had too many miscues. We let Miami play its game."

The Irish held the 'Canes All-American Candidate Maria Rivera to 14 points (all in the first half), almost 10 points below her season average. Rivera, a 5-5 guard, put on quite a show for the fans at the ACC with her dribbling and passing - hitting her teammates trailing on the fast break with perfect passes between her legs and over her head. Teammate Toni Smiley picked up the scoring for the 'Canes with 20 points.

Bunek played another outstanding game for the Irish, working all afternoon to get open and scoring from the paint. She shot 10-of-15 from the floor and finished with 22 points. Bunek also pulled down 16 rebounds, tying her career high. Diondra Toney scored 14 for the Irish, and point guard Mary Gavin added to her Irish all-time assist record with 11.

The Irish as a team shot .438 (28-58) from the floor, but hurt themselves at the foul line, making only 5 of 12 (.455). The always-tough Notre Dame defense held Miami to .377 field goal shooting (.273 in the first half) and outrebounded the 'Canes 47-36. But the pressure put on by Miami's quicker team forced 26 Irish turnovers.

DiStanislaio did not think the pressure wore down her team.

"Of course, it is more energizing to be winning than losing, but we didn't get tired," she said. "We just made mistakes, and they took advantage of them."

"If Miami plays a 94-foot game - their game - they can beat anyone."

The Hurricanes improved their record to 9-11. The Irish, who fell to 6-13, will travel to the University of Detroit to take on the Lady Titans Wednesday night.

Track team gets no NCAA berths despite impressive performance

By MOLLY MAHONEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame track team has returned from battle with the dreaded clock. Saturday the clock came out victorious as the Irish tried to qualify runners for the NCAA Championships. The Irish failed to qualify anyone for the NCAA's, but nonetheless performed well at Saturday's Blue-Orange Classic in Champaign, Ill.

"It went fairly well," said Head Coach Joe Piane, "We ran against the several very good teams and did reasonably well."

The Irish ran against the likes of Illinois, the best team in the Big Ten, and Wisconsin, and were disappointed in the outcome. They are confident, however, that the experience will pay off down the road.

One disappointment was the two-mile relay of sophomore David Warth, senior Robert Nobles, junior Nick Sparks, and senior Jeff Van Wie, that placed third and missed qualifying for the NCAA's by less than two seconds.

"We didn't qualify," said Warth, "But it's encouraging because we know we'll come along and be able to do it."

Juniors Tony Ragunas and Tim Brown reached the finals in the 60-yard dash and finished 7th and 2nd overall in the 300, respectively.

The one-mile relay team of Nobles, freshman Yan Searcy, sophomore Chris McGuire, and Warth had a strong race and placed second.

Running his first collegiate 1000-yard race, freshman Mike O'Connor placed third and fellow distance runner Ron Markezich had his best outing ever in the open mile, finishing second.

The meet marked the first time that freshman shot putter Tom Kraus was not able to completely dominate his competition, even when not at his best as he did against Michigan, but he still finished fourth with a heave of 52'11 against formidable opponents.

Freshman Glen Watson was narrowly defeated in the 60-yard hurdles by a fraction of a second and finished second.

The Irish will try to regroup, hoping that next Saturday when they face the clock again, they will come out the victor.

The Observer/Bob Jones
