Some senior class events affected by closing of club

By KENDRA MORRILL

Several senior class events will have to be cancelled or changed this semester because Mitchell's Indiana Club has closed its doors, according to Senior Class President Diane Fitzgibbon.

The South Bend club, which frequently hosted Notre Dame and Saint Mary's senior class events, closed on Jan. 7 because of lack of business, according to Steve Mitchell, the former owner of the club.

The business which Notre Dame gave the club was "pretty good," said Mitchell, but those events were held mostly in the banquet rooms. "It took more than that to run it," Mitchell said.

The club's closing "switches some Senior Month plans around," said Fitzgibbon. The event planned for Jan. 16 at Mitchell's, featuring the band The Kinetics, had to be cancelled, she said.

In addition, the senior class was planning to have the band Dr. Bop appear at Mitchell's during Senior Week in May, said Fitzgibbon. This will also have to be changed, she said.

The club hosted last semester's Weddingless Reception and Senior Christmas Formal, both of which "went over really well," according to Fitzgibbon. "Mitchell's was the one place we knew we could go and get a lot of people to attend," she said. "I'm sorry to see them go."

The lease on the building was up on Jan. 15, but the building's owners forced Mitchell out of business early, he said. Mitchell said he did not know if the club would reopen, but added, "not under my ownership, anyway."

The building's owners, Mike Sellers and Tom Cavinder, are considering opening their own restaurant and entertainment spot, leasing it to another nightclub or restaurant operator, or finding a completely different use for the building, according to a South Bend Tribune article.

If Sellers and Cavinder find a way to open a new nightclub in the building by the end of January, the article continues, they will probably open with the already-booked Blue Oyster Cult performance.

They will also honor bookings for social events such as Notre Dame/Saint Mary's events. Fitzgibbon said she hoped the club would reopen.

HPC must plan events for funds

By LIZ PORTER
News Staff

Joe Cassidy, director of student activities, asked the hall presidents to submit proposals for non-alcoholic hall events in order to utilize a $12,000 University fund set aside for this purpose.

University resources, along with money from a federal grant, comprise the fund which will provide each dorm with $500 to hold one large social event. Dorms may pool their resources to hold larger functions.

The presidents generally supported the purpose of the fund, but said organizing the activities in the last weeks of their presidencies would be difficult.

With only six more weeks in office, Eric Emerson, co-president of Flanner Hall, said, "It will be a challenge to be creative, but it's a good initiative. It's up to the presidents to get the events going."

Jeff Dorschner, president of St. Edward's Hall, also supported the idea, but commented, "The hall presidents assumed the money would come at the beginning of the year, but we've been deceived."

In previous years, the presidents have been able to use the funds as they wished, and several used the money to fund more than one event.

The newly established Office of Alcohol and Drug Education, along with the Office of Student Activities, will direct the implementation of the new University fund. Dave Dannison, director of the new office, said he hoped to "help promote healthy attitudes about alcohol and drugs," through the resources provided.

Senator Brian Holst reported on the upcoming student body elections, as well as individual class elections.

The senate voted to maintain five senate districts, although some redistricting was necessary to accommodate the opening of Knott and Siegfried halls next fall. The new dorms will join District 2, comprised of Breen-Phillips, Cavanaugh, Farley, St. Edward's, and Zahm.

Keenan and Stanford will now be included in District 1 with Alumni, Holy Cross, Lewis, Sorin, Walsh, and Old College.

District 3 will be made up of Badin, Dillon, Fisher, Howard, Lyons, Morrissey, and Pangborn, with Carroll as a new addition.

Flanner, Grace, Pasquerilla West and Pasquerilla East will remain in District 4. District 5 will also exist as before, only including off-campus students.

Engineering initiates foreign study program in London

By NATASHA WILSON
Staff Reporter

Notre Dame engineering students, previously restricted by a rigid academic curriculum, will now have the opportunity to study abroad in the same manner Arts and Letters students have had for many years.

The College of Engineering will begin a six-week summer program at Notre Dame's facility in London, England this June.

Professors Edward Jerger and John Lucey of the Department of Aerospace and Mechanical Engineering will direct the program and teach the courses.

The program, which will run from June 27 to Aug. 5, "will give students a chance to study in a foreign culture and observe industry in another country," Jerger said.

"When they get out and start practicing engineering, they'll be practicing in an international technological community," Lucey said. The students will take two courses, three credit hours each, in a concentrated format, meeting two hours a day, three days a week.

Jerger and Lucey will teach ME 342, Engineering Economy, and ME 468, Engineering Aspects of Product Liability.

"These are two courses that we can tailor a little bit to the European situation," Lucey said.

He said the courses will include a study of the differences between laws governing product liability and taxes in England and those in the United States.

The students will also journey to important engineering facilities in England, he added.

"We plan to do the course work during the middle of the week and have several long weekends for travel, both structured and unstructured." He said they will visit the flood gates on the Thames River because of their unique structure, which cannot be found anywhere in the United States.

Jerger said he and Lucey have been trying to develop a foreign program for five years.

At first, he said, they envisioned a program for the fall and spring semesters, but could not fit it into the curriculum.

In this summer program students can take popular engineering elective courses abroad and still remain on schedule to graduate. Previously, when engineering students participated in foreign study programs, they would often miss required courses and credits, delaying their graduation, Lucey said.

"We're encouraged by the fact that Notre Dame has so many foreign programs which have been so successful," Jerger said.

Since engineering majors do not usually take foreign languages, London was the most

Sex on T.V. has created an unrealistic picture of sexual responsibility, a study released Tuesday said. Network television characters have increasingly replaced sexual innuendo with sexual activity, much of it casual and without consequence, according to the study. According to the study, the three networks broadcast 65,000 references to sexual behavior in the 1987-88 television season, an average of 27 references per hour. -Associated Press

Say those magic words: Second Semester Senior

Recently, a fan who reads my column religiously and thinks that I make Tolstoy look like a hack asked me, "Mike, why haven't you written anything lately?"

"I can't, Mom," I replied. "I'm a Second Semester Senior."

"Oh."
Some words and phrases have a power of their own. There are incantations, war cries, shibboleths and mantras. All are sources of magic and energy. Eastern spiritualists say "Ommm," Irish football fans say "Lou," Democrats say "Bush in '88."

The most powerful type of word, however, is the designation. The designation is a word or phrase that unites individuals into groups and gives them a common identity and purpose. Individuals become "Hoosiers," "Domers," or "The Dancin' Irish."

Those Notre Dame students who anticipate graduating in May have a designation of their own: They are "Second Semester Seniors."

The power of this designation is understood by all of us who smell the real world in the wind; we use it primarily as a justification ("I have two papers due tomorrow, but I'm going to the bars because, hey, I'm a Second Semester Senior") and as a challenge ("I know that you have two papers due tomorrow, but why aren't you going to the bars? Hey, you're a Second Semester Senior.")

I am the last person to condemn my peers for neglecting their studies and drinking too much, but at the risk of preaching I would like to suggest that both of these examples reveal a misunderstanding of the freedom which is to be found in the powerful phrase "Second Semester Senior."

The Second Semester Senior is a creature who can be understood in terms of one central attribute: responsibility. He hates it. A sense of responsibility comes from the feeling that you have a duty or owe something to others; the Second Semester Senior feels --with some justification --that he does not owe anything to anyone.

He has worked diligently, more or less, for at least three and a half years. Now he either has a job, which means that he has already been "rewarded" for his work in college and can now rest on his laurels, or he has no job, which means that his education has been a complete failure and there is no point in pursuing it any further.

In either case, the only reason for him to do any work at all is because he wants to.

It is ironic then that some misguided souls, through the power of being a Second Semester

Mike Naughton

Accent Editor

Senior, impose a new set of responsibilities on themselves. They recognize that their days of being irresponsibility incarnate are numbered; they respond by making it their duty to be irresponsible. They go out every night because they "have to" even if they would rather stay at home.

The pressure which they once felt from classes is nothing compared to the anxiety which compels them to drink even when they would rather not for fear of "missing a Notre Dame moment." Moments cannot be forced, and fun under compulsion is unlikely.

Because I have the freedom to be irresponsible does not mean that I am obligated to exercise that freedom.

After all, I'm a Second Semester Senior.

Where can you find a climate that supports individual achievement in the world of financial services?

Reagan: continue giving Contra aid

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Reagan told congressional leaders Tuesday he will seek $36.25 million in mostly non-lethal aid to Nicaraguan rebels, with $3.6 million of it set aside for arms and ammunition but held in abeyance pending a cease-fire.

Under the plan, Reagan would issue a certification on March 31 as to whether a cease-fire was in effect between the Contra rebels and the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua and whether other conditions had been met.

"If there is no cease-fire in place, then I would assume the president would feel the pressure has got to continue to be applied for release of further military assistance," House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois told reporters.

The aid package is designed to keep the Contras supplied for four months. At one time, Secretary of State George Shultz had said the administration planned to seek $270 million to cover an 18-month period.

"Now that it's down to proportion, we've got good grounds to sell the (House) membership, partly on the basis of what happens in a worst-case scenario when it goes down," Michel said. "You cannot divorce that issue from presidential politics in this country as we go into another election."

But House Democratic Whip Tony Coelho of California said, "It isn't going anywhere. It's just a political ploy to gather a few more votes."

he's got to do it his way. And I've got to defend my record and get my case to the people," he said.

However, Bush campaign aides saw nothing wrong with crossing swords with the CBS anchorman, long viewed with contempt by many Republicans.

"Any time any Republican gets into a fight with Dan Rather and wins, he's going to come out very well with Republican primary voters," said Lee Atwater, Bush's campaign manager.

Rather said on Tuesday night's newscast that "trying to ask honest questions is part of a reporter's job," adding that he respects Bush and the office of the vice presidency.

"I got powder burns," said former secretary of state Alexander Haig when asked if he had watched the confrontation. During Republican presidential debates, Haig has aggressively questioned Bush about his Iran-Contra role.

"I think in the near-term Bush came out ahead," said Haig. "But in the longer term, they'll both lose."

In Iowa, where presidential rival Bob Dole leads Bush in most polls, the Kansas senator's campaign chairman, Stephen Roberts, said running against Rather in the state was "not a bad bet."

Atwater said that even if the confrontation does not boost Bush enough to beat Dole in Iowa, it will help the vice president in the next big contest, the New Hampshire primary.

"And I guarantee you, it'll play stronger than grits in the South," he said.

During the nine-minute live segment on the evening news, Bush said, "You know what I'm hiding? What I told the president. That's the only thing. And I've answered every question put before me."

The group will reside in flats in London's Bayswater area. Each flat, equipped with bath and cooking facilities, will house five students. Two resident assistants will also live with the students, Lucey said.

The program cost of $3000 includes tuition, housing and round-trip air fare from New York. If less than 20 students participate in the program the University will subsidize the remaining expenses, Lucey said.

Sixteen students applied before the deadline last week. "There are still a couple of spots, so if somebody applied, we'd take four or five more," Lucey said. "We can handle 20 to 25 in the classroom over there."

Lucey said he expects the program to gain popularity next year, similar to the expansion of the Arts and Letters foreign program in London during its first few years.

"We hope eventually to get that kind of situation where we can be selective," Lucey said.

Morality and the Presidential race

Gary Hart. By now, we are all familiar with the images this man's name conjures: Caribbean cruises with young, attractive women. . . Parties with Don Henly in Aspen. . . Press stakeouts in Washington, D.C. But the Gary Hart affair needs to be examined in a much larger context, as its significance lies at the core of our political system. The context is one that has gone largely ignored, yet it concerns issues of the character and private morality which have, in fact, been discussed at great length in the press. What is at stake in this debate is how we are to choose the next president of the United States.

Chris Devron

Hart claims he reentered the race because he mistakenly allowed himself to be forced out by the press before the voters could decide his fate for themselves. He apologized for his lack of judgment and even confessed that he had been unfaithful to his wife in the past. Hart demands that the press now focus on his ideas and positions on the issues. If elected, he stated, he would not be the first president to be an adulterer, only the first to have publicly confessed that sin.

Hart argued that private morality has little to do with public morality. Some of our best presidents demonstrated a disregard for personal ethics. He asked that we not dismiss him because he sinned. Columnists write that Hart's ethics are not at issue. According to Gail Sheehy, Hart's problem is "recklessness." He suffers not for his sin, but for a "lack of good judgment." The Gary and Donna story is damaging only because it occurred so openly, as photographs taken aboard the "Monkey Business" indicate. Why should we trust a man, they ask, who made a choice of such bad judgment to be leader of the free world?

The actions of the Miami Herald give us reason to pause. But the ethics of responsible journalism can be discussed at another time. We now know that Gary Hart, Democratic candidate for president of the United States, committed adultery and we know this, in part, because of Hart's own challenge to the press. We had suspected for some time that Hart was a womanizer, even while we lack evidence. If this affair was an isolated incident, its significance would be lessened. For years stories and rumors abounded in Washington, and Hart made no effort to quell the charges or break off his personal contacts with other women. Hart's dilemma did not begin with the Donna Rice affair; it was merely confirmed.

The public debate concerning Hart's actions is improperly focused. Issues surrounding the affair have been clouded not only by the man himself, but by the press at large. We are left to draw our own conclusions. In doing so, we must ask some serious questions about the affair in particular and about the state of politics in general. If Hart had been more careful during his weekend rendezvous, would he be a better person? Perhaps. Good judgment, after all, is a quality we should demand of our leaders. Good judgment, however, has little to do with Gary Hart's real problem. More important to the debate is the issue of adultery itself. If we are good Christians, we should forgive Hart, and he is right to make that request. But should we vote for him?

Hart's claim that private and public morality have little to do with each other is patently false. It is impossible to separate a person along those lines. Adultery violates a bond which our community and our God consecrate as sacred. It objectifies men and women and degrades sex. As the truism goes, actions speak louder than words. Hart's actions tell us a great deal about how he views women, and the values of this society.

Does Hart's indiscretion have anything to do with how he will govern? As the presidency of Abraham Lincoln proves, personal ethics must be a consideration in the process of whom we choose to lead us. Here was a man who ordered a breach of the Constitution based on the personal and moral conviction that slavery is wrong. We can also look to Richard Nixon who still claims his only mistake was "not destroying the tapes." Clearly Nixon, like Hart, was guilty of more than just bad judgment.

Voters should compare Hart's actions, ideas and positions with others in the race. Moral and intellectual virtues are, however, closely related. Hart's argument that Kennedy's philandering, if true, did not preclude him from greatness is convincing, but needs to be placed in proper perspective. Kennedy was a powerful leader - one who stood for a public morality that included equal civil rights for minorities. On the other hand, if Kennedy was guilty as charged, he necessarily lacked, to some degree, that element of character by which we deem men and women to be morally virtuous. Had Kennedy been more virtuous, he would have been an even greater president.

The complexity of this debate concerns how much emphasis we should place on a politician's personal moral life. Hart claims that no emphasis is necessary - and that we cannot expect our leaders to be saints. To disqualify any candidate for committing adultery is obviously foolish. But to completely ignore a pattern of immoral activity is also unwise. Were Nixon's flaws confined to the public sphere? Most likely not. And we know that Lincoln's virtues were demonstrated beyond his private life. Hart's recent admission that his campaign accepted illegal donations proves a serious breach of personal ethics can often indicate a general disregard for ethics altogether.

Moral behavior, then, must be accounted for in any comparison of candidates.

When we elect a president we elect a man or woman - not a series of positions papers. Gary Hart is wrong to believe otherwise and so are the press who claim that bad judgment is the only character issue at stake here. The question of our time, and of all times, is not how to rule, but who should rule, as Plato and Aristotle rightly understood it. Indeed all human beings are sinful: it is precisely this condition which should motivate us to choose from among the best, most excellent men and women to serve as our rulers. Despite the Framers' diligence in constructing a constitutional government where power could not corrupt leaders, the history of the American system tells us that people, not laws, are ultimately responsible to insure the well-being of the state.

Hart's ideas offer nothing new or enlightening, so I do not reject him on the basis of ethics alone. I also take into account his erroneous view that our leaders can live two unconnected lives; one private, the other public. Should Gary Hart be the next democratic nominee for the president of the United States? The fact is that he is no more qualified to hold the office of president than Jim Bakker is qualified to serve as a minister.

Chris Devron is a junior government and philosophy major.

How you can help stop abortions

Dear Editor:

On Jan. 22, the fifteenth anniversary of the decision by the Supreme Court to legalize abortion, 46 students from Notre Dame and St. Mary's went to Washington D.C. We went to march and speak out for those who cannot speak for themselves - the unborn. I would like to personally thank those who went to the march for their commitment to the Right To Life movement. I would also like to address the college community about abortion. We must be conscious and informed about the issue because passivity, misconceptions and ignorance of the entire nation have already affected the destiny of 15 million babies that have been aborted since 1973. I ask that you think about the issue.

Did you know:
Abortion is legal for the entire nine months of pregnancy.

Every 21 seconds a baby is aborted. The Supreme Court has denied the father the right to protect his child from abortion.

In over 18 U.S. cities in 1980 the number of abortions performed was greater than the number of live births. Ninety-eight percent of all abortions are done because the women "do not wish to be pregnant at this particular time."

If you were unaware of the preceding facts, how can you genuinely stand behind your position on the issue? Before taking any decisive stance, we must become informed about the realities about abortion. If taking time to understand the issue to be informed and to discern the truth could save just one human being from imminent death, isn't it worth it?

Peter Himmelman proves he matters with Gematria

accent writer

What would you say if you could talk to the world?" Back in 1979, Island Records signed a virtually unknown group to a multi-album contract. This was quite adventurous for Island at the time, yet it turned out to be the right move. The group was U2.

Now, Island is again pushing another new artist. His name is Peter Himmelman. He is wonderful. I hope it doesn't take the world seven years to discover him. His latest release is entitled Gematria and this LP made my 1987 Top Ten Albums of the Year list.

Gematria was recorded in three days in a basement studio in Minneapolis, the hometown of Himmelman. I talked with Himmelman over Christmas break in Minneapolis, and he said that, during the recording session, he stayed up continuously for three days and nights. As a result, the album has a very spontaneous, reckless tone and a quick pace.

"Waning Moon" is the first single and could be called the epitome of the energetic, spark-filled rock music of Himmelman. His music sounds like an upbeat Robbie Robertson during the fast tracks and like a simpler version of Roxy Music during the ballads. But really, this album is unique and difficult to categorize. It is aimed at thoughtful and appreciative listeners. Himmelman obviously has a lot of things to say here.

In "Fight For the World," the chorus goes like this: "Rebel minds keep in time I say. Rebel minds fight, fight for the world."

This is appropriate, because Himmelman himself, in refusing to compromise his music, is indeed a "rebel mind." The philosophy behind most of his songs is, as he stated, "Do what you want. Do what you believe in. Do what you feel. Don't do what anyone else says."

"Salt and Ashes" is one of the slower cuts and is a very beautiful song, despite its subject of destruction. By contrast, "I Feel Young Today," the first cut, soars with joy.

The songs on this album and on Himmelman's debut LP, This Father's Day, are very personal, and Himmelman commented on this. He thinks that "if a song is really personal, then it's also really universal."

These insights surface throughout Gematria, an album which portends of truly great things to come from Peter Himmelman. Here are some more lyrics from his song "Does It Matter": Does it matter that a man has died.

Nobody shrugs, nobody cries. He's just another name. And we go and we go and we don't even know That it matters.

Peter Himmelman matters.

Broadcaster Criqui finds integrity at Notre Dame

Editor's note: Don Criqui, Notre Dame alumnus and NBC sports broadcaster, discusses his work and gives advice to Notre Dame students in the second part of a two-part interview.

Do you cover more college sports or more pro?

Professional, mostly National Football League. I'll also be very involved in the Summer Olympics.

What do you do during the off-season?

I'm on the air seven times a day here at WNBC (radio), and I also do commentary on the NBC radio network. I do a number of commercials, and I'm involved in outside businesses with two partners of mine who also went to Notre Dame but are involved in other areas.

Is it common for sportscasters to be involved in both radio and television?

Yeah, I think so. In the old days, everybody came into the business through radio. Now a lot of people start out in television as reporters or writers, but radio's still a very forceful media.

Do you prefer one over the other?

Not really. I like the whole mix. See, on television you're kind of structured. The game is the thing. On radio it's what you have to say. On this radio station, I'm paid to say what I think no matter how controversial. Whatever I want to say, that's what they want me to say. That isn't the case on television.

Have you ever gotten yourself into trouble because of that? Have people ever complained that you're too controversial?

Oh, you have people disagree with you, and that's good. The one thing you don't want is to be factually incorrect.

What are your favorite and least favorite parts of what you do?

As far as a favorite, I guess I just like the general doing what I do. As we say, if we didn't do this we'd have to get real jobs. Don't like? I guess there are certain travel things sometimes. It can be difficult. The load can be very heavy. It goes in streaks, like one week when I had to do a game in California on Sunday, speak at a big dinner in Orlando on Monday and be here early on Tuesday to do the radio stuff again. But every business has its time parameters you have to deal with.

Integrity is something that's sorely lacking in a lot of areas of collegiate sports.

I'd like to talk to you now about some of the people you've worked with. What is it like working with people who are ex-athletes, like Ahmad Rashad, Sonny Jurgenson and now Bob Trumpy? Are most color commentators former players?

Virtually every analyst I work with is an ex-athlete or maybe a coach. A lot of people don't always get along with ex-athletes. Many resent them coming into the business without paying their dues but I think they have paid their dues. They're experts because they were high level competitors. The important thing in your broadcast is what's best for your audience. Besides, unless the former athletes are good as broadcasters, they don't last very long. The important thing from my standpoint is to make sure that the mix is good. I set up the athlete so he can express himself, and ask questions to bring him out. The whole blend of play-by-play and analysis has to be good so that the audience enjoys it and you bring the most to the broadcast.

Over the years, have you crossed paths with many Notre Dame graduates as well? I know you worked with Paul Horning for awhile at CBS.

Yes, I worked with Paul. And Tim Ryan, who hired me for the student station, is now at CBS. I've also been on Phil Donahue's show here at NBC. There are a lot of people in the business around the country, and also a lot of guys in management areas.

I think Notre Dame sends people to a variety of things. Things go in trends a lot more at certain schools than they do at Notre Dame. One year, 60 percent of the graduates of Yale applied to Wall Street investment houses. I think Notre Dame has a very broad approach. You can do a lot of different things.

What is it like for you to call a Notre Dame game? Do you find yourself leaning toward one side?

No, not really. I mean, I like to see Notre Dame do well but what we root for more than anything else when we're doing a game is a close game that holds an audience. Blow-outs are hard to do because it's hard to hold audiences. Close games take care of themselves.

One vivid memory is of the first full network game I did. I did the NIT and Notre Dame played Army in a semi-final game. It was a national broadcast and there was some concern at CBS at the time: would I be biased toward Notre Dame? They got their answer because they got a lot of mail from people saying I was anti-Notre Dame and pro-Army.

Notre Dame has a reputation of winning and not cheating, of graduating its athletes in regular curriculum.

What is the most exciting event you've ever covered?

The most exciting things I've been to are my kids' games. That's where you get emotionally involved. When you're doing a big game, when you're talking to millions of people, it requires a tremendous concentration level. What I do is network broadcasting where you're dealing with a vast audience. In other words, in the Orange Bowl for example, there are rabid Oklahoma fans who don't want to hear anything good about Miami or anything negative about Oklahoma and vice versa, so you really have to balance it. You have to be very informed and to have a certain chemistry with the overall audience that they find acceptable. A lot of broadcasters can't reach that level. They're good on a local level, but when it comes to do it on a network basis, they're missing something. You have to know the audiences. They differ widely from place to place. An audience in Indianapolis is a lot different than an audience in New York.

Looking at Notre Dame now from the point of view of someone who's in the sports industry, how is the school perceived? What do people say about it?

It's an elite school from a competitive standpoint. I think Parseghian said it best when he retired and somebody asked him what he was most proud of. He said, "We won and we never cheated." Notre Dame has a reputation of winning and not cheating, of graduating its athletes in regular curriculum. In other words, they're somehow able to balance the impossible in this day and age: winning and maintaining their integrity in academic standards. Integrity is something that's sorely lacking in a lot of areas of collegiate sports.

Last question. What is your advice to someone at Notre Dame? What should they take out of it? What can prepare them for this -for any -field?

The best advice I would give anybody is that everybody has something they want to do more than anything else. But most people -I think the vast majority -end up accepting their second or third choice for whatever reason. My counsel would be to pick whatever you want to do most and pursue it with all your might. The more motivated you are, the better the chances that's what you're going to end up doing. You're going to get your first choice. The hardest part of any business is the first job. And the other thing, don't be afraid to accept a challenge. I think a lot of people I knew at Notre Dame wouldn't. You never fail. All you do is succeed in other ways if you take a chance. You have to be willing to go for your first choice and to take chances. The greatest thing you can ever trust is your own intuition. You come out of there educated and you come out of there with integrity and that's all you need. Your greatest ally really is yourself. You have to trust that.

Redskins look for ways to stop Elway

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO - "When I get to my man," said Dexter Manley, Washington's voluble defensive end, "I like to smash him right between the numbers."

"What happens if he only has one number?" Manley was asked.

"Ah hah," he replied, "you know something."

As the Super Bowl buildup began in earnest Tuesday, the man with one number, Denver Bronco No. 7, John Elway, was the overriding topic of conversation.

Could the blond Superman in the orange cape lift the Broncos to a Super Bowl victory over the final obstacle to glory they failed to scale last season?

Could the Washington Redskins win for the second time this decade by succeeding at their single mission: stopping him by hitting him right between the numbers - er, number?

At the first few interview sessions roughly two-thirds of the questions to members of both teams contained the word "Elway."

Elway and coaches Joe Gibbs of Washington and Dan Reeves of Denver, for example, were asked if the game will go as Elway goes. Both, of course, said no, although Gibbs qualified it by saying "we can't stop him, but we have to contain him."

Nonetheless, they noted that a contest between teams as closely matched as these could turn on a play in which Elway isn't involved, such as the one made by Jeremiah Castille. The Denver cornerback got the Broncos here by stripping Cleveland's Earnest Byner of the ball just as the Browns fullback was about to score the tying touchdown in the final minute of the AFC championship game.

"A game can be decided by just one play, one turnover, one break," Gibbs said.

"We have some guys who may get on the field for just three or four plays. One of those plays could be the one that turns the game."

And Redskins linebacker Monte Coleman noted that Elway, a throwback to the old triple threat, is really a quadruple threat. He can run, throw, even punt - and if he does none of those, just causing defenders to think about it is danger in its own right.

"If we pay too much attention to him, somebody else will hurt us," Coleman said. "We can all be looking at us and they can use their running game to shoot right by us."

West All-Star reserves named

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers and six other players were named to the Western Conference team as reserves for next month's NBA All-Star Game, the league announced Tuesday.

Other Western reserves for the Feb. 7 game in Chicago will be center Steve Johnson of Portland, guards Clyde Drexler of Portland and Alvin Robertson of San Antonio, and forwards Mark Aguirre of Dallas, Xavier McDaniel of Seattle and James Worthy of the Lakers.

The reserves were selected by Western Conference coaches. The starters, who were announced last week, were chosen by the fans.

Jabbar, the NBA's all-time leading scorer, will be making a record 17th All-Star appearance. Wilt Chamberlain, Bob Cousy and John Havlicek each played in 13 All-Star Games.

The Western Conference

starters are center Akeem Olajuwon of Houston, forwards Alex English of Denver and Karl Malone of Utah, and guards Magic Johnson and Lafayette Lever of Denver.

The Eastern Conference starters are center Moses Malone of Washington, forwards Larry Bird of Boston and Dominique Wilkins of Atlanta, and guards Michael Jordan of Chicago and Isiah Thomas of Detroit.

The Eastern reserves will be announced Wednesday.

Stanford leads two IH divisions

By CHRIS PAULISON
Sports Writer

With two-thirds of the regular season complete in men's Interhall basketball, the playoff picture is beginning to take shape.

Four teams are currently vying for two playoff spots in the league's Big 10 division. Stanford A-2 stands atop this division as the only team with an unblemished record through four games. Captain Chris Perozek explained why the Studs hold a one game lead over Alumni A-2, Pangborn, and Holy Cross.

"We rely on a balanced scoring attack fueled by swingman Gary Sass and point guard Ray Flannery. If we get continued good play from these two guys, I think we'll go places. Right now though, it is important to take one game at a time."

Holy Cross, who dropped their second game of the season to the Studs, is definitely a team to watch in this Big 10 division. The Hogs are led by Steve Belles and Ken Boener, guards who score in double digits consistently. Captain Tim Woods, along with the rest of this Holy Cross team, anxiously anticipate a rematch with Stanford. Such a bout could occur only in post season play.

Stanford A-1 continues its dominance in the Big Sky division, sporting a 4-0 record. Grace A-1(3-1) gained the upper-hand in the race for this division's second playoff invitation, with an eight-point victory over Off-Campus Team Rich(3-1) Monday night.

The ACC playoff hunt promises to finish with a great deal of excitement. This division boasts three very tough teams: Off-Campus, Morrissey and Sorin.

Last night Morrissey defeated Sorin by 11 points to secure the only perfect record in the ACC.

The Thunder, winners by impressive margins in each of their four victories, have had little trouble victimizing their opponents. In Thunder's last victory, a laugh over Dillon A-1, Brian Koehr, a 6'6" senior center, chipped in 18 points.

PW edges Lewis in IH hoops

By JEFF HEILERT
Sport's Writer

And then there was one. Pasquerilla West became the lone unbeaten team in women's Interhall basketball by knocking off Lewis 39-36 on Sunday afternoon.

PW (4-0) now holds a commanding 1 1/2 game lead over both Lyons and Lewis at the midway point of the season.

In a game full of streaks, it was actually PW who had to hold on at the end to secure the victory.

With 53 seconds remaining, Lewis' Teresa Buliavac hit a pair of free throws to cap off a 14-3 run and cut the PW lead to two at 35-33.

PW turned to its point guard Pandora Fecko to ice the victory. Already 6-7 from the foul line, Fecko calmly sank two more and ended Lewis' hopes for a comeback.

"Pandora is our floor leader out there," said PW coach Gary Sasse. "She is in control and really leads this team."

PW used solid play from forward Francine Kelly, clearing the court for her to go one-on-one. Kelly responded with six first-half points and was the key to an 18-17 PW lead at the intermission.

The turning point of the game was the third quarter. PW continued to press full-court but with more success than in the first half. The press forced four turnovers from the Lewis' guards in a five minute stretch. Four free throws by Fecko, and a jump shot at the buzzer by Heidi Hansan put an end to a 14-2 run by PW.

Trailing 32-19 after three quarters, Lewis showed it had not given up. It held PW scoreless for over six minutes. Meanwhile, Sue Lipka contributed six straight points for Lewis, with four coming off offensive rebounds. Lewis closed to within two, before Fecko put the game away from the free throw line.

Kelly finished with ten points on the day while Fecko was the game's leading scorer with 14. Sue Lipka and Teresa Buliavac led Lewis with ten points each.

In other action, Pasquerilla East evened its record at 2-2 with a 41-35 victory over Howard, now 1-2. Breen-Phillips also joined PE at 2-2 with a 29-24 win over the winless Walsh (0-4). Badin picked up its second win of the year with the help of a Farley forfeit. Badin moves to 2-2 while Farley falls to 1-2.

David Rivers leads the fast break against Kansas last Saturday. Rivers and the Irish take on Butler tonight at the JACC. Pete Skiko has the details at right.

Butler looks to upset Irish

By PETE SKIKO
Sports Writer

The Butler Bulldogs are hoping to catch a giant sleeping as they invade the Joyce ACC for tonight's men's basketball matchup at 7:30.

Notre Dame has the Butler contest sandwiched between some of the biggest games on its schedule. After last Saturday's huge, come-from-behind win over Kansas, Irish Head Coach Digger Phelps is wary of either letting down after the victory or looking ahead to Kentucky, Maryland, and Duke - teams that have seen their share of time in the top 25 this season.

"It has been a strange year in college basketball when you look at the scores every morning in the paper," said Phelps. "Nobody is invincible, and anyone is capable of upsetting anyone else. Look at Penn beating Lasalle, or Butler beating Iowa State. We certainly won't take anyone for granted."

In fact, Iowa State is the only ranked team that the 10-6 Bulldogs have faced this year, but they won the game 78-76 at Toledo, Ohio. Butler is among the top three teams in the nation in free-throw shooting, hitting an incredible 83 percent from the charity stripe.

Far and away, Butler's best player is fifth-year senior forward-center Chad Tucker. Tucker became the Bulldogs' all-time leading scorer Monday night in an 85-76 loss to Evansville. The 6-7 Cloverdale, Indiana, native scored 30 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in the game. He has 2,026 career points, and is averaging 23.7 a game, leading the team. Tucker also pulls down an average of 6.6 rebounds per game.

Tucker and 6-6 junior Darren Fowlkes provide most of the scoring punch for the Bulldogs. Fowlkes (16.9, 7.4) is the team's leading rebounder.

John Karaffa (5.5, 2.6), a 6-5 freshman, fills the other forward spot and the backcourt consists of 6-4 junior Thad Matta (4.1, 2.0) and 6-1 freshman John Shoup (4.4, 1.3).

Grace, Dogs stay atop IH hockey

By TIM SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

The coaches pinned up signs throughout the two dorms advertising the game. They made announcements at Masses. They even enlisted the help of women's dorms for fan support.

And in a heated battle between the two giants of the little guys, in front of a large inter-hall crowd, Alumni downed Cavanaugh to take sole possession of first place in the Blue (Small Dorm) Division of men's Interhall hockey.

The Dogs, now 3-0, scored a goal apiece in the first and second halves and counted on a strong defense to defeat the Cavemen 2-1. Sophomore Mike Flynn's second half goal proved to be the game winner.

"We went out and played a 'position' defensive game," said Alumni coach Mike Brach. "Even when it was tied at halftime, I told the guys to just keep playing the defense, and the offense would come."

Cavanaugh senior Grant Weidner and Dog freshman Terry Maguire scored the first half goals, as Alumni established itself as the pacesetter in the game.

"They really took it to us," said Cavanaugh player-coach Hugh Wade. "I was amazed at the number of people that were there."

Pangborn took a 3-1 decision over Sorin in the only other Blue Division game of the week. The Pangbornites, now 2-1, took sole possession of second place in the Division with the victory.

In the Gold (Large Dorm) Division, three teams are in the fight for the second playoff spot behind Grace. The Grace team, now 3-0, after a 7-1 shellacking of Keenan, appears to be set for at least a second place finish.

The biggest Gold game of the week was the Dillon - O-C contest. Dillon, undefeated entering the game, jumped out to a quick 3-0 lead in the game, paced by two goals from Ken Boehm. O-C, however made a strong comeback, and the game ended in a 5-5 deadlock.

Heidi Bunek (44) rejects a shot last night against Marquette. Bunek scored a Notre Dame-record 32 points last night as the Irish routed the Warriors, 88-51. Teresa Kelly has the story below.

Stevenson will sit out for two weeks

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

Notre Dame head basketball coach Digger Phelps suspended junior forward Mark Stevenson Tuesday for "disciplinary reasons and for using poor judgment."

The suspension, which will last two weeks, follows Stevenson's arrest early Sunday morning on charges of underage drinking.

The arrest was Stevenson's second in two months. He is scheduled to appear in court Feb. 15 on the charge of a minor consuming alcohol, a Class C misdemeanor, and stands trial April 8 on a charge of criminal conversion, a Class A misdemeanor.

In a brief statement released Tuesday afternoon, Phelps said that Stevenson "will be permitted to practice with the team during that period, but he will not dress for any games during the next two weeks."

Stevenson will miss tonight's game against Butler, Sunday's game at Kentucky, the Feb. 2 home game against Maryland and the Feb. 7 game at Duke.

The first game he will be eligible for is Feb. 10 at home against Fordham. The 6-6 swingman had been averaging 12.4 points and 4.0 rebounds in 12 games as a starter for the 11-4 Irish.

Stevenson was arrested Sunday morning at approximately 2:30 when a St. Joseph County police officer noticed the car Stevenson was driving pulling into North Village Mall at a speed too high for the night's icy conditions.

A second officer stopped Stevenson, and a blood alcohol test showed Stevenson to be just under the legal limit.

Stevenson was released on a $100 cash bond.

Bunek sets scoring record as Irish rout Warriors, 88-51

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

She just blew them away. As the Notre Dame women's basketball team pounded Marquette 88-51, the only excitement was whether forward Heidi Bunek would break the Irish single-game scoring record of 31 points.

So much for last minute heroics. Bunek tossed in her 31st and 32nd points with eight minutes left in the contest, breaking the record held by Trena Keys (vs Northern Illinois, Dec. 15, 1985) and Shari Matvey (vs Chicago State, Jan 11, 1980 and vs Mount St. Joseph, two weeks later).

"I thought Heidi played well," said Irish head coach Muffet McGraw, who picked up her 100th career win with the rout.

"I thought Heidi played well," said Irish head coach Muffet McGraw. "She exploited the mismatch very well and I thought we did a good job getting her the ball."

Bunek downplayed the scoring record, attributing the win to the entire team.

"We needed to win this game pretty bad," she said. "Tennessee's going to be in here next Wednesday, and we need to earn some respect. We can get respect by blowing some teams out and playing our game."

"Once our game comes, then we know we can win."

With their record currently at 12-5, the Irish game seems to be coming.

Both teams started out slow and sloppy, with Notre Dame holding a small lead throughout most of the first half. The Irish began clicking late in the half and were able to put together an 18-point margin, 39-21, at the break.

"We came out just a little bit complacent," said McGraw. "We got a little more intensity towards the end of the half. Our players were better. We needed that."

With the score at 41-25 early in the second half, the Irish went on a 15-point run. The Warriors did not score for almost five minutes, and the game was essentially over. All that remained was the record, and Bunek, with her last of many layups for the evening, retired to the bench with the game and the record in hand. For the game, Bunek shot 12 of 18 from the floor and 8 for 11 from the foul line. Coming into this week's action, she was ranked 13th in the nation in field goal percentage.

"We knew we had the advantage," said Bunek. "With the perimeter shooting we have, that changes the defense and opens up the inside for us."

Part of the reason for the second half surge was McGraw's halftime adjustment. The Irish went to the running game, and the uptempo play was too much for the Warriors.

Although the scoring was not as balanced as usual (Sandy Botham scored 14), the Irish rebounding could not have been more even. Bunek and Botham each pulled down seven, and teammates Lisa Kuhns, Sara Liebscher and Krissi Davis each totalled six. Throughout the game, the Irish used their height advantage to its fullest extent.

"I thought our players were better," McGraw said. "We should've won, and we did."

McGraw cleared the bench for most of the second half, and the substitutes held their own against the Warriors, just as the starters had.

"That was a good time for the bench to play," she said. "They deserved it. They've been working hard for a long time, and we've had some close games lately and they haven't gotten in to play. I like to give them as much time as possible."

The victory was the 100th career win for McGraw, who has a 100-46 record after five seasons at Lehigh and this year at Notre Dame. The Irish will take on defending national champion Tennessee at home on Wednesday, a game that could earn the Irish some of that respect.

Win over Jayhawks not enough for NCAA bid

David Rivers wanted this one.

When the senior captain turned to the crowd Saturday afternoon in a rare attempt to stir the Joyce ACC rowdies, he showed a national audience that he was ready to wake up the echoes - echoes of last year's conquering of North Carolina, echoes of a brilliant four-year career and echoes of the biblical David-slew-Goliath comparisons which inevitably would be written about this matchup between two legitimate Player of the Year candidates.

Believe it or not, Kansas entered Saturday's game a six-point underdog. The Jayhawks were ranked 16th in the nation before Rivers canned 14-of-15 free throws to lead the Irish comeback. Notre Dame was not mentioned in last week's Top 20, not even among the teams "also receiving votes."

Why were the Irish favored by six, then? Three reasons - David, Digger and the "Sixth Man" crowd.

Few college basketball players are having the kind of year David Rivers is. Though his supporting cast has been suspect at times, and he does not play for a Top 20 team, Rivers is as worthy a college Player of the Year candidate as anyone in the game. Twenty-four points, five assists and more rebounds per game than a 6-0 point guard probably ought to get have all added up to a do-it-all season and likely first-team all-America status. And Saturday when David's foul shots were as accurate as his namesake's slingshot, Rivers gunned down the Player of the Year favorite, Kansas' 6-10 center Danny Manning.

Phelps and the vocal Joyce ACC partisans have also displayed their talents to national audiences in memorable upsets of highly-ranked opponents. Green carnations and split suits may be the focus of television cameras, but few coaches are as adept as Phelps when it comes to preparing his team for a big game.

Phelps himself has said that nobody leaves Notre Dame number-one, a tribute to the student body faithful, but the Jayhawks couldn't even leave in the Top 20.

As important as Rivers, Phelps and the crowd were, the rest of the Irish rose to the occasion in impressive fashion against the Jayhawks. Keith Robinson, Scott Paddock and Gary Voce packed it in to hold Manning, the same guy who poured in 40 against the Irish last season, to just 13 field-goal attempts.

But despite the impressive win, there are flaws in Irish basketball which have become all-too-apparent and all-too-threatening to a bid with the NCAA Tournament. While the Kansas and Louisville wins showed the Irish can play with most anyone, the Lafayette loss showed they could lose to anybody, too.

Notre Dame travels to Kentucky and Duke on consecutive Sabbaths and it will need a lot more than prayers from the faithful to conquer the ninth-ranked Wildcats and survive the fifth-ranked Blue Devils and their fans. Several bad habits will have to be shaken for the Irish to guarantee a return for a fourth straight appearance in the NCAAs.

Robinson can't put the ball down in traffic, Paddock can't hack for three fouls in three seconds, Voce can't quietly coast and collect just three rebounds in a game (like he did against the Jayhawks), Rivers can't be asked to be a one-man-show every time, and Mark Stevenson can't challenge the law like he challenges opposing forwards.

While the sweet memory of Saturday's win is still fresh, so is the imposing challenges of the next two weeks - Kentucky, Maryland and Duke. Mark Stevenson's two-week suspension adds another obstacle for the Irish to climb, and it certainly could not have come at a more inopportune time. But Phelps' decision was the best one that could be made, regardless of Notre Dame's upcoming opponents.

Although the opening round of the Tournament is here at Notre Dame and the Irish should be there if they play up to Saturday's standard, the road which they must travel to get there is a lot longer than their daily walk over to the Joyce ACC.
