Would the real UMO C please stand?

Wearing pantyhose over his head and standing before an egg-soaked banner, sophomore Phil Marzolf proudly raises his hand in the UMO C salute -- his fingers curled to form the letter "U" which stands for "ugly." Marzolf came from behind after a diligent campaign to win the dubious honor.

"Underdog" wins U.M.O.C.

Phil Marzolf swept to victory in the Ugly Man on Campus competition, easily outdistancing all competition while raising over $500 for charity, said organizer Michele Feic.

Feic, who ran the UMO C competition with Martha Wendel, said that the event raised a record $1750.44. Donations were taken during the week of An Tostal, with candidates receiving a vote for each penny they raised.

Marzolf raised $526.00. Second-place finisher Mike "Coma" Moran took in $338.44, nudging out Music Professor Carl "Chip" Stam, who garnered $311.21.

Feic said the money raised would go to the Notre Dame/Jane M. Beres Lukemia Foundation. In the past, money has gone to various other charities.

Candidates raised the money by various methods, including going door-to-door and begging at the Senior Bar, said Feic.

Marzolf was "really happy to win the award. We felt that we were the underdogs at the beginning, but pulled it out in the end."

Marzolf attributed his victory to the help of his staff of 15 to 20 friends who went door-

Dukakis, Jackson disagree

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA -- Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson differed Monday over whether any concessions should be made to terrorists holding Americans hostage, while a new survey said Dukakis appeared headed for another big-state presidential primary victory in Pennsylvania.

"You never make concessions to terrorists -- ever," Dukakis told reporters during a final campaign swing across the state before Tuesday's primary.

Jackson rejected what he called "material concessions" to terrorists but did not rule out political accommodation. He also said he could conceive of situations where he would grant safe passage to hostage-takers and added, "I choose negotiation over blind bloody confrontation."

"If we are going to deter terrorism, we must address the underlying causes of terrorism," he said after an appearance at a high school in Pittsburgh. "Terrorism does not emerge out of the blue."

The candidates agreed that in hostage situations, the government ought to talk to people who could bring about the release of persons being held.

U.S. policy holds that American officials "will talk to any official or group about the safety and release of hostages but we will not make concessions," according to the State Department.

But Jackson insisted, "The fact is that our government has talked with terrorists and has negotiated, in some instances successfully. It is good as a policy, but there must be always flexibility in the policy. . . . We ought to take every initiative we can to gain the freedom of the American hostages in Beirut."

Eight Americans are held hostage by Moslem extremists in Beirut.

The discussion of tactics for dealing with terrorists was an abrupt shift in a campaign debate which had been focused on economic issues, particularly how to assist Pennsylvania's ailing steel industry.

Dukakis was aiming for his fourth straight primary victory in a contest with 178 delegates at stake.

Vice President George Bush, who could clinch a convention majority with a victory in Pennsylvania, compared his campaign rebirth after an Iowa caucus defeat to the revival of Pittsburgh, a once-strapped steel town.

"I know what it's like to be knocked to the canvas," he said, adding that his political comeback was "a parallel to what you demonstrated here."

The latest Associated Press delegate count gave Bush 1,081-58 short of the 1,139 needed for the nomination at the GOP convention next August. His only remaining rival, former television evangelist Pat Robertson, has 31 delegates.

Court to rethink affirmative action

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- A deeply split Supreme Court said Monday it will consider throwing out a key civil rights decision used to fight racial discrimination.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices took the unusual step of expanding the scope of a North Carolina racial-harassment case to consider limiting the ability of minorities to sue private citizens for monetary damages.

Critics said the announcement could have a major psychological impact on minorities, raising fears that a newly solidified conservative majority on the court is willing to consider dismantling other civil rights victories.

In other action, the court: -turned away the first "dial-a-porn" case ever to reach it, letting stand a ban on sexually explicit telephone message services in Arizona.

-agreed to decide whether wardens of federal prisons should have sweeping power to say what publications inmates may read.

The court said it will use the racial-harassment case as a vehicle to weigh overturning a 1976 ruling that expanded the right of minorities to sue over alleged discrimination.

Justice John Paul Stevens, in a sharply worded dissent, said minority groups may feel betrayed by the court's willingness to consider discarding an important civil rights precedent.

He said the action is unwise activism and will "have a detrimental and enduring impact on the public's perception of the

Rescue continues on USS Bonfish

Associated Press

NORFOLK, Va. -- One of the Navy's last diesel-electric submarines wallowed helplessly on the surface Monday awaiting a salvage vessel after an underwater explosion and toxic fire injured 22 sailors and left three missing.

The 30-year-old USS Bonfish, its remaining crew evacuated to shore bases, floated alongside the frigate USS McCloy about 160 miles off Florida, said Chief Petty Officer Terry Borton, a spokesman at Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk.

There was no apparent danger that the submarine, which carries only conventional weapons, would sink, he said.

"The decision made was that no one goes aboard" until a specialized submarine rescue ship, the USS Petrel, arrived later in the day, Borton said.

Specialists on the Petrel, based at Charleston, S.C., with the Bonfish, "will make an assessment when it is safe to board the Bonfish. They have the expertise and the equipment to test the toxicity of the air" inside the boat, said Lt. Fred Henney, another fleet spokesman.

It was not known if the missing men were aboard the sub or in the water.

The explosion occurred Sunday afternoon in the boat's battery compartment while the Bonfish was submerged on a routine training mission, said Borton.

The explosion triggered a fire that filled the 219-foot vessel with smoke and toxic fumes. The sub surfaced and Cmdr. Mike Wilson ordered it evacuated.

The frigate USS Carr, which also was in the training exercise, took aboard 89 of the Bonfish's 92 crewmen. The McCloy, which also was training nearby, reached the Bonfish before nightfall, the Navy said.

Also steaming to the scene and expected to arrive Tuesday was the salvage ship USS Hoist from the Little Creek Amphibious Base in Norfolk.

The Bonfish was launched in 1958 from New York Shipbuilding in Camden, N.J. it is powered on the surface by three 1,500-horsepower diesel engines that drive a single propeller and charge batteries. While submerged, the batteries power two electric motors.

The Bonfish and its two sister ships, the Barbel and Blueback, are among the last of the Navy's diesel-electric submarines and are used principally to mimic Soviet submarines in training exercises. The Soviets still operate about 100 diesel-electric boats.

The 22 injured were transferred to the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy, which steamed to Mayport, Fla. From there they were flown to the Naval Hospital in Jacksonville. The other crewmen were taken to Mayport by the Carr and flown to the Charleston Air Force Base.

Panamanian dissidents are planning to undertake a military operation against strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega by the beginning of next week, an opposition leader said Monday. Jane Fonda will be extended an official welcome when she comes to visit the town of Waterbury, Connecticut. The city's Board of Alderman defeated a resolution against welcoming Jane Fonda when she comes to film part of the movie "Union Street" this summer. The vote was a setback for the anti-Fonda campaign, led by a group of veterans still bitter over the movie star's 1972 trip to Hanoi. The proposed resolution stated that the city would not extend Fonda any official welcome, "symbolic or otherwise." -Associated Press

ND shows ex-Nazi what holiness really is

"I want only to repent, your Holiness," the ex-Nazi pleaded. "Is salvation still available for purchase?"

The Pope flashed a pious look of disgust and whispered, "Sshh! Indulgences are out of the question. The sign on the Vatican steps explicitly says, 'Minors and Nazis not served.'" Reaching into the Papal Desk, the Pope pulled out a scroll and handed it to the man. "But your cause is not lost, Mr. Waldheim. Take this list of virtues and search. You must find virtue in others to see and feel it in yourself."

Kurt Waldheim, current Austrian president and former United Nations Secretary General, looked perplexed. "But I'm a politician, your Holiness," he said. "You must direct me to virtuous surroundings. Where can I go?"

The Pope rose for the benediction: "Make a pilgrimage to the University of Notre Dame. The path to virtue winds there. Go in peace, now, to love, to serve, and to leave a donation as you leave."

After that controversial private interview last year, Waldheim, who had been accused of signing letters to send Jews away to concentration camps during the Holocaust as well as of covering up his Nazi career, caught the next plane to the Michiana/Holy Land Regional Airport.

Waldheim's Notre Dame courtesy guide, one of ND's less virtuous students who chose the guide position to fulfill some community service hours, met Waldheim and asked him which part of the bastion of virtue he would like to see first.

Consulting the Holy Papal Virtue Scroll, Waldheim shouted, "Take me to Patience, and make haste."

The guide left Waldheim inside the Department of Patience on the fifth floor of O'Shag. Waldheim left reciting "If your string is in a knot, Patience will untie it" between getting shoved and cussed at on his way through the mobs and riots of checkmarking lines.

Outside of O'Shag, when Waldheim asked where to find Modesty, the guide said, "I can't help you there. But we certainly have pride. Go Irish!"

"Isn't pride one of the seven deadly sins?" Waldheim inquired.

"Um er um. . . Tradition is what I meant; we've got a proud tradition. Just look at that beauty," the guide said, pointing toward the Golden Dome. "That's $300,000 worth of solid, gold-plated tradition up there."

"It is indeed something to be proud of," Waldheim replied. "Now show me Moderation."

"You're in luck. The homily at today's mass at Sacred Heart is about Moderation. Since we have a few minutes, let's head back to the dorm for a happy hour before mass."

Brian Conway

Assistant Viewpoint Editor

Following mass, Waldheim exited Sacred Heart with a look of less-than-moderately astonished admiration. "What a wonderfully ornate and beautiful structure of a building," he gasped. "It's as gorgeous inside as outside. Now, my young guide, show me Piety."

"Piety!" the student yelped, "you were just in church."

"Oh, yeah. I guess I did notice some piety in the midst of admiration for such flamboyant decoration. . . OK, the last virtue on the Scroll is Generosity."

Next Waldheim found himself in the Office of Financial Aid. "Please teach me about Generosity, sir. How do you help the poor?"

The financial aid officer snapped, "Poor? Poor? What do poor people have to do with generosity? They have nothing we want; the poor can't even contribute much to our bookstore. We're a private Catholic university; we can't be helping the poor."

"I think I understand now," Waldheim said thoughtfully as his tour ended, and he waited at the library circle for a ride to the airport. "I'm beginning to feel virtuous already, but I still don't feel fully absolved. I'd like to meet the man I've heard so much about: your fuehrer, Father Hesburgh. Where is he?"

The ND courtesy guide pointed straight up. Waldheim wasn't sure whether the student aimed toward the fourteenth floor library suite or beyond.

MBA Club elects first woman President ever

By BRADLEY GALKO
Staff Reporter

For the first time in its history, the MBA association has elected a woman as president for the upcoming year.

Gretchen Grieb, graduate business student in her second year, was elected president of MBA association by the first year students of the college of masters of business administration.

Grieb and her opponents were nominated by fellow students "based on their perception" of how well she would perform the duties of the office.

The duties of the president include coordinating activities for the college, seeking out more firms to interview at the college, and making a better name for the school, said Grieb.

One of her chief goals, she says, is to "do all I can to make our reputation better... (because) the program is very young and a lot of people don't know about it."

Grieb said her future plans for the school include contacting alumni of the MBA school, as well as other university alumni, in an attempt to get some of them to come to Notre Dame as speakers or as interviewers at the college.

She also said that she was interested in organizing another "case competition" in the fall. Such a competition, which is held annually in the spring, allows MBA students to test their skills by presenting a hypothetical legal case before an expert panel, given 24 hours to prepare for the presentation.

She also would like to give the MBA students more "hands-on experience" through a business communications program or workshop designed to help students at "getting up and talking in front of a group of people."

Grieb was a member of Notre Dame's 1985 graduating class which she says gives her "a good idea of how the University works," as well as interactions between students and professors. She described herself as a "fan of Notre Dame" because, she says, she "likes the people it attracts."

Al Arealo, vice-president of the MBA association, and Lisa Phipps, secretary and treasurer of the MBA association, were also elected on April 7 along with Grieb.

Senate OK's bylaw suspension

By JENNIFER GRONER
News Staff

In its last meeting of the semester, the Student Senate voted to suspend a provision in the bylaws of the undergraduate constitution that prohibited funding to non-service organizations whose members did not pay dues.

The by-law was formed to insure that organizations would give an accurate account of the number of their members when applying for funding by requiring members to make a monetary contribution. Because the by-law was passed so late in this year, the senate is allowing non-service organizations to receive student activity funding next year without requiring members to pay dues, but the by-law will be reinstated for the following year of 1989-1990.

The Senate also approved the appointed student government cabinet and the student activity fee budget for the 1988-89 academic year. In addition, Mike Carrigan was approved as parliamentarian.

In addition, preliminary results of the student government survey/questionnaire on the Task Force reports were also announced. The official results will be released on Wednesday of this week.

The last meeting of the senate for this semester was delayed last night because of poor attendance which resulted in a lack of a voting quorum.

A quorum was eventually achieved after several phone calls were made. According to student body vice president Mike Paese all of the members of the senate were contacted prior to the meeting to encourage them to attend. "I am sort of angry, everyone knew of the importance of this meeting," Paese said of the delay.

Student body president Tom Doyle also commented saying, "I think this makes the problems that could arise in the future painfully obvious. We will not tolerate this next year. We need everyone to attend, and the meetings to start on time. This is the only way we can make the meetings run efficiently."

Defense testimony barred

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- The judge in the Iran-Contra case barred defense testimony Monday at a pretrial hearing because lawyers for Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North and two co-defendants violated the ground rules of the proceeding.

Before beginning a hearing on whether independent counsel Lawrence Walsh impermissibly used the compelled congressional testimony of the three defendants, U.S. district Judge Gerhard Gesell sternly warned North, former National Security Adviser John Poindexter and businessman Albert Hakim about complying with his orders.

Since lawyers for the three defendants did not give Walsh's office timely notice of the testimony it proposed to submit at the hearing, Gesell said the defense would not be able to present a witness.

"The independent counsel complied with the letter to the order, the defense ignored the order" and "decided to engage in some kind of outreach program," the judge said, referring to defense attempts on Friday to subpoena documents from Walsh's office.

Gesell stayed the subpoenas 45 minutes after they were served on Walsh and eight members of his staff.

"The orders of the court are going to be complied with," Gesell said.

"We are going to proceed, whether the atmosphere is one of confrontation and name-calling or not," the judge told the defendants and their lawyers, who had accused Gesell in court papers of setting up a procedure that "makes a mockery" of their clients' rights.

Gesell reminded the defendants that under the rules of criminal procedure he had "exclusive responsibility" to conduct the trial and pretrial proceedings.

Walsh contended in court papers last week that the defense violated Gesell's April 13 order by missing last Thursday's deadline for giving him information about the witness it proposed to present at the hearing.

Barry Simon, one of North's lawyers, denied that the defense had violated the court order.

When Monday's hearing got under way, Walsh took the witness stand and described elaborate procedures used to prevent investigators and prosecutors from exposure to the testimony that North, Poindexter and Hakim gave to Congress last year under limited grants of immunity from prosecution.

The defense contends that forcing the three men to stand trial would violate their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

Electrician now a martyr

Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, occupied West Bank -- Salim Shaar always liked fixing things. He spent the last afternoon of his life laying new tiles on the family porch and wiring new lights.

He planned to finish the job the next day, after a morning of throwing stones at Israeli soldiers. But a soldier thought he saw a firebomb in Salim's hand, and the next time Salim crossed the porch he was carried, with a bullet hole in his head.

On an afternoon two weeks later, members of the family sat at home sipping strong Arab coffee and talking about the shy, 23-year-old electrician, Bethlehem's first martyr of the Arab rebellion that began nearly five months ago in the Israeli-occupied lands.

"This uprising changes everyone," said Salim's father, Khalil. "It turns a sane man into a crazy man. It turns a shy man into an angry man."

The clearest evidence of the change in Salim is in his diary, a frayed notepad from a souvenir shop lovingly preserved by his family. It speaks of his growing desperation.

"I don't dream about toys anymore, mother," Salim wrote in an entry directed to his mother, Fatmah, several weeks before his death. "When they killed my friends I grew up a thousand years."

When the violence began Dec. 8, Salim was a good-natured young man devoted to his job, who often stopped at the homes of neighbors after work to see if anything needed fixing, his family says.

"People appreciated him, and his work made him happy," said his brother Mohammed, 21. "He didn't have any great ambitions."

Israelis cheer death sentence

Associated Press

JERUSALEM -- A judge sentenced John Demjanjuk on Monday to die for Nazi war crimes and said the retired Ohio autoworker personally killed tens of thousands of people as the sadistic death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible."

Hundreds of spectators jumped to their feet and applauded. Some shouted "Bravo!" and others "Death! death!" Survivors of the Holocaust, in which 6 million Jews were killed, cried and embraced each other.

Judge Zvi Tal said Demjanjuk's crimes at the Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland could "never be forgiven by the hearts of men or be obliterated from memory.

The blood of the victims still cries out to us."

"Ivan the Terrible" operated the gas chambers at Treblinka, where 850,000 Jews were killed in 1942-43. Demjanjuk was convicted last week.

The judge, who was born in Poland and lost his parents in the Holocaust, said Demjanjuk "served as an arch henchman who with his own hands killed tens of thousands of human beings. He humiliated and degraded his victims."

Minutes before the sentence was read, Demjanjuk shouted in Hebrew: "I'm an innocent man!"

Demjanjuk, 68, was in a wheelchair because of back problems. He is a Ukrainian Orthodox Christian and crossed himself repeatedly and muttered, apparently in prayer.

The 14-month trial in a converted movie theater was only the second in Israel of someone charged with Nazi crimes. More than 250,000 people attended and sessions were broadcast live on radio and television.

Adolf Eichmann, who directed Adolf Hitler's program for exterminating Jews, was tried in Israel and hanged in 1962.

Court spokesman Yossi Hassin said Demjanjuk also probably would be executed by hanging "if the sentence is upheld on appeal."

John Demjanjuk Jr., the defendant's 22-year-old son, sobbed silently. He said the family had expected a death sentence and would appeal within days.

Soldiers tighten security

Associated Press

JERUSALEM -- Police arrested Jerusalem wholesalers Monday who were said to be helping the Palestinian rebellion in the occupied lands, and soldiers confiscated identity cards of several dozen Arabs accused of inciting violence.

Military spokesmen said a navy patrol craft sank a rubber boat off the Lebanese coast before dawn, killing an undetermined number of Palestinian guerrillas. Israel radio said two guerrillas were in the boat.

Israel radio said loss of their documents would prevent the Gaza Strip Palestinians from entering Israel. It said the Arabs also were ordered to check in with Gaza police twice a day.

At least 173 Palestinians have been killed since riots began Dec. 8 among the 1.5 million Arabs of the occupied West Bank and Gaza, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 war. An Israeli soldier and Jewish settler also have been killed.

Violence has declined in the past few days and Palestinians are expressing frustration with the failure of underground leaders to provide enough financial aid to offset economic sanctions imposed by the Israelis.

"The Palestinians are asking where is all the support money the underground leadership said it would provide," said Mubarak Awad, an Arab-American who promotes non-violent resistance to Israeli rule.

He added, however: "the people are frustrated, but they aren't giving up."

Soldiers ordered shops in Bethlehem and Jerusalem to stay closed Monday afternoon. Underground leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization leaders told them to open.

Soldiers in Bethlehem welded shut the doors of six shops that followed PLO instructions. In Jerusalem, police arrested 14 merchants who opened their shops.

"Whoever is given an order must follow it," said Avi Cohen, a senior Jerusalem police official who watched riot police and officers on horseback close the stores on the Street of the Prophets near the walled Old City.

The 14 shop owners could face up to two years in jail. They opened their stores across from the Damascus Gate at 2 p.m., abiding by the PLO order, and police closed them three minutes later.

Israeli authorities want Arab merchants to open all day, but leaders of the rebellion have ordered stores opened only in the afternoon. Army instructions Monday were that shops on the Street of the Prophets remain closed.

Cohen said: "Indictments will be handed up in a few days, and the matter will be brought before the court."

A merchant who locked his shop while watched by police said: "There's no law which says when you must open or close."

Crowds of shoppers patronized open shops on nearby streets.

When asked why the Street of the Prophets was singled out, Cohen replied: "You have to start somewhere." But Nabil Feidy, a merchant on Saladin Street close by, said those arrested were wholesalers.

Stam, who directs the Glee Club and Chorale, was upset about his loss, noting that he was the early favorite in the UMOC competition but was overtaken at the end.

"We ran a clean campaign, but we came in third," said Stam. "But I know that I'm truly ugly."

Stam said that funds were raised at collections after Glee Club and Chorale rehearsals. He noted that most of his donations were just pennies and nickles, and not the large ($10 and $20) bills which some of his competition received.

Stam resorted to other fund raising means, notably including swallowing a goldfish in South Dining Hall. "I'll probably send a picture (of the goldfish swallowing) to Mom -- she'll gag," said Stam.

Competition is already heating up for next year's UMOC competition. Said Stam, "There's always next year. I will clearly be as ugly then as I am this year."

Poem: Shakespeare's work or much ado about nothing?

Associated Press

LONDON—By thee or not by thee? That was the question that swirled around a poem an Oxford University professor said is by William Shakespeare but other scholars rejected as false.

"I'm convinced it is by Shakespeare," said Oxford's professor of poetry, Peter Levi, as he held up a photocopy of the untitled poem at the center of the tempest.

Levi called a news conference Monday—four days after his claim emerged in a London newspaper—to introduce a 28 page book he has written to prove the poem was written by The Bard.

Counters Professor Stanley Wells, director of the Shakespeare Institute at Birmingham University said: "I do not think for one moment it is by him."

The controversy has spread to the Huntington Library in San Marino, Calif., which has the disputed poem. Some experts claim that the poem has been known of since 1801, and some say it's not up to Shakespearean standards.

Levi has support from a manuscript scholar, Eric Sams, who says the poem may even be in Shakespeare's handwriting.

"I don't terribly mind what happens to my reputation," said Levi. "It would be a terrible act of cowardice not to have printed as a poem of Shakespeare what other people were too idle or too silly to notice."

He said he first read the untitled poem when he asked the Huntington Library for photocopies of several manuscripts for his Shakespeare biography.

The poem is pasted in the back of a manuscript volume containing a play by John Marston, a dramatist contemporary of Shakespeare, and bears initials that could be "WSH" or "WSK."

"I think it is 'W. Sh.' Otherwise why would Marston have written it?" Levi said.

"Without that signature I would not have been absolutely certain, but no one disputes that the writing is Marston's and I believe he was appending the initials of the poem's author."

Asked why the poem had been neglected since Shakespeare died in 1616, Levi commented: "I can't imagine. The verses have movement like the end of 'The Tempest.' They recall 'As You Like It' and 'Antony and Cleopatra.'

ND Award Finalist Announced

By HEIDI SCHLUMPF
News Staff

Senior Tim Dempsey was chosen as a finalist for the Robinson Social Service Award for his work with inmates and ex-offenders.

The award honors five students each year who have performed outstanding public service in the past 12 months and have developed innovative approaches in community service.

Although Dempsey was not selected as one of the five to receive $1,500 for a project proposed in their applications, Dempsey did qualify as a finalist.

Dempsey, a major in English and philosophy from Arlington, Va., lives at Dismas House, a half-way house where students live with ex-offenders. He also serves as a volunteer at Hotline, a crisis intervention service in South Bend.

"I think social service work is important because it's a way of putting my religious convictions into action," Dempsey said.

In addition to living at Dismas House, Dempsey participates in the Inmate/Outmate Program at the Indiana State Penitentiary at Michigan City. He also has given presentations about Dismas House to teachers at Westville Prison, students at St. Joseph's High School and classes at Notre Dame.

Malloy chose Dempsey as Notre Dame's nominee for the award from three finalists. Ken Kollman, leader of Notre Dame's volunteers for the homeless shelter, and Lisa Buonaccorsi, who did a summer service project helping pregnant teenagers, were the other finalists.

"I think the strength of Tim's service is in the criterion of the innovative approach," said Kathy Royer, coordinator for service/social action groups at the Center for Social Concerns. "The Dismas House approach is very innovative and that put him above the others."

The award is sponsored by Campus Compact, a national network of college and university presidents.

"Campus Compact is a kind of umbrella organization of colleges and universities in the country to share information and promote the idea of social service," said University President Father Edward Malloy. Malloy attended the group's last set of meetings in Washington D.C. last February. He nominated Dempsey for the award in March.

Dempsey hopes to continue his work in social service after graduation. "I might be working as a house director at a Dismas House, and I'm also considering Covenant House," he said.

"I've been active in social service all through high school and even in grade school because my whole family is very involved," he said. "I hope to continue that involvement throughout my life."

Najib offers to withdraw

Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan—President Najib on Monday offered to withdraw Afghan troops from their posts near the Pakistani border if anti-communist guerrillas and Pakistan agree to do the same.

"We are ready to create a non-military line" between Afghanistan and Pakistan, Najib said at the opening of celebrations marking the 10th anniversary of the Afghan revolution that installed a Soviet-backed government.

Najib told an assembly of three small parties loyal to his government that such a withdrawal would allow the estimated 3 million Afghan refugees in Pakistan to return home.

However, the proposal appeared to be little more than a face-saving acknowledgement of the difficulties the Afghan army is having against onslaughts by anti-communist guerrillas based in Pakistan and supplied with U.S. and Chinese weapons.

Soviet troops entered Afghanistan in 1979 to help quell an uprising by a guerrilla front.

The Soviet Union has agreed to start withdrawing its estimated 115,000 troops from Afghanistan on May 15 under a U.N.-mediated agreement signed April 14 in Geneva by the United States, the Soviet Union, Afghanistan and Pakistan.

The United States, China and several other countries have been aiding the Afghan guerrillas via Pakistan. The Soviet Union arms the Afghan military forces. Each superpower has reserved the right to continue its assistance as long as the other one does.

The guerrillas, who were not direct party to the Geneva accord, have vowed to continue fighting until Najib's government is overthrown.

Niece testifies on cyanide deaths

Associated Press

SEATTLE -- Stella Nickell, accused of killing her husband and another person with cyanide-laced Excedrin capsules, "seemed irked at everything" and wanted to leave her home a month before the deaths, a niece testified Monday.

Wilma Stewart testified as Mrs. Nickell's tampering trial entered its second week in U.S. District Court. Mrs. Nickell's daughter, Cindy Hamilton, was expected to testify against her mother later in the day.

Prosecutors say Mrs. Nickell, the first person in the United States to be tried on charges of causing death by tampering with over-the-counter capsules, plotted to kill Bruce Nickell to collect insurance.

Mrs. Nickell is charged in the deaths of Nickell, 52, and of Susan Katherine Snow, 40, who died after ingesting poisoned capsules of Extra-Strength Excedrin.

Mrs. Nickell also faces three counts of tampering with a product involved in interstate commerce in the tainting of capsules in two Extra-Strength Excedrin bottles and an Anacin-3 bottle that were recovered in local stores.

Prosecutors said Mrs. Nickell was trying to cover up the murder of her husband by making it look like one of a series of random poisonings.

Ms. Stewart, who lived in Houston at the time of the June 1986 deaths, testified that Mrs. Nickell seemed upset during a telephone conversation in May 1986 and "wanted to know if she could come to Texas and stay with me."

Mrs. Nickell, who lived in the Seattle suburb of Auburn, did not say anything specific had happened but "just seemed irked at everything."

At the end of the conversation, though, Mrs. Nickell was laughing, Ms. Stewart said.

'Outstanding senior' to be awarded by SMC alumnae group

By LISA MONTPETIT
News Staff

The Saint Mary's College Alumnae Association will present the Outstanding Senior Award for the first time at the Alumnae-Senior Brunch May 12.

The honor will recognize a student who has exhibited deep devotion to Saint Mary's through her academic success, involvement in student and community activities, and her dedication to the values, spirit and mission of the College, according to Mary Beth Fodor, assistant director of Alumnae Relations.

Nominees will be chosen by senior class members, she said.

During the Fall 1987 meeting of the Alumnae Board of Directors, the need for such an award was discussed and evaluated by the Student-Alumnae Committee, Fodor elaborated.

Just as the Valedictorian and Lumen Christi Awards are concerned with the "mind" and "soul" of Saint Mary's, the Outstanding Senior Award will deal with the "heart" of the College, she said.

court as an impartial adjudicator."

He was joined by Justices William Brennan, Harry Blackmun and Thurgood Marshall.

In a separate dissenting opinion, Blackmun said, "I am at a loss to understand the motivation of five members of this court to reconsider an interpretation of a civil rights statute that so clearly reflects our society's earnest commitment to ending racial discrimination and in which Congress so evidently has acquiesced."

The court's majority said the dissenters were making it sound like the court was overturning the 1976 decision.

"We have, of course, done no such thing," the unsigned order issued by the majority said. "It is surely no affront to settled jurisprudence to request argument on whether a particular precedent should be modified or overruled."

The North Carolina case, argued last Feb. 29, now will be held over until the court's next term beginning in October. A ruling is likely in 1989.

Voting to rehear the case were Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justice Byron White, Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy.

O'Connor, Scalia and Kennedy were appointed by President Reagan, a critic of some high-court rulings he considers too liberal.

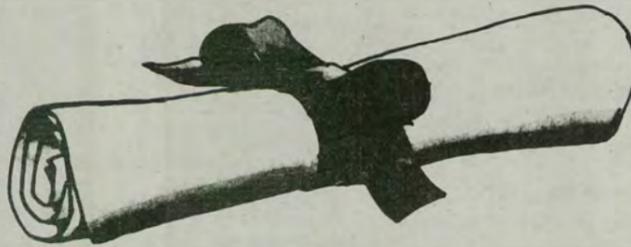

Brenda Patterson, a black woman, wants to use a post-Civil War law to force her employer, McClean Credit Union, to pay actual and punitive damages for alleged harassment.

Lower federal courts said the law, the Civil Rights Act of 1866, is designed only to ban racial discrimination in hiring firing and promotion-not racial harassment.

Ms. Patterson still could charge racial harassment under a 1964 civil rights law. But the more recent law provides that those who win their case in court may collect back pay not potentially big awards as compensation for emotional and mental suffering.

Civil rights groups say the more limited 1964 law may not be a sufficient deterrent to harassment.

Dukakis vs. Bush: We all lose

By RICH COGLIANESE
Business Writer

As it appears now, the 1988 presidential election will pit two different economic philosophies against each other. Republican candidate George Bush has the economic philosophy of the Reagan administration. Democrat Michael Dukakis, however, is a Keynesian economist. This will make for some interesting scenarios in the business world. November could very well set the tone for the economy over the next four years.

First, the "Massachusetts Miracle" is a fraud. The revival in the Massachusetts economy is due to tax cuts and increased military expenditures. Gov. Dukakis has claimed credit for and promoted this "economic miracle" in Massachusetts.

Massachusetts is just one of the states in the Northeast experiencing great economic expansion. All of New England is experiencing rapid economic growth. Without the increase in the expenditures in the defense-related businesses there, however, the expansion would not have been an economic boom.

Dukakis also has another flaw. He relies far too much on increased taxes. Many people who live in that state refer to it as "Taxachusetts." Taxes got so high a popular referendum was needed to lower tax rates. Gov. Dukakis initially opposed even this.

These high tax rates on a national level would destroy the economic gains made over the last six years. Instead of being able to spend, both industry and the consumer will have to hand over more money to the federal government.

As Dick Addis would say, "The weather word for today is stormy." It is obvious that the market has been bouncing around with no real sense of direction.

This is because of the investor uncertainty over who the next president will be. In Dukakis, one sees trouble. As long as the race stays close, the market will continue as is. As Dukakis' chances grow in the polls, the market will steadily decline. If Bush is able to start to pull away, however, expect a mid- to late-summer surge to take over the market.

After that, "Bus-hanomics" requires some examination as well. As with everything else, it seems like Bush is a believer in supply side because Reagan converted him. Bush is a political realist who understands it will be politically necessary to run in Ronald Reagan's shadow. During the 1980 Republican primaries, George Bush termed the economic system he has since come to love, "Voodoo economics." However, as with many other things, Reagan made Bush a true disciple. Wall Street will have the same uncertainty about George Bush. A Bush victory will bring a surge to the market but that could quickly become erased as questions over trade, the deficit and the value of the dollar all may spell problems for both Bush and the economy as a whole.

Assuming a Bush victory in November, the market surge will probably last only a couple of weeks (a man who has lived in the shadow of another does not get a long honeymoon). He will have to come out with a real plan to balance the budget and strengthen the dollar if Wall Street will be happy to see President Bush.

If Dukakis is victorious in November, look for a steady drop in the market. The boys on Wall Street do not look kindly on his tax-and-spend economic policies. As wholesale prices climb up now, a Dukakis victory would probably spell the end for the boom in the market.

Investors, then, are really looking at the lesser of two evils for the presidency. Both men raise suspicion with investors. But Bush causes a little less worry.

The year in review: a look at 1987-88

By MICHAEL J. FAEHLNER
Business Editor

As graduation rapidly approaches, seniors look back on probably one of the best years of their life. Just like any other person, we begin to reflect on the past year. The past school year had its ups and its downs in the business world. Here are just a few highlights in which Domers will probably never forget.

On the top of the business world news had to be Black Monday. Who can ever forget a 508 point drop in the Dow Jones in one day. How can anyone forget the record 600 million shares which were traded in that one day.

Closer to the Dome, the chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, John Phelan, addressed the Notre Dame community about strong leadership for the financial community and the need for a greater sense of ethics instead of more regulation.

Once again Notre Dame was blessed with another visit from another expert in his field. John Kenneth Galbraith, professor emeritus of economics at Harvard University, delighted the student body with his analysis on capitalism and warned of the danger of bureaucratic excesses and waste.

One of the biggest events of this year had to be the visit of President Ronald Reagan. Reagan, who came to dedicate the 22-cent Rockne stamp, praised the economy and urged America onward with prosperity.

As Reagan dedicated the Rockne 22 cent stamp, a few days later the Post Office decided to raise the price of a stamp to 25 cents nailing Americans with an additional three cents.

America saw the emergence of protectionism under the leadership of Congressman Richard Gephardt (D-Mo.), only to see it countered with a threatened Reagan veto.

It was also the year that two leading experts on business in Congress decided to make a run for the White House. While Gephardt heralded protectionism all across the country, Congressman Jack Kemp (R-NY) trumpeted supply side and Reaganomics. Needless to say, both fell short of the Oval Office.

Americans began to worry more about the large budget deficits and placed it as one of the most important domestic issues facing the nation. The fear of Japan and the Far East became deeply embedded in the minds of many due to the competitive nature of the Japanese and the dramatic increase in Japanese investment in our country.

Trade figures placed a damper on the economy, even though the dollar fell. The "buzz" word for the economy was recession, but it would be a year without one.

The Fed's change in leadership from Paul Volcker to Alan Greenspan proved to be a smooth transition with little change in policy. Relations with the White House still were rocky.

The Winter Olympics came and went in Calgary, Canada. February proved to be a good ratings month for ABC, but the loss from the games proved to be too much.

Speaking of sports business, Tim Brown cleared some money on the superstars and the University picked up a clean $2.3 million for appearing at Dallas in the Cotton Bowl. (The real question is, if Coach Holtz can get that much, why can't Digger?)

Adworks, the Cellar, and Irish Gardens finally got their independence from SUB and they finally get more say in how their stores are run. Oh yeah, the obvious, Notre Dame tuition is going up.

Back to the real world, this year saw the end of an era and to one of the most successful slogans. Sure, remember "When E.F. Hutton talks, people listen." E.F. Hutton became a victim of mergermania and takeovers.

Sure, there were a lot more other interesting highlights of the past school year, but hey, finals are coming up. As the senior class moves on, so another freshman class enters. Lets pray for a good market and a more exciting year, so that next year's "Year in Review" is a lot more interesting.

Dow up; market optimistic

Associated Press

NEW YORK-- Stock prices moved ahead in quiet trading Monday amid expectations of further signs of a healthy economic outlook.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 22.21 points to 2,037.30.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 3 to 2 in New York Stock Exchange-listed trading, with 939 up, 603 down and 470 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 156.95 million shares, against 152.52 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index rose 1.18 to 148.21. The government is due to issue favorable reports Tuesday on the progress of the economy for the first quarter of the year and Friday in the index of leading economic indicators for March.

Mobil rose to 47 and Exxon was up to 44. Both companies reported strong first-quarter earnings.

Auto issues were broadly higher as the industry posted a slight gain in mid-April domestic car sales. General Motors rose to 74; Ford Motor to 47, and Chrysler to 23.

Other gainers among the blue chips included General Electric, up to 41; Coca-Cola, up 2 to 39; Procter & Gamble, up 1 to 78, and DuPont, up 1 to 84.

Southern Co. led the active list, up in a blizzard of block trades focused on the company's impending quarterly dividend. Volume in the stock surpassed 28 million shares.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 179.03 million shares.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 2.91 to 305.83, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 2.32 to 262.46.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 1.23 to 375.27. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 298.95, up .92.

Dear Editor:

In his "Palestine: The Facts and the Myths," (The Observer, April 20) Billy Lerman ventures on a historical detour in an attempt to justify the current draconian policies Israel is carrying out upon Palestinians in Gaza and on the West Bank. He invites us to shift our attention back 40 years to the first of the five wars between Israel and her neighbors. Then, he asserts, the "Arab inhabitants of Israel... left of their own free will." Hence, any notion that they "were forced from their land... at the hands of the Israelis... is logically as well as factually incorrect." He supports this bizarre conclusion by citing what he pretends are concurring Arab sources.

This stark perversion of the origins of the tragedy that binds Jews and Arabs to what Martin Buber called a "land of two peoples" belongs to a sadly familiar repertory of wild misrepresentations lacking respect for either the tangled past or the ominous future of this crisis. Simply at face value, Lerman's argument displays abysmal gaps that neither his logic nor his facts can fill. If, for instance, the Arabs left voluntarily, how does he explain the tens of thousands of victims on both sides, many of whom as reported these very days are utter innocents, desperate for refuge from the bombs or bullets that pierce their homes? Indeed, one wonders if Lerman's definition of voluntary departure might not also extend to the Jews of Amsterdam who dutifully complied with the orders to report to the train station on a given day in 1944.

To clarify matters, I suggest that Lerman test his hypothesis. Let him visit Palestinian residents of a camp in the occupied territories and take a poll, asking them if they left their homes and lands willingly. If he should be hampered by an Israeli soldier enforcing the curfew or ban on reporters, he can ask him if he is familiar with Article 13 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights that dates from that same fateful year, 1948: "Everyone has the right to leave any country, including his own and to return to his country."

Finally, if Lerman seeks to increase his grasp of what prompted the flight of some Palestinians at this time he might turn to Israeli sources. For example, in his book "The Revolt," former Prime Minister Menachem Begin openly describes his terrorist activities, including the admission that he was responsible for the massacre of the Arab village of Deir Yassin in April 1948, where 250 women and children were killed. The explicit and widely proclaimed threat that other Arab communities could suffer a similar fate will provide an important clue as to the motives and intentions of those Palestinian civilians who evacuated a war zone in panic. Nor should an investigator overlook the chilling impact of the assassination of the United Nations negotiator, Count Folke Bernadotte in September of that year. This operation was carried out by the Stern Gang of which current Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir was then a commander. Or for a feminist perspective, he might read the account detailed by Geula Cohen, a member of the Knesset, in her book "Woman of Violence: Memoirs of a Young Terrorist: 1943-1948," which David Ben-Gurion recommends highly on the dust jacket.

Perhaps investigating such less celebrated dimensions in Israel's history will assist Lerman in his appreciation of certain continuities with that nation's policies of today. For now and not 1948 is the moment in question. The hour is long past when we could afford to ignore, dismiss or deny any part of the relationship that defines the fateful conjunction of Palestinians and Israelis. Mutual recognition must come, and it can happen only through the courage to face as much truth as any of us can stand.

Office of Alcohol needs surveys

Dear Editor:

Last week a survey was sent out to a randomly selected cross-section of students to assess levels of alcohol and drug use at Notre Dame. It is essential to the Office of Alcohol and Drug Education to have a large response rate to this, and I'm asking students who have received these surveys to take a few minutes, fill them out and mail them back.

I'm aware of the quantity of work at this time of year, and also of the number of other surveys that have been sent out, but the information you give to us is vital to our work.

Again, this is a confidential survey that will never be used to identify any individual or be used for purposes other than research and education. You have the protection of University policy, professional and personal ethics, and federal law to assure this. Thank you for your help.

Movie reinforces Christ's message

Dear Editor:

The Viewpoint letter from William A. Murray printed in the April 15 issue of The Observer about Monty Python's "Life of Brian" misrepresents the point of the movie.

Murray states that "the movie presents Christ's life, crucifixion and resurrection as butts of jokes." But the movie is about the life and crucifixion of Brian, not of Christ (who plays only an incidental part in the movie). This distinction is not mere casuistry: "Life of Brian" does not satirize the life of Christ himself, but rather the lives of Christ's contemporaries—in particular, those Jews who were searching desperately for a leader to liberate them from Roman oppression.

The Jewish masses were ready to follow anyone who appeared powerful enough to be a likely candidate for the prophetic Son of Man. Jesus himself criticized them for this—they expected him to be a political rather than a spiritual Messiah, and when they found that his Kingdom was of Heaven and not of earth, they deserted him. Similarly, when Brian proved not to be what his followers had expected, they deserted him.

It is in this sense that Brian is a Christ figure; in other respects, Brian is most certainly not intended to represent Christ. "Life of Brian" pokes fun at Jews and Romans of Christ's time, not at the Christian or Catholic faith. The object of the movie's disdain is the masses' false conception of what religion should be, not religion itself.

Murray poses the question, "Is nothing sacred?" Of course there are sacred things, and Christ is one of them.

Does "Life of Brian" violate the sacredness of Christ's life? I think not. If anything, it serves to reinforce Christ's message—that the many (in this case Jews and Romans alike) are all too likely to choose worldly power over spiritual humility.

Refugee camps tell real story

Dear Editor:

In response to Mr. Lerman's article "Palestine: the facts and myths" of April 20, I would like to mention a few facts that Mr. Lerman failed to mention. Mr. Lerman did not mention the Palmach, the Hagannah, the Irgun and the Stern Gang, all Jewish terrorist organizations that were carrying out massacres of civilians in 1948. Yes, the Palestinians fled because of the unmerciful war in 1948. Jewish armed men numbered 260,000; the Palestinian national defense was a poorly armed 2,200 men. People fled for their lives and livelihoods; some people were forced at gun point to march to the border by Jewish armed guerillas. It is amazing that Mr. Lerman did not mention these facts.

As a Palestinian American who grew up in the West Bank, I cannot speak for what the Arabs did or did not do. I only can speak about my family's experiences. Mr. Lerman did not mention the village of Yalu, home for 6,000 Palestinian villagers, which was destroyed by bombardment then razed to the ground and a public park erected in its place, hiding any previous human habitations. These are but a few examples of why the Palestinians left their homes. Faced with such atrocities, I think Mr. Lerman would willingly leave his home and happily live in a refugee camp in a foreign land.

I cannot help but to be sarcastic of Mr. Lerman's simplistic views that two million Palestinians left their homes, farms and properties because they were told to do so and did that freely. I suggest a trip to a refugee camp in the Middle East to find out the real story.

Notre Dame Folk Choir broadens its horizons

accent writer

Those students who have been able to drag themselves out of bed before noon on a Sunday morning and attend mass at Sacred Heart Church have heard the Notre Dame Folk Choir perform. Most people probably didn't realize who they were listening to, but the Choir is gradually becoming more well known.

Under the direction of Steve Werner who works with Campus Ministry, and student co-coordinators Rob Lofaro and Elizabeth Crummy, the Folk Choir consists of sixteen singers, most of whom are undergraduates. Add to that six instrumentalists, whose talents range from the trumpet to the Celtic harp, and a new and different sound emerges.

Mr. Werner writes a majority of the choir's music, but it also performs many of the same traditional songs that are sung at weekly masses. The Choir makes the songs unique through their own combination of singing and music. "There is more harmonization and music," according to Lofaro, "which gives a fuller sound."

The folk choir has been in existence for nearly a decade but is not yet widely known. To remedy this, some changes have been made. In particular, the Choir has "become more involved in other liturgies on campus."

In addition to Sunday mass at Sacred Heart, it has performed at the Freshman Orientation mass at the beginning of the year and at the dedication masses for the Rolf Aquatic Center and the Loftus Sports Complex. "The Administration is beginning to recognize us and let us do more things," commented Lofaro.

Another project to "increase awareness and let more people know about us" is a trip to Ireland. The Choir will depart two days after graduation to spend two weeks performing in Ireland. The Irish-American Foundation is helping out financially, along with the University. The Choir hopes to make touring a regular event, alternating yearly between foreign and American tours.

If noon is just too early to wake up on a Sunday, the Folk Choir is giving a concert this Wednesday at 9 p.m. at Sacred Heart Church. If anyone is interested in being a member of this unique group, simply make an appointment with Mr. Werner for an audition. And, yes, it is too late to become a member to go to Ireland!

Picnic celebrates spring in style

accent writer

This is the season when the sunshine and the green grass lure us all outdoors for picnics, baseball and ultimate frisbee... when young minds turn to thoughts of love...and finals. This Tuesday evening the St. Mary's women of Holy Cross will cast aside thoughts of papers and exams. They will focus their attention, perhaps not on love, but on enjoying their dorm picnic in the company of Notre Dame men.

Each section of Holy Cross has selected a section from various ND dorms for this mixer which is sponsored by Holy Cross' RA staff and Hall Council. According to Jill Tomko, Holy Cross resident, this mixer was done last year among RAs from Holy Cross and other dorms.

This year the event will take place on a grander scale. "We decided to go all out this year," said Tomko. And indeed they have. In addition to a barbecue, the Holy Cross picnic will feature games ranging from volleyball and "Twister" to "Duck Duck Goose".

There will certainly be twisting and shouting going on in places other than on the Twister dots. Mistaken Identity will entertain at the event with a wide mix of songs.

According to bass and guitar player Mike Senkovich, "We do basically pop...neat, little fun songs." Vocalist Lisa Devereaux, drummer Dave Vreeland, keyboardist Tray Brown and bass/guitarist Mike Ury will perform such party delights as "Johnny Be Good," "La Bamba," a number of Beatles' tunes and a few originals by Ury.

According to Senkovich, the band will play some pieces like they've never been played before. He said, "We're gong to have fun with the songs and we hope that everyone will have fun also." With the music of Mistaken Identity, and the efforts of the Holy Cross RA staff headed by Patty Quinn, the picnic will be a good opportunity--before the chaos of finals--to enjoy the spring season with friends.

Three sons follow in father's footsteps

Associated Press

The Velline brothers started rocking at an early age, and it's easy to figure out why.

Dad was a chart-topping pop star, the home stereo constantly effused Eddie Cochrane tunes and the family went to Dick Clark's place for visits.

"We grew up with eight guitars lying around," says Jeff Velline, 22, singer Bobby Vee's eldest son.

"We were pretty much exposed to it from an early age," added Robby, 20, guitar in hand.

Jeff, Robby and Tommy, 21, are the Vees, a St. Cloud brother-trio carrying on 30 years of rock tradition in the Velline family.

Their original music is by no means the only thing working for the Vees. They are using their father's private St. Cloud studio to record a local album.

They also have worked up a set with Beej Chaney, former lead singer of the Suburbs, which will give them exposure in the Twin Cities.

And, most important, the brothers sound good together.

"They've been playing since they were 7 or 8," said father

Robert "Bobby" Velline, called The Big Vee by his sons. "They're light years ahead of me as far as where I was when I was their age."

At their age, Bobby Vee had some gold records, including "Rubber Ball" and "Take Good Care of My Baby."

Vee's 30 years in the business often translates into sage advice for his sons. He gives them pointers on performing, songwriting and on the business in general. Vee also will produce his sons' first album, which will be released on their own label or a local one.

The Vees are working on their album nearly full time, putting aside --at least temporarily--their parents' wishes that they go to college.

"For awhile they were on the school kick," said Tommy, the bass player. For now, however, Karen and Bobby Velline support their sons' projects.

Although music is a full-time occupation, the brothers say it's too early to talk about music as a career. And it's way too early, they say, to talk about matching their father's six gold albums.

"The highest of our expectations is to entertain people on a regional level," said Jeff, the drummer and band spokesman. "We're not in a big hurry for something to happen. We don't have any false illusions about the business."

Through their high school years the brothers played in cover bands with other people. Last spring, after conflicts with the others, they decided to make it a threesome and do original material.

Each member understands his role in the band. Jeff handles business, Robby does most of the writing and Tommy does the talking, marching and head-banging on stage.

"I first was attracted to them by seeing them do a warm-up set for the Suburbs," Chaney said. "They're very levelheaded, very professional and they're really nice guys."

In shows with Chaney, the Vees play about two sets of material alone. Then, Chaney joins them for a third set, and they mainly play Chaney's material.

For their part of the shows, the Vees hope their original music catches on. According to Jeff, the band finds a catchy tune, then everyone labors to find the perfect lyrics.

Quarterbacks finally taken on NFL draft's second day

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Don McPherson, the Heisman Trophy runner-up, set off a run on quarterbacks on the second day of the NFL draft Monday after the position was virtually ignored the first day.

McPherson, who led Syracuse to an 11-0-1 season, was taken with the 12th pick of the sixth round by the Philadelphia Eagles - the 149th player taken but only the second true quarterback taken during the draft.

The first, Chris Chandler of Washington, was chosen on the third round Sunday by Indianapolis, the 76th pick overall. Earlier, Phoenix had taken Tom Tupa of Ohio State with the 68th pick, put Tupa is regarded primarily as a punter.

Before this year, the latest a quarterback had been chosen was in 1974, when Dallas took Danny White with the 53rd pick.

Altogether, 11 quarterbacks were taken on the second day.

The draft wound up at 5 p.m. EDT after a total of 16 hours, 44 minutes over two days, the second fastest since the merger of the AFL and NFL in 1967. The fastest was 16:19 in 1981. Last year's was 18 hours even.

McPherson, a 6-foot, 182-pounder with 4.4 speed in the 40-yard dash, might have been taken several rounds higher had he opted to play wide receiver or defensive back. But he insisted on staying at quarterback despite the contention by some scouts that he was too small and didn't have an arm strong enough for an NFL quarterback.

He would be more likely to fit into the Philadelphia style than that of other teams. The Eagles' starter, Randall Cunningham, is a scrambler. McPherson plays the same way, although he is four inches shorter, 35 pounds lighter and lacks Cunningham's arm strength.

"I'm not disappointed one bit. I knew going into the draft that I wouldn't go in the first couple of rounds because I wanted to go as a quarterback," said McPherson, who said Eagles Coach Buddy Ryan "made it clear to me that he likes me as a quarterback and only that."

"To have the opportunity to play quarterback is what I'm after."

AP Photo

Stan Humphries of Northeast Louisiana State University was one of the quarterbacks taken on the second day of the National Football League Draft.

Monday's picks proved that teams are still looking for players to throw to all the receivers drafted Sunday.

Cunningham and McPherson would also give the Eagles two black quarterbacks, the second time in NFL history that has happened. In 1984, Houston had Warren Moon and Brian Ransom on their active roster.

Two picks after McPherson, Dallas took another quarterback, Scott Secules of Virginia. And later in the sixth round, Washington took Stan Humphries, a quarterback from Northeast Louisiana.

It was the Redskins' interest in Humphries that fueled rumors the Super bowl champs might be willing to deal Jay Schroeder, the backup to Doug Williams. But Humphries is considered a project who will take several years to develop.

Two more quarterbacks went during the seventh round - Mike Perez of San Jose State to the New York Giants and Kerwin Bell of Florida to Miami. Both had been rated much higher before subpar senior seasons, particularly Perez, who is considered a tough-guy kind of leader and once had a roughing-the-rusher penalty called on him.

'Internationals' beat 'U.S.' team in sudden death

Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. - Greg Norman sank an 18-foot birdie putt on the first hole of sudden death to give himself and partner Ian Woosnam a one-stroke victory over Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino in Monday's $300,000 Desert Scramble, an experimental pay-for-view golf tournament.

The victory was worth $100,000 apiece for Norman and Woosnam and they also split a $50,000 bonus for winning the final hole.

Nicklaus and Trevino each received $25,000 in the best-ball, stroke-play tournament in which the final nine holes were televised live on cable for a cost of $12.95 per household.

The "International Team" of Norman, from Australia, and Woosnam, from Wales, trailed by four shots after 13 holes. But they made eight birdies over the final 11 holes to shoot a 6-under-par 30 on the back nine and forge a tie at 64 over the par-72, 7,045-yard Cochise course - a new layout developed by Nicklaus.

The scene then shifted to the par-3, 196-yard 18th hole on the adjacent but only partly-completed Geronimo course. Under the playoff format, the first birdie won. If nobody birdied, the closet tee shot to the pin would win.

Norman used an 8-iron to get 18 feet from the pin while Nicklaus was 20 feet away and both Woosnam and Trevino 35 feet shy of the hole.

In the best-ball format Woosnam moved his ball to Norman's mark but missed his putt for birdie. Norman calmly made his for the win before a gallery of 3,000 - many of whom paid $500 to watch the inaugural match.

The "U.S." team of Trevino and Nicklaus had fired a 4-under 32 on the front nine to take a two-shot lead at the turn with four birdies and five pars.

Their only bogey of the round came on the 17th as Norman and Woosnam parred the hole to tie at 7 under. Both teams birdied the 18th to force the playoff.

"The bogey gave them a chance," Nicklaus said. "It was a lot of fun until we bogged 17. That killed us. It got them even and it was the first time we hadn't been up on them all day."

Canadiens, down 3-1, face Boston's Lemelin

Associated Press

The Montreal Canadiens know why the Boston Bruins seemingly have a lock on their NHL playoff series. They just haven't been able to find the key yet.

"We have to find a way to beat Reggie Lemelin," Montreal coach Jean Perron said of the Bruins goaltender. "He has played very good, and the entire Boston team has been playing with discipline and waiting for their chances."

Lemelin stopped 22 shots Sunday night as the Bruins took a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven Adams Division championship series with a 2-0 victory.

The playoff shutout was the second in Lemelin's 10-year career, the first for the Bruins in postseason over Montreal since 1978, and now Boston is poised to do something it hasn't done for even longer. The Bruins have not beaten the Canadiens in a playoff series since 1943.

"We're confident this is our year," Lemelin said. "We're going to do it. ... We're creating a new era."

The Adams Division series resumes Tuesday night at Montreal. In Sunday's other game, Washington beat New Jersey 4-1 to tie the Patrick Division series 2-2. That playoff resumes Tuesday night at Landover, Md.

Lemelin replaced Andy Moog in goal after Montreal won the first game of the series

5-2. In the past three games, Lemelin has held the Canadiens to four goals.

"Although we won the second game, we didn't play that good in the first two games in Montreal," Lemelin said. "Now we've picked up momentum. Once you get in your mind that you can do something, you can do it."

Veteran Rick Middleton broke a scoreless tie in Game 4 with a backhander that trickled into the net at 11:25 of the second period.

Patrick Division

Clint Malarchuk, the victim of New Jersey's 10-4 victory in Game 3, replaced Pete Peeters in goal midway through the second period after Peeters was injured. He stopped 13 Devils shots and held New Jersey scoreless the rest of the way.

"That was the toughest moment of my entire career," Malarchuk said. "I had to put everything out of my mind and just focus on this game. I couldn't lose, because then we would have gone back to Washington down 3-1."

A shot by New Jersey's John MacLean hit Peeters in the mask, knocking him backward, and Peeters had to leave the game after his head hit the ice.

"I knew he was seriously hurt," Malarchuk said. "I knew I was going to play, but I was really nervous. I was thinking about what happened Friday night."

Orioles rearrange to find a win

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS - The Baltimore Orioles, who have lost their first 18 games, shuffled their roster Monday by calling up three players from Class AAA Rochester and sending outfielder Jim Traber and pitcher Oswaldo Peraza to the minors.

Pitcher Bill Scherrer, third baseman Craig Worthington and outfielder Keith Hughes will officially join the Orioles Tuesday in time for a night game against Minnesota.

A roster spot still must be cleared and Orioles general manager Rollie Hemond said another move would be made Tuesday. He said a trade was possible, and there has been speculation pitcher Scott McGregor, 0-3 with an 8.56 ERA, might be released.

Hemond said he had not talked in the past week with the New York Mets about center fielder Mookie Wilson, who has asked to be traded.

The Orioles are the poorest-hitting team in the majors at .198 and their 6.01 ERA is second-worst to Minnesota's 6.36.

"We're in a situation where we're trying to find solutions," Hemond said.

Scherrer, formerly with Cincinnati and Detroit, has four saves at Rochester. He will serve as a left-handed reliever.

Worthington is batting only .234 but has hit four home runs, including three in the last four games. Hughes is batting .306.

Red Sox 5, Brewers 1

Bruce Hurst pitched a six-hitter and struck out eight Monday night as Boston beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-1, the Red Sox' sixth straight victory.

Hurst, 3-0, did not walk a batter and allowed the only run in the ninth inning.

The Red Sox chased Milwaukee starter Bill Wegman, 1-3, with one out in the seventh when Ellis Burks' RBI single drove in Brady Anderson, who had doubled, and gave them a 3-0 lead.

SMC track takes 8th at District

By KRISTINE GREGORY
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's varsity track team placed eighth at districts Saturday at Huntington College in Indiana.

The District meet is a large invitational competition in which the top qualifying runners advance to the national meet. None of the Belles achieved a this privilege, but many placed in the top six on Saturday.

Senior Cathy Kennedy placed fifth in the 1500 meter run with a time of 5:22.7. She also finished a respectable sixth in the 800 meter run while teammate Jacque Benchik placed sixth in 5000 meter run.

The 1600 relay team of Kelly Streit, Maggie Daday, Cathy Kennedy and Mary Cassidy took an impressive third with a time of 4:32.9, which was just short of the required standard time.

The cold, windy weather destroyed any hopes for the 400 relay as a bad exchange caused the saint Mary's team to be disqualified.

In the field events, Jeanette O'Neill placed fourth in the javelin with a throw of 95'5".

The highlight of the day came in the 100 meter dash as freshman Kelly Streit set the school record with a time of 13.16 seconds.

"Everyone worked very hard and many of the girls finished seventh place which was very pleasing to see," said Belles' head coach Larry Szechowski. "There has been a lot of improvement throughout the season so hopefully we will do quite well in our last match next weekend."

Lakers defend title

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. - Last June, after the Los Angeles Lakers won the NBA Championship, Coach Pat Riley personally guaranteed that his club would repeat as titleholders, becoming the first team in 19 years to accomplish such a feat.

Now, it's put up or shut up time, and Riley has some fresh ammunition to fire up his troops as they begin their quest for a second straight title.

A round-table discussion was aired on CBS Sunday afternoon, in which none of the network's so-called expert commentators picked the Lakers to win the title, despite their NBA-best 62-20 regular-season record.

"That's OK," Riley said, referring to the opinions of Tom Heinsohn, Billy Cunningham and Billy Packer, all of whom tabbed the Boston Celtics to

The Notre Dame golf team jumped off to a fast start in the Spartan Invitational over the weekend, but the competition roared back on the final day and dropped Noel O'Sullivan's Irish into ninth among some of the best golf teams in the Midwest. Chris Fillio details the Irish performance and the Invitational below.

Golfers start fast but fade away on last day

By CHRIS FILLIO
Sports Writer

Last Saturday after the links had cleared, the Notre Dame golf team had settled comfortably into the fifth place spot among fifteen of the top schools in the Midwest.

Unfortunately for coach Noel O'Sullivan's Irish linksters, the competition had other plans for the finish of the Spartan Invitational at East Lansing, Mich.

"When we can be very competitive for two-thirds of any tournament, I have to feel good," said O'Sullivan, "and the team feels good as well."

But several top contenders saved their best rounds for last and pulled away from Notre Dame and the rest of the pack. When it was all over, the Irish found themselves a respect-table ninth overall.

"Our team looks good in that our preparation is working well," said O'Sullivan, "but what seems to show in the tournaments is our youth."

Indeed the Irish are a very young team, consisting of two seniors, two juniors, four sophomores and two freshman. Next year the Gold Team will remain intact for the most part, save for the loss of senior captain Dick Connelly.

"Now I have five guys with an understanding of actual tournament play," stated O'Sullivan. "Next year there will be no excuse."

The Irish put up some good numbers for the Spartan Invitational and posted a 78 stroke average for the tournament. But once again the Irish were dogged by bad weather.

Leading the team was junior Doug Giorgio with 76-78-76 for a 230. Close behind Giorgio was junior Pat Mohan who had the low round for the Irish at 75 and combined it with 77-79 to finish at 231. Senior captain Dick Connelly had a rough start but helped out with two more sub-eighty rounds at 84-76-79 for a 239. Freshman Paul Nolta started well at 78 but had 80-85 to end up at 243. Fifth man for the Irish was Bobby Kloska who was impressive in his first outing as a member of the Gold Team, with a 83-81-80 for 244.

All the top finishers managed to outdistance the Irish with the help of superb final rounds. Illinois took the honors at 891, powered by the one-two punch of its top two golfers, who were co-medalists at 217. The Iowa Hawkeyes were a distant second at 905, while Wright State came in third at 912.

The Irish total for the three rounds was 937.

The future looks quite good for O'Sullivan. He feels that the Irish certainly have the potential to turn themselves into a solid team.

"Being competitive looks very bright for the future," said O'Sullivan. "Youth will develop into maturity, and hopefully that will turn into the staying power we need to do well for an entire tournament."

Notre Dame will close out the regular season this weekend when they travel the same five Gold Team members to the Midwestern Invitational in Lake Geneva, Illinois. Once again the Irish will go up against fifteen of the top schools from the Midwest.

win the title, and Hubie Brown, who selected Detroit. "People are basing their opinions on history.

"We don't have anything to lose this year. Nothing. The only thing we have to lose is a great opportunity. It's a great opportunity, one that took us eight years to get."

The Lakers officially open defense of their title Friday night when they entertain the San Antonio Spurs in the opening game of a best-of-five series. Game Two will be Sunday night, with the series then moving to San Antonio for a third game on May 3 and a fourth game, if necessary, on May 5.

What if the Lakers don't win the title?

"There are no consequences," Riley said. "None. They won't lose their respect, their identities, their money, their rings, their pride, if they don't get the job done."

Also contributing to the Irish good fortunes at Indiana were freshman Pat Kearns and John Cole. Kearns took third in the 10000-meter run and Cole placed third in the high jump. Cole recorded his best effort thus far, with a jump of 6'11 3/4". Sophomore Glenn Watson also chipped in with a third place, running the 100 high hurdles in 14.12 seconds.

The Notre Dame track team will send representatives to two meets this weekend. Some members of the team will go to the Penn Relays, as already mentioned. The rest will attend the Ball State Invitational at Ball State.

Coach Piane stated that the emphasis this weekend will be on individual performances, rather than team scores.

Irish defenders go in draft Figaro to Chargers, Wells to Bengals

By MARTY STRASEN
Sports Editor

A pair of Notre Dame defensive players were selected on the final day of the two-day NFL draft in New York on Monday.

The San Diego Chargers selected linebacker Cedric Figaro in the sixth round, 152nd overall, and the Cincinnati Bengals took defensive back Brandy Wells in the ninth round, 226th overall.

Those selections brought Notre Dame's representation in the draft to five players. Heisman Trophy winning receiver Tim Brown was the sixth overall pick by the Los Angeles Raiders on Sunday. Offensive linemen Tom Rehder and Chuck Lanza then were chosen back-to-back in the third round. Rehder went to New England and Lanza was taken next by Pittsburgh.

Rounds six through 12 were completed Monday.

Figaro will move from outside linebacker to inside linebacker when rookie camp starts later this spring, Charger linebackers coach Mike Haluchek said.

"Although he played outside linebacker for Notre Dame, he possesses good size and speed and we feel he can make the transition to the inside linebacker position," Haluchek said of the 6-2, 246-pound Figaro.

"From what we have seen," Haluchek continued, "he plays a tough, physical, aggressive style of football and has the attitude necessary to fill that position."

Brandy Wells

Figaro said he expected to go earlier in the draft, adding that an ankle injury suffered this past season might have raised some doubts about his ability to play in the NFL.

"I understand there were a lot of questions about my ankle and everything," said Figaro, who sprained the ankle against Alabama and did not start the next week at Penn State. "But my ankle's fine now. I'd say it's about 80 percent, but I'm ready to play."

Figaro was fourth on the Irish with 53 tackles last fall. He led the team with three forced fumbles and five tackles for losses in 1987, and also recorded three sacks. In 1986 he set a single-season record with seven fumble recoveries.

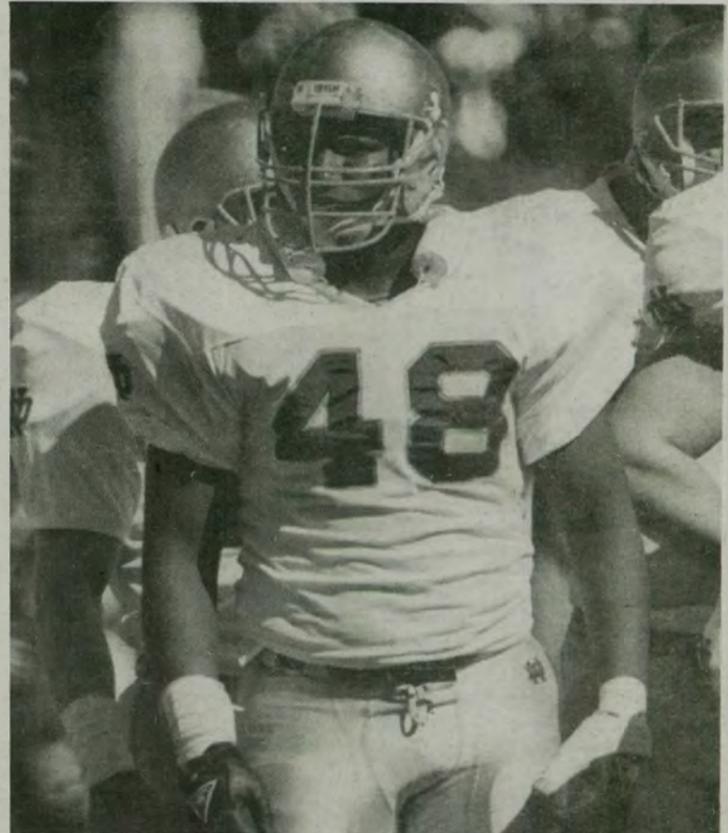

San Diego expressed the most interest in Figaro before the draft, Figaro said.

"They told me that they were interested in me as an inside linebacker," he said. "I have no problem with that. At this point I just want to play football. It's a relief that this is all over with."

Wells will be reunited with former Irish assistant coach and current Bengals assistant coach Mike Stock in Cincinnati.

"He (Wells) has got good speed and provides fine coverage," Stock said. "He's also an outstanding special teams player. He's a hard, aggressive hitter and we feel he has a very good chance of making the team."

Wells often was called the hardest hitter on the Notre Dame squad at both safety and cornerback. But he was kept out of four games with a knee injury his junior year and missed another two starts this past season.

Notre Dame linebacker Cedric Figaro was drafted in the sixth round by the San Diego Chargers in yesterday's wrap-up of the 1988 NFL Draft. Figaro was the 152nd pick overall. Marty Strasen has the details at left.

Irish play Big 10 at Jake Kline Field

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

Having won five of its last six games at Jake Kline Field, the Notre Dame baseball team will try to continue its home field fortunes this week in two contests with intra-state rivals.

The Irish face Purdue this afternoon at 2:30 p.m. before entertaining Indiana at 3 p.m. on Wednesday. "I don't think it makes a difference to these guys where they play," said first-year Irish coach Pat Murphy. "I like to play at Jake Kline Field. It's my favorite field, but it doesn't matter to these guys."

Notre Dame, which currently holds a 25-20 record, will have to chances to put a halt to a 20-game losing streak against Big 10 opposition.

"It's tough to play Big 10 teams in the middle of the week because they have more depth," said Murphy. "I'm kind of tired of hearing about how many consecutive games we've lost to Big 10 teams because it's not indicative of our program. Don't be surprised if we knock one of these teams off."

Purdue, a participant in last year's NCAA Tournament, defeated Notre Dame 11-7 on April 13 at West Lafayette. In that game, the Boilermakers rattled Irish pitching for nine runs in the first two innings. Notre Dame rallied with five runs in the ninth, and the game ended with the tying run at the plate. That victory by the Boilers snapped a six-game Irish winning streak.

The Boilers have had winning seasons for the last four seasons under 11th-year coach Dave Alexander. Purdue has compiled respective records of 37-27 and 36-24-1 over the last two seasons, both of which have produced second-place finishes in the Big 10 for Purdue.

But after losing five of its regular starters from last year's squad, Purdue has had a rough time of it this season. After a weekend series with Iowa, the Boilers ranked ninth in the Big 10 with a 6-14 conference mark.

Brian Piotrowicz, a sophomore out of South Bend Washington High School, is the probable starting pitcher for Notre Dame. Junior Erik Madson figures to take the mound for the Irish against Indiana.

The Irish have been aided recently by the emergence of several underclassmen. Seniors Tim Hutson and Pat Pesavento and sophomore Dan Peltier have turned in consistently strong hitting performances, but sophomore catcher/third baseman Ed Lund also has come on of late. Lund's classmate Dave Yawman has been receiving more playing time at catcher himself. Freshman outfielder Greg Vogeles, who has hit well whenever he has received playing time, slapped a grand slam on Sunday against Illinois-Chicago, and sophomore Mike Rotkis has been effective in limited duty.

In addition, sophomore pitcher Mike Coffey, who rarely was used in the beginning of the season, fared well in two assignments last weekend.

"You can't talk about Notre Dame baseball in 1988 without mentioning Pesavento, Peltier and Hutson," said Murphy. "They've meant so much to us this year."

"Eddie Lund is also doing a great job," continued Murphy. "Mike Rotkis, Greg Vogeles and Dave Yawman have done good jobs, and Mike Coffey has been impressive of late with two good outings last weekend. With all those players being sophomores, and Vogeles being a freshman, it's pretty exciting."

Irish track 5th at Intercollegiates

By BILL STEGMEIER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame varsity track and field team placed fifth in the Indiana Intercollegiates this past weekend. Indiana State took first place and the host Hoosiers of Indiana came in second. Purdue finished third and Ball State laid claim to fourth place.

Head Coach Joe Piane was impressed with his team's performance.

"We had some great individual efforts at the Intercollegiates," Piane said. "There's still room for improving, but overall, I was pleased."

Leading the Irish Saturday was freshman Jeff Smith. Smith flew 25'3" in the long jump, taking second and missing first place by only two inches. Indiana's Van Cowden won the event.

Smith's previous best jump in college was 23'11 3/4". The Indianapolis, Indiana native attributes some of his success at Indiana to his familiarity with the surroundings.

"In high school, IU was my home track. I had jumped there several times before and it may have been an advantage," Smith stated. "For instance, I knew, before we even got there, how fast the runway was for long jumpers."

Smith, who has also done the triple jump and run the 200 for the Irish, is looking forward to the Penn Relays this weekend. The meet, held at the University of Pennsylvania, may feature long jumper Carl Lewis as he prepares for the Summer Olympics.

"To be in the same field as a Carl Lewis would be an honor in itself. I hope to do well."

There were two individual winners for the Irish at Indiana. Senior Tom Mick took first in the hammer throw, with a distance of 190'4". Fellow senior Brian Driscoll won the javelin, with a throw of 189'.

Another standout for the Irish was senior Rick Mulvey, who took second in the 3000-meter steeplechase with a time of 9:12.55. Mulvey had to overcome a bit of bad luck, as he clamored into a barrier during the race.
