Republicans win White House but not Congress

Vice President George Bush was elected the nation's 41st president on Tuesday, sweeping past Michael Dukakis to assure four more years of Republican rule in the White House. Democrats countered with decisive control of both houses of Congress.

ELECTION '88

"Obviously, it feels good," the president-elect said as he received the nation's verdict in his adopted hometown of Houston. Asked when he would get down to the work of forming a government, Bush replied, "Tomorrow."

Dukakis offered his concession first in a private telephone call, then later at a nationally-televised rally with supporters in Boston. "The nation must work together," he said.

Bush planned a Wednesday morning news conference and then a triumphant return to Washington. He received a INDIANAPOLIS- Democrats are celebrating the victory of Secretary of State Evan Bayh, who last night became the first Indiana elected governor since 1964.

ELECTION '88

Bayh declared victory after Republican Lt. Gov. John Mutz conceded the gubernatorial race at about 10:15 Tuesday night with 645,863 votes. Bayh led Mutz by nearly 100,000 votes, with 62 percent of precincts reporting.

But the young Democrat had only respect for his opponent, who served as lieutenant governor under Governor Robert Orr for eight years.

"I want to take this opportunity to say John Mutz is a fine and honorable man. He is a worthy opponent," Bayh, 32, told supporters. "We should take no satisfaction in defeat-

Students who cast their votes at Stepan Center Tuesday received some unexpected time to make their decisions as the wait to vote reached close to an hour from 1 p.m. until the polls closed at 6 p.m.

ELECTION '88

"I thought it would only take about 5 minutes," said sophomore Tim Rock, who waited in line for 45 minutes.

The long line baffled election officials who attributed it to a larger voter turnout than expected and by the presence of only one voting machine.

"They really didn't expect this many people to vote," said election judge Judy Niespodziany. "The larger turnout is probably because of the presidential election," she said. The presence of only one voting machine irritated many voters. "They registered over 2,000 people on campus, they could at least have given us two machines," said Junior Meg Juliano, who waited in line for an hour.

"We have no control over the number of machines, the County determines that," said Election Inspector Roy Davis.

As the 6 p.m. closing time for the poll approached, the question of whether those in line would be able to cast their vote.

Br. Thomas Balthazor, Democratic Precinct Committeeman, said, "The doors to the polling place will be closed at six, but everyone who is already in line will have the chance to vote."

Both Davis and Balthazor said that the long wait was not unique to the Stepan polls. "I've heard that larger turnouts than expected are causing long delays throughout the county," said Balthazor.

The long delay angered many students and caused

ELECTION '88

"We've been waiting two years for this," said Hiler in his acceptance speech at 11 p.m. Tuesday, referring to his 1986 victory over Ward by just 47 votes.

Hiler will begin his fifth term as Congressman in January.

Ward made a strong showing, as expected, in traditionally Democratic St. Joseph County. Early results showed Ward as many as twenty percentage points ahead.

But Hiler called St. Joseph's County his "greatest surprise county," winning 46 percent of the vote as opposed to 41 percent in 1986.

"This is our best showing in St. Joseph's County since 1980," said Hiler. "I tried to get around the county and show more visibly the concern folks felt I hadn't shown in the past."

Hiler said "we were running a significant lead and doing better than our projections, particularly in St. Joseph's County."

Hiler gained steadily throughout the evening as results from Elkhart, Starke, Kosciusko and Marshall counties were reported. Results from

IN BRIEF

Scores of novice anglers are attracted to a course at Valdosta State College that allows students to earn college credits while fishing. Titled Freshwater Fishing 315, the course is filled to capacity each quarter with students who want to bait hooks and reel in catfish, bluegill, perch and bass. "It's a fun course," said instructor Lindy Evans, 45. "The homework is excellent--meaning go fishing." Before graduating from the course, students make one or two visits to fishponds in the area to test their skills.

INSIDE COLUMN

'Rape road' not as safe as many might think

Crisp fall nights often compel us to renew our appreciation of the beauty and serenity of these campuses on a walk or a run through the grounds. Many of us should stop and think who may be behind us on these ventures.

There is a prevailing false sense of security in this community that has made us irresponsible about our safety. Students from both schools have indicated that these crimes are something that happen in other places like state schools, big cities and dark alleys. That, unfortunately, is irrational and immature.

Students are obviously not exercising the common sense we all claim to possess. No matter how many mailbox flyers we receive pleading us to use safety measures, we seem to be tossing them in the can before reading them or after saying yea, yea, we've heard that before, no duh.

We jog alone in the dark with our Walkmans on volume ten. Football season brings many Saint Mary's students to and from the Notre Dame campus often unaccompanied and often in an altered state of mind. If Saint Mary's students are alone and miss the shuttle, they often take a risk they are repeatedly warned against. They walk alone to their destination on the road between the schools.

This road is commonly referred to as "rape road" by students because of an incident that occurred in the Spring of 1985. A Saint Mary's student, who didn't think it could happen to her, was raped right here between our two campuses just three years ago.

This is not an issue of campus versus campus or of security's responsibility to students with lighting and escort services. This is not an issue of men versus women. This is an issue of awareness and apathy. The 1985 incident is still close enough to our experience as students to stand as an example of what can happen if we are careless. There is a tremendous sense of distrust of security on these campuses, which hinders the cooperative relationship that should exist. Disrespect has festered on both sides. Students enjoying freedom from authority in college often rebel with sarcasm and lies when security officers ask questions or enforce rules designed to protect us. Also, students often make demands on Security beyond the call of duty simply for their convenience. Security officers have offended students' integrity by condescending to them rather than recognizing potential problem situations. Officers have passed students by on the road between the schools without offering assistance.

Sandy Cerimele

Another problem resulting from attacks like rape and assault is that the victims are somehow coerced into silence, either by their own displaced guilt or by their fear of public harassment. Protecting the offender does not serve the victim nor the public. Mailbox flyers do not hold a candle to the potency of recent example here in our "safe" community.

When this kind of attack occurs-- and it does-- it is our responsibility to ourselves and our community to take measures to amend the situation. We must spark our awareness and jar our common sense to look out for ourselves and the safety of others.

HPC discusses undergrad housing

By DANNIKA SIMPSON
News Staff

The Hall Presidents' Council met Monday night at Pasquerilla West.

Karen Flaherty, Executive Coordinator of Student Life for Student Government, spoke about the housing policy for next year.

In a letter sent to all undergraduates, except seniors, Student Residences stated "There can be no guarantee of being assigned to the same hall or even that on-campus housing will be available" so that next year's freshmen will not have to be put in temporary housing. As it stands now all returning undergraduates will be put into a lottery system to determine who will be able to live on campus next year. Flaherty met with Sr. Jo Giarrante, rectress of P.W., and will try to meet with other members of the committee that suggested the procedure for on-campus housing.

Flaherty feels that the "main objective (of Student Residences) is to get students to committ earlier to staying on campus." She suggests that students should "read and understand the letter" and then take action and "write letters to Evelyn Reinbold, Director of Student Residences" to try to get the housing policy changed.

In other business, Senate Report stated that students will be given calendars during registration that will tell them of all the events during Spring Semester. Any group wishing to have an event included in the calendar should see Joe Cassidy by November 15, 1988.

Chris Lee and Kathleen Maglicic announced there will be a Senior Block Party on November 18 at the ACC. The Block Party will be open to the entire Notre Dame community as well as to the South Bend community. The Block Party will be like an ethnic festival featuring food from many different countries. Lee stated "There will be lots of food and entertainment." Lee also stated that the Block Party will be "a worthwhile event because we (students) take a lot from the community but don't give much back."

Lastly, the Junior Class will be going bowling Thursday November 10 at 9:30 p.m. at Beacon Lanes. The Graduate Student Union will be sponsoring Grad Night at Theodores on November 15 to tell students about graduate schools. Liam Canny from Pangborn said representatives from Aetna will hold a meeting in the Alumni Room of the Morris Inn Thursday at 7:00p.m. to discuss summer internships. Dress will be informal.

Another B-1 bomber crashes, all four crew members safely eject

Associated Press

ABILENE, Texas-- A B-1 bomber crashed Tuesday and all four crew members ejected safely, one man getting out seconds before the crash, the Air Force said.

"All of them were taken to the Dyess hospital and are in good condition," said Air Force spokesman Linda Gellnere of Dyess Air Force Base, where the long-range military bomber was based. The plane crashed around 3:30 p.m., roughly eight miles northwest of Dyess.

Lou Paulsen of Abilene, who witnessed the crash, said the plane appeared to be making a normal flight away from the base when smoke starting coming out of a left engine as the craft was circling.

"At first there was just a puff of smoke, then fire," said Paulsen, who was about two miles away. "It looked like it started to go out, then it flared up big."

It was the second crash of a B-1B bomber, as the production version of the plane is known. The first, 13 months ago, claimed three lives.

Paulsen, who is an Air Force reserve member, said the pilot apparently abandoned hope of returning to Dyess and decided to ditch the plane in an unpopulated area.

"It banked back toward the left, then they started ejecting," said Paulsen, who was watching with his wife. "Three chutes came out, right after another. Then the plane started veering left into the country."

"The last parachute came out seconds before the plane crashed in a ravine in an unpopulated area," he said.

The B-1, built by the Rockwell International Corp., is the first new long-range bomber to be produced by the United States in more than 25 years.

Hesburgh talks on nuclear arms race

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Staff Reporter

"Now people are saying 'this is insanity' and two unlikely people, Gorbachev and Reagan, said that we should cut these things (nuclear arms) in half right away," said Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president emeritus, Tuesday afternoon.

Hesburgh's remarks were part of a lecture titled "Prognosis for Peace," in which he discussed the nuclear race of the past and present. The informal talk began in the coffee room of the Center for Social Concerns and due to the size of group the 45 minute question-and-answer session was in the auditorium of the CSC.

"Our goal should be the widest conditioning of an anti-nuclear instinct as potent as hunger," said Hesburgh. "I think that everybody has to really get with it and work where you are."

Hesburgh said that the United States got into the arms race because the Russians did and the Russians got into it because we did. Hesburgh said that there is a myth around that somehow we were always catching up in the arms race. In reality, he said, at the time of the Cuban Missile Crisis the U.S. had 5,000 nuclear warheads and the Russians had 300.

Hesburgh referred to the eighties as a "burst against war." He said this is due to the fact that for the first time in 44 years we had a treaty that "pointed us downward rather than upward." "The second thing that happened to us today is something curious happened in the Soviet Union: perestroika," said Hesburgh.

"We are on the verge of a totally new relationship as two major powers and a lot depends on whether this man (Gorbachev) survives, a lot depends on whether the next president, whoever he is, is willing to sit down and talk," said Hesburgh.

Hesburgh said that today war is an unthinkable way to solve differences among nations. He also said that no rational leader is going to start a nuclear war.

"It is about as phoney a baloney as you can think up," said Hesburgh in response to a question about the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). He cited lack of research and the enormous vulnerability of the program as the reasons why it should be cut off.

The question of universities and their involvement in the testing and development of nuclear weapons was raised by a member of the audience. Hesburgh said, "The majority of universities, including this one, will not do government research, that cannot be published. We don't do anything that is kept secret except in war time."

Hesburgh gave a chronological account of the years following the invention of "The Bomb." He said, "I think that it is terribly important not just to see where we are this day, on the verge of electing a new president, with all kinds of implications for peace, but also where we came from."

Hesburgh said that he believes we are on the way to reducing nuclear weapons but that it depends on people getting excited enough to not let the movement towards reduction die down. "When enough people get excited, something is going to happen," said Hesburgh.

"The operative word is building trust between two great nations at the same time with verification of building down rather than building up," said Hesburgh. "We have to keep the downward motion going or we are in trouble."

Hesburgh's lecture was part of the Center for Social Concerns "Call to Peacemaking Week."

Secretary of State Shultz makes plea to new president regarding Soviet relations

Associated Press

WASHINGTON— Secretary of State George Shultz on Tuesday urged the next U.S. president to be realistic and deal with the Soviet Union when it is in America's self-interest.

"We shouldn't be afraid to do it," he said in an election day speech to young political leaders from around the world.

He praised the reform efforts of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and said that, if Gorbachev succeeds, "the Soviet Union will be a very different place."

In his foreign policy speech, Shultz said Gorbachev and his supporters "deserve credit for recognizing the problems and trying to solve them."

As a result, he said, "the environment for democratic values, peace and freedom is probably healthier than it has been for some time."

Within the Reagan administration, Shultz has played a leading role in promoting arms-control agreements with Moscow and seeking other ways to reduce tensions.

His speech, which had the earmarks of a valedictory, was aimed at presidential candidates Michael Dukakis and George Bush as well as foreign leaders. Shultz said everyone should recognize the dangers of ballistic missiles and chemical weapons proliferation.

"When we see an opportunity for problem-solving, when there is an opportunity to do something that they (the Soviets) want to do and that we think it is in our interest, in the interest of friends around the world, we shouldn't be afraid to do it. In other words, engage," Shultz said.

He said whether Bush or Dukakis won, the United States should be vigilant in dealing with the Soviet Union. "We're going to be realistic but, at the same time, pragmatic," Shultz said.

On a related subject, Shultz said he was confident the Soviets would complete their withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan despite an announcement last week that the pullout had been suspended.

The Soviets last spring committed themselves to remove by Feb. 15 the last of the more than 100,000 troops they have had in that country.

Austria's Waldheim accused of link with 'Kristallnacht'

Associated Press

VIENNA-- Political instability and anti-Semitism in Austria helped pave the way for the annihilation of Jews that began with the violence of Kristallnacht 50 years ago, Chancellor Franz Vranitzky said Tuesday.

Nazi thugs ran rampant on the nights of Nov. 9-10, 1938, in Germany and Austria, which Adolf Hitler had annexed to his Third Reich eight months before. They burned synagogues and shops, killed scores of Jews and arrested thousands for deportation to concentration camps.

The Nazis named it Crystal Night, boastfully, for the shattered glass that littered the streets.

Austria's head of state normally would give a nationally broadcast address and attend other events on such an anniversary, but President Kurt Waldheim has been accused of involvement in Nazi atrocities.

He issued a statement through his press office saying "the devastation and destruction" of Kristallnacht "as well as the mishandling and the horrific deaths of numerous people showed the regime of that time in its entire brutality."

"The nearly complete expulsion and destruction of the Jewish people has left deep wounds in the country up to the present day," Waldheim said.

Vienna had 180,000 Jews on that night that began the extermination of 6 million European Jews by Adolf Hitler, who was born in Austria. About 7,000 now live in the city.

In West Berlin, 5,000 people held a solemn procession to mark the anniversary. Communist East Germany observed it by honoring Jewish leaders.

Avi Weiss, an American rabbi and outspoken opponent of Waldheim, said the Austrian observances are hypocritical while he is president.

Weiss, who came to Vienna for the occasion, said, "it is a false commemoration, since 50 years after the event strong elements of Nazism remain here." He called Waldheim "an unrepentant ex-Nazi."

Vranitzky took over the ceremonial duties because of the controversy about Waldheim, who was a German army lieutenant in the Balkans during World War II but denies committing war crimes.

Fasters in Washington, D.C. finally break after nearly four months

Associated Press

WASHINGTON-- Eight advocates for the homeless on Tuesday ended 48-day, water-only fasts staged as a protest over funding cuts in government housing programs.

Carol Fennelly, a moving force behind the capital city's Community for Creative Non-Violence shelter for the homeless, was the first to break the fast, at 9 a.m. EST with a meal of pea soup, apple juice and sourdough bread sent by well-wishers from San Francisco.

She then checked into Howard University Hospital, where she was listed in critical condition after undergoing a series of tests that revealed a dangerously low blood potassium level. Her condition was later upgraded to serious.

Hospital spokesman Norman Brooks said Fennelly, 39, would likely survive.

"She looked weak, but she was conscious," Brooks said.

"She is not in great shape," said Mitch Snyder, founder of the shelter. "Her veins are completely shot and she has no blood pressure."

Three hours after Fennelly ate her first meal since September, seven other activists, including Snyder, ended similar fasts. Snyder said the protest was staged to get Congress to restore the 75 percent of the nation's housing budget that has been cut over the past seven years and, in general, to draw attention to the plight of the homeless.

"We did what we believe is right," Snyder said. "We aren't concerned about the impact. . . we just hope something will happen."

Chinese soldiers working to rescue hundreds in quake rubble

Associated Press

BEIJING-- Army rescuers and medical teams finally reached stricken villages Tuesday in a remote area near Burma where China's worst earthquake in more than a decade killed at least 930 people last weekend.

Official Beijing radio said more than 100 people had been rescued from the rubble of collapsed buildings and many more were believed to be trapped.

It said 1,000 soldiers were involved in the rescue operation and the central government had allocated $53.6 million.

Sunday night's temblor registered 7.6 on the Richter scale, indicating a quake of tremendous destructive force. It was centered in Lancang and Menglian counties of Yunnan province, about 240 miles southwest of Kunming, the provincial capital.

More than 170 aftershocks had been felt by Tuesday afternoon but their strength was declining, said Li Xianhu of the State Seismology Bureau in Beijing.

About 14 counties were affected, covering 16,000 square miles in a long corridor near Yunnan's southwestern frontier with Burma. Officials said they did not know the population of the mountainous, jungle-covered region, most of whose residents are farmers of the Lahu, Va and Dai minorities.

Information on casualties and rescue work was sparse and most government offices refused to answer reporters' questions, but the Civil Affairs Ministry told the U.N. development Program and World Food Program offices in Beijing more than 930 people were killed.

Mutz disappointed with close defeat

By MICHELLE DALL
Senior Staff Reporter

INDIANAPOLIS—November 8 was a bittersweet day for Indiana Republicans.

While Rep. Senator Richard Lugar defeated his opponent Democrat Jack Wickes in a landslide victory, Republican John Mutz was not as fortunate.

Mutz, who has served as lieutenant governor of Indiana for the past eight years was defeated by his Democratic rival Secretary of State Evan Bayh.

With 79.9 percent of the precincts reporting, Bayh received 52.8 percent of the state-wide vote, compared to Mutz's 47.2 percent. This translates to about a 100,000 vote margin of victory for Bayh.

Bayh, 32, is the son of Birch Bayh, former U.S. Senator from Indiana.

In his concession speech Mutz stressed that despite his loss he was proud of his past accomplishments. "In the past 13 years we've changed the course of Indiana history," he told supporters at the Republican headquarters in Indianapolis Tuesday night. "I have seen things happen I only dreamed of when we first started. Now I'm proud to say

I played a role in these developments. . . We can be downright proud of what we've accomplished."

Despite his apparent optimism, Mutz admitted he was disappointed with the election results, saying, "... My idealism has been shaken a bit tonight."

Quoting Democrat Adlai Stevenson, Mutz continued, "I'm too old to cry and it hurts too much to laugh."

Incumbent Governor Roberf Orr also expressed disappointment in the campaign outcome but said, "I know John Mutz will be recognized in history as the man who came to the forefront of Indiana government and made great economic gains. He worked toward the general welfare."

Steve Goldsmith, who ran on Mutz's ticket as lieutenant governor said, "John is a man who's given a quarter of a century of public service to Indiana residents. One of the reasons he wasn't victorious tonight—in terms of the ballot box—was because the Democrats tried to look and sound like Republicans."

"I assure you," Goldsmith continued, "Indiana has not seen the last of John Mutz. There's always the future."

crease in support in the precinct. "In 1986, we took only 38 percent of the Notre Dame vote."

Pat Hinton, St. Joseph County field coordinator for Hiler, said, "I thought he would do better than that, after watching the students' reaction to the debate (at Notre Dame). After the debate I thought there was no doubt he was the more qualified candidate."

Hiler considered the debate a turning point in the campaign. "The first several days after the debate I really sensed there had been a shift toward us."

According to Hinton, Notre Dame's precinct was not the only one plagued by lines. "We had a similar problem in Harrison Township. We had people standing in line, waiting two hours to vote. In an presidential election year, turnout will always be high," Hinton said.

Hiler complimented Ward on the "tough, spirited campaign run against us. Candidates will always disagree. No one will know what it was like to run except Tom Ward and myself."

"In 1980 I was told, there will never be another victory like my first to the House of Representatives. He was right, but I say there will never be another victory like my victory in 1988."

Ward concedes defeat after his early lead in votes disintegrates

By MICHAEL WELLS
Staff Reporter

"It does not look as though we're going to win this campaign," said Third District Congressional candidate Tom Ward in a statement to reporters last night.

Ward, the Democratic contender, while acknowledging that a computer breakdown in LaPorte County would delay the official results for at least a day, essentially conceded defeat at 11:25 p.m.

Ward came out with a very strong early lead, but seasoned campaign workers in the Democratic office realized that this did not signal a quick victory. "The initial results are from St. Joe's County, and they're always very pro-Democratic," said Tim Coleman, a Ward volunteer.

Zack Hudgins, a Notre Dame student working with the Ward campaign, echoed the sentiment early in the evening. "Every election goes this way," he said. "It's going to be a long night."

Well, it was a long evening, but perhaps not long enough. By 11 p.m. Hudgins was describing the mood among the Ward volunteers as "very somber and reserved. They're not expecting any miracles."

Ward's campaign manager, Mike Marshall, had said previous to the candidate's speech that Ward would not be conceding defeat. Nevertheless, Ward thanked his staff for their efforts in this year's campaign as well as the one in 1986. In 1986, Ward lost the election to John Hiler by only 47 votes.

Ward expressed no bitterness towards his rival. "My opponent, John Hiler, I want to congratulate him and wish him good luck," he said. Ward elicited a positive response from the crowd of supporters, however, when he also congratulated the victory of Democratic gubernatorial candidate Evan Bayh. "It's going to be very good for the people of Indiana," he said.

And the room erupted into cheers and applause when Ward answered a reporter's question, "Are you going to run again," by stating, "I'm going to put on my jogging shoes tomorrow morning."

One of the items in this campaign was the large registration of Notre Dame students and its possible effect on the election. When asked why the campus was so important, Marshall cited the closeness of the previous race and said, "Notre Dame just happened to register a lot of new voters." In fact, up until the very end Democratic campaign workers did not even know the results from the two precincts assigned to the University, because they aren't the so-called bellwether districts which tend to mirror overall results.

Hiler

LaPorte County, Hiler's home county, were delayed due to voting machine malfunctions.

"This campaign is concluded. It will not go on for seventy-seven days," said Hiler, referring to the delay due to recount in 1986.

"You can't begin to know what it's like to have a 47 vote victory off my back," Hiler told supporters who spent the evening in South Bend's Elks Club awaiting the results and the candidate's arrival.

"To the media who covered the race day in and day out, now you can start a story without saying John Hiler, who won the closest race in the country," said Hiler.

Hiler defeated Ward, a 1970 Notre Dame graduate, in Notre Dame's precinct, Portage 1, 486 to 474.

Early in the day Hiler expressed concern over the long lines to vote at Stepan Center, with only one machine assigned to serve 1500 registered voters. "I thought it was unfortunate, especially with the high number of new registrations. With just one machine there, it would require one student voting every thirty seconds."

Hiler was pleased with the inother unexpected problems. According to freshman John McKee, "Everyone in line is talking about the wait and they're all pretty angry about it." Sophomore Barb Izzo waited in line for 45 minutes and still couldn't vote. "I have a meeting right now and I couldn't wait any longer," she said.

U.S. must call for election in Liberia

For more than a century, the United States has supported the government of Liberia. Founded by former American slaves, Liberia always has had a special relationship with the United States. Over the past several years, however, that special relationship forcefully has called upon the United States to repudiate the present government of Liberia and actively support alternative parties.

Rob Hennig

Currently, Liberia is governed by Dr. Samuel Doe, a ruthless dictator who came to power earlier in this decade in a bloody coup d'etat. Doe has kept power only by means of brute force. He has killed and brutalized thousands, unconcerned about human rights. He has ignored the Liberian constitution, a document he originally accepted, by constantly refusing to recognize the right of the press and of opposition parties to exist. He has kept power by fraudulently declaring himself the winner of an election he most certainly lost.

And what has the United States done about all this? Despite Doe's glaring disregard for Liberia's own interests and his obvious stealing of millions of dollars in United States aid, the Reagan administration has continued to support strongly the Doe regime. There is little evidence that a Bush administration would alter this line of thinking.

The only thing preventing the removal of Doe from power is the perception among Liberians of the U.S. government's unconditional support of Doe. He is extremely unpopular with the Liberian people. Doe has syphoned off millions of dollars from the government to his private accounts in Switzerland and severely mismanaged the economy.

Even with United States support, it is doubtful that the Doe regime can long survive. Given current United States foreign policy toward Liberia, Doe's fall from grace presents a choice of two alternative paths, neither of which is desirable. In the first scenario, political enemies of Doe succeed in a coup attempt (Doe claims three attempts have already been made) killing Doe but failing to bring the military under control. An angry military would lash out, crushing any opposition and instituting a regime even more brutal than Doe could think of doing.

The other alternative would be if opposition forces of Doe succeed in toppling Doe and checking the military. Although this would be difficult, it is not unimaginable that the thousands and thousands of Liberians opposed to Doe could thwart effectively the Doe military. With such a situation, it is difficult to imagine opposition forces looking positively upon the United States. It is far more likely that when Doe falls, the successful opposition would be furious with our support of the Doe regime and would repudiate many current U.S.-Liberian agreements. The loss of the only Voice of America transmitter on the African Continent as well as key telecommunications facilities for U.S. facilities in West Africa is not unlikely should opposition forces achieve total power under current circumstances.

Recognizing the limitations of United States foreign policy, it still seems necessary that the United States should immediately withdraw all forms of aid to the Liberian government. The withdrawal of funds to Liberia is the only way the U.S. can effectively promote democracy in Liberia.

The U.S. should condition the release of aid funds on the holding of free and fair elections for the national government with U.S. government observation. With the State Department and Congressional observation and tactful pressure, it is doubtful whether Doe could avoid calling for an election or be able to cheat successfully. The opposition parties would also provide effective watchdogs in monitoring the elections.

Samuel Doe might resist pressure from the United States to call for elections. Given Doe's unpopularity, however, he could not hold on to power for long without U.S. support. It would only be a matter of time before opposition forces lashed out against Doe's regime. In the long run, Doe would have little choice but to call elections.

Given free and fair elections, it seems probable that a middle-of-the-road opposition party like the Unity Party would be elected. Whoever comes to power, U.S. support of a fair election process is the key to ensuring good relations with the future Liberian government.

Given Doe's lust for power, it does not seem improbable that he would try to deceive his way to victory in a new election. Without United States support, however, Doe's claims to victory would stand no validity. Further, given an angry populace just waiting to bring him to justice, it is doubtful whether Doe could avoid the fate of many a dictator and be forced to find exile abroad. Without U.S. support, Doe could not retain power in Liberia after an election voted him out of office.

Liberia is perceived by most countries inside and outside of Africa as a uniquely American problem. Failure by the United States to stand up to the Doe regime has also represented an international embarrassment of the Reagan administration in foreign policy. It seems absurd that the U.S. would abandon the long-term interests of its closest ally in Africa for misguided short-term advance. There has never been any threat of Liberia going communist, a fact of which both the United States and the Soviet Union are aware.

The United States appears afraid, however, to use its unique influence in Liberia for the most trivial of reasons. The immediate withdrawal of funds from the Doe regime seems equivalent to an absolute obligation on the part of the U.S. Withdrawal of aid funding is the only possible policy open to the United States to promote true democracy and human rights in Liberia.

P.O. Box Q

Learn from mistakes of Bush "rally"

Dear Editor:

Now that the dust has settled from the visit of Vice President Bush to Notre Dame, it would do us all some good to reflect upon the events of one week ago. The arguments over details, and of who knew and did not know of the ticket distribution are now essentially irrelevant. Nevertheless, the attempt by Mr. Schlapp to claim that student government (the student body president or vice president) was notified about the change of time is a complete fallacy. What should concern us, both as a University and a community, is that the University's name, its people, and its affiliation with the Catholic Church were used as a backdrop for a political rally.

As the details of "who did what" unfolded last week, we found the principle rationalization of those involved to be that "such is politics." We find this not only to be unsatisfactory but also antithetical to the values of this University. Notre Dame, as a place committed to the value of intellectual debate, should not be about staging political pep rallies. Rather, the forum we provide must promote an atmosphere of rigorous scrutiny where people of differing political ideologies are encouraged to actively participate in all events, as the Bush visit had originally been cast to be. The vice president was invited to lecture at this University on serious issues that were not to be overtly political in character. The members of this community should be insulted that all they received was a typical campaign address, slightly tailored to the Notre Dame audience.

To avoid such a fiasco in the future, the University must take a much more active and "hands-on" approach in organizing such a high profile event. We can ill afford to leave the reputation of this University, and the principles it stands for, in the hands of an advance team whose sole responsibility is to package its candidate. It is our hope that the University continues to invite those persons who are leaders in their field and leaders in our country, but does not again enter into such a contrived circus. We believe that, wittingly or unwittingly, Notre Dame was manipulated and used as a grand photo opportunity. Hopefully the wisdom gained from this unfortunate experience will be applied to similar events in the future. Moreover, students who participate in planning such an event in the future must be cognizant of their responsibility as members of this community. No matter how glamorous the event appears, we must not fall victim to partisan politics and cheapen the intellectual character of this University. As students, we should be proud that national leaders wish to come speak on our campus. However, the context of their appearance must be commensurate to the mission of this University.

late-night call of congratulations from President Reagan, as did vice president-elect Dan Quayle of Indiana. Dukakis now returns to work as governor of Massachusetts.

Victory for Bush came shortly after 11 p.m. EST in The Associated Press tabulation.

Bush—a pragmatic conservative who led Dukakis since August in the pre-election polls—won Quayle's Indiana to get off to a running start Tuesday night, then blazed uncontested across Dixie. He won Ohio, Michigan, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Texas—five key states which had been crucial to Dukakis' hopes for a "November surprise."

Missouri put Bush over the top in the AP tally.

It was a singular triumph for Bush, but ticket-splitting voters delivered a strongly Democratic majority for the incoming 101st Congress.

Democrats appeared to be padding their margin in the Senate, and were marching solidly toward renewed command of the House. They appeared to be adding to their ranks of governors, as well.

Dukakis, whose hopes for an upset faded as his rival piled up the precious electoral votes, won at home in Massachusetts. He also won West Virginia, Rhode Island and the District of Columbia and led in nine states, including New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

In the popular vote, with 58 percent of the precincts reporting, Bush had 27,936,468 or 54 percent. Dukakis had 23,881,576 or 46 percent for Dukakis.

It wasn't even close where it counted, in the electoral votes. Bush had 295 and was leading for another 69, while Dukakis had 34 and was leading for another 133 as the vote counts moved toward the West Coast.

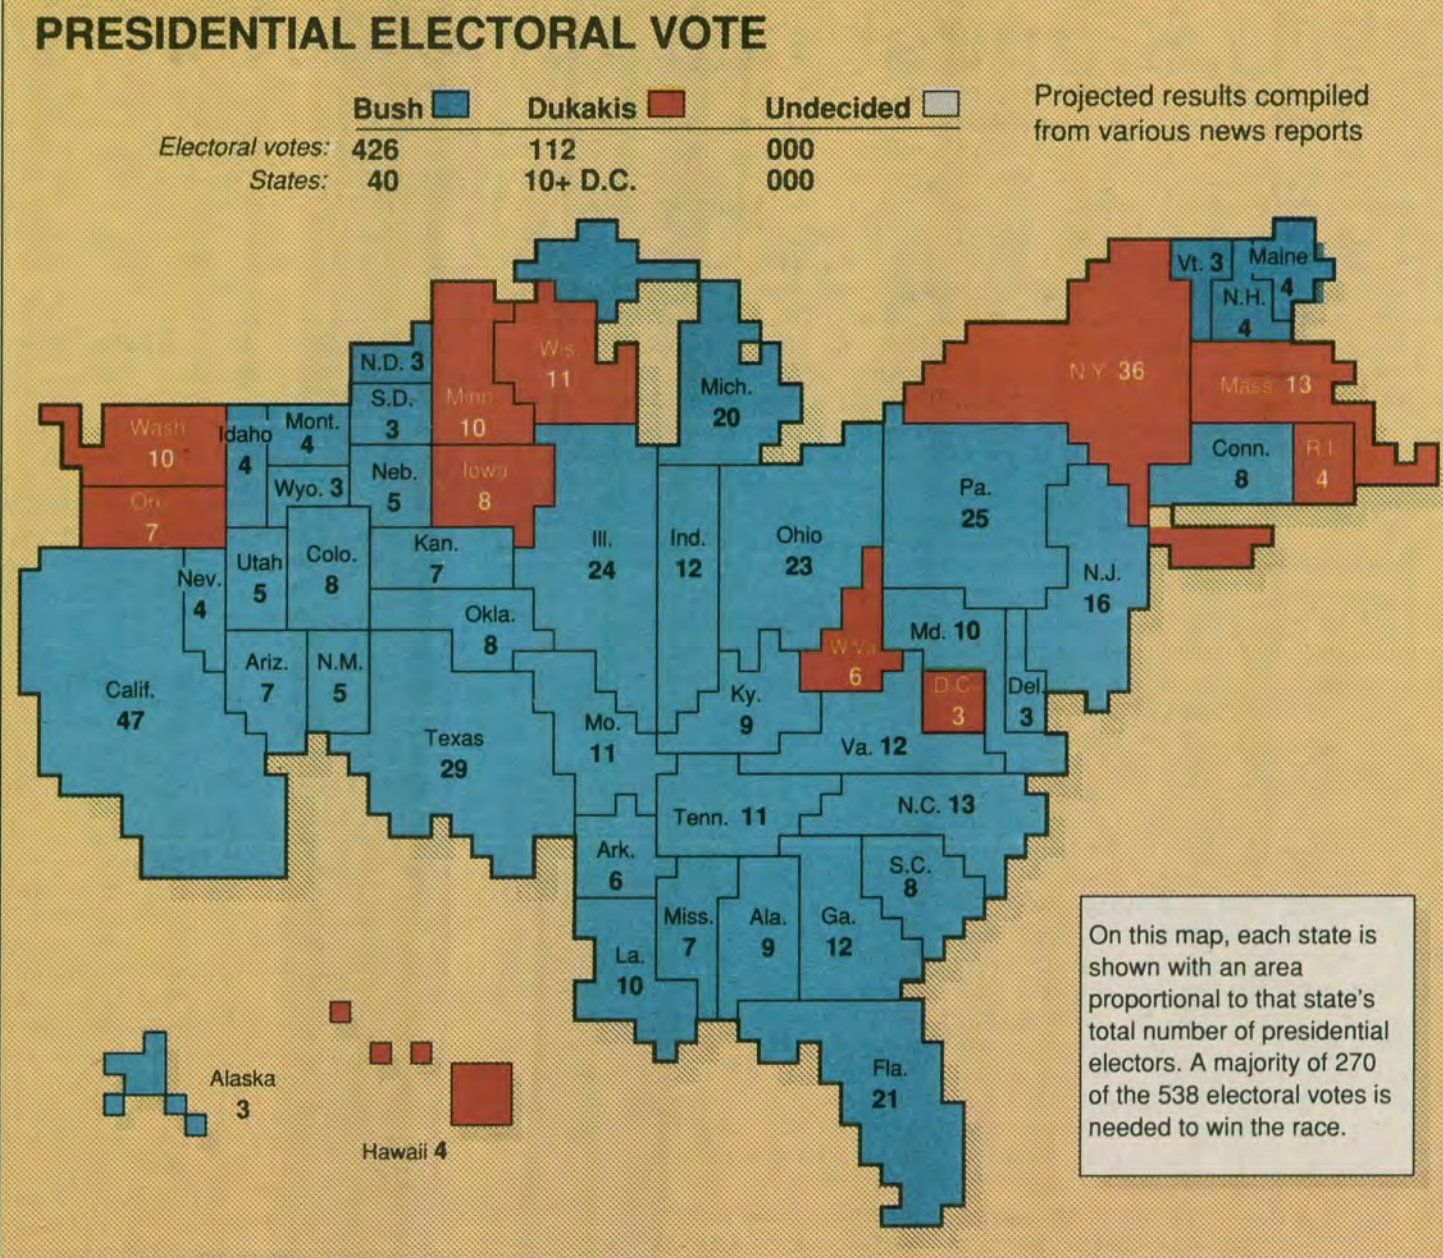

Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen had his Senate seat to go home to. He won handily as Democrats moved out smartly to renewed control in Congress.

Republican Senate Leader Bob Dole conceded a new, probably stronger Democratic majority, and in an extraordinary declaration, said Bush, bore some of the blame.

"I must say we could have used a little help from the vice president in some of those states—Florida. We pleaded with them to go to Florida," where a close race was unfolding.

Dole, assuming a Bush triumph, said it was "probably correct" that there wouldn't be a mandate to go along with it. But that wasn't the Reagan view. In a statement, he said of Bush and Quayle, "their mandate will continue the changes that create jobs, prosperity and peace for all Americans."

ELECTION '88: The Vote

Lugar wins Senate seat with record vote

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS—Voters gave a huge vote of confidence to Richard Lugar on Tuesday, sending him back to the U.S. Senate for a third term by a record margin of victory over Democrat Jack Wickes.

With 84 percent of the state's precincts reporting, the Republican senator had captured 68 percent of the vote and held a margin of more than 600,000 votes. Lugar had 1,163,601 votes to Wickes' 557,392.

"Let me just thank each one of you for the inspiration you've given us for a campaign of constructive Hoosier common sense," Lugar told supporters at a GOP celebration in Indianapolis. He said he ran "a campaign in which we tried to highlight the idealism of our country (and) our state."

"We thank each one of you who has been so responsible for a perfect campaign," said Lugar, who raised nearly 12 times as much money as Wickes.

Wickes conceded defeat to Lugar shortly after 9 p.m. Heavily Democratic Lake County was the only county Wickes led.

"We played all the cards we were dealt, and we played as well as we could," said Wickes, who appeared at a Democratic celebration with his family.

Wickes said he had known it would be a tough race and he wished he could have emerged the victor. "But my eldest daughter, Katie, gave me a hug tonight and said she was proud of me. And you know, that's not half bad."

Lugar needed more than 61 percent to top the record for percentage of the vote captured in a statewide race, set by Dan Quayle in his 1986 Senate re-election victory over Democrat Jill Long.

Lugar also appeared certain to set a record for margin of victory in a statewide race. He had set the mark by capturing 406,000 more votes than Vance Hartke when Lugar first was elected to the Senate in 1976.

For Lugar, 56, it was his fourth time to run for the Senate. He lost his first bid to Birch Bayh in 1974.

Lugar has spent 20 years in public office, the first eight as mayor of Indianapolis.

He has become a top Republican spokesman on foreign affairs, and his book published this year, "Letters to the Next President," addresses those issues.

Wickes, 41, had tried to portray the former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as someone more familiar with the hopes and dreams of the people of other countries, such as Guatemala, than those of Gary.

But Lugar said he has effectively balanced foreign affairs leadership with constituent

ELECTION '88: Election Round-up

Six Indiana congressmen, three Republicans and three Democrats, won re-election Tuesday to the U.S. House. Election returns in the state's remaining four congressional districts were inconclusive at mid-evening. The winners:

- Lee Hamilton, the state's senior-most representative, defeated Republican challenger Floyd Coates of Scottsburg in the 9th District.
- John Myers, the most experienced Republican, defeated Democrat Mark Waterfill of Plainfield in the 7th District.
- Andrew Jacobs Jr., who has held the 10th District seat since 1974, beat Republican James Cummings of Indianapolis.
- Dan Burton won a fourth term from the 6th District against Democratic challenger George Holland of Indianapolis.
- Dan Coats, a former Dan Quayle staffer when the 41-year-old vice presidential candidate served in Congress, beat Democrat Jill Long in the 4th District.
- Peter Visclosky beat Republican Owen Crumacker, a disbarred Hammond attorney, in the 1st District. The district has traditionally voted heavily Democratic.

The gender gap, cited early in the presidential campaign as a problem for Vice President George Bush, turned out to benefit him. An ABC News poll found Bush leading strongly with men, 56-43 percent, but Dukakis narrowly ahead among women, 51-48 percent.

The selection of Dan Quayle did not appear to impact the presidential voting. According to NBC-Wall Street Journal exit polling, 21 percent of voters said they had reservations about Quayle but voted GOP anyway; 16 percent said they might have voted for Bush but Quayle's presence on the ticket helped them decide to vote for Dukakis. However, NBC poll analyst Sheldon Gawiser said almost all the 16 percent were Democrats, leading him to conclude Quayle actually had little effect. Some 63 percent said Quayle's selection did not affect their vote for president.

A list of Dan Quayle successors has not been drawn up yet, said Gov. Robert Orr and other top Republicans on Tuesday. The governor will appoint Vice-President Elect Quayle's successor to the U.S. Senate, who will then serve until 1990. A special election will then be held to determine who will serve the last two years of Quayle's term. Among the names mentioned in published reports and speculation by political insiders are 4th District Rep. Dan Coats; Lt. Gov. John Mutz; Indiana House Speaker Paul Mannweiler, R-Indianapolis; state Rep. Patrick Kiely of Anderson, chairman of the Indiana House Ways and Means Committee, and Marilyn Quayle, the senator's wife.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen rode his statewide popularity to a fourth term Tuesday even as his state voted overwhelmingly for the Republican presidential ticket. He d Rep. Beau Boulter, who had complained about allowed the incumbent to seek re-election while the Democratic vice presidential nominee.

The Secret Service shunted Dan Quayle to an alternate door of the Huntington, IN, courthouse received what was interpreted as a three phone call. Authorities detained an 18-year-old man two hours before releasing him after determining it was a prank, said police. An anonymous call 911 emergency line and said "Bye, bye, Dan Quayle," said McCutcheon. Capt. Kent Farthing. Quayle was entering to cast his vote after having his teeth cleaned, a Q day tradition.

Amendments concerning lotteries at the Supreme Court appeared headed for passage. Another to allow county officials to serve until seemed doomed.

•With 60 percent of the state's 4,900 precincts reporting, 60 percent of voters were in favor of Proposition 1, "Shall the constitution of the state of Indiana be amended by removing the language that prohibits lotteries?" Thirty-nine percent were opposed.

ing a man of his character."

The governor-elect and his lieutenant governor, Frank O'Bannon, said they plan to continue the issues set forth during their campaign.

"This is a victory for the people of the state of Indiana. It is a victory for the people who came together to lay the foundation for prosperity, who invest in education and frugality in government, who work hard to develop job opportunities," Bayh said.

Education will be the top priority of the Bayh administration, Bayh said. Their first step, however, is to make a smooth transition into the governor's office, he added.

"Education is the number one priority. It should be in every government," O'Bannon said. "The one year (Indiana Governor) Bob Orr did it it made a big difference."

The lieutenant governor-elect said making reductions and channeling funds to education will also be very important to Bayh, who stressed reduced government spending throughout his campaign.

"At its very finest, politics and government can inspire each and every one of us... to make a state we can all be proud of," Bayh said. "It is the honor of my lifetime to help lead the way."

Thousands of supporters rallied at the Democratic Party headquarters in the Indianapolis Convention Center, a stone's throw from the State Capital. Many said Tuesday was a night long overdue for Indiana Democrats.

The last Democratic Indiana Governor was Roger Branigan, who served one term beginning in 1964.

"The turning point (this year) came when the Republican machine tried to take Evan Bayh off the ballot," said Indiana Democratic Party Chairman John Livengood. "That set a vindictive tone that haunted their campaign."

But Bayh's Press Secretary Fred Nation said he felt his candidate won the race weeks ago.

"We had a very disciplined campaign on a few major issues and we stuck to it," Nation said. "Two weeks ago, we had the playing ground to ourselves. Every day we waited for an offensive and it didn't come until two weeks ago."

Nation said he thought the race between Mutz and Bayh was not particularly negative because the Republicans were unable to find anything negative about Bayh, he said.

Even at 32, Bayh is no stranger to politics. His father, Birch Bayh, was a three term U.S. senator and former speaker of the Indiana House of Representatives.

The younger Bayh, a graduate of Indiana University and the University of Virginia Law School, was elected Indiana Secretary of State in 1986.

•With 59 percent of the vote counted, 58 percent of the voters were in favor of Proposition 2, which would allow only convicts whose sentences exceed 50 years to skip the Indiana Court of Appeals and take their cases directly to the state's highest court. Forty-two percent were opposed. Currently, convicts can appeal directly to the supreme court if their sentences are greater than 10 years.

•Proposition 3, which would allow county officials to be elected as often as voters support them, appeared headed for defeat. With 59 percent of the precincts reporting, 63 percent opposed the proposition and 37 percent approved it.

Maryland's tough handgun control law held a surprisingly big lead in early returns Tuesday, in a contest seen as crucial to impending gun control debates in other states. With 10 percent of the state's precincts reporting, support for the state's law banning cheap handguns known as "Saturday Night Specials" was ahead 150,595 votes or 61 percent, to 96,070 votes or 39 percent for repeal. The gun law battle provoked a bitter political fight that become the most expensive in state history. The National Rifle Association spent more $4 million to repeal the Maryland statute.

ELECTION '88: Important Senate races

MICHIGAN

R Jim DUNN

Republican nominee Jim Dunn faced off against Democratic Sen. Donald Riegle in a campaign characterized by televised attacks by both candidates. Dunn was expecting financial assistance from the national GOP that never materialized. Dunn himself contributed a substantial amount to his campaign. Riegle has raised about $4.5 million, half of which was spent on television advertising including an onslaught during the Seoul Olympics.

D Sen. Donald RIEGLE

OHIO

R George VOINOVICH

Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich challenged Democratic Sen. Howard Metzenbaum. Voinovich stressed winning southern and western Ohio, with Metzenbaum centering on the northern industrial cities. Voinovich underestimated the difficulty in raising this downstate support. He has consistently questioned Metzenbaum's ethics, while Metzenbaum has drawn attention to his presence on the national GOP's "hit list."

D Sen. Howard METZENBAUM

FLORIDA

R Rep. Connie MACK

Two Representatives, Republican Connie Mack and Democrat Buddy MacKay, battled for the seat opened by the retirement of Democrat Sen. Lawton Chiles. MacKay only earned his party's nomination in early October, but the race was a dead heat right up to election day. Mack has defined the campaign as a choice between conservative (himself) and liberal (MacKay). MacKay ads have told the voters that the choice was between "mainstream and extreme."

D Rep. Buddy MAC KAY

NEW JERSEY

R Pete DAWKINS

Freshman Democratic Sen. Frank Lautenberg faced a tough race against Republican candidate, Rhodes scholar and Heisman trophy winner Pete Dawkins. Dawkins characterized Lautenberg as a backbencher, while Lautenberg countered with charges of carpetbagging on Dawkins' part. Lautenberg has spent much of his time in Congress on state-related issues. Dawkins claims Lautenberg has consistently voted to raise taxes and cut defense.

D Sen. Frank LAUTENBERG

NEW YORK

R Robert MC MILLAN

Democratic Sen. Daniel Moynihan battled Republican challenger Robert McMillan. McMillan launched attacks on the incumbent's record on the environment, while Moynihan generally ignored his opponent. McMillan ran on a platform supporting increased funding for healthcare and housing. Moynihan gets consistently high voter-approval ratings, helping to push the welfare reform legislation through Congress.

D Sen. Daniel MOYNIHAN

CONNECTICUT

R Sen. Lowell WEICKER

Moderate Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker and Democratic States Attorney Joseph Lieberman contested the Connecticut Senate race. Both politicians are proven vote-getters and can attract crossover voters. Lieberman has charged that Weicker hides behind the label "maverick" to keep from being held accountable for his record and his votes in Congress.

D Joseph LIEBERMAN

CALIFORNIA

R Sen. Pete WILSON

Republican Sen. Pete Wilson was challenged by Democratic Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy. By election day, Wilson will have raised almost $15 million, compared to McCarthy's $9 million; a large portion of this money will be spent on the airwaves. Wilson has consistently outmaneuvered his opponent on many issues, but has been unable to move out of the mid-40s in the polls.

WAR AND REMEMBRANCE

On Sunday November 13, 1988, it begins...or ends. The ABC Television Network sets in motion its 30-hour blockbuster mini-series "War and Remembrance." This marathon epic, which is the sequel to Herman Wouk's "The Winds of War," will either attract a respectably large viewing audience or spell the end of the long-Natalie Jastrow (Jane Seymour) became trapped in Europe along with her uncle Aaron (Sir John Gielgud).

In America, Pug's wife Rhoda (Polly Bergen), feeling unloved, turned to scientist Palmer Kirby (Peter Graves) for comfort while Pug himself was fighting his attraction to a young English woman named Pamela Tudsbury running mini-series format. ABC, of course, hopes for the former.

For 18 hours in 1983, "The Winds of War" attracted an audience of 140 million viewers. The story covered the events leading to America's involvement in World War II, specifically focusing on how those events affected the Henry family.

Victor "Pug" Henry (Robert Mitchum), a Naval officer and unofficial navy for President Roosevelt in Europe, dealt with international leaders of the time. Pug's son Byron (Hart Bochner) and his Jewish wife

(Victoria Tennant). (You didn't expect this to be a history lesson entirely, did you?)

As "Winds of War" drew to a close, Pug's sons Byron and Warren (Michael Woods), in the Navy, prepared for war. Natalie, her son Louis, and Aaron found themselves stranded in Italy in the shadow of growing Gestapo power. The film's final scene presented Pug looking into the grim future on the day after Japan attacked Pearl Harbor.

"War and Remembrance" begins one week later on December 15, 1941 as Pug takes command of the U.S.S.

In this scene from "War and Remembrance," the German army further humiliates the grieving French nation by arrogantly parading down Paris' grand Champs Elysees.

Northampton at Pearl Harbor. The drama unfolds as Pug faces his wartime responsibilities, his crumbling marriage, his reunion with Pamela, and his estrangement from Byron. The full power of Nazi Germany is fulfilled as Natalie, Aaron, and Louis are shipped off to concentration camps.

During the course of the film's 30 hours, viewers will experience Midway, the assassination attempt on Hitler, the D-Day invasion at Normandy, the Battle of the Bulge, and the first explosion of the atom bomb.

Over five years in the making, "War and Remembrance" is ready for its world premiere. Filming of this landmark project began in Lourdes, France on January 6, 1986 and continued through Italy, Austria, Yugoslavia, Switzerland, West Germany, England, Poland, Canada, and America, where filming ended on September 18, 1987. Auschwitz, the Polish concentration camp was opened for filming for the first time in history after two years of negotiations with Polish government. All this time and effort will definitely add to the film's realism and integrity.

While the entire mini-series is over 30 hours long, ABC will air only the first 18 hours next week. The remaining 12 hours will be shown in the spring. This division makes the viewing time seem shorter and adds to the suspense and intrigue of the movie.

Whether viewers will tune in to watch this series is ABC's major concern. However, when the winds have died down, the remembrance will hopefully be a ratings high.

This is Shakespeare?

CHRIS WELSH
accent writer

"A bawdy, raucous, slapstick comedy," isn't quite the average student's evaluation of a Shakespearean play. "Boring, droll, depressing and tragic," is perhaps a more apropos description.

But with the holiday season approaching, Notre Dame's Communication and Theatre Department unleashes "Twelfth Night" by William Shakespeare, a seasoned tale, full of fun and decidedly lighter entertainment. In fact, those responsible for the latest glimpse of the Bard's work here at Notre Dame chose it because of its universal appeal.

Set as a modern-day New Year's Eve costume party performed in Elizabethan costumes, and replete with anachronistic sets and props, "Twelfth Night" spins a romantic yarn of love in the far-away land of Illyria.

The play tells the story of two fraternal twins, Viola and Sebastian. The twins are separated during a shipwreck, and although each survives, they both believe the other to be dead. Viola disguises herself as a man, which leads the other characters in the play to mistake her for Sebastian. This disguise and mistaken identities, typical Shakespearean comedic devices, are the basis for much of the confusion and therefore the fun.

The rationale for selecting "Twelfth Night" is complex, and could be the basis for an entire article by itself. However, Mark Pilkinton, director of the Notre Dame production and associate professor of communication and theatre, describes his fifth directorial turn as an attempt to "promote Shakespeare," and "hook people off the street who have had no previous exposure to the play."

He describes this particular piece as "one I've wanted to do for a long time," due primarily to its appeal to those unfamiliar, or even uninterested in standard Shakespearean fare. Those familiar with the play should enjoy it just as much, though, as only a few words in the text have been changed.

The play has also been cut down to two hours, but as Pilkinton notes, "I've tried to cut the play in such a way that only those most familiar with "Twelfth Night" will notice. Besides, all the texts of Shakespeare are corrupt anyway," he commented, indicating the impossibility of preserving an "authentic" script.

The set was designed by Williard Neuert, assistant professor of communication and theatre, in an attempt to convey a modern, festive, glitzy New Year's Eve party, an appropriate modern counterpart to the "Twelfth Night" celebration of 1602, which featured the first performance of the play. Thus, contemporary scenes for today's modern audience were integrated with authentic Elizabethan costumes (designed by Professor Richard Donnelly of Purdue University) and language.

The result of this work is an enjoyable performance of classic literature which transcends its stuffy contemporaries by reaching out to all with its bawdy comedy and infectious humor. This universal aspect guarantees a good time for everyone.

Performances run from Wednesday, November 9 to Saturday November 12 at 8:10 p.m. and Sunday November 13 at 3:10 p.m. Tickets are $6 main floor and $5 balcony and are available at the door or at the LaFortune Box Office, weekdays 12:15 to 6 p.m. Student and senior citizen admission is $4 for the Wednesday, Thursday, and Sunday performances.

The Observer / Jennifer O'Donald

Sir Toby Belch (Tony Lawton), Marla (Nancy O'Connor), Sir Andrew Aquecheek (Joseph Keller), and Clown (Joseph Medel) celebrate New Year's Eve under an anachronistic Christmas tree in "Twelfth Night."

Basketball Tickets

Special to the Observer

Student season tickets for the 1988-89 Notre Dame basketball season are still available at the Joyce ACC box office.

Athletic Department director of promotions Bubba Cunningham says that student ticket sales are down from last year, despite the improvements in the Irish home schedule.

"I can't figure out why they're not selling," Cunningham said. "I guess the students are still thinking about football, and not basketball."

A few lower arena seats are still available for student purchase at $85, half off the price for the general public. Plenty of bleacher seats are available to students at $68 for the season.

Students can purchase tickets from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the JACC ticket office until the Notre Dame-Yugoslavia game Nov. 18. This season's home schedule includes Syracuse, Indiana, Temple, Duke, USC, DePaul and Louisville.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said Tuesday he would love to play top-ranked Notre Dame in a postseason bowl game, but he's going to leave the worrying to bowl selection committees. "Anybody that plays Notre Dame . . . is going to fill the stands and the airwaves, from Rome to Tokyo, especially Rome" said Bowden. "I think everybody will want to play Notre Dame especially when Notre Dame is having a great year which they're doing. Notre Dame is the number one collegiate football program in the world. They were when I was a little boy and they still are." -Associated Press

Jose Canseco, the first major leaguer to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases in one season, was selected The Associated Press Player of the Year on Tuesday. The Oakland right fielder received 141 1/2 votes from a panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. Los Angeles right-hander Orel Hershisier was runner-up with 13 votes followed by Minnesota's Kirby Puckett with five votes and Boston's Mike Greenwell with 4 1/2. -Associated Press

Joe Garagiola, one of the first former athletes to become a star sportscaster, is leaving NBC after 27 years because the network delayed negotiations on a new contract and left the impression he was no longer wanted. -Associated Press

The USF&G Flag Football tournament will be held this weekend, Friday through Sunday. NVA will be accepting entries until Thursday at 5 p.m. -The Observer

The Off-Campus hockey team will have a meeting Friday at 4:30 p.m. in LaFortune near the Sorin Room. A schedule of ice times will be handed out as part of this meeting. All players are expected to attend. Any questions should be directed to John Kirk at 289-1124. -The Observer

Garrett

tain of the team, his role is crucial.

"This is what we're building up for," said Garrett. "If we don't run well at districts we don't get to NCAA's."

"My job is just trying to keep the runners confident and upbeat," said Garrett. "The big thing is to act kind of as a liaison between coach (Piane) and the team."

Both his teammates and his coach agree that he does an excellent job as captain.

"He not only says the right things but he demonstrates through his example, his sincerity," said Piane. "He does everything I can ask and he does it well."

"He is also not afraid to communicate with me. He has a good sense of how the team feels."

Senior Ron Markezich, who has been a teammate of Dan's for the last four years, agreed.

"Dan has really helped me," said Markezich. "He's a great captain. He keeps the team together. He's been a great leader since high school."

Besides the NCAA race, Garrett holds the Notre Dame record in the outdoor 5000-meter race, running the 3.1-mile circuit in 14:10. Last year, he was the top finisher in all but one race.

In high school, he led his team to an undefeated season and a state championship in his senior year. His team was the first in New York history to be rated number one from beginning to end of the season.

Despite all his accomplishments, Garrett has had his share of setbacks. He missed his entire sophomore season due to tendonitis in his hip.

"That injury was really frustrating," said Garrett. "I had been running since the seventh grade and then I couldn't run at all. I still went to all the meets, trying to be a part of the team even though I wasn't running."

Recently, Garrett has experienced an unexplained setback in his running. For some unapparent reason, his times have risen over the last two meets.

"Technically speaking, I've been running like dogmeat," Garrett said. "But that doesn't mean that I'm done for the season."

Neither Piane nor the runners have been excessively concerned with this lapse in Garrett's performance, because they know his capabilities.

"Dan is as hard a worker as anyone," said Piane. "He always gives 100 percent."

Garrett's outlook reflects his success in the past.

"You take each meet as it comes," said Garrett. "If we

"ABC doesn't sit on our selection committee," he said.

ABC and the Sugar Bowl have had a good relationship for years and recently extended their contract, he said.

"But they don't become involved in making decisions. When it comes to the point that we have to make a decision—beyond Notre Dame—we will make the decision," he said.

Again, Holmes was asked whether the Sugar Bowl might sever its contract with the SEC, since the league's intramural schedule almost guarantees losses that hurt rankings.

"It's certainly a question that our executive committee will have to address pretty soon, because we have a negotiation period coming up," Holmes said.

"I think that if you look at it over the long haul, the SEC has been awfully good to the USF&G Sugar Bowl. At the same time, the Sugar Bowl has been awfully good to the SEC."

run well, we realize it will help the team get to nationals. If we run poorly, we look over and see what we did. We're just trying to peak towards the end of the season."

As for future plans, Garrett wants running to be a part of his life.

"I'll always be active," said Garrett. "I want to run competitively, but it's not like professional football where that's all you do. I'm not sure what's going to happen. It could just be jumping in a road race in my home town."

"I think his future is still in front of him," said Piane. "Danny is still very young and has a brilliant future ahead of him."

Rocket launches career as a receiver, kick returner

By BRIAN O'GARA
Sports Writer

When Raghil Ismail came to visit Notre Dame last spring, all he wanted to see was the football field tunnel and Touchdown Jesus.

"We walked out onto the field," recalls Ismail, "and then walked all the way down to the other end zone, looked around and there it was. And I said 'Oh wow, this is great. I've got to come here.'"

That trip down the field to the end zone does not take nearly as long this fall for the freshman from Wilkes-Barre, Pa. The nickname says it all. He's The Rocket.

"I got that nickname in eighth grade in track," says Ismail. "My coach said I came out of the blocks like a rocket."

The freshman split end has had a fast start here at Notre Dame too. Ismail has caught nine passes this season for 198 yards, including a 58-yard bomb from Tony Rice that set up a go-ahead touchdown against Miami and his first collegiate touchdown against Purdue.

One of Ismail's greatest weapons is his well-publicized speed. The Grace Hall freshman has run the 40 in 4.18 seconds last summer at a AAU practice, and recorded a 4.28 average after two runs on the first day of football workouts in August.

A standout tailback in high school, Ismail accounted for over 7300 yards and 74 touchdowns in 26 games at Meyers High School. But when the Rocket stepped on the Notre Dame campus this fall, he wasn't taking handoffs in the backfield, he was fearing taking licks in the secondary.

"I remember telling Coach Holtz that I would play anywhere I could contribute," recalls Ismail, whose brother Qadry is a running back at Syracuse. "Then I found out the first day that I was going to be split end and I thought, 'Oh no, not receiver.' My first feeling was of helplessness. As running back you have the defenders in sight and could give them a little of what they're giving you. But at receiver you're going up for the ball with your back to the defender."

But the new position has been kind to Ismail. He is a vital part of a 9-0 top-ranked team and had a key block of a field-goal attempt in the second game of the season at Michigan State. And Saturday the Rocket exploded. After several close calls to breaking the big one, Rocket took home two kickoffs for touchdowns as the Irish routed Rice 54-11.

"All year long we would pass the first wall of blockers," says Ismail, "and on the films we always see how one more block or one other move or just a split-second would be the difference between a 30-yard gain and a touchdown."

"We work so hard at it in practice. The coaches always tell us to play like we practice.

We take special teams as another offensive play—it's one of the biggest plays in college football."

With the two returns of 83 and 87 yards, Ismail moved to the top spot in the nation in kickoff returns by averaging just over 37 yards a return, over six yards more per return than his closest rival.

Ismail cited Steve Belles' crushing block that sprung him for the final 40 yards of his first return on Saturday.

"Out of my peripheral vision I saw a guy chasing me," recalls Ismail. "Then POW, he was gone. Today I saw it on films and I couldn't believe it. He got a 'Tyson' on that one—he crushed him."

As Ismail speaks, he squirms and gestures. He can't stop moving. He can't stop thinking about how badly he wants to succeed on the football field.

"He's got such a great attitude," says receivers coach Pete Cordelli. "You can see why he is such a success as an athlete and a person. He's a real inquisitive guy—he wants to watch films and ask questions so he can learn things and learn to do things well."

It is that attitude that made Ismail a fast learner at receiver. And he had a lot to learn.

"As a running back all I had to worry about was running fast," says Ismail. "But now I've got to read coverages and learn different ways of running routes and blocking—oh my goodness—blocking bigger defensive backs."

"There are a lot of little things that I knew nothing about when I was a running back," says Ismail. "It's like all starting over again. I've learned a lot but I still have a long way to go."

But just he did in eighth grade track, Ismail is out of the blocks for a speedy start. And, lucky for the Irish, the race he's running will make him a weapon for Notre Dame for a long time.

Easy-going Brown saves intensity for playing field

By FRANK PASTOR
Sports Writer

Dean Brown is something of an enigma.

Notre Dame's junior offensive tackle excels at a position which requires a tremendous amount of intensity by maintaining an easy-going personality.

"He's one of the easier-going kids on the team," said Irish offensive line coach Joe Moore. "He's not a very intense person, or an ill-tempered person. He's just a nice kid."

Brown has become an integral part of the offensive line since taking over at the tight tackle position early in spring practice. The Canton, Ohio, native was moved from guard to tackle in order to bolster an offensive line depleted by the graduation of its senior members.

The offensive line, widely considered one of the major question marks for the Irish before the season began, has suddenly come into its own. Brown compares the line to a well-oiled machine.

"The offensive line is like a machine, and each position is like one little piece of the machine," said the 6-3, 283-pound junior. "If one person lets down, he lets everybody else within that unit down. That's the attitude of all offensive linemen. I can truly say that the guys we have on the line are competitors in the rawest form."

"Dean's a very important part of that machine," adds Moore. "His inexperience and his inconsistency show up once in a while, but when he's humming on all cylinders, he's a pretty darn good player."

Moore points to Brown's enormous strength and quickness as his most important assets. These are as much a product of home cooking as of extensive training in the Loftus Sports Center.

"The weight program that's set up now is really intense," said Brown. "It's the best I've been a part of. The strength coach (Scott Raridon) and his assistants put a lot of time and effort into trying to get us into the weight room and getting us to lift the proper things. Of course, I always look forward to going home and getting some of Mom's cooking, too."

Notre Dame proved to be the best college choice for Brown since it was close to home and offered the right blend of athletics and academics. The three-year letterman out of McKinley High School in Canton believes the three years he's spent under the Dome have brought him closer to those legendary figures enshrined at the NFL Hall of Fame in his hometown.

"Football and academics monopolize the vast majority of time we (student-athletes) have in the day," said Brown. "It's difficult trying to prepare mentally for practice every day of the week, trying to get better, and then you've got to shift gears to get the schoolwork done.

"But no matter what happens, the mark of a true champion is a person who can handle all the adversity and shift gears a little bit to be mentally strong in any situation he faces."

Brown likes to "just mellow out and think" while listening to jazz music in the little spare time he does have during the week. His thoughts don't center on anything in particular, but run the gamut from past experiences to the direction his life may take in the future. He also takes time out of his busy schedule to get acquainted with his fellow residents in Dillon Hall.

"I try to be personable," said Brown. "I feel that it's important to stay on a pretty even keel with everybody. I don't have that stereotype that, 'He's a football player, and he has to be arrogant all the time.' I try to set a good example for the freshmen and the people I know in the dorm. I try to adjust to the different people and the way that they act towards me."

Tony Rice is one particular Dillon resident to whom Brown has adjusted. The junior quarterback roomed with Brown for two years before this season, and his presence in the Irish backfield serves as an incentive for Brown to keep opponents out of that same backfield.

"I try to keep the guys (opposing defensemen) off all the backs," said Brown. "But it is a good feeling to know that Tony's back there. I've known him so long, he's just like a brother to me. I know what he's thinking all the time. Being in a personal relationship with him makes it a little more gratifying for me."

By successfully keeping these defensive linemen away from Rice and the other Irish backs, Brown has helped Notre Dame get off to its fastest start in years.

Knicks top Bulls; Hornets win first

Special to The Observer

Johnny Newman scored a career-high 35 points to lead the New York Knicks to a 126-117 victory over the Chicago Bulls Tuesday night.

Michael Jordan had 31 points for the Bulls, but it was not enough to stop the Knicks from recording their first win of the season.

Both teams now have 1-2 records.

In other NBA action, former Irish star Kelly Tripucka scored 24 points to lead the Charlotte Hornets to a 117-105 win over the Los Angeles Clippers, the first ever for the expansion team.

Atlanta defeated Indiana 112-107. New Jersey outscored Washington 109-101.

Sugar Bowl still lists Notre Dame as top priority

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS —The director of the Sugar Bowl says he's serious about a possible matchup between No.1 Notre Dame and the Southeastern Conference champion.

"I find it interesting and amusing that nobody really will take us very seriously as to where we might stand with Notre Dame," Mickey Holmes told the New Orleans Quarterback Club. "We feel very good about it."

"We make no bones about Notre Dame being our priority. The people on the West Coast know that. The people in West Virginia know that, the same in Miami and with Florida State."

The loser of the game between No.2 Southern Cal, 8-0, and No.6 UCLA, 8-1, has been mentioned as a possible Sugar Bowl team, as has No.3 Miami, 7-1; No.4 West Virginia, 9-0, and No.5 Florida State, 8-1.

Auburn, 8-1 and No.9, is in a three-way tie in the SEC race with Louisiana State University, 6-2 and No.12, and Georgia, 7-2 and No.17. Each has one conference loss, Auburn's defeat by LSU.

"USC and UCLA are two pretty good football teams and very much in the mix, as far as we are concerned," Holmes said on Monday.

"We have made an effort to get Miami," he said. "One thing we can't allow ourselves to forget is that LSU could win the SEC championship outright," he said.

"I can see a scenario that you should think about, and that's that LSU beats Miami. That's the reason we can't get too excited about Miami, because Miami isn't interested in a rematch.

"And if LSU should beat Miami on the 19th, they could be ranked higher than anyone else in the SEC, including Auburn, in the national rankings."

"LSU is very much involved in the championship picture as far as the SEC is concerned, and with that being a fact, Miami is pretty much on the back burner. And Miami understands that."

"The whole thing boils down to that there will be no movement in any direction by anybody until Notre Dame decides how it wants to handle its postseason appearance," Holmes said.

He said the ABC network will have no say in the decision.

He's a rare Irish All-American

Top-10 NCAA runner Garrett leads ND cross country

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

It isn't every year that Notre Dame is the home of one of the top 10 NCAA runners in the country.

In fact, it has been 24 years.

Dan Garrett, a fifth-year senior completing his final year of eligibility on the men's cross country team, finished sixth overall in the 10,000-meter NCAA Championship race last year, the best finish by a Notre Dame runner since 1964.

Garrett's awesome performance was representative of the entire team effort last year, improving with every meet, peaking at the NCAA Championships. The team finished seventh at the race, which was also its best since 1964.

Garrett surprised a lot of people at the meet, including himself.

"I was really surprised,"

Dan Garrett

said Garrett. "I thought I had a chance at making All-American (top 30 runners in the race), so I got out in that race and after two miles I caught the lead group."

"When I found myself in that group I couldn't believe it," Garrett continued. "Towards the finish people started kicking in and I managed to stay up there."

Indeed, Garrett managed just fine, running the 6.2-mile course in 29:24.74, which is averaging 4.7 minutes for each mile on the course.

"Frankly, I was somewhat surprised," said cross country coach Joe Piane. "He placed fifth in districts, so I thought he might finish in the top 10 or 15. Dan ran very well, and when the track season rolled around he proved that his performance was not a fluke."

Now, the second-year captain from Clarence Center, New York, is playing a vital role in the team's quest of reaching the NCAA Championships for a second straight year. If the team achieves this goal, it will be the first time the Irish have done it since 1966.

To get there, the Irish will have to race extremely well in the upcoming District IV meet. Since Garrett is also cap-

Interhall flag football--it's not just for kids anymore

Football does not get nearly the attention it deserves at Notre Dame.

Sound ridiculous? Think again. I'm not talking about the 9-0 top-ranked Fighting Irish who are causing bowl speculation to be the campus pastime.

I'm talking about a different level of pigskin tossing. I'm talking about women's interhall flag football.

But this isn't the same flag football that we had to play in elementary school so our parents wouldn't sue the principal if we were hurt. Flag football was what you played when you were wearing your best pants and your mother said, "Now don't get dirty, Precious." Flag football was for people who didn't like to get all sweaty.

Well, not anymore.

Flag football gives girls the chance to do what their big brothers talked about throughout their childhood—shooting the gaps, run a down-and-out, kick to the sideline, master the option pitch, get dirty and even sweat.

Early in September I was asked to be one of the defensive coaches for Farley's flag football team. I said sure—it might be kind of fun. What I didn't realize was how it could become so addictive.

Daily practices at Stepan. Weekly games under the lights at Cartier. And example after example that this was really a sport that was played because it was fun.

Fun, but who says this isn't just as intense as real football?

Brian O'Gara

Irish Items

In one game our inside linebacker jumped to deflect a pass and came down shaking her finger. "Did you break a finger nail?" joked one of the coaches.

No, she broke her finger.

But two weeks later she was back in the lineup and picked off a key pass. That's what toughness is all about. Well, she kind of ruined the moment when she skipped off the field and hugged the coach, but, hey, Stonebreaker probably does that too.

Not only did the defense not give up any points in the season's first four games, but it even scored two. A junior defensive end beat her man, er, woman, on the outside and caught the quarterback in the end zone for a safety. Forget the fact that she stands 5'3" and barely tips the scales in triple figures.

Opportunity also knocks for the football wanna-be coaches like me. All those hours watching "Wake Up The Echoes" paid off when it came time to deliver pre-game pep talks. I even tried a "Win One For..." line.

And then there is the crouching down during key plays and pulling at the grass like Lou Holtz does. If really didn't seem to matter that we played all our games on turf and it is mighty difficult to pull up carpet.

The flag football championship still has yet to be decided. Lewis will meet Breen-Phillips in the Stadium, probably on the Sunday after Penn State. If you have never seen a women's flag football game here, go. You may be surprised. They may still call each other Precious and still worry about their hair, but they can also run the option and drop a quarterback for a loss with the best of them.
