Malloy and students discuss student-faculty interaction

By NATASHA WILSON
Senior Staff Reporter

University President Father Edward Malloy met with hall academic commissioners, student government representatives and hall fellows last night to discuss ways to promote interaction between students and faculty through activities with resident hall fellows.

Sean Hoffman, Academic coordinator for the Government Association and Chris Devron, Student Faculty Relations commissioner said they called the meeting to encourage all academic commissioners to choose hall fellows and participate in activities with them.

About 12 dorms currently have fellows, Devron said, and added that he hopes every dorm will have at least one fellow by the end of the school year.

John Goldrick, associate vice president for Residence Life, heads the Intellectual Life Committee which was formed this semester to promote academic growth around campus.

Goldrick and student committee members have met with rectors and hall presidents this semester to encourage increased interaction between faculty and students, said committee member and student body Vice President Mike Paese.

Red dots intended to raise consciousness about nuclear war

By REGIS COCCIA
Senior Staff Reporter

A new campus peace organization took the issue of nuclear war Monday and laid it at the feet of the Notre Dame community.

UCAM, United Campuses To Prevent Nuclear War, placed 6,000 red paper dots around campus Monday to raise awareness of the dangers of nuclear war.

Each individual dot represented the total nuclear megatonnage of bombs in World War II, including the bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan while all 6,000 dots represented the explosive power in the nuclear arsenals of the United States and Soviet Union, said UCAM cofounders Janet Herold and Dave Krier.

"I don't think anybody has any idea what (nuclear strength) we have. We wanted to demonstrate our nuclear capability," Krier said.

"We wanted to let people know what we're going into and what supporting the defense system really means," Herold said. "Our main goal on this campaign is to inform. There are things we can do about our situation."

Krier said he got the idea from Professor George Lopez, who displayed a slide marked with dots signifying the explosive power of the U.S. and Soviet nuclear stockpiles. The dots, each representing the total explosive power in World War II, almost blacked out the slide, he said.

"It was so shocking to see in class, we just felt we had to share it," Krier said. "If nothing else, it was important to our organization. All we wanted was to get people to think."

Nuclear war is the greatest threat to life on earth today, Herold said. "If we don't start there, with the biggest thing that threatens our children,

Drug tests ordered for transportation workers by DOT

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- The Transportation Department on Monday ordered a wide range of drug testing, including random checks, for more than 4 million transportation workers from airline pilots and flight attendants to truckers and railroaders.

Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley said the transportation industries are no more immune to drug abuse as other parts of society, listing a series of accidents and other indicators he said shows narcotics to be a problem among truck and bus drivers, commercial pilots and railroad workers.

"The American people demand and expect a drug-free transportation system. These new rules will take us as far as practically possible toward that goal," Burnley said at a news conference.

He acknowledged the tests, which take effect in a year, likely will be challenged in the courts.

The Supreme Court has before it two separate drug-testing cases, including one involving post-accident testing of railroad workers, that are expected to be decided next year.

After Burnley's announcement, the head of the 40,000-member Air Line Pilots Association vowed to go to Congress and to the federal courts to overturn the requirement for random testing.

"Random testing is a counter-productive, shotgun strategy that is at the same time an unwarranted invasion of privacy and of no significant value in the battle against drug abuse," said ALPA President Henry Duffy.

The series of federal regulations announced by Burnley call for transportation companies to have a comprehensive testing program in place by December 1989. Companies with 50 or fewer employees including tens of thousands of over-the-road independent truckers have a second year to comply.

The Transportation Department estimated the testing will cost businesses more than $2.1 billion during the first 10 years, but Burnley said the testing will save the same companies about $8.7 billion in increased productivity, accident reductions and medical cost savings.

Besides requiring random checks, the regulations call for

Senate examines hall formals, phone books

By FLORENTINE HOELKER

A resolution concerning the limiting of residence hall formals was passed by the Student Senate Monday evening.

The resolution, formed mainly by the four student senators, stated that since alcohol has been officially eliminated at formals and formals are a "vital part of Notre Dame hall and social life," their numbers should not be limited by the University Administration.

"Students have really communicated to us... that this decision was a major flaw (in the Alcohol Policy) and a step in the wrong direction," commented Tom Rask and Mark Chapman.

The senators met with Father David Tyson, who recommended that they use the "proper channels" such as the senate, Hall Presidents' council, and the Campus Life Council to show their dissatisfaction with the decision to limit hall formals to one per semester.

Student Senate also approved the Fall Board of Trustees reports. The reports deal with co-ed housing, transportation, parking, and social life at Notre Dame.

"These reports are very, very good. They address crucial aspects of life here at Notre Dame and suggest some viable possibilities for change," said Student Body Vice-President Mike Paese.

A "Civil War" was announced between North and South quads to support the United Way. Money will be collected at both dining halls during dinner, with the most generous quad winning the war.

Finally, the long-awaited campus phone directories should be in the dorms by the end of the week.

Secret admirer ads work wonders for social life

The focus of this article is a true Notre Dame institution: The Observer personal ads. Every day at lunch, the great majority of students read through these ads.

In the essence of true equality, the secret admirer personals do not discriminate against either sex. As you've read, the recipients range from "the guy who works the salad bar at South on Monday nights" to the "gorgeous redhead in a green dress who was buying shampoo at the bookstore yesterday."

The requests following these descriptive introductions vary as well. While some proclaim passionate love, others simply offer compliments or attempt to arrange a future rendezvous.

Of course, personals which read "Will the beautiful brunette in Dr. Freeman's 8 a.m. Orgo class, who wore spandex pants and a blue sweater to class Monday, meet me for an unforgettable night of passion?" tend to go unanswered.

I recently tried this method myself. While studying on the 12th floor of the library last Sunday, I noticed an extremely attractive girl with golden blonde hair sitting only a few tables away.

Not being one to make an idiot of myself if I can help it, I quickly rejected the idea of walking up to her and saying, "Wow, you look great! Let's take a walk and get to know each other."

So I placed a personal to her the next day with the small hope of a response and with much kidding from friends.

I did receive a reply, though, and after a little asking around found out her name and number. At this point, I decided to go all out and call her, which was not the easiest of decisions.

I guess the stars were in the right alignment or something, because when I asked if she'd be interested in going out sometime, her answer was yes.

Rich Iannelli Payroll Manager

We ended up seeing a movie, one of the most reliable forms of entertainment around. Needless to say, I had a great time and I think she enjoyed herself, too, but that's not the point of this story.

Granted, walking up to someone on the quad or sending a personal are not "sure things," but they can work. In my case, while I was initially impressed by this girl's looks and smile, I was even more impressed with her personality and character.

Take a chance! There's almost always that special someone you've wanted to meet, but never have. Take a small risk. The pay off can be great!

Bush seeks to minimize world financial market jitters

Associated Press

GULF STREAM, Fla.—George Bush, seeking to calm world financial market fears about his forthcoming presidency, said today that he will continue the Reagan administration policy of coordinated intervention with U.S. allies in exchange markets when major currencies rise or fall too quickly.

The president-elect sought to minimize the weakening of the dollar against the Japanese yen and German mark and the plunge of the stock market since his election last Tuesday, saying "These gyrations happen."

"Exchange market stability is the key. . . Nobody is going to peg the dollar to any existing currency," he said in an informal meeting with reporters on the beach.

Questions about the markets' behavior have dogged the vice president during his post-election Florida beach vacation. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell almost 80 points last week, including a 47-point drop Friday that was partially triggered by fears over erosion of the dollar's value abroad.

Asked if he would favor lowering the dollar against foreign currencies as has been suggested by his sometime economic adviser Martin Feldstein, Bush said: "the policy in effect is the administration policy built around policy coordination and exchange market stability. . . That's the policy of the administration."

For the past three years, the United States and its economic allies have had a policy of coordinated intervention in exchange markets when major currencies rise or fall too rapidly. The central banks of the major industrial countries buy or sell dollars, depending on whether they are trying to counter a rise or a fall in its value.

Bush working on senior Cabinet posts; Brady will most likely stay at Treasury

Associated Press

WASHINGTON— President-elect George Bush plans to consider candidates this week for his senior Cabinet posts, and a list of three to five names is being drawn up for each, aides said Monday.

Bush will return to Washington from a Florida vacation on Tuesday. He is expected to announce that Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, a longtime adviser and friend, will remain in his job after Jan. 20, when the Bush administration begins.

Leaders of Bush's transition team said the president-elect wants to consider four or five senior cabinet choices this week. They said he especially wants to assemble his economic team rapidly, which also is likely to include former Deputy Treasury Secretary Richard Darman as budget chief, and Stanford University Professor Michael Boskin as chief White House economic adviser.

"I think that the economic team, under the circumstances, would be one you'd want to pay attention to early on," said Robert Teeter, a co-director of the transition with Craig Fuller.

Bush has no timetable for making appointments, and will announce them as decisions are made, Fuller said. Bush already has named former Treasury Secretary James Baker III as the new secretary of state.

Bush fueled speculation about appointments by inviting New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu to a private dinner Monday night at his vacation quarters. Sununu is mentioned as a leading candidate to be Bush's chief of staff. So is Fuller.

Bush also did nothing to dampen speculation that the White House would be run by a power-sharing triumvirate of Sununu, Fuller and Teeter.

To The Notre Dame Community:

We would like to apologize to the entire community for our offensive act during the Sorin Talent Show on Nov. 4, 1988. In no way did we intend for the act to be interpreted as demeaning to anyone. We merely intended to impersonate the well known rap group Run DMC. In retrospect, we see that our impersonation succeeded in little more than angering a significant sector of the Notre Dame family.

As a family, we should strive to understand one another, but in order to understand we must first be educated. Unfortunately, the sheltered environments many Notre Dame students come from do not afford that education. Hopefully others will learn from our mistake and will use that knowledge to better understand humankind.

Sincerely,

Catholic bishops to speak out on issues

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- The nation's Roman Catholic bishops on Monday recommitted themselves to speaking out fearlessly on public issues in the new Bush administration while grudgingly bowing to Vatican intervention on a church matter.

The President of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, Archbishop John May of St. Louis, opened the group's annual meeting by congratulating President-elect George Bush on last week's victory.

But he quickly added that the bishops, convinced despite criticism that there's no such thing as "too much social consciousness," would continue to tackle heated public issues as they did repeatedly during the Reagan administration.

"Our voices will not be heard only in praise and appreciation," he said.

May and other leaders of the bishops' conference played down talk of new controversy between them and the Vatican, but most of the discussion at Monday's session revolved around two issues:

-A last-minute intervention by the Vatican that will keep the group from voting this week on guidelines for resolving disputes with theologians, a document several years in preparation.

-The bishops' own proposed rejection of a draft Vatican document that seems to greatly limit the theological authority of conferences such as the American bishops'.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- Vice President-elect Dan Quayle announced Monday he intends to resign his Senate seat in time to give his successor a jump in seniority over the new class of lawmakers being sworn in Jan. 3.

Quayle said he had "no recommendations" to make on a successor when he met privately with Indiana Gov. Robert Orr, who will make the appointment. "I evaluated everyone from top to bottom," he told reporters afterward.

Orr, a Republican, stressed that the decision would be his to make, and said he and Quayle "talked about a whole lot of people. That's confidential."

The list of possible successors includes Rep. Dan Coats, a former aide to Quayle who holds the House seat once occupied by Quayle; Indiana House Speaker Paul Manner and Mitchell Daniels, a former White House political director with close ties to Sen. Richard Lugar.

Other names mentioned include Marion County Prosecutor Steve Goldsmith; Lt. Gov. John Mutz, who was defeated in the election for governor last week, and Indianapolis Mayor William Hudnut.

Others whose names have cropped up include former Indiana Secretary of State Edwin Simcox, one-time Environmental Protection Administration chief William Ruckelshaus and Rep. Dan Burton.

Quayle's wife, Marilyn, has passed up several opportunities to say whether reports of her interest in the seat are true, although the vice president-elect told reporters that she intends to issue a statement shortly.

Speculation on a new Indiana senator picked up Monday as President-elect George Bush said in Florida that he had "no specifics yet" on the duties Quayle will hold in the new administration.

Bush said his campaign pledge that Quayle will head a space council stands.

Officials also announced that Quayle would sit on on Tuesday when Bush meets with visiting West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

Quayle will play reduced role in new administration, experts say

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- Dan Quayle is likely to be a "man on the outside" in George Bush's White House following a vice presidential candidacy that began in a furor but settled into obscurity, experts say.

Encumbered by his image as a political novice who needed a bevy of professional handlers to survive early campaign controversies, Quayle enters a Bush administration in which he has few intimates or allies.

Relegated in the campaign to small towns and safe GOP areas, Quayle as vice president is likely to be given a traditional ceremonial role- going to political gatherings and state funerals- rather than the advisory role that Walter Mondale and even Bush had, some scholars feel.

"Dan Quayle is going to set the vice presidency back about a decade or more. One thing that political scientists have been talking about is just how much the vice presidency has grown . . . With Quayle, it's just going to retreat to the old days of politics and funerals," said Ryan Barilleaux, a professor of political science at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, who studies the American presidency.

Bush rarely mentioned his 41-year-old running mate during the campaign. When asked, Bush employed the stock lines that Quayle would "make an outstanding vice president" and had been "tempered by steel" as he weathered the early furor over his military service, academic record and personal life.

The president-elect told reporters Quayle would have access to the same papers, information and intelligence that is available to the president. But he would go no further in describing what assignments he would give Quayle.

Quayle says Bush has talked to him about heading a space council, and that he assumes he'll have a role in the administration's anti-drug efforts. "I will be a very close adviser to the president," Quayle said.

But that's not the way everyone sees it.

Both Bush and Mondale came to their vice presidential campaigns with substantial reputations and were able to place key staffers in important positions in the respective presidential campaigns, Barilleaux notes.

"Dan Quayle has contributed nothing in the way of staff to the Bush campaign. He doesn't have his own big reputation on Capitol Hill . . . Dan Quayle has no friends in a Bush White House except George Bush," Barilleaux says.

"They're going to give him a lot of window dressing, a space council, drug task force, but he's going to be a man on the outside . . . not a man who's going to be consulted in a crisis, except on a pro forma basis."

But Eddie Mahe Jr., a GOP consultant who worked with the Bush campaign, says Bush is likely to give Quayle a more active role in the administration than he had in the campaign.

"Vindication demands that. Both of them will want to prove how right the decision was," Mahe says.

Democrats portrayed Quayle during the campaign as a lightweight, a man with little or no legislative accomplishments, untested and unqualified to be a heartbeat away from the presidency. Even some members of Quayle's own party were dismayed at Bush's choice.

Quayle didn't help his case by making a number of celebrated gaffes during the campaign.

Detectives search for more bodies in California

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif.- Detectives armed with steel probes found a sixth body Monday in the yard of a Victorian rooming house run by a missing landlady who had told a social worker she took in elderly boarders as a way to repay society.

The sixth corpse- unidentified like the others- was discovered shortly after digging resumed Monday morning. It was "wrapped in some type of clothing," and buried in a shallow grave under a shed, said police Sgt. Bob Burns. The cause of death was not immediately known.

On Monday, 200 spectators watched from behind police lines as investigators worked at the grounds of the home. Authorities say there could be eight bodies buried.

Burns said police are still searching for the landlady, Dorothea Montalvo Puente, 59.

Burns said investigators were told she ran a board and care home eight or nine years ago about eight blocks away, and authorities were interviewing tenants and neighbors there. There were no immediate plans to dig at that property, Burns added.

Authorities issued an all-points bulletin for Puente, who disappeared Friday after detectives interviewed her for several hours and released her for lack of evidence.

Authorities believe the victims, apparently all low-income elderly people and all residents of the eight-room Victorian home downtown, were killed for their Social Security checks.

 where are we going to?" she said.

About 20 students in UCAM taped the dots to walks around campus between midnight and 2:30 a.m. Monday and picked them up at 4 p.m., Herold said.

UCAM is a national organization with about 80 chapters at colleges and universities across the nation. The organization's main branch is in Washington, D.C.

Krier said he decided to form a chapter at Notre Dame after reading a pamphlet at Vanderbilt University, where his brother was a UCAM officer.

Herold and Krier formed the group at Notre Dame this fall with the help of Mike Affleck, coordinator of peace programming and education at the Center for Social Concerns. The group's 20 members range from freshmen to graduate students, Krier said.

"UCAM has no one, set political opinion. It has mixed members who are highly motivated," Herold said, adding that most people are interested in the group "once they find out it's not ultra-liberal."

Last night Goldrick stressed the need for students to get to know their professors on a more casual basis outside the classroom because, he said, it is often difficult for professors to interact with every student in a class of hundreds.

The university has had a difficult time developing the extra-curricular academic life on campus, Malloy said.

"Since much of our day is devoted to the classroom... we tend to think of the dorm as a place to escape and get away from that routine. To present opportunities for intellectual development in that kind of a climate is not always so easy," said Malloy.

Thomas Morris, a fellow for both Flanner and Pasquerilla West Halls, expressed his enthusiasm for the fellow program and said he "relished the opportunity to be involved."

The interaction of students and faculty on a casual basis allows for the "the looseness of exchange of ideas that you don't get in the classroom," said Morris, an associate professor of philosophy.

"My idea of classroom teaching is that the disease in the classroom ought to be contagious. You want to take it back with you to the dorm."

Morris said he especially enjoyed a viewing of clips from Woody Allen films and a discussion of the philosophical and religious questions of the films with Flanner and Pasquerilla West residents.

Fr. Oliver Williams, an in-residence hall fellow at Flanner, said he is optimistic about the future of the hall fellow program.

"We're just beginning this but I think it can be very successful. It really does enhance the intellectual atmosphere (on campus)," Williams said.

The challenge of Catholicism

Church teaching is tough. To comply with it demands effort, struggle, self-sacrifice, and pain. Christ called it the narrow way. It is ironic though that while knowing full well that the way to any form of human excellence or any worthwhile achievement is narrow, we are somehow disconcerted and annoyed when we discover this is the case with our faith. And what it promises is so much greater—eternal life, eternal peace, eternal justice, eternal joy, and a very real participation in these right now.

Thomas D'Andrea
inside out

The problem with our faith is that we do not see the pay-off so quickly, and we have not yet crossed to the other shore where the pay-off will be complete. So we tend to slack off: we grab at things, often good things, that seem more immediate and tangible, but which do not fully satisfy and leave us often more frustrated than before.

It is a problem of emphasis and proportion; like the Pharisees of old, we care too much about external things—about our G.P.A., our career, our image, our possessions, the esteem others hold us in—and too little about the bigger things: about righteousness (i.e. not the pharasaical kind), about friendship with God, and about authentic solidarity with one another.

But we will go to great lengths, make great sacrifices of time and energy, perform noble feats of self-discipline and self-denial, to improve our grades, excel in some intramural or inter-collegiate sport, or to tie down that job interview or get that summer internship. We know what is required to exceed ourselves, and we value the lives and example of those who triumph in the contest.

And then someone tells us that to be a real Catholic requires certain elementary acts of self-discipline and self-sacrifice: getting to Mass weekly, going to confession every once in a while, exercising restraint in things sexual, obeying certain eminently reasonable laws concerning our conduct toward others, praying daily, obeying our due superiors, sacrificing time and money to help the less fortunate, and so on. And then we get upset. Repression! Paternalism! Authoritarianism! Narrow mindedness! Condescension! Maybe. But maybe not.

No one ever said that being a real Catholic was easy. If they did they were either very naive or very deceitful or both. But no one ever said that a 3.8, or a spot on the football team, or a job with Solomon Brothers was easy either—and no one would believe them if they did. For those who have tried, being a full-fledged Catholic is simple—one knows what one has to do—it is not easy.

But let's not condemn it or reject it until we've really tried to live it—all of it (since for those who have tried being a lukewarm Catholic is a pretty lousy thing). Then, if we exercise a little patience, nothing good comes without a wait, we can see if it delivers what it promises. We can see if it is the most intensely satisfying and fulfilling way of being in the world, and through the world, as it claims to be.

The first words spoken by Christ in his public ministry were not "Love one another", or "Work hard and enjoy life", or anything of the kind. They were: "What do you seek?" and then, "come and see." The first apostles (to whom these words were addressed) had the humility to admit they had not found what they were seeking, the sense of inquisitiveness and the daring to keep looking, and the courage to carry their search through to the end. And the world has not been the same since.

Being a faithful Catholic is tough: so is anything worthwhile. But the grace of God is always present and that is always help enough. And it's not just something for priests and monks and nuns. Christ addressed all when he said seek first the kingdom of God and his justice, and all good things will be added besides. Have we even begun to respond to this challenge and live as Catholics with the character and conviction of a Saint Peter or Saint Paul? Let's hold off the complaints until then.

Students should be open to honor code

Dear Editor:

Gregory Volan in his column of Nov. 2, makes the point that the Honor Code works at other schools because students respect it. Respect is precisely what is needed for the Notre Dame Honor Code at this time. Respect means giving the Code a fair chance and accepting the responsibility of educating oneself about it. Volan insists that most students are "simply against the idea of an honor code." We cannot agree with this statement, for the idea of an honor code is simply the upholding of an individual's personal integrity. What many students are not in support of is probably Volan's second point, the way in which it was implemented.

The Code is continuing to evolve, and it is our hope that it will become something that will help, not hinder, the Notre Dame academic community. If, at the end of this experimental period, students do not feel that it is a benefit, they will decide upon its fate. So they do have the final say.

We fully recognize the importance of student educations about the Code. This experimental period is one of education. In the Academic Council meeting in April 1987, an unopposed voice vote approved this experimental period, which "will serve to publicize and cause awareness of the Honor Code. It will be a catalyst for discussion and will educate the campus community about the positive and negative aspects."

We recognize that more education is needed, not just for students, but for the entire community. The University Honor Code Committee is currently compiling a handbook explaining the Code, and it will be distributed in the spring semester. Any suggestions and comments are welcomed by this committee. Assessment letters will also be distributed to some participants in Honor Code sections.

In reference to Mr. Volan's insistence that the Code is inconsistent with the social life at the University, our response is simply that the Honor Code had to start somewhere. Obviously, since it has encountered resistance already, thrusting it upon students in every aspect of their lives would have been a mistake. The codes at Haverford, Brigham Young University, Washington and Lee, and the military academies which govern all aspects of student life are based upon established traditions. We do not have the necessary foundation of tradition. We have to try an honor code and give it a chance before a tradition can possibly be established.

During the next few years, students will be educated about the Code so that they can responsibly decide for themselves. We urge students to try to keep an open mind about the Honor Code and not to be prejudiced one way or the other until they understand it. Obviously, Gregory Volan has tried to come to terms with the Honor Code and has made an educated decision about it. We thank him and respect him for it.

BIG PLANS

The Queen of Scholars Graduate Campus was completely abandoned as being too ambitious. EXPANSION PROJECTS NEVER MATERIALIZED

accent writer

The Notre Dame campus is regarded as one of the most beautiful and hallowed college campuses in the nation, in terms of its architecture, its landscape, and its many statues. Its character is largely the product of a comprehensive plan for campus development published by Professor Francis W. Kervick in 1920 under the direction of University President James Burns.

Kervick's conception of an appropriate campus architectural style and land use influenced the physical development of Notre Dame for 35 years after his projections. Since his ideas became reality, several other plans for the physical and academic development of campus have been proposed, one of which had the potential to change the nature of the university entirely.

In the 1950s the Queen of Scholars Graduate Campus was proposed to enhance the post-graduate dimension of the university. Each school was designed in a different architectural style, from Greek and Roman to Medieval and contemporary.

It was to be located immediately north of St. Joe's Lake and included a 100-foot-high white marble column, surmounted by a statue of Our Lady Queen of Scholars, and surrounded by three concentric marble colonnades encompassing statues of past and future great world educators.

The Queen of Scholars Graduate Campus was also to include a graduate administration building, a theater and gymnasium, a church, a women's dormitory, a visiting Bachelor faculty living quarters building including transient hotel accommodations for 100 people, a sports area, and a faculty housing and club area.

The proposal provided more than an architectural design for six educational graduate schools; it had the potential to revolutionize the graduate program at Notre Dame. This potential was embodied in the International Queen of Scholars Commission.

The Commission was set up to enhance the relationship of Notre Dame to the entire academic world through a variety of programs. It was to annually award ten monetary grants of $5,000 each (not adjusted for inflation) to selected scholars or educators throughout the world who contributed most during the year to the fields of scholarship and education.

The selection of a scholar or educator to receive one of these awards entitled the recipient, upon his death, to burial in the crypt beneath the scholar's shrine. The most distinguished of the recipients was also to be honored by having a statue of the individual placed in one of the niches of the depressed concentric marble colonnades upon his death.

The Queen of Scholars proposal provided for the consolidation of all of the Order of Holy Cross Community activities in a new group of buildings to be located to the north and west of St. Mary's Lake.

These three buildings and campus areas -- the undergraduate campus, the Queen of Scholars Graduate Campus, and the Holy Cross Community area -- were to be entirely autonomous in their own settings and administration. Each was designed to have the potential to expand in future years.

It seems fairly obvious why the Queen of Scholars Graduate Campus never became a reality. The Lady Queen of Scholars shrine would have competed with "Our Lady of the Golden Dome," and a Midwest graduate program would have transcended anything offered by Harvard.

Given the goals of this project, it is evident that a graduate campus of this magnitude would have been financially unfeasible as well as too idealistic in terms of its international aspirations and architectural design. The solidarity of each graduate school caused by its unitary design would also have undermined interaction between the students and faculty.

It is also very possible that the university would have evolved into two very distinct campuses and that the graduate program would render the undergraduate program insignificant, given the former's ties to the international intellectual community. This development would definitely clash with Notre Dame's traditions and values.

The construction of the "Mod Quad" was the product of a $52 million development program from 1967 to 1972 called "SUMMA: Notre Dame's Greatest Challenge." Aimed at bringing new distinction to the university, one of the objectives of this comprehensive fund-raising effort was to allocate $9 million for the development of residence and dining facilities.

The commitment to residentiality and the need for new dorms culminated in a series of architectural proposals, one of which was the 1967 Ellerbe Projection. Ellerbe Associates designed an architectural scale model for a new quadrangle to be created north of the Memorial Library.

Five new high-rise student residence halls were tentatively projected to form a semicircle around a church of contemporary motif designed to meet the growing liturgical needs and to serve a Catholic collegiate community. Only two of the 11-storey skyscraper dormitories were built, Flanner and Grace Towers.

The failure to construct the additional three high-rise residence halls and the proposed Cardinal O'Hara Memorial Chapel was probably due to the failure of the SUMMA campaign. Nonetheless, the "Mod Quad" retains some of the character of the Ellerbe projection, and the same architects later went on to design the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center.

It is evident that parts of the Notre Dame campus may have been very different if these plans had been implemented. Our world-renowned campus may have featured a second church and an incredible graduate program.

The proposed Ellerbe Projection was to be located directly north of the Memorial Library. The two towers in the foreground, Grace and Flanner, were the only buildings to see reality.

Alm could excel at more sports than just football

By FRANK PASTOR
Sports Writer

Combine the size and strength of a weightlifter with the height and agility of a basketball player, and you've got some idea of the threat Jeff Alm poses to opposing quarterbacks.

The 6-7, 248-pound junior defensive tackle has been a disruptive force in opposing backfields this season, stuffing ballcarriers, leaping to bat down passes, and occasionally coming down with the ball as well.

"I may not be the most effective pass rusher," said Alm, "but I can get my hands up. A lot of the time, because of the way our defensive backs are covering their receivers, their (opposing quarterbacks) only option is to do a kind of dump pass where the tight end will come around and the ball is just lofted over the line.

"If there's nobody up there (on the line), the quarterback's just gonna throw it. Right when he throws it, you have a chance to jump up, and that's how I've made both of my interceptions."

Both of Alm's interceptions have directly contributed to Irish scores this season. He picked off a late third-quarter pass against Miami to set up Reggie Ho's 27-yard field goal and give Notre Dame a 31-21 lead over the Hurricanes. He also pulled down a pass against Rice to set up a Tony Brooks touchdown run.

Alm has tallied 44 tackles on the year, including 22 unassisted. He also has recovered a fumble, which is not surprising considering his knack for being at the right place at the right time.

"I'll tell you what he does probably better than any player that I've ever coached," said Irish defensive tackles coach John Palermo. "He chases the football better than anyone I've been around. For the most part, he's at the right place at the right time."

Alm is an integral part of a defensive line which features three first-year starters. He complements George Williams and Chris Zorich in fending off opposing blockers and applying pressure on quarterbacks.

"George, Chris and I have to put pressure on the quarterback and try to get a hand up in his face," said Alm. "If we can, we sack him. But I think the most important thing is just to let the quarterback know that we're out there and we're trying to get at him.

"I think we've been slowly proving we can do it. I think people know we're some kind of force to be reckoned with, and they're gonna have to do something to stop us."

Alm credits Palermo for revamping the defensive line, considered something of a question mark prior to the season.

"It's a new defensive line," said the Orland Park, Ill. native. "We've changed the way we're hitting this year. We tend to hit people in the face this year. You know, we hit our head to their head, and it seems that it stops an offensive lineman. He (Palermo) just taught us how to hit this year, and it seems to be very effective."

Equally effective was Alm's switch from outside linebacker to defensive tackle. Recruited as a linebacker out of Carl Sandburg High School in Orland Park, Alm was moved to the line three games into his freshman season. Palermo believes the switch was necessary to maximize Alm's defensive output.

"Jeff is a very good technique and Rice to help the Irish to a 9-0 record and the No. 1 ranking in the nation.

football player right now," said Palermo. "I think he understands the game fairly well. With his size and development, the best way for him to show his abilities was to move him down inside."

Considered one of the top 16 players in the nation according to United Press International's 1985 prep talent survey, Alm was highly recruited coming out of high school. Strangely enough, a lack of pocket change afforded him the opportunity to visit Notre Dame.

"They screwed up on my recruiting visit," said Alm. "When I was supposed to come here my senior year for the recruiting weekend, they read me my arrival time in South Bend as my departure time in Chicago. So when I got to the airport, my plane had just landed in South Bend.

"Had I had enough money to take a cab, I probably would have never come (to Notre Dame), because I would have gone back home. But since I didn't, I waited at the airport and I went on standby and I came down here. I committed on my visit, which was kind of strange."

Alm has been plagued by a series of injuries in the three years since he enrolled at Notre Dame, but everything seems to have come together in 1988. He is enjoying his finest season to date, and has earned the respect of his coaches to boot.

"Going into spring football last spring, Jeff had a history of being injured and basically not performing up to his abilities," said Palermo. "I think what he did was to make a commitment in the springtime that he was going to be the best player he could be. I think he really wants to help this football team."

Rader's dream comes true

Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. - Doug Rader, calling his new job a "dream opportunity," was named manager of the California Angels Monday.

Rader, 44, a former Texas Rangers manager and Gold Glove-winning third baseman for the Houston Astros, worked as a scout for the Angels during the 1988 season. He replaced Cookie Rojas, who was fired late in the season.

Rader is the 12th manager in the club's 28-year history.

"There are not many people who love baseball who wouldn't be ecstatic, not only to be a part of this organization, but to get the job I have been given," Rader said during a news conference to announce his hiring.

Rader, who will work with "not excellent talent, but good enough to get us headed in the right direction," said his top priority was getting the players to realize their potential.

"The Dodgers are a perfect example," Rader said of the team up the freeway that won the National League playoffs and the World Series this season by upsetting the New York Mets and Oakland Athletics.

"They (the Dodgers) didn't play over their heads," Rader said. "They played to their abilities and other clubs did not."

Rader said his contract with the Angels was for one year, and he was retaining the club's coaching staff.

Angels owner Gene Autry said several people were interested in the managerial job.

"We interviewed quite a few men who wanted to manage here and I can truthfully say they were all qualified," Autry said. "We got it down to one guy and I think we made a very good choice."

"The selection process went on longer than we had hoped," General Manager Mike Port said. "There were a lot of good baseball people interested. We have the man we want."

Rader was appointed Rangers' manager in the winter of 1982. He had a 77-85 record and finished third in the American League West in 1983. He was fired by the Rangers in 1985 after the team started the season 9-23.

He has a major league managing record of 156-201, including a 1-1 record while serving as interim manager for the Chicago White Sox in 1986.

Rader played 10 seasons with three major league clubs—Houston, San Diego and Toronto. He was with the Astros for more than eight seasons.

He won five consecutive Gold Gloves from 1970-74, and hit 20 or more homers three times.

The Angels fired Rojas with eight games remaining in the 1988 season and replaced him on an interim basis with third base coach Moose Stubing. The Angels lost all eight games under Stubing and finished the season with a 12-game losing streak and a 75-87 record, for fourth place in the AL west, 29 games behind Oakland.

Others considered for the job included former Angels' manager Jim Fregosi and former Cleveland manager Pat Corrales.

Sailing Club qualifies for National Regatta

The Sailing Club qualified for the Collegiate National Regatta two weekends ago when it placed third out of five teams in the Regional qualifying meet. The top three teams were invited to compete in the National meet.

Greg Scheckenbach Club Corner

Two boats participated for the Irish. In the "A" Division, Pete Wall and Chris Blum sailed behind some strong winds to capture third place.

In the "B" Division, Tom Seffions and Patti Losinske made a run for the championship, but came up short and settled for third place.

"Overall, we sailed really well considering the competition," said Losinske. "We hope to do even better in the Collegiate National."

The Collegiate National Regatta is one of the biggest in the country. Besides Notre Dame, 18 other teams will be in action, all of whom qualified in other meets. Some teams who have qualified are Stanford and the Naval Academy. The Regatta will be held near Chicago on Thanksgiving weekend.

The Men's Volleyball Club had a slight change in plans recently. The Irish will not travel to Canada over Thanksgiving break due to a lack of funds. In place, the money will be used to fund a trip to San Diego later in the year.

job of organizing the tournament."

Buoniconti ardently believes that this type of response is typical of the Notre Dame community.

"There is truly something special about going here and graduating from here," said Buoniconti.

Buoniconti constantly deflects attention away from himself and is determined to remind everyone of the reason that the program exists.

"That's why we're here," said Buoniconti as he pointed to two disabled people confined to a wheelchair for the rest of their lives.

game, Kuehl put the Irish ahead 2-1, getting assists from Robert Copeland and Bankoske. But three straight Falcon power play goals in the next 11 minutes effectively put the Irish away.

"This is the Year of Cultural Diversity here at Notre Dame," said Schafer. "We could sure use a few Swedes, Russians and Canadians to shore up our defense. But for now, we've just got to get ready for Lake Forest."

Buffalo routs Miami

Associated Press

MIAMI -Ronnie Harmon ran for one touchdown and caught a 16-yard pass from Jim Kelly for another and Robb Riddick had two 1-yard scoring runs as the Buffalo Bills maintained the NFL's best record by beating Miami 31-6 Monday night.

It was the sixth straight win for the Bills, 10-1, who maintained their lead of four games over New England and Indianapolis in the AFC East with five games to go.

The Bills, who intercepted Dan Marino three times, scored on their first possession of the game. They led 10-6 at halftime and, relying mainly on a defense led by Bruce Smith, Cornelius Bennett and Art Still that held Miami to just 33 yards rushing, the Bills handed the Dolphins their worst defeat since 1970.

Then they put the game away with two touchdowns 2½ minutes apart in the third quarter.

The first score, with 5:33 left in the period, came on Riddick's 1-yard plunge at the end of an 80-yard drive aided by two Miami penalties. The second was a 6-yard run by Harmon set up by Bennett's interception and 30-yard return of a Marino pass on Miami's first play after the kickoff.

The Bills' 10-1 record represents their best start since 1964 and the six-game winning streak is their longest since 1974.

Coach K not exactly pleased as AP tabs Duke No. 1 team

Associated Press

Duke, a Final Four team two of the last three seasons, was named the No. 1 team Monday in The Associated Press' preseason college basketball poll.

The Blue Devils, who finished fifth in the final regular-season poll last season and went on to the Final Four and a semifinal loss to eventual champion Kansas, received 33 first-place votes and easily outdistanced No. 2 Georgetown, which had eight first-place votes.

Duke, which last held the top ranking over the final three polls of the 1985-86 season—another in which it reached the Final Four—finished with 1,257 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters, well ahead of the Hoyas' 1,107.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski wasn't overly pleased at being No. 1.

"If you're ranked very high early, there's a tendency to think you've already accomplished something, and you really haven't accomplished anything," he said.

Michigan, Louisville and Oklahoma—another Final Four team from last season—rounded out the Top Five in a voting that showed the quick turns of the fortunes of collegiate basketball programs.

Five teams from last season's final poll—Purdue, Kentucky, Bradley, Wyoming and Xavier, Ohio—did not even receive a vote in the preseason balloting and another, Kansas State, got just one.

Kansas, which wasn't expected to fare that well following the graduation of Danny Manning, the NBA's No. 1 draft choice and the player most responsible for the Jayhawks' title. However, a three-year probation for recruiting violations was handed down to Kansas and the Jayhawks will not defend their title in the NCAA tournament.

Nine of the teams in the preseason poll, including Georgetown, were unranked in the final poll of last season.

Eight teams received first-place votes and 51 of the 293 Division I teams eligible for receiving votes did.

Michigan received four first-place votes and 1,090 points, 74 more than Louisville, which got seven No. 1 votes. Oklahoma had nine first-place votes and 1,001 points.

North Carolina was sixth with three No. 1 selections and 915 points, just four more than Iowa, which had two first-place votes. One point separated No. 8 Syracuse, 852 points, and Illinois, while Nevada-Las Vegas, the final team to receive a No. 1 vote, rounded out the Top Ten with 851 points.

Arizona—the final member of last year's Final Four—led the Second Ten with 605 points and was followed by Villanova, Georgia Tech, Missouri, Florida, Florida State, Ohio State, North Carolina State, Temple and Stanford.

Temple was the top team in the final poll of last season, but the Owls, who lost to Duke in the regional finals, lost three starters from the 32-2 team that brought the school its first No. 1 ranking.

Georgetown and Louisville are the only members of the Top Ten not to have finished in the final Top Twenty of last season but Villanova, Georgia Tech, Missouri, Florida, Florida State, Ohio State and Stanford were not in that voting. In fact, Stanford and Florida State were not ranked at any time last season.

In addition to those mentioned above, Pittsburgh, Loyola Marymount, and Brigham Young did not return to the Top Twenty.

ND, Trojans retain top spots

Associated Press

Notre Dame and Southern California are within one step of a showdown between the nation's No. 1 and No. 2 college football teams while Arkansas made the Top Ten for the first time this season and Houston cracked the Top Twenty after an eight-year absence.

Houston, which last appeared in the Associated Press poll in September 1980, upped its record to 7-2 by defeating previously unbeaten Wyoming 34-10 Saturday night and dropping the Cowboys from 10th place to 16th. Colorado, No. 19 last week, fell out of the rankings by losing to No. 7 Nebraska 7-0.

In addition, Auburn and Oklahoma swapped places, Auburn rising from ninth to eighth and Oklahoma slipping from eighth to ninth.

Notre Dame, idle last weekend, received 40 of 59 first-place votes and 1,156 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. The 9-0-0 Irish, who play Penn State on Saturday, are No. 1 for the third consecutive week.

Southern Cal, a 50-0 winner over Arizona State, received 18 first-place votes and 1,131 points. The Trojans, also 9-0-0, are No. 2 for the third week in a row. They face No. 6 UCLA on Saturday and Notre Dame on Nov. 26.

Last week, also with 59 voters participating, Notre Dame led USC 42-15 in first-place votes and 1,160-1,122 in points. In the last three weeks, Notre Dame's lead has decreased from 47 points to 38 to 25.

The other first-place ballot went to defending national champion Miami, which was idle. The Hurricanes, 7-1-0, received 1,060 points.

Unbeaten West Virginia, 10-0-0, remained No. 4 with 977 points following a 35-25 triumph over Rutgers. For the first time in three weeks, however, the Mountaineers failed to receive a first-place vote.

Florida State beat Virginia Tech 41-14 and held onto fifth place with 937 points, UCLA's 27-17 victory over Stanford enabled the Bruins to remain No. 6 with 866 points and Nebraska is again No. 7 with 805 points after edging Colorado.

Auburn's 20-10 victory over Georgia lifted the Tigers into eighth place with 769 points while Oklahoma received 750 points and fell one spot after struggling past Missouri 16-7.

Arkansas, 10-0-0 and one of four teams with perfect records, rose from 11th place to 10th by downing Texas A&M 25-20. The Razorbacks received 657 points.

The Second Ten consists of LSU, Michigan, Oklahoma State, Syracuse, Clemson, Wyoming, Houston, Alabama, Washington State and Georgia.

Last week, it was Arkansas, LSU, Michigan, Oklahoma State, Syracuse, Clemson, Georgia, Alabama, Colorado and Washington State.

Digger

Basketball—the one that thought Jamere Jackson was too young to run for president—will jump from his seat and loudly dispute one of Digger's coaching decisions.

Later in the season, after one of the five talented freshmen misses a shot late in a crucial contest, he will jump up again, this time yelling "Mark Stevenson would have nailed that shot."

But before we pass judgment so quickly, let's look a little deeper into the situation.

Digger may not win NCAA championships, but he does win games, at least 20 of them the last five seasons. He's been in the NCAA tourney the past four years, and the 1977-78 Fighting Irish made it to the Final Four. Digger's teams have defeated the No. 1 team in the nation seven times.

Yet students complain that this is Notre Dame, and they deserve more than simply a winning season. Bear in mind that no one wants to win a championship more than Digger, but he will not do it at any cost. He will win it the right way, his way, the Notre Dame way or not at all.

Digger will be the first to admit that Stevenson could have played and made a difference in losses to Duke and Kentucky last year. Digger says the Duke students would have greeted Stevenson with shopping bags in one hand and beer cans in the other. Maybe Kentucky and Kansas would opt for the championships and accept a little embarrassment, but Notre Dame and Digger never have and never will.

"It cost us three big games," Digger said of the Stevenson ordeal. "But do we sacrifice what we are as a University to be No. 1 at any cost? We refuse to do that at Notre Dame and refuse to bend academically because the kids want a career that means something after school. We will not put ourselves in a position where the athlete is bigger than the University."

In terms of the things that supposedly count, like graduation and preparation for the real world, Digger has the top program in the country. In terms of the marks under the win column that students and fans count, Digger somehow comes up short. That could change soon, especially as Proposition 48 begins to take full effect.

Before Proposition 48, athletes could get an 'A' in P.E. and an 'F' in science and still play. Notre Dame couldn't recruit those players, but it did have to play against them. Now the Irish can be competitive again, both on the court and in recruiting.

"Now we're looking beyond just getting into the tournament," Digger says. "We're now getting competitive with the type of athlete we have. It's starting to swing back for us."

With a team that will be intact for two years and a talented freshman class, Digger could get that elusive title soon. If not, I doubt that he will lose much sleep over it because he knows that the Notre Dame program is doing things the right way. He looks at the big picture, the one that exists beyond the NCAA tournament.

Never mind the titles, Digger will take the victories off the court, the wins that educate people and teach them about life after basketball, the lessons gained not only in the classroom but also in the real world.

"Before I'll ride with a drunk, I'll drive myself."

Notre Dame to play West Virginia in Fiesta Bowl

By MARTY STRASEN
Sports Editor

It's unofficially official: top-ranked Notre Dame will meet No. 4 West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl at Sun Devil Stadium in Tempe, Ariz.

Athletic Director Dick Rosenthal met Monday with University Vice President Father William Beauchamp and Irish head coach Lou Holtz and decided Notre Dame would accept the Fiesta Bowl bid when it is officially extended Saturday.

Two newspapers, the Morgantown Dominion Post and Charleston Daily Mail, reported Monday that West Virginia officials had a similar meeting and that the Mountaineers will be extended a Fiesta Bowl bid regardless of the outcome of Saturday's final regular-season game against 15th-ranked Syracuse.

The Fiesta Bowl has indicated its interest in both the Mountaineers (10-0) and the Irish (9-0) since mid-season, and now can only hope the teams remain undefeated to set up a game for the national championship.

"We met and came to the conclusion that, if we were invited after Saturday's game (against Penn State), we would choose to go to the Fiesta Bowl," Rosenthal said. "They put on a great bowl, and they will attract the highest-ranked opponent for us to play."

But although Fiesta Bowl official Bill Shover called a Notre Dame-West Virginia game "a done deal," Rosenthal warns that bids are not officially extended until Saturday.

"We're like the guest who gets invited to dinner," Rosenthal said. "We can't tell them what to serve."

But the Dominion Post said Bruce Skinner, the Fiesta Bowl's executive director, will be at Mountaineer Field to announce that Notre Dame's New Year's feast includes West Virginia.

An unnamed source in the Daily Mail confirmed that the outcome of Saturday's game between the Mountaineers and the Orangemen (8-1) will have no bearing on the bid.

"The outcome of Saturday's final game at home against Syracuse will have no effect," the source was quoted as saying. "West Virginia is going to the Fiesta Bowl and is going to play Notre Dame."

The Fiesta Bowl offers an estimated payout of $3 million per team.

"We haven't discussed numbers with them," Rosenthal added. He also said the large number of Notre Dame alumni in the Southwest and West and the fact the Irish have never played in the Fiesta Bowl make Tempe an attractive site.

Holtz said he was willing to accept whatever decision Rosenthal and Beauchamp made, preferring to concentrate his own efforts on the upcoming games against Penn State (Saturday) and at Southern Cal (Nov. 26).

"I sat down and talked with Father Beauchamp and Dick Rosenthal," Holtz said. "I told them I was more interested in

Falcons gain revenge on ND hockey squad

By PETE SKIKO
Assistant Sports Editor

The Air Force Falcons gained a measure of revenge against the Notre Dame hockey team over the weekend, picking up a 6-6 tie and a 6-3 win over the Irish in a two-game series in Colorado Springs, Co.

Notre Dame had swept the Falcons in an emotional pair of games at the JACC last year, and Air Force apparently was not ready to forget about it. Peppering Irish goaltender Lance Madson with shots and taking advantage of seemingly countless defensive miscues, the 2-3-1 Falcons never let up, with the exception of the third period of Friday night's thrilling overtime tie.

Down 6-3 heading into the final period, the Irish rallied to forge a tie behind goals from Chris Olson, Matt Hanzel and David Bankoske. Olson and Hanzel scored just 22 seconds apart with a little under two-and-a-half minutes left and Bankoske's goal, with assists coming from Hanzel and Tim Kuehl, came with only 19 seconds remaining in regulation.

"And we could have won it in overtime," said disappointed Irish head coach Ric Schafer. "They (Air Force) picked up a penalty with 40 seconds left in regulation and we should have started the overtime with a man advantage. But (Bob Bilton) got a silly penalty 10 seconds later that maybe we shouldn't have taken."

"Don't get me wrong—it was a heck of a comeback. I give my guys a lot of credit. But for the most part, we played average this weekend. If we're going to beat a lot of these teams, we've got to play a little above our heads."

The overtime period ended with no more penalties and no more scoring, but plenty of questions for the Irish to solve.

"We're not a dirty hockey team," said Schafer, "but this weekend we picked up a lot of inopportune penalties that led to goals. We can't afford to be a man short against teams that can and will capitalize. Again, if it weren't for the fantastic play of Madson, it could have been a lot worse. Just look at the stats."

The stats are, indeed, fantastic. In Friday night's contest, Madson stopped 37 Falcon attempts, including six-of-eight power play opportunities—a better-than-average night for any goalie. But on Saturday night, the junior faced 63 shots, including an incredible 29 in the second period, and steered away all but six.

The Air Force power play converted six of their 15 man advantages, leading Schafer to question his young defense.

"Part of it is the inexperience," said Schafer, "but between the penalties and the lack of help on defense and on the power play, I wouldn't have blamed Lance for hitting the showers early Saturday night."

Buoniconti at charity tourney

By BOB MITCHELL
Sports Writer

Football, the game which Nick Buoniconti played with a passion for Notre Dame (1959-1961) and the NFL, crippled his 22-year-old son on October 26, 1985. In Buoniconti style, the 1961 co-captain and All-American did not sit back; he went out and did something about the situation.

As a result, Nick Buoniconti returned to his alma mater this weekend to kick off Notre Dame's participation in a national campaign to find a cure for paralysis. Over 200 students and staff competed in the "USF&G Sugar Bowl Flag Football Drive To Cure Paralysis" held in the Loftus Sports Center.

"I felt helpless when I saw my son lying in bed," said Buoniconti. "I made a commitment to him that research will go on to get him out of that wheelchair."

Indeed it has. Since 1985 the drive to cure paralysis has found a straight road. Prior to 1985, research was practically non-existent but today in the Miami Project there are 60 scientists working 24 hours a day in 25 laboratories. The Miami Project which spends three and half million dollars a year is the center for paralysis research in the United States.

"As time goes on, the cure becomes closer," said a determined Buoniconti, a former lawyer and president of a Fortune 500 company.

Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal was thrilled that Notre Dame could participate in this type of event.

"We will participate in the drive as long as the project goes on," said Rosenthal. "It is a great tribute to the Notre Dame student body which evidences that Notre Dame cares. Just again, it shows that Notre Dame is helping to solve problems in society."

In recognition of Buoniconti's exemplary community service, Rosenthal presented the Miami resident with a plaque.

"It was my first award from Notre Dame since I graduated," said Buoniconti. "I will treasure it and put it in a place of honor. My son, Marc, will treasure it also."

Marc, now a full time student at the University of Miami, does his own part to help raise funds for the Miami Project.

"Marc, a psychology major, went to Dallas, Texas last weekend and raised $30,000 for the Miami Project," said Buoniconti.

Nick Buoniconti is quick to point out that he is very grateful for Notre Dame's help in his quest to help the disabled.

"It is a nice warm feeling to have this type of response," said Buoniconti. "When you have something happen to you like this, you look to your family and friends for help. Tom Kelly (Director of NVA) just went to work and did a great

Digger deserves better from Irish student body

At Duke, students stand in line all night—sometimes all week—for a chance to see their beloved Blue Devils on the basketball court. At Indiana, students stay up all night for a chance to buy tickets for half of the Hoosier games.

At Notre Dame, students need only to walk five minutes to the JACC, write a check and be guaranteed a reserved seat for all 17 games. Maybe that's just too easy.

Greg Guffey
Sports Writer

At most other schools, students stand for the entire game no matter who the opponent and they never cheer for a rival squad. At Notre Dame, students—when they bother to show up at all—often sit and rarely cheer during the less-exciting games.

Digger Phelps has built one of the most respected collegiate programs in the country, one built on academics as well as athletics. He graduates players not only into the NBA, but also into the job world. His success rate is unequalled, with 63 of the 63 players graduating that have used their eligibility.

Yet sometime during these early-season games, Joe
