Chile program offers unique perspective

By SARAH DORAN
News Editor

When students participate in a study abroad program, typically the focus falls more on the foreign atmosphere and environment than it does on school work. So while a third-world country may not be the typical place to study abroad, the Chile program's focus on its surroundings makes the experience ideally unique.

Designed to give students a full view of their six month home, a 5 credit course entitled "Poverty and Development" is offered during the spring semester of study in Chile. The interdisciplinary course combines classroom and field learning, taking advantage of the country's particular characteristics.

"Students in the class learn the reality of the country, including the reality of the poor," said Father Don McNeill, director of the Center for Social Concerns, who, along with Associate Provost Father Timothy Scully, developed the idea for the class.

Meeting twice a week, students in the class spend one session doing service in an area of poverty and the other in a seminar discussing their work in perspective of the country's history, theology and anthropology.

In many ways, the class was a microcosm of the Chilean semester.

For senior Katie Glynn, who worked with a diocesan support group for adolescent mothers and fathers, the experience gained through the class' service perspective was a central part of her semester experience.

Studying abroad in Chile at La Catolica University, pictured, gives students an experience different than other foreign study programs because of its cultural immersion program.

"It turned into a friendship, as I got to know the women really well," she said.

But a six month stint in Chile cannot be reduced to one class, as the program has many other unique characteristics that set it apart from the University's eleven other study programs around the world. Much of this uniqueness stems from Chile's cultural environment.

"The culture and openness to others taught me an incredible amount about the way you should live and interact with other people," said Glynn. "There is so much community and family outreach."

A main ingredient in the country's cultural makeup is the strong influence of the Catholic Church, said Glynn.

"These values are integrated into the way people live," she said. "The Church itself has such a strong hold on the politics of the country."

Students in the program, which is in its fourth semester, live with families in the Santiago community and take classes at La Catolica, the largest and most elite University in Chile. By living with families of different social backgrounds, studying at an elite University, and doing service in the country's underprivileged areas, students are exposed to Chile's diverse society.

"You see a stark distinction in lifestyle, a lot of struggle," said Glynn.

Another distinctive characteristic of the program is its cross-cultural immersion program. To participate in the program, students go to Chile in late January, about a month before classes begin in March, and

Scully attends conference

By SARAH DORAN

One of the foremost authorities on Chilean politics, Father Timothy Scully, vice president and associate provost, recently returned from a meeting of Chilean party leaders, political scientists, and government officials.

Sponsored by the United Nations Development Program and the Chilean presidency, the meeting was held in Santiago in an effort to influence incipient legislation on the regulation and function of political parties in Chile.

What characteristically was the oldest and strongest democracy in Latin America, said Scully, the 1973 coup and subsequent 17 year reign of Gen. Augusto Pinochet left the country in a authoritarian spin that only recently came to an end with the 1989 return to democracy.

As the democracy strives to regain full power, it is hampered by electoral legislation written during the Pinochet era that creates a binomial electoral system favoring a second majority; namely, it favors Pinochet supporters. Chile has a multi-party system.

"Pinochet wrote the legislation so he could be a part of the new democratic leadership," said Scully. "It is a set of legislative underpinnings that make it difficult to return to a full democracy."

Akai named Graduate School assistant dean

By TOM MORAN
News Writer

Terrence Akai, formerly the assistant dean of the College of Engineering, has been named assistant dean of the Graduate School, according to Nathan Hatch, vice president for graduate studies and research.

Akai had previously held concurrent appointments as associate professor of aerospace and mechanical engineering and associate professor of computer science and engineering.

Akai said that as an assistant dean, he will play an important part of enforcing the Graduate School's academic rules and regulations. He also will help institute a new program designed to heighten the teaching skills of graduate students that act as teaching assistants. In the past, some of these students have had difficulties teaching classes due to their lack of training in the field.

Akai will become one of six assistant and associate deans that work together to run the Graduate School. Together, they work on programs to increase the level of university support for the Graduate School, better evaluate the English abilities of foreign students applying to the School, and help improve the University's placement programs for graduate students.

Akai earned his bachelor of arts degree and his bachelor of science degree in aeronautics and astronautics from the University of Washington, and received his master's degree and doctorate in aeronautical and astronautical engineering at the University of Illinois.

Akai joined the Notre Dame faculty in 1976 as a research associate in aerospace and mechanical engineering. He was named assistant professor in that department in 1979 and was promoted to associate professor and assistant dean for computing in 1985. He then became associate chair of computer science and engineering in 1992. Akai doesn't think his latest promotion will be a difficult adjustment. While he says he will need to interact with the various academic departments a lot more, it won't be a big change because "It's still dealing with people."

■ Inside Column

Let's get a few things straight

"Where did you end up going to college?" A male classmate of mine asked me when I returned home for the summer.

"Saint Mary's," I answered.

"Oh, Saint Mary's of Winona is supposed to have a great campus," he stated.

"No, I'm sorry. I go to Saint Mary's at Notre Dame," I replied.

"But," he hesitated, "Isn't that an all girls school?"

He gathered up sympathy for me as if I had just told him I contracted herpes. I wondered if he planned to give me a hug and tell me everything was going to be okay.

Before I could answer, he cut me off and said, "It's not really an all girls school. Notre Dame is right across the street."

This perception is completely false. Regardless of our location to Holy Cross and Notre Dame, Saint Mary's is an all women's college. To settle some confusion, Saint Mary's is not directly affiliated with Notre Dame but is an independent institution. Saint Mary's students qualify for season football tickets, are invited to join Notre Dame clubs and organizations, and are permitted to take classes at Notre Dame.

It's difficult to imagine someone choosing a single-sex college, especially after attending a coed high school. I honestly cannot explain the exact reason why I enrolled at Saint Mary's. But I do remember the rainy night I visited as a high school senior. I joked with my friend in the bathroom stall about coming here. "Like we would actually want to go to school here" were our exact pessimistic words. However, the next day when the sun came out I experienced a feeling I could not explain. A sense of belonging. My roommate and I still joke about that evening.

Don't get me wrong, nothing could have prepared me for the drastic absence of men. I sincerely felt like I entered a bad episode of the Twilight Zone. There is nothing I can say to prepare anyone (especially freshman) for the change of atmosphere. Believe me, it even gets scarier when the lack of men becomes completely normal.

Freshman, if you are asking yourself the familiar "Why am I here?" question, do not feel alone. It is time to start appreciating some of the light hearted bonus' of going to an all women's college.

I hope female Notre Dame students can relate to a few of these:

All the bathrooms are pink.

Never running out of Jolene.

Having a larger clothes selections than Nordstroms.

Never running into your ex-boyfriend on campus.

You can lay on the front lawn in your bikini. (Well, I don't. But some people actually do.)

Everyone else is on a diet, too.

You are looked at as a Goddess when you bring a man on campus, even if it's your father.

You won't have any problem finding a boyfriend, because any male looks remotely attractive to you.

So, the next time someone asks you, "Isn't that an all girls school you go to?" You can reply, "No, I go to an all women's college."

Man, teenager arrested in multi-state violent crime spree

SANTA FE, N.M.

An ex-convict and a teen-ager who allegedly made their way across the country by killing people and stealing their cars were captured by police Tuesday as they slept under a bridge, weapons at their side. Acting on a tip, eight state police officers wielding 20-shot assault rifles arrested the pair in a concrete culvert in the high desert country just outside Santa Fe. Eric Elliott, 16, and Lewis Gilbert, 22, both of Newcomerstown, Ohio, are suspected of killing four people in Ohio, Missouri and Oklahoma and using each victim's car to get to their next crime. The men appeared in court Tuesday on federal charges of Loader's car was found Thursday night, 650 miles from Port Washington at Fulton, Mo., near the home of a slain couple. William Brewer, 86, and his wife, Flossie, 76, each had been shot three times in the head.

S. Africa equalizes social services

CAPE TOWN

The government announced new spending plans Tuesday in its cornerstone program to help bridge the economic gap between South Africa's blacks and minority whites. A range of projects, including free school lunches for needy children and installing running water in rural black communities, were unveiled at a news conference by Jay Naidoo, the Cabinet minister charged with implementing the program. President Nelson Mandela, the country's first black president, has pledged to spend $714 million this fiscal year on health, housing and education. Spending will increase each of the next five years, and is expected to reach at least $10 billion. Private and foreign contributions also are being sought. Pregnant women and children under 6 years old are already eligible for free medical care under a program decreed by Mandela after taking office in May.

Men score higher on MCATS

CHICAGO

White men score higher than women of all races on the science exam medical students must take to become licensed doctors, and a researcher said cultural obstacles faced by women may help explain why. In a study of more than 10,000 medical students, white men generally did better on the test than all women, even after discounting for differences in their undergraduate education and in scores on medical entrance exams. White men also did better than men from other racial groups, with Asian-Pacific Islanders being the only group where the difference was not explained by differences in prior education, researchers reported in Wednesday's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association. The findings suggest three possibilities: the test is flawed in some way; the students had some prior educational differences that researchers couldn't detect; or the lower-scoring groups were in fact deficient in the subjects on which they were tested, said an editorial accompanying the study.

GAO justifies more military cuts

WASHINGTON

The Pentagon's operating budget could be cut by $4.5 billion next year without harming overall military readiness, a congressional report concluded Tuesday. In a broad array of military activities from pilot training to commissaries to the management of spare parts, the military could get along with less than President Clinton requested, said the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress. Clinton requested $82 billion for military operations and maintenance in his fiscal 1995 budget, an increase over this year of $5.3 billion. The House defense appropriations bill cuts that increase by $1.9 billion while the Senate comes in $566 million below the administration request. In any case, the GAO study indicates that both Congress and the Clinton administration are requesting too much. More than half the cuts could be achieved by reducing Army operations accounts by $2.4 billion, the GAO said. The Air Force request is too high by $1.16 billion and civilian Defense Department accounts could be cut by $690 million, it said. Navy budget requests are a comparatively small contributor to the problem, accounting for $274 million in excess, it said.

Box offices earn record amounts

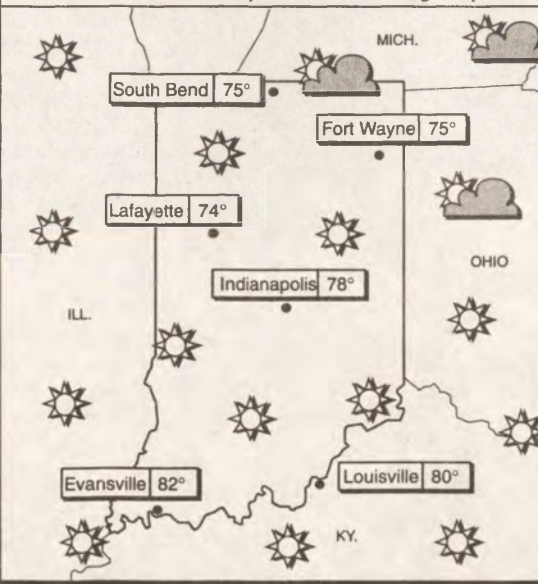

LOS ANGELES

In a record-breaking summer, two Hollywood studios outgassed the rest in the yearly big-money box office gamble. Disney and Paramount dominated by grabbing 42.6 percent of the $2.2 billion spent on 1994 summer movies, according to the Hollywood Reporter. Their two blockbusters, "The Lion King" and "Forrest Gump," brought in more than half of their whopping $937.2 million combined take. Disney's summer totals: $444 million, a smashing 13 percent above the previous studio record, $393 million earned by Warner Bros. in 1989. Paramount's other successes include "Clear and Present Danger," which was No. 3 over the weekend with $9.3 million and had an $86 million total. The summer's $2.2 billion total broke the previous record of $2.1 billion set just last year. Much of the summer's success came because popular films dribbled out week by week, always offering something fresh for cinema-hungry audiences.

Abortion compromise expected

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press

CAIRO
Delegates at the U.N. population conference made a breakthrough Tuesday night on the heated issue of abortion, but the Vatican refused to go along with the compromise.

The abortion debate has entangled efforts to draft a 20-year plan to slow the world's population growth. The hard-fought negotiations Tuesday dealt with a single paragraph in the 113-page draft report.

Delegates from the 182 nations attending the conference were to give the section final consideration Wednesday.

"There's never been more support for language in this section of the document than there exists right now," said U.S. delegate David Harwood, a senior policy adviser to the State Department.

The United States supports the compromise, while the European Union, Norway and Sweden said it was the "rock bottom" of what they would accept, Harwood said. Iran, Pakistan and Benin, which previously sided with the Vatican, accepted the language.

The compromise paragraph would urge all governments to deal with the health impact of unsafe abortion as a major public health concern.

IRA truce discussed

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press

DUBLIN After their first face-to-face meeting, Ireland's prime minister and the leader of the IRA's political partner made a joint commitment Tuesday to "peaceful methods of resolving our political problems."

The talks angered Protestants and got a cool response from Britain, where Prime Minister John Major also had a run-in with hard-line Protestant leader Ian Paisley. Paisley accused Major of "shouting and interrupting" him during the 10-minute meeting.

The two sessions mirrored divisions over bringing peace to Northern Ireland despite a cease-fire declared by the Irish Republican Army, which has been fighting to end British rule of the province.

In Dublin, Prime Minister Albert Reynolds and Sinn Fein President Gerry Adams said they were "totally and absolutely committed to democratic and peaceful methods of resolving our political problems." They stopped short of stipulating a permanent cease-fire, as demanded by Major.

The British prime minister abruptly left a meeting in London with Paisley after the Northern Ireland politician refused to say he believed Major's pledge that there had been no secret deals with the IRA.

Paisley, leader of the small Democratic Unionist Party, said Major shouted at him, "Get out of this room. Never come back until you're prepared to say I speak the truth."

"I wonder how many members of Parliament could stand up and say they believe every word that John Major speaks," Paisley told reporters.

spend a few weeks in rural Southern Chile in a number of activities, including a 10 day experience with the Mapuche Indians.

After a pilot experiment with the immersion last spring, this spring the program will be led by two missionaries, who are Notre Dame alumni, in conjunction with the Maryknoll Missionaries of Chile.

"It's an opportunity to learn about a whole other dimension of Chile," said Father McNeill. "Students are free to explore the beauty of Southern Chile before beginning their academic year."

The immersion will be run much like the Washington and Appalachia Seminars of the Center for Social Concerns, as the students will receive one credit for participating and completing a reflection paper on the experience.

An information session will held about the Chile program tonight at 7 p.m. in room 116 O'Shaughnessy Hall. The program is run in conjunction with the Universities of Wisconsin and Michigan. Scully

So as the electoral legislation continues to hamper a return to full democracy, Scully's recent meeting was a forum to explore viable options for legislative change. The meeting was called by Eduardo Frei, the President of Chile whose centrist Christian Democratic Party is most avidly attempting to change the legislation.

Addressing participants during the meeting's concluding session, Scully warned that any change to electoral law be made coherently, citing recent piecemeal changes in term limits that have created non-concurrent party elections.

"Any changes must be made as affecting the whole system," he said.

Also as changes are made, the political parties must be careful in advance of the country's political sentiment, Scully said.

"Pincohet is slowly disappearing from the political system — he no longer has the gravity of before," he said. "Chile needs a new agenda to change its identity."

As part of the parties' opportunity to create this new identity, Scully warned that the centerist Christian Democrats must take advantage of this time to construct an identity, lest they risk becoming irrelevant. While a return to authoritarianism is very unlikely, the party must take up issues that are of concern to Chilean voters today, he said. These issues include morality, poverty, environment, and the rights of indigenous people.

In addition to his duties as associate provost, Scully is an associate professor of government and international studies and a fellow in the Kellogg Institute. A specialist in Latin American politics and institutions, he was associate pastor of Cristo Nuestro Redentor, a parish in Santiago, from 1980-83 and was vice rector of St. George's College there from 1981-83. He has been director of Latin American studies at Notre Dame since 1991 and has written on the role of political parties in transitions to democracy, the Catholic Church in Latin America, and the development of political party systems.

KITCHEN AYE

When 15 minutes of fame isn't enough

Do you want everyone to remember who you were? Do you want to be immortal? Stop and think for a minute about all the nifty ways we choose to immortalize ourselves, to say "I was here." Most of us will write our epitaph on the first slab of wet concrete that we come across. In doing so we create our own little Hollywood Boulevard, ours being the first and last stop on our private walk of fame.

Here's my personal favorite. Find a Xerox machine in a clandestine location and photocopy your posterior. Then autograph it ("your name here's butt").

and post it on a conspicuous public bulletin board. There are other ways of course. Alexander the Great conquered most of the known world. He built a score of cities throughout northern Africa and Asia and named every single one of them after himself.

Modern day politicians draft treaties trying to change the world. Kings and dictators commission statues in their likeness. Maybe you'll get lucky and someday someone will name a bridge after you like that Brooklyn guy. Though more likely you'll have to settle for photocopying your butt.

Hold on a second though. Keep in mind that immortality and his lesser known brother notoriety, are a finicky pair. Often, history plays a practical joke and humanity will have itself a good laugh at your expense. Take O.J. Simpson. Simpson had an outstanding career in the NFL, followed by a very successful telecasting career. He was even considered something of a role model. So...ah...what will stick out in your mind ten years from now when you hear his name. Be honest. It's not much of a testimony for human nature but its probably true, poor O.J. will be remembered by more people for his days in court rather than his days on the football field. C'est la vie.

O.J. is a prime example of someone who accomplished great things, but who will most likely be remembered for lesser, though more sinister, deeds. Whether or not he did it is immaterial. It's those one shot deals that will make a person famous. Rosa Parks just wanted a seat at the front of the bus. I doubt that she thought she would create such a stir when she got up that morning. She's got at least a footnote in the American history books as one of the people who got the ball rolling on desegregation.

Rosa Parks was a tough old bird. She had guts to do what she felt was right when she felt it was right. She made her mark unique. It is easy to go the same way as everybody else, to follow along the well marked path.

It takes some guts to blaze your own trail. Don't be afraid. I think if you look deep down inside yourself you'll find that you're a lot gutsier than you may have suspected.

Everybody should strive to immortalize themselves in some way or another, to make their mark for others to see. Some of us will immortalize ourselves through the people we touch during our lives, or perhaps through the accomplishments of our children. Maybe these aren't quite so grandiose, but they are certainly meaningful.

However you choose to immortalize yourself, don't be satisfied merely saying "I was here." Walt Whitman entreats us "sound your barbaric yawp." The less eloquent but more noted Madonna says something a little along the same lines. "Express yourself." Don't settle for mediocrity. When you address the world around you, speak loudly.

Don't just say "I was here," say "I was here and I lived."

Frank Cristinzio is a junior computer science major. He lives in Stanford Hall.

I think if you look deep down inside yourself you'll find that you're a lot gutsier than you may have suspected.

"Cheers" not the last great bar scene

Cactus Jack's Cantina offers a change of pace for South Bend night life

By MARIE FATTORE
Accent Writer

The last great bar scene did not end with the final episode of "Cheers".

Cactus Jack's, a popular Mexican deli in South Bend, has expanded to include a new bar. After two successful years in the restaurant business, private owners and long time friends, Tim Mulligan and Kevin Murphy decided to use their profits to add a new twist to the original Cactus Jack's.

For students who have had enough of the noisy, smoke-filled, wall-to-wall crowd at the usual weekend hangouts, Mulligan and Murphy have created an authentic Mexican cantina, a change of pace from most local bars.

Coming from California where taco stands are extremely common, both Mulligan and Murphy saw the need for a Mexican food joint that had more to offer than Taco Bell.

They also saw the need for a bar that was not a dive but also not extremely over-priced.

The cantina, which is rich in authentic modern Aztec decor, commonly coined the southwest theme, just opened to the public on Monday night.

The addition of the bar is partly due to the necessity for difference in night-life atmosphere. Mulligan and Murphy both felt that there was a real need for a something different when it came to spending an evening out. They created Cactus Jack's Cantina with that in mind.

Mulligan and Murphy have added on to the original Mexican deli by moving into the area which was once Domino's. The bar can be entered either through the restaurant or through an outside entrance. Also, a patio is attached to the front of the bar where people can sit outside and relax.

Offering a new twist to the bar scene, Cactus Jack's Cantina debuted this past Monday with hopes of becoming a new popular Irish option for the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community.

"We're trying to avoid being the typical bar. We want to offer a place that is close, has really good beer, and is reasonably priced," Murphy, a 1989 Notre Dame graduate, said.

Keeping in line with the Mexican theme, Cactus Jack's offers a different Mexican import special every night in addition to a variety of wines and other drinks that will give it a more formal aura.

While the regular restaurant menu is available in the bar as well, after 10 p.m. a special bar menu will be in effect.

This menu will consist of a variety of freshly made Mexican foods, such as chicken and seafood burritos at very reasonable prices.

The decor consists of all authentic Mexican furnishings, imported from Tijuana. The bar also boasts a pool table, darts, and a jukebox with an impressive collection of music.

Two big screen televisions are conveniently located on both sides of the bar, making Cactus Jack's Cantina a perfect place to watch Notre Dame football with friends.

The family-style atmosphere is great for viewing those games when tickets are impossible to get, or for watching Monday night football.

Cactus Jack's grill and cantina will open every day at 11 a.m. The grill will close at 10 p.m., however, festivities in the cantina will continue on for the over-21 crowd until 2 a.m. Sunday's hours are noon to 10 p.m.

During grill hours, security identification will occur at the bar. At 10 p.m., when the entrance through the restaurant closes, security identification will move to the door.

Mulligan and Murphy hope that Notre Dame students will be drawn to the cantina. "This is a middle ground between places like The Linebacker and Coach's. It's a casual but nice place where you can get good food and good beer," Mulligan said.

Murphy and Mulligan plan to limit the number of people admitted each night in order to maintain crowd control, and a relaxed atmosphere.

Cactus Jack's Cantina is conveniently located between Turtle Creek and Campus View apartments in the Campus Shops center. It is easily within walking distance from the Notre Dame campus.

The enticing after-hours addition, authentic Mexican atmosphere and prime location of Cactus Jack's Cantina will make it a refreshing new option in the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's night life.

nowhere," Lanza added. "He is a great player. He has a great shot and is very quick. He's one of the top freshman."

Turner's ability to adjust well should not be that big of a surprise, considering that he practiced for a year with the French club team PSG and was even offered a contract to play there.

"France was a great experience," Turner said. "Soccer is everything there, like football is at Notre Dame. Playing there really helped in the transition. It was both more physical and quicker than high school. I'm more relaxed and composed now because of it. Yet, I thought it would better to get an education."

The forward position is Lanza's when he returns, forcing Turner to enjoy the moment which will continue tonight against Northwestern.

"Northwestern is a big and physically strong team," said Berticelli. "They have good size and are a solid team."

The Irish beat the Wildcats in the preseason last year and are putting a lot of weight on this game.

"It's important that we win this game," added Berticelli. "We have to bounce back and play well. It's important that we open the home season with a win."

Irish

bring out the best in us. Both teams will be hungry for a victory."

This is the first ever time the two teams have met, adding a shred of uncertainty to tonight's match. However, that is not to say that the Irish will be unprepared when they take the floor. Coach Debbie Brown has made sure of that.

"They are a very versatile, well-coached team," said Coach Brown. "They play smart and really understand and execute the concepts of the game well. The strongest point of their team is probably their serving."

With five straight victories and ranked 13th in the country, complacency could easily set in.

However, with Georgia Tech up next, the Irish have no time to bask in the glory of their early season success. This game is just what is needed, a tough opponent who should provide a test of the team's ability.

"It will definitely be more of a match than we've had in the first five," said Coach Brown. "Georgia Tech will not fold if they get down early. It should be very competitive."

Dusty Zeigler. Both were counted on heavily in the pre-season and showed they were capable of performing.

"Brian Magee being a free safety has got to be the focal point of your defense," noted Holtz. "He has got to make all the adjustments, the calls and be able to play the run, the pass, and play centerfield. I think he has done very well. He really played well last week. I just thought he has come of age."

Praise of Zeigler wasn't as extensive, but just as strong.

"Dusty Zeigler played an outstanding football game. I think that guy is going to be an excellent offensive lineman."

Holtz still offered plenty of his usual worries. Here's two of his major concerns.

"We had 13 penalties and many of them were foolish."

"I was disappointed with the way we did some things on defense. Northwestern controlled the ball against us."

But one thing to keep his mind. Holtz is best in big games, and Saturday undoubtedly qualifies. And he knows it.

"Playing Michigan has always been very, very special. It is a great rivalry. I remember every game I have coached in against him."

What will be memorable about this Saturday?

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK

Webster's Collegiate Dictionary defines . . .

Drink: to take liquid into the mouth for swallowing; to take in or suck up; excessive consumption of alcoholic beverages

Drank: past of drink

Drunk: having the faculties impaired by alcohol; drinking to the point of intoxication

Intoxication: an abnormal state that is essentially a poisoning

Vomit: an act or instance of disgorging the contents of the stomach through the mouth; to spew forth; to eject violently or abundantly (i.e. when you drink, and drink, and drink until the flow of fluids reverse)

Sensible: having, containing, or indicative of good sense or reason

Responsible: able to answer for one's conduct and obligations; able to choose for oneself between right and wrong; see also Zero-One-Three

If you have any questions, please call the Office of Alcohol and Drug Education at 631-7970.

ZERO

Zero = Zero Alcohol. Especially if you're under 21, driving, chemically dependent, on certain medications, or pregnant.

ONE

One = One drink per hour, which sets the pace for moderate drinking.

THREE

Three = No more than three drinks per day, and never daily.

FOOTBALL

With or without Wheatley, Michigan worries Holtz

By TIM SHERMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

When evaluating his team, Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz admits he has a split personality.

Early in the week he is a nervous wreck, analyzing the weaknesses of the Irish, watching film showing the strengths of the week's opponent, fretting whether his team will even be competitive on Saturday.

Come Thursday, the wily Holtz has had time to prepare his team, gauge what mental condition the Irish are in, and he is armed with a certain air of confidence, which often comes out at Friday's Quarterback Club luncheons and pep rallies.

Yesterday, at his weekly press conference, Holtz had his own mini-pep rally. For Michigan.

"Looking at Michigan, they are a fine football team," gushed Holtz. "They have excellent athletes. I just think they are a very, very good football team."

"They have a balanced offense, defense, great receivers. They run the ball, throw the ball, so you are not going to stop them from moving the ball."

When asked the probability that Heisman Trophy-hopeful Tyrone Wheatley will miss the game Holtz was realistically pessimistic.

"Their loss of Wheatley is going to hurt a football team but they have other good backs. General B (Tim Biakaabutuka) is a great back and was really impressive (against Boston College)."

Standard fare from Holtz, but he did let a good portion of his latter-week confidence slip in.

"I think we are probably a better football team than I envisioned," said Holtz, who boasts a 5-2-1 record against the Wolverines at Notre Dame.

"We do have some very, very talented people that are playing awfully, awfully well and that have practiced awfully hard."

Prominent on this list were names such as free safety Brian Magee and left guard

see HOLTZ / page 9

"It doesn't matter whether Tyrone Wheatley plays or whether it's (Ed) Davis or (Tim) Biakaabutuka. They are all very, very fine tailbacks."

Bill Lanza is hoping to be back in uniform for the Northern Illinois game September 15.

Lanza starts practice, return still pending

By THOMAS SCHLIDT
Sports Writer

Due to its tremendous depth, the Notre Dames men's soccer team is going to have to bench a player that may actually deserve to start. Such might be the case for freshman forward Ryan Turner when junior forward Bill Lanza returns from a knee injury.

Lanza has been unable to practice all year, until yesterday, because of a strained medial collateral ligament, the same injury that senior forward Tim Oates just recovered from.

Lanza started jogging a week ago and Saturday started heavy weight lifting. With luck and practice he should be ready to play by the Northern Illinois game, September 15.

"It's a little sore," Lanza said.

"The knee brace is slowing me down and is taking away from my ability to play, but, all in all, it's pretty good. I should be 100% in a week or two when the knee brace comes off, but, as for now, the trainers are telling me to 'Go, Go, Go.'"

In his place the Irish have been starting Turner, and he has, so far, made a good impression on the coaches.

In his debut against Penn State, Turner played strong and showed no difficulty in adjusting to the collegiate game.

"Ryan adapted well to the physical game," Coach Mike Berticelli said. "He showed maturity that one doesn't usually see until junior year. He just played great for a freshman."

"Turner has come out of

Georgia Tech offers Irish first real test

By BRIAN LUCAS
Sports Writer

The road to the top of the polls continues tonight for the Notre Dame volleyball team. Fortunately, the road starts at home.

Over the past four years, they have been just about unbeatable on their home court.

Angie Harris

After posting a 36-3 record at home since 1991, the Irish have opened the '94 campaign with five straight victories, all in their own backyard. Tonight they face their stiffest test to date when the Georgia Tech Lady Jackets come to town.

Tech returns all six of its starters from a squad that finished 25-13 last year. Their experience should make for a tough opponent, or at least tougher than the first five the Irish have faced.

In rolling over Valparaiso, sweeping the Shamrock Invitational, and defeating West Virginia, Notre Dame has dropped just two games. Throughout this stretch, the Irish have showcased their strong outside hitters, mainly senior co-captain Christy Peters and freshman Angie Harris.

Peters, for one, feels that Georgia Tech will provide a stiff test.

"They will definitely show up to win," said Peters. "The better competition should also
