National politics cause for concern

By EDWARD IMBUS
Associate News Editor

Americans have good reason to be extremely concerned with the direction of national politics, said Government Professor Peri Arnold in a lecture entitled, "Do We Really Need Government" in a St. Edward's Hall Forum last night.

Arnold

Arnold said that the many Republican victories last November in federal elections came primarily from a dissatisfaction of government which continues, although different representatives and senators now hold the reins of power.

"By looking at the language of the Contract with America," he said, "and the speeches of not only Newt Gingrich and Dick Armey but the freshman representatives as well, it seems that people no longer want or see a need for government."

He said that Republicans were able to tap into the basic American fear of big, bloated government, which have intensified over past several years by being perceived as wasteful, too big, and too intrusive into people's lives.

By taking advantage of these beliefs and promising to cut spending and making a balanced budget, Republicans also tapped into "American hyper-individualism, with the image of everyone being Daniel Boone with a pigeon rifle, coon cap, and hunting something."

Arnold said he has noticed a sense of powerlessness from Americans, "like the colonists and an imperial government seemingly unwilling to listen to them." He said democracy is sliding because talk shows and "focus groups," like those which helped make the Contract with America are portraying the public opinion of Americans, which may or may not be accurate.

He also criticized the media, which he said has a responsibility to inform Americans about public policy so that Americans can then actively participate with calm, informed, and reasonable discussion.

Currently, Americans have a dichotomy of beliefs saying they both despise federal government, especially bureaucrats, but hold favorable opinions of individual bureaucrats, according to Arnold, which is why Republicans have been reluctant to delineate cuts made necessary by the balanced budget amendment.

Arnold said that positive leadership would be needed for creating and outlining the proper role of the national government, or else many programs which help Americans are in severe jeopardy of being cut if an attitude of disillusionment continues.

"Unfortunately, we have a crisis in leadership right now," Arnold sadly said.

Efforts to end war continue in former Yugoslavia

Reprieve used to encourage Bosnian Serbs into settling conflict

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Shifting gears, the United States and four partners are proposing to ease curbs on trade and fuel shipments to Serbia in a new effort to end the war in Bosnia and prevent its spillover into Croatia.

In return for a temporary reprieve from devastating U.N. sanctions, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic would have to recognize Bosnia, Croatia and two other former Yugoslav republics as sovereign countries.

"That's not an odds-on proposition for us," Secretary of State Warren Christopher told Congress today. "If he would do it, it would be a huge step forward."

Christopher said the overall aim was to try to prod Bosnian Serbs "with additional leverage" into accepting a settlement in the 34-month war.

He credited France with "part of the initiative" and said sanctions on Serbia would be eased initially for two months if Milosevic accepted the proposal, disclosed Tuesday by a senior U.S. official at the State Department.

Christopher told the Senate Budget Committee of his concerns that an ethnic conflict in Croatia may be imminent.

Making the same point Tuesday to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, he said it would be a mistake for Croatian President Franco Tudjman to implement a threat to expel U.N. peacekeepers at the end of March.

Serbs in Bosnia and Croatia harbor hope of establishing independent states that would be joined with Belgrade to form a Greater Serbia. Milosevic's acceptance of the proposal approved by President Clinton and the governments of Britain, France, Germany and Russia could undercut those aspirations.

"I don't have any indication he will accept this, I don't have any indication he won't," said a senior U.S. official in divulging the proposal Tuesday.

Fighting in Bosnia has subsided, except in the Bihac enclave, under a four-month cease-fire that began Jan. 1. The proposal is designed to make the cease-fire permanent and to prevent "an all-out war," said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The plan will be presented to Milosevic in the next few days, the official said.

Christopher, meanwhile, said Tudjman may have "unrealistic expectations" of the Croatian army's capabilities against independence-minded Serbs.

In Bosnia, an estimated 200,000 people have died or are missing in the war. Serb forces, supplied with artillery and other weapons by Belgrade, are in control of about two-thirds of Bosnia.

A plan proposed by the five countries to establish two zones — one controlled by the Serbs and the other by a Muslim-Croat federation — has been rejected repeatedly by the Serbs.

Even an offer in December that they would be free to negotiate new terms after accepting the map did not persuade the Serbs to agree to hold 49 percent of the country.

The main lure of the new offer for Milosevic would be at least temporary renewal of trade and fuel supplies.

UN convoy provides aid, tests Serbs

By LIAM MCDOWALL
Associated Press

SARAJEVO

A U.N. convoy headed today for Bosnia's famished northwest, testing Serb promises of unhindered passage in the region, where government forces have made sizable gains.

U.N. aid agency spokesman Kris Janowski said the 10-truck convoy carrying 94 tons of aid had entered territories controlled by rebel Serbs in neighboring Croatia. Other U.N. officials said a second convoy, resupplying U.N. peacekeepers in the northwest, also had moved into Serb-held lands.

In the past month, Croatian Serbs and renegade Bosnian Muslims allied with Bosnian Serbs have been clashing with government troops in the northwestern area known as the "Bihac pocket."

The Croatian Serbs and Muslim rebels are not parties to the Jan. 1 truce signed by Bosnian Serbs and the Muslim-led government, and they have repeatedly blocked aid shipments. On Tuesday, however, they gave permission for four convoys to pass.

Janowski, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, called the permission a "breakthrough, at least on paper." He cautioned that the convoy must go through a "lot of (Serb) checkpoints ahead" before it reaches its destination.

ND's strange sense of family

Family: "the ties that bind." Catholic: "universal." It seems that the meanings of these two words are undergoing severe changes at this university.

Ethan Hayward
News Copy Editor

I realize that the GLND/SMC issue is probably overexposed, but it seems to me that it ought to be viewed in the light in which Notre Dame professes to view all things, namely the view of this institution as Catholic and as a family.

I have been attending Catholic schools for almost fifteen years, and in each and every religion or theology class I've taken, it has been pointed out to me that the Catholic religion is an inclusive one, not an exclusive one. The Church is meant to be an all-inclusive institution, not an exclusive club like the Masons. It is not supposed to discriminate in its membership on any basis. At least, that's what my teachers have said all along.

I can also remember a song we used to sing back at Gesu Elementary in Toledo. It went, "Whatever you do to the least of my people, that you do unto me." While anyone who seems to be the least of our fellow human beings may not appear too Christ-like, is it really fair to condemn them and judge them unfit to assemble and to seek representation? And isn't judging our fellow human beings something we were told not to do?

GLND/SMC is not officially recognized here because they do not fall in line with the doctrine of the Church. Does that mean the University should also not recognize the students and faculty of different religions and any organizations they may have?

And what of the idea of the "Notre Dame Family?" Would a family deny membership to those born into it simply because they are different?

I happen to have family members and family friends who happen to be homosexual. Would it be right and dutifully Catholic of me and my parents to exclude them from family gatherings or holiday celebrations? I realize that that very thing may and does occur in some families, but it just doesn't seem to be the Christian thing to do.

Not that we have any organizations within my family, like the Alliance for Extended Curfews or Children Against Forced Bathing. But there do happen to be organizations within the so-called Notre Dame Family that should not be excluded from University facilities simply because of their nature and membership.

Not everyone here is an aficionado of Newt Gingrich or public speaking. So should the College Republicans and Toastmasters' be kicked off campus, too? My point is that people are different, and differences can and must be tolerated within any given society.

Considering the recent actions of the administration, it seems that this institution is having problems living up to the labels of "Catholic," "family," and even that of "university."

Fire at packed Taiwan nightclub kills at least 67

TAICHUNG, Taiwan — Fire roared through a crowded three-story nightclub Wednesday night, killing at least 67 people and injuring 11 in Taiwan's deadliest fire on record. The cause of the fire that gutted the popular Weierkang Club, a karaoke bar and restaurant, wasn't immediately known. Some survivors said it broke out in a stairwell, while others reported hearing an explosion on the second floor. News reports said more than 100 customers were inside when the fire broke out. Police said iron bars on the windows prevented many from escaping. Newspapers said it was the highest fire death toll in Taiwan's history. Badly burned bodies were taken to a makeshift morgue, where crying relatives tried to identify them. One woman collapsed when she recognized the body of a family member. Many of the bodies were found on the second floor, "packed in like sardines," said volunteer firefighter Lee Yung-chuan. He said firefighters were exhausted from carrying bodies out of the building. A manager of the club, Wu Chen-seng, was being held for questioning. Some witnesses told police the fire broke out behind the first-floor bar of the Weierkang Club. National television also quoted survivors who said they heard an explosion, possibly on the second floor. Other survivors told Associated Press Television the fire started in the stairwell between the first and second floors. One witness said a waiter tried to use a fire extinguisher, but the fire was too big. Police said firefighters extinguished the blaze in an hour. Taichung Mayor Lin Po-jung and Taiwan provincial Gov. James Soong visited the scene of the fire and expressed condolences to the families of the dead. Taiwan's karaoke clubs, many of which operate without government permission or qualified safety facilities, have been the site of several recent fires.

Lugar to phase down crop payments

WASHINGTON

The chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee will propose a five-year phase-down of crop subsidy payments to help cut farm program spending by $11 billion. Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., will suggest a cut in the "target price" for major crops by 3 percent a year in each of the five years, said Minda Markle, spokesperson for the Agriculture Committee. The proposal will be among others Lugar will make Thursday in testimony before the Senate Budget Committee. The $11 billion would equal a 25 percent reduction in farm program spending, Ms. Markle said. The target price is set by Congress as the desired price for major crops: wheat, corn, sorghum, barley, oats, rice and cotton. Lugar acknowledged in an interview with Broder that the proposal would be a difficult sell for his fellow farm-state Republicans, including Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the Senate majority leader, and Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. "If we are serious about budget discipline," Lugar said, "we cannot spare our friends."

Ferguson has new conspiracy theory

MINEOLA, N.Y.

The man accused of killing six people on a commuter train maintained in court today that he is a victim of a conspiracy that is somehow linked to the death of serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer. Colin Ferguson, allowed to act as his own lawyer despite advice to plead innocent by reason of insanity, also claimed he had been forced into an appearance on CNN's "Larry King Live." Ferguson is accused of killing six people and wounding 19 more on a packed Long Island Rail Road commuter train on Dec. 7, 1993. He has claimed the shootings were committed by an unidentified white man who stole his gun. On Tuesday, he offered another theory: The killer was a black man who both looks like him and shares his name. He said last November's prison slaying of Dahmer, who admitted cannibalizing some of his victims, also was tied to the conspiracy against him. "The Jeffrey Dahmer incident was not a coincidence. ... He was set up as a prelude against me," he said. "There's a conspiracy to murder me if I'm convicted." Ferguson also complained that he was forced against his will to tape an appearance for King's show, a statement the judge found ludicrous. "I saw you on Larry King last night, and you didn't appear to be under coercion," Judge Donald Belfi said.

Priests charged with sexual abuse

LANDOVER, Md.

Three Roman Catholic priests were arrested Wednesday and charged with sexual child abuse during the 1970s. Prince George's County police say the priests turned themselves in after being advised there were warrants against them. Father Alphonsus Smith, 70, was charged with abusing two youths in 1975 while assigned to Saint Matthias Church in Lanham. Father Edward Pritchard, 50, was charged with abusing one youth in 1974 and another in 1976 while assigned to Saint Matthias. Father Edward Hartel, 58, is charged with one count of abuse while visiting the church in 1975. Conviction of sexual child abuse carries a penalty of up to 15 years in jail. The Archdiocese of Washington disclosed last week that four parishes had admitted molesting an altar boy at Saint Matthias in the 1970s. The priests were removed from their parish assignments after admitting they sexually abused the same altar boy during the 1970s. The Washington Archdiocese issued a statement Wednesday saying the entire situation "is a source of great sorrow to the archdiocese. We continue to pray for all those involved in this tragedy, most especially the victims, the parish communities and the priests themselves."

Judge upholds adoption

MIAMI

A case of adoptive parents who reluctantly agreed to return their 5-month-old boy took a twist Wednesday when a judge told them they should keep the baby. The biological mother, Sheila Sheil, had consented to the adoption with the condition that the birth father also approved. But she named the wrong man as Baby Michael's father. Genetic tests revealed Franklin Velasquez was the father, and he objected to the adoption. Sheil withdrew her consent, and adoptive parents Kim and Dennis Sowers of Fort Lauderdale agreed to surrender their son rather than have his life entangled in the courts. Then reports of Sheil's criminal history surfaced. In 1993, she served six months in prison on four felony convictions for stealing from a 90-year-old patient while on probation for other fraud and theft convictions. And last Friday, Velasquez withdrew his objection to the adoption. Palm Beach Circuit Judge Lucy Brown upheld the adoption Wednesday in a written opinion that was not made public, lawyers for both sides said. Sheil's attorney, Ellis Rubin, promised an appeal. He added that Sheil, "was disappointed but definitely not surprised." Even though she almost lost custody, Kim Sowers said she hoped other couples would not be frightened away from adoption.

Arafat accused of rights' abuse

By DONNA ABU-NASR
Associated Press

GAZA CITY

The knock on the door, in the middle of the night, came for Raji Sourani just two days after he criticized PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

Sourani, a human rights activist, said he was asleep in his villa at 12:30 a.m. Wednesday when the plainclothes policeman arrived and told him to come to the city jail.

"It's an order from the leadership," the officer said, according to Sourani's wife Amal.

On Monday, Sourani had publicly denounced Arafat for ordering the establishment of special military courts that will try Islamic militant opponents of PLO rule.

The incident raised new questions about how the PLO chief deals with dissent and came amid fresh reports of beatings and humiliation of detainees in Gaza's police lock-ups.

Over the weekend, the New York-based Human Rights Watch said in a report that Arafat's government often acted in a "repressive fashion." It complained of arbitrary arrests, jailhouse beatings and the lack of due process.

Palestinian officials acknowledged Wednesday that there have been some transgressions by the security forces but denied there was a policy of systematic abuse.

"No one is more concerned about safeguarding Palestinian human rights than we are," the chief Palestinian prosecutor, Khaled Kidreh, told The Associated Press.

"Human rights organizations should deal with us as a sovereign, democratic state and not as our custodians."

Arafat has been under growing pressure from Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin to arrest and try Islamic militants involved in a rash of deadly attacks on Israelis. Rabin told Arafat last week that he would not negotiate a troop withdrawal from the West Bank until he complied.

Israel has complained that previous arrest sweeps in which security forces rounded up scores of militants were ineffective because detainees were usually released after a few days.

The sweeps have created an atmosphere of paranoia and tension in Gaza.

This is compounded by a growing number of secret service agents who belong to eight different agencies created by Arafat. The agents lack a clear mandate and often cause resentment because of what many Gazans perceive as a high-handed attitude.

Recently, a reporter saw a secret service agent spit at a taxi driver in Gaza City. The agent cursed the driver because he didn't make way quickly enough for the speeding secret service van.

Many Palestinian hesitate to file complaints against the security forces, fearing retribution.

Nassar Falleet, a teacher in the town of Deir Balah, recalled an incident two months ago when he was driving a car he had just bought that day. He was stopped by seven policemen at gunpoint who forced him to get out and hand over the keys.

Falleet, 47, said he has tried to see Arafat six times to get his car back, but was roughly turned away from the PLO chief's headquarters. He said his lawyer refused to take the case to court for fear of reprisals.

Settlers claim arrests politically motivated

By GWEN ACKERMAN
Associated Press

HEBRON, West Bank

Dozens of police arrested a founder of the Jewish settler movement and his wife today after scuffling with angry settlers who threw stones and eggs to keep officers away.

Settler leaders said the arrests were politically motivated and said police used excessive force in taking into custody Rabbi Moshe Levinger and his wife, Miriam. Both were charged with assault.

The arrests came at a time of heightened friction in this city of 80,000 Palestinians and 450 Jews: Both groups were marking the first anniversary of a Jewish settler's massacre of 29 Muslims at a Hebron mosque.

Settler leader Noam Arnon accused the government of using the arrests to incite the Israeli public against the Hebron settlements and pave the way for dismantling them. The government has announced no such plans.

At 5:30 a.m., dozens of police and women soldiers arrived at the Levingers' home in the Avraham Avinu enclave in the heart of Hebron to take Mrs. Levinger to a court hearing.

Mrs. Levinger repeatedly failed to appear in court to answer charges that she assaulted an Israeli security officer in Hebron several months ago, said Nathan Kamarsky, deputy police commander in the West Bank.

Kamarsky said police contacted Levinger on Tuesday night and told him officers would be arriving early today to take in his wife. Levinger said the officers would be pelted with stones if they neared his house, Kamarsky said.

Settlers carried out Levinger's threats. "They threw stones at us and eggs and water ... and as a result, we had to go in by force," Kamarsky told Israel radio.

Settler Orit Struck told Israel army radio that police "came with clubs, hammers, and everyone who tried to get near was pushed aside by force."

Russia, Chechnya agree to truce

By JULIA RUBIN
Associated Press

SLEPTSOVSK, Russia

Russian and Chechen officials reportedly agreed to a temporary cease-fire today, despite skepticism and widespread violations of an earlier truce.

The 48-hour truce was scheduled to take effect at midnight, Chechen field commander Shamil Basayev was quoted as telling Russian news agencies.

Negotiations on a longer-lasting peace are to resume Friday in this town in the Ingushetia republic just west of Chechnya, the ITAR-Tass and Interfax news agencies said.

A preliminary agreement had been reached Monday for the two sides to stop using heavy artillery and to begin working out an exchange of war prisoners and dead.

But that cease-fire was punctuated by widespread artillery and missile attacks in the area south of the Chechen capital.

Russia and others question whether any cease-fire will be obeyed by Chechens fighting independently of forces loyal to Chechen President Dzhokhar Dudayev. Even the lead Chechen negotiator at the talks in Ingushetia, Aslan Maskhadov, has warned that he does not control those volunteers.

"The Chechen side is a lot of small groups who act how they want to," said Zhabrail Bogatyrev, spokesman for the Interior Ministry of Ingushetia that is brokering the talks. "And the army is the army — it's like a car that's in motion and it's not going to stop."

Cease-fire declared in Peru, Ecuador conflict

By LYNN MONAHAN
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru
Peruvian forces began to pull back troops and tanks Wednesday from populated areas of the border with Ecuador, a day after a shaky cease-fire took hold.

More than half the troops and at least 300 tanks have returned to their bases, said Carlos Calero of the government radio station in Tumbes, 18 miles from the border with Ecuador.

"The tension has dissipated and the population is calm," Calero said.

A cease-fire went into effect at noon Tuesday. No fighting was reported Wednesday, although both sides reported fighting Tuesday.

Hostilities erupted Jan. 26 over an unmarked 48-mile stretch of border that is said to contain valuable minerals, including gold and oil. At least 49 soldiers have been killed and 100 wounded.

The two countries fought a war in 1941 over the remote section of rain forest in the Cordillera del Condor mountain range.

Peruvian officials said Tuesday they had begun to pull armored units back to their bases. But on Ecuador's side of the border, troops remained on alert.

Ecuador's military claimed late Tuesday that Peru was moving two battalions, including tank units, to the northern border from its southern frontier with Chile. Peru did not respond to the accusation.

Officials in both countries have accused the other of establishing "false posts" to support claims of victory.

Peru accused Ecuador of raining artillery fire Tuesday on a base it had seized at Tiwintza. Ecuador denied the charge, but confirmed fighting occurred.

While the fighting appeared to have abated, the propaganda war continued.

Ecuador escorted journalists to a post said that its military said was Tiwintza, but at the same time Peruvian officials were saying Tiwintza was under attack.

Fujimori left Wednesday for the conflict zone with selected Peruvian journalists, and planned to visit Tiwintza and two other bases he says were taken from Ecuadorean forces.

Peru's Gen. Daniel Mora, head of the army's information office, told reporters Tuesday that Tiwintza was a zone of about 12 square miles.

While adamant that Peruvian troops had taken the base, he admitted the area had not been secured. He said Ecuadorean units were in the area and it would be several days before they were able to return to Ecuador over the rough terrain.

Salvi pleads innocent to murders

By RICHARD LORANT
Associated Press

DEDHAM, Mass.

The man accused of killing two women in attacks on abortion clinics pleaded innocent today to state charges that could put him in prison for life.

John C. Salvi III was unshaven during his arraignment and his eyes roamed around the courtroom. Security was extremely heavy and he wore a bulletproof vest under a blue blazer.

In a clear voice, Salvi pleaded innocent in Norfolk County Superior Court to two counts of first-degree murder and five counts of assault with intent to murder in the Dec. 30 attacks in the Boston suburb of Brookline. He was arrested Dec. 31.

Federal authorities have said they will defer their prosecution of Salvi until his state trial is over.

Salvi allegedly walked into the Planned Parenthood and Preterm Health Services clinics Dec. 30 and opened fire with a .22-caliber rifle. The next day he was arrested in Norfolk, Va., after he allegedly fired 20 shots at a building that housed an abortion clinic there. Nobody was hurt in the Norfolk attack.

Prosecutor John Kivlan said Salvi had prepared for the killings as early as Oct. 11, when he purchased a .22-caliber handgun.

Inside one of the clinics, Kivlan said, one victim pleaded "No, no, no!" before Salvi shot her. He said Salvi shouted "something to the effect of, 'This is what you get. Pray the rosary.'" Salvi's next court appearance was set for March 8.

Salvi, a 22-year-old apprentice hairdresser from Hampton, N.H., was indicted Tuesday. He initially pleaded innocent in Brookline District Court; the switch to Superior Court is routine in murder cases.

Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt said Salvi's trial could begin in October or November. Salvi faces maximum sentences of mandatory life in prison without parole for each murder charge.

In federal court, Salvi could face charges carrying the death sentence — killing someone with a firearm while committing a federal crime, in this case violating the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act.

U.S. Attorney Donald Stern said Attorney General Janet Reno approved of the decision to wait out the state prosecution. He also said he was putting off a decision about whether to seek a death-penalty case against Salvi.

"All options are open," Stern said at a news conference.

Salvi earlier was arraigned in Virginia before being returned to Massachusetts on federal fugitive charges.

Pioneer: New PC line to use Apple system

Radioactive waste sent to Japan

By DAVID THURBER
Associated Press

TOKYO
Pioneer Electronic Corp. today became the first Japanese company to announce a line of personal computers using Apple Computer's Macintosh operating system.
Pioneer's announcement — which had been expected — is a victory for Apple, which has been trying to license the Mac operation system in an effort to compete against Microsoft Windows, used by most of the world's personal computers.
Pioneer, chiefly an audio-visual electronics maker, said its first entries in the competitive PC market will use circuit boards supplied by Apple. Pioneer plans to include additional software that allows the computers to control laser disc players.
With it, laser disc movies can be played directly on the computer's monitor or on a television set, and scenes can be stored on the computer's hard disk for editing.
Windows' domination of the PC market has caused some software developers to turn away from the Macintosh, and Apple hopes to lure them back by boosting the Mac operating system's market share.

Apple — which for many years refused to license its Mac system — has already announced licenses for two American companies: Power Computing, a PC clone maker; and Radius, a maker of high-end graphics equipment.
But it has yet to find any takers among the large computer companies that specialize in IBM clones.
"Licensing the Mac OS is crucial for Apple's future," said David Kellar, an analyst for market researcher IDC Japan. "They need to get some major computer makers to make Mac clones before it will have any significant impact on market share."
Pioneer said pricing and overseas marketing plans haven't been decided, but said it is aiming at the middle of the current Macintosh price range — likely to be somewhere between $2,000 and $3,000.

PARIS
France is proceeding with plans to ship highly radioactive waste to Japan this month, despite protests from 14 governments and various environmental groups.
The shipment, involving waste stored in glass blocks in a heavy container, is the first of its kind. Environmentalists say it represents a dangerous new turn in the transport of nuclear materials by sea.
At least 14 governments, including Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands, have protested the shipment, the environmental group Greenpeace told a news conference Wednesday.
Greenpeace also said a group of U.S. congressmen has asked President Clinton to try to delay the shipment and use the Navy to keep nuclear shipments from U.S. territorial waters.

France, reprocessing spent Japanese nuclear fuel, has been shipping recycled plutonium back to Japan since November 1992. But Japan is required under French law to also take back the waste residue, which is far more radioactive.

Greenpeace says a person would get a lethal dose of radiation by standing a yard from one of the 1,000-pound blocks for one minute.
Cogema, the French waste processor, and its British shipper insist they have taken adequate precautions. British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. has asked a French court to bar Greenpeace from interfering with the shipment. The court is expected to rule Monday.
Cogema won't say when the ship will sail this month or the route it will take. The ship could travel through the Caribbean and the Panama Canal, around South America or the tip of Africa once it leaves Cherbourg on France's Atlantic seaboard.
On board will be a 112-ton cask of 28 cylindrical blocks of molten glass mixed with highly radioactive waste, then hardened. Environmentalists worry the ship and the steel cask are not strong enough to withstand a fire or collision. "These transports are not being made in a safe fashion. Their plans are inadequate," Greenpeace spokesman Damon Moglen said Wednesday. "We will make every effort to track this ship and to inform the countries at risk."

"We want to block this transport through the countries along the route," he said.
The group demanded more information from France, Britain and Japan on the shipment, its safety and who would be responsible in an accident. It also demanded a study of the environmental damage should there be a disaster.
The group organized protests in Cherbourg in November 1992 when the first shipment of processed plutonium left for Japan. State-owned Cogema has since reported one or two of those shipments a year without incident.
Jean-Louis Ricaud, Cogema's vice president in charge of reprocessing, said the route of the latest shipment is secret for security reasons. "The ship doesn't present any danger," he said in a telephone interview.
The ship is to arrive at Mutsu-Ogawara Port near a nuclear waste storage site on the northern tip of Japan's Honshu Island, 340 miles from Tokyo.

CAMPUS MINISTRY... ...CONSIDERATIONS

...JPW

Each February, a special "Notre Dame Moment" takes place on campus as we celebrate Junior Parent Weekend. Most undergrads inform their parents about the weekend during Freshman year, and the planning begins. It doesn't matter whether any particular February weekend is of the normal South Bend variety or whether we are under the moderating influence of El Nino.

JPW is a wonderful milestone for juniors and for their parents.

It is a time for a son or daughter and their parents to recognize mutually a passage from adolescence to young adulthood. It is a period of two days when a young man or woman takes time to thank their father and mother who have been so intrinsically involved in the passage and in every moment of life which led to the transition. The debt of gratitude of a child is rarely more clear; the sense of pride of parents in the accomplishments of their child will not often be more deeply felt or celebrated.

JPW is an occasion when parents can be introduced to friends and when they can meet the parents of those who have become lifelong friends over the course of five semesters.

Notre Dame prides itself in the sense of family which is actively promoted because of who we have been and are as an educational community. And Junior Parent Weekend is, above all, a celebration of family.

Like so many others, I love this special weekend. I really enjoy it when I have a chance to greet the parents of juniors, even if only for the first time since Freshman Orientation Weekend and for the last time until Commencement.

I hope that Notre Dame will always be a place where we celebrate the values of family and provide moments for Notre Dame families to celebrate their love and devotion. There is no better way to do this than to celebrate the Eucharist together, as a family, and to thank God for the innumerable blessings that come to us through people whose lives are simply a series of loving sacrifices.

But I am also keenly aware that this special moment is not necessarily a happy one for every Notre Dame junior. I hope that Notre Dame will always be a place where we understand and appreciate the difficult circumstances some of our friends who are juniors face and the feelings they experience.

Some have lost a parent to death. I think of them and I pray that the promises of Jesus which our faith holds out to us will be a source of consolation for them, and that they may understand that their parent prays for them before the Risen Lord.

I think, too, about other students who have had to face and participate in a separation or divorce with wrenching consequences regardless of whether the estrangement is amicable or contested. Their circumstances, too, are celebrated around the same altar where we remember love beyond all telling, and where the love of their father and mother is also present.

In the coming years, the number of juniors for whom Junior Parent Weekend will not be a moment to look forward to will increase, slowly but surely.

The love of Jesus Christ is always ours because of our common faith. No person and no circumstance stands beyond the reach of God's loving, healing and forgiving embrace.

Gender brain processes different, but equal

By MALCOLM RITTER
Associated Press

NEW YORK
Scientists say they have found a sex difference in how the brain handles a crucial language task, providing new evidence that men's and women's brains differ.

When a man mentally breaks a word into its individual sounds, he concentrates the job on the left side of his brain. But a woman uses both sides of the brain almost equally to do the same thing, researchers report.

Despite this difference, men and women did the task equally well in the study. That shows "the brain has great versatility in processing language and in reading," said researcher Dr. Sally Shaywitz.

The work provides new evidence for a long-held idea that the brain concentrates language-related jobs on the left side much more in men than it does in women. Previous studies have been inconclusive.

"This finding is an extremely important milestone in our understanding of language ability," said G. Reid Lyon, director of extramural research programs in learning disabilities at the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development. The institute supported the work with grants.

The finding suggests women have a brain reserve for language ability in case of damage or malfunctioning in the left side of the brain, he said.

That might help women recover better from language problems caused by strokes, and explain why girls with a reading disability end up reading better than boys with the problem, he said.

The study, in which volunteers' brains were scanned as they did a variety of tasks, shows that scientists can track where specific language tasks are done in the brain, Shaywitz said. That should give insight into problems like reading disabilities, she said.

Shaywitz and her husband, Dr. Bennett Shaywitz, who are co-directors of the Yale Center for the Study of Learning and Attention at the Yale University School of Medicine, present the work with colleagues in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

They studied 19 men and 19 women with a recently developed technique called functional magnetic resonance imaging, which can show which parts of the brain are being activated while a person does a particular task.

Gingrich: Rely on US, not UN

By DONALD ROTHBERG
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Gingrich

House Republicans pushed ahead Wednesday with legislation to put their stamp on foreign and defense policy, brushing aside President Clinton's complaint that their effort "represents an assault on the authority of the president." As debate got under way in the House, Speaker Newt Gingrich told a news conference that "having watched this administration, we disagree deeply with the way they would risk American lives around the planet."

Gingrich singled out what he called the administration's "willingness to rely on the United Nations instead of the United States."

"This bill represents an assault on the authority of the president as commander in chief," Clinton told Gingrich in a letter dated Tuesday.

The president never used the word "veto" but made it clear that was a likely outcome.

"The bill contains numerous flawed provisions that are simply unacceptable," wrote Clinton.

He concluded the letter by calling the measure "bad national security policy" that would "set us on a collision course with some of our closest allies."

House leaders hope to conclude action on the measure Thursday. But even if that goal is reached, the measure would be a long way from Clinton's desk. No comparable measure has been filed in the Senate.

The bill incorporates the foreign and defense elements of the Republican "Contract With America," including cuts in U.S. support for U.N. peacekeeping, prohibition of placing U.S. forces under foreign command and an accelerated push for a national missile defense system.

The American people would be shocked to learn that the administration and its allies in Congress think that the president should have a free hand to put American forces under foreign command," said Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., chairman of the House International Relations Committee.

Leading the opposition to the bill, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., Gilman's predecessor of chairman of the International Relations Committee, said passage of the bill would leave the president with no option but "to act alone or do nothing."

At the Pentagon, Defense Secretary William Perry said the proposal for pushing ahead with a national missile defense system "would divert money from more pressing needs: readiness, theater missile defense and force modernization."

The Pentagon also released a letter from five former military leaders who said the bill "would impose onerous and unnecessary restrictions on the president's ability to place U.S. forces under the operational control of other nation's military leaders for U.N. operations."

The signers included retired Gen. David Jones, a former Air Force chief of staff and former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Before the formal debate began, the House was tied up with nearly three hours of partisan arguing over time limits. The Republican majority pushed through a rule that would limit the time to 12 hours. The Democrats argued unsuccessfully for no time limit.

Supporters of the bill argued that it would not tie the hands of the president because it contained standard provisions allowing him to bypass its restrictions in cases where he determines it is in the national interest.

Casey at the Bank

Things were looking rosy for big Mudville, Inc. that year. They had bought another station and were selling loads of beer. So when the season ended with a strike, "Hey, that's a shame! But this is business," said the owners, "not some sweet and childish game."

When the owners dug their heels in, and the players did the same, A strange and awful hush fell over students of the game. With all the talk of contracts, of bottom line and loss, It could be more than revenue this baseball strike has cost.

Kids are playing soccer, when you tell 'em, "Let's play ball!" They strap on gaudy sneakers and go dribble in some hall. Willy's now a killer whale, and Mickey's just a mouse; DiMaggio, some guy named Joe, who sold coffee house to house.

Oh, somewhere on some future day a dad might take his son To the ballpark for a hot dog (that's eight bucks with the bun). The kid will watch a hero sign a baseball for a fee, And ask his aging father, "Mighty Casey? Who is he?"

You get what you ask for . . .

Well, so it's come to this. Even my melancholy column of Thursday last, "Partying Isn't What It Used To Be," has inspired comments from my detractors. Kevin Krause and John Von Heyking, the men behind the party I wrote about, have sent a letter to The Observer.

Josh Ozersky

"With...advanced warning," wrote Krause and Von Heyking of my announcement that I planned to attend their soiree, "we were able to take appropriate precautions. [Pretty mean-spirited, I say!] As a public service, The Observer might consider printing Mr. Ozersky's intended social calendar on a regular basis. In this way, others—thus forewarned—might be similarly forewarned." No sooner said than done, boys! Below, submitted for the use of the South Bend beau monde, is my social calendar for February.

17: Friday. Sneak in Govt. mail-room, check in boxes for directions to possible parties. English dept? 8 pm: handicapped students ball—free refreshments (YES!). Bring crutch. 10 p.m.—drinks with Father Malloy. Walsh panty-raid?

■ LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Writer misinterprets GLND/SMC mission

Dear Editor:

In his letter to the Observer, published Feb. 13, Jay Town argued that the Administration's decision to bar GLND/SMC from meeting at the Counseling Center was justified. His argument was based upon the inaccurate and misleading premise that GLND/SMC "fosters" and "promotes" sexual activity. "If not to do this, then why bother with the formation of the group and the unity of its members?" he asked.

GLND/SMC was formed for the purpose of support, education, and outreach. For instance, we have held biweekly support group meetings for those who are just beginning to come to terms with their sexual orientation. We have invited speakers such as Ron Nyswaner, Peter Cicchino, and Andrew Sullivan to campus in order that everyone may learn more about such topics as the reality and danger of AIDS, gay and lesbian civil rights issues, and the integration of faith and sexuality. We encourage debate and discussion. We have made every effort to remain visible, and that visibility helps dismantle stereotypes, knock down barriers of prejudice. Hopefully this will create a truer sense of community at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

GLND/SMC does not encourage or promote sexual activity. Such activity does not occur, and would not be permitted to occur, at any of our events. We also refuse to tolerate sexual harassment of any kind. It seems to me that much of the opposition to GLND/SMC is based upon misconceptions about the nature and purpose of the organization. In Town's own words, "it becomes an issue of sexual activity...not sexual orientation."

There is no rational or moral justification for the Administration's treatment of GLND/SMC. Officially recognized gay and lesbian groups exist at DePaul, Loyola, Georgetown, Fordham, St. Edward's (significantly run by the Congregation of the Holy Cross), Catholic University, and several other Catholic institutions of higher learning. Isn't it time Notre Dame and Saint Mary's joined their peers?

She Stoops to Conquer

An antiquated play offers modern perspective on life and love

By ASHLEIGH THOMPSON
Accent Writer

To those who are unfamiliar with Oliver Goldsmith or Notre Dame's Department of Communication and Theatre, She Stoops to Conquer may appear at first glance to be the title of the newest feminist seminar. Ask any theatre major, and they'll tell you instead that it is one of the most exciting and energetic performances coming to campus this year.

The Drama Division of the renowned Juilliard School, which has trained such successful stage and movie actors as Robin Williams, Kevin Kline, Christopher Reeve and Kelly McGillis, will present Goldsmith's classic comedy beginning tonight thru Saturday in Washington Hall.

Written by the Anglo-Irish poet and dramatist William Goldsmith in 1773, She Stoops to Conquer has endured due to its cleverly constructed plot and satirical humor. One of the best examples of farce in English comic drama, She Stoops to Conquer is a "laughing comedy," perhaps because of its original purpose of wittily attacking the sentimental drama of the day. Director Maria Aitken has tried to utilize the energy and physicality of her young cast in order to make the production highly accessible to contemporary audiences. Aitken said that her intention is, "to delight the audiences and offend the English departments just as Goldsmith did in his day. This is not a high comedy."

Bruce Auerbach, Notre Dame's Director of Theatre, urges students not to be influenced by the antiquity of the play. She Stoops to Conquer addresses modern issues such as dating, marriage, and family relationships. Auerbach describes one of the characters as being, "right out of Animal House;" he emphasizes how entertaining the work actually is.

She Stoops to Conquer follows The Bacchae and Waiting for Godot as one of four period pieces the University's Department of Communication and Theatre is presenting this year. Along with the modern drama, This Country's Good, which will be presented April 5 thru 9, they hope this diversity will expose students to a broad historical range of theatre.

Auerbach also believes that the influence of the Juilliard troop is good for Notre Dame theatre students. Not only can they relate to these college-age performers, but they can strive towards this next level of achievement. Senior theatre major Erin O'Malley agrees, noting that the Juilliard students provide a bridge between the real world of acting and the academic world. O'Malley adds that interacting with the Juilliard students, "provides a nice perspective on things," especially since many theatre majors are applying to Graduate Schools now.

More than eight hundred actors audition each year for fewer than twenty-five Juilliard acceptances. After serious study in stage movement, voice, acting and dance, they are not allowed to perform for audiences until their final year. The cast, which includes Blair Singer as Tony, Leslie Silva as Constance and Steve Patrick Holt as Marlow, is extremely prepared, and will not even arrive in South Bend until the afternoon of the show. These students will participate in lectures and workshops with Notre Dame students during their time on campus.

Some may wonder why this young cast would choose such an antiquated play, but a glimpse into the humorous plot reveals the reason. A middle aged couple named The Hardcastles attempt to arrange marriages for their son and daughter, Tony and Kate. For Tom they choose Kate's best friend Constance, even though he dislikes her almost as much as she dislikes him. The Hardcastles invite a suitor named Marlow to meet their headstrong daughter Kate.

The comedy unfolds as Marlow and his companion Hastings stop at a tavern because they have lost their way on their journey to meet the Hardcastle family. Tony recognizes the two yet does not introduce himself. Instead, he directs them to an "inn up the road," which is actually the Hardcastles' home. The two young men unknowingly treat the Hardcastles as if they were servants. Mr. Hardcastle is left with the impression that he has made a terrible decision in choosing a suitor. Constance meets Hastings and not only does she reveal Tony's practical joke, but together, they decide to keep the mistaken identities a secret. Goldsmith creates an incredibly funny scenario, which successfully satirizes the pretenses of the English society he intended to target.

Performances will be held at Washington Hall from Thursday, February 16 thru Saturday, February 18. Tickets can be purchased at the door or in advance at the LaFortune Student Center Box Office.

The mature and serene voice of Galway Kinnel

By JOHN GORMAN
Accent Writer

We live in a time in which the mass media is capable of producing celebrities overnight, often regardless of their talent, virtue or longevity. Some men and women seem to embody all of these characteristics as they make a name for themselves in their respective fields. Yet, they still remain virtually obscure to the fast-paced, material-oriented public. Such are poets.

A heartfelt stanza and a poignant simile appears to be an ineffective form of communication in an age when words and emotions have more value in a courtroom than in the palm of one's hand.

However, if one seeks out these anomalies, he or she may find a seldomly explored world that entertains and reaches out to who we really are. One only has to look as far as Galway Kinnel to feel a whisper of poetry's gentle heavings.

Mr. Kinnel comes to Notre Dame from the creative writing department of New York University with accolades that most writers could only dream of obtaining. He is the current poet laureate of Vermont, has won both the Pulitzer Prize and an American Book Award, and has received numerous grants and fellowships to aid in the pursuit of his art.

But this recognition is secondary to him. Not only does he cry out for himself, but he also cries out to those who are willing to free themselves from the manacles of the daily grind. He offers his wisdom to aid in elevating their personal well-being. As a point of comparison, Kinnel's only predecessor as poet laureate of Vermont is Robert Frost — impressive company, indeed.

Kinnel's most recent production is 1994's Imperfect Thirst, which is his twelfth compilation of poems. Some critics believe that this effort of Kinnel's is his best ever. It deals with themes that he has grappled with in previous works, but these selections showcase a more mature and serene voice. Prominent themes of love, nature and mortality are handled with a fervor and reflection that separates Kinnel from his contemporaries.

In the past, Kinnel frequently struggled with the idea of death. He once said, "It's necessary to understand, to know about, birth and death." He believes: "A view of life is not valid unless it includes everything, including the worst."

Some feel that these attitudes make Kinnel a pessimist or a fatalist, but the way in which he approaches the subject only reveals that he is a realist. He has a grip on mortality that tempers his fear. This type of realism can be comforting to readers who are trying to cope with their own mortality. His words should be seen as a form of convalescence rather than an alert to something ominous.

Regarding nature, Kinnel has experienced it much in the same way of Henry David Thoreau. He has always been close to the magnificence of Vermont's mountains and woods, and he understands his optimal role amidst it. He has also been in close contact to Vermont's antithesis, New York City, and his dual habitation has given him more insight into humanity outside of nature.

Kinnel treats love differently than most, for in his mind love extends beyond that of other human beings. He has an affinity for animals and understands his connection with them. He does not cringe at the apparent filth in which many creatures live. Rather, he points out that humans live in conditions that are also impure, and we may even be less clean than many animals. His poems magnify how there is little difference between a squirrel or swine, and a human.

Sharon Olds once summed up Kinnel's attitude towards humans in relation to animals. She said, "He sees what has been seen as vile as simply human." Olds thinks of Kinnel's view as a spiritual experience which can be difficult to comprehend.

Kinnel's brilliance is best demonstrated by his poetry readings. Since poets are most adept at reading their own pieces, they add a flavor to the print which cannot be tasted by even the most scrupulous readers. Kinnel passionately provides his audiences with an intimacy of the text that only he can uncover. To him, a poetry reading is active and sets the words into motion.

The opportunity to see a man of this calibre deliver a gasp of poetic excitement on our campus is rare. Galway Kinnel will be reading tonight in the Hesburgh Library Auditorium. After all, critic Sydney Lea once said, "When he is good he is very, very good." Kinnel will not fail to impress.

Two new bands borrow ideals from the past

Prick

★★★★ and 1/2 ★
(out of four)

In the late 1970s, Great Britain was plagued with an extreme amount of turmoil and miscommunication between the younger generation and their parents. Out of that irritation rose one of rock music's most unexpected success stories: punk rock. The Sex Pistols and The Clash reigned over a group of bands that were fed up with the status quo and decided to do something about it through their music.

The Buzzcocks was a band from that era that doesn't always get the credit it deserves. It wasn't as outrageous as the Sex Pistols or as socially relevant as The Clash, but it created its own brand of punk music which was entertaining, raw, and most notably, mocking of just about anything. It wrote music made to poke fun at how terrible or extreme life could get.

If parallels today could be drawn from The Sex Pistols to Ministry and The Clash to Nine Inch Nails, then Prick is today's equivalent to The Buzzcocks. Singer Kevin McMahon communicates twisted views on topics from animals to love, taunting anyone who cannot handle the stress of living in the '90's.

Trent Reznor of Nine Inch Nails helped produce the album, and his influence is definitely apparent. Songs are likely to explode or diffuse at any given moment, McMahon's screaming moans switch to a hushed whisper without warning. Unfortunately, the main downfall of the album is that it relies on Nine Inch Nails' museum of sound a bit too often, even tossing in a few obligatory ballads for some irrelevant reason.

"Everything Prick writes sounds wrong," he says. Nine Inch Nails deals with pain and sorrow from a first-person, directly-affected point of view. Prick, however, usually chooses to stand back and attack from a third-person perspective, like some sort of storyteller who gets pleasure from the pain in other people's lives.

"Communique," the first and best track on the album, thrusts forward with bombastic intensity, dealing with a theme of miscommunication. "I Apologise" ranges from its beginning of quick-paced madness to a swift bridge of acoustic melody.

"I can't get anything done with you shaking around like that/I can't take a poke at fun with that animal on your back," McMahon sings, surrounded by a mass of techno feedback.

Regardless of the obvious similarities to its mentors, Prick has created a debut that is intense and varied enough to be enjoyable for fans of loud music, fans of depressing music, and even fans of fun music.

(out of four)

In the tradition of Pink Floyd in the '70s, Loop in the '80s, and most recently, Mercury Rev in the '90s, Three Mile Pilot attempts to achieve a level of psychedelia through meandering and sweeping rock compositions. The trio, consisting of Armistead Burwell Smith IV (bass, vocals), Tom Zisner (drums), and Pall (vocals), aims to produce rock music with an unexpected edge - using only two instruments, with the focus on Smith's bass. Although other instruments occasionally seep in via guest appearances, Three Mile Pilot usually creates a full, rich sound with only two instruments.

Three Mile Pilot isn't short on substance either. Five of the ten songs on Chief Assassin to the Sinister are over five minutes long. Their noise structure is similar to the patterns of fractals, constantly weaving their way throughout the landscape. "We don't think of ourselves as a traditional rock-n-roll band," says Smith, "we're doing what comes naturally to us, something that happens to be new and different." Although not completely new or different, Three Mile Pilot is treading on ice which very few artists dare to explore.

"Aqua magnetic," an eight-minute song, provides a constant drum rhythm and subterranean bass. Pall's distorted vocals and Smith's haunting background vocals add to the melancholy effect.

"Nothing's sacred/I don't want you to go through the vital things that they say/Cause it's tearing you apart," Pall painfully moans on "Chenjesu," a song of protection, named after one of the band's favorite computer games. The song slowly builds on its levels of psychedelia into an explosive climax.

Three Mile Pilot's intentions are in the right place, and they seem like an interesting bunch, but this debut is just not a good album. There are no hints of melody, and most of the songs should end minutes before they actually do. Three Mile Pilot is a band with potential, nonetheless, and maybe they'll get it together for the next effort.

emiLy delivers its own brand of punk

By CHRISTIAN STEIN
Music Critic

Recently, the modern rock industry, which has always been concerned with finding a new, progressive sound to appeal to its listeners, has taken a U-turn. In the last few years there has been a revival of the classic 80's punk rock movement.

Today, bands like Green Day, Bad Religion and The Offspring are achieving superstar status with their blend of the established alternative sound and classic punk. This movement has spread around the world with incredible success and has now arrived at Notre Dame in the form of campus band emiLy.

Bass player Mike Larmoyeux and drummer Doug McEachern are the backbone of emiLy. They are accompanied by the hard, thrashing power-chords of singer/guitarist Joe Cannon. When the three get together on their five song tape Dwayne Dibley, they create songs that resemble a concoction of Ned's Atomic Dustbin, The Sex Pistols, Rage Against The Machine and Alice in Chains.

The band's punk rock roots are obvious in their sound which includes loud distorted guitars, crashing cymbals and plenty of screaming. Yet there are also times when these punk trademarks are put aside and smooth, intricate guitars, quiet drums and soft lyrics prevail.

The somber lyrics are given different connotations by Cannon. He alters his voice from full fledged Johnny Rotten rage to quiet, pleading distress. Attempting to understand the lyrics is a difficult task, but it appears that anger towards society is the common theme of this tape.

Even though anger is written all over this album, it is most noticeable on the first song "Beef." Cannon screams out his message to America, penetrating through the loud guitars and drums. "The American dream, shot full of holes. The American dream, a handgun for everybody." In the chorus, he takes a personal stand against superstars as he sings in true anarchistic Sex Pistols fashion, "We are all thin rich healthy superstars - Playing ourselves on TV (I just want to play myself on TV, then I'll be all I can be.)"

The second song, "Red Line Metro," continues the trend of loud music and screaming lyrics. Cannon sings of self-contained anger with society and the need to release it. "Climb out of the box, I'm with you, I'm with you."

The first two songs are a test. They weed out unbelievers. Only those bold enough to continue listening are admitted into the dark world of emiLy's collective mind.

The last three tracks combine an eerie mix of Alice and Chains and the Sex Pistols with little pieces of Ned's and Rage spliced in. These are, of course, only semblances of emiLy's sound, which is truly their own.

This combination is no more apparent than on the third song "Tactical." It begins in "Would?"-like fashion complete with a heavy bass line and single notes softly emerging from Cannon's guitar. This builds, as does the anticipation of cymbals crashing. The loud guitars, drums and monster power chords rudely interrupt.

emiLy is uncharacteristically contained and the song takes on a completely different outlook than expected. The somber music compliments similarly toned lyrics such as "Goodbye my friends, I've got to go to life." "Fearless" is by far the most sedate but at the same time intense song on the tape. Its lyrics are so complex that they leave hundreds of interpretations of the band's message. Musically, this song is the coming of age, the complete maturity, and the musical union of emiLy's three members.

Essentially, "Fearless" pieces together each band member's personal sound into one awesome song. Deep underlying meanings, complex music and sermon-like singing give it mystery and greatness.

The last song "He Had A Loud Mind" leaves behind a warning. Cannon, Larmoyeux and McEachern caution to be careful of authority and to not give in to the pressures applied by society. Be your own self, listen to no one, and in true Sex Pistols anarchistic fashion...down with authority!

emiLy definitely has a unique sound and is an acquired taste. Their music is best understood after a few listening sessions, but so was Pearl Jam's Vitalogy.

Band member Doug McEachern can be contacted for tapes and seven-inch's.

Miller's 31 lift Pacers; Cavs escape in overtime

INDIANAPOLIS

Reggie Miller scored 31 points on 10-of-15 shooting Wednesday night as the Indiana Pacers defeated the Detroit Pistons 114-88.

Indiana won its fourth consecutive game at home over the Pistons, extending Detroit's road losing streak to four.

The Pacers, who broke a two-game losing streak, are 13-4 when scoring 100 points or more. Detroit is 7-24 when scoring less than 100.

Joe Dumars led Detroit with 25 points, 16 in the first half.

Miller had seven points during an 10-2 fourth-quarter run that allowed the Pacers to open up a 99-81 advantage. Miller, who tied a season high with seven rebounds, started the spurt with a 3-pointer at the 9:09 mark.

Dale Davis completed a 3-point play with a free throw, and Derrick McKey hit an inside jumper to complete the scoring.

Indiana, which connected on 31 of 35 from the free throw line overall, hit 15 of 16 foul shots in the first half.

The Pacers used a 9-2 run to close out the first half, building a 59-53 lead at the break. Miller hit a 3-pointer and a pair of free throws during the run, which concluded with a basket by Vern Fleming, who had a team-high 11 points off the bench, as time expired.

Mark Jackson, who made his first start since Jan. 14 for Indiana, had four assists and six rebounds.

Detroit trailed at the break despite hitting 63 percent of its shots in the second quarter and 56 percent from the field for the half.

Terry Mills and Dumars each scored 16 points in the first half for the Pistons.

CLEVELAND

Terrell Brandon scored a career-high 31 points and sank the two winning free throws with 21.8 seconds left in overtime as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Orlando Magic 100-99 Wednesday night.

The Cavs improved to 5-1 in overtime games and made Mike Fratello the 24th NBA coach to reach 400 career victories.

Orlando, which had a three-game winning streak end, has lost its last three road games.

Shaquille O'Neal led the Magic with 26 points, 16 in the first half. Dennis Scott had 19, including a 3-pointer with 12.3 seconds to play in regulation that sent the game to overtime tied at 91.

O'Neal gave the Magic their last lead at 99-98 when he made one of two foul shots with 35.1 seconds to go in the extra period.

But Brandon — fouled as Anfernee Hardaway blocked his jumper from behind — made both free throws to put Cleveland ahead 100-99.

Orlando had a chance to win at the end, but Hardaway, guarded closely by Bobby Phills, clanged a fallaway jumper off the front of the rim. Cleveland's Chris Mills picked up the rebound as the buzzer sounded.

Brandon was 12-for-15 from the floor, including 2-for-2 on 3-pointers. Danny Ferry scored 15 off the bench on 6-of-7 shooting, including three 3-pointers, and Tyrone Hill had 17 rebounds.

Hardaway was limited to nine points, nearly 12 under his average, on 4-for-13 shooting.

The Magic fell to 6-2 in overtime games.

Dale Davis' three point play helped Indiana cap a 10-2 fourth quarter run to put away the Pistons 114-88.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Respert breaks out in MSU win

Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. Illinois' defense let Michigan State's Shawn Respert find the shooting touch that had been missing for a few games.

"The last four games I've been double and triple-teamed and teams have been clogging the middle on me so I've just had very quick looks at the basket," said Respert, who scored 35 points Wednesday to lead No. 8 Michigan State to a 68-58 victory over the Illini.

"Tonight my teammates gave me some great screens to get me open and Illinois didn't fight through them as well as some other teams," Respert said.

Illinois coach Lou Henson agreed that his team could have done a better job of guarding Respert.

"He's a great player and I don't want to take anything away from his performance, but he never should handle the ball that much and get it in a position where he can take those shots," Henson said.

The win kept the Spartans (18-3, 10-2 Big Ten) atop the Big Ten standings. Illinois fell to 7-5 in the conference and 16-8 overall.

Respert, who leads the Big Ten in scoring with a 25.1 average, scored below that mark in three of his four previous games, including a season-low 12 points in a loss to Purdue.

Respert scored 24 points in the second half on the way to his sixth game of the season with 30 or more points. He made eight of 12 attempts from 3-point range.

Michigan State led by 17 points at halftime and Illinois cut the lead to single digits only once after a 10-2 run midway through the second half sliced the margin to 45-36 with 10:37 remaining.

Michigan State answered with a 19-10 surge that featured two triples apiece by Respert and Ray Weathers as the Spartans built their lead to 64-46 with 3:37 left.

"We were very impressive defensively in the first half and very unimpressive in the second half," said Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote.

"I think we played the score in the second half and thought we had the game won at halftime. Thank God Shawn had the hot hand tonight because every time they made a run, he hit some big shots," Heathcote said.

Henson was frustrated by his team's first-half performance.

"We didn't make a thing and we didn't do much to stop them," he said. "Maybe we were thinking too much about the Iowa game. Not a single one of our guys was ready to play. The second half we started moving the ball a little better and we won the battle of the boards against them."

The Spartans, who never trailed in the game, held a 30-13 halftime lead after closing the first half with an 8-0 run. The Illini's total was a season low for a half for a Michigan State opponent. It was the worst half for an Illinois team since 1982 when it had a 12-point half against Purdue.

Illinois shot only 23 percent from the field (5-for-22) and committed 10 turnovers in the first half.

The Spartans were clinging to a 7-6 lead when they went on a 15-4 surge to open a 22-10 advantage. Jamie Feick and Respert combined for 11 of the 15 points.

Feick finished with 11 points for Michigan State. Eric Snow tied his career high with 12 assists.

Jerry Gee led Illinois with 11 points. Kiwane Garris, who scored 60 points in two Illini victories last week to earn Big Ten Player of the Week honors, was held to seven points.

Arkansas' tenacity steals road victory

By KEN BERGER
Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala.

Alabama was sending down dunk after dunk. Scotty Thurman couldn't hit a shot. No. 10 Arkansas was in trouble on the road again.

Williamson

This time, though, Thurman and Corliss Williamson snatched the game up with a vengeance and wouldn't let another one slip away.

Thurman had 29 points and Williamson 24 Wednesday night to lift the Razorbacks to their second straight road victory, 86-80 over No. 18 Alabama.

Arkansas (20-5, 8-4 Southeastern Conference) erased a 14-point Alabama lead in the closing minutes of the first half to avenge the Crimson Tide's 18-point victory at Bud Walton Arena last month.

It was the first victory for the Razorbacks at Alabama (17-6, 7-4), which had been the only SEC venue where the defending NCAA champions had not won.

Arkansas, which had consecutive road losses to Auburn and Mississippi and barely escaped with a win at Vanderbilt last weekend, improved to 5-3 away from home.

"I think over the last week and a half or two weeks, we've tried to get back into a tempo ... things that we love to do and not become as predictable as we started playing this year," Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said.

The tempo was decidedly in Alabama's favor in the first half. The Crimson Tide opened a 41-27 lead with 4:31 remaining on a thunderous follow-up dunk by Antonio McDyess. The crowd rose in unison as a rebound sailed high into the air and McDyess gathered it with both hands and slammed it through.

Earlier, Eric Washington had sailed in from the wing with a one-handed Michael Jordan imitation, turning the heads of every Arkansas player.

But Thurman, who missed badly on his first three 3-point shots and even flubbed a layup, rescued the Razorbacks with two 3-pointers and a tip-in during a 15-5 run that cut the Tide's lead to 46-42 at half-time.

"He knocked them down with hands in his face," frustrated defender Jamal Faulkner said.

"I hope they would count us out," Thurman said. "Maybe it would put the pressure on someone else, and we'll see how they play under the spotlight."

Duke's ACC struggles continue

By JOE MACENKA
Associated Press

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va.
Virginia's Junior Burrough and Harold Deane fueled second-half runs Wednesday night that helped the 16th-ranked Cavaliers add to Duke's woes with a 64-58 victory over the Blue Devils.

Burrough finished with 17 points and 11 rebounds and Deane scored nine of his 12 points in the second half as Virginia (17-6, 9-3 Atlantic Coast Conference) won its fifth consecutive game and 11th in 14.

Curtis Staples, coming off a school-record nine 3-pointers three days earlier against UNLV, was 5-for-8 from there against Duke and finished with 19 points to help the Cavaliers complete their second season sweep of Duke in three years.

The Blue Devils (11-13, 1-11) tied the 1982-83 Duke team as the losingest one in school history in ACC play.

Burrough had six points and an assist as the Cavaliers opened the second half with a 14-6 run to go up 46-40 with 14:17 to play, their first lead since 6-5. At that point, only Cherokee Parks had scored for Duke in the half.

The Blue Devils cut it to 48-44 before Deane took over. He scored four points then assisted on a 3-pointer by Staples, helping Virginia stretch it to 57-46 at the 9:22 mark, the biggest lead by either team.

Duke scored the next six points to make it 57-52 with 6:54 left, but the Blue Devils missed their next four shots and turned it over three times.

Duke had several chances down the stretch, twice cutting it to three points, before Virginia sealed it by making five of six free throws in the last 34 seconds.

The Blue Devils, who have lost three in a row and five of seven to Virginia, got 15 points and 14 rebounds from Parks and 12 points from Jeff Capel, who had eight in the first half.

The Observer/Brian Hardy

Wake Forest beats No. 7 Maryland

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

Tony Rutland rescued Wake Forest's offense in the second half Wednesday night and finished with 19 points as the 14th-ranked Demon Deacons rallied for a 63-54 victory over No. 7 Maryland.

Earlier this season, Rutland provided a lift for Wake Forest (16-5, 7-4 Atlantic Coast Conference) against Clemson when Randolph Childress couldn't get started. With the Terrapins (19-5, 9-3) clamping down on Childress with a variety of pressure defenses, Rutland stepped up and negated that strategy in a key stretch of the second half.

Rutland's spree actually began with Wake Forest leading 38-32 following Ricky Peral's short jumper at 15:21. Rutland would get four points, but Wake Forest nearly lost its edge when turnovers on successive possessions led to baskets by Duane Simpkins and Keith Booth to bring Maryland within 42-39 with 12:04 left.

Rutland, averaging 5.2 points per game and 4.9 points in the ACC, scored eight points in an 11-2 run that gave the Demon Deacons a 53-41 lead with 8:41 to play.

In a six-minute span, Rutland scored 12 points and had 14 for the half. He didn't score after that, and Wake Forest was nearly as cold, getting one basket in the next seven minutes.

Maryland didn't do much better with just two field goals for the duration. However, four straight free throws by Simpkins brought the Terrapins with 58-54 with 3:36 left.

■ SAINT MARY'S SWIMMING

Belles' aspirations high for invitational

By JENNIFER LEWIS
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's swimming and diving team will begin the end of their 1994-1995 season today at the DePauw University Liberal Arts Invitational. According to coach Greg Janson, the team is ready to give competitors a "run for their money."

"I am looking for good performances from everyone on the team," Janson said. "We should definitely be swimming faster this weekend than we have all season long."

Janson also noted that he expects the Belles to have no lower than a second place team finish overall. The team finished second last year, edging the third and fourth place teams by a narrow margin.

"We will definitely put up a better overall team performance this year in terms of both our individual performances and points scored," Janson added. "If everything were to fall into place at the right time, we could potentially give the defending champions, DePauw University, a good scare."

Saint Mary's will be competing in a field of approximately ten NCAA Division III schools from around the Midwest. Some of their competitors will include DePauw, Principia College, Luther College, Centre College and Trinity College.

The Belles will count on their top individual performers and relay teams to score valuable points for the team. However, Janson believes the ultimate key to success for Saint Mary's will be the team's depth.

"In terms of how close we come to DePauw or how many points we eventually score, it will depend on our depth, and whether those swimmers who are in events where we don't have many people pick up points," Janson said.

The meet begins this morning and runs through Saturday with prelims at 11:00 a.m. Those swimmers qualifying in the top 16 in the morning return to swim finals in the evening. Seeds 9-16 compete in the consolation finals and 1-8 compete in the championship finals for each event. Diving competition will be held each day of the meet.

The team has prepared themselves the entire season for this championship meet. Everything each individual has given over the course of the season will be called upon this weekend in order to secure the Belles a top two finish overall.

"We're going to give nothing but the best of what we have and be confident and relentless," Janson added. "We're shooting for number one - we'll be happy with what we get, but we won't be satisfied with anything less than number one."

play above themselves, or even above the Bulldogs, which is normally not too much to ask.

Of course, it's hard to win when you don't shoot above 40%. And it's even harder to score when you can't hit the rim. Or the backboard.

Five Irish airballs and more than their normal share of travelling calls made Butler look awfully good. But it also made Notre Dame look awfully bad.

The Bulldog cheerleaders' cry of "Go B.U." sounded more and more like it was directed to the Irish sidelines.

"Go! P.U.!"

But give credit to Butler, for it was their stifling defensive effort that made the Irish look foolish.

"I can't think of anything from a defensive standpoint that they did badly," MacLeod said. "They pushed us out of the low post and contested our outside shots."

Maybe Ryan Hoover was Jimmy Chitwood. But he missed the game with an ankle injury. That left the Irish looking at a pathetic 2-of-12 from three point land.

Bulldog Travis Trice, a noted

Irish-killer, filled the role well, scoring 17 points, including two three-pointers.

Trice's effort and a mean dunk from Bulldog forward Kelsey Wilson over Irish center Matt Gotsch stomped any further life out of Notre Dame.

The Irish tried to mount a comeback late in the second half, running back-door screens and a picket fence of sorts - but they got caught watching the paint dry.

And so the Irish sunk back from Hinkle Fieldhouse, perhaps for the last time. Any hopes of reliving a Hickory win went by the wayside.

With Notre Dame joining the overpowering Big East, unhealthy rivalries such as this will, unfortunately for Butler, fall by the wayside.

"It's not so much that we don't want to play Butler," MacLeod continued. "It's just the right thing to do."

Perhaps so. Notre Dame has not beaten Butler in five years running.

But at least the streak ends next year. No more Butler, no more Hinkle Fieldhouse.

No more Hoosiers.

"It's a great place to play," MacLeod stated. "I've seen a lot of great basketball played here."

Just not by the Irish.

Ironically, the lone positive for Notre Dame was a former walk-on, Pete Miller. The South Bend native scored the first seven Irish points and provided what little emotion Notre Dame played with.

"Miller was our bright spot," said MacLeod. "He did an excellent job for us."

Native Hoosier Pete Miller earned the first start of his career last night against Butler and scored the team's first seven points, providing a spark for an otherwise lethargic Irish offense.

in the game, but a travelling violation on Garrity, one of many whistled on the Irish, and a quick Bulldog spurt allowed Collier to insert the walk-ons with over a minute left.

■ MEN'S BASKETBALL

Bulldogs continue mastery of Irish, 76-60Notre Dame's road woes return as Irish only 2-12 from beyond arc*By TIM SHERMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

INDIANAPOLIS

With 8:57 remaining in the game, the normally reserved John MacLeod ripped off his suitcoat in a fit of a rage.

It was that kind of night for the Irish.

Committing eight offensive fouls and shooting just forty percent, Notre Dame dropped an ugly 76-60 decision to Butler at the Hinkle Fieldhouse.

"This is a very tough part of the season," said forward Pat Garrity, who led the 14-10 Irish. "We've hit rock bottom."

Continuing their season-long struggle on the road, the Irish could find no consistency on the offensive end, nor could they muster any emotion away from the JACC.

"I don't know what it is on the road," Garrity said. "Regardless of the situation, we need to play."

Trailing at times by twenty or more, the Ryan Hoover-less Irish could not find their range from the outside. Notre Dame, who has connected from downtown just five times in four games, shot a pitiful 2-12 from the outside arc without Hoover.

"Ryan is a big part of our offense," Garrity explained. "Without him and Keith (Kurowski, who played just ten minutes), we just don't have the shooters."

Butler did though, as the 15-8 Bulldogs buried four threes and numerous other outside jumpers en route to the blowout win.

Travis Trice, a 6'1" captain, was the high man for Butler with 17 points.

"Trice was the stable guy on offense for us," said Butler coach Billy Collier.

The other spark for the Bulldogs was guard Kelsey Wilson, who at 6'3" dunked emphatically, and symbolically, over Irish center Matt Gotsch.

The Irish did cut the margin to twelve late

see IRISH / page 14

Impassive Irish defense by Matt Gotsch and Jason Williams could not counterbalance the lack of scoring punch as Notre Dame fell to Butler for the fifth consecutive year.

■ JOCK STRIP

Historic field-house doesn't inspire Irish

INDIANAPOLIS

John MacLeod could have really used a Jimmy Chitwood Wednesday night.

Mike Norbut

In fact, he could have used the whole Hickory team in Notre Dame's 76-60 loss to Butler.

The Irish players had to know that Hinkle Fieldhouse, Butler's home court, was the site of the filming of the movie Hoosiers.

MacLeod could have told them about it. He was there when Hickory (the school is called Milan in real life) knocked off the mighty Bears of South Bend Central in 1954. He knows how much aura the building has, how much enthusiasm it can create.

Ironically, the only Notre Dame player to play like a true Hoosier was South Bend native Pete Miller, who saw his first career start in an Irish uniform.

The sophomore scored nine points, which is more than three times his average. But the rest of the team forgot to

■ WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Irish travel to face CSUBy K.C. GOYER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's basketball team will travel to Cleveland tonight to take on the Cleveland State University Vikings. Notre Dame looks to extend its season's longest winning streak to eight, and keep its undefeated conference record intact. Cleveland State will try to improve their 3-7 Midwestern Collegiate Conference record and continue a two game winning streak.

Earlier this season, the Irish defeated CSU 90-66. The date was January 9th, and it was sophomore center Katryna Gaither's debutante ball as she was introduced to the league as a scoring powerhouse and rebounding force with the most outstanding game of her career. Gaither scored 34 points, pulled down 12 rebounds, and blocked 5 shots. Her 34 points broke a previous Notre Dame record of most points scored in a game at 33.

The impressive statistics have been rampant ever since. Gaither has stepped into the spotlight with sharp shooting Beth Morgan. Gaither is the team's leading scorer in conference games with an average of 20.2, while Morgan leads for the season with 18.1.

If Gaither is the rising star on the team, then Letitia Bowen is the ever present sunshine. Bowen contributes in every category as she leads the team in rebounds, assists, steals, free throws made, and is the third leading scorer in conference play. The sun has been blazing especially brightly of late as Bowen has both scored and rebounded in double figures in the last four games.

A lot of opponents see double after playing the Irish. In addition to Bowen's double-double trend, Morgan has scored in double digits in all but one game this season. Gaither leads the team with six double doubles, and has scored in double figures in the last 15 games.
