Corby Hall.

At the opening of the scholastic year next September, a new departure will be made in regard to the quartering of students. The building now commonly called the community house will thereafter be known as Corby Hall, and will be given over exclusively as a dormitory building for students of the Freshmen and Sophomore classes. There are one hundred and eight well-ventilated rooms in the building and its situation right on the brow of St. Mary's lake makes it an ideal home for students. It will afford more opportunity for close association between the men living there and the Sorin Hallers, and will give a different tone to the University. Old friends and students will all rejoice in learning of this great change, for the opening of Corby Hall will do away with a long-felt need at Notre Dame. It will, no doubt, have a marked effect on the standing in classes of the gentlemen that are to live there, for much more satisfactory work can be done when a student is in the privacy of his own room.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, JUNE 14.
Weather Forecast for Northern Indiana.—Showers and thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight and Thursday.

The Orator of the Day.

Here we present you with a picture of Right Reverend John Lancaster Spalding, D. D., orator for this evening. The bishop needs no introduction to Notre Dame audiences as he has always been a great favorite at the University. It has been a great pleasure for us to have him appear on our stage to lecture during the scholastic year, and when it was announced that he would be here at Commencement to deliver the oration it was very welcome news. Bishop Spalding is one of the best-known speakers among the Catholic clergymen of the United States, and we may expect a most interesting and pleasing discourse this evening.

Don't go home without a souvenir of your Alma Mater.

The Art Exhibition.

From half-past nine this morning till three in the afternoon, the doors of the drawing-rooms and Art Studio were thrown open to the public, and the work of the students displayed to an interested and critical assemblage of visitors. Although there were many attractions at the lake and on the campus during the day, the crowd which visited the art exhibition was large and appreciative. The visitors had to climb three pairs of stairs to reach the object of their search; but several speaking to the SCHOLASTIC reporter, declared that they would not have missed the art exhibition for a dozen pairs of stairs.

The department of mechanical drawing, conducted by Professor Ackerman, who, during his tenure of office has raised the standard of drawing to a remarkably high plane, was invaded by a select crowd of young ladies and practical engineers, who, while admiring the work done by the students of to-day, told many amusing stories of their own experience during the years when they inhabited the topmost floor of the Main Building. They contrasted the work done by the students of to-day with their own student efforts, much to the advantage of the former. The classes in mechanical drawing are composed principally of students in the various engineering courses, and the Members of the Notre Dame Association of Chicago, the SCHOLASTIC is glad to extend its right hand, and bid you all welcome home. In you we find many of our old confreres at the editors' table, many a favored athlete and many that will always wear the Gold and Blue with honor. Notre Dame is proud of you, and is most happy that you have taken this occasion to revisit us and to show the present student body that when they leave, they may join an alumni that were Notre Dame students once, that are Notre Dame people now, and that always will be Notre Dame people. Once a Notre Dame man, and the Gold and Blue will be your colors for life.

With this edition of the DAILY we bow ourselves off the stage of college journalism for the year, and say farewell to our many friends. During the past season we know not how many our faults may have been, for they were kindly overlooked. What few good qualities we had were generously appreciated and all due credit was given. We, of the Board of Editors, on laying aside our pens and quitting the sanctum—some of us forever,—wish to give you all our thanks for favors received. Ours was not altogether a smooth journey, but nevertheless it was most pleasant, and this, because our readers made it so.

As we raise ourselves from our chairs at the editorial board, we extend our greeting across the lap of two months to those who will fill our places next year. To them and to you we trust the old SCHOLASTIC, your friend, everybody's friend and our pride. Whatever it may have lost from its old-time brilliancy, we hope will be regained in the next twelve months, and may our successors issue a journal the best among college journals—the best that ever went forth from old Notre Dame.

The Senior race was won by the Golden Jubilee crew after a very exciting contest. They got the lead in the second trip across the lake and kept it to the finish. The Junior race was won easily by the Minnehaha crew as they finished more than two lengths ahead. The four-oared race was the closest of any, and was anybody's chance until the line was crossed. There was a good crowd in attendance, and the contestants were heartily cheered all through the races.

work exhibited to-day consists chiefly of mechanical drawings which were made from plates and descriptions. Mr. Pulskamp's thesis drawing of a Worthington compound condensing steam pump was declared to be a finished drawing. Blue print designs of an arch-culvert by Messrs. Atherton and Steiner, of a highway bridge by Messrs. Delaney and Geoghagan, of a railway bridge by Mr. Arce, of a highway bridge by Mr. Neville, and of a high steel truss by Mr. Kegler, were all particularly admired.

Over at Prof. Paradis' studio there were on exhibition drawings which were examined with enthusiasm. Prof. Paradis' department has been in existence only this year, but the work done under his supervision deserves particular commendation. Fresh from the studios of Paris and Rome, where he has studied for several years, he has infused into his pupils the spirit of the great masters. The work displayed to-day evinces a freedom and lightness that promise well for the future of the young artists. There were several charcoal and crayon sketches of object and still-life studies done by members of the Saturday sketch class, and a few water-colors of familiar scenes and sketches from life, drawn by the Notre Dame Crayon Club, an organization that deserves to be perpetuated. Mr. Fox's work in charcoal, which includes the familiar pose of Mr. O'Brien and his pipe, was greatly admired. One of the prettiest pieces of work in the exhibition was Mr. Cooney's copy in red chalk of Raphael's cartoon for his picture of St. Catherine. Mr. Elitch's work in charcoal, Mr. Svensden's in water-colors, Mr. Bouza's lead pencil sketches from life, and Mr. Scheubert's still-life sketches, were all favorably commented on.

St. Edward's Hall.

The closing exercises of St. Edward's Hall, which took place this afternoon, were certainly a source of pleasure to all who attended. The Princes have the reputation of being very successful in entertaining their guests. In the programme to-day it was evident that a careful balance had been preserved in arranging the parts. There were interesting recitations and dialogues and a generous selection of vocal and instrumental music. The entertainment opened with a piano solo by Master W. M. McNamee. It is gratifying to note, in this regard, that the composition is the work of Prof. Damis Paul. Following this number was a medley by the Mandolin Club—twenty pieces strong. Masters L. McBride and McMaster gave recitations, and took part in a dialogue gotten up for the occasion.

The DAILY SCHOLASTIC takes occasion to congratulate the little fellows, and feels that they have done themselves great honor. This is the way the Very Reverend President Morrissey felt, and he was prompted to say as much on making the closing remarks when the Premiums were distributed. He has watched with interest their work and progress under the good Sisters, and, as he has frequently done before, he expressed his gratification at seeing them thus succeed.

Mr. Macdonald Re-elected.

Our popular athlete and first baseman, Mr. Angus D. Macdonald, has been unanimously re-elected to captain the Varsity nine for next year. There is general satisfaction among all members of the athletic association over the result of this election, as Mr. Macdonald has filled that office most creditably during the past season. Had the matter been left to the entire student body, there would have been but one choice, and that would be the man that is now chosen by the players themselves. With Mr. Macdonald leading the team for another year we will do even better than we did this season, and this was our banner year of baseball.
