THE UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME

TO JOSEPH LAWTON COLLINS

GREETING :

Sir:

The University of Notre Dame has chosen you in this year of Our Lord nineteen hundred and fifty as the recipient of the Laetare Medal, the highest honor within her power to bestow. This medal was founded by the University more than half a century ago to honor Catholic laymen who have achieved distinction by the excellence of their work in art, science, philosophy, literature, education or philanthropy; and whose Catholic lives have been an example and an inspiration to their fellow Americans.

You, Sir, are eminently worthy of this honor. You have been all that is implied in a great soldier. While the business of the soldier is war, his aim and purpose are peace. Through the red haze of battle, through all the hardships and dangers that dog the heels of soldiers in time of war, they have ever in their hearts the nostalgic vision of the day of peace when they can fashion their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; and can sit once more in the shade of their own vine and the fig tree of their own planting. Your life as a professional soldier has been dedicated to the peace of America, and in the pursuance of that duty you have risen from the rank of second lieutenant to the highest position in the American army, its Chief of Staff. During the late war, as Chief of Staff of the Seventh Army Corps, you were responsible for one of its decisive victories, the capture of Cherbourg; while in time of peace you served as instructor in the United States Military Academy, the Infantry School and the American War College, and in a number of executive positions where the making of American soldiers was your responsibility. In all of these assignments you received the approval of your superiors by appointment to higher and more responsible activities, to all of which you brought exceptional ability and leadership; and merited decorations of honor not only from your own country but from many foreign nations as well.

But, Sir, all our warring is not with flesh and blood. The Christian has also to wrestle with "princedoms and powers, with those who have the mastery of the world in these dark days, with malign influences in an order higher than ours." And in that warfare, too, you have shown yourself a true soldier. You have not been unmindful of the counsel of another great soldier, battle-scarred in both kinds of war, Saint Paul. "Take up all God's armour then," he wrote, "so you will be able to stand your ground when the evil time comes, and be found still on your feet when all the task is over. Stand fast, your loins girt with truth, the breastplate of justice fitted on, and your feet shod in readiness to publish the gospel of peace. With all this take up the shield of faith, with which you will be able to quench all the fire-tipped arrows of your wicked enemy; make the helmet of salvation your own, and the sword of the spirit, God's word." Through all the vicissitudes of the life of a soldier, you have shown yourself a stalwart Catholic man, an exemplary husband and father, and a commander whose character has won the respect, admiration and affection of your fellow officers and men.

For these reasons, The University of Notre Dame is happy to welcome you into that distinguished company of Catholic Americans whom she has been proud to honor, and to confer upon you this Laetare Medal.
