COMPLETING THE VICTORY

Notre Dame defeated the powerful cadets Saturday afternoon, and by so doing, won one of the greatest football classics of the 1923 season. But that victory was not made complete until, at least as far as tradition is concerned, the team was welcomed home by their "Fighting Irish" student-body supporters.

When Notre Dame's teams leave the campus to defend their reputation on foreign fields, they go perfectly tutored by the Wonder Coach Rockne, and filled with the confidence of every man at the University. And win or lose, when the gridders return, the students, in keeping with the traditional pledge of loyalty to their teammates, are at the depot to welcome them back amid voluminous cheers and yells that rend the atmosphere with their piercing echoes.

It is unquestionable that Rockne's science is the biggest factor in the Notre Dame victories; his football technique and strategy instilled into our teams has earned for them the most enviable reputations as the greatest in the country. But even Rockne asserts that were it not for the "spirit" of the men behind each individual player, he never could have produced the extraordinarily wonderful teams that he has.

And so, when the victors return Notre Dame men must prove by their welcome that they are part of the team—the team that may be the country's best this year.

CLASS CUTS

The new regulations for class absences are a great improvement. Previous rules for class absences were grossly inadequate. The fellow without conscience, or with much "pull," did not need to fear the possibility of dismissal under the old regulations. A doctor's certificate was easy to secure, a landlady might be persuaded to sign excuses—if it seemed she might lose a boarder; or, if she were a generous soul, if it seemed the poor chap might be dismissed from school—and even now and then, a chap with a tearful story might even soften the heart of a University executive.

But all that is past. Students who are absent now, are absent. That is all there is to it. Under the new regulations—the Colgate system—allowance is made for the number of times a man may reasonably miss a class in a semester, and he is not "cut" if he is absent those few times. But if he misses oftener than the number of times the average man misses, his marks for the period gradually fall. The system also calculates that a man should not pass the class if he is absent a set number of times, ten times in a three-hour class. The belief is that a man who is not there at least a certain period of times has missed so much that he is not entitled to pass. He has missed too many lectures, it is believed, to be able to grasp the subject as well as the man who attends regularly, and any amount of makeup work he might do cannot make up for what he has missed.

The new system is not only significant as a more efficient manner of handling class absences, a good in itself, but it is important as one more step toward the better and greater Notre Dame.

INTERHALL FOOTBALL EMBLEMS

The Interhall Athletic Association has decided to give emblems to members of the championship football team. This, indeed, is a matter worthy of praise and one that should have been practiced sooner.

Heretofore, interhall champions have had to be content with the glory emanating from the championship alone. But a week after the final game the men at large have forgotten the personnel of the title-winning team. To remedy this forgetfulness, to offer some symbol of the success attained by the team whose nights of practice and earnest work has led up to the title the football emblem has been instituted.

The emblem will do more than reward; it also will indirectly contribute to the success of interhall athletics, by encouraging competition if proper cooperation is given by all halls. Several teams of this year have not cooperated. They will, of course, need no reprimand; for they will be present for the next game in which they are scheduled.

The emblems are evidence that the drive for more interest in the interhall games is succeeding. The emblem is a new stimulus toward the goal and the close of the school year will reveal the practicality of the emblem and the wisdom of the men who are striving to better the interhall program.

KELLY, KELLY AND KELLY.

The new law firm of Kelly, Kelly and Kelly, in Detroit, is composed of two Notre Dame alumni, Harry M. Kelly and Emmett Kelly. They located in Detroit with the firm at 633 Dime Bank building. They were previously located at Ottawa, Ill.

Delaware, Maine, Nevada, and North and South Carolina were the only states not represented at Notre Dame last year.

ARTICLES LOST.

Several articles of value lost by students are being held by Brother Alphonsus for identification. Among them are a ring, stick pin, a valuable rosary beads and an amount of money. Owners please see Brother Alphonsus on the Brownson throne.

Ten states forbid the reading of the Bible in public schools, six permit, and six others require it.

Through the Looking Glass

Someone heard a journalist sing up in someone's room two days ago. The someone said, "Boy, you got a swell voice. What are you taking up out here?" "Journalism," responded the singer. "Boy, why don't you go on the stage and make an honest living?" said the wise one. "They teach us that it's wrong to make an honest living, in journalism," said the singer. "Here, take this razor and go play with yourself." * * *

Don't unstring other people with your vocal strings. * * *

Don't tell people that you have a voice. They may say, "I hadn't heard." * * * Remember the moral about the "Gyped Woodpile." * * *

Once we knew
A man who Was a parlor
Singer.
And when he'd call
Upon his "Moll,"
She'd always take him
Without fail
Into the Kitchen!! * * *

If you've gotta wobble a tonsil, do it in a Ford and you won't be heard. * * *

Henry Ford has offered us money for that last crack. We said that ten thousand wouldn't buy it. * * *

He wrote that he was one of the ten thousand. * * *

This puts him out of the four hundred class. * * *

And doesn't take off the topic, music, for it was rumored that during his trial some years ago he said that he didn't know much about the fine arts, but that lately he has taken a liking to the banjo. * * *

Before you invoke the muse, muse about the voice pirates and ball bats. * * *

HOODA.

Three terrible shrieks rang out on the night air. These were followed by a low and pitiful moaning as of some one suffering hideous pain. Then there was quiet, and the air grew heavy with an awesome stillness. Windows were going up in nearby dwellings and heads were being thrust out, heads which held eyes dilated with fear. Then through the quiet of the night there came a low unearthly moaning. It rose in pitch and volume, growing ghastlier and more terrifying until it swept the very heavens in a long and hideous wail, causing the hair to stand up on the heads of the listeners, in some cases making it jump right out and leave permanently. Bald-headed men would have been in a dilemma.

The sound was coming from Hooda's room. A dim light wavered from it as they watched and again the low whimpering moan followed the climax of the shriek. Frightened though they were, the bolder of these listeners made for the house. Not stopping to ring the bell, they tore up the stairway—that is not really tore it up, but you know what I mean—and seeing a chink of light filtering through the space below a door, they burst it open and entered.

There stood Hooda in the center of the room. His hair was disheveled, his eyes were popped.

"What is it?" they asked, "What has happened?"

"Just remembered," said Hooda, "I just remembered that I mixed the envelopes in two letters, one to my girl and the other bawling out my laundry." * * *

The producers of "Merry Go Round" claim that they spent a year in making it, and after seeing it, you will be of the opinion that the time was well spent. It is a lavish affair, well directed, admirably set, and equally admirably acted by a cast which is headed by Norman Kerry and Mary Philbin. Prominent among the players is George Hackathorne whose wistful interpretation of a huch-backed side show barker is the best thing that he has done since he appeared in "The Little Minister."

The story abounds in what is called by the hackneyed term "human interest." What else could you expect of a picture in which an Austrian count falls in love with a girl who plays a grind organ at a Viennese Coney Island? The count, for reasons of state, is obliged to marry a member of the aristocracy, despite his love for Agnes, the daughter of a clown, and there's your story.

It is a plot which could easily have become a flat failure, but because of the careful workmanship which has gone in it, it is one of the best pictures of the year.

What They Say

[Chicago Tribune]

By WALTER ECKERSALL

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—[Special]

A slashing attack, combining formations of the close and open variety, gave Notre Dame a victory over West Point today at Ebbets' field, 13 to 0, in one of the hardest and, at the same time, most cleanly played games in the ten years of football relations between the two institutions.

The result, although partially expected by loyal supporters of the middle west eleven, was a severe shock to followers of the game in this section. The Army had been rated one of the best in the east, but the crafty, nimble and alert Notre Dame players took advantage of everything. They followed the ball in catlike fashion, while their tackling and blocking was about the fiercest one can imagine.

Despite the known strength of the Army line, the Hoosier backs tore through on delayed bucks, slid off the tackles, and, when the secondary defenses came up to help the forward wall, forward passes were called into commission. The heady work of Harry Stuhldreher, Notre Dame quarterback, had much to do with the foxy attack which was launched behind unbalanced lines and from a backfield shift.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—[Special]

Notre Dame's decisive victory over the Army, 13 to 0, in one of the most important intersectional struggles of the year (was one of the) salient features of Saturday's football games.

Winning over the Army at Brooklyn, Notre Dame gave a wonderful exhibition of offensive and defensive football. Victory of Coach Rockne's team was clean cut and decisive. Neither score was the direct result of a fluke, but each was earned by the launching of unexpected plays at opportune moments. This bewildering attack combined with a stubborn defense made Notre Dame a great team, one which is now figured to beat Princeton in Jungletown next Saturday.

An idea of Notre Dame decisive victory may be gained from the fact that Rockne's team made 13 first downs to two for the Army. Notre Dame completed four out of six forward passes, one of which resulted in a touchdown. The Army attempted eleven forward passes, none of which was completed. Notre Dame made 105 yards through the Army line and 60 around ends. West Point drove through the Notre Dame forward wall for 40 yards but made only nine around the ends. The punting was about even, as each booter averaged close to 45 yards.

[New York Times]

One of the most admirably drilled teams that Notre Dame has ever turned out made the pilgrimage from South Bend, Ind., and yesterday doled out another defeat to the Army. The Hoosiers, schooled by the master football tactician, Knute Rockne, turned loose a baffling assortment of plays that produced two touchdowns. * * *

The victory was the Hoosiers' seventh out of the series of ten games that the two intersectional rivals have played, the Army coming off the field victorious only twice, and one game, last year's, resulting in a tie. The defeat administered to the West Pointers yesterday afternoon, however, was one of the bitterest blows of all, for this year's eleven, under the coaching of Captain John McEwan and with the playing of Tiny Hewitt, former Panther star, in the backfield, the West Pointers came off the plains looking forward to getting ample revenge for past humiliations.

Their defeat, however, was no disgrace, for the South Bend team, composed for the most part of new men and outweighed to a marked degree by the cadets, proved itself to be one of the greatest offensive aggregations ever at the South Bend institution, which has been represented by many notable elevens. It is not casting any aspersion on the Army team to say that it was completely outclassed by this exceptional team from the middle west.

Proof of this is seen in the statistics of the game.

The outstanding star of the game was Layden, Notre Dame's fullback, who did all of the punting, most of the ground gaining, was passer and receiver, and in addition played a wonderful defensive game.

EBBETS' FIELD, Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 13.—

Brazil can cheer about its coffee as Ceylon raves about its tea. Let Florida and California speak with passion of their orange groves as Kentucky points with the finger of pride to the thoroughbreds, but out in Notre Dame, South Bend, football grows on trees and bushes, it blooms upon the vines and leaves, the air redolent with the fragrance that comes from the skin of pig and the mole.

Today the Army brought a big powerful eleven from West Point manned by veterans of note. Thirty-five thousand football fans looked down upon their bulk and brawn. There were Mulligan and Garbisch and Farwick and Goodman. There were Smythe, Wood, Gillmore and the massive Hewitt, Lot, of Pittsburgh. Yet, even this warlike corps had nothing to match the swift Motion picture known as the halfbacks of Notre Dame, halfbacks whose seemly hunch was forward.

Knute K. Rockne's great aggregation from the Indiana reservation, with sudden thrusts through the air, and slashing drives along the turf, beat the big Army team 13 to 0 while a capacity crowd at Ebbets' field, with thousands turned away, sat by and marvelled.

In vain the gray garbed cadet corps from up the Hudson called to the Army—"Fight—Fight—Fight." In vain they sang their inspirational melodies of battle. Throughout the tumult and the shouting the slim fleet blue jerseyed backs from the middle west found the path twice that leads across to the goal into victory over one of the best of the Army teams.

The Army fought to the finish, but the Army with all its power, had nothing to match that spirally array of backfield talent made up of Crowley, Layden, Miller and Stuhldreher, all sweeping forward back of a fast aggressive line that continually got the charge.

For one quarter, fighting out man to man along the turf, the Army held its own. But the tide turned when Notre Dame suddenly went into the air, abandoning the bayonet for the aeroplane, and from that moment the cadets were overwhelmed.

Alumni Magazine Issued Saturday

The Notre Dame Alumnus was put in the mails Saturday. The present issue contains an article on "The Notre Dame of Today," "The 1923 Homecoming," by James P. Swift, 1924; "With the President," by John H. Neeson, 1903; "Traditions," from the Freshman Hand Book; "New Appointments at the University," editorials by Rev. John F. O'Hara, and others, athletic notes and alumni notes.

The issue contains many sport, portrait and view cuts, and continues to be as good a book as the issues of last year, when the magazine was ranked with the best alumni publications of the country.

FIGURES SHOW RAPID GROWTH

Every College Has Increased Enrollment since 1916; Freshman Class Big as 1916 University.

Detailed figures on enrollment, announced yesterday, showed that Notre Dame is rapidly growing, and again indicated the immediate need for the success of the endowment drive now being conducted.

The number of students according to colleges was 1,855 on September 20, it was stated. The College of Arts and Letters has 376 students enrolled, compared with 210 in 1916, which at that time included the members of the present College of Commerce; the College of Engineering totals 397, as compared with 191 in 1916; the enrollment in the College of Science in 1916 was 60, and now is 169; the College of Law numbers 373 and had 202 in 1916; the College of Commerce has the largest enrollment in the University, totaling 536, a remarkable growth during recent years.

The Freshman enrollment of this year is 713, or as many as in the entire University in 1916.

Less than one-fourth of the student body are from Indiana, it was said, although Notre Dame is in Indiana. The University draws its men from almost every state in the Union and from 14 foreign countries. Notre Dame is not a local or sectional, but a national institution.

YOUNGEST JUDGE.

Ernest P. Lajoie, LL. B., 1915, has been appointed Wayne County Circuit Court judge in the state of Michigan. He is the youngest Circuit judge in the state. Lajoie is also president of the Lawyers' club of Detroit.

METROPOLITAN CLUB

The Metropolitan club met in the North room of the Library Thursday evening at 6:30. A smoker, a banquet about Thanksgiving Day and a dance to be held in New York during Christmas vacation were discussed.

A committee of Joseph Burke, John Adams and John McKenna was appointed to reorganize the club. A meeting will be held for the election of officers.

TWO COLLEGES GET NEW DEANS

Father Nieuwland to Devote More Time to Research; Father Carrico Handling Graduate Work.

Two changes in the heads of colleges of the University have been made this year.

Rev. Francis Wenninger, C. S. C., A. M., Litt. B., 1911, succeeds Rev. Julius Nieuwland, C. S. C., Ph. D., as dean of the College of Science. Father Nieuwland, who is known in the scientific world as the inventor of Lewisite and many other compounds, asked that he be relieved of his duties as dean in order that he might spend more time in research work.

Rev. Charles Miltner, C. S. C., Ph. D., has been appointed dean of the College of Arts and Letters, to succeed Rev. J. Leonard Carrico, C. S. C., Ph. D., who returned to the University this year after almost a year's absence at St. Edward's College, Austin, Texas. Father Carrico is devoting the greater part of his time to directing graduate work at the University.

IRISH BATTLE TIGERS NEXT

Princeton Confident of Win; Critics Favor Rockmen; First String Rest.

The Notre Dame football team, back from their triumph over the Army at Brooklyn, where the eastern sport writers had expected to see the Irish go down to defeat before the much-heralded West Point eleven, began preparations yesterday for the game with Princeton, next Saturday.

All indications, both from the standpoint of the Rockmen's performance at Brooklyn and from the declaration of leading football critics, are to the effect that Princeton will not enter, what is reported from the East a "practice tilt," with the fighting Irish next Saturday.

The first string rested from any strenuous workout yesterday, but Rockne put the second and third strings through a scrimmage practice with the freshmen. Cerney, Connel and Hauser, toting the ball for the varsity, went through the frosh with terrific line plunges and made brilliant end runs. Early in the practice session, Hauser displayed some pretty kicking.

The Notre Dame reserves lost to Lake Forest, 6-0, in a mud and water game, last Saturday. The penalties suffered by the Irish featured the game, Rockne's reserve men being set back 155 yards for the entire game.

ELKHART GOLF TEAM VICTOR

Drizzling Rain Mars Game; Score, 15-7; Corbett and Link Win Matches; Course Strange.

The Notre Dame golf team lost to the Christianna Country club, 15 to 7, at Elkhart Saturday afternoon.

Although both teams were handicapped by the drizzling rain that fell during the afternoon, the Elkhart club had the advantage of playing on their own course. The large number of high scores turned in by both teams, indicates the impediment caused by the inclement weather.

Jim Corbett was the leading scorer of the Irish squad, with a margin of three points.

The Notre Dame club extends its thanks to Fred Watson of the Law school and Mr. Evans of the Christianna club, for their kindness to the team while in Elkhart.

Two additional matches, which are pending, will be decided upon this week. The results are as follows: Jack Adams lost to R. B. Kelly, 0-2; Joe Foglia lost to R. S. Sims, 0-3; Dan Harris lost to Mr. Adams, 0-3; Charles Mouch lost to Mr. Harper, 0-3; George Ward lost to Mr. Flickinger, 1-2; Ray Bartzen lost to Mr. Willet, 1-2; Jim Corbett won from Mr. Kough, 3-0; Fred Link won from Mr. Haggerty, 2-0.

as subdeacon, opened the ceremonies. The University choir of over forty Moreau seminary students, directed by Rev. Walter O'Donnell, participated in the services.

Father Walsh told of the heroic work of the men and women who devote their lives to labor in hospitals, saying that they who perform such tasks are carrying on the greatest work of charity. He also mentioned that those who by various contributions aid hospitals also share in the great work.

CARROLL TIES PURPLE TEAM

Brownson Surprised by Power of St. Germain's Warriors; Score 7-7.

The raw recruits of Carroll hall gave interhall football a surprise Sunday afternoon when they played Brownsonites to a 7 to 7 tie. Brownson took the field expecting little opposition from their inexperienced rivals, but were forced to go the limit to hold down the scoring.

Brownson scored first when she tallied with a touchdown from a blocked kick back of Carroll's goal line, but from then on was fully occupied in holding down the persistent attacks of the Dorm gridgers. Carroll evened up the count in the third quarter when Captain St. Germain crossed Brownson's line and McGee kicked the goal.

The Carroll squad, although inexperienced, made a very creditable showing in their first appearance, and will play the next game with Walsh Sunday. Wheelock, Murphy and St. Germain starred for Carroll.

Ave Maria Circulation Figures Rise; Many Foreign Subscriptions; Published at Notre Dame.

The Ave Maria, published weekly at Notre Dame, has increased its circulation to the 41,000 mark this year, it was announced yesterday. Two thousand copies are sent to Canadian subscribers. Three thousand go to readers in other countries, including Ireland, India, England, Australia and the Argentine. The remaining 37,000 represent the circulation in the United States.

The Ave Maria was established in 1865 by the Very Reverend Edward Sorin, C. S. C., founder of the University, with its object "to honor the Blessed Virgin and to make her better known and better loved."

According to Rev. D. E. Hudson, C. S. C., the editor, the Ave Maria embraces the two great essentials of a popular magazine, in that it provides rational amusement and sound instruction to its readers.

A large staff of contributors has been secured, Father Hudson says, and coming issues will contain authoritative articles on Catholic subjects; numerous essays, short stories, sketches and poems, and an interesting young people's department. Contributors, it is said, will include His Eminent Cardinal Gasquet, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Vaughan, the Rt. Rev. Bishop MacDonald, the Very Rev. R. O'Kennedy and Dom Columba Edmonds, O. S. B.

The Ave Maria is published in a modern, completely equipped printing plant located on the University campus. Brothers and Sisters of the Holy Cross assist in the print-

DOMES PROOFS HAVE ARRIVED

Seniors May Call for Them; Silhouette Pictures Still Being Taken; Group Pictures Now.

Proofs of senior Dome pictures, taken last Wednesday, are now ready, it was announced yesterday by Jack Scallan, editor of The Dome. Two-thirds of the seniors have not yet been photographed, however, he said.

Silhouette pictures of juniors are being taken every evening after 7:30 on the second floor of Washington hall. This work is in charge of Charles Donahue and Al Hockwalt.

Group pictures of students of the halls will be taken this week. Applications for club photos should be made to John Bartley, at 316 Corby.

It is expected that all photograph work will be completed within two weeks. A picture of the University band will be taken as soon as uniforms are secured.

The art staff of The Dome is making good progress, according to Scallan.
