Are we down-hearted? No-o-o-o-o-o-o-o!

Robert Dixon, Glee club member, sartorial artist, and the Mrs. Potter Palmer of Badin's Four Hundred, has changed his tune from "An Old Fashioned Girl in a Gingham Gown," to "Cut Yourself a Piece of Cake and Make Yourself at Home."

Robert has been unfortunate, and, according to his rector, he will be at home indefinitely at 402 Badin, except on Saturday mornings between 6:30 and 7:00 a. m., when he will be in the chapel.

One of the scouts saw Harold Thompson wandering idly up and down one of the residential streets looking for something he evidently couldn't find. We suspect it was a house number.

One of the scouts has been wounded in action. He saw Charles Chouffet on the Niles road hurling stones and cusses at an automobile which was rapidly disappearing in the distance. In his haste to find out what it was all about, the scout was hit by something—by a rock or a cuss, he doesn't know which.

Chick was around to collect 50 cents from Pat O'Sullivan, Bill Wagner, and Eddie Welch this morning.

Sommer and Spencer, well known in South Bend's social circles, have declared war on a member of the staff. As a matter of fact, they have threatened to throw him in the lake if their names appear in this column again.

We wanted to have Sommer and Spencer bound over to keep the peace, but the scout took the law into his own hands by riding Mr. Sommer all over the room, and checking up another victory against the Brute of Badin hall.

So many victories have been notched in the wall that soon Haecker will be able to visit Jack Adams without having to go out into the corridor.

L. Bernard Macnab has been giving his friends the cold shoulder ever since he took Marion Davies to the high school Junior Prom at Portland. More recently, Macnab has been observed patiently waiting at the stage door of the Palace.

Don't set Esmond up.

We saw Jack Scallan hurrying cityward last night. His cherubic features were wreathed in smiles. One suspects the disaster of the afternoon affected him not, or that the Dome had made some more head-day—or, what is more likely, he was anticipating the joys of the evening at the Corn-Husk. 'Tis said he shakes an itchy set of 7-D's.

Jack spent the summer on the bounding main, or the bloom'n' main, more properly, for he was touring with the Canadians in the Maria Chapdelaine Country, along the St. Lawrence. It is no wonder, therefore, with such a Lothario working in such a fruitful country that the mail in Box 45 varies not only geographically, but from infra red to ultra violet.

The parties of several parts of this column are destined for a party this afternoon—slumming or otherwise—and, as Mae Tinee says, "See you tomorrow!"—but, in view of the above, and Sommer's threat, I add, "Maybe!"

MANY ATTEND SOPH DANCE

One hundred fifty couples attended the Soph Corn Husk held at the Tribune building last night. Eddie Luther was awarded the varsity football in the novelty surprise. The members of George Olsen's orchestra were the guests of the Sophomore class. The Paul Jones dance, which was introduced, met with favor. Jack Doyle gave a popular solo dance. Harry Denney's orchestra furnished the music.

The feature of the dance was the awarding of the autographed football. Immediately before intermission, a signal was given, and the dancers were asked to search for a tack which was driven into the floor. Eddie Luther discovered the tack and was given the football.

The patrons and patronesses of the dance were: Mr. and Mrs. David Wier, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Reichart, Mr. James E. McGarthy, Mr. Al. Ryan, Mr. Paul Fenlon and Mr. Vincent Fogin.

DR. HARKINS TO LECTURE

"Structure of the Atom" Is Subject; Invitation Extended to All Interested.

Dr. W. D. Harkins, professor of physical chemistry at the University of Chicago, will lecture on the "Structure of the Atom," in Chemistry hall on the night of November 14. This address will be given under the auspices of the Northern Indiana section of the American Chemical Society.

An invitation to hear this eminent scientist discuss the results of his investigations on atomic structure is extended to all those who are interested.

Joseph Reichart is chairman of the program committee.

Polish War Hero Visits University

General Josef Haller, commander in chief of the Polish army, war hero and statesman, visited the University Friday night at 6:30. General Haller, who is the guest of the American Legion, was escorted through the city by a cordon of police and war veterans. He visited the Library and other points of interest about the University.

General Haller distinguished himself in the world war and was defender of Poland against the Bolshevik government. He made several addresses in the city and was honored by the Polish Catholics of South Bend. He left South Bend last night.

MAKE THE PITTSBURG TRIP FOR THE CARNEGIE GAME.

MEET THE TEAM.

The students are requested to watch the bulletin boards today for announcements concerning the team's return from Nebraska. The time at which the team will arrive was not definitely known last night, but will be published in the bulletins as soon as the S. A. C. receives the wire from Lincoln. There will be a demonstration at the station. The details of the welcome will be published in the bulletin.

"DEFEAT"

No sun has risen but its blazing ball
Has fainted in the night's enfolding pall;
No wave has tossed its hair in untamed joy,
But has become the shore's defenseless toy.

The wine of ecstasy, when drunk too deep,
Locks courage in the deadened tomb of sleep;
Oh, jewelled crowns can never gleam complete
Unless with Victory shines the gem, Defeat.

—H. A. M.

SCRIBBLERS CLUB MEETS

Prof. Shuster Will Lecture on Poetry at Meeting Tomorrow Evening.

Professor George N. Shuster will give his lecture on "Poetry" at a meeting of the Scribblers' club at 7:45 tomorrow evening.

The meeting will be featured by discussions of poetry. The five prize winning poems in the Scribblers' poetry contest will be read by their authors.

The Scribblers' Book of Notre Dame Verse is now in the process of publication. The McClave Printing Co., of South Bend, was awarded the contract for the printing. W. B. Conkey & Co., Hammond, Indiana, will do the binding. The book will be placed on sale December 1 or 2.

Committees to sell the books of verse will be named at the meeting tomorrow evening.

Student Directory Out This Week

The S. A. C. Directory committee, consisting of Mark Nolan, Norm Smith and Tim Rauh, announces that the Student Directory will be out within the week. The directory will contain the name, course, year, hall and home address of each student. It will be distributed throughout the halls and will be on sale at the news stand. The price of the directory will probably be twenty cents. The directory idea originated three years ago with the publication of the Bell-hop. This year the work was taken over by the Student Activities Committee.

INTERHALL GRIDDERS.

The Badin hall football team left for Portland, Ind., yesterday afternoon to play Our Boys team of Portland. Our Boys are the lightweight champs of Indiana. The Day Dogs will play Sophomore hall on Cartier field this afternoon.

CORNHUSKERS WIN FROM IRISH 14 TO 7

Nebraskans Upset Dope and End String of Irish Victories; Maher Scores Touchdown; Noble Stars in Game

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 10.—Nebraska, 14; Notre Dame, 7, is the story of one of the most bitter upsets that ever came to the Irish football camp, when the Cornhuskers defeated Notre Dame in the new Nebraska stadium at Lincoln before a record-breaking crowd of 30,000.

Notre Dame fought the westerners to the last second of play and displayed their undaunted spirit by scoring a touchdown as the final whistle sounded, bringing to a close one of the hardest fought battles in football history.

The Cornhuskers had a wonderful team that played the game as they never played it before. Not once did they let up on their smashing line attack, and with the advantage of weight, they crushed the Irish defense.

One of the surprises of the struggle was the inability of Notre Dame to complete forward passes. The passing game has been used with much success by Notre Dame this year, and other seasons, but Coach Dawson, of Nebraska, had evidently perfected an effective defense. Notre Dame attempted 37 passes and completed only 12 for a total of 155 yards. Nebraska completed but two of its nine passes, but one of them, a short toss to Noble, on the 20-yard line, resulted in a touchdown.

The Cornhuskers' tremendous power was manifested in the vicious line smashing game that paved the way for sensational victory over the Rockmen yesterday. The center trio of the Irish line, Walsh, Brown and Kizer was subjected to terrific punishment, but with that fight-for-ever spirit that has made the Notre Dame football team what it is today, these brilliant and enduring warriors never faltered from their task and even when the pall of defeat was hanging over them, they fought as no football men ever fought before. Sharing in the glory of these men were Oberst, Rip Miller, Joe Bach, Crowe, Collins, Mayl, Hunsinger and Murphy.

Against this forward wall of the Irish, which has made football history sparkle for the Hoosier school this season, the greater part of the westerner's attack was directed. Through their supreme efforts were the Benders enabled to march steadily to the enemy's goal, only to have victory snatched from their grasp by the breaks of the game.

The Irish back field played a fighting game and tore through the Cornhuskers line and ran the ends with lightning speed, but the Nebraska team was tackling as mad men and it was impossible to make consistent gains against such desperate playing. Elmer Layden pierced the heavy Nebraska line for gains and Crowley and Miller tore off tackle and around the ends. Stuhldreher was throwing and receiving passes and running back punts for consistent gains. Max Hauser, who went in late in the game, passed with remarkable accuracy and was responsible, in a great part, for Notre Dame's touchdown. Bergman and Maher and all of the Irish backs played a splendid game, but breaks were against them and they were playing a team that had been especially primed for the Notre Dame attack.

The struggle between these two great rivals was won and lost on the breaks of the game. Two wonderful teams pitted all they had on the altar of the pigskin for that priceless glory that is Nebraska's today.

Notre Dame won the toss and Layden kicked off. Straight football tactics were used which failed to gain for either side, and both teams exchanged punts. Lewellen ran back Layden's punt from his own 30-yard line to the Irish 32-yard line. Layden passed to Don Miller for a 10-yard gain which was the first of the Rockmen's aerial attacks.

The first first period marked the opening of the terrific battle and the Cornhuskers were playing football as they never played before.

Within a few minutes after the start of the second period, Noble raced around the Irish flank for 24 yards and a touchdown, guarded by perfect interference.

The Rockmen came back with a powerful drive, mixing a running game with a pass attack. It was a steady march down the field with Don Miller smashing the line for six and eight-yard gains. Crowley's first pass was good for nine yards and a few seconds later, Miller took another pass for seven yards.

Layden cared around the Cornhuskers flank for 10 yards and was hurt on the following play. With Layden back in the game the Irish rushed the ball to the shadow of Nebraska goal, but an incomplete pass cost the Irish one of the best chances they had to score.

The westerners punted out of danger and for the remainder of the period, the Cornhuskers battled the Benders in their own territory. In the first half, Notre Dame was the heavy ground gainers by passes and line smashing.

In the second half, the westerners battered the center of the Irish line and Walsh, Brown and Kizer fought the battle of their lives to stave off the attack of the Huskers.

The Irish began another march in the middle of the period with passes and off tackle smashes. Layden smashed center of the enemy's line for eight and nine yards at a time. Stuhldreher, the resourceful quarterback, completed a beautiful pass to Miller that was good for 27 yards. Miller was hurt on the play and after returning to the game fumbled on Nebraska's 23-yard line. The ball was scooped up by Rhodes, who ran to the Rockmen's five-yard line. Here they were held for downs.

Nebraska took the ball near the close of the quarter and smashed through the line. The ball was worked down to Notre Dame's 19-yard line as the quarter ended.

With the ball on the Irish 19-yard line, and fourth down, nine to go, Nebraska passed and Noble scored a touchdown.

Both teams played a passing and running game till nearly the end of the period, with the Cornhuskers displaying an uncanny adroitness to intercept the Irish passes, which was one of the surprises of the game.

Rockne sent Cerney, Maher and Hauser into the backfield, and Notre Dame took the ball on downs after the Huskers had rushed in deep into the Irish territory. The Fighting Dockmen made one of the most sensational struggles for a score than has ever been witnessed on the gridiron.

AUTUMN

We have something to look forward to. This is the time of year when The Chicago Tribune reprints John McCutcheon's perennially popular cartoon, "Injun Summer," which we always cut out of the paper and pin above our desk where it remains until an unusually strong current of air makes it fall to the floor, and the Polish janitor, altogether devoid of appreciation for the finer things of life, carries it out with yesterday's papers; then we settle down to wait for the next reprint.

An exhilarating season, this Indian Summer—a time to be out of doors, to stroll beside the hazy lake at dusk when shadows deepen from purple to black and gradually merge into a sable sheen reflecting the glow of the golden dome.

The moon rises, and its light is pearl and smoke about the trees. Dead leaves, yellow and red, fall slowly in the windless air; the November mist frames the distant woodlands in vignettes, opalescent in the faded light. Here and there, men with rakes in their hands, tend bon fires, their shadows dancing fantastically on the ground. The frost lays its white finger on the earth; the stars look down and see it in its shroud.

It is autumn.

NOTRE DAME SPIRIT

Is the traditional spirit on the wane? Are Notre Dame men becoming a gang of cake eaters and lounge lizards, men who prefer the more sedentary forms of amusement and distraction to a wholehearted, peppy, vigorous support of their school and team?

The demonstration of welcome for the Purdue team was noticeably short on pep. The men didn't turn out as in former years, and there were a mere handful in the snake dance—perhaps three hundred men, optimistically estimated.

It was certainly due to no defection on the part of the committee that arranged the reception. They did their best to make the affair a success, and it was only through their efforts that there was a reception at all. There were last minute delays, of course, which may or may not have been unavoidable, but which certainly robbed the work of the committee of much of its fruits. Committees can only plan and work, and there are always those who promise and forget, or change their minds.

Notre Dame as a whole is the same old place it always was; we'll never be cake eaters or lounge lizards. We know that. But does the world know it? Every man who has a class on the campus should have been in that snake dance Friday evening. The spectacle of over half of the student body standing on the curbing and watching their classmates in a demonstration is one that is unworthy of Notre Dame.

The freshman class turned out and did their bit. Can the same be said about the upper classes? We are afraid not.

THE EXAMS

And now comes that period of delightful uncertainty. That time that blesses the student body but four times a year, when each and every man looks in the glass of knowledge and then scampers away in fear to an ordeal of weary night study, worry, and a stuffed mind from cramming. It is the period that makes for letters such as Witwer's, "Dear Dad, French wasn't half as bad as I thought it would be. It was twice as bad." And the fair ones will murmur in vain for the gallant who cometh not, while the "gallant" at that moment has his proboscis stuck into a book.

But it will be all right. After it's all over every one (there will be exceptions, of course) will wonder why he was so frightened at the exams when they were really quite reasonable.

And then, when the next ones come, it will be the old, old story.

From Off Stage

Comes Lionel Barrymore, who remained unknown while his brother and sister rose to fame, to take his place with them by virtue of his achievement in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." As Flik, the clown, he has created a role that in the hands of any of his contemporaries would have descended to the ludicrous. Last season he gave some indication of his ability with his Achille Cortelon, "a figure of foot-light magic," and this year he has triumphed again.

"Laugh, Clown, Laugh" is not an ingratiating play, but it contains some superb acting on the part of Barrymore as the clown who can do nothing but weep while all the world laughs at his antics. He loves Simonetta, a sweet singer, long his friend and playfellow, and she, in turn, has won the heart of a wealthy young Italian who has lived so riotously that his only nervous reaction is bursts of meaningless laughter. Both Flik and his rival avow their love for the girl in a strenuous scene in which, after attempting murder, Flik bows to fate. The nerves of both give way, the clown begins to sob heartbrokenly, and the other man bursts into insane laughter. Flik generously shakes his rival's hand, and as the curtain descends, stands, dazed and broken, his arm still moving in a mechanical gesture.

Simonetta realizes the strength of the clown's love for her and goes to his lodgings one night in the midst of a terrific storm to tell him that her love for the profligate has been a mistake, and offers to marry him. Although he sees through her pretense, born of her long association with him, Flik seems to consent, and she leaves him with the assurance that she will see him on the morrow.

His melancholia returns, and he again begins to weep. Cursing himself for his weakness, he gazes at himself in a glass and endeavors to laugh. Flik, the stage clown, can make him laugh. He arranges the chairs in a semi-circle, and, putting on his clown's costume and the ridiculous nose he had worn on the stage, begins his performance for an imaginary audience, grimacing at each mirror in turn.

"I can laugh," he cries, and then, pressing a knife to his side, sinks to the floor while the storm increases in fury, and the rain seems to beat in at the window.

It was at this point that an enthusiastic Chicago audience arose and applauded while the eldest Barrymore, in response to their demands, emerged again and again to bow and to smile his thanks to a group of people who realized that he was not only a great actor, but that he had climbed heights to which his fellows can only aspire.

TREATMENT OF CHAPERONES
[Daily Nebraskan]

Many students will attend scores of parties this year and they will have an occasion to meet hundreds of chaperones. At those various parties, the chaperones will have the interesting task of sitting around while you enjoy yourself on the dance floor.

Do you ever think that they are guests at that party; that they are favoring you with their presence? Do you think that they are extended an unusual honor by being asked to attend your party?

Treat the chaperones as your guests. Skip a dance to talk to them. Don't try to rush over to them in the two minutes' intermission. They are human and you know how you would like to be treated.

Rocky Mountain Club to Give Banquet

Lawrence O'Leary, chairman, Mike Neitzel and Ray Brady were appointed as a committee to arrange for entertainment at a banquet to be held by the Rocky Mountain club during the Christmas vacation.

The banquet is the first planned by the Rocky Mountain club this year. It will be held in conjunction with the Pacific Coast club dinner.
