CJF '76

The Collegiate Jazz Festival explodes for the eighteenth year and as has always been the case, seems miraculous to have arrived. The work which began last April and has continued through a change in chairmanship and with varying degrees of intensity, has reached a climax in which the efforts of many different people have converged to produce the experience that is distinctly CJF. In many ways it has not worked out as I imagined it should: ideally, there shouldn’t have been any missed deadlines, changed schedules, or unanswered letters or questions. It seems that coordinating fellow students requires an inscrutable mixture of conflicting skills, both pressure and patience. Yet, in spite of the often confused details, — for which I can only apologize — there emerges a celebration of life manifest in music. It is a wonderful thing, which transcends both my efforts and mistakes, and it has kept CJF vital through the years. I am very happy to have been able to be part of that celebration.

The magic requires love if it is to flourish, however, and it is those people who have nurtured the festival that I would like to thank. Of particular note are Fr. George Wiskirchen, C.S.C., who has untiringly advised and tolerated Mike Dillon and myself, Bob and Barb Syburg, in the last of their many years of involvement, our friends at Electro-Voice for so charitably providing the sound, Dan Morgenstern in his tenth year of judging and friendship, Mike Dillon for his priceless help, Maura Donohue and Gerald Doyle, Byron and Tom — thanks to all.

We apologize that personnel lists are not available for all bands. Those that are missing arrived after our press deadline.
You know it. We know it. Sound equipment can make or break a performance. Whether laying down a multi-track master for a hit record, amplifying a live concert, or reproducing tapes, records, or FM. It’s our prime incentive to create and continually refine a broad array of microphones and loudspeakers. Each designed to solve a specific problem or meet a special need.

Much of our work is done in one of the finest electro-acoustic labs in the country. With plenty of computer time and endless testing of ideas and concepts. Working out the practical details of high technology at its finest.

But we give equal time and importance to the field. Working in the studios and concert halls where we can probe weaknesses and discover strengths . . . and find out at first hand what really works . . . and why. It’s an absolutely essential step in the discovery process.

We think we’ve earned the right to share—with the artists we serve—in the thrill of performances fully realized and creatively presented. Because our business is more than just a business. It’s more like an obsession. And we love it.
