Honors

Kevin J. Christiano, associate professor of sociology, was appointed to a two-year term as associate editor of Québec Studies, the journal of the American Council for Québec Studies.

Thomas L. Shaffer, the Short Professor of Law Emeritus, was appointed to two Indiana State Bar Association committees: Legal Ethics and Written Publications.

Activities

Asma Afsaruddin, associate professor of Arabic and fellow at the Kroc Institute, presented the invited paper "Early Views on Political Legitimacy: the Kitab al-Uthmaniyya of al-Jahiz" at the conference "Al-Jahiz: A Muslim Humanist for our Time," organized by the Center for Arab and Middle Eastern Studies, American Univ. of Beirut and the Orient Institute of Beirut, Lebanon, Jan. 20–22; and was an invited participant at the New Voices Seminar, 2005 at the Center for Spirituality, St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, Feb. 5–7.

Gary Anderson, professor of theology, chaired a committee that reviewed the state of Jewish Studies at Yeshiva College in New York; presented "Toward a Theology of the Tabernacle Furniture," Hebrew Univ.; a presentation to a working group on the Identity of Jesus, "Moses in Gethsemane," Center of Theological Inquiry; Catholic Biblical Association. "Moses Did as the Lord Commanded Him: Septenary Structures in the Priestly Source" in Halifax, Nova Scotia, and again at the Society of Biblical Literature meeting in San Antonio (Nov. 20–23) and the Association of Jewish Studies meeting in Chicago (Dec. 19–21); "Zionism in Biblical Perspective" at the "Notre Dame International Conference on Migration and Theology," Sept. 20; an informal presentation on the theme "Higher Education and the Evangelization of Culture" at an afternoon symposium with Francis Cardinal George at the Univ. of Chicago; and the plenary address "Mary and the Old Testament" at Providence College, R.I. for the New England Branch of the Mariological Society of America.

James Matthew Ashley, associate professor of theology and fellow of the Center for Social Concerns, was an invited participant and chaired a plenary session at the "World Forum for Theology and Liberation," Porto Alegre, Jan. 21–25.

Gerard F. Baumbach, professional specialist and director of catechetical initiatives in the Institute for Church Life and concurrent professor of theology, presented the topic "Leadership and Catholic Mission" at the "From Mission to Service" conference sponsored by Catholic Charities USA and the Mendoza College of Business, Nov. 9.

Joseph P. Bauer, professor of law, was an invited panelist in a teleseminar sponsored by the American Bar Association Section of Antitrust Law on the topic "Defending Discrimination: Exploring Statutory and Non-Statutory Defenses to Robinson-Patman Act Liability" on Jan. 19.

Philip Bess, professor of architecture and director of Graduate Studies in the School of Architecture, lectured in November at the Univ. of St. Thomas, Houston, on "New Urbanism: Making Cities Livable, Making Cities Beautiful"; at the Univ. of Notre Dame Center for Ethics and Culture "Epiphanies of Beauty" conference on "The City is Also an Aesthetic Object"; and in December at the Notre Dame Club of New York on "The Urban Transect and the Philosophical Foundations of Traditional Urbanism." In January he participated in a New Urban Builders design charrette for a new neighborhood baseball park in Chico, Calif.

Kevin J. Christiano, associate professor of sociology, chaired and presented "The American Council for Québec Studies (ACQS): Structure and Programs" in the session on "Le Québec et le Canada dans les associations" for the 14th biennial conference of the American Council for Québec Studies, Québec, Nov. 18–21, where he also chaired the sessions "Les priorités du Gouvernement du Québec et sa vision du fédéralisme canadien" and "The Formation of Identities and Collective Imaginary in the Nations of the New World."

Philippe Collon, assistant professor of physics, presented "Accelerator Mass Spectrometry: From Nuclear Astrophysics to Tracing Oceans," physics colloquium, Western Michigan Univ., Kalamazoo, Oct. 4.

Lawrence Cunningham, the O'Brien Professor of Theology, presented six conferences to the Cistercian Community of Santa Rita Abbey in Sonoita, Ariz., Jan. 2–4; and six conferences to the Benedictine Community in Tucson, Jan. 5–7.

Michael Driscoll, the Tisch Family Professor of Theology, presented the keynote address "Many Spokes, One Center," Liturgy Day 2005, Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, Feb. 5.

Richard W. Garnett, associate professor of law, presented "Should Christian Legal Thought Be Taken Seriously?" at the conference of the Law Professors Christian Fellowship in San Francisco.

Jennifer Herdt, associate professor of theology and Nanovic Institute fellow, presented "Virtue's Semblance: Erasmus and Luther on Pagan Virtue and the Christian Life" to the Interdisciplinary Christianities colloquium, Univ. of Chicago, Dec. 3, and to the Society of Christian Ethics annual meeting, in January.

Alan L. Johnson, professor of biological sciences, presented the seminar "Ovarian Follicle Selection and Differentiation" at "Reproductive Biology Program," Washington State Univ. and the Univ. of Idaho, Oct. 12–14.

Maxwell E. Johnson, professor of theology, presented "The Problem of Creedal Formulae in Traditio Apostolica 21:12-18," "Problems in the Early History of Liturgy Seminar," North American Academy of Liturgy, Louisville, Jan. 5–9.

Edward J. Maginn, associate professor of chemical and biomolecular engineering, presented the invited lecture "Environmentally Benign Solvents for Reactions and Separations: Are Ionic Liquids the Right Solution?" at the "Environmental Science, Engineering and Policy in the 21st Century" seminar series, Environmental and Water Resources Engineering Program, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Jan. 28.

Rev. Richard P. McBrien, the Crowley-O'Brien Professor of Theology, presented "Being Catholic in a Time of Change" and "How Should We be Church Today?" at St. Mary Cathedral in Saginaw, Mich., for the "Third Annual Winter Grace Lecture Series" sponsored by St. Mary Cathedral and the Office of Liturgy of the Diocese of Saginaw on Nov. 30 and Dec. 1; "Vatican II: Its Abiding Significance" for the Dept. of Religious Studies at the Univ. of California, Santa Barbara on Jan. 13; and was interviewed for "Was Jesus Married? A Theologian Speaks Out," U.S. News & World Report (Collector's Edition, 2004): 26.

Rev. John Allyn Melloh, S.M., coordinator of the Marten Program in Homiletics and Liturgics and professional specialist in theology, presented "Creation of Meaning through the Juxtaposition of Hymnody and Preaching" at the North American Academy of Liturgy meeting, Louisville, Ky., Jan. 6-9.

Rudolph M. Navari, associate dean, College of Science, and director of the Walther Cancer Research Center, presented "Effects of Depressive Symptoms on the Treatment Choices of Patients with Early Stage Breast Cancer" with M.N. Wilson at the annual American Psycho-social Oncology Society meeting, Jan. 28, in Phoenix.

Al Neiman, professional specialist in philosophy, presented "(Psycho)Therapy and Philosophical Education" at a colloquium of the philosophy faculty and students, the Ontario Institute for the Study of Education, Univ. of Toronto, Jan. 21.

Rev. Ronald Nuzzi, director, ACE Leadership Program, gave the keynote address, "Catholic Schools For the Common Good," at the Annual Catholic Education Foundation awards dinner, Fort Worth, on Jan. 29.

Teresa Godwin Phelps, professor of law, presented "The Far Side of Revenge: Quilts, Plays, Museums, and Truth Reports" at "Representations of the Holocaust, Genocide and Other Human Rights Violations" on Jan. 16, in San Diego.

Jeanne Romero-Severson, associate professor of biological sciences, attended the "Plant and Animal Genome XIII" meeting and was an invited speaker at the "Statistical Genomics Workshop" where she presented "Significantly Different from Zero:

Finding Expression Differences in the Low End of the Range," Jan. 15-20.

Thomas L. Shaffer, the Short Professor of Law Emeritus, presented "From Hoffman to Field to Brandeis" as the principal paper for the session "Private Practice and Social Justice" in the conference "Lawyers, Faith, and Social Justice," Pepperdine Univ. School of Law, Malibu, Feb. 4-5.

John P. Welle, professor of Romance languages and literatures, concurrent professor of film, television, and theatre, and fellow of the Nanovic Institute, presented "From the Lumière cinématographe to the Theatre of Silence: Cultural Reception and Early Italian Film Discourse" at the annual conference of the Modern Language Association, Philadelphia, Dec. 29.

Randall C. Zachman, associate professor of theology, presented "Manifesting the Image of the Crucified Christ: Suffering in the Theology of John Calvin," "American Society of Church History Conference," Seattle, Jan. 6-9.

Guests Present: Mary Frandsen, Fr. Michael Driscoll

The Reverend Edward Malloy, C.S.C., called the meeting to order at 3:05 p.m. Prof. Hatch offered a prayer.

1. Minutes of the meeting of October 27, 2004: The minutes of the meeting of October 27, 2004, were approved without correction.

2. Proposal to offer a Masters in Sacred Music in the Department of Theology: At the Academic Council meeting of October 27, 2004, members considered a proposal to offer a master's degree in sacred music (MSM) in the Department of Theology. While the program would be housed in Theology, it is conceived as an interdisciplinary program and relies on extensive participation by faculty from the Department of Music. After a lengthy discussion of the implications for the proposed MSM of the recent suspension of the Master of Music degree, members decided to remand consideration of the approval of the program to the Graduate Council.

At today's meeting, Prof. Hatch reported that there had been a thorough discussion of the MSM proposal at the November 9th meeting of the Graduate Council. That body's members then voted unanimously to approve the proposed program. The Executive Committee of the Academic Council has since approved it unanimously as well.

Prof. Hatch said that to be responsive to the concerns raised at the October Academic Council meeting, some of the discussion that occurred on the proposal at the November Graduate Council meeting will be revisited today. Although Prof. Cavadini, chair of the theology department, spoke to the Graduate Council, he is attending a conference off campus today. Thus, he sent a statement with Prof. Roche:

... [O]ne aspect of the proposal which may be a worry for some of you ... is the location of this initiative in the Theology Department. The Theology Department has been the national leader in the field of Liturgical Studies at the graduate level for the past 54 years. Liturgical Studies—like most of Theology—has an "applied" side to it. Our Master's level students in Liturgy mainly go on to parish or diocesan work. Our courses in Liturgical Studies at the Master's level are heavily populated by Master's of Divinity students, that is, students studying for ministry, and they are shaped according to ministerial and professional needs. Our department is the only department in the College with a professional degree program (M.Div.), and this makes us in some ways more like [a] university divinity school.

The proposed program will be a "professional" program along these lines. It is not intended as a Ph.D. prep in Music but [a program] for liturgical music leaders who will work in parishes and cathedrals. As a professional ministry degree, it will be accredited, as [are] all of our department's graduate programs, by the Association of Theological Schools [ATS]. The ATS has a whole set of standards applicable to such programs. An arrangement such as the one we are proposing is common enough so that there are accreditation standards in the Association of Theological Schools. Our program will be subject to external review by ATS every ten years, along with all of our graduate programming, and this in addition to, not instead of, the normal external review required by the Graduate School. This is not an arrangement we have in any way 'freelanced' or will be allowed to freelance without scrutiny by the national accreditation agency for graduate professional theological education.

I hope this serves to explain the location of the program in the Theology Department.

Prof. Hatch then asked the Reverend Michael Driscoll to speak to the issue of which courses would be offered in the program and in what sequence—both questions raised at the October meeting.

Fr. Driscoll said that because of those questions, he went back to the original proposal and expanded on it in pages 8 through 13 of a new attachment [provided to members before today's meeting]. His new documentation is intended to clear up some of the confusion created at the last meeting when he and others said that the program would incorporate existing personnel and existing courses; yet, because of a numbering discrepancy, the incorporation of existing Music courses into the program was not evident. In the footnotes on page 11 of the new attachment, he lists the music courses that have been offered at the University previously and shows how they correspond to the four historical periods that those who crafted the MSM proposal have defined for the program: Medieval; Renaissance; the 17th and 18th centuries; and the 19th century to the present.

In terms of personnel, Fr. Driscoll continued, all four of the Music faculty who would be involved in the program are highly distinguished, both nationally and internationally, at an applied level and at a theoretical level. They are: Alexander Blachly, Calvin Bower, Craig Cramer, and Mary Frandsen. He added that he and other Theology faculty members are very happy to work with them.

Next, Prof. Donald Crafton, chair of the Department of Music, spoke about the effect of the proposed MSM program on undergraduates, for there were some concerns raised at the October meeting on whether a new graduate program might lead to a diversion of resources from undergraduates. He said that Music expects to be able to add either four, five, or six courses to the undergraduate program as the recently suspended graduate programs are phased out. He added that he also expects a number of the department's gifted seniors to be able to enroll in some of the MSM program's courses—providing them with the opportunity to enhance their curriculum and to receive an honors distinction.

Prof. Roche spoke next—saying that he would address the proposal's connection to the strategic plan for the College of Arts and Letters. During the University's most recent strategic planning process, the College's committee for the arts identified six priorities for the next ten years. The proposed MSM program is entirely responsive to the fourth priority, which calls for an investment in the sacred arts. Furthermore, a key feature of the University's newly opened Performing Arts Center is the Reyes Organ and Choral Hall—a distinctive feature for a Catholic university. The proposed program in sacred music would take full advantage of that magnificent room and organ.

Prof. Roche also said that after the last meeting, he needed to clarify in his own mind the extent to which graduate music courses would be offered to support the MSM program. To clarify that point for other Academic Council members, he would emphasize that the organist, Prof. Cramer, would offer the same kind of individualized instruction that he has been offering in the past. What he did not fully grasp at the time of the October meeting, Prof. Roche said, is that each semester, one graduate course will be offered in the MSM program [such as Survey of Sacred Music or Liturgical Theology, see page 12 of the attachment]. Thus, approving the MSM program will not lead to a situation in which graduate students will be parachuted into existing undergraduate courses. Moreover, the MSM course offerings will not adversely affect the music department's investment in its undergraduate program. As Prof. Crafton has just explained, because of new courses designed solely for them and the opportunity for advanced students to join the new graduate courses, undergraduates in Music will soon experience a net gain in offerings.

Prof. Linney said that members may recall that at the October meeting, questions were raised about the level of support from the four music faculty named as key faculty in the proposed program. While each of the four were invited to today's meeting, only Prof. Frandsen was able to attend. Professors Bower, Cramer, and Blachly each sent a statement to clarify their positions on the proposal:

Prof. Cramer said that his comments, as contained in the minutes of the October meeting, reflected his support for the program and that his support continues.

Prof. Blachly's statement reads: "I can say here that I am very much in favor of the MSM proposal and that I would hope to be active in the program, teaching courses on Gregorian chant, Renaissance sacred polyphony, and directing a small choir of MSM students in performances of sacred music of the Middle Ages and Renaissance."

Prof. Bower's statement is longer, Prof. Linney explained, for he raises five points and has summary comments as well. Because of certain remarks made at the last meeting about his views on the program, he asked that his statement be entered into the minutes:

"(1) Since I joined the academic community of Notre Dame in 1981, I have had a consistent record of supporting and promoting both the study and the practice of sacred music of the Roman Catholic tradition on this campus.

(2) As a scholar at a university that pretends to represent the Catholic Christian tradition, I find it no less than a scandal that this University offers no program at the graduate level in sacred music within that tradition. The Catholic tradition of sacred music represents one of immeasurable richness, from Gregorian chant to the polyphonic tradition of the Renaissance, to the Masses of Mozart and Haydn, to the sacred music of 19th century figures such as Rheinberger and Bruckner – and the effective censure of the study of this tradition by the Department of Music is incomprehensible.

(3) Nevertheless, at a faculty meeting on March 27, 2000, the Department of Music formally voted to offer no program in sacred music at the graduate level. Among the reasons articulated for rejecting any such program were the possible appearance of anti-Semitism and the threat to academic freedom such a program implied.

(4) In an ideal university, the study of sacred music would take place within the Department of Music. This is not an ideal university. When quoted out of context by Professor Higgins [at the Academic Council meeting of October 27, 2004], I was being critical of the Department of Music, not of the MSM program. If my remarks in the Scholastic are read in context, the criticism of the department, not the MSM program, is self-evident.

(5) I have been involved in the planning of the MSM program since its inception. I have worked closely with Michael Driscoll in particular as he and his colleagues in Theology have sought to offer some remedy to the glaring and embarrassing hole in musical and liturgical studies on this campus. Because I am a musician and a music historian to the core, I had always hoped that a graduate program in sacred music would be offered in the Department of Music. That is not going to happen. Nevertheless, the academic standards articulated in Theology's proposal and the faculty that will teach in the program meet professional criteria that would be demanded by a program in sacred music in any department of music. Thus, let it be known in no uncertain terms that, I, Calvin M. Bower, stand firmly behind the proposed MSM degree as tendered by the Department of Theology. I shall do all I can to see the program flourish and succeed."

Prof. Hatch then opened the floor for discussion.

Prof. Taylor asked why, considering the supportive comments of so many Music faculty, the proposed master's in sacred music program is not being offered as a graduate program in the Department of Music, even as an interdisciplinary program with another department. It is not clear to him that the department, two years down the line, will support this program; yet, because of the high degree of involvement of Music faculty in the program, such support would be required. If the program were to be offered in the Department of Music, he would be more confident that Music faculty would support it in the future.

Prof. Crafton replied that the commitment of the department is to faculty, not to graduate students. He is confident that the faculty will continue to support the program into the future.

Prof. Taylor asked whether that decision would be up to the chair and the entire faculty of the music department. It is possible that a future chair or future faculty members might decide that the department cannot afford to put its resources into the program any longer unless it is on the books as a Music program.

Prof. Crafton replied that such a turn of events could occur within any program or within any department. What can be said with assurance is that the faculty members currently involved in the proposal are very committed to it. They have been working to offer this course of study for several years, and there is no reason to think that they will withdraw their support.

Prof. Hatch said that there are many other programs, such as the Medieval Institute, with faculty drawn from other departments. Theoretically, any of those departments would have the power to remove their faculty from positions in interdisciplinary programs; yet, that has not occurred, and, in fact, there is a long tradition of faculty teaching in interdisciplinary programs. Moreover, as Prof. Roche pointed out, during the recent strategic planning process, the faculty of the College of Arts and Letters expressed very clearly its desire to make sacred music a priority.

Prof. Moevs said that it appears that as long as Profs. Blachly, Bower, Cramer, and Frandsen are at the University, they will support the program; yet, some programmatic base in Music would ensure that their eventual replacements will continue to serve it as well.

Prof. Linney pointed out that the situation could be turned around quite easily: If the proposed master's in sacred music were to be offered in the Department of Music rather than the Department of Theology, the same questions of the program's sustainability could be asked of Theology. The issue Prof. Moevs raises is relevant to any interdisciplinary program.

Prof. Moevs responded that his point is not that the program should be shifted from one department to the other but that it be considered a joint program where both departments—Music and Theology—have a say in making sure it continues. His concern is that the program in sacred music, now the Music Department's sole graduate program, will be run in cooperation with the graduate program in theology, but Theology has no power or control over the hiring, support and replacement of Music faculty on which the MSM program depends.

Prof. Hatch said that a previous arrangement—housing a liturgical music program within Music—was tried and failed. This new strategy is designed to make the collaboration work.

Prof. Brown said that one of the issues over which there was confusion at the last meeting is the size of the proposed MSM program. In terms of the number of graduate students, that number seemed to vary a bit during discussion at the last meeting.

Prof. Roche said that the program will start with a total of four stipends. Those stipends were previously directed to the master's degree in Music and held by Campus Ministry for the support of liturgical music in the Basilica; however, if the MSM program is approved, the stipends will be transferred to the new program. Because the MSM program is a two-year program, it would fund two new students each year. The program's graduate courses will be taught on a rotating basis every other year, which means that there will be four students in each of the graduate courses in music. The ultimate goal is to bring in eight students each year for a total of 16 students. That goal could be realized only if a donor would step forward to fund new graduate stipends; although, if there were to be 16 students, he believes the program would also need a second organist on the faculty with the donor or a second donor willing to fund that position as well. With the number of students in the program falling between 4 and 16, there is room for a little bit of growth in the program if it should receive only graduate stipends.

A member asked whether the proposal for the MSM is completely separate from the dissolution of the graduate programs in music.

Prof. Hatch answered that it is. The dissolution of those programs had to do with other concerns. In 2001, the music department was reviewed, with many issues flowing out of that review and many attempts over the next two years to grapple with them. The department held a retreat in 2003 that did not go well. During that year, different factions of the department were in conversation with him, Prof. Roche, and Prof. Kantor about the fate of the graduate programs. It was decided to establish a committee to look at the long-term viability of the programs, and after very careful work and numerous meetings, committee members concluded that the number of faculty was insufficient to support a top-quality and competitive performance-based Master of Music program. That process was entirely separate from the construction of the current proposal.

Prof. Brown thanked the Graduate Council for acting so promptly on this issue. He also said that he has confidence that the program is a worthwhile experiment and one that is likely to succeed; however, as with all experiments, there will be unforeseen bumps and wiggles along the way. He hopes that those bumps and wiggles will be assessed at some point in the context of establishing a broader program at Notre Dame in the sacred arts—for clearly, there is interest in creating a broader vision. As the University explores how various departments and programs might articulate that vision individually and with each other, perhaps there can be changes to make future developments proceed more smoothly.

There being no further comments or questions from members, Fr. Malloy called for a vote on the proposal to offer a master's degree in the sacred music through the Department of Theology. The vote was unanimously in favor.

3. Committee reports:

(a) Undergraduate Studies Committee: Prof. Preacher reported that committee members are meeting immediately following today's full Council meeting to begin work on the topics of grade inflation and the University's accommodations policies for students with disabilities.

(b) Graduate Studies Committee: Prof. Kantor reported that the committee has met twice this year—the first meeting in October to hear Charlotte Kuh from the National Research Council on planning for that organization's national survey of Ph.D. programs; the second meeting was on November 9 to consider the MSM proposal. The committee's next meeting is December 1. Two items are on the agenda: the accommodations policy for students with disabilities and an update on the work of the task force on graduate financial aid.

(c) Faculty Affairs Committee: Prof. Robinson said that committee members will meet soon to determine if the Academic Articles need to be amended in order to address the de facto or de jure termination of academic programs at the University. Members have discussed this topic informally with Prof. Hatch, but there has not yet been any formal action on the issue.

There being no further business, Fr. Malloy adjourned the meeting at 3:35 p.m.

Respectfully submitted,

Jean Ann Linney

University Committee on Women Faculty and Students

November 19, 2004

Members present: Katherine Spiess (chair), Susan Blum (chair elect), Victor Deupi, Liz Dube, Jean Ann Linney, Mary Ann McDowell, Salma Saddawi, Lizzi Shappell

Members absent: Patricia Bellia, Belinda Byrne, Rev. Patrick Gaffney, C.S.C., Mayra Gomez, Sr. Mary Louise Gude, C.S.C., Susan Harris, Sarah MacMillen, Agnes Ostafin, Gretchen Reydam-Schils

Guests: Jill Bodensteiner (Interim Director, Office of Institutional Equity), Denise Murphy (Director, Benefits and Technology, Office of Human Resources), and Heather Rakoczy (Director, Gender Relations Center)

Prof. Spiess, chair of the University Committee on Women Faculty and Students, called the meeting to order at 10:05 a.m.

1. Minutes of the meeting of October 27, 2004: The minutes of the meeting of October 27, 2004 were approved without amendment.

2. Gender Equity in Health Benefits at Notre Dame: Ms. Bodensteiner (Interim Director, Office of Institutional Equity) and Ms. Murphy (Director, Benefits and Technology, Office of Human Resources) provided a summary of reproductive health benefits at Notre Dame. Ms. Bodensteiner stressed that University policy with regard to reproductive health benefits is very clear and well documented. Since many people may have questions or misunderstandings about reproductive health benefits, individuals are encouraged to contact Denise Murphy or the Office of Human Resources' Benefits staff with their questions. In addition, the Medical/Dental/Vision Plan Summary details reproductive health benefits and is available on the Office of Human Resources' Web site.

The University health plans do not cover birth control for pregnancy prevention. Birth control is covered only when prescribed for a medical condition. In such cases, an annual physician's letter specifying the medical reason is required. There have been 137 individuals approved while two have been denied. The benefit includes Medco prescription coverage and the ability to apply prescription co-pay payments to a flexible spending account. Other contraceptives are generally not covered, including condoms for protection against sexually transmitted diseases. Sterilization is also not covered, whether by vasectomy or tubal ligation.

With regard to fertility, University health plans pay for fertility drugs and fertility treatments in conjunction with IUI or GIFT when such treatment assists normal reproductive processes to achieve pregnancy and uses sperm collected during normal sexual relations. This approach involves the use of a perforated condom. Requests for coverage are reviewed by the Director, Benefits and Technology and the University Ethicist (a C.S.C. priest) and all information is maintained in a confidential file. There have been three individuals approved while two have been denied. A relatively new amendment to federal law, HIPAA, is designed to protect personal health information including information related to fertility and other reproductive health issues. Ms. Bodensteiner and Ms. Murphy are members of the Notre Dame HIPAA team, which is trained to be in compliance with the federal law.

The University health plans cover Viagra (or similar drugs) when prescribed by a physician. The plans will cover Viagra for women if there is a medical reason. This requires an annual physician's letter. If the FDA approves Viagra for use by women the annual physician's letter would no longer be required.

The University health plans provide routine coverage for mammograms which includes a baseline exam at age 35 and annual exams after age 40. If a mammogram is required beyond this routine coverage, it is covered as a diagnostic test as recommended by a physician.

In response to questions regarding whether the University's reproductive health benefits are in compliance with legal requirements, Ms. Bodensteiner explained that there are both applicable tax/benefits laws and laws which dictate that you cannot discriminate based on gender in any terms and conditions of employment, including benefits offered. Ms. Bodensteiner stated that the University is in compliance with all applicable governing laws.

3. Announcements: Prof. Spiess reported that she has an inquiry in to Christine Maziar, Vice President and Associate Provost, regarding whether the faculty equity review study might currently be extended to the Library Faculty, which was not included in the first phase. Ms. Dube added that the Library Faculty and the Director of Libraries have indicated support for moving forward with the Library Faculty portion of the study at this time.

Prof. Spiess reported that a small group (Prof. Blum, Ms. Dube, Ms. Rakoczy, and Prof. Spiess) is currently working to draft a set of questions to steer the UCWFS' upcoming discussion with Fr. Jenkins.

4. Maternity Leave Benefits for Graduate Students: Prof. McDowell reported that she and Ms. Bodensteiner have begun benchmarking policies for maternity leave for graduate students. While in the very initial stages of this research, a range of scenarios have emerged: some schools have a well documented maternity leave policy while others are currently considering such a policy.

5. Hiring/Promotion/Retention of Women Faculty: Prof. Linney reported on her recent review of data on hiring, reappointment, promotion, and tenure. The review looked at what the data can tell us about the relative rates of successful reappointment and promotion over the four types of faculty, by rank and by gender.

Among the Library Faculty, women have slightly higher rates of reappointment and promotion than men. Among the Special Professional Faculty, there is an exceptionally high rate of reappointment for both males and females (98%), but the rate at which women are promoted from associate to full Special Professional Faculty is significantly below the rate at which men are promoted, so this is an area that warrants additional review. Among the Research faculty, women are more likely to be reappointed and promoted than men.

Among the Teaching and Research Faculty, the overall cumulative success rate since 1981 for reappointment (at all levels) is 89% for men and 90% for women. The overall success rate for all promotion and reappointment decisions since 1981 is 83% for men and 84% for women.

The one key area in the Teaching and Research Faculty where women appear to have significantly less success than men is in promotion from assistant to associate with tenure. For such decisions over the most recent five-year period, the rates of successful promotion are 92% for men and 83% for women. It is notable that the success rate for both males and females for promotion from assistant to associate with tenure has risen steadily since 1990. For the period 1990-1994, the rates of successful promotion at this level were 71% for men and 63% for women. It is also notable that women are going up for promotion to associate with tenure in greater numbers. While women represented just 20% of such promotion candidacies for the period 1990-1994, over the past five years women have comprised 44% of requests for promotion from assistant to associate with tenure. The data suggest women are not dropping out, or self-selecting at a different rate than men, prior to promotion.

This analysis suggests that hiring is critical. While twice as many Teaching and Research Faculty position offers were extended to women as men last year, only 48% of the 33 T&R faculty hired last year were women. We need to identify and understand the factors affecting women's decisions to decline offers of faculty appointment.

Prof. Linney stated that our rates of promotion and reappointment would compare well nationally. There is a slightly higher success rate among men nationally. There's some research that indicates women tend to devote more time to activities that are not as highly valued in the promotion process, such as teaching, mentoring students, and committee work. There is also some indication that women tend to pursue research topics that may be less readily publishable in the mainstream/top tier journals. These are sometimes offered as explanations, but we will need to find out if that is happening here.

Prof. Linney was asked if there have been studies comparing the reappointment and promotion success rates across the various departments. She indicated that those studies have not been done, but that they could potentially provide useful additional information.

Prof. Linney stated that we need to more specifically identify the barriers that may exist. We are doing a lot of things right, at least on the surface. What else should we be doing in order to support people and catch them before they fall out of the system? Hiring continues to be important and there is strong concern about understanding why so many women decline offers. Are there things in our culture that are not attractive to prospective women faculty? If so, how can they be remedied?

6. Security Issues / Sexual Assault Issues: Prof. Spiess inquired as to how UCWFS might best focus its efforts this year with regard to security and sexual assault issues. Security issues previously discussed by the committee include the inequity in male/female security monitor staffing and an inequity in the practice of locking down male vs. female residence halls. Sexual assault issues include whether health services are adequate and the need for more education and training on sexual assault issues.

Prof. Blum noted the presence of signs around campus this week alerting people to the frequency with which sexual assaults occur. Ms. Shappell responded that these materials were distributed by the Student Senate's Gender Relations Subcommittee to raise awareness about Sexual Assault in conjunction with Sexual Assault Awareness Week. Two educational programs were also held as part of Sexual Assault Awareness Week.

Ms. Shappell suggested that the UCWFS might look into whether the University needs a part time gynecologist on staff at the Health Center. While there are two general physicians who are trained in this sort of work, the Health Center does not currently have a specialist. Ms. Shappell suggested research into both the cost and demand for this type of service is warranted. The Student Senate Gender Relations Subcommittee is currently gathering the initial research on this project. Ms. Shappell will report back to the UCWFS on their progress and how the UCWFS can be involved.

Ms. Rakoczy reported that, beginning next fall, the Gender Relations Center hopes to move in the direction of campus-wide training sessions, as opposed to campus-wide programming, as a way of spreading awareness and promoting dialogue about sexual assault and related issues. To accomplish this work, the Gender Relations Center plans to collaborate widely. Target collaborators include Student Affairs with regard to first-year orientation, Residence Life and Housing with regard to Rector, AR, and RA staff training, Physical Education with regard to wellness classes for first-year students, the Office of Alcohol and Drug Education with regard to its PILLARS program, the Gender Relations Center's Fire Starters' first-year student sessions, the undergraduate residence halls' in brother/sister hall communities, and the graduate communities. How can UCWFS help support this work?

Prof. Deupi asked whether the sexual assault problem is getting better or worse. Tom Wolf's new book suggests that sexual assault is becoming more pervasive at American universities. Ms. Rakoczy stated that while it is a very significant issue, there are indications that awareness seems to be growing at Notre Dame. Education and training activities, such as those associated with Sexual Awareness Week, are very important. Student communication with regard to sexual assault is opening up and improving. Many students seem to be learning that a rapist is not the person behind the bushes, but is rather more likely an acquaintance or someone they are potentially interested in.

7. New Business: There was no new business.

Prof. Spiess adjourned the meeting at 11:20 a.m.

James A. Burns, C.S.C., Graduate School Award

Nominations are requested for the James A. Burns, C.S.C. Graduate School Award given annually to a faculty member for distinction in graduate teaching or other exemplary contributions to graduate education. Contributions can be in any or all of the following areas: building or developing a graduate program, teaching quality graduate courses, excellence as an adviser or thesis director, and excellence in service as a director of graduate studies or in any other similar position. Faculty from the Colleges of Arts and Letters, Science and Engineering, and the School of Architecture, are eligible.

The nomination packet should include a minimum of four letters of support (two from students and two from faculty) but no more than six, and a copy of the nominee's CV. All documentation should be sent to the department chair, who will forward all documentation to the Graduate School by Friday, March 11, 2005.

The first Notre Dame President with an advanced degree, a doctorate from the Catholic University of America, Father Burns was the leading reformer of Catholic education in this country in the first quarter of the 20th century. One of his most significant contributions was to raise academic standards by recruiting faculty with doctoral degrees.

James A. Burns, C.S.C., Graduate School Winners Since 1990

1989–1990	Rev. Ernan McMullin
1990–1991	Lawrence Marsh

Research Achievement Award

The Research Achievement Award is awarded annually to honor a distinguished Notre Dame faculty member who has made significant contributions to scholarship in his or her discipline and to the research and education goals of the University.

The deans of each of the colleges may nominate two full-time faculty members, currently active in research and teaching. In addition to a copy of the nominee's résumé, each nomination should include a two-page letter that addresses the selection criteria:

- Evidence of the nominee's commitment to his or her profession and efforts to further the University's research and scholarship mission.
- The nominee's past research accomplishments and future research potential.
- Demonstration of universal recognition as a research leader.

The vice president for Graduate Studies and Research will appoint a committee to review the nominations. The committee will include one member from each of the colleges and will make recommendations to the vice president for Graduate Studies and Research, who will select the winner.

The award will consist of a plaque and a $10,000 award placed in a discretionary research account for the recipient's use. The winner will also be recognized in the Commencement program and at the President's faculty dinner.

Nominations must be received by the vice president for Graduate Studies and Research, 416 Main Building, no later than March 11, 2005.

Research Achievement Award Winners

2000–2001	Arvind Varma
2001–2002	Eugene Ulrich
2002–2003	Maureen Hallinan
2003–2004	George Marsden

Faculty Award Nominations Sought

Established in the 1927–28 academic year by the Alumni Association, the Faculty Award singles out that faculty member who, in the opinion of his or her colleagues, has contributed outstanding service to the University of Notre Dame. Each year a selection committee, composed of prior winners and representing the colleges and the Law School, studies the recommendations submitted by former recipients of this award, the deans, and individual faculty members, and selects a winner.

Nominations must be received by Joy Vann-Hamilton, assistant provost, 300 Main Building, no later than March 11, 2005.

Reinhold Niebuhr Award Nominations Sought

Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., and Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany were the first recipients of Reinhold Niebuhr awards sponsored by friends of the Protestant theologian and author. Receiving this award in September 1972, at ceremonies at Union Theological Seminary in New York City, Father Hesburgh announced the establishment of a Reinhold Niebuhr Award at the University of Notre Dame. This award is made annually to a student, faculty member, or administrator whose life and writings promote or exemplify the area of social justice in modern life. The initial award to Father Hesburgh was $5,000. This he turned over to the Notre Dame endowment to underwrite an annual cash award of $250 for the winner of this campus honor. The selection committee includes representatives from the colleges and the Law School, Campus Ministry, Center for Social Concerns, rectors, Ladies of Notre Dame, and the student body. All members of the Notre Dame community are invited to submit recommendations for this award to Joy Vann-Hamilton, assistant provost, 300 Main Building, prior to March 11, 2005.

Reinhold Niebuhr Award Winners

Grenville Clark Award Nominations Sought

On October 20, 1978, Father Hesburgh was one of three recipients of the Grenville Clark Prize, an award given every three years by the Grenville Clark Fund at Dartmouth College. Following the procedure established when he won the Reinhold Niebuhr Award in 1972, Father Hesburgh donated the $5,000 Clark stipend to the Notre Dame endowment to underwrite a cash prize of $250 to be awarded each year. This award is made to a faculty member, administrator, or student whose volunteer activities serve to advance the cause of peace and human rights to which Grenville Clark devoted his extraordinary life of public service. The selection committee includes representatives from the colleges and Law School, Campus Ministry, Center for Social Concerns, rectors, Ladies of Notre Dame, and the student body. All members of the Notre Dame community are invited to submit recommendations for this award to Joy Vann-Hamilton, assistant provost, 300 Main Building, prior to March 11, 2005.

All members of the University Libraries' and Law Library faculty with two or more years' service are eligible. Please send letters of nomination to the Reverend Paul J. Foik Award Committee, c/o Melodie Eiteljorge, 221 Hesburgh Library, by March 11, 2005. Such letters should include reasons for considering the nominee for this award.

Foik Award Nominations Sought

The Rev. Paul J. Foik Award Committee invites nominees for the award, which is given annually to a library faculty member who has contributed significantly to library service to the Notre Dame community or to the library profession through personal scholarship or involvement in professional associations. The award is named for the Holy Cross priest who served as director of Notre Dame's library from 1912 to 1924 and was a leading figure in the library profession in the first quarter of the 20th century. It is among those announced at the President's faculty dinner in May. Previous winners, beginning with the first award in 1991, include Maureen Gleason, Robert Havlik, Joseph Huebner, Rafael Tarrago, Janis Johnston, Charlotte Ames, Dwight King
