Hall Presidents and section leaders air gripes

by Jim Graif

In an effort to "find out our mandate or to determine what we are doing wrong", Student Body President Phil McKenna and members of his cabinet met last night with about fifty hall presidents and section leaders in an open gripe session.

Through the meeting, McKenna hoped to get a general idea of what is bothering students. This will give the cabinet a basis to work from when they meet later on this month in the dorms with small groups of students. The tentative plan is to have teams of Cabinet members visit the halls between Oct. 21 and Oct. 26.

The first topic discussed was a proposed calendar change. Bill Locke, Academic Affairs Commissioner, explained that the main purpose for the change, proposed by the University-Wide Curriculum Revision Committee, is to eliminate the "lame duck" session between the end of Christmas vacation and the beginning of semester exams. He also pointed out that a 4-1-4 system had been proposed. This system would call for the first semester to end by Christmas. This would be followed by a one month period of independent study, and then the second semester which would run from February to the end of May. The system was voted down because the administration felt that it would give the students a good excuse to mis-use time.

Locke answered a question concerning 75 minute classes by explaining that the purpose of the lengthened classes would be to eliminate Saturday classes. However, many teachers on the Revision Committee felt that 75 minutes is too long a time for students to maintain proper attention.

The group also discussed the one year co-ed experimental college in Holy Cross Hall. Locke said that students would be allowed to decide what they want to learn. When asked why the site had to be Holy Cross, Locke said that it didn't have to be there, but that the location and structure of the hall made it an obvious choice.

The group also raised questions about the plans being made concerning coeducation. John Zimmerman, who is a member of the Coordinating Committee explained that things were moving slowly, as had been expected. However, a common course schedule will be available next year. He said the administrators are hesitant to make a full commitment at this time. The fact that St. Mary's does not now have a chairman of its Sociology Department may provide a test case. It is hoped that the departments of the two schools would consolidate to see if coeducation can work.

Bernie Ryan, Off-Campus Commissioner said that those who want to move off campus should send a letter to the commission after Thanksgiving containing parental permission. He explained that the reason some students had not been allowed to move off campus was that too many empty rooms would be left on campus. He hoped that the university would start a contingency fund of about $10,000 so that students who decide during the summer to move off campus would be allowed to do so.

Student Body V.P. Fred Dedrick attended the meetings of both the SLC and Hall President's Council yesterday.

SLC defers action on Hesburgh's letter

by Tom Bornholdt

The Student Life Council voted down a proposed Amendment to the new Judicial Code which would have forced them to write an alternative policy to Father Hesburgh's letter on disruptive demonstrations.

The amendment presented by Student Body Vice-President Fred Dedrick suggested that the proposed Code be revised so that no penalty or sanction could be imposed upon a university student without a hearing.

Father Hesburgh's letter of last spring states that a student can be suspended and expelled on the spot if he does not cease and desist his participation in a "disruptive" demonstration.

The proposed Code merely provides to a student, who is suspended or expelled in such a case, the right to appeal the action to the judicial system.

Dedrick argued that such a proviso was contradictory to the code's own nature. It assumes that a student was guilty in making his appeal and had to prove his innocence.

The framers of the code suggested that it was written merely to allow for the trial of students who broke existing laws on campus. Thus, it was argued, if Father Hesburgh's dictum is valid, the code need not be revised. It was obvious that Dedrick's amendment was levelled basically against the content of Father Hesburgh's letter. So, the discussion changed to debate over the validity of the letter.

Thus Mr. Phillip Faccenda, Special Assistant to the President, argued against Dedrick's amendment by defending Hesburgh's letter. He stated that there was a need for the university to be able to act quickly and effectively in emergencies. He defended Hesburgh's policy, referring to it as "the injunctive power of the presidency," which could be used as an alternative to bringing outside forces onto campus.

Various members of the Council then spoke up supporting the demonstration policy. Professor Bernard Norling declared that it was time the Administration got some needed "backbone" during demonstrations. Fr. Edgar Whelan, Director of Student Housing, supported the principle of the University's right to be able to act quickly to avert a danger to the community.

Rich Meckle, a student member of the SLC, countered that the President could use the threat of court injunction to remove demonstrators rather than have them expelled or suspended. Other members of the Council noted, however, that a President might have difficulty obtaining such an injunction in the name of the University.

Other members of the Council stated that they wished for a thorough discussion and examination of Hesburgh's letter. They felt, however, that it should not be made within the framework of amending the Judicial Code. Father Riehle emphasized the need to keep the Code in its present form to provide for appeal as long as Hesburgh's letter is still in effect.

A roll call vote was taken and the measure was defeated, 14-6. With the exception of Prof. Donald Kommers, who abstained on the vote, stating that he thought students were raising a valid point, all the administrators and faculty members present at the meeting voted against the amendment. Several pre-faced their vote with a qualifier that they would be willing to discuss Hesburgh's letter at a different time. Two students, Ron Mastriana and Guy DeSapio, joined in the vote opposing the bill, stating that they would be willing to consider supporting a feasible alternative to Hesburgh's policy when and if it is presented. They saw a need to leave the Code as it is.

Cinema 70: new year

The Cinema 70 film series this year is being co-sponsored by the Student Union Academic Commission and the Black Maria Cinema Group.

Explaining the organizational change yesterday, Student Union Academic Commissioner Pat Dowdall said that the change would prevent encroachments by the Communication Arts Department in the presentation of films.

Previously, the yearly Cinema series was sponsored by the Student-Faculty Film Society which also sponsored the profitable summer series, Dowdall explained. The first "encroachment experienced," he said, occurred when the Communication Arts Department took over the summer series.

Last spring, Dowdall continued, Cinema 69 scheduled Marat Sade, at "considerable expense." At the same time, he said, the Communication Arts Department scheduled a Horror Film Festival. This festival, he added, was also during the same week as the Contemporary Arts Festival.

David Kahn, then director of Cinema 69, attempted to cancel the Horror Film Festival by seeking a ruling from the Vice President for Academic Affairs, Rev. John Walsh, C.S.C. However, Kahn did not succeed in cancelling the Horror Film Festival. He did, however, reach a compromise as to the future scheduling of films.

According to Dowdall, Fr. Walsh stated last spring that he would be powerless to prevent future scheduling overlaps unless the Cinema series would become part of the Student Union. This condition prompted the change, Dowdall said.

"According to the by-rules," Dowdall said, "neither the faculty nor any departments can

Committee for Black Students to revise proposals for new dept.

The Committee for Black Students is scheduled to meet tonight to make the final revisions on their proposal for a Black Studies Program at Notre Dame. If the committee finalizes its proposals the program will go to other university agencies for approval.

The committee's plans are to include provisions for a Black Studies Department and facilities for the study of black culture.

The proposal is the culmination of over a year of committee work by certain members of Notre Dame's faculty and black student representatives.

The committee hopes that the program can be in full effect under a director to be hired by the university by next fall. The problem of finding a fulltime director for the program has delayed the committee.

Mr. Thomas J. Musial, secretary of the Committee for Black Students, explained the problems of hiring a director. "We are trying to find the director with the best background to fulfill the largest number of qualifications specified by the committee."

Musial explained that although there was no racial division within the committee, there were clearly a variety of opinions about what kind of program should be proposed, and what its aims and objectives should be. It is the director of the department who will make the final decision on these matters.

The Committee for Black Students is composed of six faculty members, three white and three black, and six representatives of the black students at Notre Dame.

Among the committee's recommendations will be plans for an Archive for Black Arts and Sciences, which would include the research materials for study under the new department. Films, video documentaries, artifacts, extensive telecommunications hookups, and library materials might be included in the proposals.

The committee has also been working to initiate a basic stu-

Listen to a conservative view

Dr. Russell Kirk, the author of The Conservative Mind, the most widely read and received work of political theory in this century, will speak at the University of Notre Dame in the Memorial Library Auditorium tonight at 8:00 P.M.

The topic of Dr. Kirk's lecture will be "The American University: A Conservative View."

Dr. Kirk is considered to be one of the most influential conservative thinkers. His daily syndicated column "To the Post" appears in newspapers in every state of the Union. His page on education "from the Academy" appears fortnightly in the National Review. Dr. Kirk is now editor of the University Bookman.

Dr. Kirk received his B.A. from Michigan State University, his Masters from Duke University and is the only American to hold a Doctorate of Letters degree from St. Andrew's University in Scotland. His many books include, The Political Principles of Robert A. Taft, the American Cause, Academic Freedom: An Essay in Definition, Confessions of a Bohemian Tory, and A Creature of the Twilight. In addition his articles have appeared in such diverse publications as "The New York Times", "Fortune", "Kenyon Review", "The London Mystery Magazine", and "Yale Review."

 compete moneywise with student government."

Fran Maier, director of the Black Maria Cinema Group, is director of Cinema 70. He said that this would continue to be the administrative procedure in the future.

Dowdall said that the profits from the film series would be split equally between the Student Union and the Black Maria Cinema Group. He added that the Black Maria Cinema Group will determine the film series of Cinema 70.

Highlighting this year's series are The Battle of Angiers, November 8, Haskell Wexler's Medium Cool, November 15, Roman Polansky's Cul de Sac, Godard's Weekend, Kurosava's Red Beard, and Richard Lester's How I Won the War. Dowdall said a complete listing of all films and dates will be posted within the week.

Cinema 70 has scheduled three film festivals this year. In November there will be a showing of Czech films including Closely Watched Trains, A Report on the Party and the Guests, and Lemonade Jail.

The second film festival will feature a week of American films. The final festival will present a week of films by specific directors.

Tickets for the Cinema 70 film series will go on sale this week.

G. William Domhoff, in Who Rules America? contends that "the control of America's leading universities by members of the American business aristocracy is more direct than with any other institution which they control. . . A governing class is a social upper class which owns a disproportionate amount of a country's wealth, receives a disproportionate amount of a country's income, and contributes a disproportionate number of its members to the controlling institutions and key decision-making groups of the country."

Domhoff, and also Ferdinand Lundberg in The Rich and the Super-rich, give conclusive statistical evidence that such a ruling class exists in America: that one-half to one percent of the population has effective control over the dominant sectors of the corporate system. This class has the power and influence to control corporate empires in the Third World; to fund or become Presidential candidates; to secure "defense" contracts; and to sit on the Boards of Trustees of the major universities.

For the universities fulfill a crucial function in this system: they do the research to maintain the expanding technology on which the corporate system is based, without being taxed as private research; in addition, they serve as processing plants to turn out trained managers, technicians, researchers, and bureaucrats to fill the slots in the corporate machines. How many Notre Dame men are engaged in the Search for Truth, or in learning how to Serve Others; how many are simply seeking a preparation for personal achievement and advancement?

Similarly, how many members of the Notre Dame Board of Trustees have been primarily concerned with education and research in their past careers? Only two laymen have more education-research connections than business interests; there are also the six priests from the University Administration (although Fr. Joyce has received the Air Force's highest civilian decoration for services rendered).

The other 34 Trustees represent the ruling class, i.e., their primary role is that of men who control the means of production in our society. Among them they hold the offices of president, top-level executive, or director of:

16 publications and communications corporations, including the National Broadcasting Co. and the South Bend Tribune;

17 utility and transportation corporations, including American Airlines and the Pennsylvania Railroad;

47 finance corporations, including the First Bank and Trust Co., National Bank, World Bank, Continental Insurance Co., International Finance Corp., and the First National City Bank (N.Y.); 105 other corporations, including the Detroit Steel Corp., Motorola, Montgomery Ward, Radio Corp. of America, Chemetron Corp., Rand Corp., Bendix-Westinghouse Corp., and Ingersoll-Rand Corp.

Individual examples include Edmund Stephan, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, director of five corporations and a law firm partner.

Paul Hellmuth, the contact man in the NSA-CIA scandal, is vice-president of three, and director of eight corporations, including W.R. Grace & Co. Oliver Carmichael, whose daughter's wedding reception was in Stepan Center, is also a director of W.R. Grace & Co., and two others, as well as being chairman of the board of five finance corporations and trustee of St. Mary's and two other colleges. Trustee J. Peter Grace is president of W.R. Grace & Co., and director of fourteen other corporations, including Grace Line, Kennecott Copper, Magnavox, and Brazilian Light and Power Co., Ltd.

E.J. Hanley is chairman, chief executive officer, and former president of Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp. and director of 12 more, including Mellon National Bank and Mine Safety Appliances Co., which derives part of its profits from Rhodesian holdings. Another director of the same three corporations is Trustee John T. Ryan, president and chairman of the board of Mine Safety Appliances, and director of eight other corporations, including H.J. Heinz Co. A third director of Allegheny Ludlum is Trustee Joseph A. Martino, chairman of the board of five corporations. He is a director of nineteen corporations, including Goodyear Tire and Rubber, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theaters, and the Chase Manhattan Bank, which has extensive dealings in South Africa.

Three-fourths of the Trustees thus represent a governing class with definite interests in universities like ours. But "Student representation on the Board was denied because of an incompatibility with the underlying principles on which the Board has been constituted." The Board felt that a member ought to have complete disinterest in the judgments of the Board and "should not represent any special class or group" (Observer, 10/13/69).

It is in their interests to promote the illusion that the University is a Community of Scholars engaged in the Dispassionate Search for Truth and Wisdom in a Christian Environment, and that any difficulties with them are simply the result of a Communications Problem or Generation Gap.

It is our task to dispel such myths, expose the role of the university in a class society, and struggle to make the university serve the people, rather than a system which operates to assure the private profit of a few.

dies program for black students. This would be a remedial program for those students who would have to compete academically with Notre Dame students, but who are not prepared to compete.

The new Black Studies Department would include black counsellors, and attempt to recruit black students and make scholarships and financial aid available.

Catlett resigns

Sid Catlett tendered his resignation Sunday as Vice-President of the Afro-American Society. Catlett gave the reason for his resignation being that he "can't become as fully involved as he could," due to his playing basketball.

"I have an obligation to myself, my family and many other people," Catlett explained.

"I am sympathetic to the fact that everybody should do his own thing. I just don't have the time," Catlett stated.

Art McFarland, President of the Afro-American Society had no comment on Catlett's resignation.

The hiring of Mr. Seabrooks, a black counsellor in the Freshman Year office was an outgrowth of the work of the Committee for Black Students.

Work began on a Black Studies program last fall with the appointment by Father Heshburgh of the Committee for Afro-American Students. The group held weekly meetings last year, but was unable to finalize any plans in time for the meeting of the College Council last spring.

Other delays in the formation of the Black Studies Program were encountered last Spring when some members of the committee wanted to incorporate the program into a proposal for a more broadly based Ethnic Studies Program.

A committee was formed to study this possibility, but the attempt was abortive.

The Committee for Afro-American Students became the Committee for Black Students this year. Mr. Musial and Father Ernest Bartell are the only members of the old committee who are to continue this year.

The group plans at least a weekly meeting throughout the year, and must still work on the proposals for the new Black Studies Department.

The committee submits its revised plans to Dean Crosson, who must in turn present it to the College Council and lastly the Board of Trustees before it can go into effect.

The next scheduled meeting of the College Council is October 30.

Two raise records to 2-0 in Interhall Football

by Jack Schaefer

OBSERVER Sports Writer

Grace-St. Ed's 3 Flanner 2

A classic game. Flanner led 2-0 at the half on a safety. The safety came when Grace-St. Ed's attempted a punt which Flanner blocked back through the Grace-St. Ed's end line (a la Mike McCoy). In the second half lefty

Jim Griffen directed a fine Grace-St. Ed's drive down to the 10 yard line where Flanner's defense stiffened. Tom Cullen came in and kicked a perfect 26-yard field goal to give Grace-St. Ed's the game.

Zahm 12 Farley 0

The only scoring threat in the first half came when Farley intercepted a pass and returned it to the Zahm 20. However, the interception return was nullified by a clip. In the second half Kenny Lund got off a beautiful 48-yard punt for Zahm putting Farley deep in its own territory. Farley promptly fumbled the ball back into its own end zone where Bill Cassell of Zahm fell on it for 6 points. Later in the half Zahm scored on a 1-yard plunge by Lund.

Keenan 35 Carroll 0

Keenan completely dominated the game against a much weaker Carroll team. John Grieving took a pitchout and skirted right end for 5 yards and the first Keenan TD. Grieving ran the same play for the 2 points. Kevin O'Connell took a pitchout 6 yards for the second TD. The final TD of the half came as Bob Mysliwiec threw 11 yards to Ray Donovan and a 20-0 lead. In the second half Mysliwiec threw a 22-yard screen pass to Foy as Keenan continued to roll. Joe Garagiola kicked the extra point. Keenan picked up two more as a Carroll snap from center went astray on a punt attempt and resulted in a safety. Keenan reserve QB Mark (Joe Willie) Lawrence fired 34 yards to Joe Simpson for the final score. Garagiola converted.

Dillon 10 Walsh 6

The game opened with a flurry as Walsh recovered a Dillon fumble and promptly scored on a 38-yard pass. However, the TD was disallowed due to excessive roughness and Dillon was granted a second life. Jim Dahl picked off a Walsh pass and Dillon drove down to the Walsh 1 where they fumbled back to Walsh. Dillon then forced a Walsh fumble which resulted in a safety and a 2-0 lead. In the second half Nick Peluse came up with the game's big play. Peluse intercepted a Walsh pass and made a spectacular 41-yard return down to the Walsh 4. From there Don Vicars went over for the TD and the two-point conversion. Walsh fought back behind the fine passing of Dave Porter. Two passes to elusive John Nesline and a reception by Chris Stephan brought Walsh down to the 3 where Joe DiGiovanni went over for the score. The last play of the game resulted in a brawl which cleared both benches.

Off Campus 14 Sorin 0

Off Campus led 6-0 at the half as Mike Piacentino threw a 17-yard strike to Bud Clifford against a tough Sorin defense. In the second half Off Campus blocked a Sorin punt and recovered on the Sorin 8. From there Piacentino executed a beautiful pass to Brendam Lantier for the score. Dan Valentino carried for the two points. The only real Sorin drive was halted with the help of a 15-yard bench penalty. Jim Hansen stood out in the Off Campus secondary. Throughout the game Off Campus exhibited a poised, well-drilled offense and a strong, quick defense.

Holy Cross 6 Morrissey 0

The only scoring in this rugged defensive battle occurred in the first half as Holy Cross went to the air. Craig Digilio threw 20 yards to Bill Schoen who carried the ball to the Morrissey 4 yard line. From there Digilio stepped back and rifled the ball to Schoen for the TD and what turned out to be the game. Neither team really mounted a strong threat in the second half.

The Interhall Office announced that last week's B-P-Cavanaugh game has been awarded to Cavanaugh by forfeit. Apparently B-P made use of an ineligible player. B-P had won 7-0.

NEW YORK — OK, wise guy, you STILL don't believe in Santa Claus?

Think Aladdin was a junkie? Go around telling people Peter Pan used wires?

You think Mary Poppins was just something made up by Walt Disney?

OK, smart aleck, explain the New York Mets to me.

Let me ask you something. Feel your scalp begin to prickle about the sixth inning? Did you get the feeling there was somebody in the room with you? Quickly look under the bed, did you?

What?! You don't believe in miracles?! Get outta here!

Listen! Al Weis CAN'T hit a home run in Shea Stadium. He never has. SOMEBODY wearing his number hit a home run Friday. The pitcher, who has pitched against Al Weis in the American League, gave him a look you get on a guy who has just stuck his finger in a light socket.

You remember all those hokey old Warner Bros. movies where they had "Angels in the Outfield" on the marquee? Well, the Mets had 'em in the infield, the outfield, the dugout, the front office, the bullpen, the bench, the clubhouse, the trainer's room. And behind the plate. They got more seraphs in the woodwork than the Vatican.

If I were you, I'd go down and check the locker room and see if St. Christopher is taking a shower.

The team is owned by this kind of nice, dotty old lady who goes around in floppy hats and sensible shoes. She goes home by umbrella every night. Julie Andrews gets the part if they make the Mets into a movie.

If they do, it'll be one of those midnight spook movies.

I don't know where they got this team, but I'll bet it's a cemetery.

What I'd REALLY like to do is, check those umpires. If you see one of them flying by a 20th story window, report it to the commissioner of baseball.

Look at it this way: In the top of the sixth inning, Frank Robinson gets hit by a fastball that like to give him a blood clot on the thigh. He had to go in the clubhouse to get it iced or it would have put a hole in his pants. He got the swelling down in less than a half-hour. But he didn't get first base. What he got was a strikeout.

OK. Now, we're in the bottom of the sixth and that funny little team is at bat. The one that GLOWS in the dark.

A fastball does NOT hit Cleon Jones. Jones knows this. I know this. The umpire knows this. I'm just guessing, of course, but there's no blood on the ball. But there is shoe polish. Now, who put it there is known only to God. And we're beginning to figure out whose side He's on, aren't we?

It's for sure it wasn't put there by Cleon Jones' shoes. It's the SIXTH inning, right? Now, the only guy whose shoes are still shined by the SIXTH inning is the team doctor. Cleon Jones had made two putouts and chased a few homers and singles by that inning. But, shucks. Cleon Jones scores his first run of the World Series a short time later when Donn Clendenon hits his third home run.

Guys who hit three home runs in short World Series are guys who have their pictures on the wall of the Hall of Fame. Ruth, Gehrig, to name a couple. Donn Clendenon is no banjo hitter but he has trouble hitting three home runs in a month. He has been shopped around the league like a suit that won't sell. The Mets got him in a markdown. Montreal put him in the window and the Mets picked him up. He's riding around in a new car today.

Wait a minute, don't go 'way. I'm coming to the best part.

It's the bottom of the eighth inning and Cleon Jones, whose shoes have dust all over them by now, so he can't try THAT again, hits a double. Ron Swoboda, who, like the original Mets, once couldn't catch a ball hit right at him and now he's catching ones you have to fly to, hits a double. So, the Mets take the lead. Why? Because Cleon Jones is RUNNING.

Now, on a play like that where the left fielder looked all the way as if he is going to make the catch, you DON'T run. Not unless you know something.

The Mets play like they got a look at the cards. It's like getting in a crap game on a boat when you take them on. Bring a barrel to go home in.

Blind faith is making a comeback. The broadcaster, Jim Simpson, put the right light on it when he said that, on Wednesday, the Baltimore left fielder looked up to heaven for help — and lost the ball in the sun. Joe Garagiola says that when the Vatican cut St. Nicholas adrift, the Mets picked him up on waivers.

So, leave a little something out for the Easter Bunny next year, will you, like a good fellow?

Michigan bombs, after Goshen tie

The Notre Dame Soccer Club tied and lost this past week, dropping its season record to 3-2-1.

Notre Dame and Goshen continued their spirited soccer rivalry last Wednesday and after an afternoon of pushing, shoving, and other violations there was nothing settled: the final score was knotted at 1-1. The action was so heated that two players were ejected from the match.

Goshen entered the contest with a record of 6-0-1, but the Irish took command at the start and led 1-0 at the half. The ND score came on a penalty kick by Thor Paulsen. Goshen came back in the second half on a goal by Larry Miller and the score was to remain this way despite two five-minute overtime periods.

Because of increasingly rough play in this series, the Irish may discontinue play against their Hoosier neighbors.

The Irish offense once again got off 28 shots on goal, but team captain Greg Abrams was discouraged by their accuracy. Besides Paulsen, other members of the squad who played exceptionally well were Jim Patton and freshman Jeff Noonan who substituted for one of the ejected players. Goalie Maury Bric stopped 17 Goshen shots to aid in saving the tie.

The Irish suffered their second loss of the season on Sunday in a game that the entire team could not get "up" for. The Michigan Wolverines were the culprits in this match as they rolled to a 7-1 verdict at Ann Arbor.

Notre Dame was hampered by the absence of three starting players (Paulsen, Ken Foley, and Patton). The field was in rather poor condition also but of course this was a disadvantage for both sides. The lone bright spot for the Irish came in the second half on a goal by substitute Dan Burke off of Fred Rohol's assist. Three men scored twice in leading U. of M. They were Flores, Sassich, and Taube.

Notre Dame scored on one of 12 shots. The Wolverines cashed in on 7 of 23. Maury Bric had 11 saves in the first half and Bob McAleer turned back five shots in the last half.

Next game for ND will be on Saturday versus nationally ranked Blackburn. It will be played behind the Stepan Center.

Cleveland dumped

The Notre Dame Rugby team turned in an impressive performance in their first home appearance of the season last Saturday, trouncing the Cleveland Rugby Club, 19-0, in a match played behind the Stepan Center.

Bob Monahan and John Leino tallied five points apiece in leading the potent Irish offense. Monahan ran for a try, worth three points, and made a conversion for two points, while Leino booted a penalty kick, good for three points, and also added a conversion.

Mike Paterni, Charlie Blum, and Skip Gilmartin each registered tries to complete the scoring.

The win was the Irish ruggers second in three starts.

The Notre Dame "B" team completed a sweep of the day's action by romping to their third win of the season without a setback and their 47th victory in their last 49 games, crushing the "B" squad of the Cleveland Rugby Club, 28-0.

Chuck Leggero, Ken Kern, and John Dostal were standouts for the "B" team.

The Irish swing into action again next Saturday when they travel to New Orleans to oppose Tulane University.

Anderson, Indiana's lone remaining unbeaten and untied college football team, Monday also had the individual scoring leader in hard-running Neil Rector.

And he's only a freshman!

Rector scored twice in last Saturday's 56-8 romp at Bluffton, Ohio, and added three 2 point conversions to run his season total to 54 points and a 12 point lead over his closest rival for the championship.

Tied for sixth place were Bill Barz of Notre Dame and John Rusert of Valparaiso, with 36 points apiece, both shut out last Saturday.
