THE OBSERVER

VOL. 1, NO. 1

UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1966

SOMETHINGS OLD, SOMETHINGS NEW - and The Observer King Pins huddle together to spread the ink, big bold and black over this 12 page issue. The Observer, Notre Dame's newest paper is compiled weekly in this dingy room high atop LaFortune's parlor. The men are editors, the girl is for beauty and the statue for atmosphere - all components of the Observer Volume 1 Issue 1.

Student Stress Study Slated

"What's bugging you?" That's the question being asked at Notre Dame and five other pilot schools in the Student Stress research program sponsored by the National Student Association and National Institute of Mental Health. The program, financed by a $25,000 grant from NIMH, maintains that the problems students face on the campus are more involved than bad food, lack of social functions and insufficient course planning.

The local study will be conducted by a committee of students headed by junior Gary Olney and advised by assistant professor of Sociology Robert Hassenger. Bulk of the information concerning the student pressures will come from questionnaires and personal interviews.

Student Stress is designed by the NSA as a two year program to help the University in assessing its curriculum and social guidance facilities. Student Stress research has been endorsed by University President Theodore Hesburgh, the Faculty and many concerned students.

Last week the research coordination began when Phillip Holland, NSA consultant on the project, visited the Notre Dame campus, questioned some students, spent an hour at the Senior Bar and toured South Bend "night clubs."

Cumulated data from students will be filtered to the Mental Health Headquarters where it will be analyzed and published in book form.

Several statistics collected by national survey first prodded NIMH to finance the study. The surveys revealed; nearly 1,000 college students will commit suicide this year, presumably because of the over-stress, that 60 percent of college freshman will drop out of school before they complete the first year.

A Promise, A Purpose, A Newspaper Is Born

One week after the Notre Dame publication population was decimated by the untimely but rather expected demise of the VOICE, it finds itself once again at full strength. The newest arrival is THE OBSERVER, a twelve-page weekly (for the first month of its operation, thereafter an eight page bi-weekly) journal of Notre Dame and its students, which, in the words of its editors, will do just what its name proclaims; observe, remark, notice, comment and adhere.

How the newspaper came to be in the first place is a bit more complicated than its credo. Sometime little more than a week ago Steve Feldhaus, then editor of the now-defunct Voice, met with a handful of key staffers, assessed the newspapers manifold diseases, and decreed euthanasia. As Feldhaus put it, "Because we killed the product didn't mean we were murdering the idea. There was a need for a news-oriented publication then, and there is now. We just went out and got it."

Getting it for Feldhaus meant starting from scratch -- a new name, new personnel, and most critically, a new approach. After hurried negotiations scant days before the Voice's scheduled demise, Robert Anson, former associate editor of the SCHOLASTIC, agreed to join the venture as co-editor-in-chief. According to the terms of the agreement reached between Feldhaus and Anson, the former retains complete financial control while the latter assumes responsibility every layout, news judgment and personnel. Both men will shape editorial policy.

In the days that followed the editors filled out a new masthead. Named as executive editor was W. Hudson Giles; news editor, Pat Collins; sports editor, Bob Scheuble; features editor, Michael Smith, and business manager, John Guzauskas.

Under the anxious aegis of the editors, other changes were made. Most noticeably, perhaps, is the face of THE OBSERVER. Starker, "whiter" and more simplified than its predecessor, the paper leans toward the tabloid. Its stories are crisp, often short, and always factual. Says Anson, "The look is compartmentalized; the place for everything and everything in its place thing. Quite simply, we've tried to give it direction -- in look

Legal Apts. For Off-Campusers Seen as Near

A move to increase off campus autonomy, including the legalization of apartment living, is imminent, The Observer learned today.

University and off-campus officials are expected to meet tonight to discuss the problems involved in loosening some of the strings for those students resigned to South Bend habitation. Reportedly the administration will observe the success of Norman Jeddelloh and his off-campus judiciary board before it makes a final decision on the off-campus living facilities.

Jeddelloh, a junior and former member of the Student Affairs Commission, has formulated a board for off-campus students that plan to establish rules and regulations for the some 1800 students who live in the South Bend vicinity.

Reliable sources indicate that Jeddelloh's committee has reviewed six cases involving disciplinary infractions in a manner similar to the individual hall disciplinary boards organized and operated by students and supported by the University.

Those involved feel that the move for off-campus autonomy will unify the off-campus students into what one has called "a favorable ghetto of men confined for a common purpose and directed toward a goal of community."

Part of the increased responsibility of the off-campus students will be the apartment issue. Before this year all off-campus students were restricted from living alone or in houses. Specifically they were required to live in homes of South Bend residents, homes that were approved by and registered with the Dean of Students.

Altho Dean of Students, Rev. Joseph Simons and Jeddelloh himself deny any such maneuver to allow off campus students to reside in apartments, the actions of Jeddelloh's committee and administration's new stress on student responsibility are seen as pointing to the marked change of rules for off-campus students.

If the off-campus autonomy is realized and the entailed apartment living approved it seems likely that many long-lived gripes of the off-campus students will be eliminated. Among arguments being cited:

• Whether real or imagined, the status of the off-campus is tantamount to an outcast. At the very least, many are pointing out, they ought be able to equal the status of so-called "outcasts" at other universities. Specifically, this means no restrictions on choice of living quarters.

• Since the university has been granting increasingly large chunks of self-determination to on campus students in how they live and discipline themselves, off-campus students should share in the "law."

• Enrollment has grown in recent year, more by accident of more acceptances of admission offers than by design. Nonetheless, this has had the effect of forcing more students off campus and crowding even further the already-crowded rooming house market. Accommodations now are scarce, and the prospect for the situation improving is bleak.

Many bitter off-campus students were somewhat pacified last summer when the University agreed to allow them to own and operate motor vehicles. But there are many, who think that there are rights still being denied. That, more than anything else, say the sources is for Jeddelloh's committee and the regular meetings between the University and the off-campus leaders.

opens the observer's year with a special editorial appearance. His name: Ara Parseghian, (see page 17).

Reaction among student and administration officials to plans for creating THE OBSERVER has been enthusiastic. Vice-President for Student Affairs Rev. Charles McCarragher promised full support and encouragement, as did Student Body President Jim Fish. Fish's cabinet also pledged financial support for the newspaper on a conditional basis. But, say Feldhaus and Anson, most encouraging, has been the promise of Dan Murray, editor of the newspaper's chief competitor, the SCHOLASTIC, to drive "toward greater cooperation of the two publications, both between themselves and the community they serve."

and outlook."

Part of the outlook, according to Anson and Feldhaus, will be shaped by the addition of several new features. The Newspaper Enterprise Association, has contracted with THE OBSERVER to supply national political pundits, an editorial cartoonist and the popular and incisive brush of "Berry's World." NEA features regularly appear in such newspapers as The Cleveland PRESS, The Washington DAILY NEWS and the Pittsburgh PRESS.

Book reviews by Tom Donnelly of the Washington DAILY NEWS will appear alongside the critical, cultural and humorous efforts of Notre Dame-based writers on the Observer's new feature page (see page 7).

Washington—President Nixon insisted Thursday night on a televised political broadcast that the draft agreement for a Vietnam settlement would not be signed until all remaining issues were solved. He declared that "We are going to sign the agreement when the agreement is right, not one day before—and when the agreement is right, we are going to sign without one day's delay."

Ottawa—Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau of Canada said that he had decided to let the newly elected Parliament determine the fate of his Liberal government. His announcement was a rejection of demands by the Conservative leader, Robert L. Stanfield, that he resign.

Washington—White House aides involved in President Nixon's campaign have received reports of the Secret Service, whose agents are assigned to protect Sen. George McGovern, about confidential meetings of the Democratic Presidential candidate, according to a Secret Service informant. Certain information collected by the agency reportedly has been given to the White House in violation of the agency's rules.

Cincinnati—Sen. George McGovern, his voice hoarse and cracking, campaigned doggedly through Illinois, Ohio and Michigan seeking the 72 electoral votes of those states. A sizable part of the 270 he needs to win on election day. He encountered some of the sharpest questions of his campaign on this trip.

Campus roundup

United Way nears $42,000 goal

The United Way Campaign on the Notre Dame campus is standing in the shadow of its goal, but still a long step from completion.

Chairman Edward J. Murphy, professor of law, said approximately $40,000 of the $42,000 goal needed to financially assist 30 community agencies has been pledged or forwarded to Joseph F. O'Brian, personnel director at Notre Dame. He added that several hundred pledge cards expected but not received as yet could well put the University over the top.

Faculty, staff and students who have misplaced their pledge cards and wish to contribute to the United Way Campaign may do so at the personnel office or by calling 7144.

Volunteers sought

Swimming Coach Dennis J. Stark is asking for campus volunteers, on behalf of the St. Joseph County Council for the Retarded, to put together a panel for the parents of Down's Syndrome (mongoloid) children.

Coach Stark has asked that any one at Notre Dame or St. Mary's that has a Down's Syndrome brother or sister please volunteer "to share their experiences."

"The panel will take place on Tuesday Nov. 7th, and will probably last an hour to an hour and a half.

The purpose of this panel discussion is to help parents deal with the problems that arise in their own families, that they are not aware of, or are unsure how to deal with."

"The reason I asked for student volunteers," Stark continues, "is to aid the discussion by providing distance and anonymity. These problems are of the type that parents just can't talk about comfortably with their own kids. I know my kids wouldn't feel at ease criticizing something my wife or I did."

"A similar panel was held last spring and was so well received that I was urged to plan it again."

Those willing to give up an hour of their time, to help the parents of Down's Syndrome children should call Stark at 6222 or leave a note at room 217 in the Rockne Memorial Building.

Newman to speak

The Academic Commission will sponsor a speech by Indiana Congressional candidate Don Newman in the library auditorium at 8 p.m. on Sunday, November 5th. The Republican nominee for the Third District is attempting for the second time since 1970 to unseat the Democratic incumbent John Brademas.

Candidate Newman has consistently identified himself with the policies of the Nixon Administration. The Air Force veteran strongly supports the President's handling of the Indo-China conflict as the only way to an honorable peace. He is unconditionally opposed to granting amnesty to those who have exiled themselves in order to escape the draft.

Republican candidate Newman is confident in Nixon's ability to halt inflation. He advocates reducing welfare costs by establishing work programs for those who can work.

Frolic at Logan

On Friday, November 10, members and friends of the Council for the Retarded of St. Joseph County will hold their second annual Family Fun Frolic at Logan Center, 1235 North Eddy Street.

The public is invited to attend the festival scheduled from 5:00 until 10:00 p.m. Dinner will be served from 5:00 until 7:30 p.m. in the Logan Center Cafetorium.

Gay holiday decorations, a country store, jewelry and toys are among the many items which will fill the booths in the Logan Center Gymnasium. A special display of hobbies and crafts of the employees of Logan Industries will be featured.

Entertainment for the evening will include children's games and booths such as a lollipop tree, bean bag toss, tip the cat, cake walk, fish pond, and many other activities for children and adults.

The Council for the Retarded operates both the Logan Center program for mentally retarded children and Logan Industries at 1108 North High Street. The membership of the Council represents families, professionals and interested citizens concerned with the welfare of the community's retarded children and adults.

Riehle checks OC shuttle

By Don Ruane
Executive Editor

Dean of Students Fr. James L. Riehle said Thursday that he would explore the feasibility of a shuttle system for and staffed by off campus residents as an answer to security problems.

In principle, the system would depend on off campus students with cars who are willing to shuttle other off campus residents, with special identification, to or from the campus, especially at night when the danger of assault is highest.

Some problems that are involved include finding persons willing to drive, developing an identification system, arranging schedules, and determining whether or not there should be some sort of reimbursement from those enrolled for gasoline expenses incurred by the driver.

Cooperating with Police

In the meantime, the University is cooperating with South Bend authorities to combat the security problem, which has resulted in several muggings, strong arm robberies, and a lacerated throat. According to Fr. Riehle, Security Director Arthur Pears has met with the South Bend police chief to discuss various approaches.

Last Wednesday, four teenaged youths were apprehended and turned over to juvenile authorities after they stopped two men riding bicycles and wearing ND jackets on Howard St. The youths had tire irons and radio antennas; and when one youth tried to assault one of the cyclists, the man identified himself as a policeman, and six other patrolmen nearby moved in for the arrest.

Carelessness Blamed

Fr. Riehle said that many victims are assaulted because they are careless. For example, taking shortcuts through vacant lots, or hitchhiking at three or four in the morning as did one woman campus resident who claimed she was assaulted by the person who picked her up.

Carelessness, however is not limited to off campus residents. Last week Badin residents called security after two men, who were described as having shorter hair and looking older than students, climbed the fire escape to the fourth floor and entered the building.

According to Fr. Riehle, residents heard the intruders on the fire escape, but did not call security until after they entered the building.

ACC Incident

While Notre Dame has never had a real security problem in the sense of a high incidence of robberies, assaults and burglaries; there have been isolated incidences. Two years ago an athlete was shot at as he walked across campus, and recently an Athletic and Convocation Center employee was confronted by a knife-wielding man who is thought to have gone to the ACC to use facilities reserved for students and faculty.

The latter incident may result in a system similar to that used in the Rockne Memorial where all entrances but one are locked and an ID card must be shown for entrance.

Property Crimes

There have also been crimes against property. The most recent was the totaling of several golf carts and damage to two fairways and several sandtraps by vandals who took the carts for a joyride.

Fr. Riehle agreed that the security problem should be considered by the Student Life Council.

Off Campus representative Jim Hunt said earlier this week that he would bring the issue to the council. Both expressed hope that it would not be overshadowed by efforts to find the next womens dorm.

On the campaign trail

Edward Cox hits South Bend, boosts Newman

by Marty Miller
Staff Reporter

"If you're working for Don Newman, you're working for President Nixon, because the President needs him in Congress," declared Edward Finch Cox, son-in-law of President Nixon. Cox appeared as the featured speaker of the rally for Republican Congressional candidate, Donald Newman, yesterday afternoon in the Nixon headquarters at 103 Michigan (formerly Wymans).

Cox spent extra time talking with the young people at the rally before his brief speech. "Young people are the backbone of the campaign," said Cox, "President Nixon sends 'thanks' to all of you, young and old, who have worked for him and Mr. Newman."

Cox commented on McGovern, Brademas, and other Democratic candidates "who would pull out of Viet Nam without the guaranteed release of POW's," during the first part of his speech.

"Our President is trying to get an honorable peace in Viet Nam," Cox said, citing many of Nixon's achievements during his term, including the fact that he had brought back 5,000 more troops from Viet Nam than he sent.

Cox also stressed the fact that Nixon needs men like Newman in Congress to back the President's legislation. "The Revenue Sharing Bill was the only bill authored by the President that Congress passed," he noted. Cox listed the benefits received by local legislatures because of this bill, and added, "...but Congressman Brademas (Newman's opponent) didn't vote for that bill." He cited many of the President's other bills that weren't passed by the "partisan" Congress such as the Welfare Reform Bill, "which was designed to get people off the welfare roll and onto the pay roll," the environmental bill and the Health Insurance Bill.

In a final comment Cox expressed his delight at the "overwhelming" support for Nixon throughout the country. "Even Democrats are working for the election of a Republican President." But he warned the people at the rally not to be so over confident that they feel it is not necessary to go to the polls and vote. "We need everyone's vote to really win the election," added Cox. He concluded by endorsing Governor Bowen, Congressional candidate Newman and President Nixon, "...I can't think of a better team to serve South Bend, St. Joseph County and the United States of America!"

Edward Cox graduated from Princeton in 1968 with an A.B. degree. He received his law degree from Harvard School of Law where he was a Cadet Commander of Army ROTC. He is presently a first Lieutenant in the US Army Reserves. While at Harvard, Cox worked with a study team that investigated the Federal Trade Commission under the leadership of Ralph Nader. The group came to be known as "Naders Raiders." He was married to Tricia Nixon in a White House ceremony June 12, 1972. He has worked with the Federal District Attorney for the Southern District of New York.

Cox was introduced by Congressional hopeful, Donald Newman. Mr. Newman, a well-known South Bend businessman, is running for the House of Representatives in the third district of Indiana. His opponent is democratic Congressman John Brademas. Newman stated, "I have only spent 19,000 dollars on my campaign (because that's all we have) and the other candidate (Brademas) has spent 70,000 dollars, and yet a poll taken last week shows that we're even Steven." "Mr. Newman thanked all his supporters."

Renovations at Christmas

ND trustees vote $55,000 for halls

by Andy Schilling
Staff Reporter

A Notre Dame Board of Trustees appropriation of $55,000 for hall improvements is now available and was the chief topic of discussion at the hall rectors' meeting last week.

It was announced at the meeting that funds would be granted to each hall on the basis of hall government budget requests for hall renovations.

Fr. Jerome Wilson, University Vice-President for Business Affairs, explained the procedure for obtaining an allocation. Hall rectors must approve the proposals first. Then they go to Wilson's office. When all requests are in, they will be forwarded to the Maintenance or Purchasing Departments for cost estimates.

"If the estimate is reasonable, we'll approve it and try and get the work done, hopefully in the first semester or during Christmas vacation," stated Wilson.

Wilson added that all halls have not yet submitted budget requests. Some of the proposals were actually maintenance problems, he said and will have to be taken from the hall maintenance funds, rather than from the special appropriation.

Requests range from color TV's to the refurbishing of Stanford-Keenan's lobby.

Fr. James Flannigan of the Student Affairs Office also announced that the residence halls on campus will remain open over the Thanksgiving holiday; the dorms will close on December 23 for the Christmas Vacation, and will reopen on January 12.

The rectors reached no decision at this meeting concerning the next coed residence hall on campus, since the committee designated to investigate it had nothing to report.

'Father' a female? Bishops give nod

by William Willoughby
(C) 1972 Washington Star-News

New Orleans, Nov. 2—The Episcopal House of Bishops has endorsed the principle of ordaining women to the priesthood and permitting them to be consecrated to the Episcopate of the church.

The vote yesterday was 74 to 61 with 5 abstentions. The bishops thus set the stage for a showdown on the controversial issue when the 3.5 million-member denomination holds its general convention in Louisville in October.

Approval of both houses of the denomination is required for the change to take effect.

The House of Bishops and the House of Deputies, which represents the laity, will meet separately in Louisville to decide.

The American hierarchy became the first major branch of the Anglican community, which numbers 47 million adherents around the world, to register an affirmative vote on the issues.

Last year the bishop of Hong Kong ordained two women, but there is considerable opinion in the Anglican communities that his action went beyond the canons of the church.

The American church paved the way for yesterday's step in 1970, when the general convention in Houston voted to make deacons of those who had been ordained deaconesses in the church, with all the rights of male deacons. Women still were not permitted to advance to the second order of the Anglican ministry, the priesthood.

The bishop of the diocese of Washington the Rt. Rev. William F. Creighton, and Washington suffragan bishop John Walker joined the affirmative votes, as did the coadjutor and suffragan bishops of the diocese of Virginia. The diocese of Maryland did not cast its votes.

A presentation by Bishop Walker was one of the pivotal points in the two-hour debate. The Washington suffragan said that many of the arguments advanced from the scriptures against ordination of women are similar to those raised by persons who resisted full civil rights for blacks.

There are fears among Episcopalians that if ordination for women is passed it might prove to be schismatic. Bishop Stanley Atkins of the diocese of Eau Claire, Wis., for example, told the bishops, "I cannot and will not walk down this road." There also were fears that this break from anglo-Catholic tradition could jeopardize ecumenical relations with Catholics.

Poet Ezra Pound dies at age 87, buried in Italy

(c) 1972 New York Times

Rome, Nov. 2—Ezra Pound, the American expatriate poet, will be buried tomorrow on the island of San Michele in the Venetian lagoon, reports here said today.

Pound, who came to Italy in 1958 after his release from a Washington D.C. mental hospital, had lived in Venice since 1958. He died in Venice last night at the age of 87 from an intestinal obstruction.

Reports said his body would be taken tonight to a Benedictine monastery on the island of San Giorgio across the Grand Canal where a funeral service scheduled for tomorrow will be conducted by Benedictine monks.

Igor Stravinsky, the Russian composer, and Sergei Diaghilev, founder of the Russian Ballet Company, are also buried in the San Michele cemetery, where Pound's remains will be interred in a section reserved for Protestants, the religion of his birth.

The poet's daughter, Mary, who lives near Bolzano in northern Italy with her husband, Prince Boris Rachewilz, arrived in Venice this afternoon and went to the Civilian Hospital where her father's body lay in a small mortuary.

ND will not take part in nationwide Bengali feast

Notre Dame Food Services will not participate in the National "Feast" for Bangladesh on November 15, according to Edmund Price, director of ND food services.

The "feast" is a special Bengali meal to remind people of the Bengali situation and raise funds for relief.

"It is a little bit against the policy we have had here in the past," says Price. "There is no end to charity and we shouldn't use student or university funds for charitable things," Price explained.

Paul Fairbrook, director of housing and food services at University of the Pacific, spearheads the effort to increase awareness of the Bengali situation. A letter from Karen Welz, editor of the Pacifican, U. of P's student paper alerted the Observer to the program.

"On November 15 there will be a National 'Feast' for Bangladesh. On that day, campuses all over the United States will be serving a special Bengali meal, with contributions being solicited," wrote Welz in that letter.

Price claims that the University's food service policy and charitable efforts of this nature do not mix. He suggests that students do it on an individual basis.

"I've gone through this and done a little soul searching about it. It is bad business to get mixed up with any kind of charity or emotion," says Price, who is a personal friend of Fairbrook.

According to Welz's letter the feast is sponsored by the Associated Student's of the University of the Pacific, the National Association of College and University Food Services Directors, and Concern for Bangladesh, a non-profit relief agency.

The "feast" is an outgrowth of Fairbrook's visit to Bangladesh last spring. He is attempting to establish low-cost restaurant services in Bangladesh and educate the Bengali to the basic concepts of nutrition and sanitation. Money solicited at the "feast" will go for this purpose.

Nixon victory

Callner predicts 'landslide'

by Kevin Clancy
Staff Reporter

Although all major polls still show Richard Nixon holding a commanding lead over his Democratic opponent George McGovern, the local campaign headquarters for the President, both here on campus and in South Bend, show no signs of taking things easy down the homestretch.

The approach to the remaining days apparently will be that nothing is to be taken for granted regarding the election, and so a strong effort will be made to insure the President's election, mainly centering around getting Nixon supporters out to vote.

Commenting on the important work still to be done, Bruce Callner, YVP Chairman for ND-SMC, said,

"I fully expect a nationwide landslide for Nixon, but I am a little concerned about the college voter turnout. We must make sure that every student who supports the President does in fact express his view by means of a ballot. If we can succeed in getting them out to vote, then Nixon will win easily."

He predicted that St. Joseph's County, where Nixon lost badly to Humphrey in '68, will go for the President, despite its heavy Democratic concentrations.

Members of the YVP will climax their months of work on Election Day, November 7th, when volunteers will spend the day telephoning voters so as to maximize the turnout for Nixon. Particular attention will be focused on those young voters who will be casting an absentee ballot to make sure it is mailed in time.

Callner went on to say that the current peace agreement being negotiated by the U.S. and North Vietnam should not effect the election returns. He felt that for every person who would vote for Nixon because of it, there would probably be another who thought it was simply a political trick and thus would vote for McGovern.

Callner totally discounted the possibility of political overtones to the timing behind the peace talks. Claiming that Mr. Nixon's over-all handling of the Vietnam War has been very impressive, he went on to say,

"I'm very encouraged that he's pressing for a meaningful settlement rather than a settlement before November 7th."

He saw the recent peace initiative as stemming from North Vietnam, who would like to get the best deal possible before the President is given another 4 years by the American public.

He noted that the day before Hanoi's announcement came out, the White House had officially disclaimed any kind of accomplishment or settlement.

Andy Nickle, Chairman of St. Joseph County YVP, also warned against possible over-confidence on the part of the President's followers, and refused to slow down the campaign because of the polls. Mike Callner, he foresaw a Nixon victory in St. Joseph County, emphasizing that the President has earned re-election on the basis of his record in the White House.

He considers the local precinct organization very strong. The fact that St. Joe's is a Democratic stronghold is all the more evidence of Nixon's popularity, he added.

Regarding the Observer's recent endorsement of Senator McGovern, Callner simply said he was not surprised by it. He expressed the belief that if more serious consideration of the issues had been given, if they had looked a little closer at the dangerous ramifications of the Senator's proposals, then the paper would have come out in support of President Nixon. McGovern's sincerity was unquestionable, he added, but his foolish policies and his lack of leadership ability make Nixon the clear choice, since he offers both a commendable past record and a very promising future.

Commenting on the entire campaign, Callner said he felt very pleased by the fact that by and large the young voters have not been fooled by the "McGovern myth" of romanticism, pie-in-the-sky promises which lack substance. Rather, he said, they have looked at the Nixon years in the White House and have been impressed, thereby rejecting the naivete of McGovern, as reflected in current polls.

The new SMC student center maria gallagher

Saint Mary's finally has a student center. But only time will tell its success or failure, its limitations or advantages. A great deal of time, effort, and planning has gone into the project (not to mention money), but will the students really use the facilities? There was a sizeable crowd at the opening party Halloween night, with people from both sides of the road milling about in costumes that ranged from the inventive to the outrageous. Wednesday and Thursday nights, however, saw a quiet and fairly empty building. Perhaps the weekend will prove different. It would be a shame to see Regina go the way of Notre Dame's dormant LaFortune.

Learn from Mistakes

Saint Mary's can take a lesson or two from LaFortune and its attendant merits and demerits.

What should a student center offer? LaFortune houses the Huddle, campus press, student publications, student government, cabinet and commission offices, an auditorium, a t.v. lounge, a piano (that hasn't worked for years), pool tables, lots of usable space, and a little-used Rathskellar. It's open till midnight.

Regina, on the other hand, has no equivalent to the Huddle, but four kitchens, private dinettes, and food machines. A snack shop is planned but I wonder if it's necessary—the one under the dining hall has excellent facilities and is centrally located. Two are unnecessary.

The student government and cabinet offices have moved to first floor north, along with McGovern headquarters, campus ministry, and the Blue Mantle, giving a good centralized area of student concerns. There is still more space available to private groups or clubs who would like to establish themselves there.

Regina has three televisions, one in each of the first floor lobbies and one in the north basement, none of which work too well. An answer might be just one good color television like the one in LaFortune, or (God willing) maybe even three new ones. Another suggestion would be the addition of a special antenna for better Chicago reception.

Spatial advantages

Space is parcelled out in all sizes and adapted to a variety of purposes. Partitions have been installed in the south first floor to take away the "publicness" of the lobby and offer several carrels for entertaining or study. North first floor lobby has been purposely left large and spacious to allow for dances such as the one held two weeks ago. There are large game rooms and small game rooms; a card room; a billiard room; a ping-pong room; two pianos (one that works and one that doesn't); an auditorium; a large study lounge and several classrooms, which are ideally suited to club meetings.

And for the jocks...

SMC has no Athletic and Convocation center and so many of the functions which the ACC fills for the Notre Dame student must be contained in Regina. The outdoor tennis and basketball courts have already been here for some time, but now a new addition is an exercise room in the south wing. Indoor golf and a roller skating rink are planned. Some of the more idealistic student government people have mentioned the possibility of an indoor pool, but this will probably not be in Regina.

Forget about that freshman year French class

The student center should establish itself in students' minds from the very beginning as synonymous with good times and service, rather than the infamous language courses which are also taught there. Folk concerts, movies, dances, seminars, and liturgy (Regina has a chapel) are only a few of the possibilities. A farsighted move on the part of those overseeing the student center would be to try and have its facilities incorporated in the 24-hour open lobby proposal. At present, only the south lobby is open past midnight from Sunday through Thursday, and until 2:00 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. This is rather limited, considering that most of the game rooms are in the basement. The clamor to keep LaFortune at Notre Dame open around the clock tends to underline the need.

Drawbacks

There are, however, inherent drawbacks which may limit Regina from being all that it could be. For example, unlike LaFortune, Regina also serves as a dormitory, and provision must be made for the security of the residents if the building is to be open to greater numbers of people on a much larger scale. The fact that it has areas restricted solely to women could be viewed as discrimination. And, the fact that Saint Mary's students in general spend most of the leisure time either in their own residence halls or at Notre Dame could be the decisive factor that makes or breaks the success of Regina as a real student center.

from the editor's desk:

A birthday party

Last night we had a party in The Observer office. Not much, after all there aren't many things that a six-year-old can do at a birthday party. One staff member astutely observed, however, that next year—on the seventh birthday—the paper reaches the age of reason. C'est la vie.

For the record we thought we'd skim our file of back issues and pull out the biggest story of each year of The Observer's six years.

-Vol. I No. 1: A new newspaper is born on November 3, 1966. The Observer only went to press 11 times in the 1966-67 school year. Today's front page is a flashback to a simpler time for journalism. Few papers, especially college papers, could get away with the outrageous line that captions the page one collage.

-Vol. II No. 19: In a year with many interesting stories (Scholastic editor busted; The famous Fr. Kavanaugh leaves the priesthood; Richard Rossie is elected SBP) the only neutral way to judge the top story may well be by the size of the largest headline. A two and a half inch high head proclaiming "We're No. 1" graced the front page of the birthday edition. The editors called the paper "one of the most shocking journalistic efforts in Notre Dame history." Notre Dame was not available for comment.

-Vol. III No. 83: The famous 15 minute rule is the first really substantive "story of the year." "University President Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, CSC, stated yesterday that students faculty and others who involve themselves in protest activities which disrupt normal University operations or infringe upon the rights of others will face immediate suspension, expulsion and action by civil authorities," quoth the unbylined lead.

-Vol. IV No. 122: "Krashna: Strike Now." Edging into modern history, The Observer reported as Notre Dame's first black SBP lead Notre Dame's first (and as yet unrepeated) massive strike. This time Fr. Hesburgh spoke as a sympathizer when he read a statement calling for withdrawal from Vietnam at the earliest possible date.

-Vol. V No. 97: 1971 was the first year in which the editors left behind an analysis of the year's top stories. They picked the official announcement that the University of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College would begin formal merger negotiations. It was the beginning of a continuing story that would creep up again in the next year's leads.

-Vol. VI No. 88: After a year of brutal charges and countercharges the unification died its final death on February 29, 1972. Few people think that this edition is the last in which mention of a possible merger will appear. One thing is certain, however, and it is that the events of Vol. VI are much too recent to fall into the category of history—except in the operational sense.

Birthdays are a time for stepping back and taking a more global perspective on the years that have passed. There aren't more than a handful of students still on campus who remember the early days of The Observer. What is often blotted out in starry eyed nostalgia about those days is the difference between establishing a need and fulfilling the need once it has been established.

Today few people doubt what only six years ago had to be proven every step of the way—the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's community needs a daily newspaper. But what could be forgiven of a two-year-old, even a very bright one, is usually unthinkable for a six-year-old. Such is life in the world of tunnel vision.

Letter...

Editor:

I would like to thank the Student Body and B.J. Bingle for allowing over 50 of our Little Brothers to attend the recent Notre Dame-Missouri Football Game. While the weather and outcome could have been better, the boys and I could not have been happier with the hospitality and generosity of those Notre Dame students who unselfishly donated their tickets and their time so some children from South Bend could enjoy this wonderful opportunity.

All Big Brothers from St. Joseph County are extremely grateful to the support given to our program by Father Hesburgh, Prof. James Daschbach (one of our founders), Paul Gosselin and Mike Regan and the over 50 active Notre Dame Big Brothers.

Thanks again for your generous invitation.

Letters To A Lonely God the wounded healer

rev. robert griffin

The morning mail was not really all that comforting: a picture of me, unkempt and uncombed, as the apostle of Times Square, the central picture of my book, sent me by the book's publisher; and a letter from the home office reminding me of obligations too long neglected, and of commitments freely made, but not kept. How, I wondered, in the face of the truth and those who know it, can I avoid feeling like a hypocrite? The tension between private practice and public image is a little crucifixion in itself. Later in the morning, I had an interview with a prostitute: a young girl on drugs whom friends sent with the hope of my helping her to rehabilitation. The girl, by reason of her profession, is classified as a public sinner. I, of course, am the priest who is playing the Christ-role in receiving her with mercy. By the end of our conversation, I would gladly have exchanged my kind of failure for her kind of innocence. In an interview between a priest and a prostitute, it need not be presumed that the first stone is cast by the priest. If stones had been used this morning, the priest would have been the first to bite the dust.

What this campus minister needs, you see, is another campus minister. Instead of writing letters to a lonely God, he needs to find mail, postmarked heaven, from a Trinity who says, "We are never happier." What he really needs is to give up his cluttered, dim-lighted place and go to bed at night, or else he should visit somebody else's dim-lighted place and make his confession. The minister as wounded is not of much help to anybody.

Maybe the distance between the minister and his therapy is the thing kids feel today as the obstacle that keeps them from being interested in joining the ranks of clergy. All the professional careers—lawyers, engineers, teachers—are overcrowded, with the possible exception of medicine, and the competition to get into med school is fierce beyond belief. Yet the seminaries are either closed or only half-filled. Five priests leave the ministry through death, retirement, or the exercise of other options, for every two priests being ordained. Banker-types are being hired as part-time employees, to help with the Sunday communions. Banker-types are just stuffy enough to join the stuffy ranks of the clergy in the service of the stuffy Christ whom an overstuffed Church is currently featuring. Nowhere better than in my own ministry do I see the distance between the priest as he sadly is, and the ideal as exemplified in the life of Jesus.

Where in the pale Galilean that presides, through the priest, as the central lover of our contemporary liturgies, is Christ revealed as the Lord of History? Christ slept in the place of worms to earn life for us. Nails in his hands and feet could not defeat His energies; and as a figure covered with pain and blood, He taught us what it means for a beloved Son to call God his Father. He spoke the idiom of heaven with such authority that the sea and wind and thunder, and even death itself, were cowards to His word. With no less authority, he spoke to us of the conditions of eternal life: it is the compassionate who will be called blessed by the DFather; it is the pure in heart who will see God.

There are priests—many of them—who bear the marks of the courage, grace, and authority of Christ in their own persons. Where sons and Father meet if needed for witness, they would be acquainted as victims to the hanging places, without fear, they can expel demons, and death is beaten back from life by the fierceness of their preaching. There are priests who are honest-to God sons of God, but I do not feel like one of them, not tonight. I who have written critically of others must now bear witness against myself. I know of my failures because I read about them in the morning mail. I know of my distance from Christ because I saw innocence in a prostitute's face, and she made no pretence of belonging to heaven.

The healer as wounded needs your prayers. The Church as wounded through all the wounded healers needs your service. All young girls with innocence in their faces need your love.

Even as a wounded minister I can speak with the authority of Christ on that point.

second city ranks first

by Mike Kulczycki

The Dance and Drama Series of the Cultural Arts Commission is presenting the Second City Players at 8 p.m. Saturday, November 4, at O'Laughlin Auditorium. Most "Second City" area residents may recognize them as Chicago's satirical humor troupe, but for all the strangers out there, this article is an invitation to you to attend Saturday evening's production to see the best of the "Second City". They will be performing excerpts from their last three revues, "No, No Wilmette", "The 43rd Parallel" and their current piece "Premises, Premises".

The Second City tradition began in the 1950's around a Chicagoan Paul Sills who organized the Compass Players into one of the first professional improvisational theatres in the country. Mike Nichols, Elaine May, and Shelley Berman have come from among this first group of irreverent satirists. Forced out of the Hyde Park area by urban renewal in 1959, they found roots in the Old Town-Wells Street area of Chicago's North Side. They took their present name from the title of a derisive profile of Chicago by the late A.K.J. Liebling in the New Yorker magazine, and opened to almost instant success and national attention that has continued to this day. Soon, the "Second City" became a 'must' stop for younger professionals of the acting world, somewhat indicated by their list of "alumni" such as Barbara Harris, Alan Arkin, Avery Schreiber, Joanie Rivers, David Steinberg, Peter Boyle.

Following the success of their night club activity, Second City has made appearances in London, Toronto, and New York and formed the Second City Touring Company to bring their improvisational theatre to cities outside of the Chicago area. There is even a school and workshop which trains young actors in the kind of discipline involved in Second City's presentations.

The improvisation of Second City is based on ideas suggested by Bernard Sahlins, the artistic director, its audiences, or the performers themselves, but it is developed in rehearsal similar to the legitimate play. So the sketches, using no sets and very few hand props, are well-rehearsed with occasional sidelights inspired by the audience reactions. Often an entire sketch at a performance is a takeoff on an idea suggested by the audience, an excellent way to show the development of any sketch. The subjects of the pieces are usually pointed at the hang-ups of the middle-class white liberal, but the humor is not reserved for one group alone. For example, the best number from "Premises, Premises" is a true selling of the "Women's Lib" point of view—usually taken only kidding—but here they say something inkeeping with its real feeling.

Second City Players provide excellent satire in challenging its audience to look at themselves, and then to laugh at what is seen, but only in the sense of laughing with you. They make you laugh to prove their point: you are not fully human unless you can stop, look, and most importantly laugh at yourself.

This Saturday, at 8 p.m. in O'Laughlin Auditorium, give yourself a chance to be proven why Second City Players "try harder" and perform in a style which surpasses their numerical title. Remember, patron card holders must present their patron cards at a ticket outlet or at the box office on Saturday evening to obtain the ticket for this performance. For further ticket information, please call the Cultural Arts Commission office at 283-3797.

beaumarchais' play

barbier de seville - sunday

The Departments of Modern and Classical Languages at Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, will host a production in French of Beaumarchais' "Le Barbier De Seville" performed by Le Treteau de Paris on Sunday, November 5, 1972, at 2:00 p.m. in O'Laughlin Auditorium.

The French government created and subsidizes Le Treteau de Paris so as to afford American students of the French language the opportunity to view French theatre spoken in French.

The first tour of the United States by a French professional theatre company, since Sarah Bernhardt in 1891, was in 1958 when a production of Racine's classic "Britannicus" gave thirteen performances to eleven colleges and universities across the country, and met with full houses everywhere. In 1960, a modern-dress production of Moliere's "Le Misanthrope" played on twenty-one campuses with twenty-three performances. At this point, requests were unanimous that the university tour become an annual affair. By the Spring of 1965 there was such a great demand that two separate tours were conducted. The Treteau de Paris books on an average of six performances per week on its American tours.

For French students, French dramatic literature with its rhythms, pauses, stresses, and visual nuances takes on greater life by means of performance. Third and even second year

French high school students attend the performances with ease and compromise 40 to 50 percent of the student attendance.

Drama students will find a new demonstration of techniques and tastes, quite foreign to the American stage. They are encouraged to watch the technical crew setting up to learn about the French stage construction and lighting techniques. They are also welcomed backstage after the performance by the cast.

The French Embassy in New York has received written testimony from leading American campuses commending the cultural experience Le Treteau de Paris productions afford students and members of the community. The venture has been called "one of the most encouraging enterprises undertaken in the field of Franco-American cultural relations."

Tickets are now available at $2.25 for students and $3.50 for non-students.

Still no progress in WNDU dispute; engineers hold out for demands

WNDU engineers reported Wednesday that no concrete progress was made in Tuesday's meeting between their party and station management concerning a new contract and the unionization of station engineers.

As the October 30 Observer article "WNDU Engineers Face Stalemate" analysed, little progress has been made in the half-year period since the National Labor Relations Board approved on April 24 calls from WNDU engineers to declare negotiations.

The problem isn't disappearing, though. The threat of a walkout exists among the five of WNDU's six full-time audio-visual-recording technicians who are agitating for acceptance of their contract. As yet, station management engineer Don Manning reports, has "not accepted any section of our contract verbatim."

But Manning, who has been at WNDU for 16 years, said that there is no protest of revenge implied in any plans for a walkout.

"We don't want to do it," explained Manning. "It's always bad to walk out on a first contract."

As Manning described it, any plans for a walkout are only a coming-to-terms with the reality that if the new contract's clause which limits station "supervisors" strictly to supervising and training is not passed, then the present engineers will be slowly replaced. This is what he meant when he told the Observer that "Our job is in jeopardy unless we have (our) contract."

This is a crucial point in the engineers' drive for the new agreement. Under present policy and contractual terms, men hired by the station to supervise are allowed to have run of the engineers' controls, taking their places under executive command.

Manning's new contract would limit supervisors to supervision, familiarizing themselves with the equipment and training, and would allow them to act in an engineering capacity only in times of emergency.

"It's a question of job security," said Manning. "Either this thing (supervisor clause) gets passed, or we face the prospect of being gradually let go by the station."

Engineers are also asking for workers' rights, or actually a stated delineation of obligations and responsibilities among station personnel. Supervisors interference is one of their problems. Another is that of directors.

"We've had trouble with this kind of thing for years," said Bob Boyd, with WNDU since December of 1955.

Manning agreed. "They said 'you go be a technical engineer,'" he said, "and then they tell you how to do it. We want control of audio quality, visual quality and recording quality. Engineers should do the engineering."

"An engineer is selling his talents," said Boyd. "They think they're giving us a job. We sell our talents just as much as any baseball or football player."

"We don't want any ghosts behind us" when engineers set to work on their videotaping and equipment operation, said Manning. "Some afternoons they bring in people from somewhere else to run the projectors. I wouldn't go in and draw on an artist's board. I don't know anything about the artist's job and he doesn't know anything about engineering." "We'll work along with them," said Boyd and Manning, "but we don't want them replacing us."

Another big concern to the five negotiating engineers is the length of the workday. At present, within the 18-hour-a-day operation of WNDU, each engineer works a standard ten hours after th with overtime following hours after the required ten.

WNDU's engineers would like to see overtime begin after eight hours. "The ten hour work day has been in force for several years (at WNDU), said Boyd. "Now the I.B.E.W. (International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, whose local post no. 153 is supporting the engineers) is trying to get away from that idea and back to the basic eight-hour day."

Yet another contract clause calls for advantages for senior (or ranking) engineers to receive certain privileges--for one, the guarantee that a newly-hired technician will not be paid more than one who has been with the station several years.

There are other points and counterpoints being tossed between management, mainly in the person of Michiana Telecasting executive vice president and general manager Tom Hamilton (Michiana Telecasting is the parent company of WNDU) and the engineering party, and some concessions have been made. One is that manager Hamilton has promised to begin posting five-week on-duty schedules, eliminating the previous situation in which engineers were required to be available at all "reasonable" times for extra work should the station request it.

But that promise came orally and not as the result of the acceptance of a clause in the new contract which would eliminate the engineer's responsibility to be available. Still, they aren't too pessimistic. "There's definitely been a change of attitude (on the part of the management)," said Boyd. "Before, all they'd say was no, no, no. Now, at least, they're willing to concede that we might be right on some points."

Although that's a meager score for six months of negotiations, Manning is somewhat pleased with the progress reflected in attitude and Hamilton's announcement concerning the scheduling.

"The company's beginning to bend," said Manning.

However, the outlook is for a protracted battle. "They (the management) are dragging this thing out," said Manning. "I don't really know why. I guess it's because they want to show us that they aren't going to give in to any little demand we happen to feel like making." He hopes for but doesn't expect a settlement before Christmas.

Much of the trouble lies in the fact that, should the contract be accepted, the engineers would then be unionized. "I don't see why they should get so upset," said Boyd. "Why, our television and radion announcers" achieved recognition of their unionization by the management "without much fuss."

Boyd believes that experience has proven unions to be advantageous to the running of business, mainly because unions demand laborers well as executives to hold to their agreements and perform their obligated tasks.

"Harmonious relations can be maintained between union and employer, labor and management," quoted Manning from the new contract's preliminary clauses. He added, "If we work together, (the result) will be appreciated by the public."

In other words, said Manning, "The quality of our broadcasting is bound to pick up."

"We're not zombies," said Boyd, in a general defense of demands for workers rights and recognition of membership in the union. "We all have families and live lives just like the management."

Meetings between labor and management have been held at LaFortune Student Center, the union offices, and the last in South Bend's Randall's Inn. Number nine is scheduled for this Monday at Randall's Inn.

Surprisingly, both Manning and Boyd owed that what success had been had with station management was due in some measure to the Observer article cited above.

The publicity "forced management to quit dragging this thing out," said Manning. "And we're glad the story was told anyway. We're proud of what we're doing for the station and we're happy that others know about it."

Co-exchange meals may be halted

by John Culligan
Observer Staff

According to Jim Clarke, coordinator, the Notre Dame-St. Mary's Co-Exchange Meal Ticket Program is in danger of being cancelled. The reason, as a recent survey indicates, is the lack of St. Mary's students who are willing to eat in the Notre Dame cafeterias.

The survey was taken from September 18 to October 22 and was compared to a similar survey conducted last year at approximately the same time. The survey studied the percentage of tickets used by each hall every night and the overall total number of tickets used each night.

The statistics point out a marked decrease in the number of St. Mary's participants over last year. The number of tickets being used is around 28 percent, whereas last year it was around 70 percent and about equal to the number of ND participants. If the program is to continue, Clarke said, it will depend on the students at St. Mary's. They will have to begin to participate in the program so that a fair exchange will be possible.

The survey also showed a slight decrease in the number of ND students who take part in the program. The decrease, 3 percent down from last year's output over the same time period, could be attributed to the fact that two halls did not hand out the tickets on the night assigned to their hall. Otherwise, Clarke felt, the program has been a success here at Notre Dame. The three halls that participated the most were Farley (87 percent of the tickets were given out), Sorin (82 percent), and St. Ed's (78 percent).

There is one factor, Clarke surmises, that could account for the drop of participation on the part of the St. Mary's students. The factor involved is the fact that many of last year's students transferred to Notre Dame.

So, according to Clarke, it is up to those students over at St. Mary's to get meal tickets and eat at Notre Dame's cafeterias so that a fair exchange will come about and the program continue.

WNDU management foresees no walkout

by Mike Baum
Observer Staff

Management personnel of WNDU-TV are optimistic that contract negotiations with the stations television engineers can be completed without the engineers' threatened walkout.

Contract negotiations between the engineers and station management have been running since the middle of April, and the five men involved are considering a walkout if more progress is not made.

Tom Hamilton, vice-president and general manager of the station, is optimistic that the remaining points of contention in the contract negotiations can be resolved. "Out of the total list of points, both presented by the engineers and by the station," Hamilton commented, "a good percentage, say over half, have been agreed upon."

Station management is generally reluctant to comment on individual points of the contract. "We don't want to do anything that's prejudicial to either point of view," Hamilton said.

On one issue, the engineers' request for a clause restricting supervisors from engineers' tasks except in times of emergency (a form of job security), Hamilton commented, "I was not aware that that was a bone of contention."

The long period of negotiations is not without precedent. According to Hamilton, contract negotiations with the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists (which represents "on-air" personnel) which were successfully concluded two years ago "took quite some time."

Hamilton is unsure of the effect on the station if the engineers go through with the walkout. "I don't know," he said, "we've never had an experience like that."

AMA and ABA call for reduction of pot penalties

(Reprinted from The Leaflet, the publication of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, vol. 1 no. 6.)

Both the American Medical Association and the American Bar Association have recently adopted resolutions calling for a reduction in pot penalties. While both groups balked at resolutions which totally embraced decriminalization, which had earlier been adopted by their respective expert committees, they did substantially soften their previous stands on marijuana.

Reflecting their youthful constituency, a marijuana decriminalization resolution was passed by the young lawyers

Council to head sophomore class

by Janet Longfellow
Staff Reporter

The Sophomore Class Officers have abandoned the traditional form of class government in favor of a more flexible type of Council. Former Vice-President Greg Garrison hopes that the many ideas planned for this year will attract enough enthusiasm to be successfully carried out. In a recent meeting, it was decided that a new structure would provide an atmosphere in which responsibilities could be more equally shared. Garrison claims that this,

Garrison: "If you eliminate class distinction, you eliminate the personality of a group that hall officers are not able to compensate for."

"eliminates the normal breakdown of power, in the hope to make council members easier to get to know and communicate with. So far it has worked out quite well."

The council also hopes to set up election rules and a Constitution where there are presently none. Garrison sees a definite need for class officers, explaining, "If you eliminate class distinction, you eliminate the personality of a group that hall officers are not able to compensate for."

Next weekend, November 10th or 11th, a sophomore-sponsored Coffee House is tentatively scheduled to open in the Rathskeller, the basement of LaFortune. There will be entertainment by volunteers students. With a 50 cent admission charge and free coffee. All the plans are on an experimental basis which, if successful, will be continued on weekend nights by either the Student Union or Sophomore Class, depending upon who responds. Garrison claims, "The Student Center is being wasted, and has many possibilities that should be used."

In addition, the hot-dog stand operated before the Missouri game will be set-up again for the Miami game outside the Bookstore from 10:30 to 1:15. A substantial profit was made before but much more help is needed to overcome the sophomore debt and to accumulate some capital to carry out their ideas. Anyone interested in working on the booth should contact Greg Garrison, phone: 7933.

Future ideas planned by the Sophomore Class for second semester are: a Mardi-Gras booth, a Sophomore variety show, an ice-skating party, and possibly a concert, if enough money is raised.

AMA reverses old marijuana position

section of the A.B.A. The more conservative policy-making House of Delegates endorsed a watered down version stressing the need to "overhaul excessive criminal penalties."

The A.B.A.'s section on Individual Rights and Responsibilities had put forth a resolution in favor of abolishing all criminal penalties for simple marijuana possession, directly paralleling the recommendations of the Marijuana Commission.

However, the A.B.A. voted to adopt a resolution stating "that because the individual and social costs resulting from some existing laws punishing personal use or simple possession of marijuana substantially outweigh any benefits derived, federal, state and local laws punishing personal use of simple possession of marijuana should be overhauled and present excessive criminal penalties should be eliminated."

To be sure they did not appear too sympathetic to the user, the A.B.A. resolution was amended to add that they "deplored the use of marijuana."

Likewise, the American Medical Association, which only three years ago affirmed an earlier position that marijuana was a "dangerous drug" whose legalization would "create a serious abuse problem" softened its stand on the weed considerably.

Although the House of Delegates rejected the findings of its own

Committee on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence, which urged the removal of criminal penalties for personal use, the association endorsed the following compromise resolution:

"This House of Delegates does not condone the production sales or use of marijuana. It does, however, recommend that the personal possession of insignificant amounts of that substance be considered at most a misdemeanor with commensurate penalties applied."

It also recommends its prohibition for public use; and that a plea of marijuana intoxication should not be a defense in any criminal proceeding."

However, the delegates left unchanged the wording of its alcoholism and drug abuse committee report that said there is not scientific evidence linking marijuana with physical dependence, with criminality and violence—or even with the use of harder drugs.

Although those of us involved in marijuana reform are disappointed that both the A.M.A. and A.B.A. bodies did not endorse the recommendations of the Marijuana Commission, it is clear that there are strong currents within both associations that are keenly aware of the relative harmlessness of pot and the legal injustices of jailing those who do smoke. Hopefully by next year's convention, the delegates will have become more educated about marijuana and will take a stronger stand.

Icers open with Bowling Green

by Jim Donaldson
Sports Editor

It seems too early to be thinking about the NCAA hockey tournament scheduled for next March in Boston but that's exactly what the Falcons of Bowling Green University will be doing when they meet Notre Dame's Fighting Irish in season-opening, home-and-home series this weekend.

Bowling Green is a member of the Central Collegiate Hockey Association, which has yet to win recognition from the NCAA selection committee when the national championships roll around. The Falcons feel that their only chance to prove the CCHA's brand of hockey is on a par with that of the WCHA and the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference is to beat clubs from those leagues--and Notre Dame is only the WCHA member that will play a series against Bowling Green this season.

"They must do well against WCHA teams," Irish coach Charles 'Lefty' Smith points out, "in order to merit NCAA consideration. They're really going to be 'up.' This is a key series for them."

Bowling Green will host the Irish tonight in the B.G. Ice Arena at 7:30 p.m. and the two clubs will meet again Sunday night at 7 o'clock in the Athletic and Convocation Center.

Friday night's game will be broadcast by campus radio station yards. "This past week we worked on pass defense because that's where they scored against us," Murphy said.

Due to injuries, the Irish defensive line has been thinned quite a bit. End Jay Achterhoff is nursing a sprained ankle, while Greg Szatko is out for the season with a knee injury and Larry Susko has been moved up to the varsity. Bill Arment and Frank Rutkowski will fill in at tackles while Ken Andler and Bob Sweeney will hold down the end positions. Gary Lane will be back at linebacker, alternating with Joe Pzseracki, and the secondary of Sarb, Chancey, and Zloch is still intact.

Tom Parise, Ron Goodman, Paul Linehan and Tony Brantley will be sharing the backfield duties on an offensive unit which has amassed 882 yards total offense this season. With the injury to senior Jim Roof, split end Pete Demerle was moved up to varsity and, once again, Kevin Doherty will see action at wide receiver. Doherty has 12 receptions for 138 yards, this year.

The quarterback duties will be handled by Frank Alocco, Rick Slager and Frank Troσκο. Slager is the leading passer on the squad with 14 completions in 34 attempts for 193 yards.

This afternoon is the Irish junior varsity's last home game of the season. Next week they travel to Knoxville to play with the Tennessee Volunteers. Game time today is 1:30 p.m. In case of bad weather however, the game will be played on the Astro-turf at Cartier Field at 2:30.

WSND--AM (6400) and FM (88.9), starting at 7:25

Beginning only its fourth season on the varsity level, Bowling Green has already established its reputation within the CCHA, posting a 21-10-2 record last year, and has won the respect of Notre Dame by losing just one of four games it's played the Irish in recent seasons. The teams first met in 1969-70 and Notre Dame notched a 9-3 win and salvaged a 4-4 tie. But, during the 1970-71 season, Bowling Green topped the Irish twice, 5-1 and 3-2.

"Most of our guys are well aware that we were flat when we played Bowling Green a couple of years ago and we got our tails whipped," Smith said. "We won't make that mistake again."

Bowling Green has 14 of 20 lettermen returning from a year ago, including standout center Mike Bartley, a junior who netted 37 goals and recorded 31 assists in 33 games last winter. The Falcons

ND injuries still climbing

The men who market AstroTurf claim that it will reduce football injuries--but they certainly couldn't get an endorsement from Notre Dame.

The Fighting Irish, who have been practicing for Saturday's Navy game on their new AstroTurf gridiron because of the bad weather this week, added two more ballplayers to their growing injury list Thursday.

Freshman Art Best hurt his knee and may be lost for the rest of the season while fullback John Cieszkowski suffered bad leg contusions and is a doubtful starter tomorrow afternoon.

It was also learned Thursday that tackle John Dampier, halfback Darryll Dewan, and split end Jim Roof will be sidelined this weekend. Dampier has a pulled back muscle and should be back in action soon but Dewan and Roof may not be ready to play again this fall. Dewan is having knee problems while Roof currently has his foot in a cast as a result of tearing ligaments in his ankle.

Back-up defensive tackle Greg Szatko was also lost for the remainder of the season this week because of a knee injury which required surgery.

boast two other talented forwards in wings Pete Badour, a senior, and Gerry Bradbury, a junior. Badour tallied 51 points last year on 22 goals and 29 assists and Bradbury's totals were 15-33-48. Senior defenseman Chuck Gyles (17-41-58) is another top-notch performer.

"They've got a good hockey club," Smith praised. "They're good size and very physical. They have solid goaltending (Terry Miskolczi, 3.12 goals against senior, and Don Boyd, 3.65 GAA) and scoring potential."

"Their style is similar to the pros," Smith continued. "They play a tight checking game, using one forward as a forechecker and the others to cover the wings. They do a good job of standing teams up at the blue line."

While Bowling Green has played five exhibition games prior to its "official" opener tonight, including scrimmages against teams like the Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League and Guelph of the Ontario Hockey Association, the Irish will be playing their first full-game against outside competition.

Notre Dame is at a further disadvantage this weekend because of the absence of its outstanding center, John Noble, the team's leading scorer in each of the past three seasons. Noble is side-lined by a severely bruised knee and it has not yet been determined when he will return to the lineup.

Prior to his injury, Noble had been skating between highscoring wings Eddie Bumbacco and Ian Williams and, as Smith commented, "that line was head and shoulders above the others."

"With Noble out, we have no first, second or third lines," Smith said. "We're well-balanced now but, obviously, lack some scoring punch."

Senior Ricky Cunha will be filling in for Noble this weekend while Notre Dame's other lines have co-captain Paul Regan, last year's top goal scorer, with 30, skating between Larry Israelson and D'Arcy Keating and sophomore Pat Conroy centering for junior college transfer Mike Dunphy and a vastly improved Ray DeLorenzi.

The Irish will use three sets of defensemen, putting each pair on the ice with a particular line, comprising a five-man unit. Co-captain Bill skate and Mark Steinborn will skate with Cunha line, Bill Nyrop and Steve Curry will be combined with Regan's trio and Les Larson and Ric Schafer are linked with Conroy's line.

With last year's top scorer, John Noble, out with an injury, right wing Ian Williams will have to pick up some of the scoring load this weekend as the Irish open their 1972-73 season against Bowling Green.

"By using these five-man units," Smith explained, "the players in each group get to know each other's moves. That will make for a more balanced attack and a smooth flow of play."

Notre Dame's goaltending chores will be divided this weekend between senior Chris Cathcart and junior Mark Kronholm.

"We were disappointed with our record last year," Smith stated. "We expect to make proper amends this year."

Irish, Navy battle for 46th time

by Vic Dorr

There is a quotation from Miguel Cervantes on the back cover of the Naval Academy's 1972 football guide. A brief four-liner, it speaks of the satisfaction of "vanquishing and triumphing over one's enemy."

In past seasons other quotations—perhaps from the Impossible Dream—would have been more fitting for the Middies' grid fortunes, but no longer. Academy coach Rick Forzano isn't dreaming these days, but instead is fielding a genuinely talented football team. And he has a 3-4 record and a cluster of impressive performances to back him up.

The Middies have already defeated William and Mary and Boston College, and two weeks ago they scored a surprising 21-17 upset over nationally ranked Air Force. The other side of the Navy ledger is misleading. Only one of the four defeats has been a runaway (a 35-7 decision against Michigan) and in that game Navy trailed by only one touchdown as late as the third quarter.

The other losses have come at the hands of Penn State (21-10), Syracuse (30-14) and Duke (17-16).

Notre Dame assistant coach John Murphy scouted the Middies in their game against Duke (a game Navy lost when a two-point conversion attempt went awry with 90 seconds left to play), and Murphy was impressed by what he saw.

"Navy has some capable players in the skilled positions," he said. "(Quarterback Al) Glenny can throw the football and they have an excellent receiver in (Bert) Calland. Their defensive unit did a good job of containing Duke, and I'm sure Navy will be emotionally high for us. This will give them another chance to upset a ranked team."

Glenny and Calland make up the bulk of the air game, but Forzano's squad also has a potentially dangerous ground attack. Halfbacks Cleveland Cooper and Dan Howard are averaging 6.0 and 4.3 yards a try, respectively, and fullback Andy Pease is gaining nearly five yards a carry.

"We believe we have two number-one tailbacks," said Forzano. "Cleveland gives us speed to the outside and an explosiveness once past the line of scrimmage. Dan is a durable runner who can pop for the important short yardage and break a long run if the circumstances are favorable."

The Midshipman defense, which has been suspect in past years, has been an up-and-down unit this season. After allowing only nine points to William and Mary and 21 to Penn State, Navy's "D" had trouble against Syracuse and Michigan. But the Middies, if aroused, can play good defensive football.

Against Air Force, Navy shut down the nation's fourth-ranked offense. The Falcons entered the game with a 43.8 scoring average and a 432.2 total offense average, and Navy allowed them but 17 points and 281 total yards.

"Our defense did a heck of a job," praised Forzano. "Any time you can limit an offensively-explosive team like Air Force to four first downs in a half, you are getting a superb defensive performance."

A pair of veteran seniors, tackle Mike O'Shaughnessy (6-1, 232) and linebacker Chuck Voith (6-0, 198) head up the Middle defensive platoon. A third senior, tackle Glen Nardi (6-5, 225) was injured earlier in the season and should see only limited action against the Irish. His slot will be filled by Cliff Collier, a 6-3, 212-pound sophomore.

Experience dots the Navy defense. Collier and end Tim Hardin are the only sophomore starters, and five of the eleven regulars are seniors. Fourth-year man Mike Behrent (6-1, 210) joins Voith in the linebacking corps, and Pat Virtue (5-11, 172) and Tim Broderick (5-11, 178) man two of the deep defensive slots.

Notre Dame will counter Navy's experience and potential with a team that is 5-1, and is coming off a 21-0 blanking of Texas Christian. The Irish have enjoyed easy days against Navy since 1967, but Coach Ara Parseghian isn't looking for the trend to repeat in Saturday's game.

"This is a completely different team than the one we've faced in recent years," he said. "They have some fine football players and their having upended the Air Force two weeks ago should make our players well aware of what they'll be up against. Rick Forzano has done an outstanding job this year and he has his team playing good, tough football. Just look how they stayed in the game against a strong Penn State team."

But Parseghian, while complimenting Navy, still indicated his pleasure with last week's showing by the Irish—who are now rated 12th in the nation in both polls. "Our defense, led by Greg Marx, was just superb. The offense still made a number of errors but they moved the ball well against a good defensive ball club."

Tomorrow's game will be played in Philadelphia's Veterans' Stadium, with kickoff slated for 1:30 pm (e.s.t.)

Mike Creaney

Game Week: Navy

Sunday night, the team and the coaches watched a good re-run movie—ND vs. TCU, 1972. Catchy title, eh? We were all pretty happy to watch it again though. It had been a couple of weeks since we had seen a good flick. The atmosphere was a little lighter, everyone breathed a little easier, knowing "big brother" would make a happy ending. A week's worth of tightening belt straps and emotional stress was over, and we all relaxed watched the films. Winning isn't everything, but losing isn't anything...especially when we beat ourselves. All the fun on Saturday is in the winning, and believe me, losing is no fun...for anyone. I just hope the next four games (maybe five) all have happy endings too—could cause a guy to become nostalgic.

Monday afternoon, and now we're sure that coach Parseghian saw some things on Saturday which encouraged him. Two words were written on the board which bring joy to every player's heart: NO PADS. This is really a special treat, likeable to your father's surprising you with tickets to a baseball game some summer evening (or a new Barbie doll outfit for nopercular reason, girls). After game ball and special awards, TCU is in the past, done, exactly the same way Missouri had been the Monday before. Over, but not forgotten; the pain still smarts and we remember our lesson well. There's an introduction to Navy personnel, and defensively they sound familiar; Glen Nardi, Chuck Voith, Pat Virtue. They should sound familiar. Navy returns 9 of 11 starters from last year. Super soph Cleveland Cooper is a real threat in the backfield, QBs Al Glenny and Fred Stuvek, Andy Pease and a big offensive line all aim to sink our ship.

We ran through some time-ups, defensively and offensively, looking at some new ideas and defensive fronts. Monday night we watched the Middies upset the Falcons, have a fatal third quarter against Michigan, and get nipped by Duke 17-16. Navy head coach Rick Forzano attempted a two-point conversion late in the game which failed. Navy fumbled in Duke's end zone or they would have won the game. Good football team.

Tuesday afternoon most of the levity is gone, as we settle down to work. Coaches want to look at some plays and ideas full tilt. We time-up running and passing separately, then end the two-hour and ten-minute workout with a half hour goal line scrimmage. Tuesday is a "work day," looking at possibilities for the game on Saturday, defensive alignments, practice picking up blitzes, reading coverages, and working through all our own stuff.

Somehow, I always sleep better on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Tuesday night we watch Navy again in films, concentrating on our individual positions and opponents.

Wednesday is "hump day;" once it's done, we're over the hump for the week. We've thrown out some plays and added some new ones. The finalized game plan is only a practice away, and we're put through our paces today, too. Wednesday only lasts two hours and five minutes though, so we're tapering off for the game. That night, we finalize our game plan in meetings, work out blocking difficulties and generally put the finishing touches on. All the heavy work for the week is done; all that's left is the polishing—and the game.

Thursday, some of the clowning around in the locker room returns. Casper is singing Neil Young and almost everyone is giving someone else grief. We're on the field for one hour and 20 minutes on Thursday, polishing and reviewing the game plan, brushing up on patterns and routes, assignments, audibles, formations and all that stuff. I wind up owing Coach Parseghian $100 for a bet on Bob Thomas' field goal try. It was actually good, but I forgot who was making the call. We've got a good game plan, we know what we're doing. All that's left is Navy on Saturday, when we'll get the chance to make our practice pay off on the field and on the scoreboard. We've gotten all the coaches could teach us; it's in our hands now. Let's go get us a Midi. in Philly. Sound indecent?

The Irish Eye

Football picks

Notre Dame meets Navy for the 46th consecutive year tomorrow in Philadelphia but that's not the only match-up of long-time rivals on Saturday's collegiate football schedule.

The Irish and Middies have a lengthy and exciting series history, although Notre Dame has dominated the games through the years, winning 35, losing only nine and tying one.

But two other time-honored rivalries will be renewed this weekend that figure to be of greater national interest than the N.D.-Navy game. Stanford and UCLA tangle in the Los Angeles Coliseum in what promises to be a close, hard fought affair, and, in the deep South, Ole Miss and Louisiana State knock heads in Baton Rouge. UCLA seems headed for a Pacific Eight title showdown with Southern Cal while LSU is looking ahead to its game next week with Alabama that ought to decide the Southeast Conference championship. Both Stanford and Mississippi would like to put a crimp in their rivals' title hopes.

The Nebraska-Colorado game hasn't reached "classic" status yet but, if the two teams continue to play as they have recently, such a distinction might not be long in coming. Colorado, stunned last week by Missouri, will be out to keep its slim hopes for the top spot in the Big Eight alive by knocking off Nebraska. But the Huskers have been playing with a vengeance ever since their season opening loss to UCLA.

In other top games across the land, Boston College and Syracuse meet in Chesnut Hill, Air Force and Army will stage a spirited service encounter at West Point, Michigan State seeks to derail visiting Purdue's Boilermakers, who are unbeaten in Big Ten play, and Pittsburgh battles West Virginia in the Steel City.

Here are this week's predictions:

Notre Dame over Navy—They may be playing in the City of Brotherly love but the Irish are planning to do lots of nasty things to the gentlemanly Midshipmen.

Air Force over Army—While Navy is fighting a losing battle in Philadelphia, the other two service schools meet at West Point. The aerial attack of the Falcons ought to bomb the ground-oriented Cadets.

Southern Cal over Washington State—The Trojans have one last breather before winding up against UCLA and Notre Dame.

UCLA over Stanford—If the Bruins can get by Stanford, only Southern Cal stands in the way of a Pacific Eight title.

Louisiana State over Mississippi—Playing in Baton Rouge gives the Tigers the edge they'll need to win this meeting of arch-rivals.

Oklahoma over Iowa State—Some people are saying that the Cyclones can beat Oklahoma. But they all live in Ames—and they're all wrong.

Boston College over Syracuse—B.C. would like to come back strong against the Orangemen after losses to Pittsburgh and Air Force.

Auburn over Florida—Shug Jordan's Tigers will post their second straight win over a club from the Sunshine State.

Illinois over Northwestern—The Illini can finally chalk up win number one.

Nebraska over Colorado—The Cornhuskers may well have the nation's best team—again. The Buffalos ought to give fans an indication of how good Nebraska really is.

Purdue over Michigan State—Will there be chants of "Good-bye, Duffy" wafting down from East Lansing late Saturday afternoon?

Michigan over Indiana—The Hoosiers certainly aren't good enough to stop the unbeaten Wolverine machine.

Ohio State over Minnesota—The Buckeyes only concern is Michigan on November 25th.

Missouri over Kansas State—This one seems too easy for the fired-up Tigers.

Upset of the week:

Pitt over West Virginia—The Panthers hope to catch the Mountaineers "down" after a defeat to Penn State which cost them the Lambert Trophy.

Last week: 10 of 15. 667 Season's pct. 87 of 120. 725.

Jayvees clash with MSU

by Greg Corgan

The big game may be in Philadelphia against Navy this weekend but, for JV coach Dennis Murphy and his squad, it's this afternoon in Notre Dame Stadium against Michigan State. The junior Irish will try and avenge an earlier 26-14 loss at the hands of the Spartans in East Lansing.

So far this season the Irish JV's have compiled a 1-2 record, but this is hardly an indication of the quality of the ballplayers on the junior varsity squad. Due to an unusual flurry of injuries on the varsity this season, coach Murphy's junior varsity team is never quite the same from week to week. Besides that, day to day during the week the junior varsity only has from 10 to 15 minutes a practice to work together as a unit.

At the end of the week, as varsity preparation draws to a close, the JV squad will get together for 30 or 40 minutes to prepare for the upcoming game. Coach Murphy explained, "Most of the stuff we use in games we'd put in before the season had actually gotten underway and before we started preparing for games. We just don't have enough time to make changes during the week."

This afternoon at 1:30 the junior Irish will be out for revenge. In East Lansing two weeks ago Notre Dame was in control until hurt by numerous turnovers in the second half, prompting Murphy to say, "This week we'll be out to eliminate the errors. I feel we are the better ball club and we have better personnel than they do. Up there, the game was close until we committed all those errors."

Defensively, Murphy will have his team working specifically on pass defense. At State, Spartan quarterback Steve Moerdyk threw three touchdown passes, one for 66
