First draft of guidelines presented

by Fred Graver
Staff Reporter

Dennis Etienne, student body president yesterday presented a revision of the first draft of the student manual guidelines to the Student Life Council.

The major change in the guidelines was in respect to parties in private rooms. The guidelines now would provide for gatherings in private rooms in two forms.

According to the revisions the first type of party would be, "Private in which they do not attract undue attention, by noise, commotion or numbers, and always are confined to the host's room."

The "undue noise clause" was explained by Etienne in terms of the time that the noise occurs. "There's a difference between having your stereo turned up three-quarters of the way at ten o'clock and at four in the morning," he said.

The second, and more controversial form, was stated in the new draft as a "gathering of residents and invited guests occupying adjoining rooms in which alcohol is present (and which) will conform to the above stated guidelines, (printed in yesterday's Observer), and have the consent of surrounding residents."

The first question was raised by Dean of Students John Macheca. He asked Etienne if, he had considered the ramifications of peer group pressure in a student's decision to approve a party in his area of residence.

Etienne answered that, there is very little else occurring on Saturday night that would give a student cause to object. He then added, "I haven't met many people at Notre Dame who would block a party." He said that the kind of person who would do that would probably have other problems with the people he was living with.

The question of what was meant by "adjoining rooms" also was raised. It was stated that the words were not meant to be taken literally, but that they meant rooms in the general area where traffic between them would not cause a problem.

This form of party does not apply to section parties. Members of the council stated that they felt gatherings of this size should be moved to a larger center of social activity in the hall.

The active involvement of rectors, their staffs, and the staff of the Student Affairs office in approving parties was discussed. Father Schlaver, director of student activities, commented that the guidelines were too stringent and placed too much judgment in the hands of the rector to set a consistent standard for the University. Edward Rahill told the council, "a rector knows his own hall" and that this should be enough to allow for a reasonable assessment of his hall's life.

As the time for adjournment drew near, certain student members of the council pushed for a clarification of policy for this weekend. Fr. Schlaver told them, "The students should be told 'Don't get paranoid'. The spirit of the new guidelines is present, even though they haven't been passed."

Dean Macheca elaborated that the rules for this weekend would come from the old manual, as they did last weekend. "This may be more difficult because this is a football weekend," he said. "I know it's difficult, and I know there may be exceptions."

Dr. Philip Faccenda, vice-president for student affairs commented that the crackdowns last weekend were the actions of individual halls and rectors.

The new revision now goes back to the Student Affairs office. A report on their reaction will be presented to the SLC when they meet again Monday at 4:15.

College drinking rules compared

by David Kaminski
Staff Reporter

At a time when university administrators at Notre Dame are concentrating on enforcement of party and drinking regulations, an important perspective is that of other campuses in the state of Indiana, all of which fall under the same 21 year-old drinking laws.

Indiana University conducted a survey last school year when the 18 year-old drinking law was before the Indiana General Assembly. Out of 17 colleges and universities that responded, only one, Notre Dame, stated that it allowed undergraduates to drink in their private rooms, regardless of the age of the student.

At the major state schools of Indiana, undergraduate possession or use of alcohol is entirely banned.

Associate Dean of students Virginia Rogers of Indiana University, Bloomington, states that campus drinking rule as follows:

"Possession, use, or sale of alcohol on any university property is contrary to law."

"The only places on campus where the use of alcohol is permitted," continues Rogers, "are in graduate housing, married student housing, and special housing for students 21 years or older."

Purdue University in West Lafayette also bans alcohol on campus, except in the case of graduate or married students' housing. Fraternity and sorority houses on campus also must agree to ban alcohol.

But Purdue Dean of students Steve Akers candidly doubts whether everyone always follows the rules.

The fraternities and sororities, in order to keep their status of recognition by the university, have to accept some of our rules, one of which is the ban on alcohol. It would be safe to say, however, that there is drinking in the fraternity and sorority houses," Dean Akers says.

In the dormitories on campus, enforcement of the rule is more strict. Violations are handled by hall judicial boards, with the first offense usually being a warning.

"Students very seldom go beyond the first offense," Akers says. "Either they quit or they become more cool about the situation."

"There is more drinking today than there used to be. I guess that's obvious by the society we're living in today," concludes Akers.

St. Joseph College in Rensselaer, Indiana, allows students, 21 years and older, to drink in their rooms and at social functions.

"The drinking rule at St. Joseph's doesn't present a problem," says Jerome Hughes, dean of students. The students realize it's a privilege to drink on campus and they work hard to protect it. The drinking rules are really not a cause of discontent.

The students at St. Joseph's are talking about setting up pubs on campus in event Indiana law changes to allow 18 year-old drinking. But as the law stands, those plans are still only talk.

If Indiana does change the drinking age, four of the schools surveyed by Indiana University plan to consider a change in alcohol regulations. They include Ball State University, Muncie; Tri-State College, Angola; Marian College, Indianapolis; and Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, which intends to establish two draft beer pubs on campus if the law changes.

In contrast to Indiana, Michigan is well into its second year as an 18 year-old drinking state.

At Michigan State, regulations permit drinking in the dormitories by any student. In addition, recognized clubs and organizations can sponsor social functions for members where alcohol is provided. At other social functions on campus, the custom is to "bring your own."

The University of Michigan at Ann Arbor also allows drinking in private rooms.

"In fact," says Associate Director of University Housing Robert Hughes, "halls can apply to the city for 24-hour liquor licenses and operate bars.

"There has always been drinking in the halls, whether there have been rules or not," Hughes continues. "I'm not aware that drinking rules are any problem at all here."

Future guest speakers to include McGovern and Chisholm

by John McEachin
Staff Reporter

Rep. Shirley Chisholm and Sen. George McGovern highlight the list of guest speakers for this semester sponsored by the Student Union Academic Commission (SUAC).

The New York Congresswoman's appearance, which has been re-scheduled from last spring, will be Monday Sept. 24 at 8 p.m. in Washington Hall. It will kick-off a series of lectures by celebrities and scholars who should be of special interest to the Notre Dame audience.

October marks the visits of Leonard Woodcock, president of the UAW; Warren Widener, the Socialist black mayor of Berkeley; and George Plimpton, sports enthusiast and author of Paper Lion.

McGovern, the 1972 Democratic Presidential nominee whose running mate R. Sargent Shriver spoke here last fall, is scheduled for November 11.

"Our big problem this year will be to present a quality program on a tight budget," said Ken Natale, director of the Academic Commission. Last year the commission was able to co-sponsor a number of events with various departments of the university. However, their budgets have been cut, and they probably won't be able to help much this year."

SUCA's budget, which comes from Student Union's share of the Student Activities Fee, was approximately $17,000 last year and Natale expects to receive about the same again this year. Out of this money the commission must pay speakers' fees and travel expenses. Since they will be sponsoring most of the events alone, they will need an additional source of revenue.

"We don't like to charge admission to lectures," Natale said, "because we are already using students' money to bring in the speakers. So we may show a few films that are academic in nature to raise money. Last year, for example, we showed the Satyricon.

Other events will be announced later, as arrangements with guests become final. Besides the McGovern appearance which is being co-sponsored with the Law School, the commission will co-sponsor a presentation by Bob Katz with the SMC Social Commission. Katz has been collecting information on the assassination of John Kennedy during the past decade, and has prepared a film, "Who Killed JFK?"

SUCA is currently working on plans to bring Harriet Pilpel, who is on the boards of directors of the American Civil Liberties Union, and Planned Parenthood World Population. Details are also being worked out for an academic adaptation of The Best of the First Annual New York Erotic Film Festival.

Rep. Chisholm scheduled for Sept. 24.

Gallo wine boycott organized

by Jim Donathen
Staff Reporter

"It would help the United Farm Workers' cause if pressure could be applied to Gallo Wine products (which include Spanada and Boone's Farm Wines). This corporation has repeatedly rejected the idea of free union elections. It is siding with the Teamsters against the workers Chavez represents," wrote Ernest Campbell, chairman of the N.Y. Intertaint Committee to Aid Migrant Farmworkers.

Such a boycott is being organized on campus by Dillen Sneid. Under her leadership, a boycott committee, affiliated with Campus Ministry, has been formed.

Tuesday night, her committee met with the Hall Presidents' Council to discuss the Gallo Wine situation. As a result, letters will soon be sent to the student body proposing a campus wide boycott of Gallo Wine products. Non-union lettuce, and grapes. Meetings will be held in each hall to enlist the support of concerned students.

"What we accomplish depends entirely upon the interest of the students," said Miss Sneid.

Students Body President, Dennis Etienne, stands fully in support of the boycott. "When the grape growers contracts ran out with UFW, they signed 'sweetheart' contracts with the Teamsters. Since our main purchase of grapes is wine, the Gallo boycott is the best way to effectively show our displeasure."

Administrative mix-up delays new plaids for Irish Guard

by Mike Dewey
Staff Reporter

Due to an administrative mix-up the long-awaited new plaids for Notre Dame's famous Irish Guard will not be worn by the members at Saturday's opening game with Northwestern University.

According to Father Jerome J. Wilson, C.S.C., vice-president for business affairs, the new plaids designed especially for the Guard were ordered some time ago. The initial run of material was 500 yards, and, according to Fr. Wilson, a mix-up occurred between himself and Robert O'Brien, director of the N.D. Marching Band. Apparently, Fr. Wilson authorized the manufacture of sport jackets from this run, unaware that the Guard plaids were unmade.

These jackets are now on sale in the bookstore. This is the only place in the world where the Notre Dame Plaid is available. They are on sale exclusively to students, faculty, administration and alumni of Notre Dame.

If the coats become popular, says Mr. O'Brien, additional runs of the material will be made. This will enable the Irish Guard to wear the kilt they have been anticipating for so long.

O'Brien spent many months trying to come up with an original pattern for the Guard. His final design was to be copyrighted. Although initial attempts in this action were unsuccessful, subsequent legal action secured copyright.

The Guard is captained by Frank Murnane, from River Forest, Illinois. Each member must be at least 6'2". As the band enters the stadium for its traditional pre-game salute, it will be led by the drum major, Tim Brosman. Following the high-stepping drum major will be the Guard wearing kilts and bearskin shakos. The shako is the huge hat worn by the members of the Guard.

Who's in charge of the Darkroom in the basement of the Student Center this year?

The manager of the Darkroom for this semester as well as next is Joe Raymond and you can reach him at 8003 if you have any questions concerning Darkroom use of facilities available to students.

How can I get one ticket for the Northwestern game for a friend who's dropped in on me unexpectedly?

There is no sure way to get a football ticket for the game in question. However, you might try the ACC Ticket Office which is always pretty good about helping students in a fix. If this proves to be a dead end, you might try putting up a few signs with the number of tickets you need as well as your name and number in such places as the Huddle and the Dining Halls. Lastly, you might place an ad in The Observer or attempt to find a friend who knows a good hearted football player who has an extra ticket.

What's the deal with Purdue game tickets? Has anyone set aside any for student use?

Sorry to say, the work is that there are no tickets presently available. This is the picture as drawn by both the Student Union Director and the ACC Ticket Manager. It seems that Student Union was either forgotten or not given priority status when it came to securing Purdue game tickets. When those involved finally got their signals straight, there wasn't a ticket to be had not even across the ticket counter down at Purdue. Therefore, Notre Dame's only definite supporters at the game a week from Saturday will be its honored Alumni.

Who can I talk to about tutoring? I mean the type where guys help out local kids in the evening.

Your best bet is to get in touch with either Mike Mohrman at 7887 or Mary Ann McCarthy at 5731. These two individuals can get you squared away about the tutoring program for South Bend kids. By the way, the name of the organization is The Neighborhood Study Help Program.

ND awarded grants for projects

Notre Dame has accepted $325,521 in awards for the month of August to support individual faculty projects in research as well as innovative educational programs, according to Dr. Robert E. Gordon, Notre Dame vice-president for advanced studies.

Awards for research totaled $306,711 and included:

--$119,630 from the National Institutes of Health (NIH) for a study of the genetics and reproductive biology of Aedes mosquitoes by Dr. George B. Craig, Jr., professor of biology.

--$49,800 from the National Science Foundation (NSF) for systematic and evolutionary studies of brassicaceae, a type of spring flowering plant including water cress and spring cress, by Dr. Theodore J. Crovello, associate professor of biology.

--$43,800 from NSF for a study of transport phenomena related to an artificial heart valve by R. Thomas

J. Mueller, professor of aerospace and mechanical engineering; Dr. John R. Lloyd, assistant professor of aerospace and mechanical engineering,

--$27,000 from NIH for "nuclear magnetic resonance studies of metals in kinase and related enzymes" by Dr. Thomas L. Nowak, assistant professor of chemistry.

SLC & Parties

Dennis Etienne's suggested revisions to the parties regulations that are now being discussed in the Student Life Council are a step in the right direction.

The suggestions, though they are not that substantial, nonetheless are significant and produce a little more leeway in the regulations besides presenting a less ominous tone.

Etienne's suggestions include a move to make the noise clause dependent upon the hour and a second clause that allows parties in adjoining rooms or rooms in a general area with the permissions of the residents of that area.

These seem to follow the spirit of the central staff's suggested regulations. The emphasis here is not on alcohol, but on providing the best social atmosphere within the spirit of the new rules. Students must be allowed to have the party as an outlet and to remove parties that are too big for a single room from the hall would be a real tragedy.

If a group of students from a few adjoining rooms care to have their friends to their home for some socializing, they should be allowed to do it and not be forced from their home to an alien environment. Likewise students who wish to study in their home must not be forced elsewhere. There is the importance of clearing the party with neighbors.

It is quite clear that larger parties should be removed to an area that is more suited for large gatherings.

The noise factor is also to be considered. It is implausible to think that a private gathering in someone's room could not be heard at all in the hallway. But that kind of noise would not be as offensive at 10 p.m. on a Saturday evening as it would be at 4 a.m. the next morning.

Often, the noise of a party is not as disturbing as the noise that emanates from a basketball game in the hallway or someone constructing a book case in that same hallway. Yet, we are not about to legislate against that kind of noise.

Good Suggestions

The Central staff's revisions to the student manual as they stand are extremely vague. Though good in principal, they should be explained further and Etienne's revisions seem to make them more precise.

For the Weekend

The situation for this weekend, however, is still uncertain. Schlaver said that students should not be paranoid and Macheca said that exceptions may be made. So, the implication seems to be—go ahead with your plans. But the spirit of the new regulations also brings another implication—keep it in order.

What that means, is be a little more considerate of the people in the dorm. Try and keep the noise at a minimal level and the party in some kind of order. At least that seems to be where it stands for this weekend.

An Apology In Taste

An ad which appeared in the special football weekend supplement of The Observer proved as much a surprise to the staff of the newspaper as it did to all the readers. The tasteless and offensive ad shocked us also.

The supplement was a production of Co-operative Publishing Co. in Mishawaka, the firm that prints The Observer Monday through Friday mornings. They sold the ads, prepared the copy and printed the supplement. Then the supplement was inserted into The Observer per the arrangement that was made with the firm.

Negligence on my part is The Observer's plea. I should have checked the insert before allowing it to be added to the Wednesday edition of the paper. That check was not made however and the tasteless ad was allowed to run.

The apologies of the editor and the staff of The Observer are offered to all readers. The supplement has been cancelled and will not appear before the football weekends in The Observer. The questionable ads, the quality of the insert and the worth to the students of the supplement are the reasons behind the decision.

An Open Letter

bill sohn

Richard Nixon
1600 Pennsylvania Ave.
Washington, D.C.

Dear Dick,

Over the summer, I noticed that a list of yours somehow became public. A list of enemies, that is. Al also noticed that you neglected my name. Now, Dick, I am very hurt. After all, I believe in far out radical things like honest men in Government and basic rights which belong to all men. I assure you that if I made out a list of enemies, your name would be included among the leaders.

As for Watergate and your self-proclaimed innocence. First of all, it has been proven that several men working for you in official capacities and parts of the Committee to Re-Elect the President were greatly involved in certain illegal bugging activities.

Then there is the case of the Daniel Ellsberg trial. For evidence may I quote from a Time magazine summary of the evidence heard by Senator Ervin's committee. Under the heading "Overtures to Judge Byrne," it reads:

"Undisputed facts." Shortly before the Ellsberg case was expected to go to the jury, Nixon told Erlichmann to find out whether Judge Byrne would be interested in a possible appointment as F.B.I. director. Erlichmann twice met briefly in California with the judge to discuss this. Nixon also briefly met him.

"Weight of evidence." Any approach to a sitting judge by Government officials who have an obvious interest in wanting the Government's case to prevail is wholly improper. If a private citizen made a similar move, he could be prosecuted.

"What did Nixon know?" He ordered the contact made.

Well, what do you have to say to that, Dick? Don Corleone couldn't have done a better job. It is obvious that you are in the wrong line of work.

It is my understanding that men who break the law are called criminals. One of your predecessors, John F. Kennedy, brought the best men in the country to help run the government. Learn from history.

When I was a young boy, Jimminy Cricket told me, "Let your conscience be your guide." What are you going to try him for? Has his psychiatrist's office been burglarized?

I see one bright spot in the mess. The eavesdroppers were caught. Sen. Ervin's committee is looking for the truth. Justice may be an old girl but she is not dead yet.

On the tapes, may I use a bit of logic to make my point:

1. If the tapes would vindicate you, you would have released them long before anyone knew about them.
2. If they would not hurt you, you would not mind releasing them to Judge Sirica.

As for your hiding behind "Executive privilege", may I quote to you the words of a Republican president, Theodore Roosevelt, who said "No man is above the law, while no man is below it."

As a student who is considering trying to get into law school, you have done much to dissuade me from it. However, I still believe in our legal system, and still intend to work within it as Archibald Cox is now doing.

Yours in Notre Dame,
William S. Sohn

New Alcohol Commissioner named; experience cited

by Jack D'Aurora
Staff Reporter

"Since alcohol is a major concern on our campus, student government deemed it necessary to appoint a person as their expert in this field," stated Jim Roe, student union administration assistant.

Thus, after enjoying a Harvey Wallbanger mixed by Fred Moreno last Monday night, he appointed Moreno to the unprecedented office of Alcoholic Beverage Commissioner.

On the duties of this commission Roe commented, "I'm not sure what they will be, but hopefully he can be incorporated into the viable structure of the student government. Anyway, he'd make a great bartender."

Roe added, "Some people don't know how to drink. Perhaps Fred can introduce drinking as a type of art."

Roe commented, "It's surprising we haven't appointed a commissioner earlier. Obviously a need has existed for a person of such expertise, especially on our campus."

"I feel its a very important office," said Moreno. And besides, it will look great on my records for law school." He feels his credentials for alcoholic beverage commissioner are adequate, "having extensive background in the subject dating back to elementary school."

Moreno is serious about his appointment "I think it is a most appropriate time for his office to be instituted in light of these times of boorish drunken behavior," he said. "I hope my appointment will offer me the chance to work closely with the administration in order to promote the proper attitudes and uses of alcohol."

The new alcoholic beverage commissioner promises to help the university "turn over a new leaf" with regard to campus drinking.

Moreno: "... promote the proper attitudes and uses of alcohol"

ND Students appointed to Engineering Council for first time

by Gregg B. Bangs
Staff Reporter

The College of Engineering celebrates its centennial this year, and for the first time Engineering students will have a voice on the Engineering College Council.

The Engineering College Council is an advisory group to Dean Joseph Hogan. It is made up of the three Engineering College Deans, the heads of numerous engineering departments, a few at-large faculty members and two student representatives. Last year, there were students on the committee for the last two meetings, but this will be the first full year of participation by student representatives.

Mary Ann O'Conner, a Notre Dame senior majoring in metallurgical engineering, is one representative. Miss O'Conner is also President of the Joint Engineering Council, an organization composed of fourteen students which represents separate honor fraternities and professional societies. Other officers of the J.E.C. are: Matt Cavanaugh-vice-president, Jim Pfister-treasurer, and Todd Gattuso-secretary.

According to Miss O'Conner, the purpose of the Joint Engineering Council "is to coordinate activities for the whole Engineering College, review advisors, put out newsletters and choose one student to work with the President of the J.E.C. on the Engineering College Council."

O'Conner said that any junior, senior or graduate student (who has attended Notre Dame for at least one year) who is interested in the one remaining position must submit his (her) name and a resume to the Dean's secretary by September 21. The student representative will be chosen on the basis of his resume and perhaps a personal interview.

Once they join the Engineering College Council, Miss O'Conner and the other student representatives will help advise Dean Hogan on the curriculum of the Engineering College. Miss O'Conner thinks it's a good idea to have students on the council "because students, after all, take these courses and their recommendations to the committee would be coming from direct experience."

Badin elects new president; keeps old traditions & parties

by Jeanne Murphy
Staff Reporter

Badin Hall elected its second female president in a run-off election held yesterday. Laura Dodge, a sophomore sociology major, served as interim president since last May and won this office officially in an election with two other candidates yesterday.

The newly elected president served as chairman for Mardi Gras and An Tostal last year.

"I plan to carry on the traditions we have all ready established here and hopefully begin new projects," she replied. Dodge intends to continue hall parties stressing "social interaction" as a party's major importance. She disagrees with some of the party regulations, but explained that the hallways in Badin are well-suited for social gatherings and should be made legal.

In keeping with the Notre Dame athletic spirit, Badin's new president is forming basketball, football and volleyball teams. She is looking into the possibilities of renting a pin-ball machine and a juke box for the lounge with time restrictions on each.

Miss Dodge is tentatively investigating the provisions for a coffee hour featuring guest speakers from different sections of the University. She hopes these "informative parties" prove successful throughout the coming year.

Badin Hall is working under a new constitution written by last year's officers. The hall government calls for a president, seven section leaders, and four members from the Hall on the Steering Committee. The Steering Committee consists of four phases: social projects, communications, finance, and special projects.

The members of the hall government will work with the president in determining Badin's role on campus, and improving its social, cultural, and athletic activities.

Goldwater discusses dilemma

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sen. Barry Goldwater said Wednesday he believed Vice-President Agnew "would seriously consider resignation if he were indicted."

The Arizona Republican, who said he considers himself a "close friend" of the vice-president, also squelched reports that he was the "senior Republican" who said Agnew would resign, possibly this week.

"I don't think the vice-president should resign," Goldwater said. "Let them (the grand jury) bring out charges ... then we'll see."

However, Goldwater said, "I would suspect that the Vice President would seriously consider resignation, if he were indicted."

Asked by newsmen if he "detected" efforts by the White House to "ease Agnew out", Goldwater said, "I don't detect this but if I wanted to write a scenario involving a way to get rid of any man in public life ... I think this present scenario would lend itself to that."

Speaking to newsmen before addressing a monthly meeting of the Wings Club, Goldwater said that if Agnew did step down, he would favor California Gov. Ronald Reagan to fill the post.

He quickly added however, "you have to discount Reagan... (he has) told me on several occasions he does not want another elective office —but that can change. Knowing Ronnie, he changes like the California winds."

He said he would not oppose either former Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally or New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller as possible successors to Agnew.

"I think Mr. Connally would be a very fine choice; Rockefeller is moving to the right so that he's much more acceptable than he was at one time. And he's very, very strong on foreign policy, which I think is a most important attribute."

Citing his age, Goldwater ruled himself out as a possible successor, saying that any vice-presidential choice should be a likely Presidential candidate for 1976.

A short time later, Connally, who was in New York to address the Jamaica Industrial Development Corp., repeatedly refused to answer newsmen's questions about the Agnew affair, or the possibility of his succeeding the vice president.

"I'm not compelled to respond at any particular moment in time to every issue in the world, and I think it's basically unfair for people to go around commenting about something they don't know anything about," Connally said.

SMC encourages British culture

In order to encourage and direct students interested in various aspects of British culture, a certificate in British Studies will be awarded upon the successful completion of fifteen semester credit hours in this interdisciplinary program at Saint Mary's.

Students will concentrate upon two of the following periods in British history: Medieval Britain, the Tudor Age, the Stuart Age, the Hanoverian Age, the Victorian Age, and Modern Britain. Program director Anthony Black, Professor of History, will be responsible for arranging individual research or study programs within the two periods chosen by the student, and coordinating the participant's program with the various participating departments. The program will vary with the individual interests of the student.

Required courses in the program are History 333 and 334 (6 credits), as well as six credits from among any of the following English courses: 301, 302, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 313, 314, 351, 357, 358, 359, 395, and 396. ## Who is Anne Green, anyway??

Remember Freshman year? Remember the shaving cream on the telephone? Remember switching the Fredy's door with the bathroom door?

Practical jokes have long been a tradition on college campuses. Everything from rebuilding a Volkswagen in someone's single room to pouring a block of solid concrete in front of someone's door have sprung from the imaginations of college students.

Yesterday, the ultimate in practical jokes was executed. The name and face of Anne Green, a junior at Saint Mary's, appeared 500 times all over the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's campuses. Posters were also seen at Nickies and "The Library."

When asked if she was having a happy day Anne Green said, "I'm having a lousy day."

Apparently engaged in a long, friendly feud, Anne and her former Le Mans Tower roommates have tried to out-do each others' practical jokes. Anne cited a firehose fight as typical of their amusements these past three years.

Commenting on what she thought was the reason for the joke, Anne said, "I attribute it (the practical joke) to the unhappy childhoods of my friends." She went on to say, "But I'm planning something really big to retaliate."

The posters were put up by a group of Dillon Hall men. When asked for a specific reason for the joke they admitted their friendship for Anne.

The leader's comment for publication was, "Anne Green is a warm and friendly person. I merely wanted to share this feeling with the rest of the campus. As a member of the recently formed committee for more meaningful student life, I hope to continue to spread good cheer and stamp out boorish behavior throughout the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's community."

HII I'M ANNE GREEN.
HAVE A HAPPY DAY!

They say you can't con a con-artist and you can't fool a prankster, but some people have to keep trying. How big this feud will become is anyone's guess.

Take this incident as a warning, however. Next time you call someone up at 3 a.m. to find out what time it is, be prepared to wake up finding your room missing.

SMC Coffeehouse re-opens

by Pattie Cooney
Staff Reporter

St. Mary's coffeehouse re-opens at 9:30 p.m. this Friday night. "We're anticipating a big post-pep rally crowd," commented Kathy Carrigan, chairman of entertainment.

The coffeehouse is intended to provide an on-campus opportunity for socializing and entertainment each weekend. Initiated last March the coffeehouse "enjoyed great success averaging 300 people," said Carrigan.

The coffeehouse was originally proposed by Campus Ministry, and Father Roger Cormier serves in an advisory capacity. However complete operation and maintenance is conducted by SMC students.

Performing for patrons on Friday will be Cindy Corsaro at 9:30, and the folk group Slow at 10:30. In addition one of last year's favorites the Pete Snake group will perform at 11:30 p.m. and Tom Faught at 12:30.

Saga, St. Mary's food service organization will be dispensing submarine sandwiches at 40 cents apiece and Paul Bunyan chocolate chip cookies at 8 cents. Student government at St. Mary's has donated $500 and Saga donated $100 to the program. Future plans call for the purchase of a sound system. "We are anticipating the same success as last year as there is need on campus for a place providing an informal atmosphere for conversation," explained Carrigan.

Carrigan, Jamie Massa, chairman of operations and Mary Anne Gillespie, chairman of decorations will hostess each coffeehouse.

The coffeehouse is located in the lower level of the SMC dining hall. All students, faculty and administrators are invited attend every Friday from 9:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m.

Anyone interested in entertaining or assisting in planning of activities can call Carrigan at 5168.

Copernicus display at library

An exhibit of significant books and other library materials relating to the Polish scientist Nicolaus Copernicus is on display at the Notre Dame Library through the first portion of November.

The exhibit, celebrating the 500th anniversary of the birth of Copernicus, is housed in the display cases of the library's main concourse. Included in the exhibition are facsimiles of Copernicus' manuscripts and various editions of his works as well as those of his immediate scientist successors up to Sir Isaac Newton.

One display case also is devoted to Copernicus' native city, Cracow. On exhibit are various photographs of sights familiar to the priest-scientist who postulated the theory that the sun, and not the earth, was the center of the solar system.

Another special feature of the showing is a display of publications by Dr. Boleslaw Szczesniak, Notre Dame professor emeritus of history, concerning the impact of the Copernican theory on the Far East.

'Big Four' ready for Northwestern

by Greg Corgan

Lightning never strikes twice in the same place. Well, at least it's not supposed to.

The odds of finding a freshman defensive lineman the likes of Steve Niehaus are high indeed. But the chances of finding two more the next year are virtually nonexistent. Or so it seems.

However, defensive line coach Joe Yonto has apparently beaten these odds because he has a couple of highly-talented freshmen this year who have made people sit up and take notice all fall long. The two are Ross Browner, who will start at left defensive end, and Willie Fry who is back-up to Jim Stock at right end.

"They have quick feet and excellent acceleration," noted Coach Yonto, "but more importantly, their intensity and desire to learn is tremendous. No matter who tells them what to do, they listen and do it."

Yonto went on to talk about Browner. "Ross looked good in drills and in practice this fall and we have high hopes for him. Looking back on an earlier scrimmage Yonto added, "The day Browner blocked a punt in a scrimmage he played an excellent ball game, and that's the day he was elevated to first team." Browner has been there ever since.

It's going to take more than one good performance to stay on the first team this year though, because coach Yonto is deep with solid people. "We have a real competition for the four line positions. Browner, (Mike) Fanning, Niehaus, and Stock will start but Fry, George Hayduk, and Kevin Nosbusch are all capable of playing well and have done so this fall. This means there is a battle all the time for that number one position and that tends to make everyone play just that much better."

Yonto singled out Fanning and Hayduk. "Mike has really improved. He's worked real hard and had a good fall so far. And Hayduk, even though George is second team he has stuck to it and plugged away and you have to give him credit for that. He's still right behind that number one group and pushing them all the time."

That number one group of "big four" as coach Yonto likes to call it has been a definite bright spot this fall. "I'm very well pleased with the development in the line. We're trying to play together and there's a lot of cohesiveness in the front four. It's a unit and it works it as a unit."

With Stock (6-3, 210), Fanning (6-6, 254), Browner (6-3, 218), and Niehaus (6-5, 265), starting at the defensive line positions, the Irish have substituted speed for the kind of size that has been characteristic of the Notre Dame front four in recent years. "We seem to be quicker than last year," Yonto offered, "but only time will tell. We've got to find out under game conditions. As far as experience goes we're still a little green and so some mistakes will be made. But we're a little quicker so that means we'll make quicker mistakes."

The switch from the standard 4-4 defense of past years to a pro-type 4-3 this season will also have an effect on the "big four" as Coach Yonto pointed out. "The 4-3 will put more versatility into the defense and as a result we'll get a better pass rush. That way there'll be more confusion in the opponent's backfield. Also, we'll be able to expose them to everything."

About the pass rush Yonto elaborated, "last year the weak spot was definitely the pass rush. We've worked on it this year and although it's a little premature to say anything I think we have improved. We're trying to get in there quicker and force quicker errors. It involves the whole unit, though, because we just don't concentrate on one part of the defense, we believe in total defense."

Although the Irish did so more in the spring than this fall, the defense will occasionally go to a five-man line. In such a case linebacker Gary Potempa will move up to nose-guard. Yonto added that this would not be a regular feature but will be used just to "keep 'em guessing."

When speaking of the group of defensive linemen with which he works coach Yonto likes the term

Oakland downs ND booters, 4-0

by Hal Munger

The Fighting Irish soccer club lost a disappointing game to Oakland in Dearborn, Michigan Tuesday. Oakland shut out N.D., 4-0.

Things never went right for the Irish and the Oakland varsity capitalized on the mistakes. The game was almost forfeited as Notre Dame scarcely had enough players to put on the field at game time after the 4½ hour drive from South Bend. No warm-ups were allowed for ND and things didn't get any better as the game progressed. The Irish defense was weak but the offense was just as inept.

Coach Arno Zoske said it was a team loss. He looks ahead to the next contest, a battle with always tough Goshen of the Mid-Central Conference. Starting time is 7:00 p.m. on the artificial surface of Cartier Field Tuesday.

Goshen went undefeated in 11 games last year, won their conference, and lost their only game in the NCAA post-season soccer tournaments. Many men were lost from that team but Goshen has acquired some junior college transfers as replacements.

Because of the proximity of Goshen to South Bend, the rivalry is fierce. Zoske foresees a "real good game."

It is a "must" game for the Irish. Zoske states "We must find out where we stand—find out what kind of team we really have."

"solid." "Our boys are not only solid as players but also as people. I think that a lot of people overlook things like that when they're talking about football players. They think the term "jock" applies to all athletes and it isn't fair. The boys I work with are good solid people donating a lot of extra time."

Hopefully that extra time will pay off this Saturday when the Irish open their 85th season of collegiate football against Northwestern. Yonto sees this as not another "typical" home opener. "NU has a veteran club, with a new coach, and some fine backs in Trimble, Mitch Anderson, and Greg Boykin. We'll definitely have our hands full."

The Irish "big four" shouldn't have their hands quite as full if they follow the Joe Yonto philosophy: "get there firstest with the mostest."

Tunnel turmoil

Call it, if you will, a tradition.

It began one cold November afternoon in 1970, born of the same kind of emotion which produced the Vikings and necessitated the Meat Squad. Unbeaten Notre Dame was playing once-beaten Louisiana State in a chilling, heart-stopping football game.

There was no score at the end of the first thirty minutes of play, and even a season-concluding halftime performance by the Notre Dame band failed to lighten the tense atmosphere.

Then, just moments before the teams returned to the field for the second half, students began to trickle out of sections 31 and 32 and onto the playing surface. The trickle became a flow, and the flow a torrent, and the assembly moved, instinctively, to the ramp behind the stadium's north goal posts, where the students formed a tunnel, three and four persons deep in some places, to welcome the team back for the third period.

Like a huge, serpentine creature, the tunnel wound and coiled itself forty yards to midfield, and then another twenty yards back to the Irish bench. Spurred on, perhaps, by those sixty yards of human hysteria, Notre Dame blanked LSU for the final 30 minutes of the contest. And the Irish won the game, 3-0, when placekicker Scott Hempel spun a chip-shot field goal through the uprights with 2:54 left to play.

The present tradition of half-time tunnel-construction found its beginning in late November of 1970, but that tradition, like any other, has changed quite a bit in three years' time.

No longer is the timing perfect. The exodus onto the field now begins immediately, almost before the last coaches, players, and managers have disappeared beneath the stadium's north stands. And the tunnel still isn't formed until the last minute or so of the halftime break—which gives those students who mob the field a captive audience of 59,075, a vacant, more-or-less grassy stage, and 13 minutes in which to perform.

During the final two minutes of each home-game halftime, the tradition is renewed. And that part of the tradition—that of the tunnel itself—is one which can't really be faulted. Not in the eyes, at least, of several of Ara Parseghian's players.

"I think it's a good thing," said offensive captain Frank Pomarico, choosing his words carefully. "I don't think it's the greatest thing, and I'm not really overwhelmed by it. But it is a show of student participation, and I'll agree with it as long as it's for the purpose of getting the team 'up.'"

"Still, I know it's a pain for some of the guys. They get hit pretty hard when we come through there, especially up around the helmet."

"Sure," agreed junior quarterback Tom Clements. "You get slapped around a little, but I've never gotten hit on the helmet. Just slapped on the back. And that doesn't bother me at all."

"It makes no difference to me, either," said linebacker Sherm Smith. "It shows spirit, and I think that's one of the most important aspects of the game. The hassle comes when people start hitting you on the head, and throwing things onto the field. That kind of stuff just doesn't go."

What Pomarico, Clements, and Smith have seen is the "two-minute drill" that has been perfected during two seasons of half-time carousing. What they haven't seen is smoke bombs triggered at midfield, students racing in and out of the band's formations, and the annual—though frayed and worn out—appearances of the Beerslayer.

At first, the tunnel was a welcome, spirited half-time interlude. It has still retained some of its original charm, but much of the novelty has been lost over the course of the past two seasons. The signs, the stunts, the shenanigans have all been used several times before, and all belong to past seasons.

Past seasons will be out of place on Saturday, when the Fighting Irish open their '73 campaign against Johnny Pont's Wildcats. And that will make the half-time antics of past seasons—including Beerslayer, smoke bombs, and even tunnels—also out of place.

SMC tennis team formed

by Mindie Bright

St. Mary's varsity tennis team held its final eliminations Saturday. Thirty-five women competed in the tourney, and coach Juan Minigault feels that "the fourteen best tennis players at St. Mary's College are on the team and that it's a good nucleus towards building strong teams in the future."

This year's players are Linda Conner and Meurisse Keenan, co-captains, and Sarah Bartzén Kathy Beaulieu, Chris Carpenter, Sheila Finneran, Elly Heil, Ann Houser, Missy Manley, Karen Midock, Sally Obringer, Shevawn O'Connor, Mary Wolf.

The team amanagers are Ellen Malvezzi and Judy Mardoian.

St. Mary's netters are predominantly sophomores and freshmen, which, according to coach Manigault, "gives the team a good core for the next three years and adding better players each succeeding year."

The team is seeking membership in the Woman's Tennis Athletic Association and hopes to play in an invitational tournament at Purdue about October 12.

Plans for the future include a series of ten to fifteen scheduled matches for the fall and spring and securing indoor court space during the winter. Also, the team is interested in building tennis at St. Mary's and expanding to obtain warm-ups and other basic tennis equipment. The squad receives the backing of Dr. Henry, who is, according to the coach, interested in making St. Mary's College a power in women's tennis.

The school is also undergoing improvements in the physical plant, not only with the addition of the new pool in the courtyard of Regina South, but also with the resurfacing of the tennis courts. St. Mary's is also striving to field prospective teams in several other competitive sports.

Karen Midock, a member of the St. Mary's tennis team, hits a forehand return.
