

H-man hits handling of LaFortune plans

by Patrick Hanifin
Staff Reporter

SBP Dennis "H-Man" Etienne read a statement to the SLC yesterday denouncing the administration's handling of the LaFortune Student Center renovation.

"Some administrators, one (Fr. Burtchaell) in particular, have treated the students who put together the plans as if they were little children playing in the sandbox." The SLC agreed to invite Burtchaell and the student committee to air the issue next week.

Etienne went on to point out "the enormous amount of work and painstaking effort" that the all-student committee had put in on the renovation plans. "These people put in months of effort, drew up architectural plans, conducted surveys of student needs, consulted professionals, all on their own time, and then one administrator tore up their work and put in his own unsupported opinions."

The statement came when the SLC took up the matter of a student honor code. "Honor is needed throughout this community," Etienne said, "and the students have not been treated honorably. The most disturbing thing about the LaFortune affair is that it reflects the administration attitude that the students don't count. The students are going to quit doing anything around here if this is the response they will get."

The student body president rejected the administration's money argument. "These students took pains to do the job right, and if you are going to do half a job you might as well throw the money in the St. Joe River."

Dr. Faccenda replied to Etienne's statement saying that "All Student Affairs Staff members will pledge themselves to any concepts of honor that the SLC agrees upon. Setting up principles for the whole community may be beyond this body's technical power but we can take the initiative."

The SLC invited Fr. Burtchaell and the student committee to next week's meeting to discuss the issue and bring it out into the open. If Fr. Burtchaell is unable to attend they agreed that Faccenda, Dr. Ackerman, and Fr. Schlaver would explain the administration position. The SLC may then send a report to Fr. Hesburgh or the Board of Trustees.

The Council also listened to a report on the off-campus situation from Off-Campus Affairs Director Fr. Shilts. He said that his office has prepared a list of available off-campus housing including costs and conditions.

Copies of the list are available in the o-c office. "We have enough to get the students started," he explained.

He also reported that the man who is planning to build apartment units near the ACC is confident of getting financing soon. "Campus View Apartments will house about 400 students and the man already has a waiting list," stressed Shilts.

Shilts concluded by saying that the housing situation is not really too serious, "though some students will have to live more than four blocks from campus."

Both Shilts and Faccenda repeated the University's standing offer of free legal advice on leases and rent-gougers from the o-c office and the law school legal aid group. "The University itself cannot take legal action against gougers," Faccenda explained, "but we will advise anyone who asks for help and we can talk to renters who have been complained about often."

Shilts also complemented the Observer on its o-c survey and suggested that more people could be reached if he set up a telephone campaign to talk to people who had not returned surveys. "To date only about a fourth of the o-c students have answered." The SLC approved the telephone operation.

The Energy Committee, set up by the University to find ways of conserving energy, asked the SLC to sponsor a forum to announce the rules and guidelines. The new rules are not yet completely decided upon and will not be final for three more weeks. The representative said they might include cutting down the use of stereos in dorms. "We may need a forum to convince the students to pitch in," the representative said.

The SLC's Campus Life Committee reported initial success in using LaFortune's Rathskeller as a party center. According to Dean Macheca Sorin Hall held a successful party there last week and "while we think there were a few problems, they should be fixed without too much trouble. The ballroom is also a possibility for a more formal party."

At the request of Faccenda the SLC tabled a motion to make the use of the Rathskeller official for thirty days. "The situation is still experimental," Faccenda explained. "There will be more parties in the next month so we can tell better then."

The Council also put off consideration of remodeling the gym behind Holy Cross Hall to make it a permanent center.

The Campus Life Committee is also conducting an investigation into the background and rationale for parietals. They feel that parietal hours are developing a negative connotation, whereas they were intended to be a positive improvement.

A full report will be ready by the time the Board of Trustees meets in April. The committee is sending letters to all people who were concerned with setting up the present system to get their opinions.

In other action the Rules Committee reported that they would soon begin considering replacements for the graduating members of the Judicial Board and review the procedures used in hearings which they called "nebulous." Following this they will consider the rules and regulations for next year, starting after spring break.

Prof. Roos suggested that when the rules come up priority be given to the rule on human sexuality "because we did not give full consideration to it." Macheca offered to aid the Rules Committee on this matter.

Results of o-c poll released

200 respond

by Jim Donathen
Staff Reporter

Ed Byrne and Stan Cardenas of Alumni Hall have released the results of their off-campus questionnaire which appeared last week in the Observer. Their efforts, which include a phone canvas of some 100 off-campus residents resulted in the return of 85 questionnaires (accounting for some 200 o-c students).

The questionnaires are being filed in the housing office (315 Ad. building) in order to aid students who are searching for living quarters. Students are urged to continue turning in polls to the housing office, Observer, Campus Ministry, and the Huddle.

Complaints of the poll incited the average semester cost for off campus living (food, rent, utilities) take $416.92 per student. The cost breaks down in the following manner:

Weekly food cost per student-$12.83
Average Monthly Utilities cost- $34.92
Average monthly rent cost-$201.42

Terms of Rent

Of the questionnaires received, all houses but three were rented on a nine-month basis. Two houses were rented on 10 month leases and one was rented on a 12 month lease.

The majority of landlords payed for all repairs excepting three instances in which the residents had to foot the bill. Most of the polls returned gave favorable accounts of the landlords.

Saving Money

To save money, residents offered some gimmicks: Check newspapers for bargains, cook for yourself (dining hall meal plan is most expensive way to eat, $9.16 per week) buy food in quantity (e.g. buying a quarter or half of beef), plan menu ahead.

As to utility usage, suggestions included: turning off heat and lights when no one is home, insulating your house if its not done, showering in the ACC and not getting a phone.

Poll Shows Other Needs

"The university seems to drag its heels for fear of the nation wide trend of empty dorms striking Notre Dame. I hope they aren't reluctant to help off-campus students because they fear o-c living may compete with dorm life," said Ed Byrne. Students responding to the poll indicated a desire for establishment of a food, co-op, black list of bad landlords, and a system of rating the housing according to number of occupants and condition of the house. Other suggestions included improved places to go on campus, more extensive housing lists, advertising the best shopping bargains, better meal ticket price.

University has Responsibility

"This is a chance for the administration to reverse its trend of disregarding the needs of the student body. They have a responsibility to help those students who are forced off campus," added Byrne.

Byrne and Cardenas expressed their thanks to the Observer Fr. Toohey, Dean Thompson, Sean Raymond, and Mr. Edmund Price for the aid they received.

Washington (UPI) - Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, convening a conference of 13 big oil-using nations, said Monday the world community must cooperate on energy or suffer collective economic collapse.

Kissinger called for solidarity among petroleum consumer countries against the Arab oil boycott, saying "these global dilemmas cannot be avoided through exclusive bilateral arrangements" such as France and Japan are trying to work out.

New York (UPI) - Thousands of independent and company trucks roared across the nation's highways Monday speeding badly-needed merchandise to consumers and virtually ending the 12 day drivers' strike.

The Back-to-work movement was accompanied by statements from various industries announcing the reopening of plants shut by the walkout and the cancellation of plans to close others.

London (UPI) - Striking miners clashed with safety crews Monday for the second consecutive day in Britain's two-day-old national mines shutdown and a miner's leader said threats have been made on his life. A group of businessmen offered to contribute up to $184,000 in extra pay daily if miners returned to the pits.

Prime Minister Edward Heath, who ordered a national general election Feb. 28 after his last ditch efforts to head off the strike failed, lashed out at the opposition Labor party, charging that "its whole axis has swung to the left wing."

Berkeley, Cal. (UPI) - The father of kidnapped Patricia Hearst said Monday that if the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army does not hold her captive, "the only other possibility is that some absolutely crazy person has taken her and killed her."

A worried and anxious Randolph A. Hearst, after an agonizing week of waiting, said the lack of communication with the SLA since its initial letter last Thursday was "frightening."

Annapolis, MD (UPI) - Spiro T. Agnew's lawyers asked Maryland's highest court Monday to suspend the former vice president as an attorney but not to disbar him as recommended by a special three-judge panel for his no contest plea to an income tax evasion charge.

Philosophy or Prohibition?

Views mixed on sexuality issue

by Patrick Hanifin
Staff Reporter

Confusion continues concerning the meaning of the University's recent human sexuality rule.

Members of the SLC who passed the rule had several different opinions when asked about the meaning yesterday. Some felt that it was intended to be a prohibition of premarital sex, others felt it was a statement of philosophy and still others thought it was somewhere inbetween.

Dr. Syburg, Council chairman, stated that "the rule was not really intended to have the status of a prohibition. It was more of the nature of the University's position on an ethical matter. As a prohibition everyone agreed it would be unenforceable." He added that the SLC did not make its meaning very clear. "We will have to take it up again soon." (See article on SLC meeting.)

SBP Dennis Etienne had a different opinion. "I thought the rule was supposed to be a prohibition even if it wasn't often enforceable. It was to scare students who needed that kind of a crutch to behave." All student members of the SLC voted against the rule when it was adopted.

"intended to be an exhortation." He said that it would have been better to place the statement in the section on general principles instead of the section "on rules and prohibitions."

Dean Macheca said last week that the rule contained "no specific prohibition" but that he would enforce "the long-standing unwritten rule" even though the current rule is "the only one standing." Dr. Faccenda, also questioned last week, thought that the rule was intended to state this unwritten rule clearly because there was some confusion on what the University expected. He also stated that the rule is unenforceable.

Another SLC member, who did not wish to be named, stated that "this business of enforcing unwritten rules defeats the whole purpose of what we did."

A check of the minutes of the Oct. 1 meeting in which the rule was passed showed that the Council defeated a motion by student member Ed Rahill to drop the rule entirely because it was an unenforceable statement of philosophy. Faccenda argued that while it was unenforceable it was important to let everyone know that the University did not "condone" premarital sex.

Mr. Winicour moved that the original stronger language be struck and replaced by the statement "The University believes that sexual union should occur only in marriage." This motion passed.

Senate proposal to allow lay ND president drawn

by Tom Russo
Staff Reporter

Last Wednesday the Faculty Senate resolved by the vote of 15 to 10 to submit a proposal to the Board of Trustees which would no longer require a President of the University of Notre Dame to be a member of the Congregation of the Holy Cross. There was one abstention.

"The statute presently requires the president to be a member of the Indiana Province of the CSC," explained Prof. James Cushing, secretary of the Faculty Senate, who submitted the resolution to the Senate after it had originated in committee. "The resolution consists of two parts: The preamble argues that there is no point in arbitrarily limiting the number of people who can qualify for the position. The actual resolution itself asks the Board of Trustees to request the Fellows of the University to remove this restriction." Cushing pointed out that the twelve Fellows hold the final power to change University regulations.

The Observer is published daily during the college semester except vacations by the students of the University of Notre Dame and St. Mary's College. Subscriptions may be purchased for $8 per semester ($14 per year) from The Observer Box Q, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second class postage paid, Notre Dame, Ind. 46556.

"In 1968 the Board of Trustees opened its membership to laymen," continued Prof. Cushing, "and all administrative offices were opened as well, except the Presidency." The University Fellows are presently composed of one-half CSC members and one-half lay members.

Prof. Haasser of the Mathematics Department, who is Chairman of the Faculty Senate, commented that the argument was brought up at the meeting that the rule would change anyway if the proper situation arises. Specifically, he feels that there would be no reluctance to change (continued on page 6)

Lately there has been this thundering rear coming from the direction of the Aerospace Building. Do you know what is causing it?

A graduate student is running a super-sonic x wind tunnel in the building for an experiment of his. The speed in the tunnel can get up to as much 1.4 or about 800 to 900 m.p.h.

Can you tell me when the language lab in O'Shag is open?

Because of class scheduling, the lab hours are confusing and they change each day of the week. There are three rooms available for listening—they are 201, 202, and 250. In room 250, it is impossible to stop and replay the tape. But for a complete lab schedule, consult either your language teacher or call the Ombudsman at 7638.

My portable radio cannot pick up WSND clearly. Even when I'm in front of O'Shag the station is almost impossible to understand. Why is this?

We spoke with an expert on the subject. He told us that WSND is carried over most of the hall's power lines. Most stations broadcast over radio waves, but WSND doesn't. Therefore, the only way to pick up the station is to either place your radio in a socket or place it near the power lines.

Consumer mini-courses offered on insurance, auto mechanics

The arts and letters student advisory council has announced plans for the continuation of the mini-course program. Council President Randles announced that all preparations have been made for the first mini-course session scheduled to begin next Tuesday, February 12.

Geared especially for liberal arts students, the mini-course concept was originally devised by past council president, Neil Rosini. Its express purpose is to provide the student with some exposure in areas not offered by the University.

All courses are free no-credit sessions, open to the public and place no obligation on the participants to attend every one. The courses will be given in four sessions from 6:30 to 8:00 p.m.

This year, two major topics have been chosen for discussion. The first will concern the use of insurance by consumers. Dr. Charles Reddy, Notre Dame Insurance Agent, will conduct the mini-course stressing the "Practicality of Insurance" and will explore various loopholes in some policies. The first session will begin this Tuesday, February 12 in room 202 of the Architecture Building. The remaining sessions are scheduled for the same place and time on the next three Tuesdays.

The second series will begin sometime in April and is entitled "Rudiments of Auto Mechanics." The four sessions will be taught by Dan Johnson, service manager of Romy Hammes Fordland, 244 South Olive Avenue. Numerous visual aids will be used in the presentations including movies, booklets, and demonstrations.

According to Randles, "Last year's response was very encouraging. Its success lies in the benefits acquired from those who attended."

Both teachers were described as "knowledgeable and interesting." Their presentations will leave adequate time for questions from the students.

Mulcahy: No new women without new dormitories

by Jack D'Aurora
Staff Reporter

Fr. John Mulcahy, director of campus residence, has stated that he is not in favor of increasing female enrollment unless new dorms are built. According to Mulcahy, "The Office of Student Affairs suggested the building of new dorms, but the officers of the University consider it unfeasible."

Next semester's enrollment will include approximately 1,000 women, but Mulcahy has no idea what the female enrollment will be for 1975. Yet he did say that St. John Miriam Jones, Assistant to the Provost, "has mentioned that the Student Life Council had considered increasing the number to 1500 in 1975."

In that case Mulcahy has no idea where the additional 500 women would reside. He speculates, though, that "according to what's happened so far, two more men's dorms would be converted from

The problem of housing limitation could be somewhat alleviated with women moving off-campus, as they are now allowed but Mulcahy has received only nine such requests to do so thus far.

Supposedly St. Mary's has the problem of vacant rooms. Two years ago Augusta Hall house approximately 100 women but now houses only a small number of nuns. Regina South supposedly has vacancies in its upper floors. Yet Mulcahy doubts the possibility of Notre Dame students ever living at St. Mary's.

Mulcahy stated that the housing office "has limited power" in the situation. "It's basically up to the President and the Provost.

Two Year Stall

For the moment, let's forget the fact that it has taken two years and several times that in frustrations.

Forget again, that particular administrators simply payed lip service to the students while doing their own dealing.

And finally, forget that our own student representatives must share a part of the blame because of their tardy awakening.

Last evening, the two year effort to renovate the LaFortune Student Center by the LaFortune Renovation Committee finally received the recognition and support it has desperately needed since the fall of 1972.

Addressing the Student Life Council last evening, SBP Dennis Etienne gave credit where credit was due. The LaFortune Renovation Committee has not been dealt with fairly by Fr. James Burtchaell or by Dr. Phillip Faccenda. The former has simply ignored any student input for reasons of mere distaste while the latter has allowed formal proposals to just ride.

It must seem inconsequential to the Provost and VP for Student Affairs that at their fall meeting, the Board of Trustees enthusiastically pledged their support to the renovation after the committee's presentation.

Further, and even more importantly, it must appear to them and the administration that the effort, time and planning put forth by this committee on behalf of the students over the past two years is really nice--and that's it.

In what is becoming a continuing, nearly classic, saga, the administration has put down the students whom, in this case, originally began working at the administration's suggestion.

Belated as it may be, the LaFortune Renovation must now receive the complete attention of the administration in cooperation with the students.

The present LaFortune Student Center is, at the very least, a disgrace to the generous man whose name it bears. Outdated, dysfunctional, and during most hours, unused, the student center must be given new life.

As the University continues to re-define rules concerning parietals, alcohol, and parties, the students are going to increasingly need an outlet. At other major universities such an outlet is known as a student center.

The final need and most neglected is that of the off-campus student. If the administration insists on pushing people out of the veritable mainstream of life at this university, the campus, they must concede some semblance of a student center for their refuge.

People call for patience in big issues like this. But a two year stall is a long time to wait for a project which should stand near the top of this University's priorities.

Tom Drape

Not Just Yet

Without any fanfare, without adequate warning, and without any student input (again), a major decision concerning student life has been made and announced by the administration. The women of Notre Dame now have a modified stay hall system to live with for next year. To transfer from the hall they are presently living in, women will have to choose Lyons. And to gain residence in an established women's dorm other than their own, they still have to choose Lyons--and hope for an available place after the hall lotteries. This is unquestionably a nifty way to fill Lyons.

But are the 1,000 women at Notre Dame next year ready for a stay hall system? Not yet.

Fr. Mulcahy speaks of a stable class distribution in each dorm. This remains irrelevant with the still wide discrepancy in class size. How can women realize a stable hall situation when rectors are being moved around and changed each year and at least one remains to be chosen?

The final and saddest comment on the stay hall decision concerns the way it has been reached. It is very disheartening to see an administration that went out of its way last year to solicit student ideas and cooperation turn its back on those same students this year.

Women responded overwhelmingly last year and had direct initiative and input in last year's four-dorm lottery plan. This year they weren't even publicly asked to participate.

Some students who voluntarily moved to North Quad want to move back. Does anyone care? It doesn't seem so right now.

During last year's discussions, students were led to believe they would have a voice in this year's choice of room allocation plan. It appears females are reaching a level of equality with male students. Their opinions are being disregarded in the same blatant way. So what else is new?

Opinion

Searching for an Answer

Ed Forest & Tim Takacs

Fred Graver pointed out in an Observer the unfortunate situation many of us find ourselves in at Notre Dame. Each of us at one time or another has felt lonely and forgotten; an increasing sense of alienation that many of us believe is caused by an unconcerned faculty and administration obscures the cherished "Notre Dame spirit," the seemingly mythical creed of brotherly love expounded in the University's bulletins and nurtured by its alumni. The cause of this alienation and frustration does not arise from any one source on campus, nor will any amount of complaining remove the problem about which Graver writes. I believe the problem lies deep within each of us: each of us has a real need to care for one another.

Recently, a friend of mine remarked, "My roommate has a serious problem, and I had always thought that if I ever got into a situation like this, I would be able to do something, but now I don't think I can." You know my favorite dreams have always been on a very grandiose scale: I want to save the world, stop all wars, end pollution, help the sick and the poor. It seems as though I am just beginning to realize that there are things on a similar level of importance which I can do.

In the future, my fondest memories of Notre Dame will not be of the athletic teams or the beautiful campus, but the people I've met here. I will always wonder whether I could have done more for them, shown I had cared for them more. How many times will I reflect on times here and regret the cold shoulder I had turned towards a friend, or the harsh word spoken to someone I never wanted to know? At times I never would have considered that person a human being with feelings just as sensitive as mine.

I like Notre Dame, and regardless of my complaints (and they have been many), I do feel the time I've spent here has been valuable. I worry over a number of things such as grades, my social situation, and the rest of the immediate future but I know that they are all needless fears that time and my own efforts will dispel. Unfortunately, sometimes I cannot quite convince myself of this, so I do worry and neglect others around me. I know I care about myself more often than others, and that hurts.

I know that although my part may be small, I can do something to improve the quality of our lives here. That should not be too difficult either, because I'm sensitive enough to know that my dreams are basically the same as another's that what I need when I'm down and out of it is about what anyone else would need. Now, one obvious solution would seem to be to seek out the lonely and alienated among us. Although this is indeed a commendable ideal, I question whether many of us can really do this. What I believe is that each individual should simply find more ways of giving.

Surprisingly enough, actions or even mere gestures which only take a moment can do a lot for someone. The possibilities are clearly many; for example, last week when I was kind of down for who knows what reason I received a letter from my sister at college. All the letter said was: I miss you; but to me she had, in fact, said it all. Perhaps many may take this letter as being overly reflective or sentimental. All I know is that as I see the days, the weeks go by, I often feel that I am missing a lot and that I must try to discover what it is.

hazo and mcclure at the festival today

by tom mcandrews

The Sophomore Literary Festival goes into full swing today, with two poetry readings by Samuel Hazo and Michael McClure. Both are established poets in their own right, but they each represent a different style and interpretation of the genre. Samuel Hazo is a Notre Dame graduate, and a distinguished poet who writes in a traditional style. McClure represents the innovative San Francisco Renaissance group.

Hazo's reading will be the C.C.E. Auditorium at 3:30 p.m. Mr. Hazo is the author of several volumes of poetry. His most recently published collection of poems, Once for the Last Bandit, nominated for the Annual National Book Awards. Previous works have also earned nominations for the Pulitzer Prize and the Annual National Book Award for Poetry. Dr. Hazo is currently the chairman of the well-known International Poetry Forum in Pittsburgh. Upon returning to Notre Dame, Dr. Hazo remarked that it was a thrill that he could participate in the festival. He felt that he was invited back as a poet rather than as an alumnus.

Michael McClure

Samuel Hazo's poetry is not an attempt to achieve the universal and the abstract. Rather it finds meaning the human condition as it is.

Today I smirk
at years when men could rhyme their way to God
as they could love, beget and die on the same mattress.

Dr. Hazo has mentioned that he would prefer not to be judged by any preview remarks, but rather on the merits of his poetry as he reads it.

Michael McClure will be reading from his poetry tonight at 8:00 p.m. in the Library Auditorium. An accomplished poet and playwright, McClure's roots can be traced to the "beat generation," which includes such authors as Allan Ginsberg, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Jack Kerouac and Gary Snyder.

McClure has produced many volumes of poetry. Some of his best known include: Hymns to St. Geryon, Meat Science Essay, Ghost Tantras, and September Blackberries due to be released within the next month. In his most famous play, "The Beard", Billy the Kid and Jean Harlow act out an erotic dialogue which caricatures sex as the saving remnant of our personal lives. He is also the author of Gargoyle Cartoons, a collection of one-act plays; and of Freewheelin' Frank, Secretary to the Angels. This is the self-portrait of Frank Reynolds of the Hell's Angels, "as told to Michael McClure."

Michael McClure and Robert Creeley, who gave a reading of his own poetry last night, are good friends. In September Blackberries McClure dedicates a poem to Creeley. The poem not only displays the depth to friendship between the two, but is a good example of the extent of McClure's expression of thought conveyed within a poem.

Loneliness is solo

Michael McClure was the first of this year's guests to arrive, and he will probably be the last to leave. This is an indication of what this festival means to him personally. McClure is a casual person who is very concerned about the acquaintances which he makes with the faculty and students here. His friendly mannerisms and concerned responses to the many questions which have been posed in the past three days have made him a well-liked figure. But these meetings are merely the superficial covering of the poet, because it is his poetry which speaks so clearly of himself. "When I make a poem, I make an extension of myself." His writing demands a self-liberation of the participant and must be read aloud. As with other poets of this San Francisco Group, McClure strives to extend his inner life through poetry. Traditional structures are replaced with more expressive typographical lines. "My unusual line and shape of poems is a feedback between poems as living beings and knowledge of traditional shapes I believe in inspiration. I am especially fond of wild flowers, mastodons, and stars."

nancy cole presents gertrude stein

by linda galloway

In a dramatized reading from the writing of Gertrude Stein, the American actress Nancy Cole draws a vibrant portrait of the personality, the work and the era of the famous authoress. The one-woman show will be presented Sunday, February 17th at 8:00 pm in St. Mary's Little Theatre.

Gertrude Stein (1874-1946) once said the America was her country and Paris her home town. Although she spend most of her life abroad and returned to the United States only for a short lecture tour, Pennsylvania-born Gertrude Stein never ceased to concern herself with America and its language.

It was she who wrote the libretti of the first modern American operas, stimulated the young Ernest Hemingway to develop his terse prose style, coined the phrase "The Lost Generation," gathered expatriate and traveling American writers in her famed Paris salon which became the center of artistic and intellectual life between the wars. Her fellow countrymen referred to her as "the Mama of Dada" and "the greatest word-slinger of our generation," and her patronage of Picasso, Matisse and others has as profound an influence on the growth of these artists as her innovative aesthetic theories and experimental literary techniques had on contemporary writing.

Like Gertrude Stein, Nancy Cole is American-born but lives in Paris. A painter, actress and sometimes member of the LaMama Experimental Theatre, Miss Cole has played major roles in productions of plays by Jean-Paul Sartre, Samuel Beckett, Archibald MacLeish, Dylan Thomas, W.B. Yeats and others, as well as in several first plays by young poets. Her show on Gertrude Stein, which she prepared after three years of research and interviews with Alice B. Toklas, Henry-Daniel Kahnweiler and other friends of the late authoress, had its first performance on the occasion of "Un Hommage a Gertrude Stein" held in Paris on June 25, 1965. Miss Cole has since taken this show to the Edinburgh Festival, presented it on the BBC Third Programme, and toured with it to major cities in Europe and North America. Of a tour at American universities she said:

"Most of my audiences were under 25 and uninformed about Stein. But I was given a rousing reception from young people who see the tie with cinema technique, which Stein's writing approximated, and who quickly likened her words to their own repetitive rhythms and rock lyrics."

and all around I am going to carve 'Rose is a Rose

'Real ND atmosphere' awaits junior parents

by Ken Bradford
Staff Reporter

Over 850 parents of Notre Dame juniors are expected to participate in the annual Parents Weekend February 22-24 on campus, according to Junior Class President Greg Ericksen.

The event, sponsored by the University administration and the junior class, attempts to "introduce the parents into the real Notre Dame atmosphere," Ericksen said.

The weekend activities begin Friday night with a hockey game, followed by a cocktail party in the concourse of the Athletic and Convocation Center.

Saturday's events include a presentation of "Notre Dame in Review," an historical sketch of Notre Dame by alumni.

Parents will be given an opportunity to meet with deans and faculty members of the various colleges and are invited to an administrative reception from 3:30 to 5 p.m. in the Center for Continuing Education.

Preceding the President's

Dinner in the North Dining Hall Saturday night, University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh will be the principal celebrant of a Mass in Sacred Heart Church.

The President's Dinner will provide parents the opportunity to meet residence hall rectors, college deans, and University officers.

The parents program will end Sunday morning at a breakfast with no special activities planned for Sunday afternoon.

Assistant Director of Information Services Jay J. Kane stressed the opportunities for the parents to discuss occupational offerings with the faculty and students. "By the junior year, the students generally know what he's going into, so the weekend is slanted toward discussing job opportunities," Kane stated.

Juniors may still reserve their parents' tickets for the Parents Weekend by contacting Greg Ericksen at 3680.

Senate votes on proposal

the rule if there were a situation in which there is an extremely well-qualified lay nominee and no well-qualified CSC member.

"I don't know how the Board of Trustees will respond," he concluded. "But I don't see how it would make a great deal of difference."

Fr. Charles Weiher, CSC, a philosophy professor and one of two CSC members of the Faculty Senate, voted against the resolution because he felt that the move was "based on personal likes or dislikes against a certain CSC priest who may become the next President." He thought the vote was based on a "fear on the part of others."

"Furthermore," Fr. Weiher commented, "I doubt whether either a layman or even a member of another congregation would have the devotion to the task as would a Holy Cross priest. Fr. Hesburgh has dedicated most of his adult life to this position."

"The proposal has been brought up twice before, and neither Fr. Barras (the other CSC member of the Faculty Senate) nor I feel that it is terribly functional."

No one knows what the Board of Trustees will do with the resolution, but there seems to be a general consensus that it will not act in any substantial manner. As for the Fellows, Fr. Weiher said that all indications, such as Fr. Burtchaell's opening Mass and the Priorities Committee Report, point to a reaffirmation in the role of the Holy Cross Fathers in the University.

If Notre Dame does have a lay president, will its character change?

"Perhaps it would become like other schools which were originally denominationally orientated," ventured Haaser, "such as Princeton or Yale or Brown. But I really couldn't say."

"Yes," replied Fr. Weiher, "Notre Dame's character would change slowly. In fact, it would cease to have character."

Cushing mentioned that the resolution had been brought up at a meeting two weeks ago, but was discussed and passed February 6. The Faculty Senate has no legislative power to change University rules, only an advisory role.

Students favor SMC parietals alternative

by Bill Sabin
Staff Reporter

Despite rumors that a rejection of the proposal to extend male-visitation hours would bring a negative reaction by SMC women, most students there expressed a favorable opinion on the decision by the St. Mary's Board of Regents last Saturday.

This decision did defeat the proposal which would have extended the Sunday visitation hours to Fridays and Saturdays, but in doing so it nonetheless acknowledged support of revised parietals for SMC by creating a committee to deal with the question more thoroughly and decisively.

Many applauded this decision because, as one student said, "it takes the issue out of the hands of the Board of Regents and leaves it with the Administration, where it belongs."

Protest Rumor

Apparently this action satisfied those who were previously planning an organized reaction against an unfavorable decision. Sources who wish to remain unidentified described plans for a protest which was to occur if the Board rejected the proposal. These original plans were to invite "hundreds" of ND men into the dorms in open violation of the restriction on male visitations.

These plans never materialized and some denied that they were even really made. "They were just rumors," said Joanne Garrett.

Optimism

But even if there was substance to the rumor, not many regarded the Board's decision as unfavorable. The few that did described it as a "copout," designed to appease the students while still denying them increased visitation rights.

The majority of students questioned, however, expressed optimism. Many had words of praise for Dr. Edward Henry, President of SMC: "He's a liberal and on our side," was a typical response.

Barb McKiernan, chairman of the SMC Student Board of Governance and one of the leaders of the movement for expanded visitation rights also expressed faith in the decision. She too voiced a high opinion of Dr. Henry, and pointed out that the change in staff of the Board of Regents may mean significant changes for the students. "I think we'll have a parietal revision in a month and a half."

Will parietals revision lead to a more normal atmosphere at SMC? It's a matter of discussion right now. (Photo by Dave Daley.)

Newest law school publication offers chance for experience

by Ken Girouard
Staff Reporter

A new publication, The Notre Dame Journal of Legislation, has been announced by students in the University's Law School. It will succeed New Dimensions in Legislation a periodical published during the last three years by members of the Legislative Bureau.

The Journal, to be released later this semester will publish bills drafted by law students, critiques by students of proposed laws and articles by practicing attorneys and law professors. The first volume will include "Handbook on the Drafting Legislation," a project jointly funded by the Notre Dame Law School and the Law Student Division of the American Bar Association.

Dennis Owens, a second year law student at Notre Dame and a graduate of Rockhurst College, has been named editor-in-chief of both the 1973-74 and 1974-75 volumes. Dr. Charles E. Rice, professor of law, is faculty advisor to the Legislative Bureau.

The bureau is operated by Law School students for academic credit. It accepts assignments from legislators, legislative counsel, and public interest groups. Students from all three law classes research and draft legislation and may serve as expert technical advisors in seeing their work pass into law.

Commenting on the emergence of the new publication, Owens said, "We're very proud. There are only three other schools in the country that have this type of operation."

Aiding the overburdened and poorly staffed state and local legislators is the motivating idea behind the Legislative Bureau and the Journal of Legislation. Published each May, the Journal will besent to a number of lawyers, state legislatures and law schools. As Owens stated, "The Journal should be a valuable experience for us. But it should also be a practical magazine for ideas on the drafting and rewriting of laws."

Currently, the main project of the Legislative Bureau is the codifying or categorizing of the ordinances of St. Joseph County. Results of this effort will be published in the Journal.

Beatles celebrate ten years since American debut

It was ten years ago today, February 12, 1964 that the Beatles premiered on the Ed Sullivan Show to American audiences. Four days earlier, Paul McCartney, John Lennon, George Harrison, and Ringo Starr arrived in New York, an event that began a whole musical and cultural change in the nation as these then relatively unknown mopheads became the leaders of rock music for the next several years. That was a full decade ago. Don't you feel old?

A change for the better

Irish wrestlers fall on hard times

by Hal Munger

Three meets in four days is a trying experience for any wrestling squad but it becomes even worse when all three end in defeat.

Notre Dame's grapplers lived through the disappointing matches (two of which were on the road) and emerged tired, a bit sadder, but hopefully wiser. Coach Fred Pechek gave his matmen the day off Monday in hopes that they would recover from fatigue and bouts with the flu.

The break enabled the Irish to get their minds off the immediate past and project those thoughts to the two upcoming home weekend battles. Victories Friday at 7:30 p.m. over John Carroll and Saturday at 1:00 p.m. over Akron will improve the '73-'74 slate to an unprecedented 12 dual meet victories. Presently a 10-5 ledger highlights Coach Pechek's first year.

In the ACC last Thursday, Western Michigan outpointed the Irish 24-17 with the highlight of the match, for Western at least, coming in the 190-pound class. Notre Dame was down 18-11 going into the last two matches but at 1:11 Al Rocek was caught in a cradle and pinned.

Mike Fanning triumphed with his eighth pin in nine victories. The pin came at 3:15 into the match. Fritz Bruening at 150 pounds earned the only other pin, his happening at the 5:51 mark. Steve Moylan won the only other ND victory 4-2, at 126. At 118 Dan Heffernan drew 2-2 with his opponent.

Dave Boyer lost his first dual meet match of the year 4-3 at 142 and at 167 pounds Western's Doug Wyn successfully upheld his undefeated streak. He now has 28 consecutive dual meet victories.

In Milwaukee ND's wrestlers won but three of the ten matches in a 26-12 loss. Freshman Dan Heffernan was victorious 4-2 and sophomore Dave Boyer triumphed 6-2. Junior Mike Fanning won his tenth straight contest by forfeit.

Sunday evening at Purdue the Irish were overwhelmed 29-5 by a squad who won four matches over Michigan, the nation's fifth placed team. Despite the score, the matches were all close. The lone victor for the Irish was Mike Fanning at heavyweight. Fanning came through with a 7-3 decision. Fritz Bruening escaped with a 4-4 tie but all the other Irish matches ended in defeat.

The meet Friday at 7:30 in the ACC versus John Carroll is the match which will key the grapplers' season. It has been heavily attended in the past and the support will help the wrestlers get back on the winning tack. Saturday again the grapplers will be at home in the Convo.

After sporting a flashy 10-2 record, coach Fred Pechek's wrestlers have hit hard times dropping their last three meets.

Tracksters take second at OSU

by Pete McHugh

Despite a fine showing in the middle distance competition, the Notre Dame track team could not hold back a powerful Ohio State squad as the Irish placed second in a triangular meet Friday night in Columbus. The Buckeyes finished with 71 points, while Notre Dame edged East Carolina 49-42.

The Irish, heavy underdogs going into the meet, surprised their hosts by taking a 39-38 lead after the first ten events. Ohio State, however, swept firsts in the last five events as they literally ran away from the competition.

For Notre Dame, Mike Housley, Mike Gahagan, and Al Pulikowski made things interesting in the early going. Housley, a junior from Toronto, Ontario, captured the 1,000-yard run with a 2:15.1 clocking ahead of Ohio State's Gary Kurtz and Irish teammate Jim Hurt. Gahagan, a potential NCAA qualifier in the 880-yard run or 1,000-yard run, won the half mile event with a 1:55.2 time. Pulikowski (6-2, 260lbs.) took shot put honors with a 53-2 heave ahead of teammate Tom Fredricks.

Though clearly outmatched in the other events, the Irish were at least competitive garnering runner-up honors in six events. Among the second-place finishers were John Long (600-yard run), Jim Clouse (440-yard run), Ed Burns (70-yard high hurdles), and Mike Hogan (pole vault). Notre Dame's one mile relay team (Clouse, Bill Phillips, Bob Schott, Long) also placed second.

Other Irish scoring included Joe Yates (4th place, mile), Schott (4th place, 440-yard run), Paul Martuscello (3rd place, 60-yard dash and 300-yard run), Phillips (3rd place, 600-yard run), Hurt (4th place, two mile), and Don Knott (3rd place, long jump; 4th place, triple jump).

This weekend Notre Dame faces even stiffer competition as it hosts the 48th annual Central Collegiate Conference indoor meet. Among the representatives are perennial track powers Southern Illinois, Drake, Western Michigan, and Kent State.

The meet opens Friday at 4:30 p.m. in the old Fieldhouse for the 35lb. weight throw. The other events will be held in the ACC with most preliminaries starting Friday at 6:30 p.m. and most finals Saturday at 12:45 p.m.

Digger, 'Goose' in PH Classic

WICHITA, Kan. -- UCLA's Bill Walton has successfully fought back a handful of strong challengers in the West and the Atlantic Coast Conference finds itself at the top in the East as voting for positions in the third annual Pizza Hut Basketball Classic enters its final month. The NCAA and NAIA-sanctioned charity event will be held April 1 at the Las Vegas Convention Center.

In the East, North Carolina's Bobby Jones has vaulted into the lead with 21,350 votes, 400 votes in front of Vanderbilt's Terry Compton. The rugged ACC has three players besides Jones in the top six.

Maryland's Len Elmore (19,532) and Tom McMillen (18,477) are third and sixth while North Carolina State's Tom Burleson is fourth with 19,140.

Notre Dame's Gary Novak continues to muster strong support and is fifth with 19,072 votes.

Walton, who has led West balloting since voting opened in early January, tops all players with 32,708 votes. Kansas' playmaking guard Tom Kovisto continues to remain close, currently resting in second with 29,781.

Players representing Tulsa, Oral Roberts and UCLA hold other West positions in the top eight. TU's Sammy High and Willie Biles are third and eighth respectively, ORU's Eddie Woods and Greg McDougald have settled into fourth and sixth, and the Bruin combo of Keith Wilkes and Tommy Curtis are fifth and seventh.

The top eight votegetters on each side are extended automatic invitations to play in the nationally televised contest. The remaining two squad members are named by a national media and coaching panel that includes 1974 East pilot Digger Phelps of Notre Dame and West skipper Ned Wulk of Arizona State. Balloting at the nation's 1400 Pizza Huts and participating schools will conclude March 2.

Notre Dame's own Digger Phelps will be coaching the East squad April 1 in the third annual Pizza Hut Basketball Classic.
