St. Mary's assembly votes to change sign-out procedures

by Mary Janca
Staff Reporter

St. Mary's Student Assembly last night unanimously passed a proposal to change the sign-out procedures while defeating another proposal which would allow first semester freshmen to have self-responsible hours with parents' approval.

"Any resident with self-responsible hours will not be required to keep a sign-out card. Any resident with hours must keep the sign-out procedures," proposed Hall Life Commissioner Ann Smith.

"All residents will be required to keep a file in her hall office with the names of people who would ordinarily know where she is, and the names of places she may frequent. Each resident is responsible for keeping this file up to date," she continued.

The current sign-out system is ineffective between the hours of 6:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m., and is not always accurate since students often do not know where they are going and don't always stay in the place indicated on their sign-out card, Smith explained.

A third reason for revision is that the present system is creating an inappropriate amount of work for the hall staffs, she noted.

Smith contends that this proposed change "is in no way connected with the theft of the sign-out books," which occurred earlier this month.

In order for the new system to go into effect, it must be approved by the Student Affairs Commission, composed of administration, faculty and student representatives, the Student Affairs Council.

However, the Hall Life Commissioner is optimistic about its passage. "It has a lot of support and is a very logical proposal," she stated.

Student Affairs Commissioner Chris Albosta proposed that "all incoming freshmen be granted self-responsible hours contingent upon parental approval before registering in the hall or anytime thereafter and revokable at anytime by same said parents."

Many freshmen are mature enough to handle self-responsible hours and consequently become frustrated and rebellious. This often leads to bolting and late minutes, since the freshmen direct their hostility toward the school, Albosta contends.

The ruling as it now stands is discriminatory, she continued, since all students, except first semester freshmen, have no curfew, following parental approval.

If it were changed, girls could decide with their parents whether they will be mature enough to handle "no-hours." This would strictly be a family decision, since there be no peer pressure," she argued.

"Parents are closest to their daughters and are best able to judge whether they are mature enough to handle self-responsible hours," she stated.

However, the Assembly was divided on the results. Members pointed out that the curfew is a necessary aid in adjusting to college life.

"Sometimes it's good for students to have guidelines at first," commented one member.

Others argued that freshman year, for most students, involves a new life style, with more homework and a different type of social life than that of high school, and a curfew helped them to adjust to it and prevented them from exceeding their limitations.

Also, some said that a curfew helped to unite freshmen and create friendships, because most freshmen get together at 2:00 a.m. on weekends and talk.

Because of the negative response, Albosta amended the proposal to read that incoming freshmen be granted self-responsible hours Friday and Saturday nights only with parental approval.

This move was defeated by a vote of 6-5 with one abstention; as it was not a majority which is necessary for the proposal's passage, two more attempts at its passage were also defeated.

Rule revisions stressed by HPC

by Susan Divita
Staff Reporter

The Hall Presidents Council stressed several rule revisions that must be brought to the attention of the administration and the students before this school year is out so that action can be taken on the proposed changes immediately. The HPC states its views in a letter to the editor in this issue of The Observer.

Feedback was received from several halls about the parietals issue and party house proposal. Laura Dodge, president of Badin Hall, stated the feedback she got felt ideally that parietals be thrown out, but thought a more realistic plan would be abolishing parietals on weekends and having some hours such as 9-12 a.m. during the week. Discussion concerning the halls sponsoring a party house in Michigan ended on the point that the entire plan had to be thought out completely before presentation to the SLC, for the house would involve a lot of money for taxation, etc., and the issue was more complex than it seemed at first glance.

A guest speaker, Ben Johnson from Positive Action and Development Committee, spoke on the African Appeal Fund which will go into effect immediately and end on May 7. Each night at food service there will be a box for cash contributions which the hall president or community service director in each hall will be in charge of. The project will raise money for drought stricken countries in South Africa to provide them with medication and other necessities. The Positive Action Committee will also taken their cause to South Bend.

A few last comments were made concerning summer storage. The official word is that there will be no storage in halls this year and though another place is being looked into, possibly in town, though that proposition looks doubtful.

COUP report addition adopted

by Fred Graver
Contributing Editor

The Faculty Senate last night voted to adopt an addition to the Committee on University Priorities report dealing with the Catholic character of the University. In another motion, they voted to endorse the establishment of a Budget Review Committee as recommended in the COUP report.

The proposed addition to the COUP report was done at the request of Father Hesburgh. On the front page of that report he asked for comment from members and organizations of the University, which he said would be forwarded to the Board of Trustees and the Academic Council. The addition proposed by the Faculty Senate Committee on Administration dealt mainly with alternative language and additions to the italicized portion of page 13 of the COUP report as it was published last semester in Notre Dame Magazine.

The purposes, as stated in the amendment, dealt mainly with the intellectual commitment and responsibility of a Catholic University, specific reassurance to non-Catholics concerning tenure and promotion, and the problems of student discipline as it affects student life here.

The discussion last night dealt completely with a motion to adopt the addition, with two amendments concerning the predominance of Catholics on the faculty. There was no discussion on student discipline.

The paragraph of the addition in controversy stated, before amendments: "That the University have a faculty and student affairs staff among whom committed Catholics predominate."

If the University is to have a Catholic character, it is obvious that all who play a role in recruitment should exercise care to attract and appoint from among the most competent teachers, scholars and scientists available those who are articulate believers; brilliant scholar-teachers who respect Christ in man and who are committed as He was to service and sacrifice. Also, they should be aware of numerous scholars who, while not sharing either the Catholic tradition or the Christian faith, abide here because they lead lives which include a sensitivity to and respect for the commitment to investigate the moral realm. Of such intellectual comrades who live in and by the spirit of Notre Dame and respect her heritage and tradition, we have much need. They add essential meaning to our striving to be Catholic. The University's invitation to a non-Catholic to join the faculty or staff is recognition that his professional concerns are compatible with those of the University, and an understanding that his religious commitments or lack of them will not interfere with his acceptance, retention or advancement at Notre Dame."

Dr. Julian Pleasants, Professor of Microbiology, told the Senate of a letter he had written to Fr. Burtchaell, Provost of the University, concerning the interpretation that had been reached by the College of Science Council. They felt that the COUP report meant that, "all things being equal, they would appoint a Catholic over a non-Catholic, although the situation rarely came to that," Fr. Burtchaell answered this by saying that, as Dr. Pleasants interpreted it as the meeting last night. This was not the case, but that a concerted effort was going to be made towards gaining a predominance of Catholic faculty members.

Mrs. Maureen Gleason, Memorial Library representative, raised the point that without proper definition, the classification of Catholic meant little.

Professor Daney, of the Chemistry Department, commented on this by saying that he felt the University should concern itself more with an ideal that has been developed over its long history of tradition, rather than with strict religious backgrounds.

Mrs. Gleason proposed two amendments to the above paragraph. The first proposed the deletion of the first sentence. The second proposed omitting the words "and appoint" from the second sentence. The Senate voted against the first amendment, and for the second. The addition will be sent in the amended form to Father Hesburgh.

In further discussion of the COUP report, the Senate voted to endorse a Budget Review Committee, as proposed on page 17 of the printed report. The Senate action will be performed in two stages. In the first, an endorsement will be forwarded to the Academic Council and to Fr. Hesburgh, so that he can include it in his report to the Trustees of the University. The second stage will have to do with a Committee investigation into specific policies of representation from various organizations at the University.

The nominees of the Faculty Senate Nomination Committee were announced at the meeting. Nominated to the Student Life Council are: David L. Appel, Marketing Department, William Sexton, Dept. of Business Organization and Management, Michael Francis, Government and International Studies, Walter Nicgorski, General Program, Jeffrey Leake, Electrical Engineering Department, and William Egan, Management Department.

Three positions in the Student Life Council must be filled by members of the Faculty for next year.

Nominated to the Faculty Affairs Committee of the Board of Trustees are: Albin Szewczyk, Aeronautical and Mechanical Engineering, Joseph Scott, Sociology Department and Director of Black Studies, Charles "Bud" Murdock, Law School; Edward Trubac, Department of Finance and Business Economics, John J. Lyon, General Program, Jerome Novotny, Aeronautical and Mechanical Engineering and William McGlinn, Physics Department.

Two positions on the Faculty Affairs Committee must be filled for next year.

The balloting will take place during next week for both of these elections. Last year's procedure will be followed for the election.

A comment was made to the Senate early in the meeting by Professor Winicur of the Chemistry Department on student absenteeism surrounding vacation breaks. He made an independent survey of a Freshman class this semester, before and after both the long semester break and the shorter Easter break. He found no real difference between the two in regards to absenteeism. "If the students want to lengthen the vacation, they generally will go ahead, no matter how we plan against it." A number of comments were made as to how this reflects on Father Burtchaell's argument, during the planning of next year's calendar, that full week vacations are necessary if student absenteeism is to be avoided.

WSND to be piped into dining halls

by Mike Donovan
Staff Reporter

WSND, Notre Dame's student-run radio station, announced yesterday in an Observer interview, that starting Wednesday their music will be piped into the North Dining Hall. Slight problems with their broadcast lines will delay their entrance into the South Dining Hall until sometime next week. The possibility of being heard in St. Mary's Dining Hall is also being looked into.

Paul Bollwerk, WSND station manager, said that the station has lost some of the campus audience, and that this is just one attempt to bring WSND back to the students. Bollwerk stated that they can't compete with the big commercial stations, but they do offer the campus good music, campus announcements, news and sports. There has been some trouble with audio quality in the past, Bollwerk said, "but we are looking into this so the work can be done to correct the difficulties."

Citing the fact that that station has lost touch musically with the campus, AM Program Director C. Weber announced a new format that will allow WSND to compete against area stations for the campus listeners. Weber stated that they are going to play the music the campus wants to hear, and will play a combination of Top 40, Solid gold, and progressive music.

The junior class sponsoring a brunch for the senior class was granted $500 to serve the faculty and administration, and for flowers and decorations for the two classes served will come from SAGA. All unused funds are to be returned.

The freshmen orientation committee, operating on a budget of $500 requested and received from the assembly and an additional $200 to cover the costs of Madonna night decorations, candles, flowers, postage for information mailed to freshmen by sisters and duplicating. Approximately 450-500 freshmen are expected, which has caused the additional expense.

Volunteers are needed for Campus Open House, scheduled for Sunday May 5, between 2-5 p.m.

Joanne Garret, Leg. Commissioner.

Student government is sponsoring an ice cream social, which is to be its contribution to the event. Albosta, the social's coordinator, requested $9 to cover the cost of 1000 cones and ice cream. Working with the theme, "Prices of the Good Old Days," she plans to charge a token 5 cents per cone, thus making student government's contribution to the event $41.

The Cincinatti Ballet and a mime troupe, which is scheduled to perform on campus for 3-4 days next year, asked that the Assembly sign a letter of intent to give them $1 per student of $1500, announced Legislative Commissioner Joanne Garrett.

Founder of reality therapy to lecture at SMC tonight

William Glasser, M.D., founder of reality therapy will present a lecture, "Discipline Internalized: The Impossible Dream," at Saint Mary's College Wednesday, April 24, 1974, at 7:00 p.m. in O'Laughlin Auditorium.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Dr. Glasser attended Case Institute of Technology and Western Reserve University School of Medicine. A chemical engineer at 19, he became a clinical psychologist at 23 and a physician at 28. After medical school he received his psychiatric training at the Veterans Administration Center in Los Angeles and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Dr. Glasser has been a psychiatrist in private practice in Los Angeles since 1957 and has consulted widely in the correctional field. His method of treating juvenile delinquents has gained wide recognition. He was for some years the regular consultant at the Ventura School for Girls of the California Youth Authority, and the Los Angeles Orthopedic Hospital.

Recently he has devoted himself more and more to education at various levels. He has taught a large group of city and county school administrators, counselors, and teachers. He has worked directly with children in the Los Angeles city schools—Watts and other areas—and the Polo Alto schools. He has lectured widely in this country and Canada about the problems of contemporary education.

At present Dr. Glasser works extensively in both psychiatry and education. He heads an organization, The Educator Training Center, which has teachers throughout the country actively involved in studying and working to make their school a school without failure. Many more teachers are involved in his course on educational television. Psychiatric clinics, mental hospitals, halfway houses and correctional institutions are now using the ideas of reality therapy, a form of treatment which stresses the importance of the individual rather than the group. At the institute of Reality Therapy in West Los Angeles, Dr. Glasser teaches and consults with those interested in learning to use reality therapy in their work and in their lives.

Dr. Glasser has authored three books: Reality Therapy: A New Approach to Psychiatry, Schools Without Failure, and The Identity Society.

Recently the Board of Regents of Saint Mary's College endorsed the establishment within the department of education of 'schools without failure' courses and reality therapy workshops in conjunction with the Educator Training Center, both as enrichment for the students in the teacher preparation program at Saint Mary's College and also as an opportunity for persons in the Michiana area to participate in instructional programs involving Glasserian techniques.

Three Glasser institutes in reality therapy will be held at Saint Mary's College this summer: Schools Without Failure, June 10-14; Discipline in the Classroom, June 24-28; and Religious Education, June 24-28.

Tickets for Dr. Glasser's April 24 appearance at Saint Mary's College are $2.00 and may be purchased at the downtown office of the St. Joseph Bank and Trust Company, or through the Office of Programming at the College.

Opinion

Major Breakthrough

Tom White

Articulate Believers?

Responding to Fr. Hesburgh's challenge for comments on the COUP report, the Faculty Senate last night passed an amendment to the section on Catholic Character, specifically regarding hiring of faculty with religious considerations. Their proposal reflects the very spirit that the Priorities report suggests towards our Catholic character and deserves immediate attention.

The Amendment

The proposed amendment deals with the policy towards recruitment of faculty which states that they "...should exercise care to attract and appoint from among the most competent teachers...who are articulate believers;"

Their proposal suggests the deletion of "and appoint." Not only for considerations of discrimination should this amendment be adopted, but more importantly to endure the University's declared commitment to Christianity as well as Catholicism.

Catholic: First Priority

Without doubt, Notre Dame is and should continue to be, as the COUP report states, a Catholic institution of Catholic character.

However, the carrying over of preference for Catholics in recruitment of faculty does more to damage Catholic tradition at Notre Dame than develop it. The considerations in faith can not be confined to labels of Catholics or non-Catholics.

What could be more ridiculous than hiring qualifications based on a declared label of belief?

Labels Definable?

According to the COUP report, Notre Dame should search out faculty with a commitment to Christ in service and sacrifice. Certainly the Catholic faith professes such a commitment. But again, this should not rule out those of other faiths if we wish to fulfill our added commitment to Christianity.

As the priorities report admits, there exist numerous scholars, who while they may not claim the Catholic tradition or Christian faith, that add to our moral and spiritual endeavors.

Their worth is vital to the modern ecumenism of Notre Dame.

Proposal Warranted

The Faculty Senate attempts to insure our Catholic and Christian responsibilities with their proposal to broaden the considerations in faculty hiring practices.

They have accepted Fr. Hesburgh's as well as Notre Dame's challenge to evaluate our future in terms of the COUP report. Let not this or any subsequent proposals fall upon deaf ears

-Tom Drape

Much to the dismay of a certain president, the national office holder may soon be delivered from the status of a commodity; no longer to be bought and sold, under the guise of honest election. The senate last week, finally passed a formidable campaign reform measure.

If one believes as I do, that all corrupt politicians do not choose to be, the measure is indeed a dramatic step forward. Through public financing, the candidate would be severed from the corporate umbilical cord. The cord which strangles him morally, but without which he could not even be born into the political mainstream.

The dilemma of campaign financing is no more clearly illustrated than in Kansas, where Democratic governor Robert Docking has shown that election scandals are not limited to the president, or the Republican party alone. Recently, Docking's brother and chief aid were indicted for their part in a kick-back scheme which settled a $30,000 campaign debt. It wasn't a pocket-filling venture that prompted the kick-back action; it was the exorbitant price of political office.

Like certain other capable American politicians, Robert Docking is a man of limited personal wealth. Every election poses the threat of defeat at the hands of a better financed opponent, a more potent campaign machine. A man such as Docking, with an excellent twelve year record as governor, is driven to wonder how his excellence will benefit the people, if he is not first elected to office. And so, despite a pure desire to serve the people, the candidate is compromised before even elected.

While the reform measure would alleviate problems for men like Docking, it is not a panacea for political corruption. There will always be the self-serving politician whose under-handed dealings aren't confined to the campaign alone. Perhaps he's the public "servant" with a compulsion for having his home refurnished, an aversion to paying taxes.

Still, the new measure is a major breakthrough. As might have been expected, it did not come easy amidst the proverbial opponents of progress: Southern Dixiecrats and Richard Nixon. James Allen, Alabama's other glowing symbol of national short-sightedness, staged a marathon filibuster in opposition. But it was a tribute to the measure, that a coalition of strange senate bed-fellows like Hugh Scott, Mike Mansfield and Walter Mondale finally cancelled Allen's show.

In a larger sense, it was especially satisfying to see Allen remanded to his seat. Last December, with similar legislation pending and Allen struggling to keep another one of his filibusters alive, the White House dispatched an Air Force plane to return with two Oklahoma seanttors, in Allen's support. A contentible act, in light of the fact that only three weeks earlier, the president had poedged: "To do everything in his power to see that future campaigns to not get out of hand."

It is obvious that the president will not sign campaign reform into law once it has emerged from the House. Mr. Nixon had described public financing as a "Raid on the public treasury."

And yet, Americans can take comfort in knowing that campaign reform is inevitable. It is an idea too crucial to die at the hands of veto. It will wait in the shadows, with the knowledge that a president's term is but four years, and sometimes less.

a smile, a rose, and the senator

an interview with margaret chase smith

Editor's Note: Senator Margaret Chase Smith, former Republican Senator from Maine, is visiting the Notre Dame campus this week as a fellow of the Woodrow Wilson National Foundation. Wearing her traditional red rose, Senator Smith gave the Observer the following interview.

Observer: What does being a Woodrow Wilson fellow entail?

Senator Smith: Well, the objective of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation is to bring the community and the campus a little closer together, to have a better understanding in the community of the campus and the students and faculty, and a better understanding by the students and faculty of the community. As I understand it, it was believed that if representatives from various areas—the business professions, government, politics, the Church and so forth—with practical experience could go on to campuses and talk with students and faculty perhaps a little of the practical could rub off on the students who had it from the theoretical. And perhaps the visiting professors or senior fellows as they are called would get some of the feeling of the book-learning. Altogether, it is a cooperative thing that's hoped to bring a better understanding and a greater desire on the part of the young people to reverse some of the trends which have been developed and are, perhaps, not too good for the country.

Observer: Have you been keeping active in political affairs since you left the Senate?

Senator Smith: Not very much. I served so very, very long and had a long time in both the House and Senate. Of course, I keep up with the day to day news and try to keep myself informed. But I have not done anything politically as far as campaigns are concerned. I feel that after the outcome of my own campaign of 1972, perhaps it would be well for me to take a little rest from politics and let someone else do it. So I've not participated on the campaign trails.

Observer: There was much criticism of Senator Muskie during that campaign because he supported the Democratic candidate who opposed you. Do you feel that he somehow violated a certain unwritten code of the Senate?

Senator Smith: Well, this is an area that I would not want to make a judgment on Senator Muskie. I was disappointed, of course, largely because he used age as the reason for his support for my opponent rather than my voting record. My voting record, I think, could not be challenged. If it could have been they would have gotten into it during the campaign.

So we all have a right to our own views and I'm not critical of Senator Muskie. If he felt that he wanted a change that was his right. Yet I was disappointed, of course, for him to say that when he was seventy, he would know better than to run for reelection. I noticed he corrected it the next day at a press conference and said he didn't know he meant exactly that because he might be running when he was ninety. So he must have heard from home.

Observer: Do you feel that Watergate and the President's other troubles affected the recent Michigan elections?

Senator Smith: I can't tell about that. We have a right to assume so. Yet, on the other hand whether it was a protest vote on all that has been going on, whether it was a protest vote on the president's participation, whether it was a more desirable candidate who won—I didn't know either one of the candidates and I have no right to even speculate on what it was—but it could be any number of reasons.

I think the Jerry Ford district that was taken by a Democrat was very cloy. It came about by the stay-at-homes as a protest vote. I don't think there's much question about that. But this last one, I don't know enough about it to give you a reasonable answer.

Observer: Was the President's campaigning in the last Michigan election a detriment to the GOP candidate? Should he have stayed in Washington?

Senator Smith: Well, I think there's a time for the President to go out around. I, again, am not the one to make a judgment on it because I always felt that people in the state were well able to make their own decisions without an outside coming in. I would prefer to have the President come in at some meeting that was not partisan—outside of the campaign rather than during a campaign, as far as I personally am concerned.

Observer: Do you seek any likely presidential candidates for '76?

Senator Smith: No, I think it's too early. I think we should get through the 1974 campaigns and see where we're going from here out, but begin immediately following the November elections and get into the 1976 decisions without waiting until 1976 for it.

I think there are any number of highly qualified candidate—will be. I think that they're not necessarily from the Senate, however. It seems to me that there many other highly qualified, experienced people—experienced in administration—who would well qualify if they were willing to go into it.

Observer: Is President Nixon nurturing the GOP party?

Senator Smith: I think the president would help the party and help the nation if he would expedite action and not continue the delay. If he is not going to give the information that is called for it seems to me that he should state it and stay with it. I personally believe that he could do a great deal to expedite action. I believe that the Senate Watergate Committee had very, very full and complete hearings. They could be summarized and analyzed and be used by the Judiciary Committee of the House in expediting its action.

But if, of course, the White House delays and there's a delay on the part of any members of the House, there's a double delay which can be very damaging. I think the damage that is coming out from this is the confusion and the suspicion that has been created and continues to increase. The suspicions on the part of the American people are far more damaging than any action that might come by impeachment and Senate trial.

Observer: Should President Nixon resign?

Senator Smith: No. I am very much opposed to the President's resigning. I think this would not solve anything. It would be damaging to our system, because it would indicate if after elections any group wanted to make a change they could start accusations and perhaps do some of the things they are doing now. I think the only way that will clear the air and bring about a more stabilizing situation in this country is for the House to vote impeachment. But there should be a clear understanding of the difference between impeachment and conviction: that impeachment is simply a means of saying we have some things that need to be looked into under judicial process. The impeachment is voted and goes over to the Senate for hearing chaired by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court who I think has the confidence and respect of the American people generally.

The hearings could be held. Mr. Nixon, the President of the United States, would have opportunity to prove his innocence if he is innocent and if he is not, then he should be proved guilty and the American people should know what the guilt is. And then with a complete housecleaning in the Executive Branch of the government we could go on to the business of running the government. But first we must understand the difference between impeachment and conviction.

I haven't seen anything to date that would indicate that he had done anything illegal. What the future proves, we'll have to wait for. I go on the assumption that a person is innocent until proven guilty. And of course, the President has not been proven guilty.

Observer: While you were in the Congress, did you ever feel that your sex was a handicap? Say, for instance, on the Armed Services Committee?

Senator Smith: That question would better be asked of the senators I served with.

No. I did not. I consider women people. I believe, I feel very strongly that one should not take on responsibilities unless they feel they are qualified, unless they are willing the full responsibilities without special privileges. I have never asked for special privileges. And never received any. I have always carried my part of the responsibility.

I like to think that I continue to be a lady. But I was not elected as a woman senator. I was elected as one of two senators from the state of Maine. As a member of the House and the Senate I always demanded and received whatever was due one in my position, both as one of the two senators from the state of Maine and as one on those important committees on which I served. In those positions I always appreciated when fellow senators said that I was a lady but firm when it came to anything that belonged to me and my position.

Observer: You co-sponsored the Equal Rights Amendment. What did you hope it would accomplish?

Senator Smith: I have always co-sponsored the Equal Rights Amendment with the reservation that I was and am for equal rights without special privileges. I think it must be fully understood that in having a constitutional amendment that gives women equal rights carries with it the full responsibilities and not given to special legislation for women or special privileges.

Observer: By equal responsibilities and special privileges do you mean, for instance that women should be drafted?

Senator Smith: I think if they ask for equal rights they have to take their position as full fledged representative citizens, yes.

Observer: Some people feel that the amendment cannot change the long-standing attitudes of the people and therefore the amendment will not accomplish much. How do you feel about this?

Senator Smith: Well, I just think that if it isn't going to make any difference why object to it? Let's have the Constitution clear in these days with the women having earned the hard way their independence. They're full fledged citizens. Let the Constitution say so and have the administration of the law rule.

Observer: As the first woman nominated to the Presidency, do you feel that people should begin to think about having women in higher offices?

Senator Smith: I think qualified women, yes. I always use the word qualified. I think that it is very essential that women appointees, or women candidates should be sure that they are going to give whatever they're asking for, all that is required, and are capable of doing.

I think every time there is a women candidate who is not qualified doesn't help the cause of women. But it must be remembered that there have been many pioneer women and a great deal of work done in a few short years that have brought us to the place we're in now. Women are people. And it should go on the basis of qualified people rather than qualified men or women.

Astronaut symposium moved to ACC due to large interest

Due to the large public interest in the astronauts' symposium of the University of Notre Dame's Engineering Centennial Celebration, the event has been moved from the CCE auditorium to the ACC arena.

The new location for the free, public symposium, which will be held at 2 p.m. Friday (April 26), will allow the entire audience to see the event "live." An overflow crowd at the CCE auditorium would have had to view it on closed circuit television.

In the symposium, moderated by Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh,

C.S.C., Notre Dame president, astronauts William A. Anders, Col. Frank Borman, Charles Conrad, Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin, and James A. McDivitt will discuss some of the philosophical questions which have resulted from man's conquering space.

Two panelists, Anders and Borman, were members of the Apollo 8 crew, which made the first lunar flight. Currently, Anders is a commissioner of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and Borman is senior vice president of operations for Eastern Airlines.

Conrad, who commanded Apollo 12 and piloted the Gemini 5 and 11 missions, and Dr. Kerwin were members of the Skylab 2 crew.

Conrad commanded the mission while Kerwin served as science pilot. Conrad now is vice president-operations for American Television and Communications Corporation, Denver, Colo. A medical doctor, Kerwin recently was named chief of physician astronauts for NASA.

McDivitt, who is senior vice president of Consumers Power Company, Jackson, Mich., commanded the Apollo 9 ten-day earth orbital mission and was command pilot of Gemini 4, a 66 orbit mission.

The symposium is one of several events in a special two-day celebration marking 100 years of engineering education at Notre Dame. Other centennial highlights include a Student Recognition Luncheon at which students will be honored for achievement and service to the college, the presentation of Honor Awards at a Centennial Banquet to several individuals and an organization for significant contributions to the advancement of engineering or architecture, and the awarding of honorary degrees at a special academic convocation.

The main speaker at the convocation will be Dr. Jerome Wiesner, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Notre Dame, which was the first American Catholic university to offer engineering courses, provides undergraduate and graduate degree programs in aerospace, chemical, civil, electrical and mechanical engineering, metallurgy and materials science, engineering science and architecture. The College of Engineering, under Dean Joseph C. Hogan, includes six departments with 85 faculty members and 1,009 students including freshman intents.

Campus housing guaranteed for all

by George Velcich
Staff Reporter

"Anyone who turned in his campus housing contract by April 15 will be given a room in the hall of his choice," stated Fr. John Mulcahy, director of campus residence, when questioned about the campus situation next fall.

All but approximately 10 of the over 800 beds originally needed were found when a large number of students with safe housing numbers did not return their contracts. Those ten will be off campus unless other students cancel their reservations, forfeiting their $50 pre-registration fee.

feiting their $50 pre-registration fee.

"Presently, we have 105 cards that were turned in late: those constitute our waiting list. If people choose not to retain their reservations those 105 will begin to get rooms," Mulcahy explained.

Three halls have an excess of residents planned for next year: Alumni, Morrissey, and Keenan. The office will shift approximately 30 incoming freshman into other dorms rather than transfer present students to other halls.

"Most students who are in doubt about their situation will know by May 10," concluded Fr. Mulcahy.

Campus Ministry collects funds for tornado victims

by William Murphy
Staff Reporter

The Office of Campus Ministry recently collected funds and clothing to aid tornado victims in southern Indiana. The collection was organized by Campus Ministry with the help of the Hall President's Council and the Community Service Director in each dormitory.

Funds collected in each dorm and in Sacred Heart Church totaled $1,630.40. According to Sister Jane Pitz this money was given to the Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund to be distributed as was necessary to the tornado victims.

Sister Pitz also noted that four station wagons were filled with clothes by the student body to aid the disaster victims. The clothes were given to the salvation Army who was organizing the clothes distribution program in the emergency areas.

Sister Pitz announced that Campus Ministry had received a letter from James Goodin, chairman of the St. Joseph County Chapter of the American Red Cross, in which the chapter expressed its "grateful appreciation" to the Notre Dame community for its donations to the disaster relief fund.

Netters swamp Michigan squads for 13th victory

by John Vincent

The Notre Dame tennis team captured its 13th victory in 18 matches as they defeated a fine Central Michigan squad 8-1 at the Courtney Tennis Center on Friday. It was the second time in less than a week that the Irish manhandled the opposition beating Western Michigan on Wednesday by the same score.

Junior Chris Kane turned in a gutsy performance as he defeated Central Michigan's Marc Gelina 7-6, 6-7, 7-5. Kane was down by 4-1 and later 5-2 in the third set before staging his remarkable comeback.

It was the eighth season victory for the Rancho Sante Fe, California native.

Senior Mark Reilly, who suffered a serious leg injury in a car accident last winter, has returned to the Irish lineup and added skill and experience to the squad. In the six matches since his comeback he has captured five and dropped only one. Coach Tom Fallon has continued moving him up in the lineup starting him out at the sixth

Stickmen lose; Purdue tonight

by George Eckes

The difference between victory and defeat for the N.D. Lacrosse team against Chicago Friday night was the play of Chicagoan Doug Carter, an ex-All American from Maryland who pocketed six goals en route to a 8-4 victory over the Irish.

It was a see-saw battle through the 1st half and most of the 3rd quarter. At the end of the first quarter Rich Caron had knotted the game at 1-1 and at halftime it was 2-2 thanks to Ron Sadowski's goal with 8:58 left in the 2nd.

The defensive struggle ended after the half when Steve Tarnow put the Irish into the lead 4-3 with his second goal of the period 10:45 into the third quarter.

Then Carter went into action. Taking the ensuing face-off from Jay Williams he rushed down the field and slammed goal number four past Irish goalie Ken Wright, who took on the starting reigns due to Joe Lepley's recent broken thumb which prevents him from playing the remainder of the season. Twenty-five seconds later Carter dumped in goal number five, and with 1:25 left in the third period goal number six made the score 6-4 going into the last stanza.

The dramatics ended when two goals by Chicago extended the lead to 8-4.

Chicago went on to take tournament honors with a win on Saturday and Notre Dame was able to salvage the weekend with a high-scoring 11-10 barnstorming win over Ohio University on a windy Sunday morning.

Wednesday the stickmen take on Purdue on Cartier Field.

position to where he is now playing in the fifth spot.

Sophomore Juan Inchauste continued his fine form Friday as he defeated CM's Mike Ackerman 6-3, 6-2. It was Inchauste's 15th victory of the season as he has dropped only three. This season is the first taste of collegiate tennis for Inchauste, who was a finalist in the New England singles championship last summer.

The match between Notre Dame and Ohio State was called off because of the rain and wind on Sunday.

Weather cold, bats hot as Irish lose to Wolverines

by John Higgins

University of Michigan 18, Notre Dame 11. No, despite the football-like score, the Big 10 gridiron co-champions did not upset the nation's number-one football team yesterday, but it was a day better suited to football, or better yet, outdoor ice hockey and snowball fights, than a fair-weather sport such as baseball. Numbered by 35-degree weather, a strong, biting wind and particularly 18 Wolverine hits, 10 of them for extra bases, three Irish hurlers failed to contain the potent Michigan attack as Notre Dame's season slate fell to 10-17.

Yesterday's action, originally scheduled as a doubleheader, was reduced to a single nine-inning contest to the relief of all those unlucky enough to have had to sit through the unspring-like South Bend afternoon. The five pitchers who saw action, however, may have regretted that the game was played at all as their inflated ERA's 11 walks, and sore arms will attest to.

The cold did not have such an adverse effect on the hitters, though, as 27 hits were showered over Cartier Field. Free-swinging was the key to the offensive explosion as hitters teed off on the tormented pitchers, probably so they could get their plate chores over with as quickly as possible and return to the shelter of the dugouts.

Michigan, scoring in all frames but the first, erased a 2-1 Irish lead with three runs in the third to take the lead for good, with Ted Mahan and Pete Ross leading the charge with run-producing doubles off Irish starter and loser Mark Pittman.

Larry Gustavson upped the lead to 5-2 with a long home run to right field in the fourth, and four straight doubles brought in four more tallies in the fifth.

Notre Dame, held scoreless on two hits for three innings, broke loose for four runs of its own in the fifth on two Michigan errors, two walks, and singles by Pete Schmidt and Ron Goodman to send winning pitcher Arthur Adams packing.

Bob Stratta relieved Pittman in the sixth and surrendered back-to-back leadoff triples to Dan Damani and Dick Walterhouse for one run, and after the Irish went down 1-2-3 in their half, Michigan put the game on ice, so to speak, with three markers on a walk and singles by Gustavson and Damani to pot an insurmountable 13-6 advantage.

Notre Dame managed two runs in the seventh but one hit, Jim Smith's second single of the day, and rallied in the bottom of the ninth to score thrice on Smith's free pass, Mark Schmitz' single, two-run triple by Pat Coleman and a sacrifice fly by Pete Clemens.

In between, the Wolverines netted two runs in the eighth on four singles off Stratta and three runs in the final frame behind just one hit, another Damani triple, against reliever Mitch Stoltz.

The Irish belted out nine hits in

The play here was close, but the score wasn't as the Irish nine dropped another game, this time to Michigan, on a wind-swept Cartier Field. Notre Dame is off until this weekend when Illinois State comes in for a three-game set.

Relaxing with Sully

Golf, relaxing? Give me a break. Frustrating, maybe. But not relaxing.

How can you have relaxation, peace of mind, if you consistently find yourself hitting out of sandtraps, through trees, anywhere except to the green? And putting, forget it. How can you be relaxed if you have to can a 10-footer to save bogey? Instead of golf, the game should be called chase.

Well, there are six golfers on this campus who have found the hidden meaning to life, those relaxing moments on a golf course which we below-average duffers wish for, dream of, read about in golf magazines. They're a talented sextet, a confident sextet.

This confidence came only through hard work and determination, the same determination which beat Southern Cal, the same determination which beat Alabama, the very same confidence which won countless basketball games, including an impossible one, UCLA.

This same confidence has shown itself in all kinds of weather and against the best competition which the Midwest has to offer. This confidence won three dual matches by unbelievable margins. It brought a third place in a highly-competitive invitational last weekend in Indianapolis.

It is a shame you couldn't have seen it when you had the chance. You would have seen Jeff Burda rolling a second shot on 18 within eight feet of the cup. You would have seen his fellow co-captain, Paul Betz, blast his third shot out of the sand on the same hole.

Jim Culveyhouse has confidence. There is no other word to describe his play on and around a green. His walk illicit it, and so does his scorecard.

Paul Koprowski has it, too. More often than not this season, he has used it to his advantage to shoot extraordinary rounds. You couldn't ask more from this newcomer.

Confidence can easily be shaken in a golfer if he allows himself to become too emotional after a shot. That's the difference between the average doffer and the great one—the ability to control emotion.

Mike Kistner not only scrambled against Loyola, but his clubs lived to tell the story about an horrendous eight on the par-four 13th. Kistner wisely and confidently allowed them too.

Finally, there is Ed Whelan. He is only the sixth man. In basketball, the sixth man is just as important. He is the man who must have the cool, the confidence to come off the bench cold and pour in some important shots.

Whelan, however, is different. He could possibly be an average golfer and was until he learned to control his emotions. Now he's not only the sixth man, but also, as Betz says, "capable of breaking par."

Talent and confidence equals relaxation. And relaxation for the Notre Dame golf team is supplied by first-year coach Noel O'Sullivan.

During the course—physical education—of everyone's career here at Notre Dame, O'Sullivan has surfaced. You've met him in a handball court, you've met him near the swimming pool. And during the spring time, you've met him in groups at either the practice tee, the driving range in the Rock or out on the putting green. "Gentlemen, this is golf—that's g-o-l-f," K.O. mimics him.

Someone once said to me you mimic persons you only admire. Well, I can mimic President Nixon, but I would prefer to mimic Sully. I like him, and so do his players.

Burda—"He has made it a relaxed atmosphere. This might sound farfetched, but it is in everyone's mind to make it to the NCAA. Coach O'Sullivan is responsible for that. He's the most enthusiastic person I've ever met. Things are really looking up."

Betz—"Sully got me thinking I could play better. The difference this year is his motivation. He's got us thinking and playing golf everyday. Everyone wants to do very well, and it is a lot more enjoyable."

Kistner—"Sully has instituted a positive attitude. He's made all the difference. Golf is 90 percent mental, and Sully has supplied us with a feeling of confidence."

Koprowski—"Sully has given everyone a fair chance. He's given me and everyone else a lot of encouragement. That's the big thing."

Culveyhouse—"Seriously, he's the finest man I've ever met, perfect for the program. He's behind you 100 percent. He's a super guy who keeps us all loose. To him, the team always comes first."

Whelan—"He's allowed everyone to be more relaxed. Everyone wants to do well, to play the way they should. We don't have to worry about organization. Sully takes care of that and allows us to play to our capabilities."

Someone once told me you could tell a person's nature by his actions on a golf course. Well, if this is the case, how can Noel O'Sullivan, as energetic as anyone you'll ever meet, supply relaxation?

But, then again, who cares? Certainly the Notre Dame golfers don't. They're thankful to have him, and they might just be thanking and thanking themselves right to a NCAA bid.

FCA meets in ACC

The formal creation of Notre Dame's Fellowship of Christian Athletes will take place this evening in the team meeting room of the ACC.

Dues will be collected from student-athletes and adult sponsors at the meeting. All FCA members are required to pay the dues. The chapter membership is valid for one year from the date of payment. Those who wish only to attend meetings are not required to pay dues.

Coach Bill Hickey has agreed to become the adult advisor of the Notre Dame FCA chapter. Hickey and Irish center Mark Brenneman recently spoke to a group at Westminster Presbyterian Church about the FCA effort at Notre Dame.

Election of officers will occur at the final meeting of the school year. Four officers are slated to be elected—captain, captain-elect, secretary and treasurer.
