

Mason predicts possible overcrowding next year

by John McGrath
Senior Staff Reporter

Despite Monday's decision to cancel a proposed off-campus lottery, there may still be an overcrowding situation in the fall, according to Tom Mason, vice-president for Business Affairs.

"I'm sure that there is going to be some overcrowding, but I think that in the next five months, we will be able to reduce the potential for overcrowding substantially," Mason commented.

"Even if we absolutely couldn't do anything...I think overcrowding is still more acceptable to students than a lottery," he added.

In a letter released Monday night, University Provost Timothy O'Meara announced that the overcrowding that was experienced last August would be reduced, in his words, "by more than half," without the need for an off-campus lottery.

Mason concurred with O'Meara's estimate. "We believe, based on our best estimates--our best crystal ball--that overcrowding will be less than half of what it was this year," he said.

When asked to reveal the specific figures that influenced the decision to scrap the lottery, however, no Administration officials would comment.

"The numbers get everyone confused," Mason stated. "Figures are really never positive."

Fr. John Van Wolvlear, vice-president for Student Affairs, came closest to revealing the nature of the statistics when he referred to a student's independent analysis--presented to the Campus Life Council and Hall President's Council last November--as "remarkably" close.

John Dillane, a Keenan Hall resident, had projected in November that there would be only seven additional on-campus residents next year. He based his figures upon an analysis of on-campus housing needs for the academic year 1975-76 through the present term. From this analysis, he concluded that this year's junior class would reverse the tendency of last year's juniors to demand on-campus housing.

"It was just funny that John was so close to being right--it was remarkable," Van Wolvlear mused.

Mason admitted, however, that the prospect of an impending lottery may have influenced some students to change their housing preference.

"Students were concerned," Mason said. "I'm sure that led many to make the decision to move off-campus."

Mason observed that there will basically be the same number of students living on-campus this year as there were last year.

"The basic premise we work from is that there are 6800 undergraduate students competing for 5800 beds," Mason stated. "That means that 1000 students have to live off-campus no matter what."

"The real solution is getting on with the HUD proposal and getting up a new dorm as soon as possible," Mason continued.

O'Meara revealed in his letter on Monday that the University is reapplying for a HUD grant to supplement money that donors are expected to contribute towards the construction of a new women's dormitory.

Mason revealed that he met yesterday with representatives from a Minneapolis architecture firm to discuss the preparation of the HUD proposal, which must be submitted by June 1.

Ex-EPA chief Ruckleshaus speaks on diversity, strength

by Mary Pat Ellis

William D. Ruckleshaus, former administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, last night told members of the Saint Mary's Business Associates Program, that "One of the greatest strengths of this country is its diversity."

Ruckleshaus was at Saint Mary's last night to address an audience of 45 business executives whose companies contribute unrestricted gifts to Saint Mary's.

After a short review of his previous experiences in the government and in business, Ruckleshaus discussed the importance of private educational institutions, such as Saint Mary's, to the diversification in the U.S. He also said that private education won't survive the next few decades without the financial support of the business community.

Ruckleshaus then turned his talk to the concept of "freedom" in today's society. "Individual freedom, free institutions are in trouble," he said.

He cited nations that emerged since WWII, and most recently China, as suffering from the problems of trying to attain "freedom". President Carter's Human Rights idea is very appealing to these nations, Ruckleshaus said, "but it hasn't proven very practical."

Part of the reason that ideas like Human Rights don't succeed is that people are reluctant to trust anything. According to Ruckleshaus. He said there is a difference between the people's

Iran in chaos, Khomeini makes appeal

TEHRAN, Iran [AP] - Iran's revolutionary leaders turned to liberal, Western-oriented politicians yesterday to bring order to their country and pave the way for Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic republic. But lynchings were reported in the provinces and mysterious gunmen fired on the Tehran offices of the new prime minister.

The newspaper Ettelaat reported six people had been hanged in the northwest city of Tabriz on the orders of religious leaders. The newspaper also said insurgents ripped the emblem off the U.S. Consulate in Tabriz.

The reports could not be confirmed here but, if true, may signal that the new government still lacks total control. It has repeatedly called on jubilant Iranians not to resort to "cruelty" in the wake of victory.

There were no new reports of violence or arrests involving Americans in Iran. A contingent of 69 U.S. Marines was reported standing by in the Azore Islands in the Atlantic in case Marines guarding the U.S. Embassy needed reinforcement. Six helicopters that could be used to evacuate threatened Americans were standing by in Italy.

Khomeini made his first nationwide television address last night and repeated appeals for the return of weapons stolen from military bases during the

Energy chief Schlesinger says world-wide oil shortage possible

WASHINGTON [AP] - Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger told Congress yesterday there is "a high probability" against quick restoration of Iranian oil production under the new government of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Schlesinger testified that if the oil cutoff remains through June, it could bring about worldwide oil shortages as serious as the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo.

In fact, Khomeini may be powerless to reopen the valves that had supplied 10 percent of the free world's oil, even if he wants to, Schlesinger told the House energy and power subcommittee.

"It is plain that control of the oil fields belongs to certain radical groups" and political elements not loyal to Khomeini, he said.

"There is no assurance they will respond to urgings from Tehran and if they do, no indication they will do so quickly," Schlesinger said. The Carter administration Cabinet officer said the whole issue remains "iffy" because Khomeini's government hasn't yet signaled its intentions on whether to resume oil exports.

While stressing the seriousness of the situation, Schlesinger echoed President Carter's assertion Monday that the predicament had not yet become critical.

And he said that voluntary measures - as opposed to gasoline rationing or banning Sunday sales of gasoline - should be capable of offsetting the loss to the United States from the Iranian oil cutoff.

To the steps outlined by Carter - heeding the 55 mph speed limit, turning thermostats down to 65 degrees and avoiding unnecessary driving - Schlesinger listed other measures the administration is promoting.

These include shifts away from oil to coal and natural gas by industries able to make such conversions and diversion of large quantities of natural gas from producing states into the interstate market to accommodate such fuel shifts.

Schlesinger also said the administration is considering temporarily waiving environmental requirements that limit burning of coal and slowing down the timetable under which refineries must shift completely from regular to "unleaded" gasoline.

Schlesinger reiterated his contention, first made to the Senate Energy Committee last week, that the situation is "prospectively more serious" than the 1973-74 oil embargo.

The net effect of this in the United States is the loss of about 500,000 barrels a day, but Schlesinger said this may increase to 800,000 a day under shortage-sharing agreements between the United States, Israel and other fuel-importing nations.

The deteriorating situation in the Persian Gulf nation drives home the point that "the day of reckoning is coming closer," when world demand for oil starts exceeding supply.

"If Iran stays down, we will have to take measures to constrain demand by at least 500,000 barrels a day," Schlesinger said. But, he stressed that these measures would not include mandatory steps like gasoline rationing.

Carter, Portillo bargain for trade, petroleum

WASHINGTON (AP) - When President Carter and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo lay their cards on the table in Mexico City this week, Lopez Portillo will be holding two high trumps - oil and natural gas. They give Mexico a strong hand in dealing for U.S. cooperation on trade, immigration, and other touchy issues. It is easy to cast recent U.S.-Mexican contacts in an apparently simple mold: Mexico offered to sell the United States natural gas at $2.60 per thousand cubic feet; the U.S. turned it down because the price was too high, Mexico got miffed and threatened to sell elsewhere, and the critics said U.S. Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger had bungled a chance for more energy.

Red Brigades 'informer' fails to dupe Rome police

ROME (AP) - A man who said he was a Red Brigades defector and could lead police to the killers of former Premier Aldo Moro was charged today with trying to swindle the Italian government, police reported. Pasquale Frezza, 44, was apprehended Monday near San Remo, a resort on the Italian Riviera, and taken to a Rome prison for questioning. Police said the suspect has a criminal record for swindling. Earlier, Christian Democrat Sen. Vittorio Cervone, a close friend of Moro, identified Frezza as the man who had offered to identify Red Brigades leaders in return for money and protection. Red Brigades terrorists kidnapped and killed the former premier last spring.

Philly's heart returns for Valentine's Day

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - The most famous heart in Philadelphia, all four tons of it, is back in circulation just in time for Valentine's Day. Major surgery begun last June has rehabilitated the 18-foot, walk-through heart in the Franklin Institute. The 25-year-old hunk of steel and plaster was strengthened with fiberglass, and new treads were installed on the stairs on which tourists travel through ventricles, auricles and veins. Today - Valentine's Day - it is to be dedicated in a formal reopening by Dr. Michael DeBaakey, the Texas heart surgeon.

Commission plans contest

by Aileen Lavin
Staff Reporter

Tim Coughlin, HPC representative from the Student Union Social Commission, announced plans for the annual Snow Sculpture Contest last night at the HPC meeting in Howard Hall.

The contest will be held from Feb. 17-22 with cash prizes going to the top three winners. There are no restrictions, except that the sculptures be external structures. Coughlin gave the word that "anything goes."

Representatives from Carroll Hall were also at the meeting and they announced that the results of the petitions recently handed out in the dorms regarding parietals are expected to be returned by Thursday. The representatives stated, "To carry any weight, we have to have at least 80 percent of the people show support for the movement through the survey."

The petition was designed to evaluate the general feeling of the students regarding the present status of parietals.

An Tostal Chairman, Paul Callahan, announced an organizational meeting on Sunday night at 7:00 in LaFortune Little Theatre. "It will be a big meeting; we are starting to really plan the events," he emphasized.

Next week's meeting will be held in Keenan Hall.

C.A.P. to hold forum

A question and answer period will follow. All interested persons are encouraged to attend, especially freshmen who have not yet decided which college to enroll in next semester.

Flanner Food Sales' management and employees are happy with last semester's $2500 profit. [Photo by Cate Magennis]

Flanner nets $2500 Food sales profits vary

Editor's Note:
The following article is the first in a three-part series exploring campus food sales operation. This initial story deals with the profit and management of many of the outlets. Following segments will deal with manager selection, social atmosphere and problems involved day-to-day operations.

by John McGrath
Senior Staff Reporter

Food Sales are a common hall institution at Notre Dame, but the adage, "If you've seen one, you've seen them all" could not be further from the truth; each outlet has taken on a distinct personality of its own.

Each dorm on campus has its own food sales, but they differ widely in management, format, product line, and profit. Most outlets offer the same type of products, with many selling soft drinks, pizza, candy and such other items as potato chips, bagels, and hot sandwiches.

One of the most profitable outlets on campus is Flanner Food Sales, where last semester the management cleared $2500 in profit. Other halls such as Zahm, however, run their operation on a more conservative basis.

"We're on a break-even basis," remarked Don Schweighart, manager of Zahm Food Sales, who added, "We figure students get ripped off enough here on campus."

At least one hall's food sales is losing money, however. Admitting that his outlet is "probably the crummiest food sales on campus, Nick Zagotta, one of four partners in Sorin Food Sales, blamed much of his problem on

"rip-offs" and a lack of proper maintenance.

"Maintenance hasn't been in for five years and we have had a lot of trouble with people stealing things," explained Zagotta, who [Continued on page 4]

Motorist strikes ND student after he 'gunned the motor'

by Ann Gales
News Editor

A Notre Dame student was struck by a motorist Sunday afternoon after the UCLA game as he crossed Juniper Rd. coming out of gate ten of the ACC. The student was treated at the infirmary for bruises, but no broken bones were reported.

"The driver had a green light, but no one was paying attention to the signal," an eyewitness said. "There were masses of students crossing the street, and he just drove right into the crowd."

Another witness, who described the motorist as a bearded man wearing a hat pulled low over his eyes, commented that the driver "just put his head down and gunned the motor" as he approached the crowd.

As the car picked up speed, students began to hit its windows with their fists while chasing the car and shouting at the driver to stop.

Witnesses estimated that the vehicle was travelling at about 20 miles per hour when it struck the victim.

Reportedly, the student noticed the car just before he was hit. He jumped up to avoid the full impact of the collision, and thus avoided going under the car, according to one witness.

"The bumper caught him in the shins and he was thrown onto the hood. The guy just kept driving and the student rolled off the car, did a somersault, and landed on the ground," the witness continued.

Students ran after the car to get the license plate number, which was later reported to police. St. Joseph County Police stated yesterday that they are "in the process of tracing the license number, but have as yet made no progress in the case."

reported last semester's profit "wasn't anything to worry about."

There are four basic types of management structure among campus food sales operations: the salaried manager who has a contract with the hall government or a food sales commission; an arrangement in which the manager splits a percentage of the profits with the hall; and operations which pay a flat rental fee to the hall for the use of food sales facilities. Such rentals are negotiated on either a daily or semester-long basis.

Jim Rusconi, manager of Alumni Food Sales, is an example of a salaried manager. Rusconi receives $40 each week for his work, a sum which he has to divide among eight other employees that help him run the outlet. He reported a $300 dollar profit last semester, which he considers less than expected. In past semesters Alumni's profit has been from $500-$600.

Rusconi added that after salaries all profits go toward hall functions.

"This is a service to the hall, but the hall likes to have functions that lose money, so we have to make enough profit to make up for the loss," Rusconi said, adding, "This is what runs the hall."

Matt Brunyansky, an employee at Flanner Food Sales, also reported that all his outlet's profit goes to hall improvement.

"Every section gets $10 and we were even able to get new jerseys for the hockey and football teams with some of the money," Brunyansky commented.

Flanner, Zahm, and Grace are all examples of the salaried manager setup, but some halls such as Lewis, Fisher, Breen-Phillips, and St. Ed's allow their managers to keep a percentage of the outlet's profits for compensation. The rate differs from a 40 percent share for the manager at Lewis to a 70 percent cut of the income going to the operator at St. Ed's.

Louanne Snellgrove, manager of Lewis Food Sales, which made a pre-cut profit of $600 last semester, commented on the percentage system. "It's an incentive for the hall, but also more of an incentive for me to work harder," she said.

At Sorin Food Sales, Zagotta's management group pays a flat five dollar rental fee for each night that the operation is open.

Zagotta admitted that his outlet is losing money, however, adding that with the opening of the Huddle's new delicatessen, sales may be even more adversely affected.

"They've (sales) slacked off lately...invariable it's (the Huddle) gonna hurt us because it's only a five-minute walk away."

Some halls, such as Dillon and Morrissey, require a basic fee from managers of food sales operations as a semester rental for the space. All profits made after the fee is paid are then kept by the managers.

At Dillon, the fee is $650 and at Morrissey, which had pre-rental income of $2100 last semester, the cost of renting space is $700. Both fees were negotiated prior to the beginning of the semester, with the franchise going to the highest bidder or bidding group.

John Peak, manager of Dillon Food Sales, which had an income of over $1000 last semester, commented, "Here at Dillon, the profit isn't so much in the pizzas--it's really in the pop and chips."

It is another story at Keenan Hall's food sales, known as "Zaland," where a large part of the outlet's profits--as well as the biggest part of its reputation--lies in its pizza sales.

Zaland (a shortened form of Pizzaland) became an independent entity two years ago when it broke away from Stanford Food Sales and set up its own quarters in the hall's basement. Now the outlet is averaging a profit of $1000 each semester, as well as pioneering a different form of management--the Zaland Board.

Mark Koenig, an employee, explained that the group is comprised of a worker's representative, the rector, the commissioner (Jim Genista), a representative from hall council, and the hall president.

WHC proposes boycott of Nestles; referendum to gauge student support

by Kevin Gorman

The World Hunger Coalition Sunday night proposed the eliminating of Nestle's corporation products in the University dining halls and vending machines through a referendum in the upcoming student government elections.

The proposal, which can be placed on the ballot by a petition bearing the names of 15 percent of the students, was made in response to "a lack of corporate responsibility on Nestle's part" in handling the infant formula controversy, according to WHC coordinator, Maria Garvy. "As students this is the most responsible activity we could carry out," she said.

The proposal, if implemented, calls for a boycott by the Notre Dame Food Services of all Nestle and Nestle subsidiary products, including, among others, Libby's and Stouffer's.

The Student Board of Commissioners agreed yesterday to let the WHC bring the referendum before the students. Additionally, the WHC said yesterday that they plan to obtain the signatures of approximately 800 students, by this Monday to show that the issue is of interest to students.

Robert J. Robinson, director of Food Services, said yesterday that he was willing to comply with any request of the student body to boycott Nestle's, as long as he had the approval of the administration, according to John Dunbar of the WHC.

Robinson, who was unavailable for comment, got "the green light" from the administration yesterday, Dunbar added. Saint apply as well to its dining hall.

Saint Mary's will begin a petition today to have the boycott

The WHC has encouraged individuals to independently boycott Nestle's for the past year. The WHC's main project this year has been to alert students to what they consider to be the problems of infant malnutrition connected with the use of Nestle's products throughout the Third World. The WHC offered a series of lectures and seminars culminating this past Fall with a day long workshop at St. Mary's, attended by three representatives of the Nestle's corporation.

"We have tried to educate the students for the last year and feel now that we are ready for action," Garvy said.

According to Dunbar, the WHC regards a boycott as the best means of dealing with Nestle's, which is a Swiss corporation and therefore not subject to the stockholder pressure.

"We can only effect them economically," Dunbar stressed.

A separate social action organization on campus, concerned with the recent strike of migrant workers in Ohio, also expressed an interest in boycotting Nestles. Nestles is the parent corporation of Libby's, which together with Cambells, purchases the fruit and vegetables the striking Ohio workers pick.

The organization, CADENA (Spanish for "change"), said yesterday that, while the two issues were "too complex and different" to be placed on the same referendum, they still would support the WHC boycott effort.

Commission tells Congress students remain segregated

Washington [AP] - Nearly half the minority children in America go to segregated schools, and Congress, the administration and the courts all seem to have lost interest in doing much about it, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission said yesterday.

In 1954, the Supreme Court ruled segregation unlawful and harmful to youngsters, but a child born that year could now be in graduate school without ever having attended an integrated school, educator Stephen Horn, vice chairman of the panel, told a news conference.

The occasion was the publication of a commission report critical of Congress for passing anti-busing legislation and of the departments of Justice and Health, Education and Welfare for a lack of zeal in denying federal funds to school districts that defy desegregation orders.

Even the Supreme Court seems to be "retreating from its long-espoused commitment to the right of school children to a desegregated education," the commission said.

Nonetheless, commission chairman Arthur S. Flemming told reporters he believed the American people "deep down" still support the idea of desegre-

High demand causes ticket shortage for parents' weekend president's dinner

by John Ferrol

Due to an unusual amount of ticket requests, a total of thirty families must be denied seating for the Feb. 24 president's dinner during Junior Parents Weekend. "Stepan Center was built to seat only 1600," said JPW chairman Mike Kenney, "and we're already seating 2100."

According to Kenney, the information packet sent to Junior parents asked that they only request three tickets, but many families have requested more. "There have been 2170 tickets requested as of now," stated Kenney, "and there are still more Juniors and parents that want to get in."

Kenney withheld the request of families who desired additional tickets until the Feb. 4 deadline, and then filled post-deadline orders on a first-come, first-serve basis. Families who ordered tickets after the deadline were those put on the waiting list.

Parents and students who have been denied tickets for the dinner have already been contacted, Kenney stated. In compensation, they will be offered tickets to the ND-Lasalle basketball game scheduled for the same night.

Kenney emphasized that previous coordinators of Junior Parents Weekend never encountered this kind of problem. He believed the problem may be due to an extraordinarily large Junior class. "We might want to consider using Century Center next year," Kenney noted.

Kenney preferred to remain optimistic about the weekend, however, and mentioned that he had "a most surprising return" of ticket requests for the breakfast scheduled for Sunday, Feb. 25. He also stressed that he was proud of the way his committee had handled the dinner situation. "Our only problem," he remarked, "is that it's been such a success."

Kenney urges all Juniors who want refunds on the dinner to contact him or his committee before the Weekend arrives. He also encourages any Juniors who are not planning to use their Lasalle basketball ticket to bring them to LaFortune Center today or tomorrow from 12-1 p.m. or from 3-5 p.m., when Juniors will be reserving table space for the dinner.

Commission

Flemming acknowledged Congress has taken an anti-busing turn, but he said that is because the foes of integration, though outnumbered, are more persistent than the opponents of segregation.

The commission has no enforcement power, but is required by law to evaluate the status of school desegregation across the nation from time to time.

The report said the latest figures available indicated that 4.9 million minority children in the country attend schools that are at least "moderately" segregated - and more of them are in the Northeast and the North Central region of the country than in the Deep South.

For the nation overall, 46 percent of minority youngsters attend segregated schools, it said. In the Northeast, 65 percent of minority children do, and in the North Central region it is 68 percent, the commission said. No figure was given for the South alone.

The report singled out for criticism appropriations bill riders co-sponsored by Sens. Joseph Biden, D-Del., and Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., that would prevent HEW "from requiring student transportation where it is the only remaining means to eliminate segregated schools."

Neither senator was available for comment.

The commission said the amendments "undermined the ability of the executive and the judicial branches to guarantee the nation's children and young people their constitutional rights."

Iran

Front leaders have generally espoused what could be considered moderately leftist views, but the new government is certain to avoid military ties with either major world power.

Doonesbury by Trudeau

Bakhtiar was arrested yesterday by armed guerrillas. He was taken blindfolded to Khomeini's headquarters and was reported to have been under protection of Khomeini's prime minister, Mehdi Bazargan, after raiders ransacked his home on the outskirts of Tehran.

Khomeini aides said they did not know what charges Bakhtiar would face. "He is a prisoner of the government," one said. "I assume he will be tried to find out whether or not he is guilty."

In his nationwide address yesterday, Khomeini said: "I congratulate the nation on the success of the revolution. We will all have to work together under the banner of Islam to build the country."

He forbade attacks on military or police installations and promised that all religious minorities will be able to "live in peace and prosperity in the new era in Iran."

Reliable sources reported that unknown assailants opened fire on Bazargan's offices early Tuesday.

At the time Bazargan was meeting in the offices with Karim Sanjaby, his newly appointed foreign minister. The sources said no one was injured and the two men were rushed back to Khomeini headquarters.

Sanjaby, 74, served as the leader of the National Front, a coalition of several liberal parties that opposed the rule of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and supported the man who ousted the shah for a time in the early 1950s, Mohammed Mossadegh.

The National Front's official spokesman, Dariush Forouhar, was selected as labor minister.

Western diplomats said the selection of leading National Front figures indicated that Bazargan, a human rights activist and former Front member, was seeking to broaden support beyond the religious community that had been at the forefront of the anti-shah struggle.

Sanjaby, who holds a doctorate in law from the University of Paris, was snubbed by Khomeini two weeks ago when the Moslem religious leader returned from 14 years in exile. The fact that Sanjaby was selected for the provisional government probably was a result of Bazargan's influence.

American diplomats reportedly have met privately in recent days with Sanjaby and were pleased with the appointment.

As the new government struggled to take hold, Tehran's streets were in marked contrast to the past few days, when armed bands roamed through the city with automatic weapons jutting from car windows.

Guns visible yesterday appeared to be those of authorized "Islamic police" standing guard outside public buildings. Mosques are now the centers of local security organizations and are sending out armed watchmen to guard neighborhoods at the request of local residents.

AFROTC to host conclave

by Janet Rigaux

This weekend promises to be an exciting one for the Notre Dame Air Force ROTC which is sponsoring the annual bi-area ROTC conclave. The conclave begins at noon on Friday, Feb. 16, and will continue through noon on Sunday, Feb. 18. The conclave will be held at the Century Center.

Notre Dame is host of the event this year because they put forth the highest bid. Notre Dame's Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight organization have been responsible for the event's organization.

The conclave is being held to bring together the Air Force ROTC detachment of 24 area colleges so they may discuss policies, present awards, and have fun. Some of the events planned for the conclave include such activities as meetings, luncheons, award ceremonies, cocktail hours, and dancing. According to Mike Herrmann, a member of ND's Air Force ROTC detachment "Saturday will be the big day of the conclave since that is day most activities are planned for."

One of the highlights of Saturday will be the speech given at the luncheon by Major General Leroy W. Svendsen, Jr. Svendsen functions in a dual capacity as Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff, for Manpower and Military Personnel, and as Commander, Air Force Manpower and Personnel Center (AFMPC), Randolph Air Force Base, Texas. Svendsen is responsible for the overall force distribution and management of all Air Force military personnel except general officers.

Another important Air Force man who will be speaking at the conclave is Dr. John J. Martin, an ND graduate. Martin is assistant secretary of the Air Force.

Some of the schools that will be represented at the conclave are Kent State, the University of Evansville, the University of Michigan, as well as many other schools from Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan.

Fr. Hesburgh and other well known ND personalities such as Dr. Emil T. Hofman will also be making appearances at the conclave.

slalom, only one-hundredth of a second behind Byrne.

Other places went to Powers, ninth in the slalom and fourteenth overall, followed by Jeff Whitten, eleventh in the slalom and fifteenth overall.

D'Aquila earned 85 of the women's 125 points, earning bronze medals in the slalom and combined time events and fourth in the giant slalom. Freshman Patti Wilson encountered some problems in the slalom, but came back to take tenth in the giant slalom. Nachess finished sixth in the slalom and eleventh in the giant slalom, seventh place overall. Duffy sustained a knee injury in the slalom race, and will be out for the rest of the season.

The Irish will travel to Brule Mountain next weekend to defend their championship title in a qualification race for the Nationals.

... Ex-EPA chief speaks

healthy skepticism toward politicians and the contempt and cynicism that has come about because of past political scandals that betrayed the public trust.

"Erosion of trust is a serious problem. Free societies won't work without the trust of the people living in the societies," he said.

Ruckelshaus stated that a lack of great leaders is not the cause of governmental problems; the conditions of leadership are not present. He ran down a list of presidents in US history that were considered great, and noted that all served in a time of war or national crisis.

"People are leaving Congress more often now because it's not enjoyable," he said. One reason for this, he said, is that they have to divide into too many issues to keep their constituents happy.

He used as an example the environment—a big issue in the early 70's. In that period, everyone was environment conscious. EPA laws passed promised clean air, water, land by certain dates and sparked many to the task of working for a "clean" environment.

Ruckelshaus said people measured actual progress in cleaning up the environment against unachievable perfection, which made the results seem small by comparison.

"People don't want any laws changed, but want something done," Ruckelshaus said. "Most people are ideological conservatives and operational liberals."

He also made the point that the environmental concerns are not politically partisan. He said that it is the responsibility of every individual—not just the government—to spot a problem and seek a solution. He said that this is the result of people's diversity and freedom to do what they want.

Ruckelshaus ended with the comment that in a truly free system "there is a need for cooperation." The government and business organizations should be on the same side so that "we can demonstrate freedom to the rest of the world by demonstrating success, but it takes trust," he said.

B & D

A very wise man once pointed out that it's easy to smile when the sun is shining. As in, it's easy for a star football player to say how much he loves Notre Dame when he's somewhere between playing for a national championship team and being drafted by the NFL.

But for others, it's not so easy. The broad grin doesn't come as quickly when the mounds of gray snow outside are a pretty accurate reflection of how you're feeling inside.

When Gilbert Salinas says that he wants to stay at Notre Dame, the words don't just go in one ear and out the other. They tend to sink in.

"I want to stay here for the academics," insists Notre Dame's 6-foot-11 sophomore. "I would be stupid if I let little things take me away from something that I've always wanted."

It seems sadly ironic that academics, the biggest reason Salinas lists as influencing his decision to attend Notre Dame, are causing him to miss the second half of the basketball season.

Despite the disappointment of being declared scholastically ineligible, though, Salinas is trying to make the best of the situation by working out with the squad.

"Digger (Phelps) told me that I would still be practicing," explains Salinas, "but I was all for it anyway. In a way, it's better. Knowing that I'm the oppositon, I'm free to run the offense--I don't have to worry about being mentally prepared for the next game."

While he doesn't have to bother himself with preparing for the next game on Notre Dame's schedule, Gilbert is preparing--for next season. "I'm lifting weights again, and I'm already gaining confidence for next year."

The prospect of next season is about all Salinas has to show for a season and a half at Notre Dame. "I think I had my mind programmed that I wasn't going to play very much when I first got here, but I didn't think it would be until my junior year," admits Salinas.

"It was a big change to sit out a lot," Salinas says. "I was mentally prepared for it, but to actually be in that position--well, it hurt. Sometimes I didn't feel that I was a part of the team because I wasn't able to contribute a lot."

Salinas speaks matter-of-factly and with no trace of braggadocio when referring to his sterling prep career in San Antonio, Texas. "In high school, I had all of the attention in the state upon me--up here I had to start all over."

But Salinas feels that the worst is behind him, both academically and in terms of basketball. "I'm in a valley right now, and I'm going to start to reach my peak next year. I know that I can play here, it's just that if you want something good, you have to work for it."

With centers Bruce Flowers and Bill Laimbeer due to graduate in June, the pivot position is a primary concern in Digger Phelps' recruiting scheme. Salinas realizes that fact, and looks upon it as a challenge.

"If I can't beat out the freshmen next year, then I don't deserve to be on the court--if I don't play next year, it will be my fault."

"Everything is going to start falling into place for me next year," says Salinas. "It will be just like dominoes."

And after all the dominoes have fallen, it's a good bet that Gilbert Salinas will be left standing.

MADISON, Wis. [AP] - The 1976 U.S. Olympic hockey coach says he's not surprised that a Russian hockey team took two out of three games from a team of National Hockey League all-stars last week.

"Why? Because they are better," said Bob Johnson, whose University of Wisconsin hockey squad has won two NCAA titles in the last five years.

"Systems didn't beat the NHL. It was fundamentals. They are better at the fundamentals of the game," Johnson said of the Soviets. "They skate, they pass, they shoot. They work on the fundamentals. You can talk about complicating the game, but hockey is still the fundamentals. And they practice them," he said.

Johnson, who guided the U.S. team to a fourth place finish at Innsbruck, said he took notes during Sunday's televised 6-0 Russian thrashing of the NHL stars.

"The NHL has no excuses," he said. "The Russians came and beat the NHL at the time they wanted to play, with NHL rules in an NHL rink with an NHL referee."

Johnson said he hopes the shock of the losses has a positive effect.

"It's the greatest thing that could have happened," he said, because it might return North American players to the basics.

"There are too many one-hour hockey players in North America," he said. "Too many kids who think if they practice one hour a day, they will be successful."

Johnson said he was most impressed with the fundamentals and puck handling of the Soviet team.

"They took every pass on the fly, at top speed," he marveled. "Their off-ice conditioning showed in their legs. They took tough checks and just kept right on moving."

Until changes are made, he said, the Soviets, who became interested in hockey barely 30 years ago, will continue to dominate.

"Maybe the NHL will take some of their pension money now and put it into the development of

The Notre Dame basketball team was selected third in both wire service polls released yesterday. Although Indiana State was ranked ahead of UCLA in the AP poll, the Bruins took the top spot in the UPI by a narrow margin over the Sycamores.

The Interhall track meet will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 20th at 9:30 pm in the A.C.C. fieldhouse. All persons who have signed up for the meet are asked to be on time.

youth hockey," Johnson said. "We should be building indoor rinks like communities build swimming pools and public tennis courts."

"And why not bring the Russians over here and ask them to conduct a clinic? Let them tell how they do it."

Editor's Note: Friday's version of this column lost some of the true meaning in the copyreader's translation. In fact, Bill Hanzlik did not cover Brad Holland (maybe that was the secret to the loss). While sportswriters try and analyze every facet in picking a winner, Sunday's game came down to the two teams trying to put a ball through a hole. Here is what O'Brien really meant to say.

There's going to be a hot time in the old town Sunday, as the UCLA Bruins visit our gladiators in green at the ACC, so put on your dancing shoes and wake up the echoes as you yell at Messrs. Greenwood, Hamilton, and Holland, who will wear numbers 34, 24 and 14 unless their uniforms get lost on their way here.

Facing the Bruins' pivot cager for the Irish will be a big boy by the name of Flowers, who comes from Huntington Woods, Michigan, and that's only a short drive from Monogohela, Pennsylvania, and we all know who came from there. Maybe that's a good sign for the Irish. I'm betting it is.

Anyway, I know who I'll be watching tonight for the boys in blue and gold (light blue, that is) and that's Brad Holland, the high scoring guard who scores a lot of points. But don't forget a guy by the name of Hanzlik who wears number 42 for the green and gold. He's a great defensive guard who usually prevents his man from scoring much. He isn't much of an offensive threat, but he can sure put the vinyl and rubber through the old twines if his deadeye gets hot.

I think the most significant key to the epic battle will be Rich Branning, the cool quarterback who never bends under pressure in the pocket and always manages to throw the old round pigskin into the hands of awaiting receivers under the goal. Rich is from California, just a

The Notre Dame ski team traveled to Ohio last weekend to take on ten Ohio schools in the two-day Ohio Governor's Cup-Ohio State Championships dual meet.

The men's team finished second in Saturday's Ohio Governor's Cup. Mike Quinlevan led the Irish by taking home a gold medal in both the slalom and the combined time slalom-giant slalom, earning 86 of Notre Dame's 143 points.

Also scoring for the Irish were Pete Rowland, taking ninth and eleventh place in the slalom and giant slalom, respectively, and Jim Byrne, who finished tenth in both races. Nelson Ziter took thirteenth in the slalom, and team captain Ben Powers finished seventeenth in the giant slalom. A total of 105 male racers competed. Nora Duffy led the women to a third-place award in Saturday's race. Duffy won the bronze medal in the slalom and took sixth in the giant slalom. Captain Muggs D'Aquila took fourth and freshman Reni Nacheff finished ninth in the giant slalom race.

In Sunday's Ohio State Championships, the men took first place, while the women trailed only Bowling Green.

Quinlevan was outstanding again on Sunday, as he took first in the giant slalom and second in slalom, earning the first place combined race cup.

Byrne was close behind, as he took third in the giant slalom and fifth in the slalom for fourth place overall. Senior Pete Rowland finished fourth in the giant transcontinental plane ride from Monogohela, Pennsylvania. Another good omen.

Another significant key will be Mike Mitchell, the improving novice frosh who is still learning in his first year. He's who I'll be watching Sunday.

And let's not forget Tracy Jackson, the steady performer who is noted for his constantly consistent outings. I'll be watching him, too.

There's just never any telling what will happen when these two teams get together, although there are a lot of things you can usually predict. Roy Hamilton is a great ballhandler and will deal off a lot of passes unless the Irish happen to put an octopus on him; Kelly Tripucka will get his 15 or 20 points if he isn't cold and misses a lot of shots; and Dave Batton will can the opening bucket if they let him come back from Italy to play in this barnburner for the boys clad in green and gold.

Did you see Stan Wilcox throw that pass away in the last game driving in the lane? Did you then see Wilcox dribble the ball off his foot on a break 30 seconds later? Then you know that the Silk man has been having a hard time handling the old sphere in the last few encounters. The law of averages is in favor of his having a good game. That's who I'll be watching Sunday, unless I watch somebody else. Anyway, I may be wrong but I think this will be a typical clash between the green and gold and blue and gold.
