Vance briefs Carter on Cuban situation

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State Cyrus Vance briefed President Carter and members of the National Security Council at a hastily scheduled meeting last night on the status of U.S.-Soviet negotiations on Russian troops in Cuba. Vance met alone with Carter for 30 minutes and then briefed the president and other NSC members for an hour on his talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

The group adjourned to meet again this morning at 7 a.m. "We would not characterize this as a crisis. It was a discussion, press secretary Jody Powell told reporters after the meeting had broken up.

He refused to disclose any specifics of what Vance told the NSC about his meeting this week in New York with Gromyko, which concluded yesterday with a three-hour discussion that apparently brought no resolution to the dispute.

"There is not a crisis atmosphere but there is a problem," an administration source said in explaining why Carter convened the NSC. "Vance held a long meeting today with Gromyko and now we want to see what the Russians said."

Besides the president and Vice President Walter Mondale, those summoned to the White House briefing included Defense Secretary Harold Brown, CIA Director Stansfield Turner and presidential National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

The mood seemed gloomy on both sides as Vance and Gromyko ended their latest session. No further talks were planned.

An administration source indicated, however, Vance might meet again with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin on the troops issue.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter would not rule out some unspecified U.S. effort to keep the negotiations going. "I'm really trying not to rule out any possibility."

U.S. sources said prior to the last Vance-Gromyko meeting that its outcome would weigh heavily on whether Carter personally enters the negotiations. Those officials had said a weekend meeting between Gromyko and Carter was possible if the stalemate eased.

But Gromyko said he planned to return to Moscow today, apparently precluding a meeting with Carter.

The talks with Gromyko, held in Vance's 37th floor hotel suite overlooking the United Nations, were the first that went beyond the troop dispute, spokesman Carter said.

For part of the discussion they were joined by top advisers. Vance has met on six occasions over the last three weeks with either Gromyko or Dobrynin.

In the talks, Vance tried to impress on the Soviets the Carter administration's judgment that without a prompt settlement of the troops dispute, there is little prospect the Senate will ratify the new strategic arms limitation treaty by the end of the year.

Calls for 'permanent peace'

Pope to visit U.S., Ireland

VATICAN CITY (AP) - Pope John Paul II said yesterday "permanent and effective" peace will be a theme of his upcoming Irish-U.S. tour. He also issued guidelines aimed at solving a boundary dispute between Argentina and Chile. The 59-year-old pope, who leaves on his third international voyage of his pontificate, has characterized the Irish leg of his trip as a "pilgrimage of peace and reconciliation."

He was referring to fighting in Northern Ireland, where the Irish Republican Army has been waging 10 years of bloody guerilla war to end British rule and unite the province with the Irish Republic. The pope will visit the Republic but not Northern Ireland.

John Paul, working as a mediator between the predominantly Roman Catholic nations of Argentina and Chile, summoned delegates from those two countries and told them he was "on the eve of starting a trip in which there will be no lack of chances to proclaim the interest of the Holy See for peace and its firm will of contributing to its effective and permanent consolidation."

By the meeting, he issued a three-point guideline for the peaceful settlement of the dispute in what Vatican observers said could be a papal blueprint useful for attempts in solving other international problems.

The Pope said the two nations should first look for points of convergence, and begin collaboration in other fields and finally build a climate of confidence. Argentina and Chile have at times been on the verge of war over claim to a small group of islands, and undersea rights, at the tip of South America.

In January, the Vatican agreed to mediate the dispute and the pope assigned Italian Cardinal Antonio Samore as his personal mediator. If the mediation is successful, Vatican observers feel, the pontiff may move to try and help settling others, including that in the Middle East.

Stadium prepares for first home game

For the 26th year, Ardell Madlen strives to make that little extra money as a concession stand operator.

For his 14th year, Valdiserri, Notre Dame Sports Information Director, readies the press box for opening day ceremonies.

These two men are examples of the behind-the-scenes workforce with prepares the stadium for its 50th football season. The stadium was dedicated on Oct. 11th, 1930 although the Irish defeated Southern Methodist a week earlier.

In its first year, Rockne's dream stadium housed an undefeated national championship team. Since then, there have been seven championship teams. The stadium originally seated 54,400, but was later expanded to seat the present 59,075.

Tailgaters, pep rallies, 59,000 cheering fans. Football seasons pass by; fans come and go. But the stadium manages to stay firmly rooted to the ground.

So what does it take to "fortify" the stadium to meet the onslaught of another football season?

The field is lined and marked, in a two to three day process, according to Harold J. Benninghoff, superintendent of the stadium. "We also fertilize it every four weeks -- it's like a giant baby. We cater to its every need," Benninghoff said. The next step in the "dressing" process is the cleaning of the seats and rooms within the stadium.

"For example," said Benninghoff, "both locker rooms, the restrooms and the press box must be thoroughly cleaned and made serviceable for each game."

To arrive in Chicago Saturday

Pope to visit America

by John McGrath
Senior Staff Reporter

Campus religious and lay figures are among the millions of Americans preparing for Pope John Paul II's upcoming U.S. visit. The visit will begin Monday morning when the papal delegation arrives in Boston. Other cities on the agenda include New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Des Moines, and Chicago.

University President Theodore Hesburgh and Msgr. John Egan, director of Pastoral and Social Ministry, are among several religious leaders from Notre Dame who have been invited to a reception for the Pope to be held on the White House lawn Oct. 6. Hesburgh will also attend a symposium at Catholic University the next day. At that meeting, the Pope will address Catholic educators from throughout the nation.

Hesburgh was at the White House yesterday reporting for the President's Commission on the Holocaust, and was unavailable for comment. Other campus leaders expressed hope that the Pope's visit would give new vigor to the Roman Catholic Church in America.

"One of the Pope's main purposes in coming is to enhance his understanding of the American people," said Fr. David Burrell, chairman of Notre Dame's theology department.

Pope John Paul will visit Chicago next Friday, and many Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students are making plans to travel to the Windy City to see him. In the morning the Pope will celebrate a mass for the city's Polish population, the largest anywhere outside Poland, at Five Holy Martyrs Church on the city's southwest side. He will then attend a special session of the U.S. Conference of Bishops.

In the afternoon, the Pope will offer a mass in Chicago's Grant Park before a crowd that estimates now place at over one million people. Workmen were busy this week constructing the huge papal altar and testing the roof strength of which separates the city's central business district from the Lake Michigan waterfront.

The City of Chicago has banned traffic in the downtown area beginning at 10 a.m. next Saturday, but the Chicago Rapid Transit Authority has announced that an increased number of trains and buses will be placed in service to help

Officials say hotel rooms available for visit

CHICAGO (AP) - There still are plenty of hotel rooms and other accommodations available, tourism officials say, for the Chicago visit of Pope John Paul II next week. Wayne Dunham of the Chicago Tourism Bureau said Wednesday a survey by his staff shows 2,788 hotel and motel rooms still open for Oct. 4 and 3,567 rooms unreserved for Oct. 5. Dunham said out-of-town visitors who decide at the last minute to attend an outdoor Mass Oct. 5 should have no difficulty finding accommodations. However, some of the available rooms are in suburban hotels, he added.

Officials of the Chicago Roman Catholic Archdiocese said accommodations also would be available in private homes, rectories and convents. Because of the number of rooms still available, archdiocese officials scaled down earlier estimates that one million or more people would attend the outdoor Mass in Grant Park. No official crowd estimate, however, has been given.

... Stadium

Benninghoff and his 18-man crew must also repaint the row and section numbers that are illegible. "This is done for the fans' benefit," explained Benninghoff.

The scoreboards must also be checked and serviced. This is done by an outside firm, and a service man is always available during the game in case of a scoreboard malfunction.

Benninghoff, however, cited the most demanding task as the "Operation Clean-up."

"There are about 30 of us, which includes people hired temporarily from South Bend, who start from the top to bottom picking up the garbage in the stands. This is usually a three hour Sunday morning project. By the end of the day we are totally exhausted," added Benninghoff.

Superintendent of the stadium since 1964, Benninghoff has watched the stadium weather many "storms." Of course each year there are the usual broken seats and smashed bottles on the infield. But that's typical of any football game," commented Benninghoff.

Notre Dame's Security task force is the "glue" that seems to hold together a football weekend.

Comprised of 50 officers, six of whom are N.D. security guards, the task force is stationed at the inside and outside of the stadium gates. Twenty state troopers aid in directing the traffic outside the stadium, according to Jos. P. Wall, former Dir. of N.D. Security.

"The stadium guards, who are mainly from the South Bend Police Dept. and the St. Joe's Sheriff Office, basically try to keep the crowd under control. Although in past years there have been minor incidents such as intoxicated fans displaying obscene signs on the field and brawls in the stadium, Notre Dame fans are a relatively good crowd," Wall said.

On the problem of stolen tickets, Security will work with Mike Busik, Box Office Ticket Manager.

"If a person is caught with a stolen ticket, we will question the person as to where s/he purchased it," Wall said. "But we just can't hold an interrogation because for all we know the tickets might have been obtained legally."

First-aid rooms must be stocked with supplies, and extra first-aid vehicles will be stationed within the stadium as a precautionary measure.

"Last year we had so many problems with the heat, especially during the Missouri game. People were passing out in the stands and a few suffered heatstroke," said Wall.

Council to discuss fund-raising

by Pam Degnan
Senior Staff Reporter

The Board of Directors of the Saint Mary's Parents Council will meet this weekend to discuss the fund-raising campaigns for the new library, according to Mina Costin, Director of Planned Giving.

"The 23 couples, comprising the Board of Directors, will meet in a series of committee sessions with Dr. Duggan. In these sessions, Duggan will present the financial and architectural plans of the library to the Board members," Costin said.

Established in 1966, the Parents Council has always been an extremely effective organization, according to Public Relations Director Nancy Komers.

"Some parents have had 2 or 3 daughters enrolled in Saint Mary's at one time and yet had found the time to actively serve on the Council," explained Komers.

According to its written constitution, the main objectives of the Parents Council are: 1) to keep parents informed of the College's policies, plans and directives and 2) to provide a means through which parents may transmit their ideas, opinions and suggestions to the College.

Every parent or guardian of a student enrolled in Saint Mary's automatically becomes a member of the Council.

However, the Board of Directors, based on their diverse geographical locations and professional skills, are appointed by the President of the College. Their function is to assist the College in the planning, promoting and sponsoring of social events.

The Council as an organization functions within three principal committees. Appealing for alumni contributions and monetary gifts to the College, the Development Committee initiates various fund-raising campaigns. The Admissions Committee works in conjunction with the Admissions Office in overseeing student enrollment. The Career Development Committee explores job opportunities for graduating seniors.

New dorms need parking

by Ann Hesburgh

Additional housing requires additional parking, and this is precisely the problem that Fr. John Van Wolvlear, Vice President for Student Affairs, is trying to solve. "Some arrangements must be made with the construction of two new dorms underway," he said.

Several parking proposals have been submitted to Van Wolvlear during the past two years. He said they have been "well received."

The most acceptable and feasible proposal that has been submitted thus far calls for the development of the space behind the ROTC building along Dorr Road. If developed, it would provide parking for Carroll, Lyons, Morrissey, and Howard Halls, said Van Wolvlear.

In an interview, former director of security, Joe Wall, commented that development of this space would require an entrance onto campus from US 31, and this would alleviate traffic problems at the other gates.

Construction of a US 31 entrance onto campus has been a problem in the past because of heavy traffic and absence of a turning lane. But now, since both a by-pass and turning lane have been constructed, these problems no longer influence the decision of whether additional parking in this area would be feasible.

Other parking proposals that have been submitted include the eastward and northward expansions of D-1, and the development of the field behind Moreau Seminary.

"The expansion of D-1 may cause problems for the Antioch people. They would have to find a new location for the mud pits," commented Wall.

Additional parking behind Moreau would be advantageous for those who walk between the campuses, because an entrance would have to be constructed at the light, making the road a much safer one to travel. A guardhouse at this location would comply with a suggestion made to security in the 1978 security audit.

House approves new department

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House gave approval yesterday to a bill creating a new Department of Education and sent the measure to President Carter.

The House voted 215-201 to create the 13th Cabinet agency.

During his 1976 campaign, Carter had promised to place the government's education programs within a single new agency.

The Senate passed the measure Monday.

The measure will reduce the size of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and will rename the agency the Department of Health and Human Resources.

As the House vote was announced, a cheer went up outside the chamber where private supporters of the proposal, many of them teachers, had been waiting.

The new department is the second created during Carter's term. The Energy Department was established in 1977.

Under the legislation, more than 150 federal programs will be transferred to the new agency. The education division in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare will be the heart of the new agency, but programs from the departments of Agriculture, Justice, Housing and Urban Development, Labor and other agencies will be added.

The new department will have a budget exceeding $14 billion and will have about 18,000 employees.

The debate over the Education Department pitted the two largest teacher organizations against one another. The National Education Association, the largest teacher organization, actively supported the idea. But the rival American Federation of Teachers led the opposition.

After the House vote, Carter called it "a significant milestone in my effort to make the federal government more efficient." He said the new department would give the American people "a much clearer picture of what the federal government is doing in education and who is in charge of those activities."

Carter planned to have breakfast Friday with the NEA board of directors. The board is expected to endorse Carter's re-election.

In addition to gurus

Brown gets advice from many

SACRAMENTO - Calif. (AP) - Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. does not--as some think--spend all of time getting advice from an odd bunch of gurus, actresses, ex-astronauts and counter-culture folk.

The would-be president's circle of advisers includes all of those people.

But it also includes powerful, conservative business executives, politically seasoned campaign aides and an array of nonpolitical scholars, authors, and activists.

Tom Hayden, the acquitted Chicago Seven defendant and anti-war activist of the 1960's and Hayden's wife, actress Jane Fonda, are among people Jerry Brown often turns to for advice and ideas.

So are Rusty Schweickart, the philosophical Apollo 9 astronaut; Stewart Brand, publisher of the Whole Earth Catalog; and Jesse Jackson, the black political and religious leader.

Brown also spends time, however, listening to some of California's most influential businessmen such as A. W. Clausen of the Bank of America and Ben Biaggini of Southern Pacific Co.

And he spends long hours, at irregular intervals, discussing the nature of man with nonpolitical figures such as anthropologist Gregory Bateson and San Francisco Zen Center abbot Baker-Roshi.

For Brown, a 41-year-old Democrat, this quest for a broad range of advice is a part of what he calls his "canoe theory" of politics: "You paddle a little bit on the left, then you paddle a little bit on the right side, and then you paddle straight down the middle."

Critics view Brown's canoe theory as a political ploy aimed at crassly stroking various interest groups and playing one-by-one to the presidency. But those who represent various ideas say Brown is receptive to them.

Clausen, who visits Brown every six to 12 months for a lunch of cold cuts and a discussion of business, describes the governor as a fiscal conservative open to ideas from businessmen but "a bit unpredictable."

Hayden, too, says he finds Brown receptive to his left-leaning politics, adding: "I think we get more out of him than the Bank of America gets."

The result of Brown's "canoe process" is usually a synthesis - a favorite Brown word - of ideas from rival factions.

For example, he supports a constitutional convention to balance the federal budget - a goal of the far right - but argues that as well as imposing fiscal discipline, a balanced budget would force Congress to make hard choices about such things as excessive defense spending.

Hayden and Miss Fonda are Brown's most controversial advisers, mainly because of their opposition to the Vietnam War. Brown has appointed Hayden to three non-paying posts and Miss Fonda to the California Arts Council, but her appointment later was vetoed by the State Senate after debate over her Hanoi visits during the war.

The major change for the concessions consumer will be a "sausage sandwich" according to winter. Hoffman expressed hope that the quarter pound, polish smoked sausage would be a success.

"Otherwise, there will be no new items on the menu," Winter said. Prices will rise slightly due to the rate of inflation, he commented. Winter also reminds the people who complain about prices that concession prices are higher because of labor and the decent return of Valdiserri commented that the number of people and the amount of time which is put into each football weekend is phenomenal. Twenty-five sports information people work up in the booth during a game and approximately 170 work in concessions.

Phyllis Hoffman summed up the ethic behind all of this: "It is hard work, but god, it's a lot of fun."

Judge postpones Ford trial

WINAMAC, IND. (AP) - Over the prosecution's protest, a judge yesterday postponed the trial of the Ford Motor Co. on reckless homicide charges from Nov. 5 to Jan. 7, 1980 to give the automaker more time to prepare its case.

The action by Pulaski Circuit Judge Harold Staffeldt came on a motion from Ford Attorney James Neal.

Ford is charged in the 1978 deaths of three young women whose Pinto sedan exploded in flames when struck from behind on a northern Indiana highway.

Staffeldt also overruled motions by the state to find Ford in contempt of court for not participating in discovery proceedings and issued an order that keeps Ford's evidence secret until it is brought to trial.

Earlier, Elkhart County Prosecutor Michael Cosentino, who is handling the state's case, said any delay in the trial's start would "favor the defence. If the case is delayed, I'm going to get run over. I'm going to have two tire tracks on by back."

Staffeldt gave Cosentino until Oct. 11 to respond to Ford's motion to quash the state's the case.

Staffeldt set Nov. 19 as the final date for both sides to have all motions and file except those that could not have been anticipated, and he scheduled another omnibus hearing for Dec. 3.

Cosentino made the request last week after the judge denied his motion for authentication of Ford documents being used in

Kennedy supporters organize movement

by Jane Kirby

Supporters of a campus-wide campaign to back Senator Edward M. Kennedy as the 1980 Democratic presidential candidate held their first organizational meeting last night in La Fortune Little Theater.

Sorin resident Paul Lewis, initiator of the movement, stressed four immediate objectives of the organization. They included inviting the Senator to speak on campus, organizing campus and hall managers, setting up a campus-wide survey, and raising funds.

Lewis is organizing as if Senator Kennedy were running, although the Democrat from Massachusetts has not announced his candidacy yet. He noted that President Carter set a precedent in 1976 by organizing his Presidential campaign early. "We want to be ready," he stated.

Lewis anticipates a difficult campaign on campus. "The Notre Dame student body is pretty conservative," he remarked, recalling that they voted for Ford over Carter in 1976.

He also expects some problems because the senator is a "front-liner." "Kennedy is a lot like Notre Dame," he stated. "Everybody knows the name, and immediately they either love it or hate it."

Lewis mentioned that he had contacted Robert Wagner, the Indiana state manager of a campaign for Kennedy who acknowledged the group's efforts but pointed out that election laws prohibit groups from obtaining funds to support non-candidates.

Campaign strategy

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON--Many congressmen and senators who have to run for office next year are in serious trouble. Their constituents are unhappy and they feel that somehow Congress is to blame for a lot of their woes.

Therefore, we may see them campaigning on foreign issues rather than domestic ones. This could be a dangerous time for Americans and the world. In order to win an election many sane legislators are willing to get the voters riled up about different parts of the world which only seem to be a threat to our national security during an election year.

I attended the strategy meeting of Congressman Larry Bilge and his campaign staff the other day and it was enlightening.

"Larry," his manager said, "the poll results just came in and the people in your district are sore as hell about energy, inflation, and unemployment, not to mention the price of coffee. We got problems."

"Don't tell me," Bilge said. "I was home last weekend and my own mother told me she doesn't think I should have a raise. And I support her."

The manager said, "The thing we have to do is avoid the issues that are bugging the voters and bring up new ones that they haven't thought of."

"Give me the scenario," Bilge said. "Okay, you're going to a town meeting in Daisy County next week. The first thing they're going to ask you is why they have to pay 90 cents a gallon for heating oil."

"What's my answer?" "You can't do anything about heating oil until the United States gets the Soviet troops out of Cuba."

"Do I want to go to war with Cuba?" Bilge asked.

His press secretary replied, "That decision is up to the President, but the time has come to stand up to the Soviets and say, 'no withdrawal -- no SALT.'"

"I got it. Now what happens when they ask me what Congress intends to do about inflation?"

"Tell them," his speechwriter said, "that the real danger to this country is not inflation but the Panama Canal Treaty, which you voted against. Say that you are not going to allow a two-bit dictator in a banana republic to push this country around. The time has come to fish or cut bait."

"I like that phrase," Bilge said. "Let me write it down."

The campaign manager referred to his yellow pad. "Okay, now we have a large unemployment problem in the district ever since the Cannibal Radio Co. pulled out and moved to the Sun Belt. Some wise guy is probably going to ask you what you intend to do about jobs."

"There's one in every crowd," Bilge said.

"You tell him the reason they don't have jobs is because we have a missile gap with the Soviet Union, and by 1985 we will be a second-class power."

Unless the United States wakes up to the military threat from Moscow the unemployment rate will soar in this country and the economy of the Free World will collapse without the Communists firing one shot."

"So much for the unemployment problem. What do I do when they ask me about the high cost of medical care?"

"You bring up the Cuban troops in Angola. There are now 50,000 Cuban troops in Angola pointing a dagger at the entire African continent, and if Castro doesn't pull them out soon you intend to see that Congress does."

"I know they're going to complain about food prices."

"Your answer to that," the press secretary said, "is that if the Vietnamese don't do something about the boat people you are going to urge the President to wipe Hanoi off the face of the earth."

"That should do it," Bilge said. "If this doesn't prove I'm concerned with their problems, nothing will."

'Student Government' inappropriate

Tom Jackman

One of the grandest misnomers which has been widely used on this campus for some time now is the term "Student Government." Surely something like "Student Voice" would be more appropriate. For the words "Student Government" imply a ruling body which writes, implements and enforces rules and regulations over its constituency, exercising its other powers and duties whenever it is deemed necessary.

The Notre Dame "Student Government" (and I do not include the Student Union in this otherwise broad grouping) has none of these capabilities.

In a front page story entitled "SG defines role as political branch," SBP Roche said: the goal of "Student Government" is to increase student input into Administrative decisions. The article then added that "members of SG take the views of the student body to the members of the administration and, hopefully (my emphasis), influence policy decision-making. 'We see ourselves as student advocates,' said Bill Vita, SBVP, 'and we try to be articulate spokesmen.'"

The next paragraph brings it all home. "In the opinion of Roche, the SG really has not

'power,' in the sense that 'power' means the ability to make decisions and to implement them. Hopefully (there's that word again), what the SG has is 'influence.' When the administration is making a decision, the SG leaders want to be there -- to voice the views of the students and to make a good case."

The point of all this cynicism is that the true body that governs the students here is comfortably ensconced under the Golden Dome, referred to by all that all-encompassing moniker "The Administration." Our "Student Government" is in effect a lobbying group, sort of like the National Rifle Association, only without the influence.

If in fact our "Student Government" did have some influence, its existence would have some validity and purpose. But it clearly does not. The Hall Presidents Council, the Judicial Council, Carroll Hall and everybody else vehemently protested parietals last fall, to no avail. The administrators all had a good chuckle, and then said quite forcefully, "No." Then they threatened us with a lottery and involuntary off-campus housing, and when our "Student Government" protested South Bend living conditions, they replied, "Oh well, enough of you have moved off campus on your own, we won't be needing a lottery after all," and the issue was dropped.

A remedy is needed.

At least one, no more than two students serving as voting members of the Board of Trustees would be invaluable sources of first-hand knowledge of campus issues for those board representatives who contribute their big checks annually, but can't keep in touch with what's really going on here. They would also be an important voice that could not be ignored as easily as the administrators do now.

Student representatives would be selected in the same manner as present SB elections, with campaigns, races et al, for this vastly more important position. Administrators might argue that necessarily confidential University business would soon become campus-wide gossip (such as business holdings in countries which openly discriminate on the basis of race), but they'll just have to trust us for once.

This isn't a complete solution. Students should have representation on all important administrative ruling bodies-- and the importance of this is not to be underestimated. After all, as they say at the stadium, "We are ND," not the contributing alumni, and we're paying our fair share too. For that, we should at least have a recognized, articulate voice to represent us. Right now, we don't.

Postscript: After this article was written, Fr. John VanWolfe rejected our "Student Government's" keg proposal, despite the fact that Keenan rector Fr. Richard Conyers stated that "The proposal represents the majority opinion of both rectors and students."

Ticket dash a fiasco

Dear Editor:

Having been a participant in the 1979 U.S.C. ticket marathon run, I feel it necessary to complain to the organizers. The complaint is two-fold, one concerns safety, the other sanity.

Imagine at 7:30 p.m. 300-400 students running, biking, and driving to the ACC from all over campus. In the dark the campus is a very formidable obstacle course. Posts, wires, and of course other people added to the fun. How many people were injured, I don't know, but the sight of a biker running into a post, cut off by a runner, was not funny to see. Even more thoughtless, however, was locating the sale place across a public road. The organizers should have realized that a red light is nothing compared to two U.S.C. tickets, but the car that had to skid to a halt on Juniper Road probably didn't see it that way.

As far as sanity goes, it was very hard for some people to keep theirs after finding out that 247 packets were on sale, not the 50 Jim O'Brien announced on the radio. More than one person stopped short seeing a line of 100-150 people already in line at Gate 3.

Hopefully this kind of a fiasco will be avoided in the future. Concert tickets are sold by a lottery, and alumni certainly don't sprint across campus to get their football tickets. Maybe with some careful thought in the future everyone can come out of something like this sound of mind and body.

Matt Chalifoux

Ticket System 'insane'

Dear Editor:

As concerned students we must express our condemnation of Tuesday night's "Mad Ticket Dash." The run for the Homecoming Ticket Package was one of the most insane things that we have seen here at Notre Dame. Specifically our complaints are:

1) The run was dangerous. Running across campus with hundreds of other students, at night, is insane. Fortunately, there were no major injuries.

2) We believe that certain students-- more specifically some members of the Student Union, friends of the organizers, and a few clever students-- knew (not guessed) the distribution point in advance. This is unfair. The student body should not put up with blatant abuse of office. The Student Union has been able to rat tickets because they "work" for them. Does this elitism now extend to GA football tickets?

3) The appalling lack of Security personnel to control the crowd is inexcusable. One cannot suddenly assemble hundreds of people without some form of crowd control.

4) The "throat" attitude of many who participated was disgusting. It is unfortunate that we were not able to overcome bad management and frustration.

5) The system of running for tickets is discriminatory against those who are not physically able to make a long dash across campus. The system eliminates, de facto, the handicapped, the injured, and most women. The system says that if you are not among the 250 fastest people on campus then you are not eligible for tickets. That is a pretty poor condition.

The solutions to this problem seem to be obvious but unfortunately they require changes in a few Notre Dame traditions. (Ouch!) The Homecoming game should not be played against USC. The double attraction of a game against USC and the Homecoming Ticket Package is obviously a drain on available ticket resources.

More directly, however, we should abandon the insane method of running after tickets. It is dangerous. It is unfair. It is degrading. It is blatantly stupid. It would be vastly more intelligent to hold a lottery or to let people camp out. With a little more common sense we could eliminate a very bad situation.

Cowboy turned preppie

Dear Editor:

Trotting down Notre Dame Avenue on my weary horse after travelling 1,150 miles from Bandera, Texas, I saw for the first time the symbol of Notre Dame tradition -- the Golden Dome. In my excitement and fascination, I inadvertently led my horse into an unrepaid pothole from one of the previous harsh winters. South Bend is infamous for, causing my horse and my only link with home to die.

From that day on I realized I would have to adapt to the changes and challenges Notre Dame life would present. You see, I was raised in a very slow-paced environment where rodeos, cowboys, horses, pick-up trucks, and "goatropers need love too" stickers prevail. Everyone talks with a long Southern drawl and no one ever gets places very fast because they are too bowlegged from roping and riding all day. So, when I first arrived at Notre Dame, I was amazed at what I saw.

Everyone wore Lacoste shirts and something they called topsiders. The pace they moved at frightened me; I kept wondering where the stampede was, but never found out because every person I asked for directions spoke too fast for me to understand. Adding to my confusion, whenever I would say "howdy ya'll" to some passerby, he would look at me as if I was some sort of hick.

I've been at Notre Dame now for three years and have come a long way in this time. I'm not wearing my boots or cowboy hat anymore, and I'm even dating a guy who wears cords and topsiders. I've learned to walk and talk as fast as anyone else on campus. Much to everyone's surprise, I've even stopped saying "howdy ya'll" -- now I say "hi you guys." My only problem is when I go home no one likes the way I talk or dress, and more important, no one recognizes me without my horse.

Water sprinklers wage war

Dear Editor:

"Watch out! There it comes!" Those words are heard quite often during the course of the average day. As you might have guessed this warning concerns the secret beast hidden on the lawns throughout the campus.

Those seemingly innocuous water sprinklers which appear to run incessantly 24 hours a day always seem to turn on the innocent student and attack with ruthless vigor. These senseless attacks are totally unprovoked as the young men and women only wish to make their passage by the beast with no intent of malice towards it.

Another interesting feature in the undeclared war of the water sprinklers is their escalation.

Have you noticed how what started with a mere handful of sprinklers has turned into a veritable army of the soaking things? Amazing! Did the originals reproduce or did they call upon their allies in hiding when they thought our guard was down?

Anyway, the fact of the matter is they are here. What shall we do? The rumor heard on campus is that the invaders will disappear by this weekend, afflicted by a strange disease called "allumni fever." Little is known about this nemesis of the seemingly invulnerable water sprinkler, but it is doubtful it will be capable of killing the beast.

If in fact "Alumni Fever" does quash the rebellion of the sprinklers this weekend, what will happen on Monday? I fear a return but only time will tell!

Thomas C. Jennings

Ink spots continue...

Dear Editor:

Mr. McGurn in his Sept. 24 response to my original essay is arrogant at my being indignant. His humor deflates my anger. But to what point? I am arguing for something.

I am arguing for teachers that have been unfairly dismissed. I am not asking you to be angry because I am; I asked you to look around, to find out whether the teachers that you care for most are or are not tenured and to support them. (Please call me at 232-9264 or Tim Beatty at 288-2465, we are trying to organize a student response!)

I am arguing for listening to what black South Africans have to say about their own nation. In that I thought that I was being sensitive; considering the history of whites in Africa I think it most arrogant for any of us to say that we know better.

I was not taking a "cheap shot at a religious belief" that so many hold "near and dear to them." Far from it! I was counting on that very belief to initiate a protest against these and other administration policies. The shared values of this community are absolutely central to my accusation. How else could I protest the Administration not living up to Christian values?

Mr. McGurn calls for more thought. I say: yes, but then we damn well better act. He says don't sacrifice long range benefits and I say right, but don't damn well use that as a mask for complacency. In a very short eight months our professors will be lost for good. He says to be patient, and I say tell that to the South African blacks. They've been waiting too damn long.

Mr. McGurn is like the king who upon hearing from a messenger that his land is torn with troubles has the man beaten. The kingdom remains troubled.

Paul Lauer

What counts in the classroom

Edmund Featherstone

One of my past professors did not receive tenure. I was very surprised. He is one of the best teachers I ever had.

I remember him well, as one always remembers those teachers who successfully taught as if they were detonators and the students were TNT. Their classes never fizzled. I feel a good teacher is one whose teaching turns learning into a dynamite experience.

His teaching did. He never sat during class. He was always on his feet, walking back and forth before the students, gesturing with his arms, eyebrows and shoulders, his laughter roaring or his deep voice resounding with the passion he felt for Spanish literature. His enthusiasm was so contagious that the course's heavy workload was welcomed by the students as a chance to become further immersed in a subject made so savory by the way it was taught in the classroom.

A good administration knows its first duty is to provide those things necessary for a student to receive an education. The key element is good teachers. They are more important to a quality of a student's education than expensive books or the respected image of a university. The formal education of a student takes place in the classroom, and not in private research laboratories or scholarly publications.

I realize a university has functions other than formal education, such as professional scholarship and public service. And these activities should belong as functions of a university, but not at the expense of a student's education. The most critical fact about a professor is how well he teaches, and not where his articles are published or how much in research grants he can get.

It would be ideal for a university to have professors who excel in all areas: teaching scholarship, and public service. And it is commendable for a university to strive for such an ideal. At the same time, all those activities, with the exception of teaching, have more to do with affairs outside than inside the classroom. They have more to do with building a university's public esteem than with stimulating student minds. I know scholarship and public service have a connection with teaching. They can provide the basis for new teaching methods, perspectives, and information. Nevertheless, it is the actual act of teaching inside the classroom that establishes what a professor is worth to a student.

It is a pity that in a drive to get the best all-around professors some damn good teachers are lost. And the students are the ones who lose them. The only certain winner is the university and its image and reputation. This does not make it a good university. Images and reputation don't matter much in a classroom. A good university is a place where the students do not wish they were elsewhere, because they have teachers who make the classroom a good place to be.

My professor, the one who did not get tenure, made one glad to be in school. I know this feeling was shared by my classmates because we often discussed how we felt about him. I now know that his other students in other classes have also felt this way. I went to the administration building and asked to see the results of this professor's past teacher evaluation sheets. I was told that because of the confidential nature of such information I would need the professor's permission. I was a little hesitant about intruding into his affairs. However, I telephoned him and he gave the permission.

The man who gave me the results took the time to point out that the most considered question is number nine which states: "What overall rating would you give this teacher as compared with other teachers you have had at N.D.?" In the six courses that the professor taught last year, he received for question number nine the average evaluations of 4.0, 3.9, 3.9, 3.8, 3.8, 4.0. The mark of 4.0 is the highest a teacher may receive. In the total of 108 averaged evaluations he received only four ratings that were below the 3.4 mark.

From the student perspective he is a success as a teacher. Professor LeMay is an excellent teacher, and this for me, and for my fellow students, is what really counts. It would be a real mistake to let him leave our class.

With changing society

Journalist helps man cope

NEW YORK (AP) - James Burke's sleuth-like pursuit, deep into history, of the roots of some modern technological marvels, is, in a sense, his way of helping man cope with an ever-changing society.

"I think we live in a brief, transitional period," says Burke, a British journalist and television commentator, "Between the time when knowing facts was important and when the ability to find information will be primary."

Burke says the objective of his book, "Connections: An Alternative View of Change," and the 10-part TV series of the same name, is rather simple: "If we can figure out how the world got the way it is, we may be able to exert some influence over the way it will be in the future."

"Connections," a co-production of BBC-TV and Time-Lite Television, will be offered stations in the Public Broadcasting Service network on a weekly basis, beginning Sunday, at 8 p.m. EDT. As with most PBS programs, aid date and time may vary.

Individual hour-long programs trace through history the development the atomic bomb, telecommunications, the computer, the production line, jet aircraft, plastics, rocketry and television.

In the series' first installment, "The Trigger Effect," Burke recreates New York's power blackout of 1965, and traces that event back 7,000 years to ancient Egypt and the invention of the plough. Burke maintains the plough was the trigger for all ensuing technological change.

Though each segment in the series is a fascinating "detective story" - Burke's description - the over-all purpose is more general.

"I believe we are on the eve of a leap in the rate of change that could catch us off balance. I don't believe we are ready for it," Burke says.

"The vital commodity of the world will be information," he says, "and 'Connections' is a way of training people, not to recall and recite facts, but how to ask questions."

"Connections" is the basis for two educational projects, one using newspapers in many cities, the other involving distribution of materials to colleges, junior colleges and secondary schools.

Burke, born in Londonderry, Northern Ireland, earned a masters degree in English at Oxford University, and later taught at the universities of Bologna and Urbino in Italy.

From 1966 to 1972, he was co-host for a weekly science program for the British Broadcasting Corp., "Tomorrow's World." He spent four years, 1972-76, as reporter, producer and writer of "The Burke Special - A One-Man Science Show," for British television.

He anchored the BBC's coverage of the Apollo moon flights, and has written and produced a number of documentaries shown in both Britain and the United States.

"I wanted to find a way of illustrating how change happens," he says of the development of "Connections," "and incidentally, and only incidentally, of illustrating scientific

Fr. Joyce discusses range of subjects

Fr. Edmund P. Joyce, executive vice-president of the University, spoke last night to an attentive audience at Knights of Columbus Hall. Fr. Joyce spoke on a wide range of subjects during a question and answer period, including housing, food service, and the upcoming tour to Tokyo.

In response to a question concerning the new dorm under construction, Joyce said that this project will accommodate 500 additional women on campus. But this will in no way alleviate present overcrowding conditions. He said he does not foresee, however, any increase in enrollment after this project.

A dining hall employee brought up a question concerning the quality of food this year which he said was lower than in years past. Joyce suggested that students indicate their dissatisfaction to their hall rectors and use other proper channels to resolve the problem.

Joyce was quite enthusiastic over the upcoming trip to Japan. He said that although there were many obstacles to overcome--scheduling, expenses, etc.--everything "fell in line" for the journey half way around the world. The football team and band will be on display in various parades, 14 concerts, and exhibitions, as well as in the final game of the season against Miami of Florida.

In its quest to baptize dead, Latter-day Saints gather names

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - You may not be a Mormon now, but the genealogy arm of the Mormon church wants to give you a chance to reconsider once you slip beyond the veil.

In its quest to baptize the dead, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints sends genealogists world wide, from the jungles of Indonesia to the parishes of Poland and the libraries of China, gathering millions of names.

"All they are going to do is make the dead Mormons," said church spokesman Wayne J. Metcalfe. "Everyone that dies deserves that opportunity. If he (the deceased) desires that those ordinances be valid, then they will be."

Joseph Smith, founder of the Mormon church, said, "The greatest responsibility in this world that God has laid upon us is to seek out our dead."

Like Alex Haley in his search for his roots, one Mormon team trekked deep into the tropical rainforests of Sumatra, where no written records exist, to tape the oral histories of bush people, recalled as far back as 32 generations by one "rememberancer."

Records specialist Ted Telford plans a trip to China next month to expand the church's 100,000 volumes of Chinese family histories.

All together, 35 church photographers are pouring over birth, death and marriage records, parish registries and land deeds in Poland, India, Sri Lanka, Chile and other countries to add to the church's nine-floor, microfilm library in Salt Lake City.

Only the U.S. government and a Colorado firm do more micro-filming than the Mormon church, whose 640 genealogy workers add 4,000 rolls of microfilm a month. The church's genealogy library is open to the public and every time a photographer copies a set of records, the donor gets a copy.

"The major difficulty is the difference in the religion," said Lee Boam, manager of genealogy acquisitions. "If there's one factor we struggle with, that's it. It's an emotional issue.

"Some of them consider this a continuation of vicious proselytizing. 'Here come some Mormon missionaries to steal away more members for their church,'" Boam said.

Mormon genealogists also encounter opposition in the Soviet Union, where librarians and archivists are afraid to release records to a group with "American ties," he said. Two exceptions are Poland and Hungary.

The church hopes to soften resistance to its quest for records next spring when it sponsors a worldwide genealogy conference in Salt Lake City, featuring Haley as a speaker. Metcalfe said he expects 10,000 participants from more than 75 countries to attend, including East Germany.

"If we can foster cooperation and break down these barriers," then this conference will "absolutely, unquestionably," be of great value to the church and countries that want their records preserved, Boam said.

7th ranked MSU

ND meets another powerhouse

by Brian Beglane
Sports Writer

Notre Dame's two-stop tour of the football-rich Big Ten neighborhoods of Ann Arbor and West Lafayette has ended. Now, taking a 1-1 record from their travels, the Irish get to play host tomorrow to yet another Big Ten bully, Michigan State.

This contest between Notre Dame and the 3-0 Spartans will act as the rubber game of two matches. First, and foremost, it will decide Notre Dame's record for its opening season tour of the Big Ten. Secondly, the final score will tip the scales in the modern series record towards someone. Right now, the scales rest even at 14-14-1.

"I really hate to believe we will be playing another Big Ten team as good as Michigan and Purdue," said Irish coach Dan Devine, who will be leading his fifth Notre Dame club into a home opener.

"But it looks that way," he continued. "Michigan State has greater speed than it did last year and has great talent at the skilled positions. Bert Vaughn is a great quarterback and might be as good as Ed Smith (graduated QB from last season). Mark Brammer will be yet another good tight end we have to face this year, maybe the best."

"And their punter, Ray Stachowicz, is the type of kicker that can keep you backed up all day. Their kicking game is as good as any in the country."

The Spartans had a rough time last week at home against Miami of Ohio. MSU needed a six-yard TD pass from Vaughn to Brammer with 1:25 remaining to squeak by with a 24-21 victory. Michigan State's other games have been against Illinois and Oregon.

"When you play Notre Dame you play a good football team," said Spartan head coach Darryl Rogers. "They always have good personnel. They had a great win over Michigan and lost to Purdue. If they played them over again, it could be the other way around.

"Notre Dame has the ability to do what it wants to do, but I think they'll give the ball to Ferguson. He's one of the top running backs in the country. They have an outstanding offensive line and their defense is maturing."

Maturing, yes. But healthy, no. A key loss for the Irish last week at Purdue was Dave Waymer, cornerback and premier defender in the Notre Dame secondary. He suffered a bruised knee and may not be able to play Saturday.

"It does not look too good for Waymer," noted Devine. "If he can't play we will probably go with either Dave Duerson or Rod Bone. They are good, but they also are freshmen. They're being thrown right into the fire."

"In terms of injuries, what has hurt us most was the loss of Dave Mitchell and Pete Buchanan at fullback. John Sweeney has been doing a commendable job, but he is just a freshman. We also had to throw him into the fire. We have slacked off at fullback as a result."

The injuries at fullback (sophomore Tony Belden may see action there) have hurt the Irish ground game and are the probable reasons behind Rogers' belief that Ferguson will be doing most of the running tomorrow.

But the knee injury to Waymer looms as the key. Without him the Irish could be hurting at pass defense. The Spartans have an effective passing duo in Vaughn and Brammer, and flanker Eugene Byrd also poses a threat in the air.

Finally, there is the quarterback situation for the Irish. Rusty Lisch missed last week's game at Purdue due to an ankle injury and forced Devine to shuffle Mike Courey and Tim Koegel in and out as quarterbacks. Just like last week, Devine may not know who will be the starting signal caller until five minutes before game time.

"We got as much out of our rotation of quarterbacks last week as we could," explained Devine. "I don't see us doing the same again this week."

A lot will depend on our injury situation. It is really a wait and see matter.

"It should be a physical game, hard hitting. Michigan State should be as psyched for this one as Michigan was two weeks ago. And it will be good to be playing at home -- damn good."

There's no place like home for Irish

by Craig Chval
Sports Writer

If nothing else, Notre Dame's football team will be able to hear a half-decent rendition of the Victory March when the Irish take the field against Michigan State Saturday.

After two weeks of hearing foreign bands play the Victory March like a funeral dirge, after two weeks of dressing in strange locker rooms, sleeping in strange beds and playing on strange fields, the Fighting Irish are coming home.

And none too soon.

When the Irish make their entrance into Notre Dame Stadium, they won't be running -- they'll be limping. And a game before the home crowd could be just what the doctor ordered.

Irish halfback Vagas Ferguson has been there before, and he KNOWS what kind of effect Saturday's crowd will have...

Freshman split end Tony Hunter hasn't been there, and he can't wait to find out what kind of effect it will have.

"Anytime we play at home, it's an advantage with the student body," says Ferguson. "Especially coming off the loss, I'm sure it will help our morale."

Hunter, who hasn't played in Notre Dame Stadium, will also be seeing his first game at Notre Dame.

"I saw some games on TV, and the one I remember most was when they came out with green jerseys and beat Southern Cal," says Hunter. "When I saw that game, I knew I wanted to come here and become a part of that."

Although he doesn't speak from experience, Hunter is anxious to play before the home crowd.

"It's going to be really big because we lost last week," he says. "It will help pick us up."

"Crowd noise doesn't effect me too much emotionally, because I try to block it out. And we played before some pretty big crowds in high school. But I do have trouble hearing things, especially if the quarterback is calling an audible."

"I'm looking forward to this game more than my first game at Michigan, because you get to play in front of your friends and classmates," explains the Cincinnati Moeller High School product.

Ferguson is excited at the prospect of finally donning his green jersey, but he won't get really pumped up until he

Versatile Waymer leads defense

by Frank LaGrotta
Sports Writer

"I just want to do the best I can . . . for myself and my teammates."

Dave Waymer

. . . played in nine games on defense and five on offense his freshman year . . . intercepted a pass against Northwestern in 1976 then threw one for 33 yards to Dan Kelleher just two weeks later against Oregon .

. . . started at flanker as a sophomore and was on the receiving end of Notre Dame's longest pass completion of the season -- a 68-yard touchdown grab against Georgia Tech.

. . . started all 11 games at left cornerback as a junior . . . tied for the team lead in interceptions with three . . . led all Irish punt returners with 25 returns for 175 yards.

Versatile is a good word to describe Dave Waymer. Of course, so is versatility and then some talented, or dedicated, humble . . . They all fit.

Dave Waymer

But lets not get goopy. Waymer doesn't like that.

"Those things aren't important," he says. "All I try to do is use the talent I've been blessed with to the best of my ability. Personal accomplishments and glory are secondary to team success."

Since his arrival at Notre Dame in 1976, Waymer had enjoyed plenty of both. He was an integral part of the 1977 National Championship team, catching 10 passes for 164 yards, including three for 38 yards against Texas in the 1978 Cotton Bowl. This year he topped everyone's pre-season list of probably All-Americans and was one of 22 players to get his picture in Playboy Magazine (with his clothes on, of course,) as a member of their 1979 gridiron honor roll.

In the first two games, Waymer has played well enough to make Hugh Hefner sorry he didn't feature number 34 in a centerfold. In the Irish season-opener against Michigan, the senior tri-captain intercepted a B.J. Dickey pass to halt a third quarter Michigan drive. Late in the second half against Purdue, he snagged his second steal in as many games, and a Chuck Male field goal resulted.

But so did a very sore knee. Four plays before his interception, when Purdue's Wally Jones took the handoff and streaked around right end, Waymer came up from his left cornerback spot to help out. As he was rolling off the pile, Waymer was speared on the inside of his left knee by a Purdue helmet, but, even though there was a Purdue player inside it, no late hit was called.

"I think it was a little late," Waymer reasons, rubbing his sore knee as he remembers the play. "It happened after the whistle had blown and I was already getting up off the pile." He stayed in the game until early in the third quarter when the knee stiffened and the pain became severe. Whether he will play tomorrow row against Michigan State is still a question.

"It's up to the coaches and trainers, of course," he concedes. "But I'll tell you, I hate just watching."

After practice and team meetings, he gets a chance to relax in his room as Marvin Gaye plays on the stereo. A jazz buff, Waymer enjoys such artists as Sarah Vaughn ("She's great.") and Joe Sample. He takes this opportunity to talk about things besides football.

"Well, I really don't have time for much more than football," he sighs. "After practice and meetings, I don't feel like doing anything else. I try to get in a little studying, maybe some reading-- but no more meetings!"

An avid reader ("My mother was a librarian so I started young."), Waymer enjoys contemporary best sellers. He singles out The Thornbirds as one of his recent favorites.

"I thought it was one of the best books I had ever read," he says.

Which is a high compliment from someone who rarely speaks in superlatives. In fact, when it comes to talking about himself, Waymer is remarkably modest.

"I just try to do the best I can, he admits. "Whatever the team needs me for, that's what I'll do."

His past record is evidence of that, for Dave Waymer has etched his name under just about every heading in the Notre Dame record book. In fact, just about the only thing he hasn't done is kick a field goal. (But with nine games left, who knows?)

Brammer, Byrd pose double trouble

The author, Dave Janssen, is sports editor of The State News, student newspaper at Michigan State University. This column appeared following State's win over Miami [Ohio] last weekend.

by Dave Janssen

You can choose any adjectives you'd like to describe MSU's 24-21 win over Miami of Ohio Saturday. Trying to perceive that the Spartans did, in fact, win, still may be the hardest assignment that came out of the contest.

But despite apparent repeated attempts to give the game away, the Spartans notched a win and we are told that the score and the quality of MSU's play no longer matters -- at least not until next Saturday.

And what have been familiar sound-ing post-game words from the mouth of Darryl Rogers, are becoming more and more familiar -- "Any win's a good win, we'll accept them all," or something along those lines.

Mark Brammer, whose fourth-quarter performance helped save the Spartans 10th consecutive victory, stood holding a towel around his waist, talking to a group of reporters in the locker room after the game. The 6-4, 236-pound All-American tight end told how he thought a game like Saturday's might be good for the team to experience, noting that he felt fortunate not to be among the losers on that day.

Meanwhile, a few yards away, unattended, sat Eugene Byrd, whose fourth-down reception has to be considered equally important to the outcome of the game as Brammer's clutch final-quarter catches. Byrd, as far from reporters as he wishes he was from defensive backs each time he goes out for a pass, would soon relay his feelings about the game.

To put it mildly, Byrd's thoughts about the win were quite different offered by the players. "That's the best one," Byrd reported. "To come back like that when everything looked so bleak, that's just got to be the best one yet."

Byrd admitted that he has never been as tense about a game near its end as he was Saturday. Yet, the all-Big Ten wide receiver had no doubts that he was going to make that fourth down catch with less than two minutes left. That would keep alive his team's glimmering hopes for a victory.

Byrd . . . nearing the record.

"I was just hopin' I would get the first down," he said.

He made it, and with 16 yards to spare. It was a big catch, but then all of them are for Byrd, who is now just 18 catches away from tying Curt Gibson's career record of 112 catches. Brammer is only three behind Byrd's total at 91, after making five grabs against Miami of Ohio. Both Byrd and Brammer are only a big day's work away from the second spot on the list held by Gene Washington, who had 102 receptions in the 64-66 seasons.

The slender Byrd, whose number 84, like the 91 wore by Brammer, is becoming increasingly popular. At Spartan Stadium, believes he will reach the top of the receiving list this fall. "I think I'm about where I was last year," said Byrd, who, with ten catches, is indeed, exactly where he was a year ago.

But Byrd doesn't waste much time thinking or talking about records unless they affect his team as a whole. He, like everybody else, is concerned with the play of the MSU team, which looked somewhat less than the caliber of a Big Ten title contender Saturday. "Right now we're 3-0, but we've got to play better football," offered Byrd. "The bulk of our schedule is coming up and we've got to be sharp."

It was at this time last season when Byrd started to become a bit more noticeable in the MSU offense. Against the University of Notre Dame last fall, Byrd caught seven Eddie Smith passes for 124 yards and one touchdown.

Now we approach the fourth week-end of the football season and again -- Michigan State vs. Notre Dame. "I feel like my good game is on the way," Byrd predicted. "I mean like getting seven or eight catches. It's time for me to have that good game, and there's no one better than the one comin' up."

It's certain the rest of the Spartans believe it's time for them to have a good game too. When it comes to Notre Dame, we all know what happens to teams that are not sharp in games that are not well tucked away.

Rally tonight

The first big rally of the home season will be held tonight at 7 pm in Stepan Center. Coach Dan Devine, the captains, the Notre Dame Marching Band, and the cheerleaders will all be on hand to lead the "Beat Michigan State" cheer. The band will step off from Washington Hall at 6:45 pm.

Irish recall 'Game of the Century'

Without its starting signal-caller, Notre Dame rallied to tie one of college football's most memorable games

The author, Tim Bourret, is a former Observer sports columnist. Also a past commissioner of Notre Dame's Bookstore Basketball tournament, Bourret is currently assistant director of sports information at Clemson.

Although there have been countless exciting games in the Notre Dame-Michigan State series, one contest stands out as the game most remembered. "The Game of the Century" was the billing ABC gave its viewers on promos run the week prior to the Nov. 19, 1966, contest. The reason for the interest was simple. No. 1-ranked Notre Dame was facing No. 2-ranked Michigan State in what was called a college "Super Bowl."

It is a rarity when two teams can play in one game to decide the college national title. But in '66, Notre Dame and Michigan State were so much better than the other top-rated teams, that the pollsters could have stopped the selection process after picking No. 2. No one else cared about the rest of the bunch.

The game took on added meaning because neither team was going to a post-season bowl. Prior to 1969, Notre Dame held a policy against playing in post-season bowls because of the University's semester schedule (in those days the first semester ended in January). Michigan State could not go to the Rose Bowl because they had participated in one the season before. According to Big Ten rules, a team could not go to the Pasadena Extravaganza two years in a row. As a result, a winner-take-all situation existed.

The interest was beyond comprehension. "I never dreamed that many papers, radio stations and TV stations existed," said Terry Hanratty, Notre Dame's sophomore quarterback that season. "Everyone wanted to watch practices and have interviews, but we had to keep everyone out. The coaches went to extremes to work on the preparation, and they took every security measure. We even stationed a manager on the 13th floor of the Memorial Library, a perfect vantage point to view our practices."

Although security was tight, writers still got their stories. "All the publicity really got the students excited," continued Hanratty, the former Pittsburgh Steeler who is now one of the well-known personalities in Lite Beer commercials. "The campus was chaotic the entire week. The students held dorm rallies every night and a giant pep rally in the Old Fieldhouse at the end of the week. This was unprecedented for any away game."

The media attention was national. The contest attracted 720 media representatives, which is still believed to be a media attendance record for an NCAA sporting event.

The entire country made its weekend plans around the game. In Boston, one Catholic church postponed confession until after the game. At the same time a priest in another part of the East held confession, but had a youngster come to confession every half hour to give him a report.

According to legend, the youngster's second confession went something like, "I have done nothing since my last confession, and neither has Notre Dame."

'I have done nothing since my last confession, and neither has Notre Dame'

Notre Dame fans might not have believed that the Lord was on its side early in the game. By the end of the first quarter, the Irish had lost three top players -- quarterback Hanratty, center George Goeddeke and running back Rocky Bleier. All three players went on to long pro careers; Bleier's is still active. And Notre Dame had already lost All-American running back Nick Eddy on the trip up. Yes, the trip up. Eddy slipped when debarking the train in East Lansing and bruised his shoulder to the extent that he was unable to play in the biggest game of his life.

Michigan State took advantage of these events, and vaulted to a 10-0 lead by the middle of the second period. Regis Cavender, a bullish halfback, scored on a short run, and bare-footed Dick Kenney connected on a 47-yard field goal to give the Spartans a fairly comfortable cushion.

But, following the tradition of Notre Dame football dating back to George Gipp, the Irish disregarded the odds and made a gutsy comeback. The catalyst of this resurgence was a diminutive diabetic named Coley O'Brien, a player with a name befitting a Notre Dame hero.

The Washington, D.C., native, who gave Hanratty all he could handle in the fight for the starting quarterback job in the preseason, guided the Irish to 10 points to tie the game. The nifty signal-caller, who had to fight the problems of diabetes in addition to Michigan State All-Americans Bubba Smith and George Webster, completed a 34-yard pass to Bob Gladieux, Eddy's replacement, and led the Irish on the game-tying drive that resulted in Joe Azzaro's field goal. Not bad for someone who had to gulp down candy bars between series to keep his strength.

After Notre Dame booted that tying field goal on the first play of the final period, the defenses dominated the action. Neither team registered a strong drive, and the Irish had the only real chance to win. Tom Schoen, who had played quarterback the year before against the Spartans, intercepted a pass and returned it to the State 18. But three Notre Dame rushing plays lost six yards, and

A first-quarter injury forced Terry Hanratty to watch from the sidelines for the remainder of the game. Despite Hanratty's injury, the Irish came from ten points down to tie Michigan State in the 1966 thriller.

Azzaro's 41-yard field goal attempt missed by inches.

Notre Dame got the ball for one last time on its own 30, with 1:24 to play. Instead of risking a turnover that Kenney, the finest kicker in the country, could turn into a deciding field goal, Irish coach Ara Parseghian commanded his forces to run out the clock.

"The Game of the Century ended in a tie, causing the media to go wild. 'How could Ara run out the clock?' was the cry of the scribes. Noted columnist Jim Murray might have documented the feeling of most of the writers when he penned, 'Rockne's pep talk was 'Fight! Fight! Fight!' Not 'Tie! Tie! Tie!' The Gipper never would have settled for a draw."

Parseghian explained himself after the game, and although his statements were logical, ("I wasn't about to blow the game with an interception that we could not have overcome."), it was not until the following Saturday the people really understood why Parseghian played cautiously, if not sensibly.

In the season finale, Notre Dame played Southern California in the Los Angeles Coliseum. Michigan State sat home and waited, as their nine-game schedule had ended. The contest on the West Coast was not close, as the Irish ran away from the Trojans, 51-0, the most lopsided defeat in the history of that series. O'Brien continued his heroics in that contest, completing 21 passes for over 300 yards and three scores. It was an impressive win over the 10th-ranked and Rose Bowl-bound Trojans.

The following Monday, the writers (AP) and the coaches (UPI) both voted Notre Dame No. 1 and Michigan State No. 2. Parseghian had indeed made the right decision in East Lansing the previous Saturday, for he enjoyed his Christmas holidays wearing a National Championship ring.

Chicago (AP) - Dan Devine sends his Notre Dame troops against still another Big Ten contender tomorrow, but he refuses to put Michigan State's seventh-ranked Spartans "on the spot."

"After we beat Michigan State last year I said they were possibly the best in the Big Ten and they didn't lose another game," Devine told Chicago Football Writers Tuesday in a telephone interview.

"But I can't say that before a game, I don't want to put them on the spot. From the films we have seen they are in the same category as Michigan and Purdue."

The Irish opened the season with a 12-10 upset at Michigan and because of that were favored at Purdue where they lost 28-22 last Saturday after leading 20-7.

"Michigan State has all the qualities to be Big Ten Champions again," said Devine. "They are as strong as last year, but in different areas. Bert Vaughn will be as good as Ed Smith but he is not Smith yet. Maybe he will be Saturday, I don't know."

"We're glad to be home but we can't use playing on the road as any excuse," said Devine. "Kids today are worldly and playing away from home doesn't bother them that much."

Devine used three quarterbacks against Purdue but the Irish expect to be without the services of Rusty Lisch who has a sprained ankle. He also expects to start a freshman defensive back in place of Dave Waymer which reminded Devine of an "astute observation by (Knute) Rockne. 'You lose one game for every freshman you start.'"

The Irish used a fake field goal to score a touchdown against Purdue with Greg Knafelc throwing a pass to Dean Masztak.

"We probably won't be able to use that one for another 10 years," said Devine, who chuckled and added, "that reminds me of what Frank Leahy once said. He said, 'Lads, if we have to rely on trickery, we may as well not play.' He meant if you have to resort to trickery you can't win the big ones."

But Devine conceded, "Oh, we might have a few tricks up our sleeve for Michigan State."

Spartan Coach Daryl Rogers, in another telephone interview, wasn't worried about tricks what with Halloween still a month away. His concern was running back Vagas Ferguson and Notre Dame personnel in general.

"When you play Notre Dame, you play a good football team. They always have good personnel. They had a great win over Michigan and they lost to Purdue. If they played them over again, it could be the other way around."

"Notre Dame has the ability to do what it wants to do," said Rogers, "but I think they'll give the ball to Ferguson. He's one of the premier running backs in the country."

 runs through the tunnel.

"You can't really think about it before," he says. "It's more during the course of the game. The student body plays a very important role in our success, but it all depends on the game. You have to take it from there. 'I don't listen to the crowd, but when you're the visiting team, and you commit a turnover or something, you can feel the difference in the tempo of the game.'"

Even though Ferguson and company will now have the crowd on their side, the All-America candidate will still be pretty much oblivious to the people in the stands.

"The whole time we're out there, we're thinking about what we're supposed to be doing," he says. "If the game is close, or sometimes at the very beginning you notice, but other than that, you block 'em out.'"

Sometimes, though nobody can put things into perspective like a coach --

"It's great to be home," says Dan Devine.

LETTERS TO A LONELY GOD

The Boy Who Hated His Shadow

Rev. Robert Griffin

My grandmother told me as a child about a boy she knew who had trouble with his shadow. I was not surprised to hear about him. I knew, from reading Peter Pan, that some children have such problems: getting their shadows snagged on nails, or caught in doors or windows. When they come home from school, their mothers speak reprimands like: "Georgianna, what on earth have you done with your shadow today. Go back and find it, you careless girl, so that I can sew it back on again before your father sees you." Shadows, to my imagination, seemed as detachable as mittens, though I had never actually looked at a shadow while it was not in use. What surprised me was to learn that my grandmother—a Methodist in love with her Bible—had actually known a young fellow, the same age as myself, who, disliking his shadow, had tried to get rid of it.

"He decided it was too heavy," my grandmother said. "He complained that carrying it around made his shoulders ache."

"Shadows don't weigh nothing, Nana," I objected. "Shadows are lighter than dust."

"Shadows don't weigh nothing on you," Nana said. "Shadows don't weigh nothing on me. But Andrew's shadow laid on him like a winter coat with sand in its pockets. Can you imagine trying to run and play with five pound sacks of sand in your pockets?"

"Nana," I said doubtfully, "I don't think shadows come with pockets in them."

"Andrew's shadow felt to him like it had pockets," my grandmother said. "You've never seen a person who hated his shadow as much as Andrew did. He kept begging folks to hold onto his shadow while he ran away from it, but nobody could ever help him do that."

"Did you ever try to help him?" I asked.

"He wanted me to," she said, "but I told him I didn't know nothing about shadows. Anyway, I supposed that a person's shadow, being given to him, was meant to be kept. But I could see right off what the trouble with that shadow was."

"Could you see the pockets full of sand?" I said.

"That shadow didn't need pockets to drag on that boy like an anchor. What ailed it was that it was too big, from head to toe. It was a six foot shadow fitted on a four foot boy; it properly belonged on a man."

"Maybe he just needed to grow into it," I said.

"Pants is something you can grow into, handing them down from brother to brother," my grandmother said. "But a shadow has to be measured right, from the beginning. Otherwise it's always going to be a trouble and a burden."

I couldn't help feeling sorry for a shadow that was a trouble and a burden. "Nothing wants to hurt you less than a shadow," I said.

Andy went around, my grandmother said, followed by a shadow that was a dozen sizes too big. On the days it was wet, he would walk in the rain, hoping the dampness would shrink his shadow. On the bright days, he stayed in the sunlight, expecting it would make him tall; but as the lad lengthened, the shadow lengthened, and Andy could never catch up. He swam in the sea, hoping to drown his shadow; but each time, it followed him out of the water. At night, he would spend time going into dark rooms, then leaving quickly, hoping his shadow would get trapped inside, but the shadow moved just as rapidly as the boy.

"Did his shoulders always ache," I said, "from a shadow he was too small to carry?"

"Shadows are always bigger than the folks that carry them," my grandmother said. "But by the time he was ten, Andrew's shadow seemed to be bigger than a church's steeple. By then, neighbors were saying: 'Why Andy, that's not a boy's shadow, it's a grown up's shadow you've got. If you can find who it belongs to, you can switch shadows back again.'"

So Andrew went around, asking strangers if they had the shadow belonging to him. They would always answer: "I have a shadow that fits me exactly right, so it cannot belong to you."

One day, my grandmother said, Andrew came into the village square, asking strange folk for their help, and an old traveller stopped him.

"What time is it?" asked the traveller.

"It's noontime," said Andrew, looking at the church clock.

"Then why does your shadow show that it's three o'clock?" said the traveller.

"I can't really explain what that shadow does," said Andy. "I don't think it really belongs to me."

"It certainly does," said the stranger. "There's never a mistake about shadows. I've been to the land where shadows begin, and they're fitted carefully to a creature's size and shape. But yours runs ahead of the sun."

"It doesn't fit at all," said Andrew. "Are you sure it's my shadow?"

"It doesn't fit," said the traveller, "because you're casting a three o'clock shadow, and it's only twelve o'clock. It must feel very distressing."

"My shadow makes my shoulders ache," said Andrew. "If it's really the shadow that belongs to me, how can I make it more comfortable?"

"Shadows," the traveller said, "are a darkness that moves ahead of us and trails after us as a companion that depends on light. Sometimes a shadow, loving the sun, depending on the light, wants the light to depend on it; then the shadow races through the day toward evening, ahead of all clocks and schedules."

Andrew looked at his shadow; already at noontime, it was beginning to take on the deep purple color of dusk. "What can I do?" he said.

"There is a tree," the traveller said, "where every shadow finds the place it came from and the spot it belongs too. Under that tree, for those shadows, it is always noontime, never earlier and never later, for they belong to a day that keeps no clocks except noon. Go to that tree where your shadow must follow. Rest there until you are at peace with all the wearisome darkness you will ever know."

"Can I get there by walking?" Andrew said.

"It's as close as the distance the heart can travel," the stranger said, "when love makes its journey home."

"It's the last tiring distance Andrew had to make with his shadow," my grandmother said. "After that, it was always a pleasant yoke and a burden that was sweat."

"Nana," I said perceptively. "You're telling me stories about God, aren't you?"

"God's stories are the only ones worth bothering with," she said sweetly.

Nana never thought Peter Pan was worth bothering with. But Peter Pan got along better with shadows than some of the boys my grandmother knew. As a child I found it difficult to respect kids who couldn't be bosses of their own shadow.

What's All This, Then?

ND-SMC Theatre at Washington Hall

Hamlet Initiates Guest Artist Series

Shakespeares' Hamlet is the first production of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Theatre Season which has also the distinction of being the first play to be performed in Washington Hall (with the exception of last year's You're A Good Man Charlie Brown produced by the ND Student Players) since December, 1974.

Reginald F. Bain, who is directing the drama, said that he discontinued theatrical performances in Washington Hall because of the need for renovation. Because the University has been unable to obtain sufficient funds to complete renovations and restoration, Bain decided to go ahead and do Hamlet in Washington Hall. The Saint Mary's Theatre professor remarked that he felt it important to have theatre on the Notre Dame campus. "The Saint Mary's Theatre is very nice-but it is time to do a play here."

Bain went on to say that although the renovated lighting facilities are now safe, the system is very limited.

Hamlet is also a first in that it marks the beginning of the Guest Artist Series. The Guest Artist Series will bring visiting professionals to campus to perform in Speech and Drama Department productions.

Lance Davis, who is a 1969 Notre Dame graduate and a professional actor from New York, will play Hamlet, joining an otherwise all student cast. When asked about the Guest Artist Series, Davis commented that he would have liked the experience of working with professional actors when he was at Notre Dame. "It is very valuable to give the student actor an idea of professional acting life before they enter that life. Professionals are a good resource to tax," Davis said, reflecting on his beginnings in theatre.

Davis sat on the stage steps in Washington Hall dressed in blue jeans and white sneakers and talked about his college days in theatre at Notre Dame. He said that it was good to come back where he was a student actor and to work with Dr. Bain once more.

Other shows planned by the ND/SMC Theatre include Augustus Goetz's The Heiress, a classic adaptation of Henry James' novel Washington Square. This powerful drama of a woman's efforts to break the confining structures placed on her by uncaring society and domineering father will open November 30.

Also scheduled is Teeth and Smiles by a major new English playwrighting talent, David Hare. Hare will be on campus during the performance of his savage drama and is expected to be available for a period of discussion following the performance.

The final production, Dylan Thomas' Under Milkwood, will be presented at the Bendix Theatre which is located in South Bend's Century Center. This gentle, warm and humorous story of a day in the life of Welsh village should be a perfect way to end a diverse and innovative season of theatre for Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

The Centennial Revival of Washington Hall

Before Washington Hall was built one hundred years ago, two storey building known as Exhibition Hall stood approximately the same site. Exhibition Hall, Notre Dame's music and theatre building burned down in the Great Fire of 1879, which also destroyed the old Administration Building.

Willoughby J. Edbrooke, the architect who designed LaFortune, Sorin College and the original plans for the present Administration Building, was commissioned to design a new theatre and music building. The hall was completed in 1881 and was named Washington Hall because Fr. Edward Sorin's (the founder of Notre Dame) favorite American hero was George Washington. This new fine arts building further defined the central quad at what was then the terminus of Notre Dame Avenue.

The first performance given at the theatre was Sophocles' Oedipus Tyrannus, using the original Greek text.

Washington Hall has undergone numerous renovations and additions in its one hundred year history. The tower was completed in 1887 and in 1907 the original wooden steps were replaced by concrete steps. Until 1933 the Southern side of the hall had a set of steps up to the second floor.

It is up that staircase that the Ghost of Washington Hall is said to have been seen riding an invisible horse. Two theories exist as to the identity of the spectre. Some say that it is George Gipp, the All-American football player who supposedly slept on the steps the night before he became ill and died in 1920. Others have it that the ghost is the spirit of a steeple-jack who fell to his death in 1886 while working on the tower.

Recent restorations include improvements of the south entrance, lighting facilities and the stage. There are also to make the balcony safer. For the ND/SMC Theatre opening production of Hamlet, no tickets will be sold for balcony seating.

Recent renovations do not include the restoration of numerous large murals that were a part of the original interior decor. The walls of the theatre were painted with four mural depicting tragedy, comedy, poetry and music. The ceiling was illustrated with portraits of Shakespeare, Moliere, Dante and Mozart, each corresponding to one of the wall murals, and above the stage was a portrait of George Washington. All of these pictures were covered with dull gray paint in 1956.

OK., folks, I don't like to complain much, but one thing about this place really ticks me off. It's those sprinklers they're always placing so that your bike gets watered, or goes into your first floor window.

Don't get me wrong, now. I love little rabbits and duckies and all kinds of other Nature stuff...I like green grass...I even can stand alumni visiting on football weekends (although some of them appear pretty unnatural in Notre Dame sweaters with ND hats, socks, shoes, diapers, stadium cushions, flasks), but is it necessary to recreate the Flood for the forty days prior to the first home game so that there will be green grass for those who came before us?

I know we have the place looking nice for TV crews and for parents and for the wealthy alumni (make it look like the grass is as green as they like to imagine it was when they were here), but must we commit scores of bicycles to perpetual rust? My poor little bike got all confused when they watered it, thought it was supposed to be proliferating and presented me with five shiny little unicycles last week.

How many times have I awaked bright and fresh to a sunny morning stepped outside my dormitory door and been slapped in the face by a wash of cold water? Once too many.

How many times have my shoes failed to guard my feet from the torrents that rush down to the lake? Once too many.

How many times some unsuspecting motorist beendriving down the road in front of Lewis behind the Ad building, windows rolled down, feeling the breeze, when the lawn sprinkler comes around to that dread 47 degrees off the perpendicular and drenches the inside of the car? Once too many.

And finally, how many times have you been saying good night to that special someone, felt terribly wet of a sudden and were terribly embarrassed until you realized that those pumping pistons of ND lawn life had done it to you again? Never? Well, no matter.

I'm rather sick and tired of these mandatory baths. Parietals are bad enough, but I can bathe myself, by myself.

You know what I've been doing? I turn them off. Yup. Why don't you do it too. Turn them off. Shut this place down. They want us to stop drinking - they want to keep us dry - alright then! We'll give them dry. You may notice that some of the spigots have no handles - an old-fashioned radiator key works nicely, as does a pair of pliers.

Let's do something about the run-off problem - soon.

Koch keys success to organization

Notre Dame is the only college in the nation with an independent Big Brothers/Big Sisters program. Last year, BB/BS was the largest volunteer organization on campus.

The key to the group's success here is organization, according to Tim Koch, BB/BS vice president. A constitution was composed last year thanks to the efforts of James Daschbach, then faculty adviser for the group, and Dan Monroe, 1978-79 BB/BS president, with the cooperation of a few other students.

The organization boasted 87 student volunteers last year. This year over 300 persons signed up at Activities Night.

"We will remain the number one volunteer organization with so many new recruits," Koch commented. "Our group is very successful and so we've been invited to the national conference for Big Brothers/Big Sisters in Kalamazoo, MI, on Oct. 2, 3, and 4 to give talks to other schools explaining how they can go about setting up such a program on their campuses."

BB/BS is a one-to-one relationship between a Notre Dame student and a child from the South Bend community who lacks a father or a mother.

"Usually they are from low income families and range in age from 7-17," Koch explained. The student and child develop a friendship and spend at least one hour a week together.

"Basically you become that little kid's friend and you grow with him, share feelings, and experience the world with him. Most people find that they spend much more time than just an hour a week with their little brother or sister because it's so much fun and so rewarding," Koch further explained.

Once a month the group plans an organized event to help take pressure off the big brothers and sisters. "This way the students don't always have to think of something to do," Koch said.

The organizational meeting for all new big brothers and sisters will be Wednesday Oct. 10 at 7 p.m. in the Architecture auditorium. "New members will be receiving a flier in the mail soon telling them about this meeting," Koch said. "This will be where they receive their orientation training. A film will be shown explaining what our group is. Then they will meet with a case worker and get their little brother or sister."

For all of the old big brothers and sisters there is a canoe trip down the St. Joe River Sunday. Everyone interested in going should meet at 11 a.m. at the main circle. "It will be an all day affair and should be lots of fun," according to Koch.

Board begins hearings

The Student Government Board of Commissioners began hearings last night for funding requests from campus organizations. Limited to ten minute presentations, the first wave of representatives from various groups presented their cases for financial consideration.

Due to a limited budget and a large number of requests, the Board is faced with a question of priorities. The foremost consideration for fund allocation is the number of students that will benefit from the activity. Also the organization's additional revenue sources as well as its ability to generate funds are prime considerations.

Hearing will continue Sunday afternoon, and final evaluations are expected Sunday night.

coordinates the 28 concession stands in and around the stadium. "There are seven trailers outside the stadium and 21 inside," Winter said. "The university owns and operates the stands--we supply the food and set the prices," he explained. The stand is contracted to an operator as Madlen.

Madlen, whose wife, two sons and daughter-in-law also operate their own stands, works from 8:00 a.m. until 6:00 p.m. on game days. The veteran operator sweeps the stand, takes an inventory of his goods, cooks and wraps hot dogs and ices soft drinks before game time.

When Madlen started as a worker, he usually found time to sneak a glimpse of the Fighting Irish. "But now that I operate my own stand, I rarely, if ever, get up to see the game," he said.

Winter, Madlen and Phyllis Hoffman, an eight year operator, all pointed to temperature, crowds and pint margins as the main factors influencing sales.

"I broke all personal soft drink sales records at last year's Missouri game when the temperature was in the 90's," Hoffman related. She sold 2920 cans of pop.

75,000 cans of pop were sold at that game, enough usually for two or three games, according to Winter. The biggest money-maker is hot dogs. On the average, the stands sell 30,000 hot dogs per game. "If we are blowing the other team away, or if it is raining, then our sales go up," Winter said.

Both Hoffman and Winter cited the U.S.C. and Pittsburgh crowds as "big spenders." M.S.U. Michigan and Purdue fans don't spend as much. Relatively short drives allow them to supply their own refreshments, according to Winter.

Although the demand for dogs and drinks may dip for the upcoming M.S.U. game, the press box will be full, according to Valdiserri. "This game is getting so much attention that the main box, radio booth and photo deck will be full," he said. The press box seats about

House approves multibillion fiscal budget for 1980

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House yesterday narrowly approved a $548.2 billion 1980 budget, but apparently not in time to resolve deep-seated differences with the Senate over defense spending before the start of the new fiscal year Monday.

By a 212-206 margin, the House reversed its earlier rejection of the budget, approving a slightly revised spending package recommended by the House Budget Committee.

Despite yesterday's vote, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said House and Senate negotiators will not meet to begin resolving their differences until after the House returns from a week-long recess starting this weekend. The Senate approved a $546.3-billion spending plan last week.

The lack of a budget at the start of the new fiscal year will not affect the day-to-day operations of the government since Congress can still appropriate money without a budget ceiling.

The House approved the budget despite unanimous Republican opposition. A total of 153 Republicans voted against the package.

Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., Budget Committee Chairman, said the House budget was "fair, balanced and realistic" and demonstrated congressional spending restraint.

The Democratic leadership also won over some dissident liberals who had opposed the earlier proposal.

Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Mo., a member of the Congressional Black Caucus, said he was reversing his earlier opposition because other budget proposals would be more harmful to minorities.

If the House ended up with the Senate version, Mitchell said, "we'll be putting the squeeze on those that have almost been squeezed to death."

Rep. James R. Jones of Oklahoma, a conservative Democrat, said he also favored the committee's budget. he noted that if the House started its recess without approving a budget, "we'll have nothing to talk (to our constituents) about except how we raised our salaries."

However, Republicans said the $384 million in spending cuts included in the revised proposal were only "cosmetic," and they accused the Democratic leadership of a "charade."

In a surprise vote last week, the House rejected a $548.6 billion spending package, as conservatives upset with the overall spending levels joined with liberals who wanted more money for social programs.

The budget committee then trimmed $384 million from the proposal, added future money for college scholarships and sent it back to the House.

With Belgium university

Faculty to begin exchange program

by Chris Carrigan

In the 1980-81 academic year, Notre Dame and Katholieke Universiteit Leuven in Belgium will begin a faculty exchange program.

The program will exchange one faculty member from each university for one semester. Although the exchange is university-wide, common interests and research strengths will be the bases for the selection of the faculty, according to Dr. David Leege, Director of the Center for the Study of Man in Contemporary society. Leege will choose the faculty participants.

According to Leege, the idea for the program was conceived here in the 1977 spring semester. At that time, he said, a visiting sociology professor from Leuven first examined the possibilities of such an intellectual and cultural exchange. The idea won the approval of Leege and Notre Dame Provost

Professor Timothy O'Meara. In March, Pieter de Somer, rector at Leuven, and Fr. Theodore Hesburgh signed the agreement.

Leuven, located just outside Brussels, has been a leading Catholic university for centuries. It is the Dutch-speaking descendant of the Catholic University of Louvain, founded in 1425 by Pope Martin V. Today, the University has an enrollment of 18,000 students.

"It was a unique opportunity for two outstanding Catholic schools that shared so much to exchange ideas," Leege concluded.

ND offers Cuernavaca experiment

According to Fr. Don McNeill, the semester in Cuernavaca which is distinct from the Foreign Studies Programs of the University directed by Dr. Parnell, will be offered in spring of 1980 as an experiment for a maximum of four sophomores or juniors and will be evaluated by its continuance. It is supervised by the Center for Experiential Learning in collaboration with Notre Dame and Augsburg College. Notre Dame encourages students to participate in forms of experiential learning to supplement the justice education they receive in interdisciplinary courses. Students with further questions may call #2788.

Requests for press credentials started coming in last spring, but Valdiserri waited until the end of the summer to start considering requests. "Our priority goes to the medium with the highest circulation," he said. He carefully examines each request because "the press box is a working place and we must provide an atmosphere appropriate for people making a living," Valdiserri noted.

There are no cheers or unnecessary noises allowed in the booth. Writers are on deadlines and we have equipped the box with phones so writer can call in their copy, Valdiserri said.

Originally hailed as one of the country's largest press boxes in 1920, writers still work in the original structure. Renovations have been done on the inside and the radio booth has been totally rebuilt.

Because of new N.C.A.A. guidelines, the number of people allowed on the sidelines will be decreased. "This will make it easier for trainers, doctors, and photographers to do their job freely," Valdiserri said.

Coash emerges as future star

by Beth Huffman
Women's Sports Editor

In the past few years Saint Mary's has been building a respectable tennis program. In addition to hosting the state tournament last year, the Belles have been developing some strong young players of their own. A surprise arrival on the scene this year has been freshman Patsy Coash.

Coash, a native of Kalamazoo, MI, has compiled a 0 record thus far this fall. En route to obtaining that record, she recently took first place in the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's tennis tournament, and just last Saturday upset Aura Jain, a nationally-ranked player from Purdue. In her seven matches this season, Coash has not lost a single set.

How does this petite freshman overpower her opponents? "She commits the least amount of errors," offered Saint Mary's coach Sandy Frey. "There's nothing flashy about her game. She's quick, she moves well, and has style from the baseline."

Coash got her start in tennis by chance. Her mother came across an article in the local newspaper advertising try-outs for Junior Development tennis. Coash made the team and began her career with Junior Development, traveling the summer circuit and winning several tournaments in her five years on the tour.

continuing her tennis play at Hackett High School, Coash amassed an impressive prep record, losing just three times in four years. She suffered her first loss in the Michigan state finals, and placed second her freshman year. In her second year, she went undefeated and became the state singles champion, and also served as an alternate at the national championships. She advanced to the semifinals at state her junior year before losing, and placed second her senior year.

The Holy Cross resident did not limit her athletic talents to just tennis at Hackett, lettering in track and volleyball, and was selected Most Valuable Player on the track team her junior year, when she competed in the state track meet.

The difficult task of choosing a college faced Coash after graduation. "I was offered scholarships by Kalamazoo College and Michigan State," Coash relates, "but I wanted to go out of town and MSU was just too big. I had heard a lot about Saint Mary's from my sister Julie, who goes here too, and it has such a highly acclaimed academic atmosphere. It was just what I wanted."

"I knew I'd really have tons of studying," she continued, "and I wasn't sure I could study and play tennis." She passed over her fears and tried out for the team. "I always get nervous when I play, but I felt confident I could make the team."

She made the team, and in process emerged as Saint Mary's number-one singles player.

Tennis is a pastime for two other Coast family members. Brother Matt won the state tournament for 10 and under, but today "just fools around on the court every once in a while. It's nothing serious," according to Coash.

Her mother, Susan, the major influence on Coash's tennis career, played with her daughter this summer in a mother-daughter tournament sponsored by Equitable Life Insurance, and the pair advanced to the national finals by winning the sectional tournament in Chicago. While her teammates were battling DePauw earlier this season, Patsy and her mother advanced to the national semifinals in New York.

Coash expects to continue her strong play during her rookie season at Saint Mary's, despite the "tons of competition" she anticipates facing in the future.

... Irish

cold, grey October Sky.

But don't try and tell the Notre Dame soccer team that this isn't a big game. Just as big, to them, as any USC or UCLA game will ever be.

And it's the biggest game in the young history of the sport at ND. It's big because the Irish are trying to establish itself as a soccer power, and the way to do that is to beat the biggies. Indiana, the number-two team in the nation the last two years, and currently ranked first in the Midwest and sixth in the country, is the perfect target for the hungry Irish.

The Hoosiers bring to Cartier Field one of the stingiest defenses among soccer giants in recent years. Allowing only one goal against in five contests to date, the Hoosiers boast an amazing 0.20 goals against average, and sport a 4-1 record.

And with stalwart goalie John Putna, already the author of four shutouts, in the net, the Irish are going to believe they are shooting at a hockey goal.

And don't think that by being deep at one position the Hoosiers are shallow elsewhere. Even though Indiana lost Hermann Award winner (given to soccer's best player) Angelo DiBernardo and Charlie Fajkus, their career assist record holder, it still has a potent offense. Led by All-American candidate Tim Walters, and bolstered by transfers Armando Betancourt and Pat McGauley, the Hoosiers field an extremely quick forward line. Of Indiana's 14 goal output, Betancourt has five.

The Irish will counter with thunderfoot Kevin Lovejoy and opportunists Bill Murphy and Mike Mai, who together have accounted for 16 goals. The Irish are going to have to take advantage of every scoring chance by flooding the Indiana zone on offense. The Irish have been looking for an aggressive forward since Ed O'Malley broke his leg in the opener, and to be successful against Indiana they'll have to find someone by gametime. Freshman Matt Stolwyk has seen action at wing recently and could be the solution.

Notre Dame will also need a steady defense to thwart Indiana's kick-and-run offense. Fullback Jim Stein has missed several games to a foot ailment, but is hopeful to start today. Tom Crotty, Notre Dame's nonpareil backliner, will be counted on to check Indiana's striker while also initiating the Irish offense.

And it's going to take a daring performance by Irish goalie

Brian Cullather if Notre Dame is to hold off Walters and company.

Last year the Irish lost to Indiana in Bloomington, 7-1. But at that time Indiana was number one in the country. The Hoosiers are not as good this year. Notre Dame has proven it can play with the best, as last week's tie with Loyola-Baltimore evidenced. And the Irish are playing at home, before what is hoped to be the largest home crowd ever at Cartier Field. History has recorded what home-inspired Notre Dame teams can do. Just ask the 1977 San Francisco team or the '77 USC football team.

Maybe Irish head coach Rich Hunter could dig up a few green jerseys.

Irish co-captain Jim Sabitus [9] will need to apply some solid defense if the Irish hope to defeat Indiana today.

Hoosiers shoot for longest win streak

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) - The prospect of Indiana's longest winning streak in 12 years-four games- isn't lulling Lee Corso's Hoosiers into overconfidence.

They know, Corso says, that despite six straight losses Colorado can be a dangerous opponent.

"On physical manpower, this is as fine a team as we've seen since Nebraska last year," said Corso, whose unbeaten Hoosiers take on the winless Buffaloes on Saturday.

"They just haven't been able to put it all together. They play well for awhile, then something will happen. If they work it out, you'll see one of the finest football teams we'll play all season."

Colorado is 0-3 this season under new Coach Chuck Fairbanks, who returned to the Big Eight wars after six years as coach of the National Football League.

In its first two losses, to Oregon and Louisiana State, Colorado was unable to generate any offense. Last week, the Buffs fell underdog Drake 13-9 and were plagued with costly mistakes, including three lost fumbles and 15 penalties.

Fairbanks said afterwards, "It looks to me that if we beat anybody it will be an upset. This is as low as we could possibly go in our program."

The Hoosiers 3-0 record has been at the expense of Iowa, Vanderbilt, and Kentucky - who have a current combined record of 0-7 - so the opposition hasn't been all that tough.

"With a head coach the caliber of Coach Fairbanks, an outstanding staff and with the type of people they recruit at Colorado, you have to be aware of the possibility of them exploding in your face," said Corso. "It's probably a matter of new organization. Coach Fairbanks missed spring practice, and it could be they just haven't had time to develop as an organization."

Corso said he is especially wary of Colorado's defensive backs, Mark Haynes, Tim Roberts, Jesse Johnson and Mike Davis. Quarterback Bill Solomon also adds a strong running threat to the offense, Corso said.

"I don't think you can put your finger on one thing that is wrong with this team," Fairbanks said. "We're just not a very good football team at this point. There are some good athletes on this team, and there are some with very large shortcomings."

Indiana is led by quarterback Tim Clifford, ranked third in the nation in passing and 20th in total offense, and tailback Lonnie Johnson, fifth in all-purpose running.

he obviously has the composure you need."

Notre Dame's defense will have its hands full when the Spartans' offense takes the field. The Irish could be without the services of senior tri-captain Dave Waymer and soph defensive tackle Kevin Griffith, both of whom suffered knee sprains in the Purdue game. When Waymer failed to appear in the second half last week, he became the fourth starter relegated to the sidelines against the Boilermakers. Others who sat out Saturday's assignments were QB Rusty Lisch, guard Tim Huffman, and end Dave Condeni. Freshman Dave Duerson, from Muncie, North, who made two outstanding defensive plays late in the Purdue game is listed as Waymer's replacement.

Some questions still surround the Irish quarterback situation and as of late Thursday Devine had not indicated whether Lisch, Tim Koegel, Mike Courey or Greg Knafelc would be his Saturday signal caller. The Irish ground game will again feature the running of the tireless Vagas Ferguson who has averaged 30 carries in the first two games. With his 197 yards so far this year, Ferguson is just 451 yards away from breaking Jerome Heavens' record and becoming the all-time leading rusher in Notre Dame history.

Although Ferguson continues to be Notre Dame's biggest rushing threat, kicker Chuck Male has been the biggest Irish scoring threat. His two field goals in as many attempts against Purdue last week made him six-for-six on the season. That puts him halfway to Dave Reeves' single-season fieldgoal mark of 12 in 1977.

Again the Irish will have to face a big and talented defense, one which returns seven of its 11 starters from the 1978 squad. The Spartan defense is headed by All-Big Ten line-backer Dan Bass and middle guard Bernard Hay. Both contributed with big plays in the Spartan's 24-21 victory over Miami(Ohio) last week, with Hay being named defensive player of the week.

Despite the Spartans experienced defense, Rodgers believes the Irish offense will be tough to contain.

Devine said after Thursday's practice. "But today he didn't show any improvement with each day, but today he stayed the same. If I had to venture a guess, though, I'd say Rusty will be quarterback."

Which leaves me only slightly disappointed. It's just too bad Devine couldn't have tried his noble experiment when I was a freshman. It would have done a heck of a lot more than a letter from home to cure homesickness.

Attention All Logan Volunteers
In keeping with the spirit of the first home football game, this Saturday, September 29, we will have out annual, once-a-year, fun-filled Tailgate Rec!! Held outside on the grounds of Logan Center, there will be plenty to eat and drink. Also, get ready for lots of singing and yelling in order to get psyched up for the ND-Mich. State game. Tailgate Rec will be from 9:00 to 11:00 on Saturday, ending early so parents do not get help up in traffic. So be sure to learn the words to the ND fight song and come ready to sing 'till your voices go! Pray for good weather and we'll show all the alumni what a tailgater is like!!

Our first dance is this Friday, Sept. 28, from 7:30 to 10:00 in the Logan Center cafeteria. It will be a "Welcome Back" dance featuring a live band. A guaranteed good time for all who come to dance the night away! Help is needed to decorate the cafeteria and that will be done on Thursday, Sept. 27 at 7:00, also at Logan Center. Call Ed at 3479 or Walter at 3066 if you have any questions or need any information.

Notre Dame opens home season

by Kenny Valdiserri
Sports Writer

Notre Dame takes on its third nationally-ranked Big Ten team in as many weeks, as the seventh-rated Michigan State Spartans invade the stadium tomorrow in the 1979 home opener for the Fighting Irish. A capacity crowd of 59,075 will be on hand for the 1:30 pm EST kickoff.

Playing away from East Lansing for the first time this year, Darryl Rodgers' Spartan team is 3-0, having downed Illinois, Oregon State, and Miami (Ohio). The Spartans are riding high on a ten-game winning streak, their last defeat coming at the hands of the Irish last season.

In last year's 29-25 victory, Notre Dame held off the strong passing arm of the Spartan's top career passer Ed Smith, who completed 27 passes in 41 attempts for 306 yards to bring Michigan State roaring back from a 22-6 deficit.

This year Coach Darryl Rodgers has soph Bert Vaughn engineering Michigan State's sophisticated passing attack as the Spartans seek to gain a post-season appearance for the first time in four years after sitting out a three-year NCAA sanction.

In his first three outings, Vaughn has completed 41 passes in 90 attempts for 584 yards and four touchdowns.

"Vaughn is an excellent passer who can pick apart a pass defense," says Jim Johnson, Notre Dame's defensive backfield coach. "He shows a lot of poise under pressure, especially for someone who didn't have a great deal of playing time last year."

But Vaughn isn't the sole reason the Spartans boast an effective passing game. Even though they lost all-time leading receiver Kirk Gibson to graduation, the Spartans have an excellent pair of experienced receivers in All-American tight end Mark Brammer (7 catches, 83 yards and 1 TD) and flanker Eugene Byrd (10 catches, 195 yards and 1 TD). The duo is no stranger to Irish defenders, since they combined for 13 receptions and 177 yards in last year's battle at East Lansing.

Along with their effective passing game, the Spartans depend on a shuttle system at the running back slots. The tailback-fullback combo of Steve Smith and Lonnie Middleton will alternate with Bruce Reeves or Derick Hughes at tailback and Andy Schramm at fullback.

Smith tops the Spartan rushing list with an impressive 308 yards in 53 carries and a 5.8 yard average--while fellow tailbacks Hughes and Reeves have added 196 and 64 yards respectively.

"Michigan State's offense seems to have improved its efficiency every game," Irish coach Dan Devine notes, "particularly as Vaughn gains experience. He seems to be the key to their success because they have plenty of depth and ability at the running back and pass receiving positions. Even when Miami took the lead last Saturday, Vaughn led them 54 yards for the winning touchdown in less than a minute. So

Devine puts stop to muscial QBs

I'm from suburban Chicago (I didn't bother with "suburban" until Jane Byrne was elected), and I feel right at home.

The rest of the Notre Dame student body may be dizzy after seeing Dan Devine play musical quarterbacks Saturday in Ross-Ade Stadium, but I've been watching Phantom Phipps, Invisible Vince and Slo-Mo Bob and their Chicago Bear three-ring circus for almost three years now.

Fortunately, we won't have to put up with alternating quarterbacks any longer, or at least not until Sunday, when the Bears play again.

For that, you have the word of Dan Devine himself.

"I don't like the idea of alternating quarterbacks, and I never have," said Devine. "But doing it kept us from getting us blown out of the tub at Purdue."

A lot of people may disagree, and it's safe to say we'll never know for sure who is right. But Devine points out that the offense wasn't offside once, wasn't flagged for illegal motion once, and was nailed for illegal procedure only when center John Scully snapped the ball on a defensive signal.

But mistakes aren't the only way to measure an offense's efficiency. Notre Dame was held to less than 100 yards net rushing, and completed only 11 of 24 passes. It's hard to say whether the shuttle system affected those numbers positively, negatively, or not at all.

It had to be difficult for either Tim Koegel or Mike Courey to keep their concentration and build up much confidence, especially since the substitution was done on a play-to-play basis, not enabling either player to know in advance when he'd be in the game.

Craig

Devine, however, claimed that all three quarterbacks -- Koegel, Courey and Greg Knafelc -- came up with their best plays when they first entered the game, and that Koegel threw a crucial interception after he had been in for several plays.

Devine admitted that he went with the multi-quarterback approach because he didn't feel entirely comfortable with either Koegel, Courey, or Knafelc in the absence of Rusty Lisch. He did say, however, that he did see enough at Purdue to decide that if Lisch is unable to go Saturday, he'd feel confident enough to stick with either Koegel or Courey, although he declined to single out either player.

"Whoever we start at quarterback, we'll stick with him until we're very positive that a change is necessary," insisted Devine earlier this week.

As of Thursday night, Devine was uncertain of who he'd tap as his starter, other than to say that Lisch would get the call if, and only if, he was 100 percent at game time.

"Right now, Rusty is about 90 percent,"

Irish battle Hoosiers today following win over Albion

by Paul Partridge
Sports Writer

In what was for the most part a tune-up for the Indiana Game, the Notre Dame soccer team defeated Albion College yesterday, 3-1.

Three goals by freshman Jay Schwartz were more than enough to raise the Irish over the .500 mark for the first time this year. For the Bellevue, WA, rookie, the tallies were his first varsity scores.

Notre Dame was never in serious jeopardy, as Schwartz opened the scoring at the 20-minute mark, taking a pass from fellow freshman Mario Manta, and then closed out the scoring in the first half by connected off a Mike Mai feed. With help from Dan McCurrie, Schwartz completed the hat trick with 23 minutes left in the game.

While Schwartz was having a field day in Albion, MI, most of the Irish soccer team remained at home, resting up for today's match against national powerhouse Indiana.

For the die-hard Irish fan, it's not Notre Dame versus USC before a throng of 60,000 and millions more on TV. It's not Notre Dame versus Texas for the National Title. It's not Digger Phelps and the Irish cagers in the Final Four. It won't even be held against a
