Aging Holy Cross ceiling falls near sleeping student

by Mary Leavitt
SMC News Editor

A sizable piece of plaster came crashing down early yesterday morning from the ceiling of a dormitory room in Holy Cross Hall on the Saint Mary's campus, raising questions once again about the safety of one of the oldest buildings at the College. No one was injured in the incident.

Karie Beaudine, who lives in that room, said that she heard a cracking noise the night before the accident occurred. "It just sounded like a poster falling off the wall so I ignored it," she said. "I went to bed and fell asleep. Then, about 5:30 a.m. I heard this loud crash. I opened my eyes and there was this pile of plaster lying at the foot of my bed."

According to Beaudine, the hole left in the ceiling after the plaster fell was approximately 6 feet long, three feet wide and one inch thick.

"I can see beams and floorboards now from the floor above where the plaster fell," Beaudine said. "The plaster fell in pieces so I'm sure I wouldn't have been killed or anything if it had fallen on top of me. I probably would have been hurt, though."

Beaudine said that maintenance originally believed that the accident was caused by water leakage.

"When they saw that the plaster had fallen off near the door rather than by the windows, they decided that the accident was not due to leakage," Beaudine said. "They said they didn't understand what it was."

Beaudine claimed that the cracks in the ceiling from which the plaster fell were no worse than the cracks anywhere else in the room. "There are worse cracks around the windows in this room than there were around the door," she said. "There are cracks everywhere in Holy Cross. I guess I am just used to seeing them."

"First maintenance offered to put in an entire new ceiling," she said. "But that would have meant that I would have had to move out of the room for what is left of the semester. Then they said that they could put in a new ceiling after the close of the semester. I said I would prefer this if they could guarantee no more plaster would fall. They told me that I could just stay in the room and they pulled some additional loose chunks of plaster from the ceiling."

Susan Tamborini, director of Holy Cross Hall, did not seem to feel that there was any immediate danger to Beaudine or any of the other residents of Holy Cross.

"Maintenance didn't seem to be too alarmed over the incident, so we'll have to trust their judgement," Tamborini stated. "The piece that fell wasn't that big. If maintenance felt that it was dangerous, they would have checked it out more closely."

A statement from maintenance was made through the Public Relations Office at SMC. Both maintenance and security have been ordered not to make any direct statements to The Observer.

"To the best of our knowledge, this won't happen again," said Tracy McAuliffe, an assistant in the office. "Maintenance checks the buildings periodically throughout the year so that this kind of accident won't occur."

When Beaudine was informed that Maintenance checked the buildings every year as a preventive measure against the type of accident she had just experienced, she replied, "If they say they check it and the ceiling falls, something just doesn't make sense."

"I mainly called The Observer because I think accidents like this could be a real hazard to students, especially for those students living in the older dormitories," Beaudine said. "I just wanted to help make everyone aware of what could happen."

Corby's must close, says A.B.C. board

by Mary Fran Callahan
Senior Staff Reporter

Board Members of the Alcoholic Beverage Commission voted yesterday morning not to renew Corby's Tavern permit to operate.

Board Member Joseph Szekendi explained the outcome of the board's meeting. "Let's say we made a recommendation not to approve a renewal of Corby's permit," he commented.

Szekendi said the vote was unanimous. The board, however, consists only of three members, two from St. Joseph county, and one representing the city. A state representative from Indiana's ABC Commission also attended the meeting, but did not vote on the permit renewal. Szekendi explained that "there already was a quorum, so we didn't need him to vote."

In South Bend, taverns must renew their permits annually. Corby's permit expired, but

Tower war sends students to hospital

Two Notre Dame students were injured last night in the semi-traditional tower wars which have occurred for the last few years on the Wednesday before An Tostal festivities begin.

The injured persons, who were both freshmen living in Grace Hall, were treated and released from Saint Joseph's Hospital last night. Both required stitches for lacerations in the head.

According to John Dunley, one of the injured students, the "war" began in the early evening.

"Around 6:30 p.m., we found out that Flanner had kidnapped our Grace Hall president, Paul Rafferty," Dunley said. "So, until around 11:00 p.m., we had a basic tower war. Just a lot of yelling and stuff.

Then, a whole mass of people from Grace gathered in front of Flanner, but Flanner didn't respond except with a few boppers. We got bored so everyone started yelling that we should go get Dillon."

The group of approximately 150 students, mainly from Grace, congregated at Dillon at approximately 12:30 p.m. At this point, the first of the evening's two casualties occurred.

"I was one of the first dozen people from the towers to reach Dillon," said a student, who wished to remain anonymous. "When I got there, I turned around to look back and got hit with a bottle from Dillon.

The student stated that he didn't see anything being thrown by the group from the towers when he was hit from behind by Dillon.

"It was just a lot of people yelling," the student said. "I saw no violence. I have a very low opinion of Dillon for what they did to me."

The student realized that he was bleeding and began to walk to the front gate.

"By the time I got there, the bleeding had stopped," he said. "Security took me to the hospital where I received

Area police discuss O-C crime rate

by John M. Higgins

"Prevention is the key to dealing with the crime situation," Sergeant Joseph Wolvos of the South Bend Police Department said last night at a meeting sponsored by the Off-Campus Council designed to make next year's off-campus community aware of proper security procedures. About 50 students attended Off-Campus Night to listen to speakers from South Bend police, Notre Dame security, the Northeast Neighborhood Council and the South Bend City Council discuss measures that off-campus residents can take in order to protect themselves and their property.

All of the speakers emphasized the importance of proper locks on windows and doors and support from neighbors as the greatest deterrent to crime. Wolvos demonstrated various door and window locks, stressing that "there is no substitute for a solid deadbolt lock for doors." He said that doorknob locks are ineffective because "most doors have glass around them and a burglar just breaks the window, reaches through and he's in."

Wolvos also advised against using a spring-latch lock similar to those used in many dormitories on campus. "They look really solid, but it takes very little effort to force it open," Wolvos said.

Wolvos added that a good relationship among neighbors is a valuable weapon against crime.

"You and your neighbors best know who belongs in the neighborhood and who might be casing a house," Wolvos said. "A cop in a car patrolling can only do so much."

"We want you in our community," Arthur Quigley, member of the Northeast Neighborhood Council and a faculty member at Notre Dame, told students. "But we want you to be the kind of neighbors to us that we want to be to you."

Quigley went on to talk about the Neighborhood Watch program in which neighbors cooperate in watching each others' houses.

"This system really works," Quigley said. "On my street, if a car drives up and parks in front of a house late at night, someone, somewhere will write down the license number. If they don't hear any reports of a burglary, they just throw it out. But if something happens, we turn it over to the police."

Students were obviously less than satisfied with the recommendations given. Several students questioned Wolvos and Director of Security Glenn Terry about both the effectiveness of the South Bend police and efforts by the University concerning the crime situation.

IOC's Lord Killanin makes last-ditch offer to US, USSR

LAUSANNE Switzerland (AP)—Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, offered last night to meet personally with Jimmy Carter and Leonid Brezhnev in a bid to save Moscow's crumbling Summer Olympic Games. Killanin said he received a long letter from Brezhnev some time ago, and Tuesday night Carter sent him a Telex message expressing faith in the value of the Olympic movement. Killanin indicated no sanctions will be taken against the USOC on the grounds that they had bowed to political pressure from the White House.

Casualty figures from ocean collision continue to climb

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—Owners of a ferry-freighter that was rammed by a Philippine oil tanker and sank in a shark-infested strait with about 1,000 persons said yesterday they have recovered 74 more bodies. The Manila Rescue Coordination Center and the Philippine Coast Guard said they were unable to confirm the report by the Negros Navigation Co., owners of the sunken inter-island vessel Don Juan, that a sister ship had recovered the 74 additional bodies bringing to 96 the total dead. The rescue officials listed 15 known dead and said a final tally could be much higher.

Sources expect Anderson to become an independent today

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republican candidate John B. Anderson will announce this morning that he will run for president as an independent, knowledgeable sources said yesterday. After more than a week's contemplation, the veteran Illinois congressman has decided to abandon his quest for the Republican presidential nomination, the sources said. Instead, he will seek to tap what his campaign strategists see as voter dissatisfaction with the two major party front-runners, President Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan.

Weinstein receives grant

Dr. Paul P. Weinstein, professor of biology at Notre Dame, has received $119,865 from the National Institute of Health (NIH) to continue his research in the cultivation of a group of parasitic worms, called helminths, in test tubes.

About one-fourth the world's population is infected with the parasitic helminths which can cause blindness, tissue damage, blood loss and elephantitis in their hosts. Because the helminths follow intricate migratory patterns throughout the host's body and develop outside the host before residing in a particular organ, it is difficult to duplicate the life cycle under laboratory conditions, Weinstein said.

"If we can grow these parasitic organisms in test tubes, it will enable us to understand their developmental needs and to know more exactly what is going on chemically and physiologically between the parasite and its host," Weinstein explained. "This is also of great value in testing drugs, and may ultimately lead to a vaccine for the parasites."

Weinstein works with roundworms and tapeworms, exploring "the parasite's extraordinary ability to take up enormous quantities of vitamin B12, a vitamin necessary for synthesizing red blood cells and for maintaining the physiological integrity of the central nervous system in humans."

In addition, he is attempting to understand the function of sterols like cholesterol in the worms and to grow filarial worms in culture. The World Health Organization has listed these worms as the third leading cause of infectious disease, and Weinstein is working to develop a vaccine.

NIH has funded this research for 10 years and this latest award is support of the first year of a five-year grant renewal.

Szekendi added, however, that local decisions are usually synchronized with state ones. "Usually the state accepts the decision of the local board since the local board knows the situation," he commented.

He said residential complaints, violations of Indiana's drinking age, and "overall nuisance" prompted the unanimous vote.

USOC explains boycott vote

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Leaders of the U.S. Olympic Committee were called before the top Olympic hierarchy yesterday and explained their decision not to enter the Games in Moscow.

"There was no criticism, and no mention of sanctions against us," said Robert Kane, President of the USOC, after leaving a meeting with the executive board of the International Olympic Committee.

The executive board, under IOC President Lord Killanin, talked to the Americans for an hour and then discussed the boycott problem in private.

There was immediate announcement of any IOC action.

Kane said he and Col. F. Don

Miller, USOC general secretary, explained the whole process of the decision to stay away from Moscow. It followed a call by President Jimmy Carter for a boycott of the Moscow games because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Asked by newsmen if they were questioned about government pressure, Kane replied: "They didn't need to ask us. Nothing has been more visible than the pressure we had been under, and the resistance we have shown. When it became a matter of national security there was no other way we could go."

Under the Olympic rules, national Olympic committees that yield to political pressures are liable to be disciplined. In the case of the United States such disciplinary action could include moving the 1984 Games from Los Angeles.

Miller said the USOC was going ahead with the selection of an Olympic team but there was virtually no possibility that American athletes would compete in Moscow.

He added: "If there is a change in the international situation, anything would be possible. But we are not naive enough to believe there is going to be any change in the international situation."

Kane said: "I have never thought the Olympic movement would be destroyed as a result of this. No nation has to take part in the Games."

He said there was only a brief reference to the 1984 Games. He said Vitaly Smirnov, Russian Vice President of the IOC, told him the Russians had never said they would not go to Los Angeles.

The executive board was expected to sit all day. It was talking about the USOC, the proposed abolition of national flags and anthems at the Moscow Games, and another possibility, apparently fading fast, that athletes would be allowed to enter as individuals if their national Olympic committees decide to boycott.

Athletes take USOC decision to federal appellate courts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eighteen amateur athletes asked a federal court yesterday to overturn the U.S. Olympic Committee's decision against sending an Olympic team to Moscow this summer.

The athletes, all Olympic hopefuls, said the USOC violated their constitutional rights, an amateur sports law and its own constitution.

The lawsuit, joined by a member of the USOC executive board and the Olympic team's rowing coach, asked a U.S. district judge to void the April 12 decision and prevent USOC officials from carrying it out.

The suit, which seeks to become a class action on behalf of all Olympic hopefuls, said the USOC "yielded its autonomy and has succumbed to political and economical pressure."

President Carter asked the USOC not to send a team to the Moscow Games because of the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan. The suit said that Carter and members of his administration "have engaged in a campaign to coerce (the Olympic committee) into compliance with the president's demand for a boycott of the Olympic games."

According to the lawsuit, the Amateur Sports Act of 1978 guarantees that athletes have the right to participate in international competitions.

In Pennsylvania

Victories keep Kennedy, Bush alive

PHILADELPHIA (AP) Sen. Edward M. Kennedy outlasted President Carter to win the Pennsylvania presidential primary by the frailest of margins yesterday, and said he'll have to do better to catch up in the race for the Democratic nomination.

The long, slow count of ballots in the Tuesday election was so close that Kennedy and Carter just about split the state's Democratic nominating votes. Only a handful of popular votes, out of more than 1.4 million cast, separated the winner and the loser.

Kennedy gained 94 delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Carter got 91, and that kept intact the President's faraway lead in delegate strength.

Former U.N. Ambassador George Bush upset Ronald Reagan in the Republican primary. He gained 53 percent of the vote to Reagan's 46 percent.

The GOP popular vote did not bind delegates, who were elected separately and were officially uncommitted, but Bush contended the victory was evidence that his emphasis on his differences with the conservative Reagan is starting to tell. He said the Pennsylvania results would boost his underdog cause in Texas, his adopted home state. He and Reagan meet there in a May 3 primary, with 80 delegates at stake.

Reagan and Bush met last night in a televised campaign debate in Houston. Rep. John B. Anderson withdrew from the debate, as knowledgeable sources said he prepared to declare himself an independent presidential candidate.

The drama of Pennsylvania was in the Democratic primary. In midafternoon Wednesday, with 99 percent of the precincts counted, the numbers read this way:

Kennedy 725,004 or 46 percent, for 94 delegates.

Carter 718,757 or 46 percent for 94 delegates.

Six percent of the vote was uncommitted, 2 percent went to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., who had already quit the race.

The official canvass of the primary vote won't even begin for at least eight days. So the final, official figures may not be tabulated for two weeks or more.

The Carter camp could ask for a recount, but it would be expensive, $50 for each of the 9571 election districts, and probably would not alter the delegate apportionment anyhow.

'Under Milk Wood' opens tomorrow

Dylan Thomas' "Under Milk Wood," the final play of the 1979-80 Notre Dame/Saint Mary's theatre season, will be presented tomorrow and Saturday and May 1-3 at Century Center in downtown South Bend.

"Under Milk Wood" will be performed in the Bixby Theatre at the Century Center and will be the first attempt by the ND/SMC theatre to reach the Michiana area outside the campuses.

The bus will leave LeMans for Century Center at 8 p.m. and again at 10 p.m., to return students to LeMans at 10:30 p.m. The shuttle will follow its regular schedule between 8 and 9:30 p.m. and after 10:30 p.m.

"Under Milk Wood" presents a day in the life of a small Welsh town, and gives an account of the single and sometimes magical moments of dreams.

Reservations can be made by calling the Century Center box office at 284-9111.

Discusses women's role

Roberts speaks on Army

By Tom Koegel
Senior Staff Reporter

Col. Grace L. Roberts, the first woman commandant of a United States Army school, was the keynote speaker in a panel discussion sponsored by Notre Dame ROTC on "Women in the Army," held yesterday afternoon in the Hayes-Healy Auditorium.

Roberts, the commandant of the U.S. Army Institute of Information, said that "it would be a tragedy if we put women in combat, because men would be so busy playing the role of protecting the women that they would end up getting shot themselves." Roberts also pointed out that it is not known how women would react to the tremendous stress of battle conditions.

The discussion often touched on the regulations prohibiting women from occupying combat-related positions. Roberts noted that although women are prohibited from holding such positions, they might be placed in such positions in an all out war, and are therefore being trained in combat tactics.

"We have never had a war in which women have not been killed on the battlefield," she stated. "Maybe it is considered all right for nurses to die in combat because nursing is traditionally considered women's work."

Robert said it was important that 96 percent of the Army's positions are open to women despite the fact that the other combat-related 4 percent are not. She pointed out that the women in this year's graduating class at West Point have chosen many positions that are not traditional for women. The single largest group of women chose positions in the air defense artillery.

Roberts stated that the army "has been an historic leader in equal opportunity," and noted that women in the army are competing well with men for jobs, promotions and schooling. She did admit, however, that re-enlistment among women is down, and the discharge rate of women before they have obtained their skills is on the rise.

Roberts was joined on the panel by three officers who have been members of the service for less than ten years: Capts. Catherine Wallace, Chip Ecks and Lynn Fleury.

The three younger officers added their comments on the problems of married couples in the Army. They noted that while the strain of transfers can be difficult, the army's policy of attempting to keep couples together has improved the situation.

Justice Dept. files charges of housing discrimination

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department charged the owner and four employees of two apartment complexes in South Bend and Mishawaka, Ind., with discriminating against blacks and women in rentals.

Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said a civil housing discrimination suit was filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in South Bend against Holladay Corp., owner of the 565-unit West Jefferson Apartments in nearby Mishawaka.

Also, named as defendants were John T. Phair, managing partner of the corporation; Sandra Sobieralski, Portage Place project manager; Beverly Joseph, West Jefferson resident manager, and Helene Clayton, former Portage Place resident manager.

The suit charged the corporation with violating the Fair Housing Act of 1968 by discriminating against blacks and women in South Bend and against women in Mishawaka.

The government said rental agents were instructed to code rent applications from blacks so that they could be rejected, to discourage blacks from applying and to misrepresent that there were no vacancies.

The government also said divorced or separated women were required to pay extra security deposits and rents.

The defendants were not immediately available for comment.

The suit asked for a court order enjoining the corporation and its employees from discriminating on the basis of race or sex and from refusing to correct the effects of the alleged discrimination.

The case was investigated by the FBI and the civil rights division in cooperation with U.S. Attorney David T. Ready.

Hesburgh appoints Beckman

Fr. Theodore Hesburgh has recently appointed Marion Beckman of Granger to the Advisory Council for the Snite Museum of Art at Notre Dame.

A native of Baltimore, Beckman received her bachelor's degree in education from the College of Notre Dame of Maryland and her M.A. in art from Notre Dame. She taught on the east coast for 19 years and served as coordinator of instructional television for the Archdiocese of Baltimore before starting the Department of Art at Holy Cross Junior College in South Bend in 1970.

Beckman spent two years as executive secretary to the Faculty Foundations Committee and as Notre Dame Foundation relations coordinator before recently assuming the newly created position of executive director of the Friends of The Snite Museum of Art. She is a former member of the Channel 34 Board of Directors.

Fr. O'Brien dies after long illness

Fr. John A. O'Brien, one of America's most influential priest-writers, died Friday in St. Joseph's Hospital following a long illness. He was 87 years old and had taught and been an author-in-residence at Notre Dame since 1940.

A lifelong progressive in Church Matters, O'Brien supported vigorously the changes brought about by the Second Vatican Council and was very active in the ecumenical movement, particularly in spearheading the rapprochement of the Masons and the Knights of Columbus on a local and national level. In 1973, he became the first cleric to receive the Laetare Medal, the most significant award given to American Catholics.

According to Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, O'Brien was a tradition at Notre Dame since he arrived four decades ago to teach what was then called "apologetics" in the theology department. Apologetics was a subject that gave all of the rational evidence for faith in Christ and in the Church, and was the central theme of many of O'Brien's books.

"Perhaps no priest in the history of the Church in America was responsible for more Catholic converts," Hesburgh said. "As a priest, he was a simple and humble man, holy, hard-working, poor in lifestyle while wealthy in book royalties, all of which he gave away. He was also a matchmaker of some renown." Hesburgh said that thousands of students remember O'Brien as one who cared about them in a most personal and dedicated way.

Efforts recognized

Council dinner honors two

by Earl Rix

Walter Bankowski and Bro. Richard Weber were both recognized for their efforts with retarded children Tuesday night at the 30th Annual Dinner of the St. Joseph County Council for the Retarded.

Cited for "outstanding volunteer service," Bankowski and Weber received awards from both the St. Joseph County Council for the Retarded and the Indiana Association of Retarded Citizens. Both men were warmly congratulated by the crowd which included some of the children and their parents.

Bankowski, who with Ed Loughery, is co-ordinator of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Council for the Retarded, was recognized primarily for his work at Logan Center where he and Loughery run a program that has included 300 ND/SMC student volunteers so far this year.

In addition to the Saturday recreation program at Logan which usually draws 100 to 120 volunteers from ND/SMC each week, the Council sponsors special events such as Christmas parties, picnics, sledding, and trips to such events as the Ice Capades and football and hockey games. "We try to get the kids away from the Center and have them do things they wouldn't normally do," Bankowski said.

Weber was cited, in part, for his work at the Northern Indiana State Hospital, which houses severely and profoundly mentally retarded children who require 24 hour care. "He has been a great inspiration for the volunteers through his love for the children and his great relationship with them," Loughery said.

Weber builds wheelchairs and other such devices according to each child's measurements and specific needs.

Pottowatamie Indians benefit from ND charity

by Mary Fran Callahan
Senior Staff Reporter

Upholding a traditional good will gesture of Fr. Sorin's, the University annually provides baskets of food to the original owners of the land the campus is located on—the Pottowatamie Indians.

Jim Sullivan of the South Bend Historical Society yesterday explained that the Pottowatamie Indians "ceded" their land to the federal government through the Chicago Treaty of 1821. Missionaries, who later would found Notre Dame, then purchased the tract of land from the government. Every Christmas, the University still provides food baskets for any Pottowatamies willing to journey to campus.

Theresa Ferro, of the ND Purchasing Department, which coordinates the project, said she has the responsibility of annually registering the Indians' names on cards.

"They must have a county social service roll number in order to be eligible," she explained. According to Ferro, 159 baskets of food were doled out in 1978. The Indians pick up their cards at the Administration building and then take them over to the dining hall to receive their food.

Though Ferro did not know how many baskets were distributed this past Christmas, she commented, "I'm sure there were more than last year."

Bruce Landon, attorney for Indian Land Claims in the Federal Bureau of Indian Affairs, yesterday explained that Notre Dame would have no legal obligation to the Indians since the missionaries purchased the land from the government. Even if the government had promised the Indians annual baskets of food, the obligation would perish once the government sold the land.

Landon did say that instances of continued payments which were agreed upon in ancient treaties, though scarce, still exist. "Some payments under treaties are still being made, but most have been settled or negotiated through lump-sum payments to the Indians in court settlements," he commented.

Sullivan explained that historical records indicate that Sorin was "very much involved with the Indians." In a missionary spirit, he then initiated the tradition of giving food to the area Indians.

Pete Lombardo of the University Archives verified Monday that the University founders would grow their own food. "Whenever there was a surplus, Fr. Sorin would open the place up to the Indians as well as the townspeople. It was never looked on as a university obligation; it's just what a missionary would do," he said.

When asked if the food basket tradition would continue, Jay Kayne of Information Services responded, "As long as we're a Christian institution we'll continue to do it."

a couple of stitches." Meanwhile, the "war" continued back at Dillon.

"The tower group was mainly throwing bottle rockets and firecrackers at Dillon," Dunley said. "Dillon was throwing cans and bottles at us. We finally got bored with that too, so we left and regrouped at the North Dining Hall. Then we heard that Dillon was following us. We ran back to Grace and a large group of us remained outside in front of the dorm. When Dillon got there, they went into the construction area in front of the towers. Everyone was yelling and throwing stuff."

At this time, Dunley was hit. "I got hit with something. I don't know what it was—a rock, a bottle, a can—I don't know. Whatever it was, it cut me deep. When I got hit, I went down. After that, everything started breaking up. Dillon started to clear out, and Security came and was helping to clear things out."

Security took Dunley to the hospital where he received 15 stitches for a deep cut in the temple.

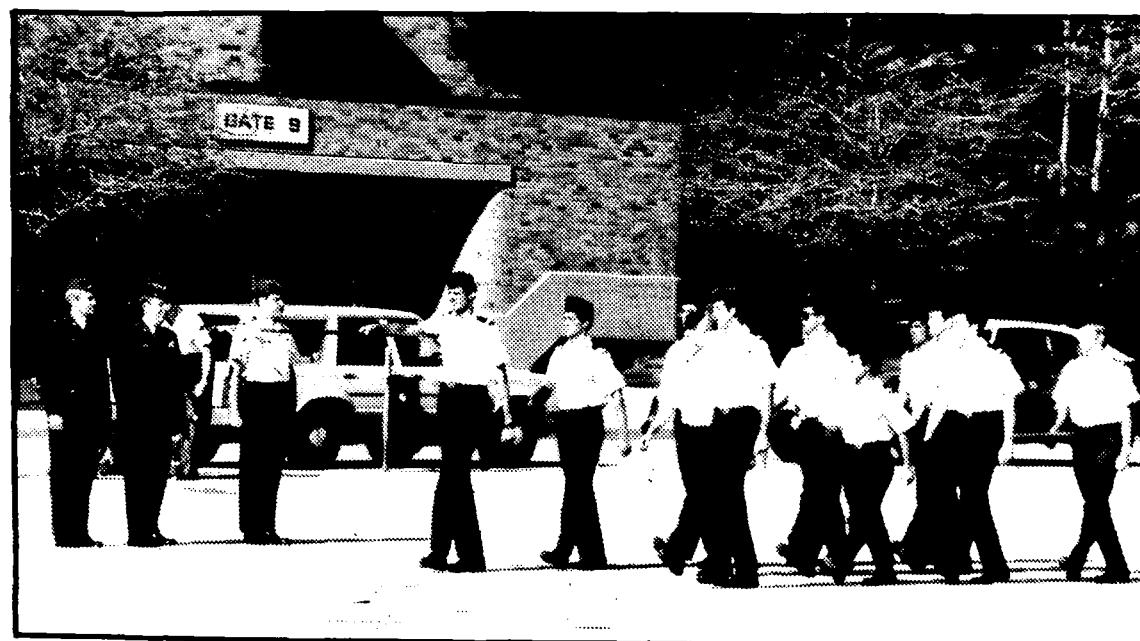

According to Pat Conklin, Dillon Hall President, he received a phone call from Grace prior to the attack on Dillon.

"About three minutes before the tower group showed up, I got a phone call that the towers were coming to get us with rocks and eggs," Conklin stated. "I went downstairs to warn the rector, but by the time I got down there, they were already here. Rocks and eggs were thrown, and several windows were broken. About 150 Dillonites congregated on the first floor of Dillon and chased the group from the towers through the North Quad back to Grace."

Young Demos elect new officers

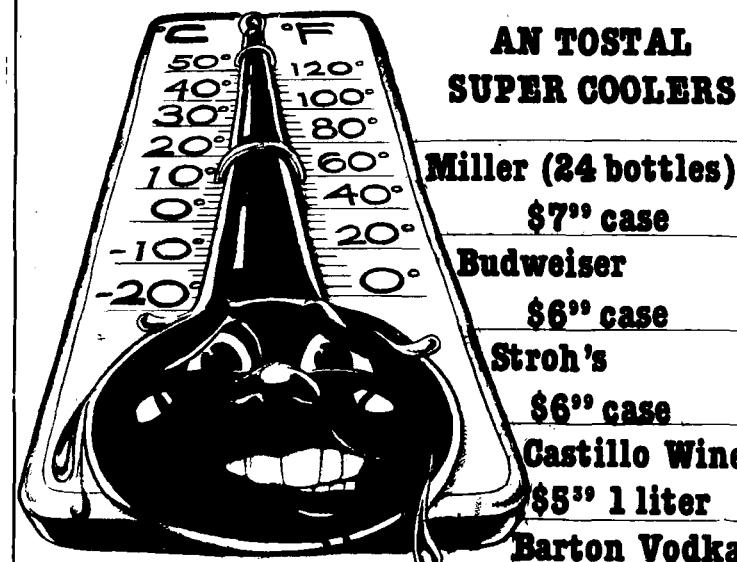

The Notre Dame-St. Mary's Young Democrats elected their officers for the 1980-81 school year last night. The new officers are President Jim Murphy, Vice-President Tom Grusinski, and Secretary-Treasurer Paul Klingaman. Joe Slovinic announced that the offices of President Carter and Vice-President Mondale have expressed regrets that they will not be able to visit the Notre Dame campus this semester but hope to come at another time. Future Young Democrats meetings and organizational plans will be announced.

Intensive care units

Simple tests reduce stay, bill

BOSTON (AP) - Nearly half the people held in intensive care for possible heart attacks can safely be released a day earlier than usual, a move that could cut their hospital bills by an average 26 percent, a study shows.

Hospitals spend as much as 20 percent of their budgets on intensive care, and cutting the service could mean substantial savings for them as well.

People with chest pains are routinely put in intensive care until doctors figure out whether they really have had heart attacks. These people make up 39 percent of all admissions to intensive care units, the most expensive ward in a hospital.

SMC class of 1980 to bold fair

The 1980 graduating class of the Saint Mary's education department will sponsor a curriculum fair tomorrow from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in room 327 of Madaleva Hall.

The curriculum fair will feature the work of students who have formulated their own materials, aides, plans and learning centers. Students will show their ideas to and answer questions from teachers of the Michiana area.

Researchers at Massachusetts General Hospital have found a few simple tests can quickly weed out healthy people so they can be discharged from intensive care within a day. Currently, these low-risk patients stay in intensive care an average of two days.

If hospitals followed their guidelines, the doctors estimate it would reduce the number of intensive care beds reserved for heart patients by 9 percent.

Two studies on the use of intensive care units, directed by physicians Albert G. Mulley and George E. Tibault, were published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The cost of staying in intensive care is often two or three times that of a private room. At Massachusetts General, intensive care costs an average of $2,000 for patients admitted for chest pains who are later given clean bills of health.

Intensive care units came into vogue in the early 1960s. They provide sophisticated monitoring and life-saving equipment and are staffed by specially trained nurses. At first, they were reserved for victims of serious heart disease, but later they were expanded to provide care for other critically ill people.

In an accompanying editorial, journal editor Arnold S. Relman wrote, "We are by now investing such vast resources in intensive care... We are in urgent need of data to tell us who needs to be in the ICU and for how long."

The Boston doctors reviewed 2,639 patients admitted to an intensive care unit over two years.

They found 47 percent of the people in intensive care for chest pains had normal blood tests and electrocardiograms and were free of major complications within a day of admission. Since only 6 percent of this group had serious problems after the first day, the researchers concluded they could be moved to ordinary hospital rooms until doctors were sure they were well enough to go home.

Kennedy campaigners to convene

There will be a meeting of all people interested in participating in the Kennedy for President campaign on campus and in South Bend tonight at 8 p.m. in the Flanner Hall Commoner. Representatives from the Third Congressional District office and the National Headquarters will be on hand to discuss the campaign.

"When people move off-campus, the police seem to be the agents that people demand the most of," Terry said. "When I went through the civil unrest in the mid-60s, when people got so upset to the point of rioting, police service was not what they were complaining about. It was rats, garbage pick-up, street lighting and busing. I think we need to put these things in perspective."

"We try to stay on top of things," Assistant Director of Security Rex Rakow said. "We monitor the police radio and we send cars through the neighborhood during trips to and from the hospital. It's about all we can do."

I disagree with the statistics," Quigley said. "I don't think they're that high."

Quigley said that with a little cooperation neighbors would all take care of each other.

Quigley told any off-campus student who wants to do more in the neighborhood or who has any trouble to come to the Northeast Neighborhood Center on the corner of Notre Dame and South Bend Avenues. "The center is there to serve the neighborhood," he said. "We do things like help the poverty-level people do their taxes and things like that."

neighborhood awareness, all the police help in the world isn't going to help."

South Bend City Councilman Lou McGann put the final touch on the meeting with his comment, "welcome to South Bend."

Students celebrate Earth Day by improving campus

by John M. Higgins

In commemoration of Earth Day, a group of Notre Dame students did their part in cleaning up the environment by picking up trash around campus. The clean-up effort was sponsored by the Notre Dame Geology Club both as public service and in order to promote environmental awareness and respect for the Earth, according to club member Bill Ebmann.

The club, made up of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students with an interest in earth and environmental sciences, decided that "this would be an appropriate effort on Earth Day," Ebmann said. "Last year, Sorin Hall organized a similar effort and we felt that this was something that we could do to clean up the environment."

"We had about 29 people picking up trash on a Saturday morning," said Paul Chervanak, organizer of Sorin's effort last year. "That works out to about 70 man-hours that we saved the University."

This Saturday, Sorin will again sponsor their annual Lake Clean-Up. Residents will meet on the Sorin porch at 9 a.m. when they will go down to the lakes to pick up the bottles, cans, and paper scattered on the shore.

"We feel that this is a contribution that we can make to the entire Notre Dame community," Jim Rigali, coordinator of this year's effort, said. "Instead of doing something just for the hall, we want to do something that everyone can enjoy."

Get Happy Elvis Costello (Columbia)

In his fourth album, Get Happy, Elvis Costello does not stray from the formula that has served him so well on his previous outings. Yet, while no new ground has been broken here, Costello fans will be immensely pleased. Sales figures (the album currently ranks fifth on Billboard's Top 100) indicate that the initial base of Costello fans, built by the magnificent "My Aim is True", has expanded significantly.

The intentionally ironic title, Get Happy, may have been more accurately replaced by Get Depressed. Costello is an angry, bitter man, and this work is highly expressive of the pain he so obviously feels. His vocals, becoming hoarse at points, sound tortured. A recurring theme is the pain caused by frustrated loves. In "B Movie", he sings "I don't want some fool asking me why/When I find you're finally making me cry". Ever the doomsday prophet, Costello views the anguish as inevitable.

Get Happy features twenty songs, a pleasant departure from recent trends in the music industry. Each track is fairly short; the longest is only four minutes. The songs, like Costello's anger, come in quick frenetic bursts which Costello seems unwilling to prolong. Together, they form a series of fascinating and revealing vignettes, a structural technique that works very effectively.

Nick Lowe, Costello's producer on each of the previous albums, has once again done a superb job. The production on this album is clean and tight. Lowe and Costello choose to place a heavy emphasis on the rhythm section, which is composed primarily of the drums and organ (an unusual touch). The drumming, which is excellent, is syncopated and variable. There is a noticeable absence of leads; while Costello seems unable to control his emotions, the music does remain disciplined and serves as a stable counterpoint to the lyrics.

On Get Happy, Costello once again lives up to his reputation as one of the finest and most inventive lyricists in music today. Costello has a wonderful ability to use words and phrases which are rich with multiple meanings. In "Love For Tender", Costello metaphorically reduces love to series of financial relationships, singing, "The wages of sin are an expensive affection/They'll leave you bankrupt/Better pay up quick, don't interrupt/I'm so in love, I'm so sincere/Just like a well-known financier/You know I've never been corrupt." Costello's lyrics are such a pleasure that the absence of lyric sheets is a real disappointment.

As an artist, Costello concerns himself less with entertainment than with self-expression. There is much more at stake in his music than commercial success; the album becomes a vitally important cathartic experience. The listener is granted an opportunity to enter Costello's world a while to watch as he bares his doubts, fears, and anxieties. The experience is fascinating and sometimes disturbing. Ultimately, the album is not the depressant it might be. Despite his own inclinations to the contrary, Costello has not given up. As he indicates in "Riot Act", a brooding and powerful love song, things may yet work out.

Bill Roche

Tenth Marshall Tucker Band (Warner)

It doesn't seem like that long ago when the Marshall Tucker Band burst onto the music scene, which is probably why their newest is entitled Tenth, to remind us that they're no longer the new kids on the block.

In the time since its first album, the band has gradually progressed from a bunch of raw, rough-hewn country rockers to a group of tight, glossily produced studio artists. Fortunately, they have made this progression without really selling out, and they can still produce good music in their new style.

Lead guitarist Toy Caldwell still does most of the writing for the group, and he always combines an ear for a likable hook with drummer Paul Riddle's invariably loping rhythms and Doug Gray's slick, rangy tenor to come up with an appealing, if harmless, single to propel each album onto the charts. On Tenth it's "It Takes Time," just as it was "Last of the Singing Cowboys" on Running Like the Wind, or "Heard it in a Love Song" on Carolina Dreams. This enables the band to do just about whatever it likes with the rest of each album, and usually the results aren't too objectionable.

Rhythm guitarist George McCorkle contributes to four cuts on this album, the best of which is the Jim Croce-ish "Gospel Singin' Man," on which Gray gets to display his vocal abilities in the upper reaches of the treble clef during the difficult chorus.

McCorkle also collaborated with Toy on the curious instrumental "Jimi." Hendrix' ear-shatteringly innovative, distorted guitar style bears very little resemblance to this pair's clean, precision playing, but he may have been an early influence on them nonetheless. The rhythm strains sound very much like Jimi's hit "The Wind Cries Mary," and strangely enough, Toy is allowed a small amount of distortion in his leads by producer Stewart Levine. However, the song ends before it ever says anything.

The real highlight of the record is Toy's "Save My Soul," the only song he sings on this album. Like on "Can't You See," Toy shows us that he can sing at least adequately, and I don't see why he doesn't do it more often. Doug Gray is easily more talented, but his refined timbre lacks the edge and emotion of Toy's voice, so that the most emotive that he has ever been has been on songs like "Searching for a Rainbow" or "Fire on the Mountain."

Toy's lyrics are well up to par on this one as he bemoans the temptation of falling in love with a "wicked" flirt. But lyrics never brought anybody over to the Marshall Tucker Band, and when Toy, the fastest thumb-picking guitarist around, finally works out his frustration after three agonizing verses, he explodes into a hot jam which is guaranteed to be a live show-stopper. So what if he can't hit every note just right in the refrains, the anticipation he builds up for the instrumental ranks this tune up there with "Ramblin'" as one of their best rockers.

It remains to be seen how much glossier and cleaner these guys can get, but if they can hang on to common sense and not sell out for a larger audience, they'll continue to satisfy their big following of fans.

Great White Buffalo."

The songs played from the band's new album, "Scream Dream," turned out to be standard Nugent fare, with "I Got to Move" sounding like Nugentized Chuck Berry. However, when it comes to conning a crowd, especially the bunch that showed up that night, Ted fast talks them like nobody else can. Of course it's all the same sex and drugs and rock-and-roll stuff, but they ate it up, especially his comments about what acts he would like to perform on the female members of the audience. They loved those remarks but then again, this is the kind of crowd that would have cheered for Goliath.

The sound man was obviously confused and thought that Nugent was already on the stage. The decibel thunder wiped out most of the group's vocal work. Drummer Jimmy Marinos thought he was Keith Moon reincarnated, while lead axe man Mike Skill only gave us fleeting glimpses of what he could do. Many critics have said that the Romantics sound much like early Beatles and this point came across especially on "Tell it to Carrie." In the end lead singer Wall Palmar summed it up by asking the audience "What the f--- do you need?"

Smoky Joe, folk-rock recording artist and resident of South Bend, will perform tomorrow in front of LaFortune from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in a free concert sponsored by the An Tostal Executive Committee. He will feature songs from his second album about to be released.

Wednesday night I experienced what was the poorest show so far this year at the ACC, as the townies turned up in droves to see Terrible Ted Nugent. Fortunately the total number of ND students could have been seated comfortably in the Nazz.

Ted Nugent started his show like any wild man should: swinging out on a rope in boots, tights, loin cloth, leather vest, and of course his crazed mane flowing in all directions. At first, we were treated to that new type of lighting they're using at rock shows these days, the "Let's blind the crowd on the first number by shining spotlights in their eyes" school of stage lighting.

Once the show got going, Terrible Ted showed that he's still the fastest, winding through "Motor City Madhouse" like a crazed cat let out of a box. Unfortunately, it was hard to concentrate on the guitar work because when Ted Nugent turns up the volume, he overdoes it. The whole show is an exercise in overkill. Maybe he figures that if he deafens you enough you won't pay attention to the lyrics, which usually are horrible anyway ("Great White Buffalo" being the only exception).

Another bizarre aspect was that Nugent felt it necessary to repeatedly spit into the corner of the stage. (real classy, Ted.)

All aside though, Ted Nugent is an excellent guitarist; unfortunately, since he parted ways with the Amboy Dukes his material has gone downhill. The highlights of the show were when he broke into a few chords from "Hibernation", and when he ended the show with "The

This was the fifth time I had seen Nugent since the days of my youth when he used to play high school gyms with the Amboy Dukes. It will probably be my last. When I was 15 he was a god, when I was 18 he was fantastic, but when you're going on 22 and a senior in college he's just plain loud.

The Romantics, a fine New Wave band, opened up the show to a less than responsive crowd. The Roman-matches.]

"It really feels great to win again," smiled Hopwood. "It sure is nice to have that monkey off my back."

The only Irish loss came at number four singles. Irish coach Tom Fallon defaulted Mark Hoyer for disciplinary reasons in the third set of his match with Hawaii's Kirk McLeland.

The Irish doubles teams received a scare as Rainbow Warriors won the first set of all three matches. But the Notre Dame duos continued the third set mastery the Irish have been noted for this year, and rallied to win them all.

Irish players have won 28 of 39 three set matches this season, a major factor in the team's successful 14-2 campaign with seven matches remaining.

"If just a few of those three-setters had gone the other way," said Harris, "this whole season would mean so much less. But as it is, we're still on schedule for another 20-win season."

Harris didn't mention the fact that the number one doubles team (himself and Hopwood) remains very much alive in the race for an NCAA tournament bid. Their 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 win over Hawaii's Dean Dunn—Runtin and Nagel improved their season slate to 14-2, which also includes that same lucky thirteen straight.

Playing in his first doubles competition of the season, sophomore Tom Hartzell teamed with freshman Mark McMahon at number two doubles, replacing Hoyer. The duo recorded a 3-6, 6-2, 6-3 win over Stu Saiki and McLeland.

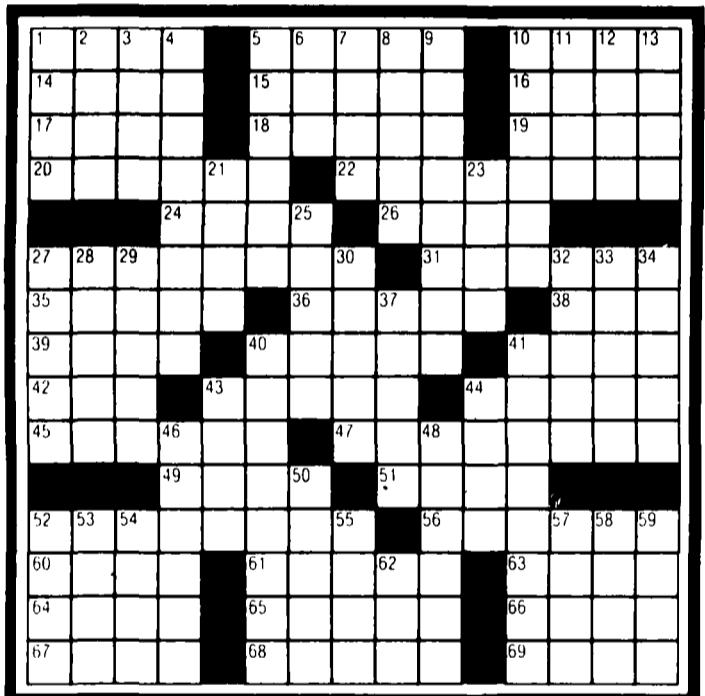

Only one more road trip remains for the Irish, a two-day swing through Michigan beginning this afternoon at Kalamazoo and ending tomorrow at Michigan State. The team will then return home for Sunday afternoon's An Tostal showdown with Ohio State, that match slated for one o'clock at the Courtney Tennis Center.

Erving, Sixers hold off Celtics

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Julius Erving scored 28 points as the Philadelphia 76ers held off a frantic final-period Boston rally to beat the Celtics 99-97 last night and take a 2-1 lead in their National Basketball Association playoff semifinal series.

The 76ers, trailing 60-59, outscored the Celtics 19-8 in a third period eruption that gave them a 78-66 lead at the end of three quarters. Erving scored 12 and Caldwell Jones four during the Philadelphia rally.

The 76ers increased their lead to 88-74 midway through the fourth quarter, when the Celtics suddenly caught fire and moved within two at 99-97 with 39 seconds left on Larry Bird's third three-point field goal of the game.

Boston got the ball back, but in a scramble under the basket the 76ers stole it and dribbled away the final 10 seconds. Erving got offensive help from veteran Lionel Hollins, who scored 16, and Maurice Cheeks and Darryl Dawkins, each with 14.

Bird, the fabulous rookie from Indiana State who triggered the Celtics to the best record in the NBA this season, collected 22 points, while Nate Archibald contributed 19 and Cedric Maxwell 17.

Boston led 47-45 at halftime with the help of 10 points and 11 rebounds by Bird. It was a three-point field goal by Bird with 18 seconds left in the half that erased a 45-44 Philadelphia lead.

Lakers dump Sonics, even series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 31 points and collected 16 rebounds last night to power the Los Angeles Lakers to a 108-99 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics that evened their National Basketball Association playoff series at one game apiece.

Laker guards Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Norm Nixon had 19 points each for the Lakers, and Jamaal Wilkes added 16.

Gus Williams was Seattle's leading scorer with 24 points, Dennis Johnson chipped in 20 and Lonnie Shelton 15. Fred Brown, the Sonics' reserve guard who had scored 34 points in Seattle's 108-107 victory Tuesday night, had 14 in Game Two.

Defending NBA champion Seattle, behind by 11 points at the start of the final quarter, cut the Lakers' margin to three at 95-92 with 3:53 remaining, but the Lakers pulled away again.

Nixon's 20-foot jumper with 2:50 to play put the Lakers up 97-92, ending a 3:40 scoring drought for Los Angeles. After a basket by the Sonics' Shelton, Spencer Haywood's jumper made it 99-94 and the Lakers built their final margin from there.

The game had been close, with the Lakers generally ahead but unable to pull away until late in the third period. Beginning with 4:44 left in the period, Los Angeles reeled off a 14-4 string that gave them a 13-point pad.

Reserve forward Haywood started the charge with a short jumper that put the Lakers up 71-66. The streak ended with 1:26 remaining in the period when Abdul-Jabbar sank a free throw for 83-70. Johnson had five points during the streak that put the Lakers in control.

Heading into the final quarter, the Lakers 85-74.

The best-of-seven series shifts to Seattle for games Friday night and Sunday afternoon.

The Irish received good news on the medical front Wednesday when they got the word that defensive lineman Kevin Griffith will be available for action in the fall...Griffith, who had been having an excellent spring until he was sidelined by an old knee injury, will be ready to go in August, according to team physician Dr. Leslie Bodnar.

Offensive center may turn out to be one of Notre Dame's strongest and deepest positions in 1980...Devine lauded the progress of both Larry Kissner and Barry Young, who will serve behind All-America candidate John Scully...Young, an engineering major, has been excused from the remaining drills so that he may give more attention to academics.

Devine also had praise for sophomore running backs John Sweeney and Phil Carter, split end Tony Hunter, linebacker John Rice and strong safety Tom De Siano...De Siano is currently the number one strong safety with Steve Cichy being held out of contact drills...De Siano started Notre Dame's final game of 1979 in the Mirage Bowl against Miami (Fla.), when Cichy was shelved with a shoulder injury.

LeMans/McCandless - Regina to vie for flag crown

by Deirdre Grant
Sports Writer

Another season of St. Mary's Flag Football began in Tuesday's heated clash between Regina Hall and Augusta/Off-Campus. Ninety-degree weather was not the only heat of the day, as winning Regina coach Brian Kenney termed his team "so hot that we are untouchable, prepared to fight for our deserved spot in An Tostal."

The 19-13 Regina victory marked the beginning to a race to play Breen-Phillips, Notre Dame's interhall champion.

Regina, primarily a freshman team, dominated the game offensively and defensively, with an intense running attack and a strong defensive line. The team also showed great pass potential, with a 100 percent completion average.

The Regina team was crowned champions in the fall season, and will face-off against a combined LeMans/McCandless team this afternoon. The two-dorm team dumped Holy Cross yesterday, 6-0.

The winner will go on to meet Breen-Phillips in one of the annual highlights of An Tostal on Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

Bookstore player. He is not a varsity athlete, with the big name and preferential treatment from the officials that goes along with it. He plays with four other anonymous players, and Tuesday night they were up against a squad that featured Dave Duerson, Hardy Rayam and Ian Gray.

Myler and his teammates--Rick Mahoney, Bob Fagan, Skip Marks and Bob Blesch--scrapped their way to an 11-8 halftime lead, but fell behind 20-16, just one point away from elimination.

They were falling victim to cold shooting and thoroughly intimidated officials. Rayam was having a hard time communicating with one official at one point in the second half. So at 6-5 and 242 pounds, he decided to get his point across by shoving him in the chest. The nameless and spineless official proved that

Notre Dame is indeed a Christian institution by ignoring Rayam's eloquent plea.

Somehow, perhaps through sheer willpower, Myler led his US team into a 20-all deadlock. And then, with the sun long since gone, Fagan dropped in a free throw to give US a gut-wrenching 22-20 victory.

After Fagan's toss fell through the net, the game that will undoubtedly be remembered as a Bookstore classic became history, and bedlam erupted.

The fans did not mob Fagan, who scored the winning point. Instead they jumped all over Myler, who had a chance to end the game with a free throw, but missed.

That's because sinking game-winning free throws is not what Bookstore is all about. Bill Myler is what Bookstore is all about.

I just hope he could find his brains again in all the commotion after the game.

In fact, Davis' heroics might have earned him the Best Shooter of the Day award if it weren't for Paul Flood. Flood shot the ball ten times yesterday and scored ten points to pace P.F. and the FLYERS to a 21-13 win over SMC...Mike Morris had six for the FLYERS while Don Cleary tallied seven points on 25 attempts for the losers.

In other action, Tom Lange hit five of 11 shots to pace Born to Run over Theo and the Hose Monsters, 21-11. Tom VanDenburgh's six points topped the losers' boxscore.

Bill Myler and Bob Blesch combined for 10 points to lead US over Sean Cilia, 21-13. Brian Clingen and Dan Stockrahm each had four for the Cilia squad.

Bookstore action continues tomorrow afternoon when the quarterfinal rounds will take place behind the bookstore beginning at 6:15.

Bookstore action will continue through the final round, slated for Sunday at noon behind the A.C.C.

Myler: Bookstore masochist

When some basketball players step onto the court, they take off a chain or a medal and hand it to a spectator until the game is over. When Bill Myler steps onto the asphalt at Stepan Center, he takes out his brains and hands them to a friend for safekeeping.

At least that's the impression you get watching him play, because surely no sane or rational man would abuse his body in the manner that Myler does.

Basketball players are evaluated in any number of ways—points scored, shots made, shot-blocked rebounds grabbed and backboards shattered. And then some witty scribe invented a category for the player whose contributions aren't found in The Sporting News—floor burns.

That has kind of a nice ring to it, and it does convey a certain message about a player, but it's rather intangible. I've yet to see Brent Musburger count Dennis Johnson's floor burns during an interview.

The courts at Stepan Center, Lyons and the Bookstore, however, aren't hardwood or tartan. They're made of asphalt, and if you're lucky, the surface is level. More often than not, they're not. In fact, when Bookstore VII graced the pages of Sports Illustrated two years ago, the article was entitled, "Look Out For The Manhole Cover!" That makes it very easy to measure Bill Myler's contributions to his team—simply add up all the places on his body where he has drawn blood.

Last weekend the folks at CBS who bring you NBA basketball every Sunday really thought they had something when they bombarded viewers with a film clip of Larry Bird hurtling himself head-first off the court and skidding into the base of the bleachers.

Craig Chval
Sports Writer

Tuesday night, Bill Myler found out that play won't work on Stepan Court No. 7. But it took him three times to figure it out, and I'm still not too sure he's convinced. But I am absolutely sure that none of the several hundred spectators are convinced that Bill Myler is for real. As one fan put it, "You don't do that kind of thing when there's no money."

For eight months out of the school year, Bill Myler is just another Notre Dame undergrad, studying earth science, trying to figure out why the girls act so funny and maybe shooting a few hoops at the Rock.

But when April rolls around, Myler is the consummate Bookstore player. There are scores of very good basketball players in this tournament, and maybe, just maybe, there is even another player with the same amount of disregard of his body that Myler has.

Myler, however, is at once both a surgeon and a kamikaze pilot. For every loose ball he skins a knee to grab, he'll pick the pocket of an opposing guard as pretty as a picture for another. He is perhaps the rarest of all combinations, rivaling the "20" that would unite the body of Bo Derek and the mind of Chuck Barris.

Tuesday night, Bill Myler proved beyond any doubt that he is indeed, the epitome of a

Assassins shot down

'Sweet 16' remain

by Frank LaGrotta
Sports Writer

You had to be there to believe it, and that's not just a witty cliche. If you were not among the 1000 plus people that jammed the bookstore courts for last night's "octafinal" rounds, then you missed something worth seeing.

The battles began at 4:45, but the wars started around 7. That's when Jayne Kennedy... took on The Assassins on Bookstore Court No. 9, and Head over Heels met the Incredible Edibles on surface No. 10. Both games outlasted the daylight. Both games went into overtime. Both games featured great displays of Ironman basketball at its best.

Freshman Chris Stope's eight points provided the impetus for Jayne Kennedy's...27-25 win over the Assassins. Despite Bob Crable's nine for 18 shooting performance, the Assassins could not overcome the tenacious Kennedy squad and time and again fell prey to their quickness.

Kennedy's Dave "Rough Hands" Mitchell displayed cool under fire as he hit a free throw late in the contest to send the game into overtime. Mitchell finished with five points on the night, while teammate Eric Flennery hit seven. Keith Marrero had five for the winners while Scott Bailey had six for the Assassins.

Meanwhile, on Court No. 10, Tim Healy and Scott Zettek were locked in an overtime battle of their own. Healy's squad, Head over Heels held on to beat the Edibles, 23-21, keyed by the shooting of Bill Copeland who finished with eight points.

It was a battle of the big men as Mike Shiner led all scorers with nine buckets on 19 attempts. Shiner's hot hand kept the Edibles in the game after their top shooter, Steve Notaro suffered a shoulder injury early in the game. Notaro remained in the game, but was relatively ineffective thereafter.

Healy had five points for the winners including a spectacular overhand hook shot in overtime. Pat Kramer continued to be the team's inside strength and managed four points on the night. Steve Cichy hit five for the losers and won the battle of the boards with 10 rebounds.

In other action, the tournament's number-one seed, Defending Chumps, put on an entertaining display that reflected the true spirit of the tournament. Matched against roommate Bo Ellis' team, Classified Nads, Chump player Bill Hanzlik arrived at the court in disguise. In fact, he was forced to play the entire game in street shoes because of some villainy on the part of the opposition who pirated all of his basketball shoes. (Which was no easy task, considering Hanzlik owned about 30 pair.) The Defending Champs won the game...in the most enjoyable game of the day.

In fact, Ellis led all scorers with eight points on 16 attempts, despite the fact that he was guarded by Hanzlik for most of the afternoon. The Chumps were again keyed by Rusty Lisch and Dan Short, each with six points.

Much later W.E.B. continued to show their mettle, defeating the Irish Guards III, 21-13. Bob Keenan paced W.E.B. with seven points while teammate Kevin Dix threw in six. Brian Kilbane had five for the outmanned Guards.

Strappamasquon and the Combat Wombats had no easy time with Hill's Angels. The Wombats needed Pete Holohan's nine for 18 performance to dump the Angels, 21-17. Mike Courey and Willie Fessler had four each for the winners, with Mark Davis' awesome 10 of 17 shooting performance dazzling the crowd for the losers.

Hawaii falls to streaking Irish

by Michael Ortman
Associate Sports Editor

And so it continues...

The Notre Dame tennis team continued its torrid play yesterday as the Irish extended their winning streak to 13 with an 8-1 hammering of visiting Hawaii at the Courtney Tennis Center.

"It was a mystery match for us," said Irish senior captain Carlton Harris. "We knew nothing about Hawaii before the match except that they played a busy schedule and they'd probably have good tans. Usually you know a little something about the team you're playing ahead of time, but we didn't know a thing. It got us a little scared at first."

Harris and his teammates shook off any fears they might have had in a hurry, coasting to five straight—set singles victories, clinching the match before the doubles competition had begun.

The Rainbow Warriors, playing the first of several matches on a midwest mainland trip, dropped to 33-13 but are little more than half way through their almost unbelievable 80 match schedule. Today they are at

"When do they ever find time for school?" asked one spectator.

Sophomore Tom Robison extended his personal winning streak to 13 with a 6-2, 6-1 win over Ashraf Hamouda at number six singles.

Notre Dame's number three singles man, Herb Hopwood, reversed his downward trend with a 7-6, 5-4, 7-6 win over Hawaii's Ray Nagel. The Arlington, Va., native had been mired in a week-long slump, losing all three of his
