Police arrest young patrons during raid on Bridget's

By John M. Higgins
Staff Reporter

State Excise and South Bend Police officers arrested an undetermined number of persons for underage drinking Friday night at Bridget McGuire's Filling Station.

According to Bridget's owner Terry Bower, approximately 20 police officers arrived at the bar around 11:30 p.m. and began checking the identification of bar patrons.

Although South Bend police vice officers could not be reached for official comment, reports said that 13 underage drinkers were found inside the bar and 3 to 5 arrests were made. Bower said she was uncertain of any figures or if any of those arrested were Notre Dame or Saint Mary's students, saying that she had not yet spoken to the police.

"We had a uniformed police officer at the front door, so as far as we know those kids had fake ID's and just didn't show them to the police," Bower said. "The guy at the door said that everyone who came in had an ID and we had both doors covered, so the only thing that could have happened is that they had a fake ID and ditched it when the police came."

A former Bridget's employee disputes Bower's claim that both doors are "always covered." "They can't afford to hire people to cover both doors, so they tell the bartender to keep an eye on it," the former employee said. "But people sneak in through there all the time."

Bower was uncertain as to what charges would be filed as a result of the raid, either against those arrested or against Bridget's. "Generally, they'll get back to me later in the week," she said.

Khomeini appeals for unity

Beirut, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini appealed yesterday for national unity and lashed out at Iranian newspapers and politicians for creating a climate of dissent while the nation was in a state of war.

"You leaders, why are you asleep so much? Why don't you open your eyes?" Khomeini said in a blanket criticism of officials engaged in political squabbling.

His remarks followed a week-long controversy ignited by the arrest of former Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, which pitted moderates such as President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr against hardliners of the Islamic Republican Party headed by Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti.

"One paper supports one side, another paper supports another side," Khomeini said in the speech to military cadets who had returned from the warfront near the Iran-Iraq border. "You are all Moslems and should be together."

Khomeini, claiming "90 out of 100 people" supported the Islamic Republic, called on militants to "stop these papers" and "close their mouths."

Clergy-backed hardliners reportedly forced the arrest of Ghotbzadeh after a controversial television interview. The former foreign minister criticized the government for what he called lack of war readiness and mismanagement of the state-run media and the economy.

In West Germany.

Pope calls for human rights, religious freedom

Mainz, West Germany (AP) Pope John Paul II, celebrating an outdoor Mass yesterday at a U.S. Army airbase in West Germany, recalled the struggles of his native Poland and called on nations to respect human rights and religious freedom as laid down in the Helsinki accords.

The pontiff gave a German-language Mass to an enthusiastic crowd of about 300,000 at the Mainz-Finthen airfield six miles south of this city in the heart of West Germany's wine-growing region.

"Make it our aim to work for peace and to strengthen one another."

He included remarks directed to the American military community based here. Quoting in English from the Apostle St. Paul, he said, "Make it our aim to work for peace and to strengthen one another."

The Mass highlighted the second day of the pope's five-day tour of West Germany, the first papal visit in 198 years to the birthplace of the Protestant Reformation. At a Mass earlier in the day he urged Roman Catholics to work to deepen ties with Protestants.

Although the Mass was organized by the German bishops as part of the pope's pastoral meeting with German Catholics, they opened the rite to members of the U.S. military and their dependents stationed in the area. Between 10,000 and 12,000 Americans are serving at the base.

The pope expressed the hope that a 35-nation, East-West review meeting now being held in Madrid on the 1975 Helsinki Final Act would strengthen peace "in full recognition of the rights of each and every individual and people, including religious freedom."

He appealed for an end to imperialism, aggression, exploitation and colonialism, and declared, "I say this also as the son of a nation which suffered very much for centuries and was forced to defend these individual and people's rights with all decisiveness."

The agenda session of the conference in Madrid was bogged down for nearly 10 weeks as the Soviet Union and its East European allies fought attempts by the West to give a full airing to alleged Soviet rights violations and the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. A compromise was achieved Friday to allow the conference to proceed.

The Helsinki accords were signed by the United States, Canada, the Soviet Union and 32 European nations including the Vatican.

The pope also made a strong appeal for peace.

"We remember clearly still the atrocious horrors of World War II, particularly we, sons and daughters of European peoples," he told the crowd here. "This must never happen again ... whether on our continent or somewhere else."

Poland was invaded by Nazi Germany in World War II.

Police said several thousand American soldiers and their families attended the Mass, while 35 U.S. Army and 15 Air Force chaplains participated in the service, along with 1,500 German priests.

"This is a once in a lifetime chance," said Fifth Army Corps Chaplain Lt. Col. Walter Keutzer, a Catholic priest from St. Louis, Mo. "It's the only chance I've ever had to be near the pope."

Reagan panel begins budget plans

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan met yesterday with a blue-ribbon panel of Republican economists to receive a detailed plan intended to turn his campaign promises of tax and spending cuts into reality.

The 14 economic advisers, led by former Treasury Secretary George Schultz, have been meeting here since Friday to hammer out what Schultz described as "a comprehensive long-term strategy" to coordinate tax, energy, regulatory and monetary policies for the new administration.

Schultz and other members of the Reagan economic team, which includes three former directors of the federal Office of Management and Budget, refused to discuss details of the report before they presented it to Reagan.

But Schultz said it contains no surprises in policy. Rather than proposing new economic measures, he said, the plan is intended as a strategy for fulfilling Reagan's campaign promises to cut federal spending by 2 percent annually and to cut federal income taxes across the board by 10 percent for three consecutive years.

Schultz confirmed that the report does not back away from Reagan's endorsement of the Kemp-Roth tax bill, the controversial series of 10 percent income tax cuts which critics say will worsen inflation rather than help cure it.

"It's a necessity. The president-elect made it a center-piece of his campaign and economic policy. I think everyone here agrees with it," Schultz said of the Kemp-Roth bill.

"There is much too heavy a tax burden on the economy. If we lighten it, there will be more investment, more real growth, a stronger, expanding economy without inflation," he added in an interview after the panel's nine-hour session Saturday.

Schultz conceded that in the committee's meetings, which ran longer than originally scheduled, there were some disagreements. But Schultz said the proposals that emerged are supported by the entire group.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., the only member of Congress on the Reagan economic panel, said the report is a plan that will bring about a long-term reduction in interest rates. But he added there is no way the nation can have immediate full employment without inflation.

On Monday, the president-elect plans to fly to Washington, D.C., where he has scheduled a series of meetings with House and Senate leaders, President Carter and members of the transition staff.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally visited the Reagan home for nearly three hours Saturday, but refused to talk with reporters afterward.

Reagan aides also declined comment on the topics of discussion between Reagan and Connally, a former rival for the presidency.

Meanwhile, Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said yesterday he had not been approached about joining the Reagan administration.

"I haven't been offered anything," he said on CBS's Face The Nation. "If something were offered, I don't know what I would do... I'm not going to get into that question of appointments."

Nine water supply systems

in Indiana were cited by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for failing to meet federal safe drinking water regulations. Meanwhile, Purdue University officials announced that some water samples taken from the school's water system three months ago failed to meet the minimum standards of the State Board of Health. John McGuire, EPA's Midwest administrator, said the nine water systems were cited for failing to monitor drinking water for bacteria or for failing to inform customers of violations of the Safe Drinking Water Act of 1974. Federal regulations require public water systems to regularly sample their water for coliform indicator bacteria, which come from human and animal wastes. The bacteria may be found in drinking water if it is not properly protected, McGuire said. — AP

Thousands of residents fled

Thousands of residents fled hillside homes yesterday as brush fires fanned by powerful winds raced across 17,500 acres in five Southern California communities, destroying more than 100 homes — some valued at more than $1 million. Officials blamed at least one of the largest fires on arson. One man died of a heart attack as he fled his burning home in the Bradbury area, where the worst fire destroyed or damaged 80 homes, officials said. A fire burned for a time above Pacific Palisades, where the home of President-elect Ronald Reagan is situated. But city fire officials said the blaze was contained and never threatened any homes. Residents of Bradbury, a rustic equestrian community of less than 10,000 people 20 miles northeast of Los Angeles, were advised by authorities to evacuate after a roaring firestorm covered 4,000 acres. — AP

sold on the effectiveness of a limited U.N. peacekeeping role, wants a phased withdrawal of Iraqi invasion forces in Iran and interjection of an "international presence" between the hostile armies, a U.S. official said. The ranking official, who asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press he believed "the Soviets so far would support that sort of an operation" after a cease-fire. Conceding that the divided U.N. Security Council lacked the "political wallop" to force Iraq to pull back, the official said the United States favored "one form or another of phased withdrawal... so that there is at least a separation of forces - at least some terrain where you might interject an international presence." The official said that presence did not have to be an armed force such as the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, and that it might be a "mediatory, conciliatory or observer presence." "The objective of the game is to have a third party come in," the official said, adding that this could be the United Nations "or some other party." — AP

The United Way campaign

Notre Dame sailed by the $96,200 mark today—more than 122 percent of the $79,000 goal. Pledges of support for the county-wide campaign are 46 percent ahead of the sum raised a year ago. Increased participation by members of the faculty, staff and student body was noted by campaign officials on campus. Theodore J. Crovello, professor of biology, directed the 1980 campaign, assisted by several department leaders. Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of the University, congratulated the scores of workers who helped move the campaign over the goal. "Once again I am extremely pleased to note the generous response of so many members of our community. Their concern for fellow residents of the area is a source of happiness for all of us," he said. The Notre Dame phase of the United Way campaign began in the early weeks of the fall semester when departmental and section meetings were scheduled in various areas of the campus. A special film produced on campus was shown at these meetings and crews followed with the distribution of pledge cards. — The Observer

Freedom from ignorance

Social justice (and injustice) has long been a concern of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community because of its Christian orientation. Social concerns have always found spokesmen among the students and faculty here — people who believe that education must go beyond the classroom into the problems of daily life that plague society.

Last week these concerns became an even more noticeable part of our campus life in the form of The Liberator, a social justice newsletter sponsored by the Saint Mary's Student Government.

The Liberator by its very name conveys the message that through knowledge and understanding the ideals of social justice can become a reality. The Liberator is designed to free us from the bondage of ignorance by giving us, through the powerful medium of the printed word, many of the facts needed to make knowledgeable, educated judgments on social issues.

"Social justice" encompasses a broad range of issues, including prison reform (the topic of this month's newsletter), child abuse, equal rights, corporate responsibility and world hunger — all issues that will affect our lives in some way. The essence of the concept of social justice is the awareness that these issues do not concern faceless masses, but real persons, and that as members of society we have a responsibility for the manner in which society affects each of our lives.

The newsletter is the brainchild of Joan McCarthy, vice president of academic affairs. Joan believes it is a necessary part of her responsibilities not only to implement educational programs on campus, but also to make them visible to the students.

And Student Government, in its concern for promoting social justice education, created the position of Social Justice Commissioner on the Board of Governance. This position acts as a link between the Social Justice Education Committee and Student Government. It will also provide a balance between social education and classroom education on campus.

Joan hopes to publish The Liberator monthly. Each month the publication will deal with a single aspect of social justice. Hopefully student groups involved with different areas of social justice will sponsor editions. This would give groups such as the World Hunger Coalition or SURE a means of presenting their concerns.

The Liberator only scratches the surface of information, but it will give an overview of the subject," explains Joan. To follow up on the topics covered in each edition, an open dialogue with the authors of the articles is held the following day.

Margie

over lunch in the Rotary room of the dining hall. This forum affords students a chance to discuss the topic in detail, and suggestions are offered on ways to become involved in finding answers to the problems presented.

The first issue deals with the problems of prison reform and was coordinated with a lecture on white collar crime sponsored by the Pre-Law Society and a slide show on the Stanford Prison Experiment provided by the Psychology Department. In this first issue, two men who served time in the Indiana State Penitentiary give a historical overview of the penal system and prison reform, and Joan writes about women in prison.

Joan confesses she would like more points of view on the issues discussed, but in order for her to accomplish that, she'll need more people who are willing to write. As with any publication The Liberator can succeed only if enough people are willing to make the effort to put the newsletter together.

The problems and topics of social justice are many and varied. There are plenty of ideas that can be presented in such a publication. We are all familiar with the various established social justice groups on campus. But if The Liberator catches on as Joan hopes it will, it should provide us with a broader knowledge of many of the less familiar social justice issues. It is an area in which we, as students, need to take a continuing interest, for it is part of the world in which we live.

Ignorance will never produce solutions. Only through knowledge can we deal with these issues. By establishing the position of Social Justice Commissioner and creating The Liberator, Student Government has recognized the need for educating students about the problems of social justice and has found an effective means to provide for that need.

Shenefield lecture reveals intelligence controversy

By David Sarphie
Staff Reporter

The complexities of national and international relations have intensified over the past few years, and so has the importance of covert intelligence to our national security contended U.S. Associate Attorney General John Shenefield. Shenefield spoke before a small, but attentive crowd at the Law Auditorium on Friday.

Shenefield cited such recent scandals as Watergate and U.S. intervention in Chile as causes of the division of thought now apparent among the various intelligence organizations.

"On one side we find the charterists, composed mainly of lawyers, who emphasize the need for a separate intelligence director to report to the President," Shenefield said. "They are lobbying for an increase in the legal oversight of these agencies to prevent such embarrassments as Watergate from occurring."

The charterists are opposed by the "old professionals," retired intelligence officials who believe in the necessity of secrecy. "They disdain the thought of allowing classified information to spread all over Capitol Hill," Shenefield remarked.

Academic leaders tend to think along the same lines as the charterists, according to Shenefield. They stress the need, however, for the director to be independent of any intelligence agency. "In the past, the director of the CIA has had the influence in the White House," Shenefield noted. "This has done little to improve their relations with the FBI and other agencies."

Rockslide kills three

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — A rock slide killed at least three people and injured at least six others yesterday on a popular trail at Yosemite National Park, officials reported.

A "good deal of rock and debris" tumbled onto a 600-yard stretch of the trail between the upper and lower Yosemite Falls shortly after noon, said Linda Abbott, a spokeswoman for the National Parks Service.

"The trail seems to be somewhat obliterated," she said.

"I looked over there and saw a boulder rolling down slowly," said Mike Rover, a security officer for the park's concessionaire, Yosemite Park & Curry Co. "It seemed about the size of half a house. It was huge."

"I could see large trees bending over from large boulders coming down the slide," said Ben Yonan, assistant security chief.

The slide occurred along a series of switchbacks — hairpin turns — about halfway up the trail alongside the 2,700-foot falls.

Mary Niles, the park librarian, described the face of the mountain after the slide as "a big blank place."

Abbott said the injured were evacuated by helicopter, as were six hikers stranded at the top of the steep trail by the slide. She said four to six others were below the slide area and were not injured.

A spokesman for Yosemite Hospital at the park said five people had been brought in for treatment by late afternoon, some of them "badly injured."

Finnegan lectures on marriage

Fr. John T. Finnegan, Jr., recent Chairperson of the Canon Law Society of America's "Committee on the Status of Women in the Church," will speak tomorrow evening at 8:00 in Hayes-Healy 122. The topic and title of Fr. Finnegan's talk is "MARRIAGE: BOND OF BONDAGE," a particularly interesting topic in light of the recent Bishop's Synod in Rome and the Pope's statements regarding marriage. An opportunity for questions and discussion with Fr. Finnegan will follow the lecture.

'With love and support'

Carter's church offers condolences

Washington (AP) — The members of President Carter's First Baptist Church offered him condolences yesterday his election defeat "with love and prayerful support."

In a Bible class before worship service, the resolution was read aloud and presented to the president. It said, "None of us can imagine the feelings in your heart after the election," and thanked him for belonging to their church.

"Thank you very much," a somber Carter responded. "That means so much to me." Fred Gregg, the teacher, told Carter he would be remembered as a great president. Gregg told Rosalynn Carter she has been "a super first lady."

Carter, who taught the class a lesson on Christianity, said he was "not going to get emotional because we will be here two months and I can't sustain it that long."

The president thanked his class members for accepting the First Family, "not as special people who live in the White House but as neighbors."

In the sermon, preached by Claude Broach, a retired minister from South Carolina, zealous religious organizations who seek power came under attack. It apparently was a reference to the Moral Majority, a religious fundamentalist group credited with helping President-elect Ronald Reagan win the election and with bringing about the defeat of a group of liberal senators.

Broach said it was wrong to "make a hit list of all those who do not conform" to their view, but said, "We are not dealing with evil men but with good men whose zeal has led them down a strange and dangerous path."

"I fear the would-be ayatollahs of religion as I would fear a plague," he said. "I fear for our country if any religious group stalks the hallways of Congress wielding the whip of power. Persuasion? yes. Power? No."

"Love, not power, is the healing force that reconciles enemies."

Jury deliberations continue in Klansmen trial

Greensboro, N.C. (AP) The jury in the murder trial of six Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis resumes deliberation for a seventh day today in a complicated case in which the issue of intent plays a major role.

The panel of six men and six women has been asked to determine whether any defendant intentionally broke the law when five members of the Communist Workers Party were shot to death at a Nov. 3, 1979, "Death to the Klan" rally.

Jurors already have deliberated five full days and part of a sixth day.

Each defendant is charged with five counts of first-degree murder and one count of felonious rioting. The panel may find each defendant innocent or guilty of first-degree murder, first-degree murder with premeditation, second-degree murder or voluntary manslaughter.

Although the defendants are being tried together, the jury must return verdicts for each defendant. There are countless possible combinations of verdicts.

When Guilford Superior Court Judge James M. Long instructed the jurors 10 days ago, he told them that intent was an attitude rarely shown directly. He said intent could be inferred from evidence of the defendant's manner before, during and after the act he is alleged to have committed.

Defense attorneys contend the caravan of Klan and Nazi vehicles to the rally was intended to be a peaceful demonstration that erupted into gunfire when the Klansman and Nazis were attacked.

The defendants testified they went to the rally to heckle communist demonstrators and perhaps throw eggs. There were seven dozen eggs in a van that police stopped as it left the scene of the shootings. Five of the defendants were inside that van.

Prosecutors, on the other hand, have argued that defendants intended to disrupt the rally by whatever means necessary.

Coal-fired future seen for railroads

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (AP) Coal can and should replace oil as the primary fuel used by America's railroads, a West Virginia University study says.

"It is technically, economically and environmentally feasible to convert 90 to 95 percent of the nation's rail system to coal-fired locomotives," said M. Dayne Aldridge, director of WVU's Energy Research Center.

In 1979, railroads consumed about $4.3 billion gallons of diesel fuel, which costs an average of 82 cents per gallon, the WVU study said. The total fuel costs, including fuel handling by the railroads, were $3.66 billion. If the railroads had used coal, assuming Eastern coal prices, they would have saved about $1.27 billion, according to the study.

"Besides these direct economic benefits for our railroads, the conversion to coal locomotives would provide other advantages," said Aldridge. "Among these would be a reduction of oil imports and thus a positive effect on the nation's balance of trade; the domestic consumption of an additional 35 to 50 million tons of coal a year and jobs for an additional 15,000 to 20,000 coal miners."

The railroads would also be freed from the political uncertainties linked with foreign oil dependence and the adverse effects of price increases, he said.

The study, which is entitled "Coal as a Rail Fuel: An Assessment of Direct Combustion," was funded by the American Coal Enterprises, Inc. It was co-authored by Aldridge, economist Thomas Campbell and Alfred Galli, professor of chemical engineering at WVU.

"According to our findings," said Aldridge, "a coal-fired locomotive using that firm's

‘Crisis proportions’

North and South Korea relations plummet

By Bruce Cumings
Pacific News Service

EDITOR'S NOTE: U.S. influence over the mounting difficulties in Korea seems to have sunk to a new low. But there is a way for the United States to reassert itself, and at the same time update its anachronistic cold war policy in Northeast Asia. The solution is to open U.S. talks with North Korea, argues Bruce Cumings, a specialist on Korea at the School of International Studies at the University of Washington.

While the conflict in the Middle East has naturally preoccupied American attention, the long simmering troubles in Korea have reached crisis proportions over the past year. Relations between the North and South have plummeted to new lows in recent weeks. And the craven dictator who calls himself president in the South may any day execute the man who is the very symbol of human rights and democracy in Korea, Kim Dae Jung.

The American response to both these terrible possibilities is to wring its hands and plead that it has no leverage.

But in fact, the crisis now coming to a head offers the United States a golden opportunity to restore a semblance of logic to the anachronistic cold war policy that has governed U.S. relations with this strategic peninsula since 1945. At the same time, and in the same way, the United States could chastise the zealous South Korean dictator Gen. Chun Tu Hwan, cool war fears, reassert U.S. influence in the region and, perhaps, even save the life of Kim Dae Jung.

The first step is simple: Open talks with the North.

The most compelling reason for forging a new Korean policy is that the old alignments and alliances on which the current policy is based have come un-design could be built and in operation by 1983 if a tightly scheduled development and construction program was started now. And we think that in five years such a locomotive would have a significant impact on the importation of oil and the consumption of domestic coal."

The study said that currently railroads consume about 6.2 percent of the diesel fuel and heating oil consumed in the United States annually. By switching the rail industry to coal, these fuels could be put to use by industries where the use of a solid fuel such as coal is impractical, the study said.

The coal-fired locomotive proposed by American Coal Enterprises is a two-stage, combustion, reciprocating type. It's planned for heavy-duty freight service and is comparable to a diesel locomotive designed for the same work.

glued, washed away by successive waves of economic and political change. The American stake in Korea is no longer primarily strategic but economic. Also, North Korea no longer represents the threat of monolithic communist aggression against a weak neighbor, but could itself become a quasi-ally in an expanding informal alliance that already includes the U.S., China and Japan. Korea could square the triangle.

FOCUS

The Nixon opening to China and Carter's further courtship have resulted in a situation in which North Korea's best ally, China, is also the United States' de facto ally. This U.S.-China connection also has encouraged a new, tripartite security relationship between those two countries and Japan, directed against the Soviet Union. Since North Korea has been closer to China than to the Soviet Union since the mid-1950s, the strategic logic of 1980 suggests that it might become part of the general array of anti-Soviet states in Northeast Asia.

After all, North Korea severely condemned the Soviet supported Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia in 1978, and it has issued several veiled blasts against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. The fly in the ointment is the inveterate South Korean obstruction of any American contacts with the North.

The U.S. economic stake that developed in the 1970s in South Korea is no real obstacle to a relationship with the North, which seems ready and willing to participate in the world economy. Since the early 1970s the North has made it clear that its self-reliant "juche" ideology does not mean abstention from the world economy. The North Koreans were, if anything, more eager than the Chinese for western and Japanese technology, causing them to over-extend themselves financially to the point where they had to default on loans. The North is much more urban and industrial than China, and faces a technological imperative to upgrade and renovate its industrial plant.

Instead, it is South Korea that has problems with the economic logic of the 1980s, since China is starting to export textiles and electronic equipment and draws on a much cheaper labor pool. North Korea can export needed minerals and industrial equipment in return for the new technology that it needs.

In early September Kim Il Sung, the North Korean leader, offered to break defense treaties with the Soviet Union and China if the U.S. would sit down to talks on a peace treaty to end the Korean War (only an armistice holds the peace now). The specifics of this unprecedented proposal are less important than what lies behind it: clear Northern recognition that the changed security relationships of Northeast Asia now suggest a new North Korean relationship with the United States. Several Americans, including former State Department spokesman Tom Reston, have just concluded their first visits to Pyongyang.

An American opening to the North would certainly shake the foundations under South Korean President Chun Tu Hwan and the financial establishment which he represents. The notion that the North is a mortal and constant enemy of the South, and of all U.S. economic interests in the South, is the major trump card which allows Chun to hold his winning hand, even while thumbing his nose at the United States.

But there is no reason to believe that South Koreans generally share this view. Indeed, the opposition leader Kim Dae Jung, who is now under the death sentence, draws much of his own popular support from two powerful undercurrents in South Korean politics: the deep desire for a policy of national self-reliance, and for reunification with the North. These currents remain subterranean because, from time to time, it has been a crime, punishable by death, to discuss them in public.

... Khomeini

Bani-Sadr, backed by moderates and the Tehran daily Engelabi Islami, mounted a successful campaign to free Ghotbzadeh, a campaign that received support from tens of thousands of Tehran's bazaar merchants.

"If they (the enemies of Iran) are victorious, there will remain no prime minister, or any president, or a Majlis (parliament) or a military official or a bazaar merchant," Khomeini warned.

"At this very difficult time when our country is at war, you gather and say nonsense," Khomeini added. He said disunity of the nation of 36 million was the goal of its enemies, especially the United States.

"These are plots," said Khomeini. "They are making fools of you. They are playing with the newspapers, they are playing games with the (battle) fronts. The plan is to separate you from each other."

Khomeini singled out for criticism the bazaar merchants, the pro-communist Fedayeen group and critics who argued the clergy should confine their role to theology and leading prayers in mosques.

"Today their plan is that the clergy should go and pray," said the 80-year-old religious leader of the predominantly Shiite Moslem nation.

give us any field position, especially in the first half, and we gave them the ball twice inside our 11."

Notre Dame's longest drive came in the fourth quarter and ate up more than six minutes. It started on the Irish 23 with 14:52 left. Thanks to a couple of major Alabama penalties, an effective quarterback delay by Kiel, and two swift sideline passes to split end Tony Hunter, the Irish found themselves knocking on the door for the score that would have put the game out of reach.

Short runs by fullbacks John Sweeney and Pete Buchanan and by tailback Carter gave the Irish a fourth-and-goal at the one. After both teams called timeout, Devine opted to go for a field goal.

"Obviously I thought 10 points would win it," said Devine. "That seemed to be the magic number at that time. We thought that would win it."

Oliver's 18-yard field goal attempt was blocked by E.J. Junior after Oliver slipped on the wet turf while approaching the ball.

Alabama had three more possessions to work with, but only one was the least bit threatening. The Tide was in Notre Dame territory at the 37-yard line with 3:35 left, but on fourth-and-one linebacker Bob Crable stood up halfback Linnie Patrick for no gain.

The loss dropped Alabama's record to 8-2, and was the fourth time the Irish have beaten the Tide in as many encounters.

"This was what college football is all about," said Devine. "A clean, hard-fought game between two great teams from two great universities. To me it was a classic."

anyone deep to receive the punt and held firm in their formation. When Jones headed around right end, Crable and Company brought him down for a two-yard loss that gave the Irish possession.

"Even though they came out in punt formation," said Crable, "they showed a few splits. They were really leaning forward, so we held in our defensive formation. We were ready for something."

While Notre Dame's defense continued to turn away the Tide, the Irish offense managed to capitalize on a critical Alabama fumble in the second quarter for the game's only score.

Phil Carter, who scored the touchdown from two yards out, paced the Irish ball-control attack with 84 yards in 31 carries. Freshman Blair Kiel went the distance at quarterback for Notre Dame, completing five of nine passes for 43 yards and punting nine times for an average of 41.2 yards.

Kiel admitted that he was quite uneasy prior to Saturday's kickoff. "I was very nervous," he said afterwards. "I woke up six times last night worrying. "But I'll sleep well tonight!"

Irish overcome Alabama

By Paul Mullaney
Editor-in-Chief

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Paul "Bear" Bryant just stood there, Coke in hand, forcing a smile. His fifth-ranked Crimson Tide had just suffered a 7-0 loss to sixth-ranked Notre Dame at Legion Field.

"It is an understatement to say that the best team won," Bryant said. "We are just not used to playing against a team that strong."

Played before 78,873 fans, a national television audience, and the largest press contingent ever to cover a regular-season game in the South, Saturday's victory gave the Irish of Coach Dan Devine the opportunity to face top-ranked and undefeated Georgia in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day.

Alabama, meanwhile, accepted a bid to play Southwest Conference champ Baylor in the Cotton Bowl.

Notre Dame, now 8-0-1, tallied Saturday's only score in the second quarter following an Alabama double-turnover. With the ball on the 'Bama 12 after a Blair Kiel punt, Tide quarterback Don Jacobs missed handoff connections with fullback Charley Williams, fumbling into the hands of Irish end John Hanker.

Six plays later and just one yard from paydirt, however, Kiel fumbled John Scully's snap, and Alabama middle guard Warren Lyles recovered.

"I thought I had blown a big opportunity by fumbling down there," said Kiel. "But when I got to the sideline my teammates told me to shake it off."

Kiel wasn't on the sideline for long, though. He was given another opportunity to punch it home two plays later when Jacobs fumbled a snap. Irish end Scott Zettek recovered at the Alabama four.

Irish tailback Phil Carter dove into the end zone two plays later from the two and placekicker Harry Oliver converted from placement to open and close the scoring with 6:02 left in the half.

All Notre Dame had to do from that point was to exercise its ball-control, field-position game plan. And that they did.

Although Alabama outgained

Notre Dame, 246 yards to 192, the Tide was unable to enter Irish territory until the second-to-last play of the first half. And in the second half, 'Bama could only get inside the Notre Dame 35 one time.

That was on the Tide's first drive of the third quarter, when freshman quarterback Walter Lewis drove the Crimson from their own 26 to the Irish 20. On a fourth-and-three play, Peter Kim missed a 37-yard field goal attempt.

Notre Dame controlled the ball for more than 34 minutes of the contest. The Irish ball-control attack was working well enough that Kiel only had to hit the air nine times, completing five for 43 yards. Also, while Notre Dame never gained more than 13 yards on any one play, the Irish beat Alabama in the first down category, 14-10.

"Our game plan consisted of running hard at them and getting into the holes quicker than they could fill them up," said Scully. "I think our backs did a good job in getting to the holes quick."

Bryant gave a much more simplistic reason for Notre Dame's ability to control the line of scrimmage. "We were more charitable than they were," he mused. "They didn't

Defense proves decisive in victory

By Paul Mullaney
Editor-in-Chief

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Prior to Saturday's game with Notre Dame, there were two things Paul "Bear" Bryant had never done during his 23 years at the Alabama football helm.

He had never beaten the Irish, having lost three previous encounters, and he had never lost by a shutout on home turf.

Now there is only one thing Bryant has yet to do — beat Notre Dame.

Bryant's teams have been shut out four times over the years, the only one at home being a 0-0 tie against Vanderbilt in 1958, Bryant's first year at 'Bama. Whether playing here at Legion Field or at Bryant-Denny Stadium on the Tuscaloosa campus (both are home fields), the Crimson Tide seems to always score in bunches.

But that wasn't the case Saturday. The Irish defense, which was ranked fifth nationally, scored its most impressive performance to date, stopping the Alabama wishbone in the 7-0 Irish win.

"That's the greatest honor for our defense," said Irish linebacker Bob Crable about handing a Bryant team a shutout at home for the first time. "Especially since I wasn't born yet when 'The Bear' first came here."

Crable, who led Notre Dame with nine unassisted tackles, continued, "As a team we played the best game we played all year. We don't have a long way to go."

If Saturday's performance was any indication, Crable may well be right. The Irish defense has not allowed a touchdown in the last 20 quarters, and has given up only nine points during that five-game span.

While Saturday's contest left Bryant with little to say, he did admit that "we didn't establish anything offensively. And that's because they didn't let us. We got beat by a bigger and better team. We're not used to playing against people that strong."

Alabama did manage 246 total yards, but they were spread out throughout the game. The only semblance of a legitimate 'Bama drive came early in the third quarter when the Tide marched from its own 26-yard line to the Notre Dame 20.

When the Irish defense stiffened at the 20, setting up a fourth-and-three situation, Peter Kim was called upon to attempt a 37-yard field goal. Kim hit a flutter ball that died to the right side, and the Irish kept their 7-0 lead.

As Notre Dame defensive coordinator Joe Yonto said, "When we had to stop them, we stopped them."

The Irish also held firm on a key play in the opening of the fourth quarter. Alabama, on the Notre Dame 35-yard line with fourth down and two, sent in punter Woody Umphrey. After initially lining up deep as if to punt, Umphrey ran up under center to take the snap and pitched out to halfback Joe Jones.

Irish split with Badgers

MADISON, Wis. — When Notre Dame hockey coach Lefty Smith was looking ahead towards a month of road play for his team, he felt the Irish would be okay if they came out of their travels with a .500 record.

Well, the travel ended this weekend here at the Dane Coliseum and Notre Dame, indeed, has a 5-5 overall record and a 3-3 Western Collegiate Hockey Association mark. But after a promising start for the Irish against the Wisconsin Badgers — the nation's No. 2 team — Friday with a 5-4 overtime victory, Smith's players may have taken him too literally Saturday.

"We took too many chances defensively," said Smith following Saturday's 4-0 Wisconsin triumph. "We got burned and it cost us. That's how they scored their goals."

The split puts the Irish in a tie for sixth place in the WCHA heading into this weekend's league home opener at the ACC against Michigan Tech. Wisconsin is now 8-2 overall and is tied for fourth in the league with a 4-2 record.

Wisconsin freshman goalie Terry Kleisinger, stopping 33 shots Saturday, shut out Notre Dame for the first time since Mar. 2, 1979 when the same Badgers blanked the Irish 2-0.

His counterpart for the Irish, sophomore Bob McNamara, faced five breakaways and came up with the big saves on all but one of them. He finished the game with 42 saves, the third time in four WCHA appearances he has been called on for more than 40 saves.

"In all my years here I never saw so many lone breaks by a Wisconsin team," said Badger Coach Bob Johnson. "It was like their goalie (McNamara) was saying, 'come on, try it again.' The guys were coming back to the bench shaking their heads."

While McNamara received little support from the Notre Dame blue line contingent, the Irish offense continued its subpar performance.

"We could not beg, borrow or steal a goal," said Smith.

Kleisinger came up with the saves when he had to, but he did not receive quite the pressure McNamara faced. Ed Lebler opened the scoring for Wisconsin at 3:03 of the first period when he took a pass right out in front of McNamara and picked out the upper left corner for a 1-0 lead.

Scott Lecy made it 2-0 at 13:58 of the second period with a breakaway goal which was set up by his brother, Todd. The Irish unloaded 25 shots over the first two periods.

Theran Welsh put the game out of reach in the third period at 13:10 and Scott Lecy capped the evening at 16:52 with his second goal of the night.

Friday's game was a seesaw battle throughout. Badger freshman John Newberry inflicted most of the damage on McNamara with his first career hat trick while three of Notre Dame's five goals were scored by defensemen.

Newberry gave Wisconsin a 1-0 lead at 10:24 of the first period, but John Schmidt answered back at 13:15 for a 1-1 score. Lexi Doner gave the Badgers a 2-1 lead with a power play goal at 17:18.

Jeff Logan tied the score, 2-2, at 9:44 with a power play goal. Newberry scored his second of the night just 48 seconds later to regain the lead for the Badgers, 3-2.

Jeff Brownschidle evened things at 14:20 with an unassisted goal. He skated all the way from his own zone and beat Gremore with a 35-foot slapshot. Kirt Bjork gave Notre Dame its first lead of the night
