Close call

Explosion mars papal visit

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — An explosive device went off at Karachi's national stadium packed with 100,000 people yesterday, minutes before Pope John Paul II arrived to celebrate a Mass. Police said it was a bomb and that it killed the man who carried it and seriously injured his two accomplices.

There was no indication the pope was told of the explosion, which occurred in a stairwell while a choir sang. He delivered a 90-minute homily on Christian and Moslem respect and understanding, circled the cricket field in a jeep to wave at the cheering crowd, accepted gifts and left for Manila — the next stop on his Far East tour.

Police tentatively identified one of the victims as a Pakistani Christian but it was unclear whether the Pontiff was their intended target.

A West European diplomat, who asked not to be identified, said the explosion was "small" but "deafening." It occurred in a stairwell that led to seating for diplomats.

The diplomat said he earlier saw two of the men, including the one who died, trying to slip by guards to the dignitaries' reviewing stand.

"I saw these two young chaps previously trying to get in," he said. "One of them had a bag under his shoulder."

The diplomat said one of the injured was a middle-aged man whose pants caught fire. American vice-consul Tim Kane draped his shirt over the man's wounds before the victim was carried from the blood-spattered concrete stairwell.

Witnesses, who gave conflicting statements on how many people were injured, said two appeared to be Pakistani men in their 20s.

Dr. Dolphyn d'Souza, who examined the victims, said, "It was an explosion but we don't know what it was. One man was definitely dead. His whole abdomen was busted open."

A CBS reporter on the scene said it sounded like "a huge firecracker" and it went largely unnoticed.

Pope John Paul II, dressed in white cassock and skullcap, was greeted by President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife Imelda, both Roman Catholics, and Cardinal Jaime Sin, the archbishop of Manila.

The grenade exploded near a reviewing stand in the Karachi stadium 20 minutes before John Paul. He made the brief stopover in predominantly Moslem Pakistan before his tour of the Philippines, Guam, Japan and Anchorage, Alaska.

The explosion occurred behind a wall 15 feet from a reviewing stand where scores of diplomats and dignitaries were seated and 60 to 100 feet from the platform where the Pope said Mass.

The government said the homemade grenade went off during a scuffle between the man and security guards, one of whom — in plainclothes — was among the injured.

Reliable sources identified the dead man as a Pakistani Moslem who tried to carry the grenade into the stadium in a sack. A guard asked what was in the sack, and the man replied, "Fruit for my wife," according to the sources.

The sources said the two others injured were Christians, but police said earlier they were accomplices of the dead man.

Dr. Ailal Mohammed, who treated the wounded at Civil Hospital, said the grenade was filled with nails and scraps of metal.

Witnesses said the blast occurred as choirs sang hymns and most of the spectators did not hear it. There was no panic.

After saying Mass, John Paul circled the stadium in a Pakistani jeep as dancers costumed in traditional dress performed. Shouts of "Long Live the Pope" echoed through the stadium, normally used for cricket matches.

In his homily, delivered in English, John Paul urged Pakistan's estimated 750,000 Roman Catholics to show a "spirit of dialogue and respect to those in your country who do not know Christ."

Judge allows delay in discrimination suit

The discrimination case against Notre Dame, scheduled for a court hearing today, was postponed until April 7 after both sides agreed they were "close to a settlement in principle."

The suit, filed against the University by 64 past and present women faculty members, is a consolidation of two suits filed separately in 1974 and in 1978 by women protesting Notre Dame's system of employing, promoting and paying its female employees.

Timothy McDevitt, the University assistant counsel, declined to say which of the parties requested the stay. He projected that a final settlement would be reached by the April court date.

The women are seeking the abolition of further discrimination, back pay and measures to ensure fairness in future tenure decisions.

Man accosts ND female at gunpoint

A female Notre Dame student was accosted about 9 a.m. yesterday by a man with a nickel-plated revolver and an orange stocking cap, but she managed to escape after handing over her purse and $6.

The man, who drove a white van with an orange mural depicting a mountain scene emblazoned on the side, forced the student to enter the van at gunpoint, as she walked along near the intersection of Vaness Street and Rte. 23, two blocks from the east boundary of campus.

The woman, in a report filed with county police, said she escaped unharmed after diverting his attention.

Police refused to comment on the case, and declined comment on whether the man resembled the armed rapist who has been reported in the area.

48 die

Survivors remember fire

By NEIL O'CONNER
Associated Press Writer

DUBLIN — Through flames, thick black smoke, and panicked crowds they survived the tragic Dublin nightclub fire that took 48 lives. Survivors talked Monday from their hospital beds about their escapes.

Police announced, meanwhile, that pathologists' examinations of the terribly charred bodies revealed that 44 people perished in the blaze early Saturday. They initially placed the death toll at 49, then lowered it to 48 Sunday as medical examiners continued their grim task of trying to identify the victims.

Pauline Reid, her badly burned face and hands in bandages, smiled despite the pain as she lay in a bed at Dublin's James Hospital.

"I'm alive and it's great," she said.

The 22-year-old Dubliner described what happened in the early hours of Saturday morning toward the end of a "Dance The Night Away" Valentine's Eve disco dancing competition at the Stardust Cabaret nightclub, attended by 800 young people. The fire, the worst in this Irish capital's history, injured 130 people. Nine were reported in critical condition on Monday.

TUESDAY FOCUS

"There were six of us together, dancing away. Then we saw the fire...within minutes the flames seemed to be everywhere.

"I ran to a back door, but there was a crowd gathered at it and somebody said it was locked. I couldn't breathe in the smoke and I couldn't get out...

"I gave up, I just gave up and lay on the ground to die...then suddenly I heard a great crash and I saw headlights shining at me through the darkness.

"Somebody had driven a car from outside through the door to smash it down. I just leaped up and ran to the lights and I was outside. Whoever drove that car into the door deserves a medal because all around me people were choking on the floor.

"We all ran to the lights and lived," she said.

Marian Mahoney said she heard a disc jockey appeal to "keep calm" — and then all hell broke loose.

"Within seconds the place was full of thick, black smoke. I couldn't see where the door was but I just kept moving. I grabbed onto a fellow's hair and we pushed through together. I don't even know who he was."

At the city morgue, police continued the grim task of trying to identify 24 victims whose bodies were too badly charred for recognition.

The Soviet Union today dismissed as "rumor without basis" a West German newspaper report that longtime Soviet Foreign Andrei Gromyko would be replaced by Moscow's ambassador to Washington, Anatoly Dobrynin. The mass circulation newspaper Bild, which carried the report, said Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev hoped the change in foreign ministers would lead to better relations with the United States. Bild quoted an unidentified Western diplomat as saying the 71-year-old Gromyko "downright hates Americans." Gromyko has served as Soviet foreign minister for 24 years. Dobrynin, 61, has been Soviet Ambassador to the United States for 19 years. — AP

The result of the investigation of the strip search of eight Saint Mary's students was scheduled to be submitted to the South Bend Board of Public Safety this morning. City Attorney Richard Hill said that he would deliver a report of the investigation to the board at their regular meeting today. He was unsure if the report would be released to the public because of possible litigation stemming from the incident. The eight students are to appear in Circuit Court Wednesday on the underage drinking charges. — The Observer

Terrorists smashed two rockets into the South Yemom Embassy early yesterday in what they claim is retaliation for a deadly synagogue bombing. The thunderous explosions awakened the fashionable neighborhood and heavily damaged the embassy but caused no injuries. "We claim the action against the South Yemen Embassy in the name of all victims of Rue Copernic," said the French-language recording played over the telephone to the Agence France-Presse news agency. The Copernic Synagogue bombing Oct. 3 killed three passers-by and one worshipper and injured 20 people in one of the most violent of recent anti-Semitic incidents in the French capital. The bomb exploded minutes before the service inside was about to end. There have been no arrests in the case. Investigators said they believed the nighttime attack was the work of three people with expertise in explosives but they had no clues to their identity. The dual launching of the rockets was triggered by timing devices, police said. — AP

The dollar posted fresh gains on world money markets yesterday, showing some of the sharpest advances seen in months on the basis of indications of tough new economic policies from President Reagan. The dollar hit a seven-year high against the French franc, touched its highest level in years against the sagging West German mark, the Swiss franc and Dutch guilder and reached another unofficial all-time record against the Italian lira. Reagan's speech, scheduled for tomorrow, is expected to detail his plans for trimming the budget and curbing inflation. — AP

A top military attache at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow was recalled to Washington after he told his superiors he feared an "incident" could allow Soviet agents to try to blackmail him into spying, Western sources said yesterday. The embassy would not discuss the case of Army Maj. James R. Holbrook except to confirm he left Moscow at an unspecified date last month. In Washington, the State Department refused comment. Holbrook, 41 years old and fluent in the Russian language, was an assistant defense attache assigned to the embassy in Moscow since the summer of 1979. Western sources in Moscow said the mysterious "incident" took place early last month at Rovno, about 600 miles from the Polish border, an area Western defense attaches have visited recently amid reports of a Soviet-led Warsaw Pact troop build-up. The Washington Post reported the incident may have involved a Soviet plan to incapacitate Holbrook with drugs and get compromising photographs of him. — AP

Frank E. Sullivan, president of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company and a 1949 graduate of the University of Notre Dame, has been named to receive the Rev. Edwards Frederick Sorin Award of the Alumni Association. The annual award honors a Notre Dame graduate who has contributed outstanding service to his or her community and to the University. Named for the founder of Notre Dame, the Sorin Award will be given to Sullivan June 6, during the annual Alumni Association reunion on campus. The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame and a previous recipient of the award, will make the presentation. Active in community affairs when a South Bend insurance executive, Sullivan was a founder of the South Bend Urban Coalition and a founder and first president of the United Community Services (now United Way) of St. Joseph County. He moved to Newark, N.J., as an officer of Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company in 1973, and he has continued in leadership roles with the United Way and the Newark archdiocese. Sullivan is a trustee of Notre Dame and serves on the advisory council for the College of Business Administration. — The Observer

Lobbying for control

One of the more fascinating aspects of the democratic process is most assuredly the lobbying system. The wheels of this great muscle-flexer are always in motion, encouraging average, apathetic and unmotivated citizens to barrage their congressmen with letters approving this, disapproving that, and basically making such nuisances of themselves that the representative cracks under the pressure and supports whoever shouts the loudest.

That is the ideal, and it is certainly a marvelous example of the power of the people. Unfortunately, the lobby with the most money often is able to shout more loudly than the lobby with the most public support. This phenomena is a bane to the existence of many a lobby, the most notable being the gun control group who call themselves Handgun Control.

The issue of gun control has surged to the forefront of public consciousness since the murder of ex-Beatle John Lennon in December. Lennon, as everyone knows, was shot down in cold blood by a less-than-mentally-competent groupie who fired a legally-purchased handgun at the singer. The slaying was immediately played up as a cause celebre for the abolition of legalized handguns. Evening and late-night news programs carried the stories of the shooting in conjunction with its effect on the pro-arms lobby.

This new public awareness of the frequency of handgun-related crimes came at an inopportune time for the National Rifle Association, this country's chief handgun supporter. The NRA, with its budget of $30 million, has long presented a formidable opposition to any group campaigning for more stringent controls. This lobby is funded primarily by gun manufacturers and dealers who have financial motivation for their dedication.

The NRA's latest move has been to attempt a repeal of the existing gun law. This law, which offers only minimal control, states that a person who purchases a gun must fill out a federal form with his name, address, age, and the assurance that he is not an ex-felon, drug addict or mentally incompetent. That's all it takes.

President Reagan's stance on the issue is predictably conservative. He has come out against a complete ban of firearms and he opposes a massive confiscation scheme. He is also a member of the California Rifle and Pistol Association, which implies that his impartiality on this matter is uncertain. And everyone knows of Nancy's admitted affinity for the adorable little gun she keeps in her bedstand.

But, to Reagan's credit, he does advocate tightening the system enough to make it "more difficult" for ex-criminals to purchase a firearm.

Handgun Control has begun to publish the names of all Americans who were killed by handguns in a monthly release called the Handgun Body Count. In 1979, the count reached 10,728 dead. Fifty percent of the murder victims were shot by handguns — two and one-half times as frequently as any other weapon. Someone is murdered by a handgun every 50 minutes.

If these statistics sound like propaganda to you, or if you believe that more stringent control laws would make little difference, perhaps you should think again. Common sense indicates that there would certainly be less spur-of-the-moment murders, and less accidental deaths caused by casually misplaced handguns. And the popular gun-to-the-head suicide would become more of a bother than it was worth.

For those who view the ready availability of guns as a right inherent in the second Amendment to the Constitution, I would ask how totting a gun promotes liberty. At any rate, the Amendment actually states

"A Well-Regulated Militia, Being Necessary to the Security of a Free State, the Right of the People to Keep and Bear Arms, Shall Not Be Infringed." The American Bar Association has stated that this may be, and actually has been, interpreted in the collective sense to mean that the right to bear arms must fall in a militia or a police-power case. Thus, this Amendment can easily be interpreted to favor of either side.

The gun control lobby, Handgun Control Inc., is working for the passage of a measure that is designed to combat handgun crime. The legislation, called the Kennedy-Rodino bill, would, among other things, stop the manufacture, sale and transfer of "Saturday Night Specials," the most common crime weapon. As of 1968, Congress halted the importation of these weapons, but did not outlaw the importation of their parts. So now imported Saturday Night Specials are assembled here, legally.

The act would also impose the old "swift and sure" standard of punishment for those who misuse handguns, as well as enforcing more stringent license requirements. The most impressive feature of the proposed law is that it would assign liability for the illegal sale of handguns. Not only would gun dealers be forced to pass more restrictive requirements to open up shop, but they would also be held accountable for any illegal sales made in their stores.

No matter who wins in this latest battle of the lobbies, it is encouraging to see that the pro-gun control lobby, which is supported in principle by 72 percent of the voting public according to a '79 Harris Poll. And whether an individual is pro or con on the issue, a simple letter to a Congressman or a Senator is all it takes to keep the system going.

Cultural awareness

Tyson highlights Black Festival

By MIKE DUPLESSIE
News Staff

The Black Cultural Arts Festival will continue through the latter part of this month, featuring lectures and performances by a variety of renowned black entertainers and leaders.

The goal of the Festival, according to co-sponsor Darlene Sowell, is "to provide an awareness of the Black cultural experience, an understanding of various aspects of Black life, and to focus on the achievements and talents of Black Americans."

Tomorrow's program features a speech by Cicely Tyson in the library auditorium at 8 p.m. Cicely Tyson is best known for her Emmy Award-winning portrayal of Miss Jane Pitman; she has also received considerable acclaim for her roles in the television special Roots and in the movie Souder.

Chicago's revolutionary teacher, Marva Collins, also will speak — Wednesday, Feb. 25 at 8 p.m. — in the library auditorium. Miss Tyson is currently starring in a movie based on the life of Miss Collins.

Several other nationally known entertainers will also make appearances during the festival.

Gil-Scott Heron, noted jazz artist and poet, will perform in the library auditorium at 8 p.m. Feb. 23. The Jazz Tatum Trio Plus will be featured in a Washington Hall Performance at 7 p.m. Feb. 28.

A talent show is also planned for the Festival, taking place at 7 p.m. Feb. 27 in the library auditorium.

The Festival will conclude with a fashion show and a dance in the Monogram Room at the ACC on March 7.

All of the festival's activities are free except for the dance and the fashion show, where there will be a paid admission.

Student surveys to provide awareness

By JEFF CHOPPIN
News Staff

Student Senate surveys were the focal point of last night's Senate meeting at Hayes-Healy. The escort service, budget matters and security were also discussed.

The survey will be used to determine "where the students are coming from," according to SBP Paul Riehle. He said that the surveys would provide information which the Senate would "base it's strategy on."

The one-page surveys will be distributed to all the undergraduate students. The questions in the survey deal with the number of study days before exams, ticket distributions, the laundry service and library hours.

"Notre Dame is unique in that it has only one study day," Riehle said. He further stated that Harvard has five study days and that Northwestern has a week.

The ticket distribution section of the survey includes questions on football, basketball and concert ticket distributions.

Pat Borchers, who heads the escort service from the Senate, said that the service is doing enough business to continue, and that "it is definitely worth the effort." He stated that most of the requests were coming from girls walking to and from the library.

In budget business, an additional $750 was allocated to An Tostal for tents which would be used in case of bad weather. There is still $4,219 unallocated in the Senate budget.

The Senate will vote next week on a security proposal. The proposal would clarify N.D. Security policy regarding the allowance of cars on campus to escort girls to and from their dorms.

Lightning strikes

Power outage darkens area

By LAURA L. LARIMORE
Senior Staff Reporter

Poor lighting along the east perimeter of the campus this weekend was the result of a power transformer failure, according to Glenn Terry, Director of Security at Notre Dame. The transformer went out Thursday, apparently due to lightning. After maintenance was unable to repair the damage on Friday, Security increased its protection in the area.

Despite the extra patrol, an armed robbery occurred early this morning in the vicinity. (See story on page 1). The transformer was scheduled to be repaired by Monday afternoon.

Poor illumination continuing across Ivy onto Vaness, however, is not the fault of the University. The area from Ivy Road up to the Turtle Creek Apartments is under the jurisdiction of St. Joseph County.

According to Kenneth Herceg, county highway engineer, there is no money allocated in the county budget for street lighting. "The 15 to 20 street lights in the entire county are only for severe cases, those involving traffic safety," he said. Funds used for these come from the general highway fund, Herceg explained.

Many requests for lighting come to the county office, but all are refused due to lack of finances. Indiana & Michigan Electric Company will hang lights for private homes on a contract basis, according to Herceg.

Continuing down Vaness, only the south side of the road bordering Turtle Creek is within the city limits. Northward, including Campus View Apartments, is part of the county, and is not publicly lighted. Responsibility for this area is that of the residents and the presence of lighting is at their discretion.

Union foresees agreement with new Polish leaders

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — In an unprecedented interview with a Polish government newspaper, a union official was quoted Monday as saying the nation's new regime may provide opportunity for a lasting truce between the government and the independent labor movement.

Government officials worked to resolve two lengthy sit-in protests by Polish farmers and students demanding independent unions. A spokesman for striking students in Lodz said the strikers were ready to sign an agreement and avert a threatened nationwide strike, but it was not immediately clear if such an agreement had been approved by the government.

Poland's government-owned newspaper, Zycie Warszawy, in what appeared to be a conciliatory move, carried a front-page interview with Karol Modzelewski, a spokesman and policy maker for Poland's largest independent union, Solidarity.

The publication of the interview with Modzelewski, who served six years in prison for criticizing the now-discredited regimes of Wladyslaw Gomulka and Edward Gierek, was noteworthy in itself because the Solidarity official had recently been criticized by the army newspaper and the party organ Trybuna Ludu for taking extreme positions on labor matters.

The interview came days after the government of Prime Minister Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, appointed in a government shakeup last week, asked Solidarity to guarantee a 90-day respite from the labor unrest it said had pushed Poland to the brink of chaos. Workers have refrained from new strikes since then.

"I think the new government, its personnel changes and principles create a real opportunity to turn back the dangerous course of events, particularly visible during the last weeks," Modzelewski was quoted as saying in a reference to a spate of wildcat strikes staged without the authorization of Solidarity's national leaders.

According to the newspaper, Modzelewski said he believed the new government could provide an opportunity for calm and added "I think both sides have good intentions and the consequent policy of dialogue will assure a truce not for three months but for good."

One day after Polish Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania made a surprise trip to Prague for talks with Czechoslovak officials, Polish Foreign Trade Minister Ryszard Karski went to the Czechoslovak capital for talks with his counterpart there, Andrej Barcak. The Czechoslovak news agency CTK said the two would discuss economic cooperation during 1981 and "its further development." It gave no other details, but sources in Prague said Czechoslovakia was certain to grant some aid despite its harsh criticism of events in Poland.

Healthy Moyer adds to Irish success

By ED KONRADY
Sports Writer

"He's not the best miler, he's not the best half-miler," Head Track Coach Joe Piane says of sophomore Jim Moyer. "But he is definitely up and coming in both of those areas."

Moyer, hailing from Downers Grove, Ill., has overcome injuries that have plagued his whole career to become an important asset to this year's Irish track team.

"He's very valuable in that we need him for the distance medley," Piane says. "We also need him to fill in at the half-mile or 1000-yard run in dual meets."

"Jim's strength is his strength. Combine that with the speed he's getting in, and I think he's going to make a superb miler and half-miler," Piane continues. "I think that his future rests in the 1500-meter run. If Jim continues to put in the work, he is going to make a real contribution."

Throughout his career, Moyer has been plagued with injuries. His senior year at Downers South High School, Moyer had to sit out his cross-country season because of shin splints and a hip pointer. However, he was able to recover in time to for the state qualifying track meet in the spring. Moyer qualified for the Illinois state meet in the individual half-mile run and the two-mile relay.

Last year, Moyer had a healthy cross-country season. The indoor track season started and Moyer suffered another injury.

"I wasn't used to running indoors," Moyer says. "The tight turns really take a toll on the ankles and knees. I aggravated an old high school injury, which kept me out both the indoor and outdoor track seasons."

The injury that has bothered Moyer the most is a strained muscle around the knee, commonly called "runner's knee". This occurs when too much pressure is put on the arch.

"Last summer I got some orthotics (customized arch supports) made," Moyer says. "They have really helped me so far."

However, Moyer was unable to escape injury this summer. "I had some tendonitis, which just didn't clear up in time, and training later this fall I aggravated it," Moyer says. "Instead of competing in cross country, I did therapy and iced it every day, which helped it come around. Over Christmas, I did a few track workouts, and I felt good enough to start with the track team."

This track season Moyer has been free from injury. In the 1000-yard run, which Moyer ran only once before this year, he has gotten a second-place and three third-place finishes, including last weekend's Indiana Big State Meet at Bloomington, where Moyer had a personal best of 2:14.0.

"My times aren't that great," Moyer readily admits. "But I'm improving each meet I run."

In the Knights of Columbus meet in Cleveland, Moyer ran a leg in the two-mile relay which came in second. Moyer and the rest of the relay team will be aiming for a 7:32 time so they can qualify for the Nationals in Detroit.

"My only goal right now," Moyer says, "is to stay healthy through the workouts and to run a good 880-yard split in the relay."

Having run the 1000-yard run a few times now, Moyer is developing a strategy that will suit his style more. "Usually, I go out with Chuck Aragon and Tim McCauley and try to stick with them through the race," Moyer says. "I think I'll have more success if I take the pace out a little quicker. If I go through the first quarter of the race at a good pace, I usually run a very good time. Chuck and Tim are content to sit back and wait. They both have a good kick. I don't have the leg speed to win a race by kicking, right now, so I have to run a consistent race where the quarter-mile splits are pretty even. So, Piane is anxious for me to start leading the race, and taking off by myself, instead of being on Chuck or Tim's shoulder."

Moyer, unlike many track stars, got a late start on his career.

"I started indoor track my junior year of high school," Moyer says.

"But it was more a keep-in-shape type of thing. My friends were all going out for it, but I was interested in football. I had pretty good success with the mile, and I came close to qualifying for the state meet."

"So, over the summer I ran with the coach and a few of my friends who ran cross-country. I did some long-distance training, and got shin splints," Moyer continues. "Although I was injured my senior cross-country year, I got healthy enough to start track and luckily all the injuries cleared up in time for the state qualifying meet. I got a fifth-place in the half-mile in the state meet."

Like many Irish athletes, Moyer did not come to Notre Dame to just participate in sports. "Primarily I came here because it is a good school," Moyer says. "It's close to home, it has a reputation for being an excellent academic university. My high school coach, Kevin Keough, ran cross-country in high school with Piane, and were pretty good friends. But that was a secondary consideration."

The stereotypical attitude of an athlete does not apply to Moyer at all. Moyer is a pre-med in the arts and letters program, and admits, "I'm pressed for time. I have to organize my time efficiently so I have enough time to study. On the weekends, one night is taken up by running, so I don't go out and party as much as the others. But I'm not complaining at all. I enjoy traveling, being able to run in the Cleveland Coliseum and seeing top-ranked runners. It is an experience I wouldn't have otherwise."

"Also, it's good to be able to know the other guys on the team better. I've been away from competition for a full year, but now we are developing the close friendship a relay team needs."

Advancement Does Not Require An Advanced Degree

You can spend another two to three years in graduate school or you can turn four years of liberal arts education into a practical, challenging and rewarding career in just three months—as an Employee Benefit Specialist.

Benefits today amount from 30 to 35 percent of wages and salaries. Recent pension legislation has created even more demand for trained specialists. As an Employee Benefit Specialist you'll be called upon to exercise your own judgement, initiative and intelligence in a challenging, professional environment with progressive responsibility.

The Institute for Employee Benefits Training is the first and most prestigious school in the United States, training Employee Benefits and Pension Specialists. This is a dynamic, growing career field in which advancement does not require an advanced degree. Our graduates are in demand by law firms, pension consulting firms, insurance companies, banks, and personnel and benefits departments of corporations. The Institute's Placement Service will place you too. If not, you will be eligible for a substantial tuition refund.

Furthermore, you will earn graduate credit towards a Master of Arts in Legal Studies through Antioch School of Law for all course work completed at The Institute.

If you're a senior of high academic standing and looking for a meaningful career, contact your Placement Office for our catalog and arrange to have an interview with our representative.

Notre Dame will host Saint Mary's tonight at 7 p.m. in the Rockne Memorial pool as the two teams clash in the water a second time this season. In the first meeting, the Irish overwhelmingly defeated the Belles, 101-29.

"We'll pretty much leave it up to the girls as to what event they will swim," said Frank Marcinkowski, who joins Rody McLaughlin as the Notre Dame coaches. "We're thinking of it as a fun meet rather than a competitive meet."

"We have a few girls that might try making a couple of time standards, but other than that most of the stronger swimmers will be swimming in their weak events to give some other girls a chance to swim in their strong events."

The Irish will attempt to set time standards which will qualify them for the AIAW Division III. The single flaw in Notre Dame's plans is at this point the Irish are not eligible for postseason competition — due to the team's lack of varsity status and a few other technicalities.

Janine Blatt, the AIAW all-time national freestyle record holder in the mile in Division III, usually swims the 500-yard freestyle for the Irish and then jumps right back in the pool for the 200-yard individual medley. Blatt, an All-America swimmer last season, will scratch in the 500 and attempt to qualify in the medley event.

Kathy Latino and Lee Ann Brislawn, both earning All-America accolades last season, have bettered standards for AIAW national qualifications. Latino has qualified in the 50-yard butterfly, while Brislawn has qualified in the 50 and the 100-yard backstroke.

The seven Belles' swimmers will be led by Mary Lenyo and Lucy Hanahan. Lenyo specializes in the butterfly races and the sprint freestyle events. Hanahan will compete in the long distance freestyle races.

"We've tried to practice sprints and work on a few of the finer points like starts and turns," said Belle's first-year head coach Mark Mamula.

Notre Dame owns a 4-3 record.

Admission to the meet is free.

lot of playing time, Gil does not regret his decision to attend Notre Dame. "As far as long-term goals, I feel Notre Dame is the best for me. I've grown as a person, outside of basketball. I've matured as far as accepting my roles on the team. I haven't played as much as I wanted to play, but I think not playing a lot has helped me to accept things about life."

Gil, an economics major, plans to work in labor relations. But first he will go to Europe to play basketball for a couple of years.

"I want to play out what I have in me. There's still basketball in me," Gil rationalizes. "When I'm 30 years old, and it's time to accept that I'm no longer an athlete, I want to feel that I played out what I had in me."

Gil has maintained an excellent attitude during his inactivity. He's been sitting on the Irish bench during every game, encouraging his teammates. He wasn't supposed to make the trip to the Maryland game (it was the day after his arthroscopy), but he decided that he had to go. "When someone is missing from a team," he explains, "the team doesn't run right. I had to go to the Maryland game. I had to be a part of the team."

Gil Salinas has accepted his role at Notre Dame. "I'm happy," he says. "If I had to do it all over again, I'd do it the same way. In the long run, coming to Notre Dame was the best thing for me to do."

As far as the rest of this season is concerned, Gil hopes he gets a chance to contribute on the court. "Time's running out for me," Gil says. "I want to contribute to the success of this team. I know it's within me. I've been sitting back thinking that I may never play basketball again. Either I do something now or I go home and play in the YMCA league."

Hopefully, for Gil's sake, the waiting is over.

Irish win no. 19

When you least expect it...

By CHRIS NEEDLES
Sports Writer

Somehow, somewhere, when you'd least expect it...

The old punch-line from "Candid Camera" would have made a perfect theme for Monday night's Notre Dame-Fairfield game at the ACC.

The Stags, who came into the game with an 11-10 record, were hardly a North Carolina State (whom the Irish manhandled on Saturday) or a Virginia (Notre Dame's next opponent on Sunday). All in all, they were an easy opponent to overlook.

But the Irish, after overcoming adversity of Hiroshima-like proportions, needed key free throws from senior Kelly Tripucka and sophomore Bill Varner in the last :15 to escape with a 57-55 victory. Varner started in place of senior tri-captain Orlando Woolridge, whose 14.9 points per game and .672 shooting percentage were sorely missed last night.

The outcome wasn't decided, however, until Fairfield's Mike Palazzi misfired on a desperation 25-footer and after Henry Foster's follow-up was ruled to have come after the final buzzer.

It was obvious from the beginning that the Irish would be in for a tough evening. Fairfield, copying Notre Dame's style of ball-control, tempo offense and a tenacious, switching defense, actually outplayed the Irish for most of the first half. When Foster hit a 10-foot bank shot to put the Stags up 27-19 with 6:04 left, Notre Dame and its announced 11,345 faithful realized that this was not to be your basic Valparaiso-style blowout.

The Irish closed within one, 33-32, at the half, thanks to the magic of guard John Paxson. The 6-2 sophomore scored seven points (including another buzzer-beater) in the last five minutes of the half to keep Notre Dame within shouting distance of the Stags, who shot an ungodly 71 percent for the half (69 percent for the game) after averaging 46 percent for the season.

The second half provided more of the same, and with 8:15 to play, Fairfield still led 47-42. The Stags suddenly went cold, going nearly seven minutes without scoring a point, while the Irish ran off 12 points in a row to take a seemingly commanding 54-47 advantage with 3:32 left. Then, for some reason Fairfield, a team comprised of mostly New York City area players, reverted back to its roots, commonly referred to as "playground basketball."

And it almost worked.

In the remaining three minutes, Fairfield got two 30-foot rainbows by sub Mike Aldridge, a broken ankle, a broken nose, and came within one jump-shot of sending the game into overtime.

Pass the brass knuckles.

"You've got to give Fairfield credit," said a relieved Digger Phelps after the game. "They played a smart, ball-control game. I think they were lucky to catch us between two big ball games. I also was pleased that we were able to come through at the end after playing as poorly as we did."

What Digger failed to mention was all the adversity his team had to overcome to win last night: playing without Woolridge, who was a victim of pink-eye; facing an emotionally-charged Fairfield team which was playing its final big game for its recently resigned coach, Fred Barakat; missing 11 free throws (out of 26), including four one-and-ones down the stretch; and, finally, being out-rebounded by the under-sized Stags, 20-19.

"It was one of those cases, for us, where we gave all the energy we had, a one-night affair," said a talkative Barakat, who despite the defeat resembled the proverbial child on Christmas morning. "On the other hand, Notre Dame, with their tough schedule, can't get up for every game. I'm glad we were able to take advantage of their let-down, but give them credit for not letting us beat them."

Fortunately for the 11th-ranked Irish, the game goes into the win column nonetheless, boosting their record to 19-4. But Phelps would just as soon not have any more of these unexpected scares.

Allen Funt, though, would have loved it.

IRISH ITEMS: Paxson led a balanced Irish scoring attack with 17 points and four assists, while Tripucka and Tracy Jackson chipped in 15 and 14, respectively... Palazzi, averaging only 8.5 points per game entering the contest, scorched the nets for 21 points, 15 in the first half. He was the only Stag to reach double figures... Woolridge's injury is not considered serious, and he is probable for Sunday's showdown in Chicago with top-ranked Virginia. Game time, despite what is listed on the ticket, is slated for 2 p.m. EST, 1 p.m. in Chicago... Fairfield's Rich D'Antonio suffered a broken ankle after hitting a lay-up to close his team within 54-49. Teammate Aldridge broke his nose, courtesy of an errant Varner elbow, as the two battled for the rebound at the buzzer.

Belles smash Grace, 82-51

By DAVE WILSON
Sports Writer

Saint Mary's basketball coach Jerry Dallessio says Kim Works does a nice job in her new position in the starting line-up for the Belles. That may be putting it mildly after Works scored 18 points and snared 14 rebounds in the Belle's 82-51 thrashing of Grace College Monday night at Angela Athletic Facility. Saint Mary's upped its record to 13-9.

"Works was super!" Dallessio said. "I think the move to a starting position has really boosted her self-confidence."

In perhaps their best offensive effort of the season, the Belles opened both halves of the contest by outscoring the Lancers, 12-2. Saint Mary's held a 22-8 margin after ten minutes and Dallessio was able to clear his bench before halftime. The lead was increased to eighteen with five minutes remaining, but Grace ran off eight straight points to pull within ten, 36-26.

In the second half, Dallessio returned to his starting line-up of Works, Maureen King, Tracy Hargreaves, Mary Pat Sitlington, and Anne Armstrong, as the Belles increased their lead to, 48-28. Saint Mary's second and third teams then proceeded to widen the margin to the final 31 points.

The Belles' persistent defense forced the Lancers to commit more than twenty turnovers in the game, and Dallessio feels the team has improved tremendously in this aspect of its game.

"They really hustled out there tonight," Dallessio said. "We had some terrific defensive efforts, and we're finally talking it up with each other."

Lisa Schirz also tallied 18 for the winners. Sitlington, Armstrong, Gretchen Meyer, and Karen Wallin all contributed eight. Rounding out the scoring was King with six, followed by Mary Bayless with four and Cyndy Short with three. Short had two blocked shots as well.

The Belles will meet the University of Indiana-Indianapolis Friday night in their final home game of the season. Game time is 6, as the Belles will be looking to extend their home-court winning streak to four.

Waiting in wings

Salinas awaits his chance

Gil Salinas is waiting.

The 6-11 senior forward has had to sit out Notre Dame's last twelve games due to a knee injury. In the ten games that he has played, Gilbert played just 71 minutes, scoring 32 points.

But Gil hopes to be ready for Fairfield's game against Virginia. He's been working out, and says the knee feels good. "I'm not sure of how the knee will react to the game situation, but I want to try it out," a gutsy Gilbert says.

Waiting has not been easy for Salinas. "Sitting out these last few games has been tough," Gil says.

"Especially in the UCLA game. I was enjoying the game, but I felt sad just sitting there, knowing I could contribute to the team."

"The time off has got me worked up inside. I want to be ready to play these last five games. Hopefully I'll be a part of Digger's game plan."

Having to wait is nothing new for Gil. He came to Notre Dame four years ago and has never consistently been a starter. "It's tough to be an All-American as a high school senior and then sit on the bench as a college freshman," Gil says. Then he missed most of the season during his sophomore year due to academic probation. More waiting.

"Last year I was playing, but not as much as I thought I would be.

But I've learned to take it as it comes. I work hard in practice, and accept whatever happens. If we win it all this year, it will all have been worth it."

Gil, along with the rest of his teammates, has been waiting for a shot at the national championship. As far as the final four is concerned, Gil says, "It seems like it will all go to waste if we can't make it this year. There are six seniors who have worked very hard on this team. It will seem like a waste of time and talent if we don't make it this year. But we're optimistic this year. I know this team can win."
