Murday seeks to make senate "effective body"

As president of the Notre Dame student body, Don Murday is called to act as a liaison between the administration and students as he deals with the many problems facing Notre Dame students. Observer senior staff reporter David Sarpike talked with Murday about the challenges of the coming year.

Q&A

Q: How will your administration differ from last year's student government?

A: Probably the most drastic change is that last year, Paul Riehle focused his administration on the establishment of the student senate and to try to work out all the bugs that might have prevented it from becoming a very effective body. He did so, and basically what he has done is turn the key over to me and said "Look, you have the foundation now to do something, and it's up to you to get the ball rolling." So, what we have planned for the senate is to address all the issues that pertain to the University, both on and off campus. We're going to try to make the senate an effective body by accomplishing certain goals that we have set for ourselves. Basically, these goals are to address major areas of concern that the students have.

Q: What effect will this have on the Campus Life Council?

A: I plan to use the CLC more often than Paul did last year. I believe Paul didn't use the CLC just for the fact that he was very busy in setting up the senate and felt that that's where his attention should be. I think the CLC is a very important body for the students in that not only is it just the students who are voicing their opinions and concerns but it's also the other facets of the school. That's very important because often these other facets are in concurrence with the students. It is also important because it will showcase to the students where the students stand and where the administration stands. I will not set a regular meeting for the CLC, however we will be meeting on an ad hoc basis to address the issues that arise that need the input of the CLC. A few examples are the re-evaluation of party rooms to get the input from the administration and from the rectors, who experience the problems first-hand. Sometimes, unfortunately, the students shut down any ideas other than their own. I'm a firm believer in having an open mind, and taking into account the concerns of the faculty and administration before making any decisions.

Budgeting committee awaits fund requests

By CAROL CAMP
News Staff

Under the guidance of Student Activities Director Jim McDonnell, a seven-member committee will determine the allocations campus clubs and organizations are to receive this year.

Students annually pay a $25 student activities fee. Revenue generated is then divided between student government, which receives 80 percent of the funds, and various campus organizations, which receive the remaining 20 percent.

The branches of Student Government that receive the majority of the funds include the Student Union, Ombudsman, Student Government, Off-campus Activities, Judicial Coordinator, and An Tostal. The remaining 20 percent is divided in several ways.

The majority of the money is earmarked for volunteer services.

McDonnell commented, "These people contribute services and time to help the less fortunate; thus, we try to provide as much funding as possible so they can do volunteer work. We want them to spend time helping people rather than raising funds."

The present appropriations system was adopted two years ago after it was determined that clubs and other organizations were being left "hard-pressed for funding." Under the previous structure, students were charged a seventeen dollar activity fee, which was then distributed between all facets of campus activities. McDonnell said Student Government did not receive enough money.

With the present system, clubs and special projects received as much as $32,800 last year. Student Government received an estimated $20-25,000 in additional appropriations last year.

To receive consideration for funding by clubs and organizations should submit seven copies of a written request to McDonnell (Office of Student Activities — 1st floor LaFortune) by Monday, Sept. 14. Forms are available at the SA office and require a description of the club and its membership. Each organization must also submit a proposed annual budget.

If funds are requested on an annual basis, a statement detailing of the previous year's financial situation must be filed in the Office of Student Activities during April or May prior to the beginning of the next school year.

This information is considered by the seven-member committee which McDonnell chairs. Committee members include: Sr. Judith (Volunteer Services Director), the Student Body President, Vice-President, and Treasurer. In addition, the SBP and the Student Activities Director are each permitted to appoint a student to serve on the committee. The goal of the committee is to determine all appropriations by October 1.

If a group wishes to appeal the committee's decision, it must submit its request in writing to the Director of Student Activities within one week of the announcement of appropriations or Oct. 1 (whichever occurs later). Appeals are heard on an individual basis, and the committee informs the group of the date and time of its appeal. Deadlines for the second semester are Friday, January 29, 1982 for appropriations, and Friday, February 12, 1982 for appeals.

Administration affirms stand on air controllers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration and organized labor widened their dispute yesterday over whether the administration is pursuing policies harmful to America's workers, with Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan vowing "no amnesty" for striking air controllers.

In nationally televised interviews timed to coincide with Labor Day, Donovan, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and Kenneth Blaylock, head of a large federal employees union, argued about Reagan's dismissal of controllers who began an illegal strike a month ago.

Donovan asserted the administration's position that "there will be no amnesty" for the nearly 12,000 fired controllers.

"I believe the most important message that could be given on Labor Day is that this is a nation of laws and that we cannot pick and choose those we will keep and those we will get rid of," he said on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

Kirkland and Blaylock, president of the American Federation of Labor, maintained in separate interviews that Reagan should rehire the controllers. They contended the nation's flight control system is suffering in their absence.

"He's established the fact that he's hard-fisted," Kirkland said of Reagan.

"What remains to be established is where the rest of him, where's the heart and where's the understanding of these people's problems that will make it possible to have a decent resolution of this problem that will ... restore these qualified people back to their jobs."

Interviewed on the CBS program, "Face the Nation," Kirkland said the air control system will "limp along, sharply curtailed, at great expense to the public, and I think the circumstances cry for a decent resolution" of the dispute.

On NBC's "Meet the Press," Blaylock suggested that the ousted controllers might have a better chance of getting their jobs back after the government has concluded its efforts to strip the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization of its right to bargain for workers.

But, Blaylock also said, "the controllers have had some very serious problems at the work site for years. Unless mechanisms are developed to address the problems that public workers have, there will be strikes."

Donovan asserted that Reagan's firm response to the air controllers strike should signal state and local government officials to hold the line against illegal strikes.

"There is not an ounce of gloating in this administration," over the firing of the controllers, he said, adding: "I would say, yes, the message is to follow the lead of the president in protecting the Constitution."

Placement Office initiates new computer system

By DAVID GUFFEY
News Staff

This week, the Notre Dame Placement office begins its annual efforts to bring prospective employers and students together with the help of a new computerized system.

Under the old system, students were assigned placement interviews on a first-come, first-serve basis. As a result, 50-75 students usually camped out in LaFortune on Sunday nights waiting to sign-up for interviews on Monday morning.

This year, there will be no need for interview seekers to line-up early on Sunday due to the new computerized method of assigning and assigning of interview slots. After initially registering with the Bureau, persons wanting interviews apply for them on Mondays and Tuesdays two weeks in advance.

The application, called the Interview Preference form, is fed into a computer which randomly assigns interviews based on the applicant's date of graduation, level of interest in the interview as indicated on the Preference form, and the number of interviews the person has already had.

Results are then posted in the Placement office, room 213 in the Administration building by the following Tuesday. Interview slots left blank by the computer may be taken by interested students at that time. On Wednesday those interview slots still not filled may be taken.

The Los Angeles district attorney's office has dropped drug charges against rock singers Sylvester Stewart and George Clinton. The Los Angeles Times reported yesterday that authorities discovered there was not enough of the suspicious substance that was found in their car to conduct tests. Stewart, known as Sly of the group Sly and the Family Stone, and Clinton, leader of Parliament-Funkadelic, were arrested Aug. 20 for investigation of possessing cocaine and paraphernalia. They were released on bail the same day. — AP

When Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin meets President Reagan this week, Israelis are hoping to see a spark of chemistry between two hard-line leaders who prefer action to words. Begin arrived Sunday in New York for a 10-day visit that includes meetings with Reagan on Wednesday and Thursday, talks with Jewish leaders and a visit with former President Jimmy Carter in Plains, Ga. Begin's attaché case is stuffed with problems. Chief among them are the U.S. sale of spy planes to Saudi Arabia, an alleged Palestinian arms buildup in southern Lebanon and the U.S. role in talks on Palestinian self-rule in Israeli-occupied territory. But sources who discussed the trip with Begin say his most crucial task in Washington is to get on well with the U.S. president and set a cordial personal tone for the next 3 1/2 years. — AP

The independent union Solidarity pledged yesterday to keep talking with Poland's Communist leaders "as the only way of avoiding a tragic confrontation." The remarks in a policy statement by the union's national secretary, Andrzej Ceinski, coincided with maneuvers by an estimated 100,000 Soviet troops in the western part of the Soviet Union bordering Poland. State Department officials said Friday in Washington the maneuvers may be intended to intimidate Solidarity, the only independent labor movement in the Soviet bloc. "It's no exaggeration to call (the events of the past year) a revolution, and its main force is Solidarity," Ceinski told the union's first congress since its founding in August 1980. — AP

Entrenched outside Lima, Peru, in dank tent camps are 420 Cuban refugees who call themselves "los olvidados," the forgotten ones. They are the remainder of a group that in 1980 occupied the Peruvian Embassy in Havana, an event which led to the eventual exodus of nearly 125,000 Cubans to the United States in a massive boatlift. The Cubans stranded on the outskirts of this city of 5 million people for 15 months say the United States reneged on a promise to take them in too. The Cuban refugees left in Tupac Amaru park say U.S. officials promised it would be only a 30-day stopover in Lima before a reunion with their friends and families in South Florida. In Washington, the U.S. State Department said the Cubans left in Peru have little chance of getting to America, which has virtually ended Cuban immigrations following negative public opinion caused by the boatlift. — AP

Monsignor John J. Egan, director of the University of Notre Dame's Center for Pastoral and Social Ministry, was honored last week by the Industrial Areas Foundation with a scholarship in his name. The presentation was made at the foundation's annual conference at the Dunrovin Retreat Center, Marine-on-the-St. Croix, Minn. The Father Jack Egan Scholarship is to be awarded annually by the foundation "in the spirit of Father Jack Egan for his untiring efforts and commitment to the work of the Foundation and its founder, Saul D. Alinsky." Edward T. Chambers, executive director of the foundation, said, "Father Egan's ministry to the Church, to Saul Alinsky and to the Industrial Areas Foundation is immense. He ranks in the front lines of the twentieth century greats. Few Americans have lived at the center of their commitments like Egan has. The nation, the Church, but especially the poor blacks, Hispanics and whites, honor and revere him." The Father Jack Egan Scholarship is designed to meet the tuition needs of potential organizers and leaders for national training programs which the Industrial Areas Foundation conducts. There were three scholarship recipients this year. — The Observer

In search of dialogue

As weeks go, last week was a particularly violent one around the world. In the space of seven days, bombs exploded, bullets were fired, and chaos ensued as groups made their statements for all to see. To refresh your memory, here's a brief summary of recent events:

• Vienna, Austria: Two died and twenty were injured as terrorists stormed a synagogue with guns blazing, while a bar mitzvah was in progress. It was later determined that one of the terrorists was a member of a guerilla unit of the PLO.

• Tehran, Iran: Seven died and thirteen were wounded, among them President Mohammed Ali Rajai and Prime Minister Javad Bahonar, as an explosion ripped through the prime ministry.

• Ramstein Air Base, West Germany: Eighteen Americans and two Germans were injured when a bomb went off in the joint US/NATO air command headquarters.

• Lima, Peru: Bombs were set off at the U.S. Embassy, the residence of U.S. Ambassador Edwin Corr, and the local offices of Coca Cola.

• Beirut, Lebanon: Unidentified gunmen opened fire on French Ambassador Louis Delamare as he was being driven back to his residence. Delamare died shortly thereafter from gunshot wounds to the head, chest, and abdomen.

It's hard to imagine that all of this happened in the space of one week. Looking back over this list of current events, I've begun to wonder what possible motives could justify any of these acts. Perhaps, as in the case of Iran, violence is viewed as a means of change. Former President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, speaking from his Parisian sanctuary, noted that as a result of the bombing, "victory is near."

It may be that these crimes were committed in an effort to bring attention to one's group or cause. For example, in the attack on the Viennese synagogue, one of the terrorists shouted "PLO! PLO!", as he wielded a machine gun and hand grenades.

Finally, it could be that violence has simply become a way of life in some parts of the world. One Iranian official declared that, in spite of the loss of their national leaders, the Islamic revolution would not be slowed down "by these unfortunate events, which we are always ready for."

Looking past justifications, or the lack thereof, I'm inclined to question the courage needed to carry out these activities. How brave does one have to be to throw hand grenades at a group of people who are participating in a religious ceremony? How much guts does it take to set off a bomb at an embassy? What is courageous about gunning down an unsuspecting diplomat? Take the weapons away from those who were responsible for these acts, and then ask if they are willing to further their cause.

Inside Monday

True men of courage will stand up for what they believe in. What separates these men from terrorists is that they will use non-violent methods to get their point across, as was the case with Martin Luther King, Jr. He once wrote that "courage breeds creative self-affirmation; cowardice produces destructive self-abnegation."

King's "creative self-affirmation" took the form of peaceful rallies and marches. While tangible changes didn't result overnight, at least people were made aware of the situation, and that is the first step in the search for a solution. Dr. King must have been aware of this when he wrote that "there is nothing more powerful to dramatize a social evil than the tramp, tramp of marching feet."

But this is 1981, not the mid-60s, right? Some say that such beliefs are outdated. I disagree. While murders and maimings were taking place all over the world last week, a group of Polish workers were preparing to celebrate the first anniversary of Solidarity, a union that has effected change without violence.

Last week Solidarity leader Lech Walesa spoke to the Polish people over national television regarding the impasse that had been reached in Solidarity's negotiations with the government for control of the media. He didn't tell people to bomb their local Communist headquarters, and he didn't encourage anyone to take to the streets with guns. Walesa simply said "if there are problems, we should talk."

Solidarity opened their first national congress on Saturday. There Walesa remarked that "we deliberate in a spirit of truth as free and reasonable men." Labor reforms have been a result of this dialogue. It's not hard to imagine how much would have been accomplished if, instead of strikes, violence had been used.

Walesa and his followers are demonstrating a courage that is rare these days. It takes a lot to stand up for your beliefs without a gun to serve as your "inspiration." Perhaps this is the key to change in our world. Looking back, little is different as a result of the violence of last week. Recalling Dr. King's words, "It (violence) leaves society in monologue rather than dialogue." Walesa has shown us that dialogue isn't such a bad alternative. We could use a lot more of it.

Constitutional Studies

Gaffney directs law center

By JIM MCCLURE
News Staff

Edward M. Gaffney, Jr. is the new Director of the Center for Constitutional Studies at Notre Dame Law School. Gaffney, who had served as Associate Director under Philip R. Moots since 1977, assumed his new post on July 1, 1981.

The Center for Constitutional Studies was founded in 1977 to analyze and research legal and public policy issues confronting independent institutions of higher learning. The center's work frequently deals with the unique and sometimes controversial problems confronting church-related colleges and universities.

Professor Gaffney, who did his undergraduate work at St. Patrick's College in Menlo Park, Calif. is a graduate of the Catholic University of America Law School where he earned a J.D. and a M.A. in History. In addition, Gaffney merited a LL.M. degree from Harvard Law School and the S.T.L. degree from Gregorian University in Rome. Gaffney has taught at Boston University Law School as well as teaching a course on law and religion at Boston College.

A member of the Washington, D.C. Bar, Gaffney did legal work with a public interest law firm which represented municipal utilities. Prior to his arrival at Notre Dame, he served for two years as an adviser on the policy staff of Attorney Generals Edward Levi and Griffin Bell.

When questioned as to what changes may occur in the center due to his new position, Gaffney responded that "we probably will step up more appearances before courts as a friend of the court."

The Center for Constitutional Studies occasionally takes part in selected litigation and gives testimony at administrative proceedings and legislative deliberations at both the state and federal level.

The center has filed amicus briefs (legal briefs submitted as a friend of the court) in such cases as EEOC v. Mississippi College, a case which according to a center brochure focused on "the statutory and constitutional authority of the federal government to regulate the employment practices of a Southern Baptist College" and also in Chess v. Widmar, a case which dealt with a Lutheran pastor who was denied access to minister on a public university's campus.

In another typical case, the center staff assisted counsel representing Grove City College, a college with strong Presbyterian ties, in litigation with the federal government which concerned the "relation between student aid and federal regulation."

Professor Gaffney has testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and most recently before the Senate Finance Committee where he testified regarding tuition tax credit legislation. Gaffney is quick to point out, however, that "we aren't lobbyists" and that the main purpose of the center is to "basically serve as a research center."

The Center for Constitutional Studies also publishes research on major policy themes. Two such publications are Church and Campus: Legal Issues in Religiously Affiliated Higher Education (University of Notre Dame Press, 1979) and The Federal Government and the Campus: Federal Regulation of Religiously Affiliated Higher Education (Notre Dame Press, 1980).

Gaffney was asked by the Observer to comment on the recent case where Oral Roberts University Law School faced a possible loss of accreditation by the American Bar Association since the school had a policy of only admitting those students who professed a personal commitment to Christianity.

Gaffney stated that "an independent school ought to be able to set its own standards," and pointed out that legislating acceptance to church-related schools could make matters worse. "You can't tell a synagogue not to hire a rabbi," he said.

He went on to say that "of course race or sex discrimination has no place in an ABA-affiliated institution."

The center has a national advisory board which determines policy for the organization. The board is chaired by University Provost

Timothy O'Meara. Board member come from many different faiths and denominations, and, as Gaffney noted, "this is a fairly unique situation. Not many organizations have a Baptist minister talking to a Jewish rabbi who's working with a Catholic priest." Gaffney added that "This is a national center represented by all faiths. We attempt to reflect that in our briefs and testimony."

Logan Center awarded the ND/SMC Council for the Retarded the distinguished Lee Slaughter Memorial Award for active participation in volunteer programs last year.

The award is annually presented to a group or individual who is committed to helping physically or mentally-disabled persons.

Logan Center, an institution located on the edge of the ND campus for mentally retarded children and adults, depends greatly on volunteer help. Parents of mentally retarded children founded the center in 1968.

"The rewarding feeling is really worth the effort."

with the Center find it "rewarding" and "beneficial."

Volunteer Mike Martinelli said "The rewarding feeling is really worth the effort. One does much for the kids with whatever limited potentials. One doesn't need any experience to become involved in helping others."

Students interested in volunteering their time can contact Volunteer Services (1.5 floor LaFortune) to find something which matches their interests.

This week the Placement office is sponsoring Placement Nights for each of the University's colleges. At that time more information about this new procedure, as well as interview techniques and employment outlook will be provided.

Director of Placement Robert Willemis stressed the importance of these meetings to graduating students' career planning and placement processes. Willemis pointed out the advantages of each system but declined to comment on which was preferable. "With the old system, interviews were on the open market where those students with the greatest interest went to the greatest inconvenience to get the interviews they wanted.

Q: Will there be an attempt to challenge the administration's policy on kegs?

A: The issue of kegs has always been a pivot between the students and administration. Over the years it has been the classic argument. I think it has gotten to the point now where the administration automatically turns off anything they hear about kegs just for the fact that they've heard it so many times. Even if we come up with a feasible proposal—one in which we show the administration that there will not be alcohol abuse and that the students are responsible enough to handle them—the administration will still stand against kegs. They always have, and they always will.

Q: What are your expectations about the success of the Chataqua coffeehouse in LaFortune?

A: I think that with this guarantee from the University, I'm sure this place will make a go of it this year. We're bringing in quality entertainment. In conjunction with the Nazz, I think we can make LaFortune the viable student center that we've been looking for. I think we can make it a place where people will walk through on Saturday nights to either go downstairs and listen to music or come upstairs and listen to music. Also, the middle floor will become a sort of crossroads of the University, where people know they will see their friends. Because of its central location between the quads, it is the perfect location or such a crossroads.

Q: With the increase in students, especially on the North Quad, will any changes be instituted in dining hall procedures?

A: I know the University was trying to persuade some of the dorms to eat at a particular dining hall to help alleviate some of the problems. But I think the long lines will continue as long as everyone eats at the same time. Now, if we express this concern to the administration and complain about the long lines at the dining hall, they're not going to go build a new dining hall. What they will do is tell us when to eat, and I think the students will be more opposed to that than waiting in line. So students are going to have to realize that if they don't want to wait in line, they're going to have to come a little earlier or a little later. Tara (Kenney, student body vice-president) has been looking into the policy of meal plans and into the establishment of a soup and sandwich bar. This would be open almost like continental breakfast is open after breakfast. That would help alleviate the problems of overcrowded lunches. She's also looking into alternate meal plans for on-campus students who don't want 21 meals every week.

Q: Will off-campus crime continue to plague Notre Dame, and what will your administration do to fight it?

A: Because many of the off-campus students live in South Bend's rough neighborhoods, I think crime will continue to plague them. It's scary out there, especially because most of these students aren't used to the poor surroundings. I know this fear first-hand, as I myself live off-campus. I think all we can do is ask for the cooperation of the South Bend Police Department. I also plan to invite some security officials to speak to the students during lunchtime at LaFortune. The only way to fight this crime is to take precautions against it.

IRA hunger strikers quit fasting on request of kin

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The mother of jailed Irish Republican Army hunger striker Lawrence McKeown removed him from the fast yesterday and an IRA splinter group said it would reduce its participation in the deadly protest.

McKeown is the second hunger striker in three days to be taken off the fast by his family and the fifth to leave the strike since it began March 1 at the Maze prison outside Belfast. Officials said McKeown had lapsed into a coma yesterday in his 70th day without food when his mother authorized medical attention for him.

Patrick Quinn's fast was ended by his family on July 31 after 46 days without food and Patrick McKeown's strike was ended Aug. 20 after 42 days. Another hunger striker, Brendan McLaughlin, gave up his fast May 28 after 14 days when doctors said he would soon die if his bleeding ulcer was not treated.

Shortly after McKeown's fast was ended, the Irish National Liberation Army, an IRA splinter group, said it would not replace Michael Devine, its hunger striker who died Aug. 20.

However, the INLA announcement said the IRA "can be sure of our full militant support for the campaign." One INLA member, Liam McCluskey, is among the five current hunger strikers and the organization gave no indication he would end his fast.

The group said it could no longer afford to contribute one INLA man to the hunger strike for every three IRA fasters because the British government is "far more intransigent than we had first expected."

"We have only 28 protesting prisoners," it said, "and if we continue to maintain this ratio all our prisoners will be dead within six months."

The IRA is seeking to end British rule in predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland and unite the province with the Irish Republic which is overwhelmingly Roman Catholic. The INLA split from the IRA in 1970 and at that time was considered to be more militant and farther to the left in its political views.

LOST/FOUND

To the burn in Prof. Gaski's 1TT3 Marketing class who found my wallet after class last Thursday and isn't man enough to give it back. — I am still offering you a large reward for its return but I guess by now you've decided to keep the money and the wallet. HOWEVER, I fail to see how you can get any benefit from having my driver's license and military ID, too. I hope you have half a heart and can return at least these two items. Just sink into Morrissey late some night and shove them under the door of Rm. 210, or at least just drop them somewhere on campus where some HONEST person can find them and return them. PLEASE give me a break.

By MARGARET GREENE
Sports Writer

After a disappointing initiation at the varsity level last season, Notre Dame women's volleyball coach Sandy Vanslager has had a year to work out a new winning formula. Combining her own expertise, demanding conditioning drills, and 12 cohesive members, the 1981 squad is putting its talents on the line less than two weeks from now.

Though last season saw a disappointing tally of three wins against 19 losses, Vanslager is quick to point out the improvements.

"The maturity of the team has greatly increased along with the intense enthusiasm the girls have both for their sport and their school," Vanslager says. "This positive attitude has set us on to the right track."

Another bright spot in the season outlook is the addition of Notre Dame volleyball's first scholarship athletes. Freshmen Mary Jo Hensler (Cincinnati, Ohio) and Josie Maternowski (South Bend, Ind.), along with junior Jackie Pagley (Miami, Fla.) bring to the squad superb athletic ability and have been awarded grants-in-aid.

All of this has led many to believe that for the first time, Notre Dame can be recognized as a volleyball school. This factor will greatly influence athletes looking for a school with both strong academics and a good volleyball program.

Vanslager is a firm believer in disciplined conditioning methods. Each practice begins with a warm-up jog quickly followed by jump training and exercises before the volleyball is even touched.

According to Vanslager, this intense training program has created much of the balance seen in the offense-defense aspect of the game.

"We have a lot of talent on the squad, and it is in a widespread range with little differentiation."

With the season opener only two weeks away, the team is finalizing their game strategies. While hoping for opening victories over both Valparaiso and Purdue-Calumet, the Irish are more anxious for their first home series slated for September 30 in the ACC pit.

Lastly comes defensive end, and Meyers once again has a wealth of talent at that position. "Both Jon Autry and Tony Belden are consistent performers who can be both physical and agile. We are very pleased with their progress, and Jon especially has played well recently."

All in all, one has to get the impression that Meyers' unit is sufficiently laden with the talent needed to get the job done in fine fashion. Despite some unproven performers, most show the intensity and intelligence to learn the skills and play the game in the traditional Notre Dame manner, an undeniably dismal prospect for the opposition.

IRISH ITEMS — Freshman center Tom Doerger underwent surgery Saturday and is lost for the season. The Cincinnati native went down with a knee injury in Friday's scrimmage... Tailback Phil Carter was held out of the practice session to nurse a hamstring pull... Freshmen Mark Bavaro (TE Danvers, Mass.) and Chris Smith (TB Cincinnati, Ohio) have impressed the Irish coaching staff with their performances in the last few practices... Sophomore John Mosley (Omaha, Neb.) has been moved to tailback in lieu of the knee injury which befell Tim Tripp last week... Friday's season-opening pep rally has been moved outside in anticipation of a large crowd inflicted with Faust Fever... Instead of the Stepan Center, the normal site, the rally will

"It's a lot easier with a Texas Instruments calculator designed to solve business problems."

Touch a few special keys on these Texas Instruments calculators, the TI Business Analyst-II™ and The MBA™, and lengthy time-value-of-money problems suddenly aren't lengthy anymore. You can automatically calculate profit margins, forecast sales and earnings and perform statistics.

And problems with repetitive calculations are a piece of cake for the MBA, because it's programmable.

These calculators mean business, and what they give you is time—time to grasp underlying business concepts, while they handle the number crunching. To make it even easier, each calculator comes with a book written especially for it, which shows you how to make use of the calculator's full potential.

Pre-Law Society
hears experts
on admissions

By ROBERT M. MAROVICH
News Staff

At the Pre-Law society's first meeting, an estimated 100 members gathered in the Library last week to hear campus experts speak on about getting into law school.

Dean Robert Waddock, Dean David Link of the Notre Dame Law School, and Professor Thomas Marullo all stressed the need for realistic approaches to law schools.

"The study of law is time consuming; make sure it is your profession before selecting a law school," Link said.

According to Vice-President Nat Walsh, the Pre-Law society has arranged a Mini-Caravan on October 14 from 4:30 to 11:00 p.m. The Caravan will feature several law schools who will be available to provide information for prospective students. Other law schools will be visiting Notre Dame at times to be announced.

Walsh said that other functions on the fall calendar include a writing workshop given by Professor Marullo on September 7, 8, and 9 at the library auditorium.

Other officers for the 1981-82 term are Eileen Wirley, president, Marie Spicuzza, secretary, John Senica, newsletter editor, and Katie Whelahan, SMC representative.

Experience keys front line

By MICHAEL OLENIK
Sports Writer

Upon initial inspection, the average Notre Dame follower would assume that the primary question mark on the 1981 squad would be the ability and depth of the defensive line.

After all, the loss of Scott Zettek and John Hankerd would be difficult for any team to handle, especially if their backups are relatively inexperienced. Yet the question doesn't seem so obvious when the situation is discussed with defensive line coach Bill Meyers. In fact, the third year Irish coach feels comfortable enough with his herd of linemen to have eight of them on the first team.

"As of right now, there are no first or second team linemen through our first eight players," says Meyers. "As long as we can stay in good health, we'll use two units on the defensive line. We feel very comfortable with the progress we've made so far and we expect things to run real well."

Meyers' expectations are based on the much improved play of the line thus far this fall, and on the fact that he has some very good athletes waiting to prove themselves in the pits.

With the existence of some seasoned and talented interior linemen, much emphasis has been placed on tutoring a new defensive end and establishing a new position referred to as contain tackle. The man who has handled the position best in practice has been senior Pat Kramer. The 6-4, 250-pound native of Colton, Wash., has performed in outstanding fashion in a position that seems to suit him well.

"I really enjoy playing the position because it is a true defensive tackle position," offers Kramer. "Actually, it is somewhat similar to our alignment last year, so there wasn't any problem with adjustment. We feel that we can play well against any type of offensive system, including an option offense such as the veer," a reference to the offense used by this week's opponent, LSU.

Although the Tigers put on a disappointing show in a 24-7 loss to Alabama Saturday night, Kramer sees no reason whatsoever for using the game as a valuable judge.

"They are a much more dangerous team than they looked against Alabama," says Kramer. "They have the potential to be a very good team, and that's where our depth will help us. The people playing with me and behind me are all good, so there should be no problem with getting worn down."

Alongside Kramer in the present alignment is Kevin Griffith, a fallen warrior from last year who has found himself back in the running for some extensive playing time. Meyers says that Griffith "is the guy who has the capability of making the big play because he's agile, strong and intelligent."

Despite practicing mainly at end this fall, Griffith has been switched to contain tackle due to an injury problem with Mike Liebenstein and freshman Mike Golic.

At nose tackle are proven performers Joe Gramke and Bob Clasby, both of whom do extremely well at containing and offsetting the opposing center.

"My job basically is to make the center ineffective and to free the linebackers to make the tackles," says Gramke.

As Meyers sees it, Gramke seems to perform his task well.

"Joe is a great team leader who works very hard every day. An added plus is that he is a very smart player, which is an immeasurable asset."

Meyers also had some pleasant words about Clasby, a junior.

"Bob is big, strong and tough, which is very important for the position he plays. He jams up the middle well and will definitely help us a lot this year."

The third tackle position in this revamped defensive line is the flip tackle, presently occupied by Tom Bock and Tim Marshall. Although Bock has seen limited playing time for the Irish, Meyers sees him as a big contributing force in the Notre Dame defensive game plan.

"Tom Bock is a tough, hardnosed player who is extremely physical and well suited for the flip tackle position. He also is very willing to work hard at what he does, and that impresses me."

Marshall needs no major introduction, since he opened many eyes last season as a heralded freshman. This year should be no different, as he expects to contribute throughout the year. "Although I'm still learning some new and different techniques from coach Meyers," Marshall admits. "I think I'll be ready to play once the season comes around. I just hope I can help as much as possible."

Kiel gets starting nod for opener against LSU

By KELLY SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Coach Gerry Faust and offensive coordinator Tom Lichtenberg have begun preparations for the LSU game by naming sophomore Blair Kiel the starting quarterback for Saturday's contest.

Kiel, a starter in Notre Dame's last 9 games during the 1980 season, has battled senior Tim Koegel for the number one nod since last spring, but his performance during Friday's closed scrimmage earned him the call. Kiel was 10-for-13 passing in addition to putting on a fine running demonstration.

"We feel both of the quarterbacks are pretty equal, but we had to make a decision," explained Faust. "We didn't want to wait. Blair has been coming on a little sharper the past few days, and he had a better scrimmage Friday, so we have to go with him right now."

Koegel turned in a solid performance as well, going 8-for-15 passing. "Tim will play Saturday, and he'll play with the first unit," said Faust. "We feel we can win with any one of our quarterbacks. But we wanted to name a starter now to get some continuity going this week."

Intense competition has also been waged in the backfield this fall, and it looks as if Larry Moriarty will open up at number one fullback, although Faust said a final decision won't be made until about Wednesday.

"You can wait until midweek with linemen or running backs, but not with quarterbacks — you've got to know early."

On defense, Faust anticipates alternating two separate front lines. "We'd like to play a lot of the kids, as long as we've got the depth. We may even run two backfields with the number one line. We'll just have to wait and see."

Connors survives scare; Borg beats Carter

NEW YORK (AP) — "I dodged a bullet," Jimmy Connors said after barely beating back an upset bid by Andres Gomez of Ecuador Sunday and advancing to the fourth round of the U.S. Open tennis championships.

"I played great in some spots," Connors said. "He played great throughout. I don't think you've seen as many forehands like that from anyone. He goes all the way into the stands to hit a forehand."

The battle wasn't decided until Connors fired only his second ace of the match to win a fifth-set tiebreaker 7-5.

On the winning point, Connors swung his serve wide to Gomez' forehand, and the gritty left-hander just watched it as it hit on the line. It ended a dramatic 4-hour, 23-minute battle that saw both players repeatedly question line calls.

"I thought maybe the serve was out," Gomez said. "I was so nervous that maybe I wanted them all to be out."

But when it was over, Connors had won the bitterly contested battle 6-7, 6-3, 6-1, 4-6, 7-6, while Gomez had won respect.

The No. 2 seed, Sweden's Bjorn Borg, swept past David Carter of Australia 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 in his attempt to capture his first U.S. Open.

Carter was never in the match as the nearly full stadium of 20,146 watched the "Swedish Machine" carve up his opponent.

Two seeded players fell Sunday: Mike Cahill eliminated 12th-seeded Johann Kriek of South Africa 4-6, 6-2, 6-1, 6-4, while 17-year-old Barbara Gerkin a high school senior from Thousand Oaks, Calif., upset the women's No. 7 seed, Wendy Turnbull of Australia, 7-5, 6-3.

"I played great in some spots . . . he played great throughout."

In other third-round matches, eighth-seeded Elliot Teltscher defeated Vijay Amritraj of India 6-2, 6-4, 6-0; No. 9 Roscoe Tanner ousted Chris Mayotte 7-6, 6-1, 6-1 and No. 16 Brian Gottfried eliminated Tim Mayotte 6-2, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6.

In the women's singles, fourth-seeded Martina Navratilova crushed JoAnne Russell 6-2, 6-1, while No. 11 Barbara Potter downed Lindsay Morse 4-6, 6-2, 7-5.
