Reagan, Begin chart course

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Israel have decided to undertake joint military measures to guard the Middle East against the Soviet Union and other "eternal threats," Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said yesterday.

Haig told reporters the two governments were drafting a memorandum to formalize the new ties set by President Reagan and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin during two days of talks at the White House.

"We are talking about joint planning, collaborative studies and efforts which focus on external threats to the region," Haig said. Specifically, he said, the United States and Israel might conduct joint naval exercises and Begin would discuss with William Casey, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, sharing information gathered by U.S. spy satellites.

Additionally, Haig said, the United States might store medical supplies and other equipment in Israel for use by American forces in an emergency. But Haig and Begin, who held a separate news conference, stressed that American troops would not be used for the defense of Israel.

Earlier, Begin renewed his attack upon the pending U.S. arms deal for Saudi Arabia despite his "Agreement in principle" with Reagan on closer security ties for his own nation.

And, after declaring earlier in the day that "It's not for me to give signals to congressmen and senators," Begin took his case against the administrator's $8.5 billion Saudi package to committees of both the House and Senate.

"We brought maps; we brought numbers and facts," Begin told reporters after a closed meeting with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"We stand by our statement that it is a real, direct, serious

Notre Dame remembers Nieuwland discovery

By GREG SWIERGZ
News Staff

The 50th anniversary of the development of neoprene, the synthetic rubber resulting from the Notre Dame research of the late Rev. Julius A. Nieuwland, will be celebrated at a dinner tonight in the Center for Continuing Education.

Among those attending the event will be members of the advisory councils of Notre Dame's Colleges of Science and of Engineering, officials and faculty members of the University, and representatives of E.I. DuPont de Nemours and Company, Inc.

Nieuwland's discovery of the first general purpose synthetic rubber was announced on November 2, 1931 to the American Chemical Society. The process, which allows copper to serve as a catalyst in the polymerization of acetylene, culminated nearly six years of research.

Participating in the dinner program will be Dr. Robert E. Gordon, vice president for Advanced Studies; Dean Frank J. Castellino of the College of Science; Dr. Roger E. Drexel, vice president-Polymer Products for DuPont; Edmund A. Stepan, chairman of Notre Dame's Board of Trustees; and Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, University president.

Dean Castellino states that Nieuwland's discovery has greatly enhanced the College of Science. Monies from the neoprene, Castellino says, fund the annual Nieuwland Lectures in Chemistry series. The lectures are given by Nobel Laureates and National Academy of Science members, who "make (the University) visible to outside scientists all over the world," Castellino said.

Belgian-born Nieuwland graduated from Notre Dame in 1899. He was ordained in 1903 and received his doctorate a year later from the Catholic University of America. With knowledge in both botany and chemistry, he founded the American Midland Naturalist in 1909 and was its editor for 25 years. He became a professor of chemistry in 1918 and served as the dean of the College of Science from 1920 to 1923. He died while visiting the Catholic University on June 11, 1936.

Four concentration areas

Student leaders study issues

Editor's Note: This story is the first of a series on student government by Greg O'Meara, student government publicity director.

Student Government is implementing a broad-based program to deal with the needs of a diverse student body. Today's article will examine some topics of concern under study by SBP Don Murday and his cabinet.

Don, Rosemary Canino, Pat Borchers, and SBVP Tara Kenney are drafting a report evaluating and complementing the PACE (Priorities and Commitments for Excellence) study Provost O'Meara is submitting to the Board of Trustees. Kenney outlines four areas of concentration the committee sees as vital to any consideration of future University goals. The central theme of the student report deals with the overcrowding which affects the ND community.

The students point out insufficiencies in On-Campus housing study areas in both the library and the dorms, and in the inability of the Placement Bureau to deal with student needs. The major thrust at this part of the study focuses on the need for a more effective student center on campus. Other problems examined included student dissatisfaction with crime both on and off-campus, maintenance in the dorms, and problems with the infirmary and Psychological Services.

Of course, many of the concerns outlined in the PACE report are presently the subject of study by individual Cabinet members. Housing Commissioner Pat Borchers is presently working with developers to examine the feasibility of building townhouses and apartment complexes designed for student occupancy. Pat is also surveying dorms to determine what specific needs must be met in each hall. (Pat's work is being complemented by Special Projects Coordinator Rick Butler who is looking at everything from the quality of the water in hall fountains to the possibility of a 24-hour money machine on campus in conjunction with the Credit Union.)

Eric Vey, Off-Campus Commissioner, is looking into the idea of a co-op for students and their neighbors in the five-points area. By joining this organization, people would have the opportunity of buying food and other items at wholesale prices. Vey is also working with Rich Fischer and Brian Conway as they examine the security of ND students. Suggestions presently being considered are emergency telephone services in quieter parts of campus, improved campus lighting, and an on-campus ambulance service. Rich and Brian are coordinating the escort service which will resume later in the semester.

Darlene Sowell heads the Interracial Concerns Commission. In addition to overseeing social and cultural activities, Darlene is working with the Administration to discuss policies and procedures on the admission of various minority students and their adaptation to student life.

SALEM*Ore. (AP)--Duane Samples majored in psychology at Stanford University, was voted president of his fraternity, boxed as an amateur and skied on weedinds. That was in 1964.

Samples now jogs on a prison track and studies psychology from a cell at the Oregon State Penitentiary where he is serving a life sentence for murder.

Between the campus in California and the prison in Oregon, there was Vietnam.

Samples says the trauma of a year in combat shaded his life after he came home in April 1967. The decorated veteran drifted through jobs and drugs. Then, in 1975, he acted out what psychologists termed a lurid sexual fantasy by slashing two women with a 10-inch knife. One died.

"I know I wouldn't be here if not for Vietnam," Samples, 39, said in a prison interview. "No one can claim Vietnam takes away their responsibility for what they did, but there were local district attorney and the inmate's friends and family.

People on one side claim Samples is a rehabilitated man and no longer a threat to society. They attribute the killing to post-Vietnam delayed stress syndrome and say five years of behind-bars private therapy cured Samples.

The other side discounts the Vietnam theory and says Samples' problems date back to adolescence. Diane Ross, the woman who survived, told Gov. Vic Atiyeh she would fear for her life if Samples were released.

Reagan airs budget

President Reagan YESTERDAY GAVE HIS Cabinet its first look at the new round of budget cuts he wants, which likely will include a virtual across-the-board trimming next year and total reductions of $30 billion in fiscal 1983 and $44 billion in 1984. The Pentagon budget will be one of those targets for cutting and sources who decline to be named said only a few "sacred cows" would escape the budget axe. Chief White House spokesman David R. Gergen told reporters after the meeting that Reagan still has not decided how deep to cut the defense budget. But, Gergen said, the other departments were given a range of figures to work with, pending the final decision on Pentagon spending. For fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1, the department heads were told to expect across-the-board cuts, Gergen said, but he refused to reveal the percentages being discussed. - AP

Grand jury investigates Cody

A federal prosecutor said yesterday he has received allegations that Cardinal John P. Cody spent church money improperly, and a newspaper said a grand jury is investigating whether he gave up to $1 million to a childhood friend for such items as a home, a luxury car and furs. The Chicago Sun-Times said in a copyright story that the jury is investigating whether the 73-year-old archbishop of the nation's largest Roman Catholic archdiocese used the money to enrich 74-year-old Helen Dolan Wilson of St. Louis, who is Cody's cousin by marriage.

The Chicago Archdiocese denied any misuse of church funds and Mrs. Wilson, who retired from an $8,000-a-year clerk position for the St. Louis archdiocese in 1969, denied receiving any money from the cardinal. The sun times said the grand jury has issued subpoenas for financial records of the arch-diocese, the cardinal and Mrs. Wilson. - AP

U.S. crime rate rises

The number of major crimes in America surged by 9 percent again last year and only one out of five resulted in an arrest, the FBI REPORTED YESTERDAY. The rise in the 1980 crime rate was the second substantial increase following three years of relative stability. The crimes counted were murder, forcible rape, robbery, aggravated assault and the non-violent crimes of burglary, larceny and theft and motor vehicle thefts. The 9 percent increase in 1980 followed an increase of 9.1 percent the previous year. By contrast, the 1978 increase had been only 2 percent, the 1977 rate dropped 3 percent and there was no change in 1976. But the 13,295, 400 serious crimes reported in 1980 represented an increase of 55 percent over the number reported in 1970. The population increased by only 9 percent from 1970 to 1980. - AP

NATO sponsors war games

The armies of the Western alliance, faced with the growth of the Soviet navy and cuts in their own budgets are holding large-scale war games this month in the muddy fields and cold seas in and around Belgium, where a real battle for Europe would take place. More than 400,000 North Atlantic Treaty Organization soldiers, sailors and airmen are taking part in the maneuvers, which include the airlift of 17,000 U.S.-based soldiers to Europe in the annual "Reforger" reinforcement exercise. The NATO maneuvers, which will reach a peak of activity in mid-September, are designed to test how well allied troops work together and how quickly the United States could come to the aid of Western Europe if there were a Soviet attack from land and sea. - AP

Sick of the Fighting Irish

Notre Dame, home of the Fighting Irish.

Around these parts, that is a proud claim. But a couple of thousand miles to the east, there is little pride to be gleaned these days from that pugilistic nickname. In fact, for many Irish, the pervasive adjective preceding their nationality is constant grim reminder of the sectarian violence that continues to eat away at the Emerald Isle's social fabric.

During recent months, Irish troubles have figured more prominently on American newspaper front pages and news broadcasts than at any time since the major upheavals and riots of the late sixties. Seldom in the past fifteen years has the situation in Ireland been so frequently reported to the American public as during the year 1981 — a year to be remembered darkly for the re-institution by Bobby Sands and Company of the ancient Irish protest of death by starvation.

My purpose here is not to give any new gruesome details of the ongoing tragedy that is progressing each day at Belfast's Maze Prison — and in the streets of Catholic and Protestant neighborhoods of the North. Nor will I offer any new solutions to the problem. We have heard too much of both failed solutions and broken promises.

Let's think for a moment, however, about the way in which Americans — and the Notre Dame community in particular — has reacted to this flood of media attention on Ireland.

We've read and listened to the stories about Ronald Reagan's alleged blood ties to ancient Irish nobility. And we've watched, some with humor, others with impatience, the comparisons between the childhood years of Reagan and Tip O'Neill as part of working class immigrant Irish families. And the "Camelot" mystique of the Kennedy clan is inseparable with the Irish background of the family.

Yet when was the last time that the black hole of Northern Ireland's political and religious dilemma warranted attention by a U.S. Secretary of State? Or a Vice-Presidential visit? Or even a Congressional junket?

Likewise, any glance at a Notre Dame-Saint Mary's phone directory reveals a plethora of Irish names. Yet I do not recall any major campus symposiums or marches on the question of the Irish politics in recent months.

The University has many links with Ireland, both academically and socially, but why don't we have more access to knowledgeable and qualified speakers on the problem? Notre Dame's only class this fall on Irish history has even been cancelled.

We are seriously concerned with rapid deployment forces and "strategic consensus" in other areas of the world while the Central Intelligence Agency is being beefed up to destabilize regimes from the Caribbean to the East Indies. And don't forget the constant concern over internal problems in far-off Afghanistan or even

John McGrath
Editor in Chief

Poland.

Likewise, if Notre Dame continues to pride itself on the athletic, academic, and historical legacy of the fighting Irish, why can't Ireland qualify for the same degree of attention and productive discussion that has been focused on El Salvador?

Considering the number of Irish-Americans in politics across the nation, and the enormous body of Irish-American citizens, the U.S. should have profound influence in the Northern Ireland crisis. In the seventies, Sen. Edward Kennedy, Gov. Hugh Carey, and Speaker O'Neill formed a rather loose discussion group to discourage the underground pipeline of gun-money and weapons being sent by well-meaning but misdirected Irish-Americans to IRA caches in Eire. Political difficulties taken all the wind out of the group's sails.

What can be done? Certainly more than what is being undertaken now. The situation in Northern Ireland is fundamentally different from the state of affairs in Lebanon, Iran, or El Salvador. These are independent nations; Northern Ireland is not. Their problems are essentially political; Northern Ireland's troubles center on religion and economic conditions.

However, if the U.S. can convince Britain to allow American cruise missiles, some with nuclear warheads, to be stationed on British soil, certainly America's power of persuasion (and economic and technical assistance) could be applied to the Irish problem.

The wounds of hundreds of years of religious and economic difficulties will not be easily healed in Ireland, and the process will take more than a wink of an eye to complete. But the Camp David treaties brought together the militarily, religiously, and politically divergent nations of Israel and Egypt, and remarkable progress has been achieved in the span of several years.

The only difference appears to be the amount of effort that the U.S. is willing to exert in its handling of the Irish problem.

The time has come for Ireland to be thought of less as a tourist attraction — that just so happens to have a few religious and economic problems — and more of as a bona fide world trouble spot worth the serious attention and full potential of both the United States and Notre Dame.

O'Connor favors death penalty

WASHINGTON (AP)--Sandra Day O'Connor, treading cautiously toward Senate confirmation as a Supreme Court Justice, said yesterday she supports the death penalty for some crimes and is opposed to forced busing to desegregate public schools.

In her second day of testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Mrs. O'Connor said she twice spoke personally with President Reagan before she was announced as his choice to become the first woman justice on the court.

She declined to describe those conversations, but said no promises were made on how she would vote on any particular issue.

I was not asked (by Reagan) to make any commitment concerning . . . how I would resolve any issue that might come before the court,"

O'Connor said in the answer to a series of questions from Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

She said it would be improper to discuss what subjects she talked about with Reagan during those conversations, one which was held at the White House.

Mrs. O'Connor said her views on forced busing were shaped by a childhood experience of riding 75 miles in a daily roundtrip on a bus from her home on an Arizona ranch across the desert to school.

"I found that very disturbing to me as a child," she said, "I am sure that other children who had to ride long distances as a child shared that experience."

While emphasizing she was not talking about constitutional or legal reasons for or against busing, she said that as a device for integrating schools it "can be a very disruptive part of a child's educational program."

As an Arizona state senator she favored legislation urging federal legislation forbidding busing for desegregation, she said.

On the death penalty, Mrs. O'Connor recalled sponsoring legislation to revive capital punishment after the Supreme Court struck down statutes in most states, and then applying the same statute later as a state judge.

"I felt it was an appropriate vote then and I have not changed my view," she said.

However, she added without elaboration that she opposed legislation in Arizona which made the death penalty mandatory for some crimes.

There were continued statements of support from most committee members.

Board of Governance slates events

By CINDY COLDIRON
News Staff

Plans for participation in the College Bowl were one of the items on the agenda of this week's Saint Mary's Board of Governance meeting.

CALLED AN "academic sport of the mind," the College Bowl consists of two teams competing to answer questions of a liberal arts nature, ranging from biology to sociology. This year Saint Mary's need ten teams, composed of four members each, with a faculty member or administrator serving as coach.

The winning team from Saint Mary's will go to Illinois State University where they will meet other teams from the midwest. This competition will take place in early March.

Registration for the College Bowl began this week and will continue through Oct. 14. Interested students are invited to come to an orientation meeting on Sept. 29. All competition will take place in Carroll Hall.

The Board also discussed plans for a "College Career Day," scheduled for later this month. Heading up a list of twelve speakers will be keynote speaker Juliet Noon Lester, a 1955 graduate of Saint Mary's, who will speak on the value of a liberal arts education. The Board encouraged Saint Mary's and Notre Dame women to attend.

A "tail-gater" with the alumnae of Saint Mary's is slated for Saturday, Oct. 10, the day of the Florida State game. The purpose of this activity, according to Student Body President Eileen Murphy, is "to provide more interaction between the students and the alumnae of Saint Mary's."

The Board also announced "Energy Awareness Week," scheduled for next week with proposed activities including a bin for recyclable cans to be placed between the dining hall and the parking lot; an orientation and movie regarding energy; and two guest speakers, Mary Failey from the U.S. Department of Energy, and Dr. V. Paul Kenney, of the Physics Department of Notre Dame.

Finally, the student government announced that it will post petitions to show their solidarity with people protesting the budget cuts for the needy on social programs.

Soviets conduct maneuvers

COPENHAGEN* DENMARK (AP)—A Soviet armada of 60-80 ships, one of the largest such fleets seen in the Baltic since World War II, moved south along the Soviet coastline yesterday as part of widespread military exercises, Scandinavian intelligence reports said.

The Danish Defense Intelligence Service predicted landing exercises would take place near Baltiysk, 15 miles north of Poland, by the weekend.

A Danish spokesman said the aircraft carriers Kiev and Leningrad were part of the fleet that massed overnight off Ventspils on the Latvian coast and was moving in formation through heavy fog.

The ships are passing through waters just off the Byelorussian and Baltic defense areas, where nearly 100,000 Soviet troops are reported on maneuvers.

Similar war games by NATO forces are under way, with the land portions to begin next week. An estimated 400,000 NATO troops are involved in 26 separate exercises in the Atlantic, the Baltic and in Europe.

A Danish intelligence officer, speaking of the Soviet exercises, said "We think the landing exercise will be near the Baltiysk Sea, where they should arrive by midday today."

Baltiysk is about 50 miles from Gdansk, Poland, where the Polish independent union Solidarity is concluding its first congress.

The official Soviet agency tass has accused the congress leaders of trying to seize political power in Poland.

In Washington, the State Department said Moscow appears intent on reminding its allies and Poland in particular about its "military might."

danger to the security of Israel," he said.

"We do not as Israeli citizens interfere with discussions between the two branches of the American government," Begin said. "But as members of the government... we are duty bound to tell the innermost truth and we believe that this problem is very dangerous to our national security."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate committee said most of the hour-long meeting was spent questioning Begin in detail on reasons for his opposition.

Earlier, after Begin's third and final meeting with Reagan at the White House, both leaders hailed their new understanding over closer strategic ties as a firm barrier to Soviet penetration in the Middle East.

Begin said his defense minister, Ariel Sharon, would meet today with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger "to implement that weighty decision."

Later, Begin told Israeli correspondents he hoped to have a memorandum of agreement before leaving Washington late today. Among the measures that could be under consideration are the prepositioning of U.S. arms in Israel for use by American troops in an emergency and giving Israel access to information gathered by U.S. spy satellites.

Questioned about his stand on Reagan's projected arms sale to Saudia Arabia, the Israeli leader stiffly rejected any suggestion he had agreed to muffle his criticism in return for a presidential promise to strengthen "strategic cooperation" between the United States and Israel.

The $8.5 billion arms package due to be put to a vote next month in Congress, would provide Saudi Arabia with the means to reach Israeli territory with U.S.-built jet fighters and to conduct wide-ranging surveillance from five Boeing radar planes.

New phone system

University plans expansion

By SONYA STINSON
NEWS STAFF

The University will implement a new telephone system for administration and faculty members effective in January 1982, that will switch all faculty and administration lines to a Dimension electronic touch-tone method for telephone communications.

This system is more efficient than the mechanical Centrex system in which the telephones have rotating dials now utilized by students and faculty.

Bro. Kieran Ryan, assistant vice-president of Business Affairs, said that once the Dimension system is installed, the University will use the Centrex system exclusively for student lines. The change will allow the much needed expansion of the capacity for telephone services or accommodate the increasing influx of students.

"We have reached the limits of the Centrex system, which has 5,000 lines," said Bro. Ryan. "The choice was either to install another Centrex or go to the new Dimension system. We wanted to avoid putting in another Centrex system."

Under the current Centrex service, 3,100 of the 5,000 lines are used for student telephones, with the remaining 1,900 lines for faculty and administration. The separate system will allow up to 5,000 lines for student use.

Telephone numbers for administration and faculty will begin with 239 instead of the current 283 prefix. Students and faculty who wish to reach one another by phone will have to dial a 7-digit number.

Bro. Ryan said that the new system will facilitate the order and convenience of on-campus communications, and that the efficiency of communication is the reason all on-campus students are provided with a non-optional telephone service.

"We simply cannot allow the situation in which a student is unable to be reached by phone," he stated.

At one time the student telephone service was optional, he said, but the method was disorderly and impractical because of the required installation and removal of telephones from year to year.

The charge for student services is determined by an assessment of the total cost of telephone services for everyone which is divided "as equitably as possible" among all the students, taking into account the various types of student accommodations (singles, doubles, quads, etc.). The charge per student ranges from $40-60 a year.

Students must charge all long distance calls to a separate billing number provided by Indiana Bell. Recently, many students have complained of difficulty in getting through to outside operators when trying to make long distance calls, especially on weekends.

When asked to comment, Bro. Ryan said that the inconvenience is due to the limited number of outside lines available compared to the number of students trying to make calls.

"With only 120 outgoing lines, we cannot accommodate everyone at once," he said.

The lines are especially busy around 11 P.M. each night and on weekends, when students try to take advantage of lower rates. According to Bro. Ryan, there is nothing that can be done about the situation.

St. Francis Shoppe features
Third World craftsBy ROGER WILKE
News Staff

Few people have heard of The Saint Francis Shoppes or know that the main shop for the country is right here on the Notre Dame campus.

Located on St. Mary's road, next to the Fatima Retreat Center, the "Shope" is a volunteer, non-profit organization created to give people from Third World countries a market for their handcrafted goods.

In 1977, Fr. Ken Maley, a pastor in South Bend, travelled to Mexico. While there, he saw many people who had no livelihood except for the hand-made goods they sold in the streets. Fr. Maley bought these goods, returns to South Bend and sold them. In this way, he was selling the crafts for a low price in the United States and also supplying the Third World people with an income. Soon, Fr. Maley was selling enough goods to open a shop, that is The Saint Francis Shoppe here on campus.

The Saint Francis Shoppe was started with two goals in mind.

The first was to help people who have no income or alternative way of life and the second was to make the American people aware of the lifestyles, values, and customs of other countries.

The shop accomplishes the first goal by buying individual's goods from areas such as Mexico, Asia, and Africa and selling them without a profit in the United States.

The second goal in accomplished when customers visit one of the shops. The "Shope" at Notre Dame has six rooms full of handmade objects. It features jewelry, charms carved animals onyx objects and religious articles at low prices.

Mr. Michael Varga runs the shop which is open Monday through Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. He emphasizes that the shop is on campus and "is a non-profit organization solely for the benefit of the people it buys from."

Varga continued, "The results of our work are both tangible and intangible. They have to do

Brown changes image, prepares for campaign

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Last year, Jerry Brown was humiliated in the Democratic presidential primaries and ridiculed in comic strips as "Governor Moonbeam."

This year, he's been besieged by allegations of political misconduct by his staff, an aborted impeachment drive and the plague of Mediterranean fruit flies, which some critics say he helped aggravate because he vacillated on pesticide spraying.

Nevertheless, however dimly his political star may be glimmering, the California governor is back on the campaign trail, running for the Senate seat held by Republican S.I. Hayakawa.

And, on the Democratic side, Brown is leading in the early polls.

He has already raised $1.2 million for his campaign, more than double what his nearest foe has raised. And despite his erratic record as a presidential candidate, Brown is regarded as a persuasive campaigner in California, which is more receptive than other regions to his futuristic "spaceship earth" platform and his philosophy of "small is beautiful."

In this campaign, Brown is not abandoning those themes, but he is sounding more like traditional politicians.

Instead of talking about "the existential edge," as he did in the Wisconsin primary last year, Brown now talks about helping the American electronics industry gain "the competitive edge" over Japan. He still quotes "The Whole Earth Catalogue," but now notes when "Fortune Magazine" says the same thing.

Brown disputes suggestions he is deliberately avoiding the phrasing that triggered the "Governor Moonbeam" spoofs, but he concedes there is a different emphasis. "I'm not static. The world doesn't stand still," he says.

Brown says he is running on his "record of accomplishments" as governor the past 6 years. "We've dropped from third to 25th among the states in taxes per capita. We're creating jobs at a rate 50 percent higher than the rest of the nation. On crime, we have tougher laws and tougher judges. We're sending twice as many people to prison."

In the Democratic primary next June 8, Brown's principal challenger will likely be Assemblyman Leo McCarthy of San Francisco, former speaker of the state Assembly and Brown's 1976 presidential campaign chairman.

McCarthy has since become one of Brown's most vocal Democratic critics, especially after Brown endorsed a series of conservative economic proposals, among them the taxcutting Proposition 13.

In addition to Hayakawa, who at 75 is seeking re-election despite party urgings or step aside, the GOP race is full of political celebrities.

Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. leads polls for the GOP nomination, followed by Hayakawa, Rep. Pete McCloskey, who in 1972 challenged President Richard Nixon as an anti-war candidate for president, and Maureen Reagan, the president's daughter.

Brown is not faring as well against possible GOP opponents as he is in polls which list only Democrats. In The California Poll released Friday, Brown trailed Goldwater and McCloskey in direct match-ups, and led Hayakawa by a margin of only 48 percent to 38 percent.

The most serious problem Brown faces today, however, is California's Medfly infestation, which is threatening the state's entire economy.

Brown claims he followed the best pest eradication advice, but critics say the medfly spread across California because he have in to environmentalists and delayed pesticide spraying. "People are looking for a scapegoat, and I'm the logical target," he says.

Republicans and agricultural interests embarrassed Brown by drafting petitions, recently dropped, to impeach him for "abdication of responsibilities" to fight the fruit fly.

Brown has also alienated

Democrats with support of conservative causes such as a constitutional convention to require a balanced federal budget and with such political discourtesies as failing to return supporters' phone calls.

"I honestly don't see how he'll win that Senate seat," former state Democratic Party Chairman Richard O'Neill says. "There's hatred out there (among Democratic voters). It's more than a political falling out."

Foes also accuse the 43-year-old governor of seeking a Senate seat only to position himself to run a third time for president. Brown does not deny ambitions to run for president again, but he promises it will not be in 1984.

Brown also has been wounded by allegations that his staff misused a state computer for political purposes and then altered and destroyed evidence to cover up the violations.

Brown's troubles are reflected in his decline in the polls.

He says he isn't worried about the polls and predicts he'll be "a formidable political force in this state for the next 20 years."

Brown's Father, Former Gov. Edmund Brown agrees "anybody would be crazy not to say that Jerry's been wounded."

Academic Commissioner Chuch Russo is working on providing the students with an extra study day before the end of classes and the beginning of finals; in addition, Chuch is pushing for classroom space in the new building proposed for faculty affairs. This concern for student study space is emphasized in Larry Madden's project to lengthen the time Memorial Library is open.

Finally, Jim Wolfe and Bill Pfeiffer are bringing the demands of social justice and the Third World before the eyes of students. The Social Concerns Film series begins Tuesday of next week. Bill Pfeiffer is planning a Latin American Week to take place sometime next month and has scheduled a number of speakers to open the students to an understanding of the responsibilities of "First World" citizens.

Murday's philosophy sees a student government which serves the student body, and this year's government works to attain that goal.

Talk about good food which we all like to do now and then. Visit Jen's Ristorante and Garden Patio at 512 So. Spring St., Mishawaka. You'll have something to talk about.

You'll also understand why this fine restaurant is so highly rated. Why they have been selected by various publications.

This acclaim does not come lightly. Quite simply they offer excellent food which is primarily Italian, exciting variety, friendly service with a pleasant casual atmosphere.

The outside garden patio is a picturesque dining area with its beautiful rose garden. The focal point of the patio is a lovely fountain with a three cherub statue. There is another fountain pool with an ever changing pattern and more fragrant flowers planted tastefully around the garden. Large shade trees provide cool protection from the warm summer sun. arbor further adds to the outdoor beauty of the garden.

The patio is furnished with colorful vinyl covered padded benches and tables — each with a brightly colored umbrella overhead.

The background Italian music lends to the European atmosphere.

The inside dining room is decorated in a 1930's motif and features a metal covered ceiling. Photographs of Old Mishawaka line the walls on two sides with original oil paintings among them. The back wall holds photographs of Jen's family from Italy.

Each table in the dining room is covered with a bright checked cloth and has a candle as its centerpiece. Spacious oak chairs complete the warm comfortable atmosphere of the indoor dining area.

Samples sentence to 20 years after learning about the impact of Vietnam on his life.

The decision provoked an outcry by Marion County District Attorney Chris Van Dyke and residents of Silverton, the small town near Salem where the murder occurred.

On Sept. 3, Atiyeh rescinded the commutation. He said he Based his reversal on recent negative psychiatric opinions about Samples' rehabilitation and additional evidence—including a previously undisclosed report that Samples allegedly beat up a woman in 1971.

However, Atiyeh restated his assessment that prior to Vietnam, Samples "was a scholar athlete... and seemed destined for a successful life. Yet he returned from the Vietnam war a wholly different person and ultimately committed a vicious murder. He then became a model prisoner and by all appearances returned to his pre-Vietnam personality."

But Van Dyke says statements Samples made after the murder referred to pre-Vietnam problems, including shooting himself in the stomach when he was 13. Van Dyke has termed Samples a sexual sadist and says the self-inflicted wound reflects abnormal sexual fantasies.

Experts who examined Samples after the murder were divided about whether the shooting was an accident and whether Samples had serious troubles before he went to Vietnam.

Van Dyke has also produced a never-mailed letter Samples wrote to a former girlfriend in May 1970. In it, he outlined a fantasy about slashing stomach and disemboweling women, acts that resembled the eventual stabbing.

The district attorney claims Samples is an intelligent opportunist trying to capitalize on his combat to win commutation. He notes that Samples never raised the Vietnam defense until several years into his imprisonment.

But the veteran's lawyer, Michael Bailey, said: "Duane Samples never attempted to use post-Vietnam delayed stress syndrome to gain sympathy or as an excuse" and, after years of therapy.

When Samples and other veterans returned from Vietnam, Bailey said, "the nation rejected them and accepted no responsibility for their pain and alienation. Samples struggled alone with his anguish and it led him to a brutal and dastardly crime."

Samples pleaded guilty. Today he says he deserved punishment but that he has been rehabilitated. He says he would like a chance to make up to society for his crime.

"I'm not going to stop or give up on myself," Samples said. "I know it's humanly possible to spend the rest of my life here and remain productive. I hope that won't be the case."

Saying Goodbye: Life After Seven

Fr. Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

When you are young, the world is a highly reliable place: here today, and still here tomorrow, and here for all future times, as long as you need it. When you are seven, you have never lost a world; at least, the loss is nothing you pay attention to. When you are seven, seasons change; summer gives away to fall, followed by winter. Summer, you know, with its heat and flowers and butterflies, will come back to the meadow. When you are seven, cookies — molasses or sugar — on the pantry shelf are as reliable as sunrise, and grandmother is a fixed star in an urchin's firmament. Grandfather, who has been on this earth since God was young, will remain with you as faithful as Pooh-bear worn out by time.

The years after seven begin to close in. Grandparents head off on an early train. Cookies — molasses or sugar — become the forgotten sacrament of a lost childhood, signifying innocence. Pantries, if they still exist, are overrun with mice, as obsolete as handwringers and washtubs. A world, comfortable and familiar to the child, is moving toward its ruin. The child is innocent of his emigrant's status as time moves him from land onto the heavy seas of life. He may be fairly old when, with tears on his face, he remembers how much he loved an old horizon which he has not seen for years. More fun even than the secure times of childhood were the dates in high school, when you went with a girl to a Sinatra movie. Later, you sat together in a restaurant, listening to Sinatra records on the jukebox, allowing his lyrics to define the extremities of your passion. You knew you would never be so happy again.

I would like to go home to all the worlds that have slipped away from me, lost like coins from a torn pocket. I would like to see familiar faces around a family table in my mother's house. I want all the years back again, from birth until yesterday, at least for a little while, until I could be sure they were never lost at all.

Last night, I said goodbye to Keenan. For a final time, I bounced on the mattress of my queen-sized bed, a birthday gift from the students of Keenan when I was a rector. (I have a new bed in my Pasquerilla home.) I flushed the toilet for old time's sake, and I made a visit to the chapel. Then I closed the door and locked it. Nothing there would ever belong to me again.

I left gifts to propitiate the spirits of the building: a couple of coins on the edge of a shelf, a ball belonging to the dog, a t-shirt that may find its way back to me from the laundry. I have developed this superstition that if you try to remove all your belongings from a place, the local gods will grow resentful. Then, in revenge, they will try to keep something of yours that you need for yourself, possibly even your peace of mind, as you try to settle in another home. I took with me the pain as well as the love from those rooms. It's a mistake to try to detach yourself from the pain you have known in a place as though it were clutter belonging in the trash. Forgetting the pain, you tend to idealize the place afterwards as though it were heaven.

I am not young anymore. I cannot believe that the past never repeats itself, yet it never has. Life, after seven, never gets easier, but there are compensations: Manhattans, for example, in place of the pantry cookies.

Goodbye, Keenan Hall. You have been such a profound experience in my lifetime, I tried to hold on too long to a place that no longer fits. One has to learn a graceful way of letting go of a world spinning away in space while one's own life is headed in a different direction. It is not easy to say good-bye.

"Breaker Morant" asks hard questions

Doug Kreitzberg

Movies

"Breaker Morant"

Directed by Bruce Beresford
South Australian Film Corporation

Rated PG

Forum Theatre

On those rare occasions that "Australia" creeps into a conversation one can safely assume that the topic discussed is not film. Yet, despite our ignorance, Australia is receiving international recognition in the movie industry and a work such as "Breaker Morant" which has won ten Australian Academy awards — including Best Picture, Best Director, and Best Actor — cannot be shrugged off as a third world super-8 production.

In fact, the beauty of "Breaker Morant" lies in the exuberant vitality of a nation's new artistic medium. It is heartening in this heartless day and age to see a film which is not cynical toward its imaginative possibilities, which apprehends the past in the hope of an apprehensible future, which is convinced of the necessity of reconciling man with his humanity. The idealism, determination, and of course naivete of this film expresses the desire for heroes that do not leap from the pages of a comic book but rather fall as traitors to a hypocritical and self-righteous society.

What keeps the film from sinking to a lecture hall harangue against injustice is director Bruce Beresford's acknowledgement of the limitations as well as the potentialities of a medium. Interwoven with the plot — an account of the trial, conviction, and execution of three British commandos accused of murdering Boer prisoners and a German missionary during the Boer War in 1901 — is the relationship of man to both nature and art. The movie opens with a British Army band playing nostalgic tunes in the village square of a South African town. The illusion of propriety evoked by the songs, the art of affected societal mannerisms seen in the trial, and the commander's supplication to a cosmic facade of the British Empire are set against the horrible deeds performed by normal men placed in an abnormal situation. The filming of "Breaker Morant" depicts man's diminution in the universe in its visual display of the expansiveness of the veld, the relative absence of any figures outside the frame of action, and the constrictiveness of the prison with a precision similar to Terrence Malick's "Days of Heaven." While some may view "Breaker Morant" as being too editorial in its presentation, they fail to perceive that the film is less a questioning of war and imperialism than a plea for man's apprehension of himself in relation to others without the trappings of illusion. That the title of the film corresponds to the name of one of the executed shows that even art is subject to temporality.

There are some flaws to the script, especially with characterization. One gets bits and pieces of a character, but sometimes the pieces aren't linked together. The acting was fine under such conditions, especially the portrayal of the defense lawyer by Jack Thompson. Beresford seems to have left out total characterization to keep the austere quality of the film and I find no reason to doubt his decision in this regard. Too often, a film is muddled by characters too large for a coherent structure.

I have long since abandoned the notion that art can change society; ideas are too firmly entrenched in the mind to be uprooted by a celluloid reel. At best, a film or novel or play can trigger our imagination, can show us the present reality, can point us to a potential reality. The Boer War is far behind us, but "Breaker Morant" redefines that history in present terms. The same reasoning behind that execution resulted in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. That same reasoning resulted in Vietnam. That same reasoning, the utter contempt and degradation of the human being for the illusory glory of government, results in a statement by Reagan aide Charles Z. Wick that the poor enjoy "viewing the luxurious Washington way of life of the Reagan Administration members, much as Americans who suffered in the Depression enjoyed watching Hollywood stars in the movies." I refuse to believe that art cannot challenge this idiocy, that doesn't have the obligation to expose illusion even at the expense of exposing its own illusory medium. "Breaker Morant" is a film strong enough to forsake a superman for the individual in front of a firing squad. There are no heroes — only the dead and the living.

The film was released in 1980, but South Bend being South Bend has not obtained it until now. The hopeful thing though is that there still is enough time for a "Breaker Morant."

Phil Keaggy: musician with a message

Can a musician who communicates good and love be successful in the music business? Phil Keaggy is a man who communicates the Good News of the Gospel to all people, and according to experts in the music business, he is successful. While recording one of his albums at Electric Ladyland Studios, the late Jimi Hendrix saw Keaggy in action and supposedly lauded him as one of the finest guitarists in the world.

When Keaggy takes the stage, his music reveals an acute sensitivity to the frustrations of everyday life. Perhaps what is more important than this sensitivity is his attitude of encouragement and the advice he offers as a solution.

The solution he offers is one that he came to while he was trying to cope with one of the harshest realities of life: death. Just as Keaggy seemed to be reaching his peak, touring with with Chicago, Yes, and Traffic, and having won the praise of Jimi Hendrix for his outstanding style, his mother was killed in a car accident.

Stunned by the sudden death of his mother, Keaggy felt a shallowness within his spirit, and turned to God, a God he had not paid much attention to during his Catholic upbringing back in Youngstown, Ohio. This proved to be the turning point in Keaggy's life. He immediately sensed the reality of the beginning of a personal relationship with Jesus Christ and began to approach life with a deeper sense of purpose.

success eluded this Chicago-based group. Finally, their seventh album put them over the top.

9. It took this group even longer — eleven albums — to find bona fide American success. They had begun to build a following before then, as the two albums before that both eked into the top 20. But it wasn't until the first single from the 11th hit number one that success was theirs.

Rock Trivia Quiz 2

To begin this week's quiz, I first reveal last week's answers, which focused on artists who had (or have) their own label. Here they are, followed by the label(s).

1. Led Zeppelin — Swan Song
2. Bob Seger — Hideout
3. Frank Sinatra — Reprise
4. The Beatles — Apple
5. George Harrison — Dark Horse
6. The Grateful Dead — Grateful Dead
7. The Jefferson Airplane — Grunt
8. Elton John — Rocket
9. Frank Zappa — Bizarre, Straight, DiscReet, Zappa, and Barking Pumpkin
10. The Captain and Tennille — Butterscotch Castle

Now on to this week's quiz. Many of the biggest stars in rock history were not overnight successes. It sometimes took years of frustration until "the big break" came. I am going to describe the beginnings of ten such performers. You name the artist.

1. The first 45 released by them in the U.S. did not even contain their correct name. The second 45 released here had their name spelled wrong. The next two also flopped.

2. His first five 45s did not make the Billboard pop charts, although one of them spent nearly a year on the country charts. Only upon his acquisition by a major label did he become popular.

3. Their first two 45s were released by Steeltown Records, based in their home town. Neither of them sold. After discovery by one of the great black singers of our time, their next four 45s hit number one.

4. His first album bombed badly, and so did two singles released from it. No singles were released from his second album. Only after the third made the top five, and a single from it made the top 40, did he get billing — but it was still another five years and only two albums later before he became a household word.

5. Most of his British singles in his first three years of recording were not released here, and still haven't been. A handful of them were, but never charted. He broke through once and for all early in 1971, eventually to become one of the biggest stars of the seventies.

6. Their first American single was taken off the market because of its flip side; it was thought to be about drugs because of its title ("Stoned"), yet the song was instrumental! It still took three more singles until they broke through.

7. This California group was originally known as the Blue Velvets. After no success, they changed their name to the Goliwogs. Still no success, so they changed their name again, and became extremely successful after nearly a decade of trying.

8. Their first album was released in 1971. It failed. Except for one big hit single, for the next six years

10. Finally, this group put out 13 albums before any of them were successful here. They went through numerous personnel changes over nine years of frustration, until an album which had the same name as their first one hit number one in September of 1976.

Here come the new Fighting Irish

Notre Dame vs. South: a modern Civil War

EDITOR'S NOTE: The author of the following has been on both sides of the fence. After an illustrious career on the Notre Dame sports media scene, Tim "Bone" Bourret was named Associate Sports Information Director at Clemson University in South Carolina. His two-sided involvement in the rivalry between Notre Dame and schools of the Southeastern and Atlantic Coast Conferences (plus a handful of independents) makes him more than qualified to author this article on the hatred, or let's say intense rivalry between Notre Dame and the South.

By TIM BOURRET
Special to The Observer

For reasons more sociological than personal, Notre Dame is not particularly popular with college football fans of the otherwise hospitable South. There has never been a warm reception for the Blue and Gold (or light Blue, or green or whatever shade they are wearing) in the South for reasons of religion, past wars or jealousy, especially in contemporary times.

Any individual raised in the North who migrates to the South for employment or some other reason, will document the feeling among southerners that they are still fighting the Civil War — "The War of Northern Aggression" as some call it. In athletics the natural rivalry caused by physical competition makes the blood to run thicker, and when Notre Dame is involved it turns to cement. When you come to the South from the North, you are a Damn Yankee. But, when you move to the South from the Golden Dome, you're twice as bad — you're a Notre Dame Yankee.

It all started in the 1860's when a team led by Coach Grant pulled the naked reverse against Coach Lee's squad to score a late touchdown in the original North-South game. Since then, the South has been trying to get revenge, even though the North doesn't realize it. The feeling has carried over into the grand game of college football, especially when Notre Dame is involved.

The rivalry serves to motivate the southern squads because they look forward to beating Notre Dame, more than Notre Dame looks forward to beating them. "We have rivalries in our conference that date back to the turn of the century, but that game against Notre Dame in 1977 was second to none in importance to us," says Al Adams, former assistant sports information director at Clemson. "Coach (Frank) Howard scheduled that game in the late '60s, and we had a special news conference in 1968 just to announce it, even though it would not be played for about 10 years."

On the field, the motivation instilled in players can be frightening, and, in the case of the 1977 Mississippi-Notre Dame game, disastrous. "During the whole game the guy opposite me was like a man possessed," said Ken MacAfee in a postgame interview. "He called me all sorts of names, it was like fighting in the Civil War."

Former Clemson cheerleader Joey Erwin summarized the rivalry motivation on a religious plateau. "When Notre Dame came to the Valley (Clemson) it was the Northern Catholics against the Southern Baptists. They (Notre Dame) didn't hear any Hail Marys in the stands at Clemson."

Present Clemson coach Danny Ford put the meaning of the game with Notre Dame in perspective when he said prior to his team's

Emotions run high as Irish await Tigers

By KELLY SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

For the fans, it's the anticipation of an explosive afternoon of college football.

For the players, it's the anticipation after months and months of preparation.

And for Coach Gerry Faust, it's the anticipation of a lifetime dream come true.

"I know it'll be a real emotional moment for me the first time we go through that tunnel and hit the field," exclaims Faust. "That's something I've thought about a great deal since coming to Notre Dame."

The 1:30 p.m. kickoff against the Louisiana State Tigers figures to be one of the most enthusiastic season openers the Irish ever have had. Yet Faust doesn't want the emotion surrounding his Notre Dame debut to run completely wild.

"The players can sense when you're relaxed, so I'll try and control myself," he explains. "A team can be too psyched. Then they get tight, and they don't perform the way you want. So we're trying to keep a low-keyed approach for this game."

On the other hand, Faust must guard against a case of overconfidence developing in the Irish camp in view of LSU's loss to Alabama last weekend.

"This game is our most important, because it's the first. We're not looking past it, and we're not counting LSU out. I was impressed by the way they came back in the second half against Alabama — they came out and played excellent football, and probably won the second half statistically."

Tiger Coach Jerry Stovall was equally pleased with his team's performance after halftime. "I'm proud of the fact that the team continued to play with emotion even though we were so far behind," he relates. "Our big problem came defensively — we didn't defense the option off the wishbone well."

Stovall doesn't feel that facing Notre Dame's full house offense will present any new challenges to his squad. "We've played a lot of teams that use misdirection and different formations."

The second year coach fields one of the youngest football teams LSU ever has had. Stovall sent 11 rookies in against the Tide last Saturday. "We expect to play just as many freshmen against Notre Dame so we'll have experience when we get into conference play."

While Faust doesn't intend on starting that many new faces, he's starting a new era in the Irish offense. "Our multiple system is coming along real well," he says. "It's going to take more than just a few games or a few months to perfect, though. You've got to bring players up through a new system. It'll take a few seasons to perfect it, but I'm very pleased with the progress."

LSU's speed concerns Faust a bit, but the way to counteract it, he says, is to "play heads-up football and not make mistakes." What bothers the Irish mentor most is the unknown.

"I've been with the team nine months, but I really can't evaluate them yet because I've never seen them go up against college opposition. My players may be world-beaters compared to other schools, but I won't know until I see if they can run and throw and tackle as well as the LSU players can."

That moment can't come soon enough for Gerry Faust and his first Notre Dame football squad. "The kids want to see another jersey besides their teammate's across that line. They're itching to get out and perform."

Cheerleaders shift focus

Alumni, pep rallies, fightsongs — football weekends return, along with the 1981 Notre Dame cheerleaders. New Head Coach Gerry Faust leads the players on the field as the squad finalizes its routines to rally the students in the stands.

Co-captain Shelly Obermiller is very excited about this year's squad, as she and Clark Gibson lead 10 others, including seven new members, into the LSU game. The enthusiasm of the new people seems to be endless according to Obermiller, who says, "They have so much spirit — and a lot of talent. We'll be trying new things, and this should be a great squad."

This year's squad will be much different from last year's, just as the football team will show more versatility. Custom-tailored royal blue uniforms provide a new look this year, complimenting the team's jerseys. Also, this year's squad has chosen cheerleading as their main goal.

"They're working on the direction of their cheerleading," says the team's advisor and Director of Student Activities James McDonnell. "They want to stay away from glamorized stunts and routines that focus more on them than on crowd enthusiasm. This group focuses crowd attention and gets them involved, using creative routines that incorporate the crowd into what they're doing."

The cheerleaders have two seasons, in effect, cheering for the football and basketball seasons. They cheer at all home football games and will travel to as many away contests as possible. Also, they'll cheer at all home basketball games, and likely some road games.

The time commitment of the cheerleaders is a great one. They practice six days a week, two hours a session. Obermiller says it's tough on the squad, but they are doing pretty well so far. "Most of them are still so excited about the beginning of the season that it has not yet become dull for them — and it may never."

She adds that the greatest thing about being a cheerleader is the people you meet, and being able to represent the university. "It's been the best experience I've ever had. I feel lucky that I got the chance to cheer here, especially in Coach Faust's first year. The games are wonderful, with the electricity you feel when you walk into the stadium. But I think the pep rallies are the best. For 30 or 40 minutes we have the undivided attention of 3,000 to 4,000 people. The spirit there is unbelievable — typical Notre Dame spirit."

The squad enters its first regular season game tomorrow. The season will be marked by enthusiasm and desire to excel. Obermiller says this desire will make this cheerleading squad a great one. "We want to be really great. We want people to know we're from Notre Dame. Most importantly, we want the students to be proud of their squad."

Recalls Moeller

Faust pupil awaits reunion

BATON ROUGE, La. — Eric Ellington arrived in Baton Rouge a year ago and immediately stepped onto a rollercoaster.

The highly-touted running back out of Cincinnati's Moeller High School was billed as one of LSU's game-breakers. But that's not how it turned out. Instead, according to the scheme of the Tigers' veer offense, Ellington usually took a straight handoff and found himself at the bottom of a big pile in the middle of the field.

He never really got a chance to show his stuff. He fumbled a kickoff, which removed him from that role. He took a pitchout and scampered 15 yards, only to take a hit, lose the ball and find himself on the end of the bench again.

It was a year of freshman frustration.

The Tiger staff decided to stick with the veer this year, so it looked for another place where Ellington's talents could be advantageous. Flanker was suggested, and flanker it was.

Ellington began spring workouts as the No. 4 flanker. Yet last week, when LSU opened against Alabama, the 5-9 sparkplug was in the starting lineup.

It looked as though the rollercoaster ride was over, that Ellington had settled into a position that he both liked and was impressive in performing. Not so.

Monday in practice, Ellington strained a hamstring muscle and was dropped from the Tiger depth chart. And this was the week he was supposed to play against his former coach and close advisor, Gerry Faust.

Coach Jerry Stovall says Ellington will play, but it won't be known how effective he will be until kickoff.

The loss of Ellington's darting running and catching could hurt LSU's chances considerably. Against Alabama, Ellington was one of only a few players to show any speed and quickness.

How ironic it would be for Ellington to be influential in an LSU victory.

"When I was in high school, we (he and Faust) used to talk a lot — we were pretty close," says Ellington. "He always told me if there was anywhere he'd go, he'd go to Notre Dame. I'm not surprised he went."

Ellington, however, visited the Notre Dame campus like so many other Moeller graduates, but he chose to play elsewhere.

"Notre Dame was so much like Moeller," he says. "The social life wasn't really what I wanted it to be. There's more to school than just going to class."

When news of Faust's appointment was announced, rumors flourished about Ellington transferring to play for his old coach. But Ellington stayed put, despite the frustration he suffered last fall.

"I never thought of transferring to Notre Dame," Ellington says. "I didn't want to sit out a year. I made the decision to come here, and I'm happy with the decision. This year I'm a lot more confident. Things just fell into place and I don't know how it happened or why it happened. But I'm excited."

"Last year I was really nervous. I wondered how much playing time I was going to get instead of whether we were going to win or lose. But now I'm contributing more. I know what I'm doing, and I know what it takes to make a play work. It's a team effort all the way around, but everyone has to do their part."

No doubt Faust had a lot to do with seeding those values in Ellington, it just took a year for them to grow. He had to reason that playing flanker in the Tigers' offense would best suit his skills. He accepted this, and he succeeded in making the move.

"I had running back in my blood," Ellington says. "I used to love carrying the ball. I

Bang-bang start tough on Tigers

Michigan ... Southern Cal ... Penn State ... then the bowl game and the Cinderella season of first-year Irish Head Coach Gerry Faust is complete with a national championship. Right?

A lot of people have visions of it happening — and it very well may — but if the Irish football team overlooks Louisiana State, Faust's debut may turn into a disaster.

But Faust isn't taking anything for granted. "LSU has got an excellent football team. In fact, in the second half of the game against Alabama they really came of age," Faust said. "I was very impressed with Malcom Scott — their tight end — their two quarterbacks (Alan) Risher and the freshman (Tim) Byrd — and of course I was impressed with Eric Ellington, who played for us at Moeller High School three years ago. "Their punter James Wagner averaged 42 yards a punt," Faust continued. "Their defense is very, very good. Led by Ramsey and Dadar and they have an excellent defensive front, probably one of the quicker defensive fronts I've seen in the last couple of years in college football."

The Tigers were 7-4 last year and list 30 returning lettermen, including eight offensive and seven defensive starters. However, LSU did lose its opening game on ABC-TV to Paul "Bear" Bryant and his Alabama Crimson Tide, 24-7, last Saturday.

But Stovall saw hope in his Tigers. "We felt that offensively and defensively, there were a lot of good things that we did. Offensively, we gained almost 400 yards, which we were impressed with," Stovall said. "Defensively we played well except for the big play. We'll have to eliminate that. We'll work very hard on it."

Faust also believes the 'Bama game helped LSU.

"LSU gains something simply from having played a game against a top-quality football team. As young as their team is, that has to be a help," Faust said. "But we gain something because all our coaches and players had a chance to watch that game. We ought to have a little bit better idea what to expect."

Despite their 30 returning lettermen, the Tigers still may be the youngest team in the college ranks this year. LSU lists only six seniors on its entire roster, and only three — cornerback James Britt, spit end Orlando McDaniel and guard Tom Tully — are slated to begin tomorrow's game. And Stovall boasts just one more year's experience than the Irish mentor.

The Tigers' freshman crop of 28 — 11 of whom played against 'Bama — was described by one national expert as the "best group of high school seniors to sign with LSU since the Japs were building Zeroes instead of Toyotas."

The Tigers also have a tradition of being tough on the Irish. In 1970, the Irish edged LSU, 3-0, on Scott Hempel's 24-yard field goal with 2:54 remaining. But on the return visit the next year, LSU beat Notre Dame, 28-8.

Quarterback Alan Risher keys LSU's veer offense after finishing as the top percentage passer in the Southeastern Conference in 1980. Risher completed 82-of-143 passes for 971 yards and nine touchdowns plus six more rushing.

"We expect Alan to pick up right where he left off," Stovall said. "He's shown us that improvement in practice. Now we must carry that over into the games."

Jesse Myles was the leading rusher last year (76 carries for 403 yards in 1980) despite missing five games with a broken leg. He did not play against Alabama, but is expected to start tomorrow. Mike Montz (287 yards in 1980) is the fullback. Ellington, the starting flanker in the 'Bama game has been replaced by freshman Mark Johnston.

Besides McDaniel, who is a world-class hurdler, and Tully, guard David Koch is the only incumbent on the offensive line. But Koch and his teammates are big as the Tigers average 6-4, 247.5 pounds across the front.

Scott will be at tight end while Bob Smith and Clint Berry man the tackle positions and Mike Gambrell is the center.

On defense, linebackers Rydell Malancon, Al Richardson and Lawrence Williams return as does tackles Ramsey Dardar and Leonard Marshall. Richardson and Williams were the top two tacklers last fall.

Returning in the secondary are cornerbacks Britt and Alvin Thomas. Rounding out the defensive starters will be Tim Joiner at linebacker, Greg Bowser at nose guard and Tommy Boudreaux is at free safety. Jeffery Dale replaces Alex Clark, who started the

They are the leaders of their teams. One inherited the job, as one of a very few seniors. The other leads by example, and by means of his enormous talent. They will go head-to-head Saturday when Notre Dame opens its 1981 season against LSU.

Jim Britt went from Minden, La., to Baton Rouge with a pocket full of press clippings. He had been named the defensive player of the year in Louisiana's high schools the year before, and he fully expected the laurels to continue to pile up once he began playing major college football for the Tigers.

Well, the honors were not forthcoming, at least until this fall.

On the other hand, Tony Hunter has continued to get top billing from football writers whenever the subject of Notre Dame's offense is brought up. He came out of Cincinnati's Moeller High School with prep All-America credentials, and each year has received at least a mention from the men that assemble the mythical "best" line-ups in the college game.

Britt, a defensive back, and Hunter, a wingback, will see a lot of each other on the floor of Notre Dame Stadium this weekend.

J. B., as his friends call him, has started every game but one in the LSU defensive backfield since his freshman year. He has clearly become one of the premier cornerbacks in the Southeastern Conference, if not the nation.

"I know my teammates will be expecting more leadership from me this year," he says. "But that's something I'm willing to do. In fact, I'm looking forward to it."

LSU is a young team, and Britt is the only senior starter in the defensive unit. He could not avoid the leadership role if he wanted to. But he has eagerly accepted the job as "big brother" to his defensive teammates.

Hunter's record in just two years has been nothing short of amazing. In his freshman year, he set a Notre Dame record by averaging 25.6 yards per reception. His career record of 19.9 yards per catch ranks second among active college players.

This season, Hunter's high school coach, Gerry Faust, has instituted a new offense. The multiple formation approach is a concerted effort to get the ball into the hands of Tony Hunter as often as possible.

"He's our best athlete," Faust says. "He has to be to do all the things we are asking of him. He'll split wide, or set up in a full house backfield. He'll go deep for a pass, or take a hand-off. Tony can do it all, as well as block."

Britt has allowed the LSU defense to become more flexible, in much the same way that Hunter has allowed Notre Dame to vary its offense.

"I know James will not make a mistake," says LSU defensive back coach Greg Williams. "He allows me to make defensive adjustments that we've never been able to make before."

... Eric

thought, 'Wow, I came here to be a running back and now I'm going to play flanker.' I know how a lot of times you get in college and they'll change you to a position and just leave you there and not care about you. I had that in mind. But then, I thought that if I worked at it, maybe I'd have a chance to play more."

Ellington proved himself and satisfied the coaching staff as well. He certainly will cause problems with flanker reverses and open-field running.

Stovall, like Faust, has been a big influence in giving him the confidence to make such a switch. And Ellington says the two coaches have a lot in common.

"They're about the same," he says. "I think Coach Stovall has a more logical approach to the game. Coach Faust is just wild-eyed and bushy-tailed, running around and hollering. But they remind me of each other. I think highly of them both."

Ellington finds himself in an awkward position this week — playing against his former coach for a team that needs his talents to be diverse offensively.

It's nice to be important again.

A Business Administration student with a 3.5 grade point average, Britt says it takes a quick mind to play the way he does.

"You've got to be able to think and be alert when playing cornerback," he says. "You have to be able to anticipate just enough and know when to anticipate. A lot of times, in one-on-one situations, if you're able to out-think your man, you've got him whipped."

For his part, Hunter knows that he will have to be sharp. He is, after all, learning a new position.

"It's tough to learn a new position," he admits, "but I really like it. I'll still be the primary receiver, plus I'll be in motion a lot. I'll have the opportunity to run the ball too. I enjoy the increased responsibility."

Saturday, the situation is bound to arise. On a "third and long" play, Hunter will race downfield. Britt will pick up the coverage, most likely with help from another back. Kiel or Koegel will throw the ball....

Time and again, the two leaders will match wits and physical ability. Whoever is better at doing his job will go along way toward leading his team to victory.

There has not been much time for joking around this week as co-captain Phil Carter, Coach Gerry Faust and the rest of the team, have been seriously preparing for LSU.

game against 'Bama, at strong safety.

"I expect LSU to come in here with that same kind of intensity (as they did in Notre Dame's 3-0 victory in the Stadium in 1970)," Faust said. "Playing Notre Dame means too much to them to have any kind of letdown, even after an emotional conference game like Alabama. Plus, it'll be a good test for our young men because they know they'll have to be ready to play."

Should the game turn into a kicking contest the Tigers will rely on the foot of James Wagner. Liffort Hobley is the only Tiger casualty from the 'Bama game sustaining a shoulder injury finishing him for the year.

1979 meeting with the Irish, "This is more important than any bowl game, conference game, or anything that Clemson has played in. For once I won't have to worry about motivation for a football game. I know our players will perform above their capabilities."

Although Notre Dame has always raised the blood pressure of southerners, this hatred has intensified in recent years, especially in the Dan Devine era. For some reason Moose Krause scheduled more and more games with Southern schools for the late-'70s, just about the time Devine took over for Ara Parseghian.

Krause should have learned his lesson because ugly scenes in wars with the South began in 1969, at the Georgia Tech-Notre Dame game in Atlanta. In a nationally televised game, the Irish vaulted to a 38-6 lead late in the fourth quarter. The psyched, and by now inebriated Yellow Jacket fans were letting their "buzz" get the best of them. They began pelting the Notre Dame players with ice and cups of water.

Three years later the Irish traveled to Baton Rouge for the first time, and the treatment accorded Notre Dame's black players was less than courteous. Racial barbs from the stands and people in town was one thing, but it was reported that the hotel administration at Notre Dame's headquarters allowed phone calls through to black players' rooms at 3 a.m., prohibiting a sound night's sleep.

The legacy of Dan Devine and his journey through the South is a long one. While Parseghian played relatively few contests with southern teams during his reign (1964-74) Devine had 23 games with teams from the South in just six seasons in South Bend. The now retired mentor had a fine 17-5-1 ledger in these games, but eight of the wins were by a touchdown or less. Thus, the nature of the contests increased the pressure and anxiety among fans.

Devine's first journey south took place in 1975 when he took his team to Dean Smith (no, he's not a football coach too) country to face North Carolina. A miracle rally led by then youthful sophomore Joe Montana (an 80-yard TD pass to Ted Burgmeier with 1:03 left) gave ND a 21-14 victory. The next season only a Jimmy Browner interception saved a 13-6 win at South Carolina. And of course there was the trip to Clemson in 1976. A bomb scare in Devine's hotel room the night before the game, and a block thrown by an official on Clemson's first touchdown that would have made any offensive line coach proud, were just two of the abnormal occurrences of that weekend.

The less than hospitable treatment at Georgia Tech was resurrected in 1976 when the Yellow Jackets upset Notre Dame 23-14 and the Georgia Tech players and fans were less than gracious in doing so. The Irish did not forget the treatment the next season in South Bend and ran up the score in a 69-14 extinction of Pepper Rogers' team.

That ill feeling with the Yellow Jackets festered over the summer and in Notre Dame's victory in 1978 in Atlanta, what might be the ugliest scene in Notre Dame football history occurred. I was at the game and could not believe my eyes as Vegas Ferguson was pelted with ice and fish (for the "mackerel snappers" as Notre Dame players are called in Atlanta) after scoring a late TD in a 38-21 Notre Dame win.

The heaving of fins continued and soon, the Notre Dame players had to abandon their own sideline. Devine was a primary target as he was about as popular in Atlanta as Herschel Walker is in South Bend. The players surrounded Devine as police slowly (they appeared to be enjoying the fray) ended the problem. It appeared the game would end right there with a couple of minutes left, but finally Pepper Rogers went over to his student section to calm the wolves. He finally realized his football program was being embarrassed on Notre Dame's national replay network.

In 1979 Devine had to face four teams from the South. He split the four contests, but one, a 40-18 loss at Tennessee, was the worst defeat of his career. Later that season Clemson downed the Irish at Notre Dame, 16-10. Clemson didn't win the Civil War that day, but in the eyes of Tiger fans some justice had been won.

That same year, only 42 seconds remained on the ND Stadium clock when a 14-yard Rusty Lisch-to-Dean Masztak touchdown pass and Pete Holohan's two-point conversion reception beat South Carolina, 18-17.

Tight contests continued last year as the Irish upset Alabama in their own backyard, but suffered a bizarre losing tie to Georgia Tech, and the loss for the National Championship to Georgia in the Sugar Bowl.

Saturday, Gerry Faust, perhaps naive to the determination dominating the minds of the LSU team at this moment, will charge his army out of the tunnel for the first time. He better have all his artillery ready because Notre Dame Stadium, players, religion and lore will motivate the Tigers to new heights.

It sounds unimaginable that a team could look past a conference rival and national power (Alabama) for a contest with an independent many miles away from home. Although they won't admit it to the press, LSU's players have been looking forward to this game more than any other in their careers since they signed their national letters-of-intent.

Reagan has shelter from storm

WASHINGTON — It's too early to tell whether Ronald Reagan will end up governing America from a secret "fallout" shelter under the White House.

Yet, as more citizens begin to feel the impact of Reagan's economic program, the president and his aides may be tempted to "dig in." Succumbing to a siege mentality can be an easy thing to do.

Built after World War II, the subterranean shelter lies two stories under the first lady's East Wing office. It is equipped with a bedroom set, shower and photographs of the first lady herself.

Beyond the automatic doors of the living quarters lie meeting rooms, intended presumably for meetings with Cabinet members during an emergency. In the event that some menacing sorts penetrate White House security, there is an escape tunnel leading to the Treasury Department building across the street.

Supplies of food and drinking water are also maintained in storerooms outside the living quarters. The White House plumbing system is checked frequently for poisonous substances and explosive devices. And, of course, there are large generators to power that hairdryer during a blackout.

Responsibility for maintaining the fallout shelter rests with the White House Military Office, which stations communications technicians there around the clock.

Not surprisingly, the shelter hasn't seen much top-level use lately. William Gulley, former director of the White House Military Office, told National Public Radio this summer that staffers in recent administrations often used the shelter for romantic rendezvous.

However, during the Nixon administration, such presidential aides as Henry Kissinger would often be found in the underground hideout, monitoring anti-war demonstrators in the streets via closed-circuit television. In those days, the Pentagon would also relay to them aerial photographs of the crowds.

The Nixon administration was never known for its tact in handling public demonstrators. Whenever protesters came to town, Nixon would announce that he intended to ignore their concerns and watch football games instead.

When he ventured outside the White House, Nixon would often taunt his critics. One evening during 1970, in San Jose, Calif., Nixon stood atop his car, flashing his notorious victory sign at 2,000 protesters. "I could not resist showing them how little respect I had for their juvenile and mindless ranting," he later recalled.

Ronald Reagan, of course, is not Richard Nixon. He is a more affable, secure personality who knows how to turn on the charm. Nevertheless, the Reagan White House is staffed by many Nixon administration veterans who never accepted the criticisms leveled against them.

Surely, the last thing this nation needs is to relive the "bunker mentality" of the Nixon crowd.

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer

Soon we'll find out how differently the Reagan administration handles dissent. Some 113 trade union groups are scheduled to flood this town next Saturday, in a show of "solidarity" against the administration and its budget-cutting ways. They will march from the Washington Monument to the Capitol. More such demonstrations can be expected as federal social services are reduced.

Meanwhile, students this week are beginning to feel the knife of the budget-cutters as they scamper for available loans to pay increased tuition bills.

"Many students have been following the newspaper headlines for months," noted Eleanor Morris, who works for the financial aid office at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "But they didn't believe the president's measures would affect them. It's been a real shock."

While it's unclear whether financially strapped students will join the trade unionists later this month in Washington, such coalitions may bloom later on.

When demonstrators do come to town, President Reagan will have an opportunity to show the stuff that has made his administration so appealing. He should arrange meetings with his critics and explain why the government must increase defense spending while deeply cutting social programs. His aides should be sent to the streets to take note of critics' concerns.

The last thing the president should do is show contempt for protesters. He should not go horseback riding while fellow Americans are voicing distress about his policies. Nor should he retreat into the dark recesses under the presidential mansion, relying on undercover spies and hidden cameras to monitor American citizens.

The best policy can only be honesty and to face one's critics with an open mind. Should the Reaganites revive the bunker mentality of the Nixon administration, they will only precipitate increased polarization at home. And we don't need any more of that.

Coffeeshouse may yet succeed

The University tossed the students $20,000 last week, which is sort of like Jay Rockefeller dropping a Ritz cracker into a pit of starving coal-miners. And there may not be any more beyond that $20,000. The administration has smartly conditioned further grants on the contention that students must participate in this project — but, it is an encouraging first step.

The $20,000 was allotted at last to the LaFortune coffeeshouse, a project worked on by a variety of students, faculty and administrators over the last few years, ever since two students from Dillon hall, Pat Andrews and John Amato, conceived the blueprint for "New Chautauqua" two years ago.

That blueprint was thrown together hastily before the spring 1980 Board of Trustees meeting, but it was so beautifully thought out that it inspired people like Fr. Mario Pedi, assistant director of student activities, Thomas Mason, vice president of business affairs, and Don Murday, then a student government groupie, to support the project even after the trustees turned down the initial proposal.

The detailed plan created by Andrews and Amato called for a permanent conversion of the spacious, acoustically hideous ballroom in LaFortune into an intimate, enjoyable coffeeshouse. It was a complete concept, involving a well-designed sound and lighting system, an innovative refreshment stand stocked with various coffees and nuts, and a comfortable permanent seating arrangement.

Of course, the trustees were wildly noncommittal toward such a plan, which is their usual manner of dealing with the lowly students. A Murday-produced slide show intended to dramatize the dismal campus social scene had no apparent impact on the Student Affairs Committee. But the backers of the concept didn't give up, and with the assistance of Fr. John Van Wolvlear, the vice president for student affairs, funds were finally rounded up for a modified version of New Chautauqua last fall.

But the initial grant was only a small one, and the University wasn't willing to commit itself to anything permanent. Lights and a small stage were installed, but the Placement Bureau still used the ballroom as a main interviewing branch, and no acoustical modifications were made.

It was little more than another place to watch Duke Tumatote get red pepper hot, and that was not the idea behind the Chautauqua concept — a viable, comfortable social center.

With its first allocation, the administration stipulated that it would watch student attendance closely, to see if there were popular support for the ballroom as a new hangout. Turnouts for most of the shows were good — admittedly, some bombed — but Murday felt encouraged when he returned before the trustees last spring, this time as SBP. Backed by a Student Senate resolution, it seemed reasonable to request further funding to really develop the coffeeshouse into something other than a drafty ballroom.

The trustees, at the time, were unmoved.

It would seem reasonable to many to become discouraged at this point, with no amount of funding guaranteed at all for the future. But student government kept plugging, writing to trustees and other influential sorts, soliciting their support.

Something worked, but Murday doesn't feel it was due to student government's influence. From somewhere, the University coughed up 20 grand. No one is taking credit, though Fr. Van Wolvlear said in a recent article that Murday's last presentation to the trustees was important. It is possible that John Schneider, chairman of the Student Affairs Committee, backed a subsidy for the coffeeshouse, or that Mason, who has previously expressed his desire to help the students, was instrumental.

But no matter. "If the students don't go, it will close," Mason said in the same article. With a new name, the "LaFortune Club" (blah), and a new manager, Todd Hooper, the money is being used to achieve the goals set forth in the original blueprint. The Placement Bureau is looking for other places to interview. Maybe you'll even be able to hear at the back of the room.

Mason's point is the important one now. The students have to support the coffeeshouse, under any name — especially those who bitch so loudly that there's nothing to do around here. Now is not the time for apathy. The idea behind the place is that it will be a place to go, regardless of what band is playing, to sit around, hang out in a comfortable atmosphere, get some good food and drink. Granted, there's no booze — according to Dean Roemer's latest stormtrooper proclamations, anyone who drinks should have his legs removed anyway — but that is not the only requisite element for relaxing and enjoying oneself.

This place can work, and should it become successful, it will give the students much more viability in their appearances before the almighty trustees, not to mention the entertainment possibilities which could arise in the coffeeshouse. And who knows, maybe there are some more Ritz crackers sitting around somewhere.

South Bend responds to o-c editorial

Dear Editor:

In response to your editorial of Sept. 2 ("Whither o-c crime"), I heartily agree with your first conclusion, that the obvious solution is cooperation among all parties concerned.

I feel your statement that "there is no love lost between the citizens of South Bend and ND students" is overly exaggerated. I readily admit that relations have deteriorated over the past years, but I don't feel it has reached the point you have indicated. I am a resident of the northeast section of South Bend and have been for many years. One of the reasons I live where I do is because of its proximity to the ND campus. Many other "permanent residents" live where they do for similar reasons. We expect a certain amount of noise, a certain amount of parties, a certain amount of traffic congestion. Unfortunately, the limits of what we expected or have been accustomed to, have been greatly stretched the past few years.

It is difficult to feel "neighborly" to anyone whose loud party keeps your children awake until 4 a.m. It is difficult to feel "neighborly" when your front yard is littered with cups, beer cans, etc.

I respect Notre Dame, its administrators, faculty and student body very much. I am very distressed by the deterioration of relations between the northeast neighborhood and the University. I am committed to working with the northeast residents, the off-campus students, the University officials and other city officials to find some common ground within which we can all live. From this I hope we can develop a sense of community, where there isn't a "student" problem or a "resident" problem, but a "community" problem that we can put forth a united front to correct.

The session will be held in St. Edward's chapel at 8:30 p.m. This will be the first of a series of monthly forum. The FCA is a non-denominational group which promotes Christian fellowship among athletes and coaches. — The Observer

The deadline for entry in the interhall track meet is next Wednesday (Sept. 16). The meet, scheduled for Friday, Sept. 25, is for both Notre Dame men and women. Sign-up at the Office of Non-Varsity Athletics (C-2 of the ACC) or call 6100. — The Observer

Cross Country league competition will consist of seven man teams. All members must be from the same hall. The deadline for entries is Wednesday (Sept. 16) and can be submitted to the NVA office (C-2 of the ACC) or call 6100. Competition will take place on Burke Golf course and the time and date will be announced. — The Observer

Referees are needed for Notre Dame's women's interhall flag football. Interested men or women should contact the NVA office at 6100 or stop by C-2 of the ACC. — The Observer

"The reason to keep some assistants from the last coach is just for the sake of continuity. There are a lot of things a new coach has to learn about the school or the organization. Besides, why not keep a man on the staff if he is a good coach?"

Brown is a fan of Faust, and he is eager to talk about the new Irish coach.

"I've known him for quite some time," Brown says. "He is an unusual person, and a superb coach. All he has to do is be himself, and he'll be successful. His enthusiasm and bubbly personality make him a swell person to be associated with. He's just a great guy."

Faust opens his first season this weekend in a game against LSU. Brown says he's sent a letter wishing the best of luck, and certainly better luck than Brown himself had for his first college game.

"I'll never forget that game," he says with a chuckle. "We were playing at home against Missouri, and the coach of the Tigers was Don Faurot, the man I had beaten out for the Ohio State job."

"The day started out on a bad note. As the team arrived for the game and was getting off the bus, I spotted some old friends from Massillon. So, I sent the boys inside, and stopped to talk. As I headed in the stadium, a guard grabbed me and asked for my ticket."

"I don't have a ticket, I'm Paul Brown," I said.

"Yeah, and I'm President Roosevelt, and you still can't come in," he replied.

"Well, there was nothing I could do to convince him. So I ended up throwing pebbles at the locker room window. Eventually, one of the players spotted me, and sent the trainer down to let me in."

"We had seen Missouri's spring game," he recalls, "and there was nothing exceptional about it. But wouldn't you know it, Faurot picked our game to invent the split T formation."

"Now, the split T eventually revolutionized college football. It led to the wishbone and the veer offenses. But I didn't know what it was. Faurot was really trying to get back at me for getting the job he wanted."

"Missouri drove up and down the field all day, but they couldn't seem to get inside our twenty yard line. We ended up winning, 12-7, which shows you how bad place-kickers were then."

After the game friends chided Brown for being unable to beat Missouri by a bigger margin. The Tigers were not supposed to have much of a team. Little did they know that the split T would win every other game for Missouri, and they would end up in the Sugar Bowl.

Brown and the Buckeyes lost just one game that season, and the next year were the undefeated National Champions. Could Gerry Faust be as successful?

"Anything is possible," Brown says. "Gerry is a superb coach, and he has terrific material to work with. He's going to do very well."

"You see, at places like Notre Dame, (and Ohio State was the same when I was there) people want a winner. When you have that, there is no pressure. The real pressure for a coach comes when he is fighting with the administration or with the team owner. Otherwise, when the people want a winner, and your doing your best to give them one, it's just a lot of fun."

color, pagentry and the air of excitement that television helped to create, and voila — money.

Big money.

Answers for reorganizing the NCAA were given, in part, in 1978 when colleges and universities were separated into different levels of competition — Division I, II, III and so forth. After all, the Notre Dames and Ohio States shouldn't be playing the Davidson's and Widners too often, should they?

That wasn't enough for the really big hitters. Thus, the CFA was created three years ago to try to get things done within the NCAA. Different schools joined the CFA for different reasons—some for greed. Most others, like Notre Dame, joined for principles.

Among the CFA's initial objectives was further internal reorganization. Why should Marquette, Wabash, Dayton and the like—schools without major football programs—carry equal clout on the critical television issue as the Division I powers? Further, the CFA wants to impose tighter academic requirements, not only on college athletes, but on incoming freshmen as well. It also supports elimination of freshman eligibility and an increase in the number of coaches and scholarships.

In recent weeks, the media has painted an ugly picture of the CFA. A large part of the bias in print probably lies with the fact that the NCAA has a full-time public relations staff while the CFA has no one... yet. Indications have been that if the CFA wins, corruption will run rampant throughout college football. On the contrary, the CFA only could improve on the present situation. "The NCAA's answer has always been to add another investigator," says Corrigan. "The CFA's answer is to get people together in a room and confront each other."

A change in the approach to abuses certainly couldn't hurt. At present a staff of roughly eight is playing watchdog over the 700-plus NCAA members. Now isn't that absurd?

Corrigan is quick to point out however, "Not everyone in the CFA agrees on all the issues. It's tough to get 60 people to agree on anything, like 'Today's Monday'."

Most have tried to drape a blanket of greed over the CFA schools. For certain institutions, that is an accurate charge. But not for all.

"It's a matter of rights," Corrigan emphasizes. "Does the NCAA own the rights to anything that involves the Fighting Irish, including cable TV?"

Ah, there's the rub—cable television. Today we are only scratching the surface. Any farsighted entertainment outlet, like a college athletic department, has to realize this as a gold mine of the not-too-distant future. People are throwing around figures—as high as $80 million in cable revenues for one Notre Dame-USC game!!! There's just no telling how big this could become.

Perhaps you've noticed the new satellite receiver on the roof at WNDU. Don't think for a minute that its sole purpose is to make Channel 16 "The Leader." Should the CFA win its battle in principle, thus stripping the NCAA of its television negotiating rights and returning them to the institutions, a private Notre Dame cable television network could become a future reality.

And would that hold down tuition!

At the beginning, I said Notre Dame could have been placed on probation yesterday.

Here's why the University was not...

For three weeks, CFA and non-CFA schools have been talking, discussing, arguing, debating or whatever—trying to decide on a course of action. An eventual compromise is a certainty. After all, no one ever wins this kind of dispute outright.

Different schools and conferences have wisely been pushing compromise. After all, if the NCAA evicts the CFA members, it may as well dissolve itself. The CFA holds the trump card.

The Chief Executive Officers of the Big Eight Conference, for instance, sent a letter to the NCAA stating, "(We) sent a letter to the NCAA stating, 'We' should be taken on either the CFA or NCAA football television packages, until the NCAA has addressed the fundamental question of reorganization. We strongly urge that the NCAA move to convene a special meeting by November 15 for the resolution of these critical matters."

"As members of the NCAA, we respectfully request an official response from the NCAA leadership prior to September 9."

The Atlantic Coast and the Southeastern Conferences sent similar letters.

Tuesday the NCAA had a lot of wind taken from its sails when a state district judge in Austin, Tex., issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting the NCAA from taking or threatening disciplinary action against schools which participate in the CFA contract with NBC. The order was requested by the University of Texas as a first step in a class action suit it filed on behalf of all 61 CFA members challenging the NCAA's right to control the television of college football.

The CFA postponed its re-vote scheduled for yesterday until next Friday. Also the NCAA has agreed to sit down and discuss a possible compromise, but the guess here is that things won't be settled until January at the annual NCAA convention.

Against Stanford

Campbell leads Boilermakers

WEST LAFAYETTE* (Ind.) (AP) — Scott Campbell made his college football debut against Notre Dame on National television a year ago when a thumb injury sidelined quarterback Mark Hermann. On Saturday, the Purdue Sophomore will make his second start on national TV, this time against 19th ranked Stanford.

"He will be a little better prepared than he was a year ago, but certainly more is being asked of him this year," says Purdue Coach Jim Young, who had relied on Hermann's strong arm for four seasons.

The non-conference clash (2:20 p.m. EST kickoff, ABC/TV) will be the 1981 opener for both teams. Purdue was 9-3 last year, while Stanford finished 6-5.

With the graduation of Hermann, the 6-foot, 195-pound Campbell moved up to No. 1 quarterback this year. He looked good in spring and pre-season practices, but the Boilermakers don't figure to pass as much as they did in previous years.

"Our thinking going into the (Stanford) game is to pass less," Young said. "We'd like to have two runs for every pass. We figure to put the ball in the air, but not as much as we did the last year or two."

Campbell, who hit 17 of 26 passes for 178 yards in last year's loss to Notre Dame, saw limited action the rest of the season and finished with 293 yards.

John Elway, the Stanford quarterback, however, completed 65 percent of his passes for 2,889 yards and 27 touchdowns. Couple that with the return of halfback Darrin Nelson who rushed for 889 yards and caught 47 passes for another 552 yards, and the Boilermakers will have their hands full.

"They're truly all-Americans," Young said. "Certainly, Elway is a great athlete with an exceptionally strong arm and the ability to scramble. That's what impresses me the most."

"With Nelson, they have a threat whether he's catching passes or running," Young continued. "He's a threat to go all hands on the football."

Borg nips Tanner, while Connors dumps Teltscher

NEW YORK (AP) - Sweden's Bjorn Borg won his annual quarterfinal duel with Roscoe Tanner 7-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6 Thursday and moved into the semifinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships.

Borg, who has yet to win America's premier tennis event in 10 years of trying, finally captured his quarterfinal battle after Tanner had fought off three match points. He now will meet fourth-seeded Jimmy Connors, who easily beat No. 8 Eliot Teltscher, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2, late last night.

Top-seeded John McEnroe's semifinal foe will be No. 15 Vitus Gerulaitis, who got by unseeded Bruce Manson.

The women's semifinals, scheduled for Friday, will pit No. 1 Chris Evert Lloyd against No. 4 Martina Navratilova, and No. 3 Tracy Austin against No. 11 Barbara Potter.

"This was my best match so far in the tournament," said Borg, who is seeded second here. "I was serving much better... (and) I felt confidence in my passing shots."

Tanner had difficulty holding his serve in the opening set, while the ninth-seeded right hander never won any game against Borg's serve. With the exception of the match-opening game, Borg took Tanner to deuce every time the left-hander served.

But Tanner held, and they went to a tiebreaker, the first of three they were to play in their two-hour, 49 minute battle. Borg quickly won the first four points before winning 7-4 and taking the opening set.

Borg broke Tanner in the second game of the next set, then rode his own serve to grab a 2-0 victory. It appeared then that Borg would easily capture his third U.S. Open quarterfinal meeting with Tanner. They had split the first two, Tanner winning in 1979 and Borg last year.

Bjorn Borg, who has never won a U.S. Open Tennis Championship, moved one step closer to his first title yesterday as he defeated Roscoe Tanner. Borg now faces his old nemesis, Jimmy Connors, in the semifinals. [AP Laserphoto]

A Cub pennant!?

Could this be the year?

CHICAGO (AP) - Playing 500 ball in the second half of baseball's split season isn't exactly burning up the league nor is a 6-8 road trip anything to really crow about, but the Chicago Cubs are causing a stir in the National League East.

They've done it with a totally unexpected three-game sweep at St. Louis, where the Cardinals were threatening to make a runaway of their division in Season II.

That was before Jerry Reuss and Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers slowed down the Cardinals. Then along came the Cubs, who hadn't won a single game on artificial turf this season.

"Give the Cubs credit," said Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog. "They've got a reprieve when the season was split into two halves and they took advantage of it."

As for his own club, which remains in first place a game and a half ahead of the Cubs, Montreal and the New York Mets, Herzog said, "All I can do is pray and hope they break out of it. Valenzuela and Reuss give us trouble every time we play the Dodgers, but we didn't exactly break down the fences when we played the Cubs earlier."

One reason is that Cub pitching of late has been effective while Bill Buckner and a suddenly hot Bobby Bonds have been carrying in the hitting load.

"We're back in the hunt," said Manager Joey Amalfitano. "We've got some dependable starting pitchers, and I can leave Randy Martz in the bullpen for the time being. Having Randy available for long relief or spot starts is a big plus."

Two of the starters are Doug Bird and Mike Griffin, who were obtained from the New York Yankees in a trade for Rick Reuschel hours before the strike began last June.

Mike Krukow and Ken Kravec, who did a turnabout after the strike, are the other two starters. In the bullpen with Martz, who has also been used as a starter, are Dick Tidrow and Dave Geisel, who turned in a fine relief performance in St. Louis.

Bonds, who was benched a week ago because of lack of hitting, caught fire in St. Louis.

He slugged two home runs in Monday's 10-0 romp and hit two more Wednesday to complete the sweep.

Buckner, the National League's defending batting champion, is on a hitting binge. He has hit safely in 25 of 26 games and the last nine in a row during which he has collected 18 hits in 39 at bats to hike his average to .313.

"In order to win you have to believe you can win," said Buckner who learned something about winning back in the days he was with the Dodgers. "Everybody's doing the job and we're playing better."

Amalfitano noted that "Buckner is not a holler-type guy but on the bench he's more active than he's been in the past. Maybe he senses something is happening here."

Amalfitano gave the Cubs the day off Thursday following the tiring road trip. They open a three-game series at home against Montreal today.

O'Sullivan seeks tourney bid

By THERON ROBERTS
Sports Writer

Even though it lost three of its top players by graduation last year, Coach Noel O'Sullivan's Notre Dame golf squad anticipates another bountiful year when the season starts next spring.

The team members have already started practicing together in order to be in tune for the two competitions scheduled for this fall. Later this month the linksmen will travel to Lebanon, Ind., for the Indiana Intercollegiate Golf Championships, vying for the state crown.

Coach O'Sullivan noted a similarity between the goals of this year and last. "We lived up to a lot of our expectations last year. However, we did not reach our ultimate goal — an NCAA tournament bid for the whole team," he remarked. However, he acknowledged that a bid this year is more likely because his lineup is very solid.

Returning to fill the top four slots are: junior captain Stoney Ferlmann; senior Bob Horak, who earned a berth in the prestigious U.S. Amateur this summer, and sophomores David Pangraze and David Moorman. The Irish mentor had a good recruiting year, acquiring some top freshmen prospects and a junior college transfer from Florida, Frank Leyes.

O'Sullivan commented, "This is going to be a year of freshmen. That fact is very evident when one looks at the number of first-year students that have signed up for the Notre Dame Open, to be held September 13-19 on Burke Memorial Golf Course. Almost half of the participants will be freshmen. The purpose of the open is to expose the expertise of any student willing to compete.

According to O'Sullivan, his teams will always have plenty of talent. But because this year's squad has summer tournament experience and what the coach calls "consideration for the other members of the team, he is looking forward to his most successful year in eight seasons.

GO IRISH, TAME THE TIGERS

A fresh approach to good food. Low Prices.

At last, South Bend has a restaurant where you can eat real nice and not beef about the price. Barclay's Meat & Produce. Where good food is an everyday affair.

Beefy, charcoal-broiled dinners.

You'll see what we're talking about the second you walk in. Meat lockers stuffed with your favorite hearty cuts of lean, tender beef. Like Sirloin, Rib Eye, Prime Rib. And maybe the best darn Barbeque Ribs you've ever tasted. All slowly roasted over real charcoal to sear in the juices and capture that smokey, outdoor flavor you love. Getting hungry? Then come to Barclay's.

Greatest salads in town, bar none. Our 35-foot salad bar is so incredible that we call it a Produce Bar. A farmer's market of over 40 different fresh greens and vegetables—

Football weekends --open at 11:00 a.m.

If you're a picky eater, Barclay's is the perfect place for lunch. We've got the only Deli Bar in town where you can build your own personalized sandwich. Pick from our giant assortment of fresh breads, cheeses, hot ham, hot roast beef, cold cuts and all the extras. Put it together and we'll charge you by the ounce. But we won't charge you much.

Undress for dinner Whether you're wearing your oldest blue jeans or your best blue suit, just come as you are when you come to Barclay's. And don't bother stopping by the bank on the way. Our full dinners range from an appetizing $3.95, to nothing higher than an easy-to-swallow $7.95. Every week, we dish out the tastiest Sunday service in town. Spare Ribs & Roast Beef. Chicken à la King, Lasagna & Fish. Mashed Potatoes, Dressing & Gravy. Farm fresh salad from our spectacular Produce Bar. All at the very affordable price of just $6.95. So come pass the plate with us next Sunday. You can take all you want.

Without giving 'till it hurts.

Still paralyzedIU's Turner improving rapidlyBy JIMMIE ANGELOPOLOUS
The Indianapolis News

Indianapolis (AP) -- Landon Turner's double room on the third floor of the Children's Pavilion at Methodist Hospital is a little different from other rooms.

Two huge basketball posters -- one of Darrell Griffith and one of Darryl Dawkins -- adorn one wall. In between, a paper skeleton dangles.

"This skeleton was signed by Landon's anatomy classmates," explains Turner's mother, Rita.

Turner, a junior on Indiana University's 1981 NCAA basketball championship team, is hospitalized and partially paralyzed from injuries received in a July 25 automobile accident.

On the room's back wall are photos and get-well cards, including a huge card sent by Bobby Knight, IU basketball coach.

A classroom of grade-schoolers from Weyerhaeuser, Wis., sent hand-scrawled letters to their television basketball hero. A note from a Carmel, Ind., seventh-grader especially touched Turner's mother. It reads, "I.U. needs you and little boys like me need you."

"This is such a nice letter," Mrs. Turner said.

One mother sent a photograph of her small son, named Landon because "she had seen Landon play basketball when she was pregnant," Mrs. Turner said.

Near Turner's bed rests a bright floral boupuet, nestled in black and gold, sent by Purdue University and its basketball players. "Best of health and luck," reads the message from Indiana's arch-rivals.

Turner smiles only faintly at his parent's conversation and all the cheer in his hospital room.

But not because he isn't mentally alert. He sits upright in a wheelchair. A wrap-around neck and chin collar keeps his head rigid. A supporting strip down the front anchors a waist brace. "Landon has improved astonishingly since his severe car accident," his father, Adell, 47, said. "Maybe 1,000 percent."

Turner was driving toward an Ohio amusement park with his girl friend, Suzanne Jones, and two other friends, David Collins and Elesha Storey, when he was injured. Investigators said his car caught the berm around a dangerous curve on Ind. 46 near Columbus, Ind.

"Landon was headed for a truck, but he swerved the car back," his mother said. "The road had a drop of six or seven inches. His car flipped over on its top. David and Elesha managed to get out and David saved my son's life and Suzanne's. The front seat had caught fire."

The accident broke the sixth cervical vertebra at the base of Turner's spinal cord, doctors said. Paralysis set in and for several days, Turner was unconscious.

"Thank God there was no brain damage. He's very normal there," Mrs. Turner said.

Turner has begun therapy. But doctors say his hands and legs still are paralyzed, and they won't speculate on his chances for complete recovery.

"He just started to sit in a wheelchair," Mrs. Turner said. "He had a sore tailbone. They had taken a piece of bone from his hip to make the fusion. Today's the first time he's had therapy."

Mrs. Turner reported her son had lost 57 pounds, but predicted, "He'll get better. His spirit is good."

Turner agrees. "I'm feeling better," he said.

Purdue has an experienced secondary with the return of safeties Tim Seneff and Marcus McKinnie and cornerback Robert Williams, but Young said it will take more than just those players to stop Elway.

"I think containing him certainly is a concern, but I really feel it's difficult to isolate any phase of the defense," Young said. "All phases have to come through to stop Stanford's passing game. We have to have a total team effort defensively."

Stanford Coach Paul Wiggins makes no bones that it's the offense that will carry the bulk of the responsibility for the Cardinals' success.

"We are what everyone knows us to be," Wiggins said.

"We have a great quarterback in Elway and running back in Nelson. The biggest mystery for us is defense."

"We didn't change personnel dramatically," Wiggins said of a defense that gave up 404 yards a game last year. "But we feel we are a little better."

After nine months of speaking engagements and endless workouts, Gerry Faust finally will fulfill his lifelong dream tomorrow in his Notre Dame coaching debut against LSU.

From Coach Faust

We ask you to please stay off the field during tomorrow's game—especially after a score. We are proud of Notre Dame's image and our sportsmanship—let's do nothing to tarnish that image. Delay of the game under these circumstances can result in a penalty.

Thanks for your cooperation
Gerry Faust

The Gerry Faust of 1941

The collegiate football power needed a new head coach. They chose the country's most successful high school coach, a man responsible for powerhouse teams in the Cincinnati area. They were criticized at first, but the man soon won over all his critics with his enthusiasm and winning football.

The story is well-known to Notre Dame football fans. But this is not about Notre Dame's new coach, Gerry Faust. This version took place 40 years ago, and involves one of the greatest football coaches of all time, Paul Brown.

"I was the coach at Massillon High School when the head coaching position at Ohio State opened up," Brown recalls. "That was the only job I ever wanted. I had dreamed of being at Ohio State since the day I started coaching." Paul Brown won the national championship in his second year at Ohio State, and later founded the Cleveland Browns, leading them to a number of NFL championships. He also established the Cincinnati Bengals, and now serves as the team's general manager.

At the beginning of his career he built Massillon High into the strongest team in the state. It's a tradition of winning that continues today. Last November, Faust's Moeller High School team defeated Massillon in the Ohio state championship game. His success brought him acclaim, and his move to the college ranks created greater attention.

"Gerry Faust is going through the same things today that I put up with 40 years ago," he says. "It seems like every reporter in the country wants to see you. They are all looking for some kind of angle. Of course, you have to co-operate with the press, but you can't let them interfere with the work you have to do."

CFA vs. NCAA

ND instrumental in TV battle

The University of Notre Dame could have been placed on NCAA probation yesterday. Here's why...

The heated debate between the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the College Football Association returned to the headlines this week — right on schedule.

Yesterday was to be D-Day — Decision Day for the CFA.

It has been three weeks since the 61-member CFA voted to ratify a four-year television package with NBC worth $180 million. The vote was 33 in favor, 20 against, five abstaining and three schools not voting because their credentials were not in order.

Yesterday there was to be a re-vote of sorts. Anyone who wanted to change their vote could have done so. For months the word from NCAA headquarters has been that CFA schools voting to ratify the NBC package would be harshly reprimanded. Thirty-three schools called the bluff on August 21. The rest backed down.

And throughout the three-year history of the CFA, what school has led the charge, was, of course, one of the 33 yes votes, and, in fact, was instrumental in the creation of this rebellious group?

You guessed it — The University of Notre Dame.

In its barest simplicity, this controversy stems from the fact that NCAA member institutions just aren't allowed to do that. In July the NCAA signed a similar pact with ABC and CBS worth $263 million. The two-network package would allow a given school to be on television six times over two years. The CFA deal allows for seven appearances over the same span.

NCAA regulations strictly forbid member institutions from participating in a football television contract that the NCAA itself did not negotiate. But the situation is far more complex.

Not since Teddy Roosevelt initiated the

Michael Ortman

NCAA in the early 1900s amidst mounting fatalities on the gridiron, has that governing body faced such a critical turning point.

This drama has been unfolding for decades, and to trace its origins, one need look no further than this very campus.

Turn the clock back, if you will, to the late 1940s. Things were much as they are today. The Fighting Irish were the hottest item available in the relatively young world of college football television. Notre Dame was wallowing in her rich tradition and global booster club. And by the mid-'50s, Notre Dame had her own television network for football.

Other schools were up in arms, especially the Big Ten schools. "Notre Dame's on TV all the time," they pouted, "and my school never gets on."

"We're only giving the public what they want," came the logical response from the television execs.

That response wasn't quite good enough. Hence the NCAA assumed the right to negotiate a collective television contract for the "benefit" of its members.

The big football schools lived with this verdict for the next 20 years. After all, "We're only talking about a few thousand dollars, right?"

But that few thousand became a few hundred thousand dollars, and then a few million dollars. And the tensions grew.

And as the years passed, sports at any level — football in particular — were becoming more and more business-like. More televisions... add

Dolphins clobber Steelers

MIAMI (AP)—Quarterback David Woodley tossed a 13-yard scoring pass to halfback Tony Nathan and rookie Tommy Vigorito returned a punt 87 yards for a touchdown as the Miami Dolphins broke away from the Pittsburgh Steelers in the second half for a 30-10 National Football League victory Thursday night.

A national television audience and a sellout crowd of 74,190, largest in six years at the Orange Bowl, watched Miami improve to 2-0. Pittsburgh, meanwhile, dropped to 0-2, the club's worst start in 11 years.

The aging Steelers, winners of four Super Bowls in the late 1970's, were again victimized by turnovers. After seven turnovers in their opening-game 37-33 loss to Kansas City on Sunday, the two turnovers led to the Dolphin scores Thursday.

Miami built a 13-10 halftime lead on a 1-yard touchdown plunges by Woodley and rookie fullback Andra Franklin, then broke open the game with two touchdowns within a five-minute period of the third quarter.

Nathan, a third-year pro who caught eight passes for 84 yards, ripped off a 28-yard run for a first down at the Steeler 26 midway through the quarter. Woodley, in his second year as a pro, hit Nathan crossing the middle for the touchdown as two Steeler defenders collided at the goal line.

Five minutes later, Vigorito fielded a Craig Colquitt punt on the left side at his own 13, raced toward the right sideline, turned the corner and streaked the length of the field untouched for a 27-10 lead with 3:39 left in the third period.

Uwe von Schamann added a 32-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter after third-year safety Glenn Blackwood's second interception led to Woodley's earlier touchdown plunge.

Pittsburgh rookie David Trout kicked a 23-yard, first quarter field goal, and Bradshaw hurled a 32-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Jim Smith in the second quarter.

The Dolphins, whose average team age is just over 24 years, added the victory to a 20-7 win at St. Louis on Sunday.

Woodley connected on 14 of 34 passes for 161 yards with one interception, while Bradshaw, sacked four times, was 14 of 32 for 210 yards.

Nathan was the game's leading rusher with 77 yards on 10 carries, while Frank Pollard led Pittsburgh with 63 rushing yards on 11 attempts.

The Steelers opened scoring with Trout's field goal with 5:45 remaining in the first quarter. A 24-yard Bradshaw pass to John Stallworth gave the Steelers a first-and-goal at the Miami 1, but they settled for the kick after two failed running plays, a penalty and an incomplete pass.

"Everybody says that a high school coach could never recruit well enough to build a winning college program," he says. "They said the same thing when I went to Ohio State. But it's really no trouble. The real strength of a high school coach is that he knows where to go. I knew everyone when I was the coach at Massillon — coaches, friends, former players — they are all helpful in recruiting."

"Being a high school coach also gives you an opportunity to watch the college coaches who come to recruit your players. You can learn a lot about what you want to do, and what you don't want to do, by dealing with them."

Besides, if you have a good high school team, you can bring some of them along with you. Brown took six of his players from Massillon in his first year at Ohio State. Faust has three members of last year's Moeller team on the Notre Dame roster.

Assistant coaches are vital to the operation of a team, and that is always seen as a problem for a new coach.

"It's not a case of learning the ropes," Brown says. "The X's and O's make the transition quite easily. It may surprise you, but I used the same basic plays with the Browns and the Bengals that I did at Massillon. Gerry, apparently, is doing the same thing."
