Notre Dame vs. South : a modern Civil War

EDITOR'S NOTE: The author of the following has been on both sides of the fence. After an illustrious career on the Notre Dame sports media scene, Tim "Bone" Bourret was named Associate Sports Information Director at Clemson University in South Carolina. His two-sided involvement in the rivalry between Notre Dame and schools of the Southeastern and Atlantic Coast Conferences (plus a handful of independents) makes him more than qualified to author this article on the hatred, or let's say intense rivalry between Notre Dame and the South.

By TIM BOURRET
Special to The Observer

For reasons more sociological than personal, Notre Dame is not particularly popular with college football fans of the otherwise hospitable South. There has never been a warm reception for the Blue and Gold (or light Blue, or green or whatever shade they are wearing) in the South for reasons of religion, past wars or jealousy, especially in contemporary times.

Any individual raised in the North who migrates to the South for employment or some other reason, will document the feeling among southerners that they are still fighting the Civil War — "The War of Northern Aggression" as some call it. In athletics the natural rivalry caused by physical competition makes the blood to run thicker, and when Notre Dame is involved it turns to cement. When you come to the South from the North, you are a Damn Yankee. But, when you move to the South from the Golden Dome, you're twice as bad — you're a Notre Dame Yankee.

It all started in the 1860's when a team led by Coach Grant pulled the naked reverse against Coach Lee's squad to score a late touchdown in the original North-South game. Since then, the South has been trying to get revenge, even though the North doesn't realize it. The feeling has carried over into the grand game of college football, especially when Notre Dame is involved.

The rivalry serves to motivate the southern squads because they look forward to beating Notre Dame, more than Notre Dame looks forward to beating them. "We have rivalries in our conference that date back to the turn of the century, but that game against Notre Dame in 1977 was second to none in importance to us," says Al Adams, former assistant sports information director at Clemson. "Coach (Frank) Howard scheduled that game in the late-'60s, and we had a special news conference in 1968 just to announce it, even though it would not be played for about 10 years."

On the field, the motivation instilled in players can be frightening, and, in the case of the 1977 Mississippi-Notre Dame game, disastrous. "During the whole game the guy opposite me was like a man possessed," said Ken MacAfee in a postgame interview. "He called me all sorts of names, it was like fighting in the Civil War."

Former Clemson cheerleader Joey Erwin summarized the rivalry motivation on a religious plateau. "When Notre Dame came to the Valley (Clemson) it was the Northern Catholics against the Southern Baptists. They (Notre Dame) didn't hear any Hail Marys in the stands at Clemson."

Present Clemson coach Danny Ford put the meaning of the game with Notre Dame in perspective when he said prior to his team's

Emotions run high as Irish await Tigers

By KELLY SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

For the fans, it's the anticipation of an explosive afternoon of college football.

For the players, it's the anticipation after months and months of preparation.

And for Coach Gerry Faust, it's the anticipation of a lifetime dream come true.

"I know it'll be a real emotional moment for me the first time we go through that tunnel and hit the field," exclaims Faust. "That's something I've thought about a great deal since coming to Notre Dame."

The 1:30 p.m. kickoff against the Louisiana State Tigers figures to be one of the most enthusiastic season openers the Irish ever have had. Yet Faust doesn't want the emotion surrounding his Notre Dame debut to run completely wild.

"The players can sense when you're relaxed, so I'll try and control myself," he explains. "A team can be too psyched. Then they get tight, and they don't perform the way you want. So we're trying to keep a low-keyed approach for this game."

On the other hand, Faust must guard against a case of overconfidence developing in the Irish camp in view of LSU's loss to Alabama last weekend.

"This game is our most important, because it's the first. We're not looking past it, and we're not counting LSU out. I was impressed by the way they came back in the second half against Alabama — they came out and played excellent football, and probably won the second half statistically."

Tiger Coach Jerry Stovall was equally pleased with his team's performance after halftime. "I'm proud of the fact that the team continued to play with emotion even though we were so far behind," he relates. "Our big problem came defensively — we didn't defense the option off the wishbone well."

Stovall doesn't feel that facing Notre Dame's full house offense will present any new challenges to his squad. "We've played a lot of teams that use misdirection and different formations."

The second year coach fields one of the youngest football teams LSU ever has had. Stovall sent 11 rookies in against the Tide last Saturday. "We expect to play just as many freshmen against Notre Dame so we'll have experience when we get into conference play."

While Faust doesn't intend on starting that many new faces, he's starting a new era in the Irish offense. "Our multiple system is coming along real well," he says. "It's going to take more than just a few games or a few months to perfect, though. You've got to bring players up through a new system. It'll take a few seasons to perfect it, but I'm very pleased with the progress."

LSU's speed concerns Faust a bit, but the way to counteract it, he says, is to "play heads-up football and not make mistakes." What bothers the Irish mentor most is the unknown.

"I've been with the team nine months, but I really can't evaluate them yet because I've never seen them go up against college opposition. My players may be world-beaters compared to other schools, but I won't know until I see if they can run and throw and tackle as well as the LSU players can."

That moment can't come soon enough for Gerry Faust and his first Notre Dame football squad. "The kids want to see another jersey besides their teammate's across that line. They're itching to get out and perform."

New look

Cheerleaders shift focus

By CHUCK GREENE

Alumni, pep rallies, fightsongs — football weekends return, along with the 1981 Notre Dame cheerleaders. New Head Coach Gerry Faust leads the players on the field as the squad finalizes its routines to rally the students in the stands.

Co-captain Shelly Obermiller is very excited about this year's squad, as she and Clark Gibson lead 10 others, including seven new members, into the LSU game. The enthusiasm of the new people seems to be endless according to Obermiller, who says, "They have so much spirit — and a lot of talent. We'll be trying new things, and this should be a great squad."

This year's squad will be much different from last year's, just as the football team will show more versatility. Custom-tailored royal blue uniforms provide a new look this year, complimenting the team's jerseys. Also, this year's squad has chosen cheerleading as their main goal.

"They're working on the direction of their cheerleading," says the team's advisor and Director of Student Activities James McDonnell. "They want to stay away from glamorized stunts and routines that focus more on them than on crowd enthusiasm. This group focuses crowd attention and gets them involved, using creative routines that incorporate the crowd into what they're doing."

The cheerleaders have two seasons, in effect, cheering for the football and basketball seasons. They cheer at all home football games and will travel to as many away contests as possible. Also, they'll cheer at all home basketball games, and likely some road games.

The time commitment of the cheerleaders is a great one. They practice six days a week, two hours a session. Obermiller says it's tough on the squad, but they are doing pretty well so far. "Most of them are still so excited about the beginning of the season that it has not yet become dull for them — and it may never."

She adds that the greatest thing about being a cheerleader is the people you meet, and being able to represent the university. "It's been the best experience I've ever had. I feel lucky that I got the chance to cheer here, especially in Coach Faust's first year. The games are wonderful, with the electricity you feel when you walk into the stadium. But I think the pep rallies are the best. For 30 or 40 minutes we have the undivided attention of 3,000 to 4,000 people. The spirit there is unbelievable — typical Notre Dame spirit."

The squad enters its first regular season game today. The season will be marked by enthusiasm and desire to excel. Obermiller says this desire will make this cheerleading squad a great one. "We want to be really great. We want people to know we're from Notre Dame. Most importantly, we want the students to be proud of their squad."

Recalls Moeller

Faust pupil awaits reunion

By ROD BLACKMON
LSU Reveille Sports Editor

BATON ROUGE, La. — Eric Ellington arrived in Baton Rouge a year ago and immediately stepped onto a rollercoaster.

The highly-touted running back out of Cincinnati's Moeller High School was billed as one of LSU's game-breakers. But that's not how it turned out. Instead, according to the scheme of the Tigers' veer offense, Ellington usually took a straight handoff and found himself at the bottom of a big pile in the middle of the field.

He never really got a chance to show his stuff. He fumbled a kickoff, which removed him from that role. He took a pitchout and scampered 15 yards, only to take a hit, lose the ball and find himself on the end of the bench again.

It was a year of freshman frustration.

The Tiger staff decided to stick with the veer this year, so it looked for another place where Ellington's talents could be advantageous. Flanker was suggested, and flanker it was.

Ellington began spring workouts as the No. 4 flanker. Yet last week, when LSU opened against Alabama, the 5-9 sparkplug was in the starting lineup.

It looked as though the rollercoaster ride was over, that Ellington had settled into a position that he both liked and was impressive in performing. Not so.

Monday in practice, Ellington strained a hamstring muscle and was dropped from the Tiger depth chart. And this was the week he was supposed to play against his former coach and close advisor, Gerry Faust.

Coach Jerry Stovall says Ellington will play, but it won't be known how effective he will be until kickoff.

The loss of Ellington's darting running and catching could hurt LSU's chances considerably. Against Alabama, Ellington was one of only a few players to show any speed and quickness.

How ironic it would be for Ellington to be influential in an LSU victory.

"When I was in high school, we (he and Faust) used to talk a lot — we were pretty close," says Ellington. "He always told me if there was anywhere he'd go, he'd go to Notre Dame. I'm not surprised he went."

Ellington, however, visited the Notre Dame campus like so many other Moeller graduates, but he chose to play elsewhere.

"Notre Dame was so much like Moeller," he says. "The social life wasn't really what I wanted it to be. There's more to school than just going to class."

When news of Faust's appointment was announced, rumors flourished about Ellington transferring to play for his old coach. But Ellington stayed put, despite the frustration he suffered last fall.

"I never thought of transferring to Notre Dame," Ellington says. "I didn't want to sit out a year. I made the decision to come here, and I'm happy with the decision. This year I'm a lot more confident. Things just fell into place and I don't know how it happened or why it happened. But I'm excited."

"Last year I was really nervous. I wondered how much playing time I was going to get instead of whether we were going to win or lose. But now I'm contributing more. I know what I'm doing, and I know what it takes to make a play work. It's a team effort all the way around, but everyone has to do their part."

No doubt Faust had a lot to do with seeding those values in Ellington, it just took a year for them to grow. He had to reason that playing flanker in the Tigers' offense would best suit his skills. He accepted this, and he succeeded in making the move.

"I had running back in my blood," Ellington says. "I used to love carrying the ball. I

Bang-bang start tough on Tigers

Michigan . . . Southern Cal . . . Penn State . . . then the bowl game and the Cinderella season of first-year Irish Head Coach Gerry Faust is complete with a national championship. Right?

A lot of people have visions of it happening — and it very well may — but if the Irish football team overlooks Louisiana State, Faust's debut may turn into a disaster.

But Faust isn't taking anything for granted. "LSU has got an excellent football team. In fact, in the second half of the game against Alabama they really came of age," Faust said. "I was very impressed with Malcom Scott — their tight end — their two quarterbacks (Alan) Risher and the freshman (Tim) Byrd — and of course I was impressed with Eric Ellington, who played for us at Moeller High School three years ago. "Their punter James Wagner averaged 42 yards a punt," Faust continued. "Their defense is very, very good. Led by Ramsey and Dardar and they have an excellent defensive front, probably one of the quicker defensive fronts I've seen in the last couple of years in college football."

The Tigers were 7-4 last year and list 30 returning lettermen, including eight offensive and seven defensive starters. However, LSU did lose its opening game on ABC-TV to Paul "Bear" Bryant and his Alabama Crimson Tide, 24-7, last Saturday.

But Stovall saw hope in his Tigers. "We felt that offensively and defensively, there were a lot of good things that we did. Offensively, we gained almost 400 yards, which we were impressed with," Stovall said. "Defensively we played well except for the big play. We'll have to eliminate that. We'll work very hard on it."

Faust also believes the 'Bama game helped LSU.

"LSU gains something simply from having played a game against a top-quality football team. As young as their team is, that has to be a help," Faust said. "But we gain something because all our coaches and players had a chance to watch that game. We ought to have a little bit better idea what to expect."

Despite their 30 returning lettermen, the Tigers still may be the youngest team in the college ranks this year. LSU lists only six seniors on its entire roster, and only three — cornerback James Britt, spit end Orlando McDaniel and guard Tom Tully — are slated to begin tomorrow's game. And Stovall boasts just one more year's experience than the Irish mentor.

The Tigers' freshman crop of 28 — 11 of whom played against 'Bama — was described by one national expert as the "best group of high school seniors to sign with LSU since the Japs were building Zeroes instead of Toyotas."

The Tigers also have a tradition of being tough on the Irish. In 1970, the Irish edged LSU, 3-0, on Scott Hempel's 24-yard field goal with 2:54 remaining. But on the return visit the next year, LSU beat Notre Dame, 28-8.

Quarterback Alan Risher keys LSU's veer offense after finishing as the top percentage passer in the Southeastern Conference in 1980. Risher completed 82-of-143 passes for 971 yards and nine touchdowns plus six more rushing.

"We expect Alan to pick up right where he left off," Stovall said. "He's shown us that improvement in practice. Now we must carry that over into the games."

Jesse Myles was the leading rusher last year (76 carries for 403 yards in 1980) despite missing five games with a broken leg. He did not play against Alabama, but is expected to start today. Mike Montz (287 yards in 1980) is the fullback. Ellington, the starting flanker in the 'Bama game has been replaced by freshman Mark Johnston.

Besides McDaniel, who is a world-class hurdler, and Tully, guard David Koch is the only incumbent on the offensive line. But Koch and his teammates are big as the Tigers average 6-4, 247.5 pounds across the front.

Scott will be at tight end while Bob Smith and Clint Berry man the tackle positions and Mike Gambrell is the center.

On defense, linebackers Rydell Malancon, Al Richardson and Lawrence Williams return as does tackles Ramsey Dardar and Leonard Marshall. Richardson and Williams were the top two tacklers last fall.

Returning in the secondary are cornerbacks Britt and Alvin Thomas. Rounding out the defensive starters will be Tim Joiner at linebacker, Greg Bowser at nose guard and Tommy Boudreaux at free safety. Jeffery Dale replaces Alex Clark, who started the 'Counter-revolutionaries'

Solidarity alarms Polish press

WARSAW, Polish and Soviet authorities leveled communism's harshest charge against Solidarity yesterday, calling the independent union 'counter-revolutionary.' A radical member of the union suggested the labor federation now had people capable of running Poland's government.

Soviet warships were reported deploying thousands of Soviet marines in a mock landing exercise on the Soviet coast north of Poland, and the official Soviet news agency TASS quoted a letter from a Polish worker saying Solidarity leaders have 'discarded all camouflage and call directly for a counter-revolution.'

The Warsaw chapter of the Communist Party said Solidarity 'was developing, in defiance of agreements and the statutes, as a socio-political movement aiming at a counter-revolutionary change of the political system in Poland.'

'We have found confirmation in the sharpened attacks on the party, the government and the country's political-legal order' during Solidarity's just-adjourned, six day national congress in Gdansk, where the union was formed 13 months ago, the Warsaw party said.

The army newspaper, Zolnierz Wolnosci, said the congress manifested an "anti-state, tough course," and that its resolution threatening to boycott a government law on worker's reforms was a "sharp challenge to the state authorities, including the Sejm (Parliament) as the supreme authority."

The paper said the union's warnings to impose Solidarity's version of worker self-management and hold a national referendum on the issue "on the one hand impressed (us) with their utterly provocative character."

The paper said the union's warnings to impose Solidarity's version of worker self-management and hold a national referendum on the issue "on the one hand impressed (us) with their openness and horrified us with their utterly provocative character on the other."

The suggestion about running the government came from the leader of Solidarity's chapter in Szczecin, a Baltic port on the East German border. The official, Marian Jurczyk, is regarded as a radical in the 9.5 million-member labor federation, the first and free of party control in the Soviet bloc.

Jurczyk, in an interview with Solidarity's news service, said that the "union didn't have the proper people to nominate the government" during the period last March when Solidarity threatened a general strike.

When asked, "would the union be able to nominate the proper people today in case of a strike?" Jurczyk replied, "I think so."

Nonetheless, Solidarity adjourned its Gdansk congress Thursday with a call for free elections in Poland.

Iranian religious leader dies in grenade explosion

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—A grenade carried by an assassin exploded in a worshipper-filled square in the Iranian city of Tabriz yesterday, killing an ayatollah who was a key man in the Islamic regime and six worshippers, Iran's state-run media reported.

Tehran Radio said "the unidentified terrorist died instantly" in the blast and that 12 worshippers were wounded.

The Ayatollah killed was Assadollah Madani.

The official Pars news agency reported:

"An unidentified man, fastening a grenade around his waist, approached the ayatollah pretending he wanted to ask a question. Suddenly the grenade exploded, severely wounding the prayer leader and other worshippers. Ayatollah (Assadollah) Madani was immediately taken to a hospital but was martyred while undergoing surgery. The terrorist was killed on the spot."

Madani, a fiery orator who was leading yesterday's Sabbath prayers when he was attacked, was a top aide to Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruholla Khomeini and the latest to die in a wave of assassinations of clerics and political leaders in the fundamentalist Islamic regime.

An official in the provincial governor's office reached by telephone, told The Associated Press in Beirut earlier that several people were killed or wounded. But he had no immediate figures.

"These guys behind me are going to give 100% out there tomorrow and YOU have to give 100% too," boomed co-captain Crable at last night's pep rally. [photo by John Macor]

Archeologists fight to preserve Indian art

El Paso, Texas (AP) - Forty-niners headed for the California gold rush scrawled their names on rocks at Hueco Tanks, three rugged volcanic formations sitting in an open prairie about 30 miles east of here.

So did travelers on the Butterfield Stage, which stopped at Hueco Tanks before the Civil War.

But long before a white man ever saw the mountains surrounding what is now El Paso, they were sacred ground to the Indians who depended on the water and the game they attracted.

And hundreds, maybe thousands of years ago, those Indians painted designs on the rocks - "pictographs" which played an important role in the tribes' religious life and gave them a way to document their histories.

41 rock art sites in the state park.

"The El Paso Archeology Society has established that some of them have been here for 900 years, give or take 100 years," Cage said. "There's no written evidence. We can only judge the Indian art here at Hueco Tanks as it relates to art in other areas of the Southwest and northern Mexico."

Indians painted designs in crevices and caves and on sheltered rock walls.

"All of this art relates to their religion," Cage said.

"Since it was an eternal religion, they wanted their art to be eternal. So they would seek out places where it could be eternally preserved."

One of those places, now called Site 30, is in a small, almost inaccessible cave at one of the highest points in the mountains.

A visitor must slither through a hole in the rock to reach the cave, in which nine ornamental masks are painted on a wall. The masks, estimated to be 600 years old, are of the Kachina design that's best-known among the tribes of northern Arizona and New Mexico.

SATURDAY FOCUS

Today, the state of Texas and local archeology buffs are fighting to preserve the paintings - sometimes the only signs the Indians left behind - from the threats of time, weather, and graffiti.

Most important among the area sites is Hueco Tanks State Park. The Spanish named the rocks "hueco," or hollow, because pits in the rocks formed natural cisterns that collected water. The "tanks" made the mountains a popular stop for westward-bound pioneers.

"There have been people at Hueco Tanks for 10,000 years," said ranger James Cage, who guides visitors on tours of the

Hit and run incident

A car traveling south on Juniper road last night narrowly missed a woman, but struck the baby stroller that she was pushing, according to Rex Rakow, of Notre Dame Security. The accident occurred shortly before 8 p.m. Rakow said that the car clipped the stroller, spilling the eight-month old baby onto the road. "There were no visible scrapes or scratches on the child," he stated. According to an eyewitness account, the car did not stop, but was halted by a group of pedestrians leaving Notre Dame's pep rally. The mother and child were taken by ambulance to St. Joseph's Memorial Hospital. The Observer

O'Connor confirmation hearings

Supreme Court nominee Sandra Day O'Connor, completing three days of confirmation hearings, declined to endorse the idea that teen-agers should be denied abortions unless they have a parent's permission. However, she told the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday she believes teen-agers should voluntarily consult with their parents before having abortions. Mrs. O'Connor's refusal to call for mandatory parental consent for abortions or receipt of birth control information came during a final exchange with her principal adversary on the committee, Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala. In most cases, the Supreme Court has ruled that states may not require doctors to obtain the consent of a teen-ager's parents before performing a requested abortion. --AP

Begin makes offer to U.S.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said yesterday he has offered the United States use of his nation's air and naval bases to deter the "danger to freedom" posed by the Soviet Union in the Middle East. Begin told reporters at a Blair House luncheon his proposals, which also include storing U.S. tanks in Israel and flying Mediterranean air cover for U.S. transport planes, were under discussion by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon. But he said Israel would not call on American troops to fight in its wars and that he did not request a defense treaty with the United States. "We draw a line of distinction between defending Israel and our common interest in resisting Soviet expansion into the Middle East," Begin said. --AP

Attica prisoners riot

Fifteen Attica State prison inmates locked in solitary confinement broke windows and pelted guards with excrement yesterday, but their rampage was quickly broken up by officers using tear gas, a prison spokesman said. The action occurred shortly after 375 other inmates had sat in silence through breakfast, and it came almost 10 years to the day after more than 1,200 prisoners took over part of the prison in what ended as the bloodiest prison riot in this country's history. "There were 19 inmates in the special housing section of the facility when the trouble began," said Lou Ganim, a spokesman for the state prison in Albany. "It appears that about 15 inmates were involved and we think we know who the ringleader was." He said no inmates had been injured, but two corrections officers suffered minor injuries. --AP

Charles, Lady Diana

Newlyweds Prince Charles and Princess Diana are discovering it's hard to find good servants these days. They are advertising for a cook at Highgrove, their country mansion. The plea appeared in Thursday's issue of The Lady, a staid weekly mailny read by middle class women. It said: "resident cook-houskeeper required for the Gloucestershire residence of the Prince and Princess of Wales. Applicants should provide references and details of qualifications and previous experience. Box 656C." Daily Mirror columnist Peter McKay said yesterday he thought it "extraordinary" that the heir to the throne has to advertise for servants, but Joan Grahame, editor of The Lady, disagreed. "Why should the royal family be any different from anyone else these days who is looking for staff," she said. McKay said that younger members of the royal family often have difficulty in acquiring and retaining servants. He said that Charles' sister, Princess Anne, has had five cooks in four years. --AP

Navy captain

POW relives Nam experiences

By JIM McCLURE
News Staff

Capt. Gerald L. Coffee, U.S. Navy, delivered a speech at Century Center Thursday night on his experiences as a prisoner of war in North Vietnam.

Coffee was a POW for seven years, between Feb. 1966 and Feb. 1973.

The speech, entitled "Faith, the Key to Survival and Triumph," was presented by the South Bend Association for Life Underwriters.

The naval aviator was shot down while on a routine reconnaissance mission over North Vietnam. He was captured immediately and taken to a primitive prison camp in the heart of Hanoi.

'The key to my survival was faith... in man, my country, and my God.'

Coffee stated that after being locked in solitary confinement he realized that "the only strength I would find would be that which I brought in with me--the key to my survival was simply faith; faith in myself, my fellow man, my country, and my God."

The Captain told an audience of approximately 400 how he and his fellow prisoners "spoke" to each other by tapping out a simplified alphabet with their knuckles on the cell wall.

Although they were prevented from seeing or speaking verbally to one another, the POWs were able to communicate using "tap" language. The Americans shared vital information and prayed together daily. "Communication was so very important because it became the very symbol of our togetherness," Coffee said.

This togetherness helped Coffee and his companions endure torture, isolation, and anti-American propaganda which was played almost non-stop into each cell.

Coffee returned to the U.S. with the first group of POWs on February 12, 1973. "The America to which I had returned was very different. It had changed many ways, a few for the good but I thought many ways for the bad."

Coffee noticed that the very faith which sustained him and his fellow servicemen in prison was lacking in the country at that time. "America was at its low point. It needed faith in itself."

The captain went on to emphasize that "We need faith in our goals. We need faith in America, we need faith in God, and we need faith in ourselves."

Captain Coffee is currently on leave from his duties as Fleet Air Operations Officer on the staff of the Commander in Chief Pacific Fleet.

Quick trip

Haig departs for Europe, Arabia

Washington (AP)—Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. left yesterday on a quick trip to three European countries and a secrecy-shrouded meeting with Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia.

After a 12-hour stopover in Malaga for the Fahd meeting today, Haig planned to continue to Yugoslavia and Germany. He was scheduled to return to Washington on Tuesday.

In Germany, Haig will consult with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt over growing anti-U.S. and anti-nuclear unrest, particularly among German youth. On that score, Schmidt is expected to ask and likely get Haig's assurance that the United States will not deploy neutron nuclear weapons in Europe in the near future.

Haig himself is the target of demonstrations planned tomorrow in Berlin, where he will deliver a speech on U.S. defense strategy.

Little has been said about the meeting with the Saudi crown prince, who is considered one of the most influential members of the royal family and whose support for U.S. policies in the Middle East is considered crucial.

Although a reporter learned on Tuesday, the State Department declined to confirm it until just prior to Haig's departure.

Haig said earlier yesterday that Saudi Arabia is "essentially oriented toward Western interests" and that cooperation is easing the Lebanon crisis and in holding down oil prices "has underlined as perhaps nothing else has heretofore the importance of the American-Saudi Arabian relationship."

He made the remark on the ABC television program "Good Morning America."

Government and diplomatic sources said Haig probably wants to reassure Fahd that there will be no last-minute hitch in the controversial sale of $8.5 billion in U.S. weapons, including five Airborne Warning and Control Systems aircraft, known as AWACS.

The Saudis have made the sale a test of their relationship with the United States, and Fahd reportedly has said he would cancel a proposed visit to the United States later this year if the sale did not go through.

President Reagan refused to budge despite the objections voiced by visiting Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin this week that the AWACS are a threat to Israel

TV filming

By DAVID RICKABAUGH
Senior Staff Reporter

The Notre Dame campus will be one of the filming locations for a Thanksgiving television special on the rosary. Production is scheduled for tomorrow and Monday.

Notre Dame President Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh, Head Football Coach Gerry Faust, the Notre Dame Glee Club and various campus religious landmarks will represent the University in the special.

Comedian Bob Newhart, who gained popularity from his Saturday night CBS television program "The Bob Newhart Show," narrates the special.

The program, one of a series produced by Family Theater Productions in Los Angeles, will feature Mother Teresa. Filming began in Washington D.C. with scenes revealing the work the Albanian nun has done with the poor.

Rev. Patrick Peyton, the "rosary priest," created the idea for the show and is also known for an Easter special featuring Princess Grace of Monaco as narrator.

The filming schedule includes the filming of interviews in Annenberg Auditorium at 11:15 a.m. Monday morning, which will enable 200 students to serve as background for random crowd shots.

Department of Information Services Assistant Director Jay J. Kane called the show "a traditional Fr. Peyton film." Kane said the syndicated program will air over 200 stations and reach every major audience

Thus, the CFA was created three years ago to try to get things done within the NCAA. Different schools joined the CFA for different reasons—some for greed. Most others, like Notre Dame, joined for principles.

Among the CFA's initial objectives was further internal reorganization. Why should Marquette, Wabash, Dayton and the like—schools without major football programs—carry equal clout on the critical television issue as the Division I powers? Further, the CFA wants to impose tighter academic requirements, not only on college athletes, but on incoming freshmen as well. It also supports elimination of freshman eligibility and an increase in the number of coaches and scholarships.

In recent weeks, the media has painted an ugly picture of the CFA. A large part of the bias in print probably lies with the fact that the NCAA has a full-time public relations staff while the CFA has no one... yet.

Indications have been that if the CFA wins, corruption will run rampant throughout college football. On the contrary, the CFA only could improve on the present situation. "The NCAA's answer has always been to add another investigator," says Corrigan. "The CFA's answer is to get people together in a room and confront each other."

A change in the approach to abuses certainly couldn't hurt. At present a staff of about eight is playing watchdog over the 700-plus NCAA members. Now isn't that absurd?

Corrigan is quick to point out however, "Not everyone in the CFA agrees on all the issues. It's tough to get 60 people to agree on anything, like 'Today's Monday.'"

Most have tried to drape a blanket of greed over the CFA schools. For certain insitutions, that is an accurate charge. But not for all.

"It's a matter of rights," Corrigan emphasizes. "Does the NCAA own the rights to anything that involves the Fighting Irish, including cable TV?"

Ah, there's the rub—cable television. Today we are only scratching the surface. Any farsighted entertainment outlet, like a college athletic department, has to realize this as a gold mine of the not-too-distant future. People are throwing around figures—as high as $80 million in cable revenues for one Notre Dame-USC game!!! There's just no telling how big this could become.

Perhaps you've noticed the new satellite receiver on the roof at WNDU. Don't think for a minute that its sole purpose is to make Channel 16 "The Leader." Should the CFA win its battle in principle, thus stripping the NCAA of its television negotiating rights and returning them to the institutions, a private Notre Dame cable television network could become a future reality.

And would that hold down tuition!

At the beginning, I said Notre Dame could have been placed on probation this week.

Here's why the University was not...

For three weeks, CFA and non-CFA schools have been talking, discussing, arguing, debating or whatever—trying to decide on a course of action. An eventual compromise is a certainty. After all, no one ever wins this kind of dispute outright.

Different schools and conferences have wisely been pushing compromise. After all, if the NCAA evicts the CFA members, it may as well dissolve itself. The CFA holds the trump card.

The Chief Executive Officers of the Big Eight Conference, for instance, sent a letter to the NCAA stating, "(We) agree that no further action should be taken on either the CFA or NCAA football television packages, until the NCAA has addressed the fundamental question of reorganization. We strongly urge that the NCAA move to convene a special meeting by November 15 for the resolution of these critical matters."

"As members of the NCAA, we respectfully request an official response from the NCAA leadership prior to September 9."

The Atlantic Coast and the Southeastern Conferences sent similar letters.

Tuesday the NCAA had a lot of wind taken from its sails when a state district judge in Austin, Tex., issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting the NCAA from taking or threatening disciplinary action against schools which participate in the CFA contract with NBC. The order was requested by the University of Texas as a first step in a class action suit it filed on behalf of all 61 CFA members challenging the NCAA's right to control the television of college football.

The CFA postponed its re-vote scheduled for Thursday until next Friday. Also the NCAA has agreed to sit down and discuss a possible compromise, but the guess here is that things won't be settled until January at the annual NCAA convention.

Löwenbräu. Here's to good friends.

It sounded fantastic in the newspaper.
But only to you. Still, you had to see it, and with a little arm-twisting your friends agreed to see it too.

You've already heard a barrage of jokes about your taste in movies since the curtain came down. And, knowing your friends, it'll go on for weeks.

So, to make it up to them, and show them your taste isn't bad in everything, you do something a little special. Tonight, let it be Löwenbräu.

best of luck, and certainly better luck than Brown himself had for his first college game. "I'll never forget that game," he says with a chuckle. "We were playing at home against Missouri, and the coach of the Tigers was Don Faurot, the man I had beaten out for the Ohio State job."

"The day started out on a bad note. As the team arrived for the game and was getting off the bus, I spotted some old friends from Massillon. So, I sent the boys inside, and stopped to talk. As I headed in the stadium, a guard grabbed me and asked for my ticket.

"I don't have a ticket, I'm Paul Brown," I said.

"Yeah, and I'm President Roosevelt, and you still can't come in," he replied.

"Well, there was nothing I could do to convince him. So I ended up throwing pebbles at the locker room window. Eventually, one of the players spotted me, and sent the trainer down to let me in."

"We had seen Missouri's spring game," he recalls, "and there was nothing exceptional about it. But wouldn't know it, Faurot picked our game to invent the split T formation."

"Now, the split T eventually revolutionized college football. It led to the wishbone and the veer offenses. But I didn't know what it was. Faurot was really trying to get back at me for getting the job he wanted."

"Missouri drove up and down the field all day, but they couldn't seem to get inside our twenty yard line. We ended up winning, 12-7, which shows you how bad place-kickers were then."

After the game friends chided Brown for being unable to beat Missouri by a bigger margin.

The tigers were not supposed to have much of a team. Little did they know that the split T would win every other game for Missouri, and they would end up in the Sugar Bowl.

Brown and the Buckeyes lost just one game that season, and the next year the undefeated National Champions. Could Gerry Faust be as successful?

"Anything is possible," Brown says. "Gerry is a superb coach, and he has terrific material to work with. He's going to do very well."

"You see, at places like Notre Dame, (AND Ohio State was the same when I was there) people want a winner. When you have that, there is no pressure. The real pressure for a coach comes when he is fighting with the administration or with the team owner. Otherwise, when the people want a winner, and you are doing your best to give them one, it's just a lot of fun."

Loyola

The Notre Dame soccer team improved its record to 2-0 last night with a 7-0 thrashing of visiting Loyola (Chicago) on the astroturf of Cartier Field. The Irish outshot their guests by a lopsided 38-1 count.

Sophomore Rob Snyder scored two goals for Notre Dame while classmate Ted Schwartz scored once and added an assist. Senior co-captain Sami Kahale dished out two assists.

Rich hunter's team now awaits tomorrow's showdown with national power St. Louis University. The game will be played on Alumni Field (east of Cartier) at 3 p.m. Admission is $1; 50 cents for students with a Notre Dame or Saint Mary's ID card.

The Gerry Faust of 1941

The collegiate football power needed a new head coach. They chose the country's most successful high school coach, a man responsible for powerhouse teams in the Cincinnati area. They were criticized at first, but the man soon won over all his critics with his enthusiasm and winning football.

The story is well-known to Notre Dame football fans. But this is not about Notre Dame's new coach, Gerry Faust. This version took place 40 years ago, and involves one of the greatest football coaches of all time, Paul Brown.

"I was the coach at Massillon High School when the head coaching position at Ohio State opened up," Brown recalls. "That was the only job I ever wanted. I had dreamed of being at Ohio State since the day I started coaching." Paul Brown won the national championship in his second year at Ohio State, and later founded the Cleveland Browns, leading them to a number of NFL championships. He also established the Cincinnati Bengals, and now serves as the team's general manager.

At the beginning of his career he built Massillon High into the strongest team in the state. It's a tradition of winning that continues today. Last November, Faust's Moeller High School team defeated Massillon in the Ohio state championship game. His success brought him acclaim, and his move to the college ranks created greater attention.

"Gerry Faust is going through the same things today that I put up with 40 years ago," he says. "It seems like every reporter in the country wants to see you. They are all looking for some kind of angle. Of course, you have to co-operate with the press, but you can't let them interfere with the work you have to do."

"Everybody says that a high school coach could never recruit well enough to build a winning college program," he says. "They said the same thing when I went to Ohio State. But it's really no trouble. The real strength of a high school coach is that he knows where to go. I knew everyone when I was the coach at Massillon — coaches, friends, former players — they are all helpful in recruiting.

"Being a high school coach also gives you an opportunity to watch the college coaches who come to recruit your players. You can learn a lot about what you want to do, and what you don't want to do, by dealing with them."

Besides, if you have a good high school team, you can bring some of them along with you. Brown took six of his players from Massillon in his first year at Ohio State. Faust has three members of last year's Moeller team on the Notre Dame roster.

Assistant coaches are vital to the operation of a team, and that is always seen as a problem for a new coach.

"It's not a case of learning the ropes," Brown says. "The X's and O's make the transition quite easily. It may surprise you, but I used the same basic plays with the Browns and the Bengals that I did at Massillon. Gerry, apparently, is doing the same thing."

"The reason to keep some assistants from the last coach is just for the sake of continuity. There are a lot of things a new coach has to learn about the school or the organization. Besides, why not keep a man on the staff if he is a good coach?"

Brown is a fan of Faust, and he is eager to talk about the new Irish coach.

"I've known him for quite some time," Brown says. "He is an unusual person, and a superb coach. All he has to do is be himself, and he'll be successful. His enthusiasm and bubbly personality make him a swell person to be associated with. He's just a great guy."

Faust opens his first season this weekend in a game against LSU. Brown says he's sent a letter wishing the

CFA vs. NCAA

ND instrumental in TV battle

The University of Notre Dame could have been placed on NCAA probation this week. Here's why...

The heated debate between the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the College Football Association returned to the headlines this week — right on schedule.

Thursday was to be D-Day — Decision Day for the CFA.

It has been three weeks since the 61-member CFA voted to ratify a four-year television package with NBC worth $180 million. The vote was 33 in favor, 20 against, five abstaining and three schools not voting because their credentials were not in order.

Thursday there was to be a re-vote of sorts. Anyone who wanted to change their vote could have done so. For months the word from NCAA headquarters has been that CFA schools voting to ratify the NBC package would be harshly reprimanded. Thirty three schools called the bluff on August 21. The rest backed down.

And throughout the three-year history of the CFA, what school has led the charge, was, of course, one of the 33 yes votes, and, in fact, was instrumental in the creation of this rebellious group?

You guessed it — The University of Notre Dame.

In its barest simplicity, this controversy stems from the fact that NCAA member institutions just aren't allowed to do that. In July the NCAA signed a similar pact with ABC and CBS worth $263 million. The two-network package would allow a given school to be on television six times over two years. The CFA deal allows for seven appearances over the same span.

NCAA regulations strictly forbid member institutions from participating in a football television contract that the NCAA itself did not negotiate. But the situation is far more complex.

Not since Teddy Roosevelt initiated the NCAA in the early 1900s amidst mounting fatalities on the gridiron, has that governing body faced such a critical turning point.

This drama has been unfolding for decades, and to trace its origins, one need look no further than this very campus.

Turn the clock back, if you will, to the late 1940s. Things were much as they are today. The Fighting Irish were the hottest item available in the relatively young world of college football television. Notre Dame was wallowing in her rich tradition and global booster club. And by the mid-'50s, Notre Dame had her own television network for football.

Other schools were up in arms, especially the Big Ten schools. "Notre Dame's on TV all the time," they pouted, "and my school never gets on."

"We're only giving the public what they want," came the logical response from the television execs.

That response wasn't quite good enough. Hence the NCAA assumed the right to negotiate a collective television contract for the "benefit" of its members.

The big football schools lived with this verdict for the next 20 years. After all, "We're only talking about a few thousand dollars, right?"

But that few thousand became a few hundred thousand dollars, and then a few million dollars. And the tensions grew.

And as the years passed, sports at any level — football in particular — were becoming more and more business-like. More televisions... add color, pagentry and the air of excitement that television helped to create, and voila — money.

Big money.

Cries for reorganizing the NCAA were answered, in part, in 1978 when colleges and universities were separated into different levels of competition — Division I, II, III and so forth. After all, the Notre Dames and Ohio States shouldn't be playing the Davidson's and Widners too often, should they?

That wasn't enough for the really big hitters.

Key matchup

Experienced J.B. vs. adjusted Tony

By SKIP DESJARDIN

They are the leaders of their teams. One inherited the job, as one of a very few seniors. The other leads by example, and by means of his enormous talent. They will go head-to-head today when Notre Dame opens its 1981 season against LSU.

Jim Britt went from Minden, La., to Baton Rouge with a pocket full of press clippings. He had been named the defensive player of the year in Louisiana's high schools the year before, and he fully expected the laurels to continue to pile up once he began playing major college football for the Tigers.

Well, the honors were not forthcoming, at least until this fall.

On the other hand, Tony Hunter has continued to get top billing from football writers whenever the subject of Notre Dame's offense is brought up. He came out of Cincinnati's Moeller High School with prep All-America credentials, and each year has received at least a mention from the men that assemble the mythical "best" line-ups in the college game.

Britt, a defensive back, and Hunter, a wingback, will see a lot of each other on the floor of Notre Dame Stadium this weekend.

J. B., as his friends call him, has started every game but one in the LSU defensive backfield since his freshman year. He has clearly become one of the premier cornerbacks in the Southeastern Conference, if not the nation.

"I know my teammates will be expecting more leadership from me this year," he says. "But that's something I'm willing to do. In fact, I'm looking forward to it."

LSU is a young team, and Britt is the only senior starter in the defensive unit. He could not avoid the leadership role if he wanted to. But he has eagerly accepted the job as "big brother" to his defensive teammates.

Hunter's record in just two years has been nothing short of amazing. In his freshman year, he set a Notre Dame record by averaging 25.6 yards per reception. His career record of 19.9 yards per catch ranks second among active college players.

This season, Hunter's high school coach, Gerry Faust, has instituted a new offense. The multiple formation approach is a concerted effort to get the ball into the hands of Tony Hunter as often as possible.

"He's our best athlete," Faust says. "He has to be to do all the things we are asking of him. He'll split wide, or set up in a full house backfield. He'll go deep for a pass, or take a hand-off. Tony can do it all, as well as block."

Britt has allowed the LSU defense to become more flexible, in much the same way that Hunter has allowed Notre Dame to vary its offense.

"I know James will not make a mistake," says LSU defensive back coach Greg Williams. "He allows me to make defensive adjustments that we've never been able to make before."

thought, 'Wow, I came here to be a running back and now I'm going to play flanker.' I know how a lot of times you get in college and they'll change you to a position and just leave you there and not care about you. I had that in mind. But then, I thought that if I worked at it, maybe I'd have a chance to play more."

Ellington proved himself and satisfied the coaching staff as well. He certainly will cause problems with flanker reverses and open-field running.

Stovall, like Faust, has been a big influence in giving him the confidence to make such a switch. And Ellington says the two coaches have a lot in common.

"They're about the same," he says. "I think Coach Stovall has a more logical approach to the game. Coach Faust is just wild-eyed and bushy-tailed, running around and hollering. But they remind me of each other. I think highly of them both."

Ellington finds himself in an awkward position this week — playing against his former coach for a team that needs his talents to be diverse offensively.

It's nice to be important again.

A Business Administration student with a 3.5 grade point average, Britt says it takes a quick mind to play the way he does.

"You've got to be able to think and be alert when playing cornerback," he says. "You have to be able to anticipate just enough and know when to anticipate. A lot of times, in one-on-one situations, if you're able to out-think your man, you've got him whipped."

For his part, Hunter knows that he will have to be sharp. He is, after all, learning a new position.

"It's tough to learn a new position," he admits, "but I really like it. I'll still be the primary receiver, plus I'll be in motion a lot. I'll have the opportunity to run the ball too. I enjoy the increased responsibility."

Saturday, the situation is bound to arise. On a "third and long" play, Hunter will race downfield. Britt will pick up the coverage, most likely with help from another back. Kiel or Koegel will throw the ball....

Time and again, the two leaders will match wits and physical ability. Whoever is better at doing his job will go along way toward leading his team to victory.

There has not been much time for joking around this week as co-captain Phil Carter, Coach Gerry Faust and the rest of the team, have been seriously preparing for LSU.

game against 'Bama, at strong safety.

"I expect LSU to come in here with that same kind of intensity (as they did in Notre Dame's 3-0 victory in the Stadium in 1970)," Faust said. "Playing Notre Dame means too much to them to have any kind of letdown, even after an emotional conference game like Alabama. Plus, it'll be a good test for our young men because they know they'll have to be ready to play."

Should the game turn into a kicking contest the Tigers will rely on the foot of James Wagner. Liffort Hobley is the only Tiger casualty from the 'Bama game sustaining a shoulder injury finishing him for the year.

... South

1979 meeting with the Irish, "This is more important than any bowl game, conference game, or anything that Clemson has played in. For once I won't have to worry about motivation for a football game. I know our players will perform above their capabilities."

Although Notre Dame has always raised the blood pressure of southerners, this hatred has intensified in recent years, especially in the Dan Devine era. For some reason Moose Krause scheduled more and more games with Southern schools for the late-'70s, just about the time Devine took over for Ara Parseghian.

Krause should have learned his lesson because ugly scenes in wars with the South began in 1969, at the Georgia Tech-Notre Dame game in Atlanta. In a nationally televised game, the Irish vaulted to a 38-6 lead late in the fourth quarter. The psyched, and by now inebriated Yellow Jacket fans were letting their "buzz" get the best of them. They began pelting the Notre Dame players with ice and cups of water.

Three years later the Irish traveled to Baton Rouge for the first time, and the treatment accorded Notre Dame's black players was less than courteous. Racial barbs from the stands and people in town was one thing, but it was reported that the hotel administration at Notre Dame's headquarters allowed phone calls through to black players' rooms at 3 a.m., prohibiting a sound night's sleep.

The legacy of Dan Devine and his journey through the South is a long one. While Parseghian played relatively few contests with southern teams during his reign (1964-74) Devine had 23 games with teams from the South in just six seasons in South Bend. The now retired mentor had a fine 17-5-1 ledger in these games, but eight of the wins were by a touchdown or less. Thus, the nature of the contests increased the pressure and anxiety among fans.

Devine's first journey south took place in 1975 when he took his team to Dean Smith (no, he's not a football coach too) country to face North Carolina. A miracle rally led by then youthful sophomore Joe Montana (an 80-yard TD pass to Ted Burgmeier with 1:03 left) gave ND a 21-14 victory. The next season only a Jimmy Browner interception saved a 13-6 win at South Carolina. And of course there was the trip to Clemson in 1976. A bomb scare in Devine's hotel room the night before the game, and a block thrown by an official on Clemson's first touchdown that would have made any offensive line coach proud, were just two of the abnormal occurrences of that weekend.

The less than hospitable treatment at Georgia Tech was resurrected in 1976 when the Yellow Jackets upset Notre Dame 23-14 and the Georgia Tech players and fans were less than gracious in doing so. The Irish did not forget the treatment the next season in South Bend and ran up the score in a 69-14 extinction of Pepper Rogers' team.

That ill feeling with the Yellow Jackets festered over the summer and in Notre Dame's victory in 1978 in Atlanta, what might be the ugliest scene in Notre Dame football history occurred. I was at the game and could not believe my eyes as Vagas Ferguson was pelted with ice and fish (for the "mackerel snappers" as Notre Dame players are called in Atlanta) after scoring a late TD in a 38-21 Notre Dame win.

The heaving of fins continued and soon, the Notre Dame players had to abandon their own sideline. Devine was a primary target as he was about as popular in Atlanta as Herschel Walker is in South Bend. The players surrounded Devine as police slowly (they appeared to be enjoying the fray) ended the problem. It appeared the game would end right there with a couple of minutes left, but finally Pepper Rogers went over to his student section to calm the wolves. He finally realized his football program was being embarrassed on Notre Dame's national replay network.

In 1979 Devine had to face four teams from the South. He split the four contests, but one, a 40-18 loss at Tennessee, was the worst defeat of his career. Later that season Clemson downed the Irish at Notre Dame, 16-10. Clemson didn't win the Civil War that day, but in the eyes of Tiger fans some justice had been won.

That same year, only 42 seconds remained on the ND Stadium clock when a 14-yard Rusty Lisch-to-Dean Masztrak touchdown pass and Pete Holohan's two-point conversion reception beat South Carolina, 18-17.

Tight contests continued last year as the Irish upset Alabama in their own backyard, but suffered a bizarre losing tie to Georgia Tech, and the loss for the National Championship to Georgia in the Sugar Bowl.

Saturday, Gerry Faust, perhaps naive to the determination dominating the minds of the LSU team at this moment, will charge his army out of the tunnel for the first time. He better have all his artillery ready because Notre Dame Stadium, players, religion and lore will motivate the Tigers to new heights.

It sounds unimaginable that a team could look past a conference rival and national power (Alabama) for a contest with an independent many miles away from home. Although they won't admit it to the press, LSU's players have been looking forward to this game more than any other in their careers since they signed their national letters-of-intent.
