Calendar resolution too late

By MICHELE DIETZ
News Staff

Don Murday, Student Body President, informed Student Senate members last night that the academic calendar for the 1982-83 year cannot be changed, thereby preventing the resolution for two extra registration and/or study days for that year being passed.

Murday met with Assistant Provost Sr. John Miriam Jones and Chuck Russo, academic commissioner of student government, and discovered that although the 1982-83 calendar is set, the 1983-84 calendar can possibly be changed to incorporate the resolution passed last Monday.

There is, however, a possibility of allowing students to return one day earlier in August, 1982, reflecting a major concern of the HPC over the lack of time students are allowed to move into rooms and unpack. The Senate will work towards adding the extra day and the two extra registration and study days to the 1983 academic year.

Further business discussed by the Senate concerned the investigations into the laundry service becoming optional. According to Brian Callaghan, Senate member, a former survey taken "resoundingly showed that girls do not want to use the laundry service and that most guys would desire to have it optional." Several locations for the installation of laundry machines are being considered. Carroll and Holy Cross Halls and the Credit Union were mentioned but these locations might be inconvenient because of their distance from campus. Other dorms, however, might have a problem with space if washers were installed.

"The problem is that we are paying almost triple what you would have to if you did the laundry yourself," Murday commented. Male students are billed $2.60 for once a week laundry services. Mike Martin, another Senate member, also

Administration pushes to save Saudi AWACS sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a furious attempt to salvage an $8.5 billion arms deal to Saudi Arabia, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. charged opponents with "illusions ... irresponsible in the extreme" yesterday while President Reagan unveiled support from six previous administrations.

Haig, in testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, personally assailed Democrat John Glenn of Ohio for what he termed the "imaginary" claim that a compromise could be worked out calling for joint U.S.-Saudi manning of the five AWACS radar planes at the heart of the sale.

The president, meanwhile, assembled 16 defense and foreign-policy officials from Washington's past for a White House display of bipartisan support. The officials included former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who served presidents Nixon and Ford, and Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser.

Reagan read a joint statement by his guests which declared that "the sale of AWACS and other air defense equipment to Saudi Arabia would make a substantial contribution to the nation security interests of the United States in a vital part of the world."

Kissinger, whose government service took him to the Middle East repeatedly, said he could sympathize with the concerns expressed about the proposed $8.5 billion sale.

"It is my strong conviction, however, that these concerns cannot be met by rejecting the sale of AWACS," he said.

Lewistown's addiction

'Legal' drug traffic grows

LEWISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A haircut will cost you $3.50 in David Specht's barbershop on the square. For $20 more, he'll sell you a bottle of 1,000 stimulant capsules.

All the first-floor windows of Mayor William Chamberlain's home were covered with hardened plastic months before the first frost. The stuff is designed to repel the force of a .32 caliber bullet.

The two-story brick and stone house just outside the town limits has a cinderblock room built on the rear. It's loaded with boxes of stimulant pills. By the door a sign with skull and crossbones warns, "No reporters, press or others of such nature. You will be removed!"

TUESDAY FOCUS

Welcome to Lewistown, the central Pennsylvania city that law enforcement officials call the look-alike drug capital of the nation.

Capsules packed with the non-prescription stimulants caffeine, ephedrine and phenylpropanolamine — the latter two widely used in antihistamines — are manufactured in the Mifflin County area. That's legal.

They're packaged in this area and sold here in bottles of 1,000 and 100. That's legal, too. All a person needs to get a license from the state is a $25 check that won't bounce.

The capsules may contain up to 500 milligrams of stimulant, compared with the 75-100 mg in a typical over-the-counter caffeine stimulant. And the drugstore variety do not contain ephedrine and phenylpropanolamine.

The distributors say the capsules are for use as dieting aids or to improve alertness, but law enforcement authorities say they are being sold individually to teenagers.

Some teens mistakenly think they're getting illegal amphetamines. Some know better but still take 30 at a time to get a high. Nationwide, 12 deaths have been blamed on look-alike overdoses. But it's all legal.

Illinois Assistant Attorney General Larry Ramey has filed civil law suits against 28 look-alike distributors, including seven in Pennsylvania, accusing them of violating the Illinois Consumer Fraud Act and using deceptive trade practices in literature and advertisements run in the state.

"By far, that area between Lewistown and State College has the largest concentration of look-alike distributors and dealers than anywhere in the nation," Ramey said.

Jack Ogun, director of the Pennsylvania Division of Drugs, said Mifflin County has 70 look-alike distributors.

In the corridors of Lewistown High School, six of the stimulant capsules will cost you at least $1, maybe as much as $3.

"You can get anything you want like that anywhere in the school. Everyone knows that," one neatly dressed senior told a reporter asking questions in a psychology class with teacher Jack Thompson looking on.

One boy, a junior with short hair, spoke with the reporter in a hallway with Principal James Schnell present. He calmly explained how "around the high school, it's mostly look-alikes that are sold. Out in the streets, it's a different story."

Because you can't tell the difference between the caffeine capsules and the hard drugs, the Mifflin County School District has banned all drugs not first approved by the school nurse.

"I'm talking even about throat lozenges," Schnell said. "The kids and parents have shown a good attitude about it."

Chamberlain, the Lewistown mayor, is a vocal opponent of the look-alike industry. He's also a dentist who now packs a weapon.

After telling the police to arrest look-alike distributors and retailers who verbally abuse officers, his house was splashed with paint three times.

The fourth time a man who described himself as a "caffeine salesman" was arrested and pleaded guilty to the vandalism.

"People here are afraid of those men," Chamberlain said. "I'm not scared, but I never thought I'd have to go get a permit to carry a gun either."

Chamberlain installed $1,500 worth of reinforced plastic on his windows after police said informants had warned them that his house would be firebombed.

Look-alike distributors and retailers in Lewistown say they are wrongly blamed for the increase in street sales of the capsules.

"I can understand the people's point of view, but we don't deserve to be called the names we're called. That's a legal substance in those capsules," said drug wholesaler Dale Herto.

"I have mailing lists, I'm getting into homes. I don't sell to teenagers. I've got people in their 60s buying this for weight loss."

Proposed state regulations would ban the manufacture of any capsule or pill that resembles a prescription drug. Would that upset Herto?

"Sure I'd care. I went to a lot of trouble having my own special capsule made up."

What color is it?

"Black."

Any special reason?

Herto searched for words for about 25 seconds.

"It just looks better."

Black is the color of a popular prescription amphetamine sold illegally on the streets today, drug officials say.

Thatcher's cabinet plans Irish prison reforms

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP)

— Prime minister Margaret Thatcher's Cabinet has approved prison reforms for Northern Ireland and will announce them within days, the government said yesterday.

Two days after Irish nationalist prisoners gave up their hunger campaign at Maze prison, the Northern Ireland Office, which administers this province, said an announcement of changes in the prison regime could come by today.

Attempting to allay Protestants' fears of concessions to the almost exclusively Roman Catholic IRA, the government has said any reforms will apply to all inmates.

No new violence has been reported since the collapse Saturday of the seven-month hunger campaign for reforms amounting to political status. Ten men starved themselves to death and 64 people were killed in the province's sectarian battle after the protest began March 1.

The six men who gave up their fasts Saturday were no longer in danger, the government said. Three were being nourished back to health in hospitals and two have resumed a normal diet and returned to their cells.

Britain's Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior, who arrived here Sunday, was completing plans for prison changes with his deputy in charge of prisons, Lord Gowrie.

The government said Gowrie would visit Maze prison outside Belfast when the draft was completed and spell out the prison regime to inmates, including 420 protesting Irish nationalist prisoners who refuse to follow prison regulations.

Richard McAuley, spokesman for Sinn Fein, political arm of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, said the IRA would "wait and see" what the government announced. The IRA has threatened new hunger strikes if the reforms were found wanting.

The hunger strikers' original five demands were for the right to associate freely in their cellblocks, to wear civilians clothes brought by their families — not issued by the government, to have lost parole time restored, to do prison work they chose themselves, and to receive more visits and mail.

The government refused to concede on grounds that to do so would legitimize the IRA's violent campaign to end British rule and unite the province with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic.

Throughout the protest, Mrs. Thatcher maintained that some changes in prison regime could be considered but only after the protest ended.

One woman was killed and three people were hospitalized in critical condition in San Diego Sunday after their car crashed in a drag race, police said. That car and another were going more than 90 mph when the accident occurred in the Kearny Mesa area of north-central San Diego. Police said the dead woman, Josephine Bryant, 27, was ejected from the back seat. She died of a broken neck. The other women were taken to Sharp Memorial Hospital. Police said the other car was driven by Thomas D. Lego, a 19 year-old sailor. He was booked for investigation of felony drunken driving and vehicular manslaughter. — AP

Volkswagen of America in Englewood Cliffs, N.J. has announced it will close most of its offices there and move to Detroit within the next two to six years for economic reasons. Spokesman Herb Williamson said that "it's almost certain" that some departments, such as banking, would remain in this Bergen County community after the move. The company wants to relocate most of its 500 New Jersey employees and plans to spend $300 million to build an assembly plant in Sterling Heights, Mich. for Rabbit-type vehicles, according to spokesman Tom McDonald. About 1,000 Volkswagen employees already work in the Detroit area. — AP

Chicago is losing an estimated $28 million a year in parking fines because the city can only collect on about 25 percent of the tickets issued, according to Traffic Court records for the year ended Nov. 30, 1980. Chicago has cracked down on scofflaws by locking a metallic device called a "boot" on one wheel of illegally parked cars, preventing the car from being driven until the fines are paid. But Anthony T. Bertucca, chief assistant city corporation counsel for Traffic Court, questions the use of boots in such a large city: do you know how many truckloads of boots we would have to have?" — AP

Fifteen year-old Jeff Vanasano of Jackson Township, N.J., has beaten more than 2,000 competitors — and set a U.S. record — for solving the frustrating but addictive Rubik's Cube. The Bronx, N.Y., youth, who has written a book about the game entitled "Jeff Conquers the Cube," solved the multi-colored puzzle in 24.67 seconds Saturday in one of several cube-a-thons being held around the country. But Vanasano, who won $500 for his feat, says he's getting a little bored with cubism. "After the finals, I hope I'll be able to go on to something else. But I don't know what." The Ideal Toy Co., which has sold more than 10 million of the cubes, invented by Hungarian professor Dr. Erno Rubik, is sponsoring the competitions to determine the world's fastest cubist. The U.S. finals will be in Los Angeles in November and an international competition will be held in the spring. To solve the cube, according to Ideal Toy Co. spokesman Zeke Rose, "You need an uncluttered mind and you need to be uninhibited. That's what separates children from adults. To succeed, you have to undo what you've already accomplished to get to the next level." — AP

There are times when not even the mayor gets special treatment in Sanborn, N.D., a town of 237. When Mayor Deb Duffy's rat terrier, Snoopy, made the mistake of running through the dog catcher's yard, it cost Her Honor $10 in court. "He ran right over to the fellow who makes the citations," Mrs. Duffy said sheepishly. "What's really so dumb about this whole thing," the mayor said, is that she has been pushing an ordinance to cut down on the problem of dogs on the loose. The 27 year-old Mrs. Duffy became Sanborn's first woman mayor in July 1980 when the previous officeholder, Ralph Didier, resigned. — AP

Notre Dame's Charles and Margaret Hall Cushman Center for the Study of American Catholicism, with a grant of $37,743 from Lilly Endowments, Inc., has undertaken a feasibility study which could result in the first comprehensive history of American Catholic theological education. The study is being conducted by Dr. Joseph White under the supervision of Dr. Jay P. Dolan, Director of the Cushman Center, and will include on-site visits to 26 American Catholic seminaries to look at their historical records and collections and evaluate their availability for research. An advisory committee had also been formed to review the results of Dr. White's research and to propose a strategy for the compilation. The project is separate from the examination of American seminaries to be undertaken soon by the Vatican in cooperation with the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. — The Observer

Anorexia, bulimia

'Problem Eating' begins Friday

By KATHLEEN DOYLE
News Staff

Public awareness of anorexia nervosa, bulimia (binge eating and purging) and other eating problems has increased rapidly over the past few years. It is now estimated that 15 to 20 percent of college women and two percent of college men have some involvement with these disorders.

Friday at 3 p.m. the University's Psychological Services Center will begin its pioneering effort in dealing with the issue of eating disorders. "Problems in Eating" will be directed by Dr. Daniel Rybicki and Dr. Susan Steibe. This program will offer both confidential individual counseling and group therapy for students believed to be suffering from eating disorders.

"The program will be both didactic and experiential," Steibe said. "It will offer information on nutrition and healthy lifestyles while allowing the participants to experience the therapeutic process as the group members share and support each other."

Rybicki and Steibe plan to focus on the link between eating and emotion. Their approach will differ from others in that it will investigate a multi-faceted etiology. It will investigate a variety of possible causes for the disorders rather than just subscribe to one theoretical cause, a method that provides for a variety of treatments.

This on-going program will be a learning process for all involved. "We are starting out with no preconceived notions," Rybicki explained. "As the concerns of the group surface we will be able to conduct appropriate intervention," Steibe added.

"We also plan to work with hall staffs in order to help them deal with this sensitive issue," Rybicki said. "The binge eating, purging, and self-starving are usually done in a secretive way. For this reason we must help the rectors and hall staffs recognize the symptoms and reach out in a caring fashion."

Several symptoms are indicative of anorexia nervosa, bulimia and eating impulse disorders. These are:

rapid weight loss of 25 percent of original body weight, binge eating (uncontrolled excessive eating), tendency to be highly active and sports minded, highly restricted diet, self-starvation, self-induced vomiting to purge system, intense fear of becoming overweight and sensitivity to cold. If you recognize these symptoms in yourself or someone you know, contact Dr.

Rybicki or Dr. Steibe at the Psychological Services Center, Student Health Center. Any student interested in "P.I.E." is asked to contact the Center before Friday to arrange for a personal interview to determine if the program meets his need.

The Center emphasizes that the staff and "P.I.E." group members are bound to the strictest confidence.

Assisi anniversary ends with Roper lecture

By COLETTE ST. AUBIN
News Staff

This weekend's celebration of the 800th anniversary of Saint Francis of Assisi ended with a lecture given by Sister Melinda Roper in the Notre Dame library auditorium.

Sister Roper, who is President of the Maryknoll Sisters, titled her speech "Today's Peacemaker" and discussed the role of the peacemaker in modern society.

Sister Roper said that she has spent the majority of her time in Latin American countries but that there are Maryknoll nuns in over 25 countries. Noting that she was very involved in the crisis which occurred in El Salvador last year (when four American women were killed), Sister Roper explained that the Salvadorian tragedy is part of the reason that she continues to promote peace.

"Perhaps my dreams for peace are unrealistic," Sister explained, "Today's peacemaker must be one who speaks the truth and seeks the truth." For most people, she explained, the definition of peace is a negative one. Many people define peace as the absence of war, while it should be thought of as the peace of God.

Sister Roper explained that she has "no reason to seriously doubt Mr. Duarte's (Salvadorian ambassador to the United States) integrity. However, he has no power to do anything about the investigation."

Sister Roper concluded her lecture in noting that the entire world is responsible for aiding governments in maintaining peace. Sister described her regret for those who do not recognize peace in saying, "I believe they can change, I have a hope that they will change."

Holy Cross vocations

Sr. McCabe assumes post

By MARGARET FOSMOE
News Staff

Sr. Pat McCabe has recently been appointed the new vocation director for the Sisters of the Holy Cross.

Sr. Pat studied in Rome, Italy, last year with a variety of religious women from around the world.

In addition, she spent 12 years in parish religious education ministry in Texas, Maryland, and Virginia. This experience increased Sr. Pat's awareness that the Church is doing much for families, the elderly, and youth, but comparatively little for young adults.

Sr. Pat stated her goal as vocation director. "I want to support and help young adults as they search to see where the Lord is calling them in their lives. I want to invite young women, to challenge them, to consider life and ministry with the Sisters of the Holy Cross," she said.

"The Church needs and wants them and the Spirit is challenging us to see religious life not as static, rigid, or fixed in concrete, but constantly open and flexible for service," Sr. Pat pointed out.

Although her title is Vocation Director for the Sisters of the Holy Cross, Sister Pat emphasized that she is available for vocational counselling in areas outside of the religious field. Her primary concern, she said, is "helping young people to discern what their calling is in life."

remarked that "the service is terrible...you can put your clothes in one night and go up to five days without getting them back. If you do it yourself you only pay about $1.50 every two weeks and there is no wait." Murday and Callaghan plan to further investigate the matter.

In response to the lack of bike racks on campus, results of a Student Senate survey were reviewed. John Makulski of Maintenance will soon be installing 12 new bike racks on campus. Locations for these include O'Shaughnessy Hall, the Business Building, North and South Dining halls and between the Administration Building and St. Edward's Hall.

Another major discussion of the Senate meeting concerned the plans, problems and frustrations with Chatauqua-LaFortune Club.

When the Student Senate meets with the Board of Trustees two weeks from Thursday, the future of the Coffeehouse will be the major issue discussed. "We need to see physical action. $30,000 is not enough and won't solve the problem. We need a multi-purpose building for social space, not a room in LaFortune," Murday explained.

Last Friday, Murday's summary of the Senate's future plans presented to members of the Alumni Executive Board were greeted with "the upmost praise." The AEB sent an alumni newsletter to University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, urging that the students receive a multi-purpose center which could include an alumni center. Murday feels that with the alumni board pushing to draw up actual plans, "We've now gained an important facet of support to help us."

'Searching for Sammy Seminole'

"Searching for Sammy Seminole," the theme to this year's Homecoming Search, has begun and will continue through Friday.

Here are yesterday's and today's clues to this year's Homecoming Search, "Sammy Could Be Hiding Anywhere":

1. What is the tallest building on campus?
2. A "Tomer," not a Domer, would be digging for the Seminole.

When you find the answers to these clues, bring the information to the Student Union office, second floor LaFortune Student Center. The winner of the Search will receive dinner for two at a local restaurant.

America for Americans?

Joe Regotti

Feature

There is a danger in studying in Latin America with an open mind and a critical conscience, the danger being that one will inevitably come to the realization that "the way the world is" is not necessarily "the way the world is according to the United States." Having experienced this crisis last semester while studying at the Iberoamericana University in Mexico City, I return home to find that the "United States standard" is now only a visible social force responsible for the lopsided world view we 'Americans' grow to uncritically adopt. We come to know that "the world is this way" without even considering the possibility of alternative world views.

From Latin America the world looks different. Spending time in another culture is especially helpful in beginning to get an idea of just what an alternative perspective on the world entails.

Being outside of the U.S. is crucial in seeing the forest as well as the trees. Looking from the inside of a society, it is hard to identify individual aspects which would constitute a national standard responsible for a lopsided worldview. After all, from the U.S. one can look to the Soviet Union and clearly see a predominant standard at work. Through complete control of the communication and educational systems the Soviet state is able to 'nurture' its people and formulate an ethnocentric worldview which is accepted there as representative of how the world is. This brings to light a crucial aspect of identifying the predominant guiding standard: for it to become visible it is important to view the society in question from a distinct point not within the society.

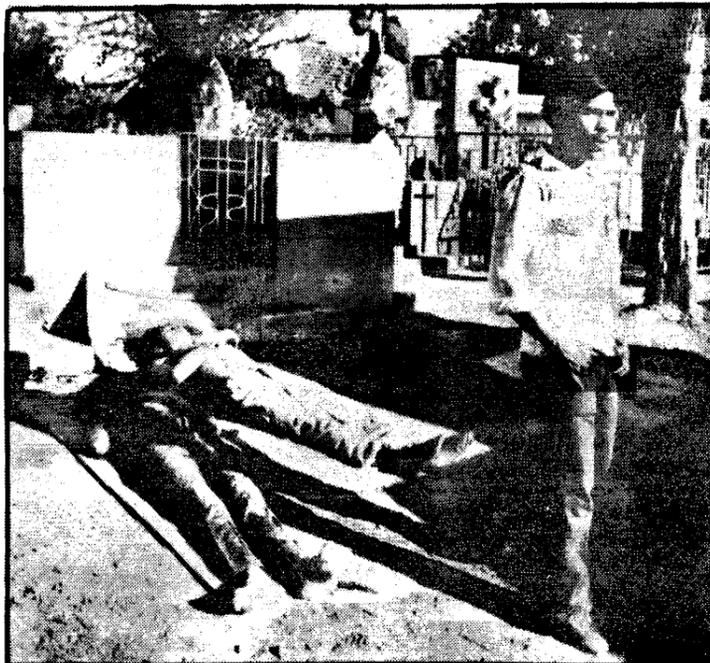

Life in Mexico City offered an interesting point of view of "the great society to the north". As I stumbled through the first couple of months there learning daily about the culture of my new home I also learned many interesting things about my old home. A particularly telling example of my inherent ethnocentrism is the fact that I consistently referred to myself as an American and my country as America, which was fine but did little to distinguish me from the crowd. The fact was politely pointed out to me that I was still in America and speaking to Americans. Referring to myself as a North American was equally ineffective; it was patiently pointed out to me that Mexicans are North Americans too. So much for being an American.

The problem of the American/United States-ian distinction runs deep from the viewpoint of the Latin American. The United States has depended on the neat slogan "America for the Americans" as a base for its political, military and economic policies throughout Latin America since World War II. In Latin America, outside of the influence of the U.S. standard, the slogan is translated to reflect the reality of the situation as seen from there. "America para los estado-unidenses", "America for the United States-ian". The realization that this concept is at the base of the perception of how-the-world-is from the Latin American point of view is disquieting, especially when it is reached while living in Latin America.

The world view which develops in Latin America, then, is distinct from the view which we come to in the United States. With this in mind a look at economic and political affairs in Latin America gives rise to conflicting worldviews.

Political, economic and military intervention on the part of the U.S. into the internal affairs of other countries is conducted when a country is in danger of losing its stability and falling prey to self-interested and oppressive communist forces. We are the champions of free enterprise and the freedom of man. This is not the way the world is to most Latin Americans. International intervention on the part of the United States is viewed from Latin America as imperialism. The United States represents an immense and saturated economy with an insatiable need of a market for consumer goods and resources of raw materials and cheap labor. Any intervention far from being in the interest of the freedom of man, is perceived as being solely in the interest of securing an effective base upon which we rest our economy and from which we draw our opulent life style. We are rich because they are poor, and vice versa.

A current illustration of this point is the case of Guatemala. Guatemala is a typical example of a country in the hands of the oppressive few intent on exploiting the country's rich resources of labor, raw materials and agriculture while the population starves. This system, when it is stable, is the ideal base for the United States' economic interests. The poor of that country, 90 percent of all Guatemalans, are now causing problems by demanding human rights and a more distributively just form of government. Our most recent administration has supplied the oppressive government there with a team of U.S. military advisors, most of them Green Beret, and war materials to help "restore stability" in the country. Now the popular revolutionaries must turn to outside sources for arms to combat the Reagan machine. The only picture we get here in the United States, if we hear of it at all, is that our president is working to keep the Russians out of our back yard. After all, America is for we Americans.

We are raised within the United States educational system to think that we are presented with pure facts — all the facts — and with these we freely construct our worldview. It is only after escaping the U.S. standard and studying from a different vantage point that one can realize how strongly guided — controlled — their intellectual development has been. The standard which guides our personal development here in the U.S. is successful exactly because it is so subtle; it's invisible. The result of this is that it never enters our minds even to question if the world really is the way we see it. It is often thought that a university is the first place that lopsided standards are questioned, but we must come to know which social element is responsible for imposing the educational standards whereby we as students and faculty are discouraged from critically exploring the worldview we are handed.

Since medieval times, the institution of higher education has constantly struggled to establish an intellectual atmosphere independent of the influence of the controlling interests of church and state. We proclaim that Notre Dame has achieved this elusive autonomy. What we fail to realize, or publicize, however, is that in the heat of the struggle we walked right into the open arms of big business. It is the multinational corporate interests who, through educational and research grants; public and private donations, etc. now impose on us the restricting standards. This is indeed an aspect to be considered in attempting to identify the social forces which guide us to our uniquely United States-ian worldview.

In a real sense my time spent studying in Latin America was dangerous for me. I was called to abandon my warm bed of a simple uncritical United States-ian worldview and stand in the cold reality of the world where millions of people are starving for solutions to the complicated dilemma of economic exploitation and military oppression. After such an experience I return home to find my bed not nearly as warm and comfortable as I left it. I look upon the worldview I'm handed now differently — critically — and realize this is a first step to understanding the dilemma of my fellow Americans to the south.

The Prostitution of Perfection

Lynne Daley

Features Writer

"That's good enough."

The above combination of words forms one of the most destructive statements in today's society. Think about it. The use of that phrase can instantaneously pervert a goal of perfection by standardizing mediocre accomplishments.

Our whole system of capitalism is based on the theory that those with the most brains, talent and ambition will rise to the top like cream. And, this system propounds, once at the top the cream will enhance the quality of the lesser milk beneath it, thus making the whole bottle more valuable.

But unfortunately it doesn't always work that way. Too often people pull strings, wield influence and just plain cheat their way to the top, thereby alleviating that particular "bottle of milk's" inherent worth. Once there, they clog the neck of the bottle with their ineptitude until the whole stagnant mess is worthless.

Even beneath the corporate level the spectre of mediocrity as a sought-after goal continues to plague our society. On a collegiate level, for example, students boast of "blowing off" schoolwork in favor of more fleeting pleasures, such as getting drunk. These students enroll in "jock" courses to boost a sagging G.P.A. which, in the end, serves as their sole gauge of success. A 4.0 is a job well done, whether or not the student has learned anything.

This student has, in effect, copped out by subjecting him/herself to the dictates of those who accept — even encourage — mediocrity. You can find them everywhere — people who do not say "That's inadequate — do it again." They have decided that perfection isn't worth the effort and so they excuse anything that falls short. And when one of them is allowed to set the standards for an entire corporate group, then that group necessarily becomes equally bogged down, suffering from a lack both of intrinsic value and extrinsic values. In fact, I'd be willing to wager that to those of the "That's Good Enough" school, one of life's major impetuses is to justify and to win approval for their standard. "Accept mediocrity," they cry, "it's easier."

To fly in the face of this mindset is a difficult undertaking. It's tough to put in the extra effort, to work — while everyone else plays — toward the elusive standard of perfection. To those who play, you are a fool. To those who accept mediocrity, you are dangerous, for you reject their standards to hold fast to what they consider lofty — and unattainable — ideals. And to just about everyone, you appear to be a crazed fanatic.

It's a shame in our free-enterprise society, which allows so much leeway to those engaging in the get-ahead-at-any-cost game, that there are so few individuals who are willing to fasten their eyes on the stars rather than on the dollar sign. Unfortunately, it appears that mediocrity is the standard by which all things are measured and that, as such, it all too easily breeds more mediocrity. No one is willing to shoot for the stars because, should they pull free of the tug of mediocrity, they can never completely re-enter the atmosphere it creates in everyday society.

Interestingly enough, those who must sign their work — artists, composers, scientists and the like — are compulsive perfectionists. They refuse censorship, and they require complete dedication from those who aid in the presentation of their work. They are probably not liked much for their persnickety-ness. And they are not understood. But they don't give a damn what others think, because they comprehend what the mediocre mindset can never grasp: that the final product is what lingers. If even one aspect of their work is merely adequate, the whole creation is suspect and therefore worthless. So they drive themselves relentlessly, hoping to mold something truly remarkable. Statistically, few will succeed in this endeavor because so few have the guts to try.

Perhaps someday more people will realize the vast amount of untapped potential within themselves. Maybe they will see — truly see — what they can do in whatever field they pursue. And maybe they will inflict their standards on others. It would take courage to enforce a standard of excellence, to mandate that others give more of themselves than they had previously been asked to give. But it would be worth it.

Take, as an example, your favorite instructor of all time. No doubt he or she was not the most lenient, most forgiving or "easiest" teacher you ever had. Chances are that that teacher was special, that he/she made you think. In so doing, this teacher made you realize that you could reason and that your thoughts were valuable if only because — in the whole, wide world — they are unique. But you passed the course and moved on, forgetting — or repressing — the lesson you learned so dearly.

For now, it's inevitable that society will continue to wallow in a self-imposed stagnation, just as some students will continue to prepare for a big exam by getting drunk. Of course it won't get them anywhere. But that doesn't matter anyway, since they had no particular destination in mind. Wherever they end up will, most assuredly, be good enough for them.

The Notre Dame chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes is sponsoring an evening with Irish baseball Coach Larry Gallo tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the Badin Hall chapel. The Notre Dame golf team will host the ND Fall Invitational Golf Tournament Monday afternoon on the Burke Memorial Golf Course. Coach Noel O'Sullivan's Irish will be looking to rebound from their disappointing showing in the recent Indiana State Championships. — The Observer

Practice for the Notre Dame Women's Softball Club has been canceled for this week. There will be a mandatory meeting for all old and new members next Tuesday, October 13. Time and location will be announced. Call Karen Alig (7401) for more information. — The Observer

Purdue University, led by captain Jay Smith, edged Notre Dame for the team championship of the Notre Dame Fall Invitational, held yesterday at Burke Memorial Golf Course. Purdue finished with a team total of 361 while Notre Dame finished with 362. Smith won the individual honors for the second year in a row when he completed the day with a 69. Notre Dame's Bob Horak and Tom Scully were runners-up, each with a 71. — The Observer

Two pass interceptions and a fumble set up three Tony Franklin field goals and quarterback Ron Jaworski threw a 30-yard touchdown pass as the unbeaten Philadelphia Eagles beat the Atlanta Falcons 16-13 last night. The Eagles, however, had to withstand a furious Atlanta second-half rally in which Everly import Mick Luckhurst kicked a 35-yard field goal and, 12 seconds later, cornerback Kenny Johnson returned a fumbled kickoff return 20 yards to bring the Falcons within 13-10 with 4:05 left in the third period. — AP

Reds, Cards lose in split season

By GARY MYERS
Associated Press

Don't tell the Cincinnati Reds or the St. Louis Cardinals how the split-season format in baseball created more interest down the stretch. Each had the best overall record in their divisions in this mixed-up crazy season, but when the mini-playoffs get underway today, the Reds and Cardinals will be home watching.

The Reds' overall record was not only the best in the National League West, but tops in baseball. They had the misfortune, however, of finishing just a half-game behind the Los Angeles Dodgers in the first half of the season and then losing out to the Houston Astros on the next to last day of the second season. Cincinnati was the only team to play over .600 for the entire season.

The Cardinals finished as the runner-up to Philadelphia in the first half and the Expos in the second half, but overall, their record was the best in the National League East. Cincinnati and St. Louis between them had two of the five best records in the majors, but now have all winter to gripe about the inequities of the system.

Before their season-ending game in Cincinnati on Sunday, the entire Reds team was introduced to the fans. They lined up carrying a pennant proclaiming, "Baseball's Best Record 1981."

Cincinnati Reds team members line up on the field prior to Sunday's game against the Braves, in Cincinnati, to display a pennant which declares the Red's season record to be the best in baseball. Because of the split season format, Cincinnati failed to qualify for the playoffs. (AP Photo)

Friday was extremely tough, but it prepared us for this weekend and the Irish Invitational. And the challenges this weekend got us ready for next weekend."

The Notre Dame women are optimistic about winning their second straight state title. "I think we should have an excellent chance at the state crown," says Gleason. "I know I'm playing a lot better and I think the whole team is."

After the Indiana State Tourney, the Irish and the Belles will square off for the final match of the fall season on October 13.

SOCCER — The Alumni soccer team won its fourth game in five outings Sunday, downing Keenan, 4-3. Keenan drew first blood in the game which was tied at three at the end of regulation time. Pressure performances on both offense and defense by the Alumni team was the key factor in the victory as the Dogs came through, scoring on their penalty kicks, and goalie Greg Caine blocked three Keenan penalty kicks. On the whole, the Dogs rely on a balanced attack from quite a number of talented players. Many of the players feel that the team has not yet achieved its full potential, but hope to do so with team-work and hard play. Alumni has yet to play some of the toughest teams on its schedule, including the unbeaten division leader, Flanner I, so they obviously have their work cut out for them.

MEN'S FOOTBALL — After two weeks of play, this season has produced no surprises with Dillon leading in the South Division, Grace in the North and a tight battle in the Central. Dillon, chalking up its two wins over Fisher (22-0) and always-tough Morrissey (6-2), looks as strong as ever. Grace, winning its first game against Zahm (14-0), opened its second game against Stanford with a 65-yard dash by Willie Bostic and went on to beat Stanford, 12-0. St. Ed's and Cavanaugh went at it Sunday to decide who would be the Central Division leader only to end in a 6-6 tie, leaving the the two tied for first (1-0-1) with three other teams (Off-Campus, Holy Cross and Carrol) tied for third with 1-1 records.

Here are the standings through yesterday:

	North	Central	South
Grace	2-0	St. Ed's	1-0-1	Dillon	2-0
Keenan	1-0	Cavanaugh	1-0-1	Alumni	1-0
Stanford	0-1	Off-Campus	1-1-0	Fisher	1-1
Flanner	0-1	Holy Cross	1-1-0	Morrissey	0-1
Zahm	0-1	Carrol	1-1-0	Pangborn	0-2
		Sorin	0-2-0

This weeks schedule:

Tomorrow's Games

St. Ed's vs. Carrol, 7 p.m. (Cartier)
Cavanaugh vs. Holy Cross, 8 p.m. (Cartier)
Off-Campus vs. Sorin, 9 p.m. (Cartier)

Sunday's Games

Morrissey vs. Alumni, 2 p.m. (Stepan)
Cavanaugh vs. Sorin, 3 p.m. (Stepan)

WOMEN'S FOOTBALL — This past week Breen-Phillips rolled over Badin, 25-0. The explosive offense of Breen-Phillips has outscored its opponents, 76-12 in four games. A tough match-up this week pits B-P against Off-Campus, a game which could decide the eventual division title.

Here are the standings through yesterday:

Breen-Phillips	4-0
Off-Campus	3-1
Pasquerilla East	3-1
Farley	3-1
Pasquerilla West	2-2
Walsh	1-2
Lewis	1-3
Lyons	0-4
Badin	0-4

MEN'S NOVICE TENNIS — The final will be played this week between Barry Fay and Pat Toole. Fay, who played his semifinal match yesterday with a broken thumb on his racket hand, defeated Ted Dore 6-2, 6-2 to advance. Toole knocked off Greg Koch in straight sets, 6-0, 6-0.

CO-REC SOFTBALL — As the double-elimination softball tournament winds down, the competition between the few remaining teams gets tough. This week "BP and the Big Sticks" will play "Smash & Co." for the championship of the losers bracket. The winner of this game will play "No Names" for the tournament title. For game times and locations, contact your hall athletic commissioner.

VOLLEYBALL — As the men's interhall volleyball tournament also comes to a close, "Carroll Hall" plays "Drink, Smoke and Spike" for the championship of the winner's bracket.

In the women's division, the "Girls" from Breen-Phillips captured the crown by beating "Farley."

Tailback Bell follows in fine tradition

By DAVE DZIEDZIC
Sports Writer

Scene: Oct. 11, 1980. Miami (Fla.) invades Notre Dame Stadium with the nation's top-ranked defense against the run. In four games thus far, the Hurricanes have allowed only 15.5 yards per game on the ground. As if that isn't enough, the Irish are without the services of tailback Phil Carter, who bruised his thigh last week against Michigan State. In only three games so far this season, Carter has amassed 499 yards — the second-highest total in the nation. Jim Stone, a senior who has played in the shadow of Vegas Ferguson for three years, is called upon to carry the ball for the Irish. Stone responds tremendously, carrying 38 times for 224 yards and a 32-14 victory. After the game, Stone comments, "Replacing a great runner like Phil was a challenge but I was ready and so was our line."

Scene: Oct. 3, 1981. Michigan State visits Notre Dame Stadium. The Irish have lost two games in a row, and desperately need a big victory. Junior co-captain and starting tailback Phil Carter carries the ball on the first four Irish plays, but leaves the game with a sprained ankle. Sophomore Greg Bell takes over at tailback, rushes for 165 yards on 20 carries, and scores two touchdowns. The Irish finally get the offense going en route to a 20-7 victory. After the game, Bell comments, "Our line played great today. All I had to do was run."

Greg Bell credits the offensive line with his success on Saturday, but the Columbus, Ohio, native has the tools to make it on his own. At 6-0, 225 pounds, Bell has the size and strength necessary for a powerful tailback. But Greg is quick to point out that his speed is his greatest weapon. "I can run over a lot of guys," he says, "but that's not my style of running."

Indeed, Bell is a quick runner. Last track season, he was a team leader in the sprints. He has been at 6.3 seconds in the 60-yard dash. Notre Dame Track Coach Joe Piane says, "Greg is a great runner. And the more Greg runs, the quicker he'll get."

Piane points out that Bell earned his first varsity monogram in track and field, not football. Besides his success in the sprints, Greg had a team-best long jump of 24-feet last season. This coming track season, he will again compete in the sprints and the long jump, and perhaps in the hurdles.

How has running track helped Bell on the football field? "It's helped a great deal," he says. "Running in the indoor season helped me to improve my form, speed, and flexibility."

Greg has never been a one-sport athlete. As a senior in high school Greg captained the football, track, and basketball teams. He rushed for over 1400 yards in his last two high school football seasons. As a basketball guard, Greg averaged 15 points and seven assists a game. In last year's Bookstore Basketball Tournament, his team, T.P.S., competed in the finals.

Bell is Notre Dame's leading rusher this season. In four games, he has rushed for 285 yards on 41 carries, an average of seven yards per carry. He has also returned four kickoffs for an average of 20.7 yards a return.

Offensive backfield coach Greg Blache has no problem explaining Greg's success. "Greg has improved tremendously. He has a terrific awareness of how to run and where to run." Blache agrees that Bell's participation in track and field has played a significant role in his football success. "Whenever a player takes part in a track program, it helps him improve."

When discussing his achievements, Bell is quick to point out his friendship with first-string tailback Phil Carter. "Phil and I are good friends," he says. "Our competition is very healthy for both of us. We have a lot of confidence in each other."

Greg stresses that his relationship with Carter has helped him to relax on the field. "In high school," he says, "I was reluctant to take myself out of a game because I wasn't sure if the guy behind me could do the job. Put here at Notre Dame, I know that Phil can do the job if I'm not playing. That's very important."

Blache couldn't be happier with the Bell-Carter situation. "I'm one of the more fortunate coaches," he says. "Phil and Greg get along very well. They know each other's moves and complement each other beautifully. Both of them are very unselfish, and each waits for his own number to be called. And that makes my job a lot easier."

Once again, Bell credits the offensive line for much of his success last Saturday. "When the blocking is great, the running will be great," he says. "Everyone dreams of having a big day, and I am very proud of my performance on Saturday. But the line deserves a lot of credit."

Scene: Oct. 10, 1981. Florida State visits Notre Dame Stadium for the first time ever. Phil Carter is ready, and the Irish offense appears to be back on track. And now that Greg Bell has proven himself, Irish fans can once again rest assured that the tailback position is in good hands.

As two Michigan State defenders give chase, sophomore tailback Greg Bell breaks into the clear on his 32-yard touchdown run midway through the third quarter. Bell scored two touchdowns, had a third called back, and picked up 165 yards on the ground as Gerry Faust's offense finally got untracked. See Dave Dziedzic's article at the left. (photo by John Macor)

Irish Invitational

Irish women capture title

By ROBERT WALSH
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team captured the Fifth Annual Irish Invitational yesterday. The Irish, who won 32 out of their 36 matches, were followed closely by Eastern Michigan and Western Michigan, with 29 and 28 match wins respectively. St. Mary's College finished fifth, with 11 victories to their credit.

Irish coach Sharon Petro was pleased with victory. "This is the first time Notre Dame has won the Invitational. I thought the team played very well," said Petro. "The Invitational provides good preparation for the state tournament in Indianapolis this Saturday. And we must win the state title in order to qualify for the Nationals."

Freshman Lisa Gleason was Notre Dame's lone champion in singles competition. "I didn't expect to win the number four singles. I thought the competition would be too difficult," said Gleason. "When I was warming up against WMU (Janet Ray), I knew it would be my toughest match. But I managed to win, 6-3, 1-6, 6-0."

Notre Dame's top three singles players, Lisa LaFratta, Linda Hoyer, and Carol Shukis, all finished second with individual match records of 5-1.

Both Notre Dame doubles teams proved to be unbeatable. Senior Tina Stephen and sophomore Pam Fischette grabbed the number one doubles crown. "Both of us were really pleased with our victory," said Fischette. "We thought we had a chance coming into the tournament, but Tina and I only began playing together this fall. In Saturday's state tourney, I'll be playing number three singles and Tina and I will be playing at number two doubles."

The freshman combination of Laura Lee and Camille Cooper won the number two doubles title. They will be teaming up again at number three doubles for the states while Lee will be playing number five singles.

St. Mary's College finished with a team record of 1-5, with 11 team points. Accounting for four of those points were the number one doubles team of Debbie Laverse and Maureen Fitzgerald. Laverse and Fitzgerald won four of their six matches in the tourney.

Other teams in the competition included Ferris State, who finished fourth in the competition with 14 points; Marquette, who was sixth with 9 team points, and Central Michigan, who placed last with 3 points.

While the Notre Dame netters captured the fourth singles and both doubles, other players distinguished themselves. WMU Sue Weigand and Nancy Martin won the number one and two singles titles respectively. Traci Varken went undefeated in her number three singles spot and took that crown home for EMU.

The entire Notre Dame team is looking forward to the Indiana State Division II Championship on Friday and Saturday, October 9-10. "It seems like each time we played we were looking towards the state tourney," summarized number one singles player, LaFratta. "The competition against Northwestern last

The Bottom Ten

It had to happen.

After Northwestern's awesome 0-64 loss to Iowa, many Bottom Ten voters wanted to call off the rest of the season and declare the Wildcats national champs. One enterprising voter came up with an alternate plan, however. It is unique, innovative, trend-setting, and voters approved it overwhelmingly.

The season will be split into a first half and a second half. Northwestern has been declared the first half champ, and the teams will now start over with 0-0 records. It is hoped that the split-season concept will add excitement and build fan interest as the season comes to a close later this fall.

The game that prompted this daring move was one of the finest in the history of the Bottom Ten. The Cats rushed 31 times, gaining an amazing seven inches per carry. At that rate, it would have taken them just 52 plays to gain a first down.

One Cat had a very disappointing day, however. A running back by the name of Watkins carried the ball just six times, piling up an incredible 1044 inches. Coach Dennis "It's hard to believe this game started at 0-0" Green says he's so despondent over Watkins' performance that he may relegate the speedster to the bench.

The Ivy League ended the first half of the season on a hopeful note. Two newcomers to the Bottom Ten, Cornell and Brown, signalled a new era of mediocrity. Old stand-bys Penn and Columbia played each other in a gargantuan battle. Penn's Quakers avenged last year's pathetic win over the the Lions by dropping this year's contest, 9-20.

The level of competition in the first half of the season was fierce, as is evidenced by records of the 14 teams in the poll this week. Their combined ledger is 2-53-1, and 11 of the 14 teams have perfect records.

So, here are the final standings for the first half of the split season.

- 1) Northwestern (0-4) — the pride of the Big Ten
- 2) Stanford (0-4) — the Cornell of the West
- 3) Texas-El Paso (0-4) — at least UTEP lost to Utah, not University of Texas-Arlington Heights
- 4) Virginia (0-4) — debut for Yahoos
- 5) Tulane (0-4) — Coach Vince Gibson called last week's match-up with Rice "The Desperation Bowl"
- 6) State of Colorado (2-10) — Colorado State (0-4), Colorado (1-3), Air Force (1-3)
- 7) Cornell (0-3) — Stanford of the East
- 8) Brown (0-3) — Back to back losses to Army and Princeton
- 9) Maine (0-4-1) — shut out by Lafayette
- 10) (tie) North Texas State (0-5)
(tie) West Carolina (0-4)
(tie) Eastern Michigan (0-4) — teams that would be states
